- [7-ALT2] Where a lawyer has joined a private firm or a government agency after having represented the government or another government agency, imputation is governed by Rule 1.11(b) and (c), not this Rule. Where a lawyer has become employed by a government agency after having served clients in private practice or other nongovernmental employment, imputation is governed by Rule 1.11(e).

- [8] Where a lawyer is prohibited from engaging in certain transactions under Rules 1.8.1 through Rule 1.8.9, Rule 1.8.11, and not this Rule, determines whether that prohibition also applies to other lawyers associated in a firm with the personally prohibited lawyer.

Rule Not Determinative of Disqualification Motions

- [9] This Rule does not limit or alter the power of a court of this State to control the conduct of lawyers and other persons connected in any manner with judicial proceedings before it, including matter pertaining to disqualification. See Code of Civil Procedure section 128(a)(5); Penal Code section 1424; In re Charlisse C. (2008) 45 Cal.4th 145; Rhaburn v. Superior Court (2006) 140 Cal.App.4th 1566.
- [10] Rule 1.10 leaves open the issue of whether, in a particular matter, use of a timely screen will avoid the imputation of a conflict of interest under paragraph (a) or (b). Whether timely implementation of a screen will avoid imputation of a conflict of interest in litigation, transactional, or other contexts is a matter of case law.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) While lawyers are associated in a firm, none of them shall knowingly represent a client when any one of them practicing alone would be prohibited from doing so by Rules 1.7 or 1.9, unless	(a) While lawyers are associated in a firm, none of them shall knowingly represent a client when any one of them practicing alone would be prohibited from doing so by Rules 1.7 or 1.9, unless	The first part of paragraph (a) is identical to Model Rule 1.10(a).
(1) the prohibition is based on a personal interest of the disqualified lawyer and does not present a significant risk of materially limiting the representation of the client by the remaining lawyers in the firm; or	(1) the prohibition is based on a personal interest of the ~~disqualified~~prohibited lawyer and does not present a significant risk of materially limiting the representation of the client by the remaining lawyers in the firm; or	Subparagraph (a)(1) is nearly identical to Model Rule 1.10(a)(1), except that it substitutes “prohibited” for “disqualified” to reflect that this Rule is primarily intended as a rule of discipline. Minority. A minority of the Commission objects to the “materially limiting” standard because it eliminates the client protection provided by the current California rule. Under the current rule, a lawyer is required to disclose the possibility of a conflict of interest when the lawyer knows that another lawyer in the lawyer’s law firm has a relationship or interest in the subject matter of the representation. This standard in this rule allows lawyers to avoid informing the client of situations that could result in a conflict. The standard would turn on a prediction about whether there is a substantial risk, which would allow lawyers to avoid disclosing circumstances that later turn out to be a conflict and injure the client. This standard will communicate to lawyers that they need only determine that they are straight shooters who will do the right thing, a determination easily made by a lawyer acting under the influence of economic motivation. This standard makes it questionable whether any lawyer ever will be subject to discipline under this Rule. This also means that the Rule will provide

* Proposed Rule 1.10, ALT2 [SCREEN], XDraft 7.1 (7/2/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		negligible protection to clients, and the continuing viability of client-protective current California case law will be called into question. The client-protective standard should be: “... that could have an adverse effect on the representation of the client”
(2) the prohibition is based upon Rule 1.9(a) or (b), and arises out of the disqualified lawyer’s association with a prior firm, and	(2) the prohibition is based upon Rule 1.9(a) or (b), and arises out of the ~~disqualified~~ prohibited lawyer’s association with a prior firm, and	The Commission recommends adoption of a substantially modified version of Model Rule 1.10(a)(2). Model Rule 1.10(a)(2), adopted by the ABA in February 2009 and further amended in August 2009, broadly permits screening of lawyers who move from one private firm to another, even if the former client does not consent. “Broadly permits screening,” means that the jurisdiction’s provision permits screening of any lawyer who has acquired (or is presumed to have acquired) confidential information of the former client, regardless of the degree of involvement of that lawyer in the former client’s representation. In effect, this is equivalent to the “substantial responsibility” standard in MR 1.11 and would place private lawyers more or less on equal footing with government lawyers. Although no jurisdiction to date has adopted the precise ABA approach, 13 jurisdictions have adopted broad screening provisions. Jurisdictions that broadly permit screening are: Delaware, Illinois (both current and proposed), Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan (both current and proposed), Montana, North Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee (proposed revision), Utah and Washington. Although there was little support for a broad screening provision, the Commission was equally divided on the issue of permitting screening in limited situations to facilitate the mobility of lawyers who were only peripherally involved in a matter. “Permits screening in limited situations” means that a jurisdiction’s provision permits screening only of a lawyer who did not “substantially

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		participate,” or was not “substantially involved,” did not have a “substantial role,” did not have “primary responsibility,” etc., in the former client’s matter, or when any confidential information that the lawyer might have obtained is deemed not material to the current representation (e.g., Mass.) or “is not likely to be significant” (e.g., Minn.) Jurisdictions that permit screening in limited situations are: Arizona, Colorado, Indiana, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Dakota, Ohio, Tennessee (current rule only); and Wisconsin. The public comment materials for Rule 1.10 specifically solicited comments on whether California should adopt a Rule that permits some form of nonconsensual screening. Several commenters, including COPRAC and the ethics committees from the Orange County Bar, the San Diego Bar, and the Santa Clara Bar, recommended that a broad screening provision, similar to the ABA provision, be adopted. See Public Comment Chart, below. Only one commenter expressly objected to the adoption of any screening provision. Following public comment, the Commission revisited the issue of nonconsensual screening and voted to recommend the adoption of a modified version of Model Rule 1.10(a)(2) that permits screening of a lawyer who moves laterally from one private firm to another private firm only in the limited situation where the moving lawyer had not substantially participated in the prior representation. The specifics of the recommended screening provision are discussed in the Explanations to each of the subparagraphs to proposed Rule 1.10(a)(2). Minority. A minority of the Commission dissents because this Rule will not protect clients. In some situations a client will consent to screening - if requested to do - so based on the nature of the situation and the client's trust in the law firm. When the client lacks that trust, which likely will be because of the intensely disputed and significance of the matter to the client, the law firm should not have the right to impose screening. The freedom to do so is in the commercial interests of law firms but not in the interests of the affected client and will reduce trust in the legal system. It is crucial to understand that there is no effective way to know that confidential information held by a lawyer in a firm representing a client's adversary has not been imparted to the other firm lawyers. The mechanisms in the Rule may allow for verification that screening mechanisms are in place, but not whether they are violated. Our rules protect client confidential information to assure that clients can communicate their most harmful or embarrassing information to their lawyer without fear of consequence. That interest cannot be protected where the client does not have confidence that information in the hands of an opposing law firm which has an interest as an advocate for the client's adversary will not be used or disclosed for the benefit of the adversary. "No amount of assurances or screening procedures, no 'cone of silence,' could ever convince the opposing party that the confidences would not be used to its disadvantage. . . . No one could have confidence in the integrity of a legal process in which this is permitted to occur without the parties' consent." (Cho v. Superior Court (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 113, 125 [45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 863], fn. omitted.) The mechanisms in this Rule do not change this conclusion.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(i) the prohibited lawyer did not substantially participate in the prior representation;	Subparagraph (a)(2)(i) has no counterpart in the Model Rule. This subparagraph expressly limits the availability of screening as provided in the Rule to moving lawyers who did not “substantially participate” in the prior representation. The term “substantially participate” is taken from Colorado Rule 1.10. The intent is to limit the availability of screening as provided under this Rule to those lawyers who were involved only peripherally in the prior representation and thus not likely to have acquired material confidential information. See Comment [7], which clarifies what is intended by the term “substantially participate.” Minority. A minority dissents to the "did not substantially participate" standard because it does not assure that a client's confidential information is protected. It focuses on the length or amount of a lawyer's involvement in the prior matter and not whether the lawyer acquired confidential information or whether that information is important in the new matter against the former client. The screened lawyer may have been involved in the former client's matter briefly, but in that brief involvement learned a client's deepest secret. No amount of screening will reduce the former client's anxiety that the client's deepest secret in held by a lawyer in an adversary's law firm.
(i) the disqualified lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom;	(iii) the ~~disqualified~~prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom;	Subparagraph (a)(2)(ii) is based on Model Rule 1.10(a)(2)(i). As has been done throughout the Rules, the word “prohibited” has been substituted for “disqualified.” See also proposed Rule 1.0.1(k) and Comments [8]-[10] thereto (definition of “screened”).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(ii) written notice is promptly given to any affected former client to enable the former client to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this Rule, which shall include a description of the screening procedures employed; a statement of the firm's and of the screened lawyer's compliance with these Rules; a statement that review may be available before a tribunal; and an agreement by the firm to respond promptly to any written inquiries or objections by the former client about the screening procedures; and	(iii) written notice is promptly given to any affected former client to enable the former client to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this Rule, which notice shall include a description of the screening procedures employed; a statement of the firm's and of the screened lawyer's compliance with these Rules; a statement that review may be available before a tribunal; and an agreement by the firm to respond promptly to any written inquiries or objections by the former client about the screening procedures; and	Subparagraph (a)(2)(iii) is nearly identical to Model Rule 1.10(a)(2)(ii), with the word “notice” added in the sixth line for clarification.
(iii) certifications of compliance with these Rules and with the screening procedures are provided to the former client by the screened lawyer and by a partner of the firm, at reasonable intervals upon the former client's written request and upon termination of the screening procedures.	(iv) certifications of compliance with these Rules and with the screening procedures are provided to the former client by the screened lawyer and by a partner of the firm, at reasonable intervals upon the former client's written request and upon termination of the screening procedures.	Subparagraph (a)(2)(iv) is identical to Model Rule 1.10(a)(2)(iii).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(b) When a lawyer has terminated an association with a firm, the firm is not prohibited from thereafter representing a person with interests materially adverse to those of a client represented by the formerly associated lawyer and not currently represented by the firm, unless	(b) When a lawyer has terminated an association with a firm, the firm is not prohibited from thereafter representing a person with interests materially adverse to those of a client represented by the formerly associated lawyer and not currently represented by the firm, unless:	Paragraph (b) is identical to Model Rule 1.10(b), which is consistent with California law. See Goldberg v. Warner-Chappell (2005) 125 Cal.App.4th 752, 23 Cal.Rptr.3d 116. See also Novo Therapeutisk Laboratorium A/S v. Baxter Travenol Laboratories, Inc., 607 F.2d 186 (7th Cir. 1979).
(1) the matter is the same or substantially related to that in which the formerly associated lawyer represented the client; and	(1) the matter is the same as or substantially related to that in which the formerly associated lawyer represented the client; and	Subparagraph (a)(1) is identical to Model Rule 1.10(a)(1), except for the addition of the word “as.” No change in meaning in intended.
(2) any lawyer remaining in the firm has information protected by Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c) that is material to the matter.	(2) any lawyer remaining in the firm has information protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e), and Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c) that is material to the matter.	Subparagraph (a)(2) is based on Model Rule 1.10(a)(2), but a reference to B&P Code § 6068(e), which states a lawyer’s duty of confidentiality, has been added.
(c) A disqualification prescribed by this rule may be waived by the affected client under the conditions stated in Rule 1.7.	(c) A ~~disqualification—prescribed by~~prohibition under this rule may be waived by ~~the~~each affected client under the conditions stated in Rule 1.7.	Paragraph (c) is identical to Model Rule 1.10(c), except that the phrase “prohibition under” has been substituted for “disqualification prescribed by” because the Rule is intended as a disciplinary rule, not as a civil standard. The word “each” has been substituted for “the” to make clear that both affected clients of the firm must waive any prohibitions under the Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(d) The disqualification of lawyers associated in a firm with former or current government lawyers is governed by Rule 1.11.	(d) The ~~disqualification~~imputation of a conflict of interest to lawyers associated in a firm with former or current government lawyers is governed by Rule 1.11.	Paragraph (d) is identical to Model Rule 1.10(d), except that the phrase “imputation of a conflict of interest to” has been substituted for “disqualification of” because the Rule is intended as a disciplinary rule, not as a civil standard.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule Comment	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Definition of “Firm” [1] For purposes of the Rules of Professional Conduct, the term “firm” denotes lawyers in a law partnership, professional corporation, sole proprietorship or other association authorized to practice law; or lawyers employed in a legal services organization or the legal department of a corporation or other organization. See Rule 1.0(c). Whether two or more lawyers constitute a firm within this definition can depend on the specific facts. See Rule 1.0, Comments [2] – [4].	Definition of “Firm” [1] ~~For purposes of the Rules of Professional Conduct, the term “firm” denotes lawyers in a law partnership, professional corporation, sole proprietorship or other association authorized to practice law; or lawyers employed in a legal services organization or the legal department of a corporation or other organization. See Rule 1.0(c).~~ Whether two or more lawyers constitute a firm ~~within~~for purposes of this definitionRule can depend on the specific facts. See Rule ~~1.0~~1.0.1(c), Comments [2] - [4].]	Comment [1] is based on Model Rule 1.10, cmt. [1]. The deleted language is redundant because it already appears in the global definition of “‘firm’ or ‘law firm’,” which the Commission intends to include in the global definition section. The phrase “for purposes of this Rule” has been substituted for “within this definition” for clarity, the predicate for this sentence – the definition of law firm in the first sentence – having been deleted. Minority. A minority of the Commission believes there is insufficient reason for proposed Comment [1] to diverge from the Model Rule.
Principles of Imputed Disqualification [2] The rule of imputed disqualification stated in paragraph (a) gives effect to the principle of loyalty to the client as it applies to lawyers who practice in a law firm. Such situations can be considered from the premise that a firm of lawyers is essentially one lawyer for purposes of the rules governing loyalty to the client, or from the premise that each lawyer is vicariously bound by the obligation of loyalty owed by each lawyer with whom the lawyer is associated. Paragraph (a)(1) operates only among the lawyers	Principles of Imputed ~~Disqualification~~Conflicts of Interest [2] The rule of imputed disqualification stated in paragraph (a) gives effect to the ~~principle~~duties of loyalty ~~and confidentiality owed~~ to the client as ~~it applies~~they apply to lawyers who practice in a law firm. Such situations can be considered from the premise that a firm of lawyers is essentially one lawyer for purposes of the rules governing ~~the duties of~~ loyalty ~~and confidentiality owed~~ to the client, or from the premise that each lawyer is vicariously bound by the obligation of loyalty ~~and confidentiality~~	The heading has been changed to reflect that the Rule is intended as a disciplinary rule, not as a rule creating a civil standard of disqualification. Comment [2] is based on Model Rule 1.10, cmt. [2], except that the concept of the duty of confidentiality has been added because that duty’s importance as an underlying rationale for an imputation rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule Comment	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
currently associated in a firm. When a lawyer moves from one firm to another, the situation is governed by Rules 1.9(b) and 1.10(a)(2) and 1.10 (b).	owed by each lawyer with whom the lawyer is associated. Paragraph (a)(1) operates only among the lawyers currently associated in a firm. When a lawyer moves from one firm to another, the situation is governed by Rules 1.9(b) and 1.10(a)(2) and 1.10(b).
[3] The rule in paragraph (a) does not prohibit representation where neither questions of client loyalty nor protection of confidential information are presented. Where one lawyer in a firm could not effectively represent a given client because of strong political beliefs, for example, but that lawyer will do no work on the case and the personal beliefs of the lawyer will not materially limit the representation by others in the firm, the firm should not be disqualified. On the other hand, if an opposing party in a case were owned by a lawyer in the law firm, and others in the firm would be materially limited in pursuing the matter because of loyalty to that lawyer, the personal disqualification of the lawyer would be imputed to all others in the firm.	[3] The rule in paragraph (a) does not prohibit representation where neither questions of client loyalty nor protection of confidential information are presented. Where one lawyer in a firm could not effectively represent a given client because of strong political beliefs, for example, but that lawyer will do no work on the case and the personal beliefs of the lawyer will not materially limit the representation by others in the firm, the firm should not be ~~disqualified~~prohibited from further representation. On the other hand, if an opposing party in a case were owned by a lawyer in the law firm, and others in the firm would be materially limited in pursuing the matter because of loyalty to that lawyer, the personal ~~disqualification~~prohibition of the lawyer would be imputed to all others in the firm.	Comment [3] is based on Model Rule 1.10, cmt. [3], but “prohibited from further representation” and “prohibition” have been substituted for variants of “disqualified” to reflect that this Rule is intended primarily as a rule of discipline.
[4] The rule in paragraph (a) also does not prohibit representation by others in the law firm where the person prohibited from involvement in a matter is a nonlawyer, such as a paralegal or legal secretary. Nor does paragraph (a) prohibit representation if the lawyer is prohibited from acting because of events	[4] The rule in paragraph (a) also does not prohibit representation by others in the law firm where the person prohibited from involvement in a matter is a nonlawyer, such as a paralegal or legal secretary. Nor does paragraph (a) prohibit representation by others in the law firm if the lawyer is prohibited from	Comment [4] is based on Model Rule 1.10, cmt. [4]. Language has been added to the second sentence for clarity. Minority. A minority of the Commission believes that the second sentence misstates California law, at least where the lawyer acted in a fiduciary capacity in the previous employment.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule Comment	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
before the person became a lawyer, for example, work that the person did while a law student. Such persons, however, ordinarily must be screened from any personal participation in the matter to avoid communication to others in the firm of confidential information that both the nonlawyers and the firm have a legal duty to protect. See Rules 1.0(k) and 5.3.	acting because of events that occurred before the person became a lawyer, for example, work that the person did while a law student. ~~Such persons~~In both situations, however, ~~ordinarily~~such persons must be screened from any personal participation in the matter to avoid communication to others in the firm of confidential information that both the nonlawyers and the firm have a legal duty to protect. See Rules ~~1.0~~1.0.1(k) and 5.3. See also Comment [13].	The substitution of “in both situations” for “such persons” is intended to clarify that screening should be implemented in the event of either situation described in the first two sentences. The word “ordinarily” has been deleted because it is unclear under what circumstances such a person who was substantially involved in the matter on the other side should be permitted to participate in the matter. The reference to Rule 1.0.1 is to the number the Commission has assigned to the proposed terminology section.
[5] Rule 1.10(b) operates to permit a law firm, under certain circumstances, to represent a person with interests directly adverse to those of a client represented by a lawyer who formerly was associated with the firm. The Rule applies regardless of when the formerly associated lawyer represented the client. However, the law firm may not represent a person with interests adverse to those of a present client of the firm, which would violate Rule 1.7. Moreover, the firm may not represent the person where the matter is the same or substantially related to that in which the formerly associated lawyer represented the client and any other lawyer currently in the firm has material information protected by Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c).	[5] Rule 1.10(b) operates to permit a law firm, under certain circumstances, to represent a person with interests directly adverse to those of a client represented by a lawyer who formerly was associated with the firm. The Rule applies regardless of when the formerly associated lawyer represented the client. However, the law firm may not represent a person with interests adverse to those of a ~~present~~current client of the firm, which would violate Rule 1.7. Moreover, the firm may not represent the person where the matter is the same or substantially related to that in which the formerly associated lawyer represented the client and any other lawyer currently in the firm has material information protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c).	Comment [5] is identical to Model Rule 1.10, cmt. [5], except that the word “current” is substituted for “present” to conform to the usage throughout the Rules, and a citation to B&P Code § 6068(e) has been added. See Explanation of Changes for subparagraph (b)(2).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule Comment	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[6] Rule 1.10(c) removes imputation with the informed consent of the affected client or former client under the conditions stated in Rule 1.7. The conditions stated in Rule 1.7 require the lawyer to determine that the representation is not prohibited by Rule 1.7(b) and that each affected client or former client has given informed consent to the representation, confirmed in writing. In some cases, the risk may be so severe that the conflict may not be cured by client consent. For a discussion of the effectiveness of client waivers of conflicts that might arise in the future, see Rule 1.7, Comment [22]. For a definition of informed consent, see Rule 1.0(e).	[6] Rule 1.10(c) removes imputation with the informed consent of ~~the~~each affected client or former client under the conditions stated in Rule 1.7. The conditions stated in Rule 1.7 require the lawyer to determine that the representation is not prohibited by Rule 1.7~~(b)~~, Comments [14] – [17A], and that each affected client or former client has given informed written consent to the representation, ~~confirmed in writing~~. In some cases, the risk may be so severe that the conflict may not be cured by client consent. For a discussion of the effectiveness of client waivers of conflicts that might arise in the future, see Rule 1.7, Comment [22]. For a definition of informed consent, see Rule ~~1.0~~1.0.1(e).	Comment [6] is based on Model Rule 1.10, cmt. [6]. The changes to the Model Rule comment either reflect (i) the revisions the Commission has made in the black letter of this Rule (i.e., “each” for “the” in paragraph (c), and requiring “informed written consent” instead of the Model Rule’s “informed consent, confirmed in writing”); or (ii) the changes the Commission has recommended for the basic conflicts rules, proposed Rule 1.7.
[7] Rule 1.10(a)(2) similarly removes the imputation otherwise required by Rule 1.10(a), but unlike section (c), it does so without requiring that there be informed consent by the former client. Instead, it requires that the procedures laid out in sections (a)(2)(i)-(iii) be followed. A description of effective screening mechanisms appears in Rule 1.0(k). Lawyers should be aware, however, that, even where screening mechanisms have been adopted, tribunals may consider additional factors in ruling upon motions to disqualify a lawyer from pending litigation.	[7] Rule 1.10(a)(2) similarly removes the imputation otherwise required by Rule 1.10(a), but unlike ~~section~~paragraph (c), it does so without requiring that there be informed consent by the former client. Instead, it requires that the procedures laid out in ~~sections~~subparagraphs (a)(2)~~(iii)-(iv)~~ be followed. However, the screening procedures afforded under subparagraphs (a)(2)(ii)-(iv) are available only in situations where the prohibition has arisen out of the prohibited lawyer’s association with a prior law firm. Thus, a screen would not be available to rebut the presumption of shared confidences within a law firm if the prohibition arises from the law firm’s prior representation of the former client. In addition, the screening procedures are available only if the prohibited	Comment [7] is based on Model Rule 1.10, cmt. [7]. Non-substantive changes include: (i) “Paragraph” has been substituted for “section” to conform to California Rule style. (ii) “Rule 1.0.1” has been substituted for “Rule 1.0” because proposed Rule 1.0.1 is the counterpart to Model Rule 1.0. (iii) A cross-reference to Comment [13] has been added to direct readers to that Comment, which elaborates on the last sentence of the Model Rule. Substantively, five sentences have been added to clarify the limitation on the availability of screening under this Rule. The second sentence clarifies an important limitation in the Rule – the screening provisions are available only when the firm seeks to screen a lawyer whose prohibition is based on the lawyer’s

