1. What is a lawyer referral service?

A lawyer referral service refers potential clients to attorneys. This means that if you want to talk to a lawyer, a lawyer referral service is a good place to call. The lawyer referral service staff will interview you and, if you have a legal problem, will try to match you with a lawyer who is experienced in the appropriate area of law. You will then see the lawyer for an initial consultation or speak to the lawyer on the phone.

In California, lawyer referral services must be certified by the State Bar and conform to California Supreme Court standards in order to protect clients.

2. How can a lawyer referral service help me?

If you need legal help, a certified lawyer referral service can put you in touch with a lawyer who can help you with your problem. If your problem can be resolved without a lawyer, the service may try to provide information or the names of other organizations or agencies that may be able to help you.

3. How does a lawyer referral service work?

When you call a lawyer referral service, you will be asked about your situation. If you have a legal problem, the lawyer referral service will arrange an initial consultation for you, or give you the name and number of a lawyer you can contact directly to arrange a consultation. There is usually a small charge for this consultation, but it may in some cases be free. After the initial consultation, it is up to you whether or not you want to hire the lawyer.

4. Where should I look for a lawyer referral service?

For a complete list of State Bar-certified lawyer referral services, visit the State Bar's website at www.calbar.org/lrs. For phone numbers of certified lawyer referral services in your county, call 866-44-CA-LAW (866-442-2529). If you are out of state, you can call 415-538-2250 or check the Yellow Pages of your telephone directory for a listing under the heading “Attorney Referral Service.”

Be sure to look for the lawyer referral service’s State Bar certification number, which must appear in all advertising. If you are not sure whether the lawyer referral service is certified, call the State Bar or check the website listed above.

5. What should I look for in a lawyer referral service?

Be sure to use a lawyer referral service that is certified by the State Bar. By law, lawyer referral services must be certified by the State Bar to operate in California and must list a certification number in all advertising. State Bar-certified lawyer referral services also must follow certain rules to protect clients.

6. How important is certification?

Certification means that a lawyer referral service meets certain standards approved by the California Supreme Court. Because the State Bar enforces those standards, if you have a problem with a lawyer referral service, the State Bar can provide you with a complaint form and look into your complaint.

Certification also means that if you use one of the certified services, you can be assured of the following:

- Attorneys are insured. All lawyers who participate in certified lawyer referral services must carry malpractice insurance to protect their clients. This means that if your lawyer does something wrong, and you successfully sue for malpractice, you can be sure the lawyer has the ability to pay.
- The lawyer referral service will screen your call. Every certified lawyer referral service has trained staff to help you determine whether you have a legal problem and, if so, what kind of lawyer you need — or if you need some other type of assistance.

- The lawyer referral service can refer you to a lawyer in your area of legal need. Certified lawyer referral services have lawyers with experience in many legal areas, such as family law, personal injury, probate and landlord-tenant law. Certified lawyer referral services screen their lawyers so they can refer you to a lawyer who practices in the particular area of law you need. Many lawyer referral services have subject matter panels, on which attorneys can serve only if they have demonstrated experience or meet certain other requirements.
- The lawyer referral service can give you information about other service programs. Some problems may at first seem to require a lawyer’s help, but actually may not. For example, you may have a problem that can be handled for free by a rent control board, small claims court or community mediation program. Certified lawyer referral services can direct you to government agencies or other organizations that may be better suited to assist you. In fact, thousands of Californians call lawyer referral services each year and fewer than 40 percent are actually referred to lawyers.
- The lawyer referral service may be able to provide an attorney at a reduced rate. Certification rules require lawyer referral services to make arrangements to serve people of limited means. Some lawyer referral services do this by operating low-fee or no-fee panels, while others cooperate with independent, local pro bono programs that are free. If you are financially eligible, the lawyer referral service may be able to refer you to one of its own attorneys who charges a reduced rate, or to another provider who can provide you with free assistance.

- The lawyer referral service may be able to provide bilingual lawyers. Many certified lawyer referral services have lawyers who speak Spanish and other languages to help you.

7. Who operates lawyer referral services?

Most lawyer referral services are operated on a non-profit basis by local bar associations or legal services programs. Some lawyer referral services are operated on a for-profit basis by businesses or lawyers. Both nonprofit and for-profit lawyer referral services are held to the same standards under the certification rules of the State Bar.

8. How much will I have to pay?

Most lawyer referral services charge only a nominal fee — such as $30 — for an initial consultation with a lawyer. Some offer a free first-time consultation. During the initial consultation, you can explain your situation and ask questions that will help you decide whether you want to hire the lawyer.

For more information on hiring a lawyer, you also can request a copy of the State Bar pamphlet Finding the Right Lawyer. To find out how to obtain free copies of this and other State Bar pamphlets, call 415-538-2280 or send an e-mail to pamphlets@calbar.ca.gov or visit the State Bar's website — www.calbar.ca.gov — where you will find the pamphlets and information on ordering them.

If you cannot afford to pay a lawyer, tell the person who takes your call at the lawyer referral service. If the lawyer referral service cannot provide the legal help you need at the price you can afford to pay, the service may be able to recommend a free legal services program in your area if you qualify.

9. What should I do if I believe my lawyer has done something wrong?

Bring your concerns to the lawyer referral service. If your complaint is not easily resolved, you can file a complaint against the attorney by calling the State Bar's Attorney Complaint Hotline at 800-843-9053. For more information on reporting a lawyer to the State Bar and handling other problems, the State Bar offers a pamphlet entitled Having a Problem With Your Lawyer?