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule Comment	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	lawyer did not substantially participate in the prior representation. Whether a lawyer has substantially participated in the prior representation will depend upon the specific facts. Substantial participation is not necessarily limited to a lawyer’s participation in the management and direction of the matter at the policy-making level, but also may mean responsibility at the operational level as manifested by the continuous day-to-day responsibility for litigation or transaction decisions. A description of effective screening mechanisms appears in Rule ~~1.01.0.1~~(k). Lawyers should be aware, however, that, even where screening mechanisms have been adopted, tribunals may consider additional factors in ruling upon motions to disqualify a lawyer from pending litigation. See Comment [13].	previous association with a different firm. That limitation assures that a law firm could not erect a screen to protect the confidential information of a client that was formerly represented by firm lawyers when they were at the firm. The third sentence emphasizes that screening under the Rule is available only for lawyers who did not substantially participate in the prior representation, and the fourth and fifth sentences describe generally what is meant by “substantial participation,” providing clarification of when the Rule is applicable.
[8] Paragraph (a)(2)(i) does not prohibit the screened lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly related to the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.	[8] Paragraph (a)(2)(~~ii~~) does not prohibit the screened lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly related to the matter in which the lawyer is ~~disqualified~~prohibited.	Comment [8] is nearly identical to Model Rule 1.10, cmt. [8], except that “prohibited” has been substituted for “disqualified,” as has been done throughout the Rules.
[9] The notice required by paragraph (a)(2)(ii) generally should include a description of the screened lawyer’s prior representation and be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent. It also should include a statement by the screened lawyer and the firm that	[9] The notice required by paragraph (a)(2)(~~iii~~) generally should include a description of the screened lawyer’s prior representation and be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent. It also should include a statement by the screened lawyer and the firm that the client’s material	Comment [9] is nearly identical to Model Rule 1.9, cmt. [9], the only difference being the cross-reference to paragraph (a)(2)(iii) because of the addition of paragraph (a)(2)(i) to the Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule Comment	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
the client’s material confidential information has not been disclosed or used in violation of the Rules. The notice is intended to enable the former client to evaluate and comment upon the effectiveness of the screening procedures.	confidential information has not been disclosed or used in violation of the Rules. The notice is intended to enable the former client to evaluate and comment upon the effectiveness of the screening procedures.
[10]The certifications required by paragraph (a)(2)(iii) give the former client assurance that the client’s material confidential information has not been disclosed or used inappropriately, either prior to timely implementation of a screen or thereafter. If compliance cannot be certified, the certificate must describe the failure to comply.	[10] The certifications required by paragraph (a)(2)(iii) ~~are intended to~~ give the former client assurance that the client’s material confidential information has not been disclosed or used inappropriately, either prior to timely implementation of a screen or thereafter. If compliance cannot be certified, the certificate must describe the failure to comply.	Comment [10] is nearly identical to Model Rule 1.10, cmt. [10]. The phrase “are intended to” has been added because it is a more accurate statement of the purpose of requiring certifications under subparagraph (a)(2)(iv).
[11]Where a lawyer has joined a private firm after having represented the government, imputation is governed by Rule 1.11(b) and (c), not this Rule. Under Rule 1.11(d), where a lawyer represents the government after having served clients in private practice, nongovernmental employment or in another government agency, former client conflicts are not imputed to government lawyers associated with the individually disqualified lawyer.	[11-ALT1] Where a lawyer has joined a private firm or a government agency after having represented the government or another government agency, imputation is governed ~~under~~by Rule 1.11(b) and (c), not this Rule. ~~Under Rule 1.11(d), where~~ Where a lawyer ~~represents the~~has become employed by a government agency after having served clients in private practice, or other nongovernmental employment ~~or, the questions of whether, in another government agency a particular matter, former client conflicts are not a lawyer’s conflict under paragraph (d) will be~~ imputed to ~~government other~~ lawyers associated with serving in the individually disqualified lawyers same governmental agency; and (2) whether the use of a timely screen will avoid that imputation are matters of case law. See Rule 1.11,	Comment [11-ALT1] is based on Model Rule 1.10, cmt. [11]. There are two versions of the Rule that are proposed: ALT-1 reflects the Board’s vote that the issue of screening when a government lawyer moves from private practice to government employment should be left to the case law. The ALT-1 version should be included if BOG disagrees with the Commission that paragraph (e) should be restored to Rule 1.11. This Comment corrects an error in the final public comment draft.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule Comment	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	Comments [9B] and [9C].
[11]Where a lawyer has joined a private firm after having represented the government, imputation is governed by Rule 1.11(b) and (c), not this Rule. Under Rule 1.11(d), where a lawyer represents the government after having served clients in private practice, nongovernmental employment or in another government agency, former client conflicts are not imputed to government lawyers associated with the individually disqualified lawyer.	[11-ALT2] Where a lawyer has joined a private firm or a government agency after having represented the government or another government agency, imputation is governed by Rule 1.11(b) and (c), not this Rule. Where a lawyer has become employed by a government agency after having served clients in private practice or other nongovernmental employment, imputation is governed by Rule 1.11(e).	Comment [11-ALT2] is based on Model Rule 1.10, cmt. [11]. There are two versions of the Rule that are proposed: ALT-2 reflects the Commission’s conclusion that the issue of screening when a government lawyer moves from private practice to government employment should be addressed in Rule 1.11, specifically in proposed Rule 1.11(e). The ALT-2 version should be included if BOG agrees with the Commission that paragraph (e) should be restored to Rule 1.11. This Comment corrects an error in the final public comment draft.
[12]Where a lawyer is prohibited from engaging in certain transactions under Rule 1.8, paragraph (k) of that Rule, and not this Rule, determines whether that prohibition also applies to other lawyers associated in a firm with the personally prohibited lawyer.	[12]Where a lawyer is prohibited from engaging in certain transactions under Rules [1.8.1] through Rule ~~1.8.1.8.9~~, paragraph (k) of that Rule 1.8.11, and not this Rule, determines whether that prohibition also applies to other lawyers associated in a firm with the personally prohibited lawyer.	Comment [12] is based on Model Rule 1.10, cmt. [12]. Any changes to the comment merely reflect the rule numbering convention the Commission has adopted for the 1.8 series of rules. Brackets have been placed around the Rules pending a final decision on numbering.
	Rule Not Determinative of Disqualification Motions [13]This Rule does not limit or alter the power of a court of this State to control the conduct of lawyers and other persons connected in any manner with judicial proceedings before it, including matters pertaining to disqualification. See Code of Civil	Comment [13] has no counterpart in the Model Rules. It has been added to signal that the Rule, which in effect has codified the court-created doctrine of imputation, is not intended to override a court’s inherent authority to monitor and control the conduct of persons before it.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule Comment	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	Procedure section 128(a)(5); Penal Code section 1424; In re Charlissee C. (2008) 45 Cal.4th 145; Rhaburn v. Superior Court (2006) 140 Cal.App.4th 1566.

Rule 1.10: Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule

(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule ALT2 to the Public Comment Draft)

- (a) While lawyers are associated in a firm, none of them shall knowingly represent a client when any one of them practicing alone would be prohibited from doing so by Rules 1.7 or 1.9, unless ~~the prohibition is based on a personal interest of the prohibited lawyer and does not present a significant risk of materially limiting the representation of the client by the remaining lawyers in the firm.~~
- (1) the prohibition is based on a personal interest of the prohibited lawyer and does not present a significant risk of materially limiting the representation of the client by the remaining lawyers in the firm; or
- (2) the prohibition is based upon Rule 1.9(a) or (b), and arises out of the prohibited lawyer's association with a prior firm, and
- (i) the prohibited lawyer did not substantially participate in the prior representation;
- (ii) the prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom;
- (iii) written notice is promptly given to any affected former client to enable the former client to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this Rule, which notice shall include a description of the screening procedures employed; a
- statement of the firm's and of the screened lawyer's compliance with these Rules; a statement that review may be available before a tribunal; and an agreement by the firm to respond promptly to any written inquiries or objections by the former client about the screening procedures; and
- (iv) certifications of compliance with these Rules and with the screening procedures are provided to the former client by the screened lawyer and by a partner of the firm, at reasonable intervals upon the former client's written request and upon termination of the screening procedures.
- (b) When a lawyer has terminated an association with a firm, the firm is not prohibited from thereafter representing a person with interests materially adverse to those of a client represented by the formerly associated lawyer and not currently represented by the firm, unless
- (1) the matter is the same as or substantially related to that in which the formerly associated lawyer represented the client; and
- (2) any lawyer remaining in the firm has information protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e), and Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c) that is material to the matter.

- (c) A prohibition under this Rule may be waived by each affected client under the conditions stated in Rule 1.7.
- (d) The imputation of a conflict of interest to lawyers associated in a firm with former or current government lawyers is governed by Rule 1.11.

Comment

Definition of “Firm”

[1] Whether two or more lawyers constitute a firm for purposes of this Rule can depend on the specific facts. See Rule 1.0.1(c), Comments [2] - [4].

Principles of Imputed Conflicts of Interest

[2] The rule of imputed disqualification stated in paragraph (a) gives effect to the duties of loyalty and confidentiality owed to the client as they apply to lawyers who practice in a ~~law~~ firm. Such situations can be considered from the premise that a firm of lawyers is essentially one lawyer for purposes of the rules governing the duties of loyalty and confidentiality owed to the client, or from the premise that each lawyer is vicariously bound by the obligation of loyalty and confidentiality owed by each lawyer with whom the lawyer is associated. Paragraph (a)(1) operates only among the lawyers currently associated in a firm. When a lawyer moves from one firm to another, the situation is governed by Rules 1.9(b) and 1.10(a)(2) and 1.10(b).

[3] The rule in paragraph (a) does not prohibit representation where neither questions of client loyalty nor protection of confidential information are presented. Where one lawyer in a firm could not effectively represent a given client because of strong political beliefs, for example, but that lawyer will do no work on the case and the personal beliefs of the lawyer will not materially limit the representation by others in the firm, the firm should not be prohibited from further representation. On the other hand, if an opposing party in a case were owned by a lawyer in the law firm, and others in the firm would be materially limited in pursuing the matter because of loyalty to that lawyer, the personal prohibition of the lawyer would be imputed to all others in the firm.

[4] The rule in paragraph (a) also does not prohibit representation by others in the law firm where the person prohibited from involvement in a matter is a nonlawyer, such as a paralegal or legal secretary. Nor does paragraph (a) prohibit representation by others in the law firm if the lawyer is prohibited from acting because of events that occurred before the person became a lawyer, for example, work that the person did while a law student. In both situations, however, such persons must be screened from any personal participation in the matter to avoid communication to others in the firm of confidential information that both the nonlawyers and the firm have a legal duty to protect. See Rules 1.0.1(k) and 5.3. See also Comment [913].

[5] Rule 1.10(b) operates to permit a law firm, under certain circumstances, to represent a person with interests directly adverse to those of a client represented by a lawyer who formerly was associated with the firm. The Rule applies regardless of when the formerly associated lawyer represented the client. However, the law firm may not represent a person with interests adverse to those of a current client of the firm, which would violate Rule 1.7. Moreover, the firm may not represent the person where the matter is the same or substantially related to that in which the formerly associated lawyer represented the client and any other lawyer currently in the firm has material information protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c).

[6] Rule 1.10(c) removes imputation with the informed consent of each affected client or former client under the conditions stated in Rule 1.7. The conditions stated in Rule 1.7 require the lawyer to determine that the representation is not prohibited by Rule 1.7(b) and Comments [14A] ~~to~~ [17A], and that each affected client or former client has given informed written consent to the representation. In some cases, the risk may be so severe that the conflict may not be cured by client consent. For a discussion of the effectiveness of client waivers of conflicts that might arise in the future, see Rule 1.7, Comment [22]. For a definition of informed consent, see Rule 1.0.1(e).

[7] Rule 1.10(a)(2) similarly removes the imputation otherwise required by Rule 1.10(a), but unlike paragraph (c), it does so without requiring that there be informed consent by the former client. Instead, it requires that the procedures laid out in subparagraphs (a)(2)(ii)-(iv) be followed. However, the screening procedures afforded under subparagraphs (a)(2)(ii)-(iv) are available only in situations where the prohibition has arisen out of the prohibited lawyer's association with a prior law firm. Thus, a screen would not be available to rebut the presumption of shared confidences within a law firm if the prohibition arises from the law firm's prior representation of the former client. In addition, the screening procedures are available only if the prohibited lawyer did not substantially participate in the prior representation. Whether a lawyer has substantially participated in the prior representation will depend upon the specific facts. Substantial participation is not necessarily limited to a lawyer's participation in the management and direction of the matter at the policy-making level, but also may mean responsibility at the operational level as manifested by the continuous day-to-day responsibility for litigation or transaction decisions. A description of effective screening mechanisms appears in Rule 1.0(k). Lawyers should be aware, however, that, even where screening mechanisms have been adopted, tribunals may consider additional factors in ruling upon motions to disqualify a lawyer from pending litigation. See Comment [13].

[8] Paragraph (a)(2)(ii) does not prohibit the screened lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly related to the matter in which the lawyer is prohibited.

[9] The notice required by paragraph (a)(2)(iii) generally should include a description of the screened lawyer's prior representation and be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent. It also should include a statement by the screened lawyer and the firm that the client's material confidential information has not been disclosed or used in violation of the Rules. The notice is intended to enable the former client to evaluate and comment upon the effectiveness of the screening procedures.

[10] The certifications required by paragraph (a)(2)(iv) are intended to give the former client assurance that the client's material confidential information has not been disclosed or used inappropriately, either prior to timely implementation of a screen or thereafter. If compliance cannot be certified, the certificate must describe the failure to comply.

[11-ALT1] Where a lawyer has joined a private firm after having represented the government, imputation is governed by Rule 1.11(b) and (c), not this Rule. Where a lawyer has become employed by a government agency after having served clients in private practice or in other nongovernmental employment, the questions of whether, in a particular matter, a lawyer's conflict under paragraph (d) will be imputed to other lawyers serving in the same governmental agency; and (2) whether the use of a timely screen will avoid that imputation are matters of case law. See Rule 1.11, Comments [9B] and [9C].

[~~711-ALT2~~] ~~Where a lawyer has joined a private firm or a government agency after having represented the government or another government agency,~~ imputation is governed by Rule 1.11(b) and (c), not this Rule. Where a lawyer has become employed by a government agency after having served clients in private practice or in other nongovernmental employment, imputation is governed by Rule 1.11(e).

[812] Where a lawyer is prohibited from engaging in certain transactions under Rules 1.8.1 through Rule 1.8.9, Rule 1.8.11, and not this Rule, determines whether that prohibition also applies to other lawyers associated in a firm with the personally prohibited lawyer.

Rule Not Determinative of Disqualification Motions

[913] This Rule does not limit or alter the power of a court of this State to control the conduct of lawyers and other persons connected in any manner with judicial proceedings before it, including ~~matter~~matters pertaining to disqualification. See Code of Civil Procedure section 128(a)(5); Penal Code section 1424; In re Charlissee C. (2008) 45 Cal.4th 145; Rhaburn v. Superior Court (2006) 140 Cal.App.4th 1566.

~~[10] Rule 1.10 leaves open the issue of whether, in a particular matter, use of a timely screen will avoid the imputation of a conflict of interest under paragraph (a) or (b). Whether timely implementation of a screen will avoid imputation of a conflict of interest in litigation, transactional, or other contexts is a matter of case law.~~

Rule 1.10 Imputation Of Conflicts Of Interest: General Rule
(Commission's Proposed Rule ALT2 – Clean Version)

- (a) While lawyers are associated in a firm, none of them shall knowingly represent a client when any one of them practicing alone would be prohibited from doing so by Rules 1.7 or 1.9, unless
 - (1) the prohibition is based on a personal interest of the prohibited lawyer and does not present a significant risk of materially limiting the representation of the client by the remaining lawyers in the firm; or
 - (2) the prohibition is based upon Rule 1.9(a) or (b), and arises out of the prohibited lawyer's association with a prior firm, and
 - (i) the prohibited lawyer did not substantially participate in the prior representation;
 - (ii) the prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom;
 - (iii) written notice is promptly given to any affected former client to enable the former client to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this Rule, which notice shall include a description of the screening procedures employed; a statement of the firm's and of the screened lawyer's compliance with these Rules; a statement that review may be available before a tribunal; and an agreement by the firm to respond promptly to any written inquiries or objections by the former client about the screening procedures; and
- (iv) certifications of compliance with these Rules and with the screening procedures are provided to the former client by the screened lawyer and by a partner of the firm, at reasonable intervals upon the former client's written request and upon termination of the screening procedures.
- (b) When a lawyer has terminated an association with a firm, the firm is not prohibited from thereafter representing a person with interests materially adverse to those of a client represented by the formerly associated lawyer and not currently represented by the firm, unless
 - (1) the matter is the same as or substantially related to that in which the formerly associated lawyer represented the client; and
 - (2) any lawyer remaining in the firm has information protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e), and Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c) that is material to the matter.
- (c) A prohibition under this Rule may be waived by each affected client under the conditions stated in Rule 1.7.
- (d) The imputation of a conflict of interest to lawyers associated in a firm with former or current government lawyers is governed by Rule 1.11.

COMMENT

Definition of “Firm”

[1] Whether two or more lawyers constitute a firm for purposes of this Rule can depend on the specific facts. See Rule 1.0.1(c), Comments [2] - [4].

Principles of Imputed Conflicts of Interest

[2] The rule of imputed disqualification stated in paragraph (a) gives effect to the duties of loyalty and confidentiality owed to the client as they apply to lawyers who practice in a firm. Such situations can be considered from the premise that a firm of lawyers is essentially one lawyer for purposes of the rules governing the duties of loyalty and confidentiality owed to the client, or from the premise that each lawyer is vicariously bound by the obligation of loyalty and confidentiality owed by each lawyer with whom the lawyer is associated. Paragraph (a)(1) operates only among the lawyers currently associated in a firm. When a lawyer moves from one firm to another, the situation is governed by Rules 1.9(b) and 1.10(a)(2) and 1.10(b).

[3] The rule in paragraph (a) does not prohibit representation where neither questions of client loyalty nor protection of confidential information are presented. Where one lawyer in a firm could not effectively represent a given client because of strong political beliefs, for example, but that lawyer will do no work on the case and the personal beliefs of the lawyer will not materially limit the representation by others in the firm, the firm should not be prohibited from further representation. On the other hand, if an opposing party in a case were owned by a lawyer in the law firm, and others in the firm would be materially limited in pursuing the matter because of loyalty to that lawyer, the personal prohibition of the lawyer would be imputed to all others in the firm.

[4] The rule in paragraph (a) also does not prohibit representation by others in the law firm where the person prohibited from involvement in a matter is a nonlawyer, such as a paralegal or legal secretary. Nor does paragraph (a) prohibit representation by others in the law firm if the lawyer is prohibited from acting because of events that occurred before the person became a lawyer, for example, work that the person did while a law student. In both situations, however, such persons must be screened from any personal participation in the matter to avoid communication to others in the firm of confidential information that both the nonlawyers and the firm have a legal duty to protect. See Rules 1.0.1(k) and 5.3. See also Comment [13].

[5] Rule 1.10(b) operates to permit a law firm, under certain circumstances, to represent a person with interests directly adverse to those of a client represented by a lawyer who formerly was associated with the firm. The Rule applies regardless of when the formerly associated lawyer represented the client. However, the law firm may not represent a person with interests adverse to those of a current client of the firm, which would violate Rule 1.7. Moreover, the firm may not represent the person where the matter is the same or substantially related to that in which the formerly associated lawyer represented the client and any other lawyer currently in the firm has material information protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c).

[6] Rule 1.10(c) removes imputation with the informed consent of each affected client or former client under the conditions stated in Rule 1.7. The conditions stated in Rule 1.7 require the lawyer to determine that the representation is not prohibited by Rule 1.7(b) and Comments [14] – [17A], and that each affected client or former client has given informed written consent to the representation. In some cases, the risk may be so severe that the conflict may not be cured by client consent. For a discussion of the effectiveness of client waivers of conflicts that might arise in the future, see Rule 1.7, Comment [22]. For a definition of informed consent, see Rule 1.0.1(e).

[7] Rule 1.10(a)(2) similarly removes the imputation otherwise required by Rule 1.10(a), but unlike paragraph (c), it does so without requiring that there be informed consent by the former client. Instead, it requires that the procedures laid out in subparagraphs (a)(2)(ii)-(iv) be followed. However, the screening procedures afforded under subparagraphs (a)(2)(ii)-(iv) are available only in situations where the prohibition has arisen out of the prohibited lawyer's association with a prior law firm. Thus, a screen would not be available to rebut the presumption of shared confidences within a law firm if the prohibition arises from the law firm's prior representation of the former client. In addition, the screening procedures are available only if the prohibited lawyer did not substantially participate in the prior representation. Whether a lawyer has substantially participated in the prior representation will depend upon the specific facts. Substantial participation is not necessarily limited to a lawyer's participation in the management and direction of the matter at the policy-making level, but also may mean responsibility at the operational level as manifested by the continuous day-to-day responsibility for litigation or transaction decisions. A description of effective screening mechanisms appears in Rule 1.0(k). Lawyers should be aware, however, that, even where screening mechanisms have been adopted, tribunals may consider additional factors in ruling upon motions to disqualify a lawyer from pending litigation. See Comment [13].

[8] Paragraph (a)(2)(ii) does not prohibit the screened lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly related to the matter in which the lawyer is prohibited.

[9] The notice required by paragraph (a)(2)(iii) generally should include a description of the screened lawyer's prior representation and be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent. It also should include a statement by the screened lawyer and the firm that the client's material confidential information has not been disclosed or used in violation of the Rules.

The notice is intended to enable the former client to evaluate and comment upon the effectiveness of the screening procedures.

[10] The certifications required by paragraph (a)(2)(iv) are intended to give the former client assurance that the client's material confidential information has not been disclosed or used inappropriately, either prior to timely implementation of a screen or thereafter. If compliance cannot be certified, the certificate must describe the failure to comply.

[11-ALT1] Where a lawyer has joined a private firm after having represented the government, imputation is governed by Rule 1.11(b) and (c), not this Rule. Where a lawyer has become employed by a government agency after having served clients in private practice or in other nongovernmental employment, the questions of whether, in a particular matter, a lawyer's conflict under paragraph (d) will be imputed to other lawyers serving in the same governmental agency; and (2) whether the use of a timely screen will avoid that imputation are matters of case law. See Rule 1.11, Comments [9B] and [9C].

[11-ALT2] Where a lawyer has joined a private firm after having represented the government, imputation is governed by Rule 1.11(b) and (c), not this Rule. Where a lawyer has become employed by a government agency after having served clients in private practice or in other nongovernmental employment, imputation is governed by Rule 1.11(e).

[12] Where a lawyer is prohibited from engaging in certain transactions under Rules 1.8.1 through Rule 1.8.9, Rule 1.8.11, and not this Rule, determines whether that prohibition also applies to other lawyers associated in a firm with the personally prohibited lawyer.

Rule Not Determinative of Disqualification Motions

[13] This Rule does not limit or alter the power of a court of this State to control the conduct of lawyers and other persons connected in any manner with judicial proceedings before it, including matters pertaining to disqualification. See Code of Civil Procedure section 128(a)(5); Penal Code section 1424; In re Charlissee C. (2008) 45 Cal.4th 145; Rhaburn v. Superior Court (2006) 140 Cal.App.4th 1566.

Proposed Rule 1.10 Imputation of Conflicts: General Rule

Minority Position in Favor of Rule 1.10 Without Unconsented Screening

Minority Dissent

A minority of the Commission dissents to the inclusion of screening in Rule 1.10, which would allow unconsented screening when a lawyer did not substantially participate in a former client's matter. A majority of the Commission decided that the "substantially participate" standard does not exclude the possibility that the lawyer actually obtained a client's confidential information. The California Supreme Court has recognized that "Even the briefest conversation between a lawyer and a client can result in the disclosure of confidences." (People ex rel. Dept. of Corporations v. Speedee Oil Change Systems, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 1135, 1148.)

The proposed screening provision would allow screening in situations where the lawyer obtained confidential information that could be used against the client. It would allow screening without any of the balancing of interests that the court required in Kirk v. First American Title Ins. Co. (2010) 183 Cal.App.4th 776.

The recent decision in Kirk v. First American Title Ins. Co. (2010) 183 Cal.App.4th 776 does not justify the proposed screening rule. Kirk created a highly circumstantial standard that will require further applications in the courts before any general conclusions regarding the scope of the standard can be drawn. Kirk endorsed the Board's decision not to provide for screening in Rule 1.10, stating, "We agree with the Board of Governors that the issue of whether attorney screening can overcome vicarious disqualification in the context of an attorney moving between private law firms is not clearly settled in California." (Slip Opn at p. 35.) The highly circumstantial test which Kirk announced leaves the law unsettled and should be left to evolve in the courts. The Supreme Court's decision to not decertify the Kirk opinion and to decline review does not mean the Court endorsed the decision. (See e.g. Cal Rule of Ct, Rule 8.1125(d).) Nor does it make the law any more settled in light of Kirk's highly circumstantial test.

The screening rule the majority asks the Board to reconsider has nothing to do with either the facts or the test in Kirk. The proposed Rule would allow any lawyer who is not a lead attorney to be screened if that lawyer did not "substantially participate" in the client's matter regardless of the circumstances. The proposed screening rule would allow screening in a side-switching situation that Kirk held was not appropriate for screening. The proposed screening rule is not patterned on Kirk and was not considered or sanctioned by Kirk. There is no legal authority for the proposed screening rule.

Allowing screening without a client's consent undermines the extremely important role of confidentiality and trust in a prospective lawyer-client relationship.

The duty of confidentiality expressed in Business & Professions Code section 6068(e)(1) and Rule 3-100 prohibits a lawyer from using or disclosing any information that a client wants the lawyer to hold inviolate or the disclosure of likely would be embarrassing or detrimental to the client. The duty exists to assure that anyone can discuss with a lawyer how the law applies to his or her most intimate problem without fear of consequence. This duty also exists because effective representation depends on open communication between lawyer and client. (City & County of S.F. v. Superior Court (1951) 37 Cal.2d 227, 235 (1951) ["Adequate legal representation in the ascertainment and enforcement of rights or the prosecution or defense of litigation compels a full disclosure of the facts by the client to his attorney. Unless he makes known to the lawyer all the facts, the advice that follows will be useless, if not misleading."].)

The legal profession invites client candor by imposing an austere duty of confidentiality on lawyers. Through the strict application of this duty, a client never has to worry about revealing confidential information to a lawyer and never has to question their decision to do so. Rule 1.9 extends that purpose by preventing lawyers from putting themselves in a position where they would be tempted to reveal or use against the client information that the client imparted in confidence.

Rule 1.10 imputes the conflict to the lawyer's firm in order to assure clients that the lawyer will not be tempted by the interest of the lawyer's firm to reveal information the client imparted to the lawyer in confidence. Imputation is necessary because the client has no means to assure that information in the possession of a firm representing the client's adversary will not be shared and used or disclosed against the client's interests. Imputation does not turn on whether lawyers in large firms are presumed to share information. It turns on the firm's interest as an advocate for an adversary, the availability of the information within the law firm and the client's inability to know whether a screen has been violated.

The proposed screening rule suffers from the fundamental problem that a client has no means to assure that information in the possession of a firm representing the prospective client's adversary will not be shared and used or disclosed against the client's interests. While the proposed screening rule provisions allow the client to know the basic terms of the screen and receive assurances of compliance, it does not and cannot overcome the fact that the affected client is prevented by law firm's duties of confidentiality and the lawyer-client privilege from knowing whether there is actual compliance.

The legal profession cannot assure prospective clients that they can communicate with lawyers in confidence when the client cannot verify that the law firm is not using the information in circumstances where the law firm would be tempted to use it against the client. As the Court of Appeal stated in Adams v. Aerojet General (2001) 86 Cal.App.4th 1324 in adopting Cal. State Bar Formal Opn. 1998-152:

The vicarious disqualification rule has been established as a prophylactic device to protect the sanctity of former client confidences where a law firm with a member attorney who has acquired knowledge of confidential information material to the current controversy would otherwise be permitted to represent the former client's adversary. "No amount of assurances or screening procedures, no 'cone of silence,' could ever convince the opposing party that the confidences would not be used to its disadvantage. . . . No one could have confidence in the integrity of a legal process in which this is permitted to occur without the parties' consent." (Cho v. Superior Court (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 113, 125 [45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 863], fn. omitted.) As the State Bar Committee observes: "the absence of an effective means of oversight combined with the law firm's interest as an advocate for the current client in the adverse representation are factors that tend to undermine a former client's trust, and in turn the public's trust, in a legal system that would permit such a situation to exist without the former client's consent." (Formal Opn. No. 1998-152, supra, at p. IIA-418.) (Emphasis added.)

Screening without client consent does not protect clients and undermines clients' ability to communicate with lawyers without fear of consequence because a client cannot be verify compliance. A client who has not expressed confidence in a law firm by consenting to the use of an ethical screen should not be forced to accept screening by law firm fiat. A client who has shared confidential information with a lawyer, justifiably would feel a sense of betrayal to learn that information the client expected would be held in confidence is in the possession of the law firm that now represents the client's adversary in a situation where that information could benefit that adversary.

The comments the Commission received do not address that screening comes at the expense of client trust and client protection, which are more important values than finding a way to more predictably impose a screen without client consent. While making screening more predictable protects lawyers, it does not protect clients with confidential information at stake. The Bar cannot fulfill the purpose of the duty of confidentiality, and it cannot expect clients to trust that they can communicate with lawyers in confidence, when a law firm can harbor that confidential information behind an unconsented and unverifiable screen while the firm represents the client's adversary.

Kirk is but one decision, whose significance will be measured over time. It presents a highly controversial standard that for the first time allows other interests to outweigh the duty of confidentiality. Given the significance of the duty of confidentiality, it is left to be seen how courts will engage in that balancing and whether they will allow other interests to outweigh the protection of client trust in the ability to communicate with a lawyer in confidence. The courts should be left to resolve the scope and application of the Kirk. Screening should not be imposed on a client by a Rule of Professional Conduct.

Rule 1.10 Imputation of Conflicts: General Rule.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 0
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	M	Yes		COPRAC supports the implementation of screening in California through the Rules of Professional Conduct, and accordingly urges the adoption of paragraph 1.10(a)(2) of the Model Rule. COPRAC believes that implementation of screening through a piecemeal, case-by-case approach works to the detriment of the profession. Rather than having the screening doctrine worked out over a period of years through a series of cases, which leaves lawyers uncertain of the application of precedent to their particular situations, better guidance to the profession would be available through an explicit rule, which could be referenced easily, and uniformly applied. We strongly believe that this would provide superior guidance and clarity to the professional seeking to comply with their ethical duties. In addition, case law will determine whether screening will permit a lawyer to avoid disqualification. The rule should inform a lawyer whether screening will permit the lawyer to avoid discipline. Even if case law develops to permit screening as a method to avoid disqualification, the absence of	The Commission did not make the requested change. Although the Commission recommended that Rule 1.10 include limited non-consensual screening for lateral attorneys who are not substantially involved in the matter and who do not switch sides in the same case, the Board of Governors rejected the proposed Rule. The Board subsequently approved a version of Rule 1.10 without any provision for screening. However, in light of the Supreme Court's decision to deny review in Kirk v. First American Title Ins. Co. (2010) 183 Cal.App.4th 776, 108 Cal.Rptr.3d 620, rev. denied (6/23/10), and also to deny a request for depublishation of the Court of Appeal opinion, the Commission voted to request that the Board reconsider its rejection of proposed Rule 1.10 with a provision permitting limited screening.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 1.10 Imputation of Conflicts: General Rule.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 0
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response screening in the rule could nevertheless subject a lawyer to discipline.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel ("OCTC")	M		1.10(a)	1. Commenter is concerned with the use of the term "knowingly" in paragraph (a). This appears to sanction the lack of conflict procedures regarding clients of other members of the firm and is inconsistent with Comment 4, rule 1.7, which states: "Ignorance caused by a failure to institute such procedures [referring to conflict detection procedures] will not excuse a lawyer's violation of this Rule." The same should apply here. Although negligence is not a basis for discipline, gross negligence or recklessness is. Thus, what conflict procedures, if any, exist should be an important factor in determining if the attorney violated this rule and should be disciplined. Also, by using the term "knowingly," the Commission may inadvertently affect disqualification rulings in civil and criminal cases. 2. As it has noted with respect to other rules, the commenter believes there are too many comments and many are too long and seem more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	1. The Commission disagrees with the commenter and has retained the "knowingly" standard in the rule and comment. As in other jurisdictions that have adopted imputation as a disciplinary standard, the Commission's position is that the Model Rule's standard should be adopted. Although a lawyer without actual knowledge could be properly disqualified in a civil action, the lawyer would not be subject to discipline. California should not depart from this approach, which is taken in every jurisdiction. 2. The Commission disagrees. The comments provide useful guidance to lawyers and courts on the application of the Rule.
				Comment	Comment [1] simply states that whether two	The Commission did not make a change. Comment

Rule 1.10 Imputation of Conflicts: General Rule. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 3 Agree = 0 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				[1]	or more lawyers constitute a firm depends on specific facts. However, neither the rule nor Comment [1] provides guidance as to what constitutes a law firm.	[1] provides a cross-reference to proposed Rule 1.0.1(c) – which defines “law firm” – and cmts. [2]-[4] thereto. The Commission does not believe that it is possible to define in advance how the term “law firm” will be applied in all situations. For example, there might be facts under which two independent law firms work so closely together that they should be considered a single law firm for purposes of imputation.
				Comment [3]	Comment [3] should be clarified or stricken.	The Commission has made no change. Comment [3] is derived nearly verbatim from Model Rule 1.10. As noted in the Ethics 2000 Reporter’s Explanation of Changes, this comment “deals with the elimination of imputation of a lawyer’s ‘personal-interest’ conflicts to others in the firm because there is no risk to loyal and effective representation of the client. The Comment also provides illustrations of when this exception to imputation might and might not apply.” See also proposed Rule 1.7.
				Comment [4]	Comment [4] discusses non-lawyer situations: secretaries, paralegals, law clerks and provides for screening of them. It is not clear why this Comment is provided given that the rules do not regulate these people.	The Commission has retained this Comment, which is based on Model Rule 1.10, cmt. [4]. As noted in the Ethics 2000 Reporter’s Explanation of Changes, this comment reflects current case law and “is intended to give guidance to lawyers about important practical questions.”
				Comment [9]	Comment [9] needs more clarification or should be stricken	The Commission has not made the requested change to Comment [9]. As noted in the

Rule 1.10 Imputation of Conflicts: General Rule. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 3 Agree = 0 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
						Explanation of Changes to proposed Rule 1.10, the comment "has been added to signal that the Rule, which in effect has codified the court-created doctrine of imputation, is not intended to override a court's inherent authority to monitor and control the conduct of persons before it." Nevertheless, the Commission has made some clarifying changes to the Comment and added references to California case law.
3	Senator, Stuart N. (Alston & Baird LLP, Duane Morris LLP, Morgan Lewis & Bockius LLP, and Munger Tolles & Olson LLP)	M	Yes	Model Rule 1.10(a)(2)	Whether it is ethically proper to use a screen for non-government lateral hires to avoid an imputation of a conflict of interest is squarely before the Board, and the proposal to defer this question as "a matter of case law" should be revisited. Trends in the legal profession over the past three decades, including massive growth in the size of law firms and a dramatic spike in attorney mobility, have undermined the rationale for automatic vicarious disqualification. Because lawyer mobility is now an embedded feature of the legal profession, in marked contrast to the situation a generation ago, the automatic vicarious disqualification rule imposes far greater constraints on the industry today. Ethical screens have been shown to be effective to protect confidential client	The Commission did not make the requested change. Although the Commission recommended that Rule 1.10 include limited non-consensual screening for lateral attorneys who are not substantially involved in the matter and who do not switch sides in the same case, the Board of Governors rejected the proposed Rule. The Board subsequently approved a version of Rule 1.10 without any provision for screening. However, in light of the Supreme Court's decision to deny review in Kirk v. First American Title Ins. Co. (2010) 183 Cal.App.4th 776, 108 Cal.Rptr.3d 620, rev. denied (6/23/10), and also to deny a request for depublication of the Court of Appeal opinion, the Commission voted to request that the Board reconsider its rejection of proposed Rule 1.10 with a provision permitting limited screening.

Rule 1.10 Imputation of Conflicts: General Rule. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 3 Agree = 0 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response information. As the court in Kirk v. First American Title Ins. Co. put it, "[t]here is no legitimate reason to believe that the same screening could not work in the context of private attorneys in a private firm." Kirk, supra, at * 16. The commenter urges the Board of Governors to reconsider its present position and adopt the approach to ethical screens set forth in ABA Model Rule 1.10(a)(2).

Rule 1.10: Imputation of Conflicts of Interest: General Rule

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Arizona: Rule 1.10(d) permits screening of a personally disqualified lateral lawyer if the “matter does not involve a proceeding before a tribunal in which the personally disqualified lawyer had a substantial role,” the lawyer gets no part of the fee, and “written notice is promptly given to any affected former client to enable it to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this Rule.”

California has no provision comparable to ABA Model Rule 1.10.

District of Columbia adds Rule 1.10(a)(2), which notes that imputation does not apply “if the representation is permitted by Rules 1.11, 1.12, or 1.18.” The D.C. rule also contains a Rule 1.10(e) that creates a partial exception to imputation when a lawyer assists “the Office of the Attorney General of the District of Columbia in providing legal services to that agency.”

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2010, the screening provision in Rule 1.10 is substantially similar to the Model Rule, except that Illinois has not adopted the additional requirements contained in Model Rule 1.10(a)(2)(ii) and (iii).

Massachusetts: Rule 1.10(d) provides for screening a “personally disqualified lawyer” if he or she “had neither substantial involvement nor substantial material information relating to the matter . . . and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom.” Rule 1.10(e) describes an appropriate screening process, including a requirement in Rule 1.10(e)(4) that the former client receives an affidavit of the personally disqualified lawyer and the firm describing the screening procedures and attesting that:

(i) the personally disqualified lawyer will not participate in the matter and will not discuss the matter or the representation with any other lawyer or employee of his or her current firm; (ii) no material information was transmitted by the personally disqualified lawyer before implementation of the screening procedures and notice to the former client; and (iii) during the period of the lawyer's personal disqualification those lawyers or employees who do participate in the matter will be apprised that the personally disqualified lawyer is screened from participating in or discussing the matter. . .

In any matter not before a tribunal, "the firm, the personally disqualified lawyer, or the former client may seek judicial review in a court of general jurisdiction of the screening procedures used, or may seek court supervision to ensure that implementation of the screening procedures has occurred and that effective actual compliance has been achieved."

Michigan: The screening provision in Rule 1.10(b) is substantially similar to the Model Rule, except that Michigan has fewer disclosure requirements than Model Rule 1.10(a)(2)(ii) and omits all of the requirements contained in Model Rule 1.10(a)(2)(iii).

Minnesota includes the following screening provision in its version of Rule 1.10. It is based largely on §124 of the Restatement of the Law Governing Lawyers:

(b) When a lawyer becomes associated with a firm, and the lawyer is prohibited from representing a client pursuant to Rule 1.9(b), other lawyers in the firm may represent that client if there is no reasonably apparent risk that confidential information of the previously represented client will be used with material adverse effect on that client because:

(1) any confidential information communicated to the lawyer is unlikely to be significant in the subsequent matter;

(2) the lawyer is subject to screening measures adequate to prevent disclosure of the confidential information and to prevent involvement by that lawyer in the representation; and

(3) timely and adequate notice of the screening has been provided to all affected clients.

Nebraska adds Rules 1.9(d)-(f) to govern conflicts arising from the past work of law clerks, paralegals, secretaries, messengers, and any other "support person," but Rule 1.9(e) does not impute support person conflicts to other lawyers at the firm if the former client consents or if the conflicted support person is screened to protect the former client's confidential information.

New Jersey adds Rule 1.10(c), which permits screening of a conflicted lawyer who becomes associated with a firm unless that lawyer had “primary responsibility” for the matter. Rule 1.10(f) provides as follows:

Any law firm that enters a screening arrangement, as provided by this Rule, shall establish appropriate written procedures to insure that: (1) all attorneys and other personnel in the law firm screen the personally disqualified attorney from any participation in the matter, (2) the screened attorney acknowledges the obligation to remain screened and takes action to insure the same, and (3) the screened attorney is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom.

Pursuant to Rule 1.7, public entities may not waive conflicts or agree to screening. And New Jersey Rule 1.9(c) reinforces Rule 1.10(c) by providing that “neither consent shall be sought from the client nor screening pursuant to RPC 1.10 permitted in any matter in which the attorney had sole or primary responsibility for the matter in the previous firm.”

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 1.10(c), which is simply the logical extension of Rule 1.9(b), specifies that a newly hired attorney does not create an imputed conflict of interest as long as that attorney had not acquired “any information protected by Rule 1.6 or Rule 1.9(c) that is material to the current matter.” In effect, then, the New York rules do not permit non-consensual screening of lateral lawyers from private practice (i.e., screening to avoid imputation without need for consent from the lateral lawyer’s former client). The former New York Code did not do so either, but the New York Court of Appeals, in Kassis v. TIAA, 717 N.E.2d 674 (N.Y. 1999), ruled that screening would be allowed if the lateral lawyer’s information with regard to the matter is “unlikely to be significant or material.” It remains to be seen whether the new rules were intended to “overrule” Kassis and whether, if they were, they can.

New York adds Rule 1.10(e)-(g), which contains detailed recordkeeping requirements for new engagements. These additional requirements are described in more depth in Comments 9 and 9A-9G.

Finally, New York adds Rule 1.10(h), which provides as follows: “A lawyer related to another lawyer as parent, child, sibling or spouse shall not represent in any matter a client whose interests differ from those of another party to the matter who the lawyer knows is represented by the other lawyer unless the client consents to the representation after full disclosure and the lawyer concludes that the lawyer can adequately represent the interests of the client.”

North Carolina: The screening provision in Rule 1.10(c) is substantially similar to the Model Rule, except that North Carolina omits the requirements contained in Model Rule 1.10(a)(2)(iii) and has fewer disclosure requirements than Model Rule 1.10(a)(2)(ii).

Ohio: Rule 1.10 permits screening of a lateral lawyer, but only if the lawyer did not have a “substantial role” in the matter.

Oregon has a screening procedure in Rule 1.10(c) that requires lawyers to submit affidavits confirming compliance with the screen.

Pennsylvania: The screening provision in Rule 1.10(b) is substantially similar to the Model Rule, except that Pennsylvania omits the requirements contained in Model Rule 1.10(a)(2)(iii) and has fewer disclosure requirements than Model Rule 1.10(a)(2)(ii).

South Carolina: Rule 1.10 tracks ABA Model Rule 1.10 verbatim but adds the following limited screening provision in Rule 1.10(e):

(e) A lawyer representing a client of a public defender office, legal services association, or similar program serving indigent clients shall not be disqualified under this Rule because of the program’s representation of another client in the same or a substantially related matter if:

(1) the lawyer is screened in a timely manner from access to confidential information relating to and from any participation in the representation of the other client; and

(2) the lawyer retains authority over the objectives of the representation pursuant to Rule 5.4(c).

Tennessee: Rule 1.10 includes the following screening provisions:

(c) Except with respect to paragraph (d) below, if a lawyer is personally disqualified from representing a person with interests adverse to a client of a law firm with which the lawyer was formerly associated, other lawyers currently associated in a firm with the personally disqualified lawyer may nonetheless represent the person if both the personally disqualified lawyer and the lawyers who will represent the person on behalf of the firm act reasonably to:

(1) identify that the personally disqualified lawyer is prohibited from participating in the representation of the current client; and

(2) determine that no lawyer representing the current client has acquired any information from the personally disqualified lawyer that is material to the current matter and is protected by Rule 1.9(c); and

(3) promptly implement screening procedures to effectively prevent the flow of information about the matter between the personally disqualified lawyer and the other lawyers in the firm; and

(4) advise the former client in writing of the circumstances that warranted the implementation of the screening procedures required by this Rule and of the actions that have been taken to comply with this Rule.

(d) The procedures set forth in paragraph (c) may not be used to avoid imputed disqualification of the firm, if

(1) the disqualified lawyer was substantially involved in the representation of a former client; and

(2) the lawyer's representation of the former client was in connection with an adjudicative proceeding that is directly adverse to the interests of a current client of the firm; and

(3) the proceeding between the firm's current client and the lawyer's former client is still pending at the time the lawyer changes firms.

Texas: Rule 1.09 provides:

(a) Without prior consent, a lawyer who personally has formerly represented a client in a matter shall not thereafter represent another person in a matter adverse to the former client:

(1) in which such other person questions the validity of the lawyer's services or work product for the former client;

(2) if the representation in reasonable probability will involve a violation of Rule 1.05; or

(3) if it is the same or a substantially related matter.

(b) Except to the extent authorized by Rule 1.10 [concerning government lawyers], when lawyers are or have become members of or associated with a firm, none of them shall knowingly represent a client if any one of them practicing alone would be prohibited from doing so by paragraph (a).

(c) When the association of a lawyer with a firm has terminated, the lawyers who were then associated with that lawyer shall not knowingly represent a client if the lawyer whose association with that firm has terminated would be prohibited from doing so by paragraph (a)(1) or if the representation in reasonable probability will involve a violation of Rule 1.05.

Wisconsin: Rule 1.10(a)(2) permits law firms to avoid imputation of a lateral lawyer's Rule 1.9 conflict if "(i) the personally disqualified lawyer performed no more than minor and isolated services in the disqualifying representation and did so only at a firm with which the lawyer is no longer associated"; (ii) the personally disqualified lawyer is timely screened and is apportioned no part of the fee from the matter; and (iii) written notice is promptly given to any affected former client to enable the former client to ascertain compliance with this rule.

Proposed Rule 1.11 [N/A]
“Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees”

(ALT1, XDraft #12.1, 6/29/10, and ALT2, XDraft 12.1, 7/8/10)

Summary: Proposed Rule 1.11 is based on Model Rule 1.11 and addresses conflicts arising from a lawyer moving to or from government service. Although there is no current rule counterpart in California, there is ample case law that concerns this Rule's topic. Following further public comment, the Commission requests that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision on Rule 1.11 (see version ALT1, attached) and adopt version ALT2, attached, that includes paragraph (e), which provides for imputation and screening within a government agency in conformance with California law. In the alternative, the Commission requests that the Board forward to the Supreme Court both versions of the Rule to permit the Court to make an informed decision on this issue. See Introduction.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule

Comment

- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☒ Existing California Law

Rule

RPC 3-310

Statute

Case law

Hollywood v. Superior Court (2008) 43 Cal.4th 721 [76 Cal.Rptr.3d 264]; City & County of San Francisco v. Cobra Solutions, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal.4th 839 [43 Cal.Rptr.3d 771]; City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2004) 122 Cal.App.4th 17 [18 Cal.Rptr.3d 403]; Civil Service Comm. v. Superior Court (1984) 163 Cal.App.3d 70 [209 Cal.Rptr. 159].

- ☒ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

D.C. Rule 1.11; N.Y. Rule 1.11.

- ☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 8
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 3
Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Commission Minority Position, Known Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

Minority Position Included. (See Introduction): ☒ Yes ☐ No

☐ No Known Stakeholders

☒ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

Government lawyers

☒ Very Controversial – Explanation:

The proposed Rule departs from the Model Rule by requiring, pursuant to California case law, that a government lawyer's disqualification be imputed to other lawyers in the governmental organization that employs the lawyer unless the former client consents or the disqualified lawyer is screened.

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Not Controversial – Explanation:

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 1.11* Special Conflicts of Interest for Former and Current Government Officers and Employees

July 2010

(Draft rule following consideration of second round of public comment.)

INTRODUCTION & EXPLANATION OF REQUEST FOR RECONSIDERATION OF BOARD'S DECISION NOT TO INCLUDE PARAGRAPH (E), CONCERNING IMPUTATION OF CONFLICTS AND SCREENING WITHIN GOVERNMENT AGENCIES AS REQUIRED BY CALIFORNIA LAW:

Summary of the Commission's Request. The Commission believes that comments received during both rounds of public comment warrant the Commission's return to the Board to seek reconsideration of the Board's previous votes on proposed Rule 1.11, and to request that the Board adopt the version of Rule 1.11, attached, that includes paragraph (e), which implements settled California law and expressly provides that the conflicts of a lawyer who moves from the private sector into government employment are imputed to other lawyers in the agency and requires those agencies to institute an ethical wall to rebut the presumption of shared confidences between the tainted lawyer and other lawyers in the agency. See, .e.g., City & County of San Francisco v. Cobra Solutions, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal.4th 839 [43 Cal.Rptr.3d 771]; City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2004) 122 Cal.App.4th 17 [18 Cal.Rptr.3d 403]. This version of the Rule is denominated as "ALT2". The version of Rule 1.11 approved by the Board at its May 2010 meeting, is also attached (denominated as "ALT1" in these materials).

Procedural History of the Board's Consideration of Rule 1.11. At its May 14, 2010 meeting, the Regulation and Admissions Committee of the Board of Governors voted against adoption of the version of Rule 1.11 proposed by the Commission. That version of the Rule, which is attached as ALT2, was revised extensively following the initial public comment to address concerns raised by the Department of Justice ("DOJ") in a March 12, 2010 from George Cardona to the Commission about the aforementioned paragraph (e)'s notice requirements.

* Proposed Rule 1.11, ALT1, XDraft #12.1 (6/29/10) and ALT2, XDraft #12.1 (7/8/10).

Commission Request. The Commission requests that the Board reconsider its decision not to include paragraph (e) in Rule 1.11. The initial public comment version of paragraph (e) provided:

(e) If a lawyer is prohibited from participating in a matter under paragraph (d) of this Rule, no other lawyer serving in the same government office, agency or department as the personally prohibited lawyer may knowingly undertake or continue representation in the matter unless:

(1) the personally prohibited lawyer is timely and effectively screened from any participation in the matter; and

(2) the personally prohibited lawyer's former client is notified in writing of the circumstances that warranted implementation of the screening procedures required by this paragraph and of the actions taken to comply with those requirements. However, notice to the former client is not required if prohibited by law or a court order.

The DOJ objected to the notice requirement in paragraph (e)(2), noting that the exception in the second sentence ("law or court order") was not sufficient to avoid unduly prejudicing the public interest, for example, where an ongoing criminal investigation might be compromised by prompt provision of notice to the former client. In response to that concern, the Commission substantially revised subparagraph (e)(2) to address those precise concerns:

(2) as soon as practicable after the need for screening arises, and unless prohibited by law or a court order, the personally prohibited lawyer's former client is notified in writing of the circumstances that warranted implementation of the screening procedures required by this paragraph and of the actions taken to comply with those requirements. (Emphasis added).

In addition to the foregoing revision, Comment [9C] was added to remove any doubt as to the intent that a government investigation not be compromised:

[9C] Paragraph (e)(2) recognizes that, in some circumstances, it may not be practicable for the government agency to provide prompt notice to the former private client. The government agency may not be able to locate the former client. An investigation by the government may be compromised if the fact of the investigation is not kept confidential. For example, if notice that the former lawyer of the target of the investigation is being screened would pose a significant risk that the investigation would be compromised, the government agency may delay providing notice of the screen.

The Commission believes that the foregoing revisions adequately address the DOJ's concerns about notice. Although the DOJ and other government agencies might prefer not to have to give any notice at all, the Commission believes that paragraph (e) strikes an appropriate balance between the interests of the government and the duties owed by the tainted government lawyer to his or her former client, a person who now is the subject of a government investigation and faces the potential loss of liberty. If a lawyer were moving from one private firm to another, under the applicable rule adopted by the Board, screening would not even be an option. Here, the government is provided with the option of screening to avoid the imputation of the tainted lawyers conflicts. When practicable, the government should be required to provide the required notice to the former client.

Accordingly, the Commission requests that the Board reconsider its rejection of paragraph (e), as revised following the initial public comment period.

Further, the Board included in the adopted version of Rule 1.11 a substantially different Comment [9C], which provides:

[9C] This Rule leaves open the issues of: (1) whether, in a particular matter, a lawyer's conflict under paragraph (d) will be imputed to other lawyers serving in the same governmental agency; and (2) whether the use of a timely screen will avoid that imputation. These issues are a matter of case law.

As it does with respect to Rules 1.10 and 1.18, the Commission urges the Board not to continue to pursue the piecemeal, case-by-case approach that is sanctioned in the rule draft the Board approved at its May 2010 meeting. In this respect, the Commission agrees fully with the comment submitted by the State Bar's Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct ("COPRAC") during the second public comment period:

"COPRAC believes that implementation of screening through a piecemeal, case-by-case approach works to the detriment of the profession. Rather than having the screening doctrine worked out over a period of years through a series of cases, which leaves lawyers uncertain of the application of precedent to their particular situations, better guidance to the profession would be available through an explicit rule, which could be referenced easily, and uniformly applied. We strongly believe that this would provide superior guidance and clarity to the professional seeking to comply with their ethical duties." See June 14, 2010 Letter from COPRAC to Harry B. Sondheim, Commission Chair (in complete public comment, provided with this submission).

Alternatively, the Commission requests that the Board of Governors forward to the Supreme Court the attached ALT2 version of the Rule that the Commission has approved, in addition to the version of the Rule that the Board adopted at its May 2010 meeting ("ALT1"). The Commission believes the Supreme Court should have the benefit of having an alternative in making its decision to approve a Rule counterpart to Model Rule 1.11 that incorporates well-settled California law into the Rule.

Description of Rule 1.11, ALT2. Proposed Rule 1.11 is based on Model Rule 1.11 and addresses conflicts arising from a lawyer moving to or from government service, or between different government agencies. Although there is no current rule counterpart in California, there is ample case law that concerns this Rule’s topic. See, e.g., City & County of San Francisco v. Cobra Solutions, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal.4th 839 [43 Cal.Rptr.3d 771]; City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2004) 122 Cal.App.4th 17 [18 Cal.Rptr.3d 403]; Chambers v. Superior Court (1981) 121 Cal.App.3d 893 [175 Cal.Rptr. 575]; Chadwick v. Superior Court (1980) 106 Cal.App.3d 108 [164 Cal.Rptr. 864]. In consideration of the policy reflected in the case law, the proposed Rule departs from the Model Rule by requiring that a government lawyer’s conflict that arises from either: (i) representation of a former private client; or (ii) former employment by a different government entity be imputed to other lawyers in the governmental organization that currently employs the lawyer, unless (i) the former client consents, or (ii) the personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (e) and Comments [2], [9B] and [9C]. In addition, the Commission has changed the Model Rule’s standard of “consent, confirmed in writing” to California’s heightened standard, “informed written consent,” because the latter provides more client protection. Further, the Commission made grammar and syntax changes to Model Rule 1.11(c) to clarify its meaning.

Principal Issues. There are two principal issues concerning this Rule:

1. Imputation and Screening within a Government Agency. Whether to impose imputation within a government agency as provided in paragraph (e) and, if imputation is imposed, whether to provide for the implementation of an ethical wall to rebut the presumption of shared confidences as provided in subparagraphs (e)(1) and (2). Although the Model Rule does not provide for imputation within a government agency, the Commission’s position is that there is no principled reason in light of the current case law not to do so. The Commission has considered the policy rationale in the current case law and takes the position that if there is imputation, then screening of the personally prohibited lawyer should also be permitted to avoid the prohibition on representation being extended to an entire government agency. But see Minority, ¶. 1, below.
2. Knowledge Standard for Discipline. As in other jurisdictions that have adopted imputation as a disciplinary standard, the Commission’s position is that the Model Rule’s standard should be adopted. Although a lawyer without actual knowledge could be properly disqualified in a civil action, the lawyer would not be subject to discipline. California should not depart from this approach, which is taken in every jurisdiction. See Minority, ¶. 2, below.

Minority.

1. A minority of the Commission objects to paragraph(e) to the extent that screening is permitted to rebut the presumption of shared confidences between a former private lawyer now in the employ of the government and other lawyers in the prohibited lawyer's office or agency. The minority takes the position that paragraph (e) will undermine the ability of lawyers to promote client candor, an attribute that is essential to the effective functioning of the attorney-client relationship. See Dissent A, below.
2. A second minority takes the position that the Rule is unnecessary because the subject of the rule is already covered by statutory or regulatory limitations on the lateral movement government lawyers into or out of government, or between government agencies. See Dissent B, below.
3. A third minority of the Commission objects to the recommended adoption of the Model Rule's "knowingly" standard as applied to imputation in paragraphs (b) and (e). This minority takes the position that it will immunize lawyers who fail to conduct an adequate conflicts check. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (b).

Public Comment. Three commenters (one organization and two individuals) approved the rule without further modification. The remaining commenters (local bar committees, the Department of Justice and OCTC), approved the rule with modifications.

On the issue of "knowingly," (see Minority, above), two commenters approved the recommended (and ABA) standard of actual knowledge (COPRAC and OCBA) and two other commenters urged adoption of a "knows or reasonably should know" standard (OCTC and SDCBA). See Public Commenter Chart.

On the issue of imputation within a government agency as provided in paragraph (e), one Commenter (Department of Justice) opposed its implementation. Nevertheless, the same Commenter suggested that if the imputation provision were retained, the requirement of notice should be stricken. See Public Commenter Chart & Explanation of Changes for paragraph (e) and Comments [9A] – [9D].

Two commenters expressed concern that relegating to the comment the substance of a recently-decided Supreme Court case on private-to-government migration, City & County of San Francisco v. Cobra Solutions, Inc., (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 839 [43 Cal.Rptr.3d 771], would effectively overrule the case and requested its inclusion in the black letter of the rule itself. See Public Commenter Chart and Explanation of Changes for Comment [9C].

Variations in Other Jurisdictions. Every jurisdiction has adopted the concept found in Model Rule 1.11, i.e., a loosening of a strict application of conflicts principles in the government lawyer context, and all permit screening of a former government lawyer who moves to private practice. See Selected State Variations, below.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	ALT1 [NO PARA (e)] – Board’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer who has formerly served as a public officer or employee of the government: (1) is subject to Rule 1.9(c); and	(a) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer who has formerly served as a public officer or employee of the government: (1) is subject to Rule 1.9(c); and	Paragraph (a) and subparagraph (a)(1) are identical to Model Rule 1.11(a) and (a)(1).
(2) shall not otherwise represent a client in connection with a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially as a public officer or employee, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed consent, confirmed in writing, to the representation.	(2) shall not otherwise represent a client in connection with a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially as a public officer or employee, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed written consent, ~~confirmed in writing~~, to the representation. This paragraph shall not apply to matters governed by Rule 1.12(a).	Subparagraph (a)(2) tracks the approach of Model Rule paragraph (a)(2). However, the Commission has changed “consent, confirmed in writing” to California’s heightened standard, “informed written consent” because the latter provides more client protection. The last sentence of this paragraph has been added to make clear that matters that come within the scope of proposed Rule 1.12(a), concerning former judicial officers and employees, are governed by that rule and not by Rule 1.11. Lawyers should not be confused about which rule applies in a given circumstance.
(b) When a lawyer is disqualified from representation under paragraph (a), no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter unless:	(b) When a lawyer is ~~disqualified~~prohibited from representation under paragraph (a), no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter unless:	Paragraph (b) is substantially the same as Model Rule 1.11(b). However, the word “disqualified” has been changed to “prohibited.” Whether a lawyer is potentially subject to discipline will be determined by this Rule, but whether a lawyer will be disqualified from representation will be a matter for decision by the tribunal before whom the lawyer appears. Under paragraph (b), a law firm is permitted to use screening in order to avoid imputation of a conflict from one lawyer to the rest of the law firm. Minority. A minority of the Commission dissents from this paragraph because the use of the word “knowingly” will require actual knowledge before a lawyer who has a conflict of interest under this Rule may be disciplined. The minority believes this will immunize from discipline a lawyer who does not bother to check for conflicts of interest. The lawyer who knows or reasonably should know that he or she is prohibited from representation under this Rule ought to be subject to discipline, and not merely the lawyer that OCTC can prove had actual knowledge.

* Proposed Rule 1.11, XDraft 12.1 (6/29/10); Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	ALT1 [NO PARA (e)] – Board’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(1) the disqualified lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and (2) written notice is promptly given to the appropriate government agency to enable it to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this rule.	(1) the ~~disqualified~~personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and (2) written notice is promptly given to the appropriate government agency to enable it to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this ~~rule~~Rule.	Subparagraphs (a)(1) and (a)(2) track the language of the Model Rule. However, “personally prohibited” is substituted for “disqualified” for the same reasons stated in the Explanation for paragraph (b), above, and to focus attention on the individual lawyer whose conflict creates the necessity for the screen. In subparagraph (2), “rule” has been capitalized in accordance with the convention followed by the Commission in referring to these Rules.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	ALT1 [NO PARA (e)] – Board’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(c) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer having information that the lawyer knows is confidential government information about a person acquired when the lawyer was a public officer or employee, may not represent a private client whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter in which the information could be used to the material disadvantage of that person. As used in this Rule, the term "confidential government information" means information that has been obtained under governmental authority and which, at the time this Rule is applied, the government is prohibited by law from disclosing to the public or has a legal privilege not to disclose and which is not otherwise available to the public. A firm with which that lawyer is associated may undertake or continue representation in the matter only if the disqualified lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom.	(c) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer ~~having~~who was a public officer or employee and, during that employment, acquired information that the lawyer knows is confidential government information about a person ~~acquired when the lawyer was a public officer or employee~~, may not represent a private client whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter in which the information could be used to the material disadvantage of that person. As used in this Rule, the term "confidential government information" means information that has been obtained under governmental authority ~~and which, that~~, at the time this Rule is applied, the government is prohibited by law from disclosing to the public, or has a legal privilege not to disclose, and ~~which~~that is not otherwise available to the public. A firm with which that lawyer is associated may undertake or continue representation in the matter only if the ~~disqualified~~personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom.	Paragraph (c) largely tracks the wording of Model Rule 1.11(c). However, the first sentence has been reordered to clarify its meaning in response to a comment received from the Office of Trial Counsel. Also, the subordinate clauses in the second sentence have been broken up by commas , and the word "that" is used for clarity and for correct parallel construction. In the third sentence, "prohibited" has been substituted for the word "disqualified" because this Rule will be applied in disciplinary matters, while whether a law firm will or will not be disqualified is a matter for decision by the tribunal before which the law firm is appearing.
(d) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer currently serving as a public officer or employee:	(d) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer currently serving as a public officer or employee:	Paragraph (d) and its subparagraphs are nearly identical to Model Rule 1.11(d).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	ALT1 [NO PARA (e)] – Board’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(1) is subject to Rules 1.7 and 1.9; and	(1) is subject to Rules 1.7 and 1.9; and
(2) shall not: (i) participate in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially while in private practice or nongovernmental employment, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed consent, confirmed in writing; or	(2) shall not: (i) participate in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially while in private practice or nongovernmental employment, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed written consent; ~~confirmed in writing~~; or	In subparagraph (d)(2)(i), California’s heightened standard, “informed written consent~~.”~~ has been substituted for “consent confirmed in writing” because the phrase “informed written consent,” which is used throughout the proposed Rules, provides greater client protection than the Model Rule formulation.
(ii) negotiate for private employment with any person who is involved as a party or as lawyer for a party in a matter in which the lawyer is participating personally and substantially, except that a lawyer serving as a law clerk to a judge, other adjudicative officer or arbitrator may negotiate for private employment as permitted by Rule 1.12(b) and subject to the conditions stated in Rule 1.12(b).	(ii) negotiate for private employment with any person who is involved as a party, or as a lawyer for a party, or with a law firm for a party, in a matter in which the lawyer is participating personally and substantially, except that a lawyer serving as a law clerk to a judge, other adjudicative officer or arbitrator may negotiate for private employment as permitted by Rule 1.12(b) and subject to the conditions stated in Rule 1.12(b).	The phrase “or with a law firm for a party” has been added to broaden the scope of the prohibition on negotiation to encompass not only negotiating with the particular lawyer who is representing the party, but also that lawyer’s law firm.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	ALT1 [NO PARA (e)] – Board’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(e) As used in this Rule, the term "matter" includes: (1) any judicial or other proceeding, application, request for a ruling or other determination, contract, claim, controversy, investigation, charge, accusation, arrest or other particular matter involving a specific party or parties, and (2) any other matter covered by the conflict of interest rules of the appropriate government agency.	(e) As used in this Rule, the term “matter” includes: (1) any judicial or other proceeding, application, request for a ruling or other determination, contract, claim, controversy, investigation, charge, accusation, arrest or other particular matter involving a specific party or parties, and (2) any other matter covered by the conflict of interest rules of the appropriate government agency.	Proposed paragraph (e) and its subparagraphs are identical to Model Rule 1.11(e) and its subparagraphs.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT1 [NO PARA (e)] – Board’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] A lawyer who has served or is currently serving as a public officer or employee is personally subject to the Rules of Professional Conduct, including the prohibition against concurrent conflicts of interest stated in Rule 1.7. In addition, such a lawyer may be subject to statutes and government regulations regarding conflict of interest. Such statutes and regulations may circumscribe the extent to which the government agency may give consent under this Rule. See Rule 1.0(e) for the definition of informed consent.	[1] A lawyer who has served or is currently serving as a public officer or employee is personally subject to ~~these~~ these Rules—~~of Professional Conduct~~, including the prohibition against concurrent conflicts of interest stated in Rule 1.7 and conflicts resulting from duties to former clients as stated in Rule 1.9. In addition, such a lawyer may be subject to statutes and government regulations regarding conflict of interest. See, e.g., Business and Professions Code section 6131. Such statutes and regulations may circumscribe the extent to which the government agency may give consent under this Rule. See Rule ~~1.01.0.1~~ 1.0.1(e-1) for the definition of “informed written consent.”	Proposed Comment [1] is substantially the same as Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [1]. However, the reference to the Rules of Professional Conduct has been changed to “these Rules” to conform with the drafting convention the Commission is following. The reference to Rule 1.9 has been added because a lawyer who served or who is currently serving as a public officer or employee is subject to both Rule 1.7 and Rule 1.9. “Informed consent” has been changed to “informed written consent” in the last sentence because it affords greater protection to the government agency. Following public comment, a reference to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6131 was added as an example of a statute governing the subject matter of this Rule.
[2] Paragraphs (a)(1), (a)(2) and (d)(1) restate the obligations of an individual lawyer who has served or is currently serving as an officer or employee of the government toward a former government or private client. Rule 1.10 is not applicable to the conflicts of interest addressed by this Rule. Rather, paragraph (b) sets forth a special imputation rule for former government lawyers that provides for screening and notice. Because of the special problems raised by imputation within a government agency, paragraph (d) does not impute the conflicts of a lawyer currently serving as an officer or employee of the government	[2] Paragraphs (a)(1), and (a)(2) and (d)(1) restate the obligations of an individual lawyer ~~who has served toward a former government client,~~ whether the lawyer currently is in private practice or nongovernmental employment or the lawyer currently serves as an officer or employee of a different government agency. See Comment [5]. Paragraph (d)(1) restates the obligations to a former private client of an individual lawyer who is currently serving as an officer or employee of the government ~~toward a former government or private client.~~ Rule 1.10 is not applicable to the conflicts	Although generally based on Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [2], Comment [2] has been substantially revised to clarify when the various provisions are applicable. The first sentence clarifies that paragraph (a) applies not only to lawyers who move from government employment to private practice or other nongovernmental employment, but also to lawyers who move from employment by one government agency to another. The second sentence clarifies that paragraph (d)(1) applies when a lawyer has moved from private practice or nongovernmental employment to governmental employment. The third and fourth sentences are identical to the second and third sentences of Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [2].

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT1 [NO PARA (e)] – Board’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
to other associated government officers or employees, although ordinarily it will be prudent to screen such lawyers.	of interest addressed by this Rule. Rather, paragraph (b) sets forth a special imputation rule for former government lawyers that provides for screening and notice. ~~Because of the special problems raised by~~ Concerning imputation and screening within a government agency, ~~paragraph (d) does not impute the conflicts of a lawyer currently serving as an officer or employee of the government to other associated government officers or employees, although ordinarily it will be prudent to screen such lawyers~~ see Comments [9B] and [9C], below.	The last sentence of the Model Rule comment has largely been replaced by a cross-reference to Comments [9A] and [9C], which provide better guidance on the duties of a government lawyer who has previously been in private or other non-government employment.
[3] Paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2) apply regardless of whether a lawyer is adverse to a former client and are thus designed not only to protect the former client, but also to prevent a lawyer from exploiting public office for the advantage of another client. For example, a lawyer who has pursued a claim on behalf of the government may not pursue the same claim on behalf of a later private client after the lawyer has left government service, except when authorized to do so by the government agency under paragraph (a). Similarly, a lawyer who has pursued a claim on behalf of a private client may not pursue the claim on behalf of the government, except when authorized to do so by paragraph (d). As with paragraphs (a)(1) and (d)(1), Rule 1.10 is not applicable to the conflicts of interest addressed by these paragraphs.	[3] Paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2) apply regardless of whether a lawyer is adverse to a former client and are thus designed not only to protect the former client, but also to prevent a lawyer from exploiting public office for the advantage of another client. For example, a lawyer who has pursued a claim on behalf of the government may not pursue the same claim on behalf of a later government or private client after the lawyer has left government service, except when authorized to do so by the government agency under paragraph (a). Similarly, a lawyer who has pursued a claim on behalf of a private client may not pursue the claim on behalf of the government, except when authorized to do so by paragraph (d). [As with paragraphs (a)(1) and (d)(1), Rule 1.10 is not applicable to the conflicts of interest addressed by these paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2).]	Comment [3] is nearly identical to Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [3]. The phrase, “government or” has been added to the second sentence to reflect the fact that paragraph (a) applies whether a lawyer has left government employment for private practice or to work for a different government agency. The last sentence has been placed in brackets pending resolution of the Commission’s request for reconsideration of the Board’s decision to reject proposed Rule 1.10. The references to specific paragraphs of Rule 1.11 in that sentence have been added for clarity.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT1 [NO PARA (e)] – Board’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[4] This Rule represents a balancing of interests. On the one hand, where the successive clients are a government agency and another client, public or private, the risk exists that power or discretion vested in that agency might be used for the special benefit of the other client. A lawyer should not be in a position where benefit to the other client might affect performance of the lawyer's professional functions on behalf of the government. Also, unfair advantage could accrue to the other client by reason of access to confidential government information about the client's adversary obtainable only through the lawyer's government service. On the other hand, the rules governing lawyers presently or formerly employed by a government agency should not be so restrictive as to inhibit transfer of employment to and from the government. The government has a legitimate need to attract qualified lawyers as well as to maintain high ethical standards. Thus a former government lawyer is disqualified only from particular matters in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially. The provisions for screening and waiver in paragraph (b) are necessary to prevent the disqualification rule from imposing too severe a deterrent against entering public service. The limitation of disqualification in paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2) to matters involving a specific party or parties, rather than extending disqualification to all substantive issues on which the lawyer worked, serves a similar function.	[4] This Rule represents a balancing of interests. On the one hand, where the successive clients are a government agency and another client, public or private, the risk exists that power or discretion vested in that agency might be used for the special benefit of the other client. A lawyer should not be in a position where benefit to the other client might affect performance of the lawyer's professional functions on behalf of the government. Also, unfair advantage could accrue to the other client by reason of access to confidential government information about the client's adversary obtainable only through the lawyer's government service. On the other hand, the rules governing lawyers presently or formerly employed by a government agency should not be so restrictive as to inhibit transfer of employment to and from the government. The government has a legitimate need to attract qualified lawyers as well as to maintain high ethical standards. Thus, a former government lawyer is disqualified only from particular matters in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially. The provisions for screening and waiver in ~~paragraph~~paragraphs (b) and (e) are necessary to prevent ~~the disqualification rule~~this Rule from imposing too severe ~~a deterrent~~an obstacle against entering public service. The ~~limitation~~limitations of ~~disqualification~~representation in paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2) to matters involving a specific party or	Comment [4] is substantially the same as Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [4]. The reference to “this Rule” has been changed because this Rule does not dictate how a tribunal may rule on the subject of disqualification and because the rewording makes the next to last sentence active voice instead of passive. The word “obstacle” has been substituted for “deterrent” in the next to last sentence because paragraph (a), by addressing a lawyer’s obligations and limitations on employment after leaving government service, acts as a deterrent to going into public service in the first instance, while paragraph (d)’s provisions more directly pose an obstacle to a lawyer being hired by the government. The last sentence has been revised because this Rule does not dictate whether a lawyer or law firm will be disqualified. Instead, the subject of disqualification will be decided by tribunals on a case by case basis. See also Comment [9C].

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT1 [NO PARA (e)] – Board’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule parties, rather than ~~extending~~ ~~disqualification~~imputing conflicts to all substantive issues on which the lawyer worked, serves a similar function.
	[4A] By requiring a former government lawyer to comply with Rule 1.9(c), Rule 1.11(a)(1) protects information obtained while working for the government to the same extent as information learned while representing a private client. Accordingly, unless the information acquired during government service is "generally known" or these Rules would otherwise permit its use or disclosure, the information may not be used or revealed to the government's disadvantage. This provision applies regardless of whether the lawyer was working in a "legal" capacity. Thus, information learned by the lawyer while in public service in an administrative, policy or advisory position also is covered by Rule 1.11(a)(1). Paragraph (c) of this Rule adds further protections against exploitation of confidential information. Paragraph (c) prohibits a lawyer who has information about a person acquired when the lawyer was a public officer or employee, that the lawyer knows is confidential government information, from representing a private client whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter in which the information could be used to that person's material disadvantage. A firm with	Comment [4A] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. The Commission recommends its addition to clarify the purposes of Rule 1.11(a)(1) and (c). This comment is nearly identical to New York Rule 1.11, cmt. [4A].

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT1 [NO PARA (e)] – Board’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule which the lawyer is associated may undertake or continue representation in the matter only if the lawyer who possesses the confidential government information is timely screened. Thus, a purpose and effect of the prohibitions contained in Rule 1.11(c) are to prevent the lawyer's subsequent private client from obtaining an unfair advantage because the lawyer has confidential government information about the client's adversary.
[5] When a lawyer has been employed by one government agency and then moves to a second government agency, it may be appropriate to treat that second agency as another client for purposes of this Rule, as when a lawyer is employed by a city and subsequently is employed by a federal agency. However, because the conflict of interest is governed by paragraph (d), the latter agency is not required to screen the lawyer as paragraph (b) requires a law firm to do. The question of whether two government agencies should be regarded as the same or different clients for conflict of interest purposes is beyond the scope of these Rules. See Rule 1.13 Comment [9].	[5] When a lawyer has been employed by one government agency and then moves to a second government agency, it may be appropriate to treat that second agency as another client for purposes of this Rule, as when a lawyer is employed by a city and subsequently is employed by a federal agency. ~~However, because~~ Because the conflict of interest is governed by ~~paragraph~~paragraphs (d) and (b), the latter agency is ~~not~~ required to screen the lawyer ~~as paragraph (b) requires a law firm to do~~. The question of whether two government agencies should be regarded as the same or different clients for conflict of interest purposes is beyond the scope of these Rules. See Rule 1.13, Comment [9]14. See also Civil Service Commission v. Superior Court (1984) 163 Cal.App.3d 70 [209 Cal.Rptr. 159].	The first sentence of proposed Comment [5] is identical with that in Comment [5] of the Model Rule. The second sentence has been amended to conform to California law. The reference in the Model Rule Comment to “paragraph (d)” has been changed to “paragraphs (a) and (b)” because the latter paragraphs govern the situation that is described. See also Explanation of Changes for Comment [2], above. In the last sentence, the citation has been changed to Comment [14] of proposed Rule 1.13 because that is the California counterpart of Comment [9] of Model Rule 1.13. A reference to Civil Service Commission v. Superior Court has been added to direct readers to that important case on the issue of when a government entity is the same or a different client.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT1 [NO PARA (e)] – Board’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[6] Paragraphs (b) and (c) contemplate a screening arrangement. See Rule 1.0(k) (requirements for screening procedures). These paragraphs do not prohibit a lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly relating the lawyer's compensation to the fee in the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.	Screening of Former Government Lawyers Pursuant to Paragraphs (b) and (c) [6] Paragraphs (b) and (c) contemplate a screening arrangement for former government lawyers. See Rule ~~1.0~~1.0.1(k) (requirements for screening procedures). These paragraphs do not prohibit a lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly relating the lawyer's compensation to the fee in the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.	Comment [6] is nearly identical to Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [6]. The phrase, “for former government lawyers” has been added to distinguish the screening arrangement permitted by these provisions from the screening arrangement provided in paragraph (e) that may be utilized by former private lawyers who are now in government service.
[7] Notice, including a description of the screened lawyer's prior representation and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.	[7] Notice to the appropriate government agency, including a description of the screened lawyer's prior representation and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.	Comment [7] is nearly identical to Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [7]. The phrase “to the appropriate government agency” is added in order to clarify the appropriate recipient of the notice.
[8] Paragraph (c) operates only when the lawyer in question has knowledge of the information, which means actual knowledge; it does not operate with respect to information that merely could be imputed to the lawyer.	[8] Paragraph (c) operates only when the lawyer in question has actual knowledge of the information, ~~which means actual knowledge~~; it does not operate with respect to information that merely could be imputed to the lawyer.	Comment [7] is based on Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [8]. It has been reworded for brevity. Minority. A minority of the Commission disagrees with the substance of this comment because both this comment and the Model Rule permit easy evasion of the client protections of Rule 1.11 by a lawyer who does not, for example, run a conflicts of interest check and thereby evades actual knowledge of the conflict.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT1 [NO PARA (e)] – Board's Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[9] Paragraphs (a) and (d) do not prohibit a lawyer from jointly representing a private party and a government agency when doing so is permitted by Rule 1.7 and is not otherwise prohibited by law.	[9] Paragraphs (a) and (d) do not prohibit a lawyer from jointly representing a private party and a government agency when doing so is permitted by Rule 1.7 and is not otherwise prohibited by law.	Comment [9] is identical to Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [9].
	Consent required to permit government lawyer to represent the government in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially. [9A] A government officer or employee may participate in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially while in private practice or non-governmental employment only if: (i) the government agency gives its informed written consent as required by subparagraph (d)(2)(i); and (ii) the former client gives its informed written consent as required by Rule 1.9, to which the lawyer is subject by subparagraph (d)(1).	Comment [9A] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. The Commission recommends its addition to make clear precisely what consents a former government lawyer must obtain to personally participate in a matter. Although subparagraph (d)(2)(ii) appears on its face to require only the consent of the government agency, the consent of the private lawyer's former client is also required because (d)(1) makes that lawyer subject to Rule 1.9, under which a former client's consent is required for an otherwise prohibited lawyer's personal participation in a matter. The Commission is concerned that without this clarifying comment, the requirement of the former client's consent will not be apparent.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT1 [NO PARA (e)] – Board's Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	This Rule Not Determinative of Disqualification [9B] This Rule does not address whether a lawyer or law firm will be disqualified from a representation. See, e.g., Hollywood v. Superior Court (2008) 43 Cal.4th 721 [76 Cal.Rptr.3d 264]. Whether a lawyer or law firm will or will not be disqualified is a matter to be determined by an appropriate tribunal. See, e.g., City & County of San Francisco v. Cobra Solutions, Inc., 38 Cal. 4th 839 [43 Cal.Rptr.3d 771] (2006); Younger v. Superior Court (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 892 [144 Cal.Rptr. 34]. Regarding prosecutors in criminal matters, see Penal Code section 1424.	Comment [9B] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It has been added in order to clarify that, although this Rule affects discipline, whether a lawyer or law firm will or will not be disqualified is a matter to be determined by the appropriate tribunal and is not necessarily dictated by this Rule. The reference to Hollywood v. Superior Court has been added because that case explains the different policies concerning discipline and disqualification. The Comment also calls the reader's attention to important California decisional law, including Cobra Solutions and Younger, that reject screening when the personally-prohibited lawyer is the head of the office or has direct supervisory responsibility over the lawyers actually handling the matter. The Commission determined that rather than codify these cases in the Rule itself and subject lawyers to discipline in an area of the law that is still developing, these cases should be referenced in a comment to provide notice to lawyers of the potential applicability of this case in the civil disqualification context. The last sentence of the Comment clarifies that Penal Code section 1424 governs motions to disqualify prosecutors.
	[9C] This Rule leaves open the issues of: (1) whether, in a particular matter, a lawyer's conflict under paragraph (d) will be imputed to other lawyers serving in the same governmental agency; and (2) whether the use of a timely screen will avoid that imputation. These issues are a matter of case law.	Comment [9C] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It has been added to effectuate the Board's intent that the law of screening of lawyers who move from the private sector to government employment be developed through court decisions. The Comment is intended to assuage concerns that the implementation of an ethical screen would necessarily subject a lawyer or group of lawyers to discipline because this Rule does not expressly provide for screening.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT1 [NO PARA (e)] – Board’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[10] For purposes of paragraph (e) of this Rule, a "matter" may continue in another form. In determining whether two particular matters are the same, the lawyer should consider the extent to which the matters involve the same basic facts, the same or related parties, and the time elapsed.	Matter [10] For purposes of paragraph (e) of this Rule, a "matter" may continue in another form. In determining whether two particular matters are the same, the lawyer should consider the extent to which the matters involve the same basic facts, the same or related parties, and the time elapsed.	Comment [10] is identical to Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [10].

Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees

(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule ALT1 to the Public Comment Draft)

- (a) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer who has formerly served as a public officer or employee of the government:
 - (1) is subject to Rule 1.9(c); and
 - (2) shall not otherwise represent a client in connection with a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially as a public officer or employee, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed written consent to the representation. This paragraph shall not apply to matters governed by Rule 1.12(a).
- (b) When a lawyer is prohibited from representation under paragraph (a), no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter unless:
 - (1) the personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and
 - (2) written notice is promptly given to the appropriate government agency to enable it to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this Rule.
- (c) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer who was a public officer or employee and, during that employment, acquired information that the lawyer knows is confidential government information about a person, may not represent a private client whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter in which the information could be used to the material disadvantage of that person. As used in this Rule, the term “confidential government information” means information that has been obtained under governmental authority, that, at the time this Rule is applied, the government is prohibited by law from disclosing to the public, or has a legal privilege not to disclose, and that is not otherwise available to the public. A firm with which that lawyer is associated may undertake or continue representation in the matter only if the personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom.
- (d) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer currently serving as a public officer or employee:
 - (1) is subject to Rules 1.7 and 1.9; and
 - (2) shall not:
 - (i) participate in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially while in private practice or nongovernmental employment, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed written consent; or
 - (ii) negotiate for private employment with any person who is involved as a party, or as a lawyer for a party, or with a law firm for a party, in a matter in which the lawyer is participating personally and substantially, except that a lawyer serving as a law clerk to a judge, other adjudicative officer or arbitrator may negotiate for private employment as permitted by Rule 1.12(b) and subject to the conditions stated in Rule 1.12(b).

(e) As used in this Rule, the term “matter” includes:

- (1) any judicial or other proceeding, application, request for a ruling or other determination, contract, claim, controversy, investigation, charge, accusation, arrest or other particular matter involving a specific party or parties, and
- (2) any other matter covered by the conflict of interest rules of the appropriate government agency.

COMMENT

- [1] A lawyer who has served or is currently serving as a public officer or employee is personally subject to these Rules, including the prohibition against concurrent conflicts of interest stated in Rule 1.7 and conflicts resulting from duties to former clients as stated in Rule 1.9. In addition, such a lawyer may be subject to statutes and government regulations regarding conflict of interest. See, e.g., Business and Professions Code section 6131. Such statutes and regulations may circumscribe the extent to which the government agency may give consent under this Rule. See Rule 1.0.1(e-1) for the definition of “informed written consent.”
- [2] Paragraphs (a)(1) and (a)(2) restate the obligations of an individual lawyer toward a former government client, whether the lawyer

currently is in private practice or nongovernmental employment or the lawyer currently serves as an officer or employee of a different government agency. See Comment [5]. Paragraph (d)(1) restates the obligations to a former private client of an individual lawyer who is currently serving as an officer or employee of the government. Rule 1.10 is not applicable to the conflicts of interest addressed by this Rule. Rather, paragraph (b) sets forth a special imputation rule for former government lawyers that provides for screening and notice. Concerning imputation and screening within a government agency, see Comments [9B] and [9C], below.

- [3] Paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2) apply regardless of whether a lawyer is adverse to a former client and are thus designed not only to protect the former client, but also to prevent a lawyer from exploiting public office for the advantage of another client. For example, a lawyer who has pursued a claim on behalf of the government may not pursue the same claim on behalf of a later government or private client after the lawyer has left government service, except when authorized to do so by the government agency under paragraph (a). Similarly, a lawyer who has pursued a claim on behalf of a private client may not pursue the claim on behalf of the government, except when authorized to do so by paragraph (d). ¶As with paragraphs (a)(1) and (d)(1), Rule 1.10 is not applicable to the conflicts of interest addressed by paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2).¶
- [4] This Rule represents a balancing of interests. On the one hand, where the successive clients are a government agency and another client, public or private, the risk exists that power or discretion vested in that agency might be used for the special benefit of the other client. A lawyer should not be in a position where benefit to the other client might affect performance of the lawyer’s professional functions on behalf of the government. Also, unfair advantage could accrue to the other client by reason of access to confidential government information about the client's adversary obtainable only through the lawyer's government service. On the other hand, the rules governing lawyers presently or formerly employed by a government agency should not be so restrictive as to inhibit transfer of employment to and from the government. The government has a legitimate need to attract qualified lawyers as well as to maintain high ethical standards. Thus, a former government lawyer is disqualified only from particular matters in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially. The provisions for screening and waiver in paragraph (b) are necessary to prevent this Rule from imposing too severe an obstacle against entering public service. The limitations of representation in paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2) to matters involving a specific party or parties, rather than imputing conflicts to all substantive issues on which the lawyer worked, serves a similar function.

- [4A] By requiring a former government lawyer to comply with Rule 1.9(c), Rule 1.11(a)(1) protects information obtained while working for the government to the same extent as information learned while representing a private client. Accordingly, unless the information acquired during government service is "generally known" or these Rules would otherwise permit its use or disclosure, the information may not be used or revealed to the government's disadvantage. This provision applies regardless of whether the lawyer was working in a "legal" capacity. Thus, information learned by the lawyer while in public service in an administrative, policy or advisory position also is covered by Rule 1.11(a)(1). Paragraph (c) of this Rule adds further protections against exploitation of confidential information. Paragraph (c) prohibits a lawyer who has information about a person acquired when the lawyer was a public officer or employee, that the lawyer knows is confidential government information, from representing a private client whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter in which the information could be used to that person's material disadvantage. A firm with which the lawyer is associated may undertake or continue representation in the matter only if the lawyer who possesses the confidential government information is timely screened. Thus, a purpose and effect of the prohibitions contained in Rule 1.11(c) are to prevent the lawyer's subsequent private client from obtaining an unfair advantage because the lawyer has confidential government information about the client's adversary.

- [5] When a lawyer has been employed by one government agency and then moves to a second government agency, it may be appropriate to treat that second agency as another client for purposes of this Rule, as when a lawyer is employed by a city and subsequently is employed by a federal agency. Because the conflict of interest is governed by paragraphs (a) and (b), the latter agency is required to screen the lawyer. The question of whether two government agencies should be regarded as the same or different clients for conflict of interest purposes is beyond the scope of these Rules. See Rule 1.13, Comment [14]. See also Civil Service Commission v. Superior Court (1984) 163 Cal.App.3d 70 [209 Cal.Rptr. 159].

Screening of Former Government Lawyers Pursuant to Paragraphs (b) and (c)

- [6] Paragraphs (b) and (c) contemplate a screening arrangement for former government lawyers. See Rule 1.0.1(k) (requirements for screening procedures). These paragraphs do not prohibit a lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly relating the lawyer's compensation to the fee in the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.

- [7] Notice to the appropriate government agency, including a description of the screened lawyer's prior representation and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.
- [8] Paragraph (c) operates only when the lawyer in question has actual knowledge of the information; it does not operate with respect to information that merely could be imputed to the lawyer.
- [9] Paragraphs (a) and (d) do not prohibit a lawyer from jointly representing a private party and a government agency when doing so is permitted by Rule 1.7 and is not otherwise prohibited by law.

Consent required to permit government lawyer to represent the government in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially.

- [9A] A government officer or employee may participate in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially while in private practice or non-governmental employment only if: (i) the government agency gives its informed written consent as required by subparagraph (d)(2)(i); and (ii) the former client gives its informed written consent as required by Rule 1.9, to which the lawyer is subject by subparagraph (d)(1).

This Rule Not Determinative of Disqualification

- [9B] This Rule does not address whether a lawyer or law firm will be disqualified from a representation. See, e.g., Hollywood v. Superior Court (2008) 43 Cal.4th 721 [76 Cal.Rptr.3d 264]. Whether a lawyer or law firm will or will not be disqualified is a matter to be determined by an appropriate tribunal. See, e.g., City & County of San Francisco v. Cobra Solutions, Inc., 38 Cal. 4th 839 [43 Cal.Rptr.3d 771] (2006); Younger v. Superior Court (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 892 [144 Cal.Rptr. 34]. Regarding prosecutors in criminal matters, see Penal Code section 1424.
- [9C] This Rule leaves open the issues of: (1) whether, in a particular matter, a lawyer's conflict under paragraph (d) will be imputed to other lawyers serving in the same governmental agency; and (2) whether the use of a timely screen will avoid that imputation. These issues are a matter of case law.

Matter

- [10] For purposes of paragraph (f) of this Rule, a "matter" may continue in another form. In determining whether two particular matters are the same, the lawyer should consider the extent to which the matters involve the same basic facts, the same or related parties, and the time elapsed.

Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees
(Commission's Proposed Rule ALT1 – Clean Version)

- (a) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer who has formerly served as a public officer or employee of the government:
 - (1) is subject to Rule 1.9(c); and
 - (2) shall not otherwise represent a client in connection with a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially as a public officer or employee, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed written consent to the representation. This paragraph shall not apply to matters governed by Rule 1.12(a).
- (b) When a lawyer is prohibited from representation under paragraph (a), no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter unless:
 - (1) the personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and
 - (2) written notice is promptly given to the appropriate government agency to enable it to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this Rule.
- (c) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer who was a public officer or employee and, during that employment, acquired information that the lawyer knows is confidential government information about a person, may not represent a private client whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter in which the information could be used to the material disadvantage of that person. As used in this Rule, the term “confidential government information” means information that has been obtained under governmental authority, that, at the time this Rule is applied, the government is prohibited by law from disclosing to the public, or has a legal privilege not to disclose, and that is not otherwise available to the public. A firm with which that lawyer is associated may undertake or continue representation in the matter only if the personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom.
- (d) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer currently serving as a public officer or employee:
 - (1) is subject to Rules 1.7 and 1.9; and
 - (2) shall not:
 - (i) participate in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially while in private practice or nongovernmental employment, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed written consent; or
 - (ii) negotiate for private employment with any person who is involved as a party, or as a lawyer for a party, or with a law firm for a party, in a matter in which the lawyer is participating personally and substantially, except that a lawyer serving as a law clerk to a judge, other adjudicative officer or arbitrator may negotiate for private employment as permitted by Rule 1.12(b) and subject to the conditions stated in Rule 1.12(b).

(e) As used in this Rule, the term “matter” includes:

- (1) any judicial or other proceeding, application, request for a ruling or other determination, contract, claim, controversy, investigation, charge, accusation, arrest or other particular matter involving a specific party or parties, and
- (2) any other matter covered by the conflict of interest rules of the appropriate government agency.

COMMENT

- [1] A lawyer who has served or is currently serving as a public officer or employee is personally subject to these Rules, including the prohibition against concurrent conflicts of interest stated in Rule 1.7 and conflicts resulting from duties to former clients as stated in Rule 1.9. In addition, such a lawyer may be subject to statutes and government regulations regarding conflict of interest. See, e.g., Business and Professions Code section 6131. Such statutes and regulations may circumscribe the extent to which the government agency may give consent under this Rule. See Rule 1.0.1(e-1) for the definition of “informed written consent.”
- [2] Paragraphs (a)(1) and (a)(2) restate the obligations of an individual lawyer toward a former government client, whether the lawyer

currently is in private practice or nongovernmental employment or the lawyer currently serves as an officer or employee of a different government agency. See Comment [5]. Paragraph (d)(1) restates the obligations to a former private client of an individual lawyer who is currently serving as an officer or employee of the government. Rule 1.10 is not applicable to the conflicts of interest addressed by this Rule. Rather, paragraph (b) sets forth a special imputation rule for former government lawyers that provides for screening and notice. Concerning imputation and screening within a government agency, see Comments [9B] and [9C], below.

- [3] Paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2) apply regardless of whether a lawyer is adverse to a former client and are thus designed not only to protect the former client, but also to prevent a lawyer from exploiting public office for the advantage of another client. For example, a lawyer who has pursued a claim on behalf of the government may not pursue the same claim on behalf of a later government or private client after the lawyer has left government service, except when authorized to do so by the government agency under paragraph (a). Similarly, a lawyer who has pursued a claim on behalf of a private client may not pursue the claim on behalf of the government, except when authorized to do so by paragraph (d). As with paragraphs (a)(1) and (d)(1), Rule 1.10 is not applicable to the conflicts of interest addressed by paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2).

- [4] This Rule represents a balancing of interests. On the one hand, where the successive clients are a government agency and another client, public or private, the risk exists that power or discretion vested in that agency might be used for the special benefit of the other client. A lawyer should not be in a position where benefit to the other client might affect performance of the lawyer’s professional functions on behalf of the government. Also, unfair advantage could accrue to the other client by reason of access to confidential government information about the client's adversary obtainable only through the lawyer's government service. On the other hand, the rules governing lawyers presently or formerly employed by a government agency should not be so restrictive as to inhibit transfer of employment to and from the government. The government has a legitimate need to attract qualified lawyers as well as to maintain high ethical standards. Thus, a former government lawyer is disqualified only from particular matters in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially. The provisions for screening and waiver in paragraph (b) are necessary to prevent this Rule from imposing too severe an obstacle against entering public service. The limitations of representation in paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2) to matters involving a specific party or parties, rather than imputing conflicts to all substantive issues on which the lawyer worked, serves a similar function.

- [4A] By requiring a former government lawyer to comply with Rule 1.9(c), Rule 1.11(a)(1) protects information obtained while working for the government to the same extent as information learned while representing a private client. Accordingly, unless the information acquired during government service is "generally known" or these Rules would otherwise permit its use or disclosure, the information may not be used or revealed to the government's disadvantage. This provision applies regardless of whether the lawyer was working in a "legal" capacity. Thus, information learned by the lawyer while in public service in an administrative, policy or advisory position also is covered by Rule 1.11(a)(1). Paragraph (c) of this Rule adds further protections against exploitation of confidential information. Paragraph (c) prohibits a lawyer who has information about a person acquired when the lawyer was a public officer or employee, that the lawyer knows is confidential government information, from representing a private client whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter in which the information could be used to that person's material disadvantage. A firm with which the lawyer is associated may undertake or continue representation in the matter only if the lawyer who possesses the confidential government information is timely screened. Thus, a purpose and effect of the prohibitions contained in Rule 1.11(c) are to prevent the lawyer's subsequent private client from obtaining an unfair advantage because the lawyer has confidential government information about the client's adversary.

- [5] When a lawyer has been employed by one government agency and then moves to a second government agency, it may be appropriate to treat that second agency as another client for purposes of this Rule, as when a lawyer is employed by a city and subsequently is employed by a federal agency. Because the conflict of interest is governed by paragraphs (a) and (b), the latter agency is required to screen the lawyer. The question of whether two government agencies should be regarded as the same or different clients for conflict of interest purposes is beyond the scope of these Rules. See Rule 1.13, Comment [14]. See also Civil Service Commission v. Superior Court (1984) 163 Cal.App.3d 70 [209 Cal.Rptr. 159].

Screening of Former Government Lawyers Pursuant to Paragraphs (b) and (c)

- [6] Paragraphs (b) and (c) contemplate a screening arrangement for former government lawyers. See Rule 1.0.1(k) (requirements for screening procedures). These paragraphs do not prohibit a lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly relating the lawyer's compensation to the fee in the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.

- [7] Notice to the appropriate government agency, including a description of the screened lawyer's prior representation and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.
- [8] Paragraph (c) operates only when the lawyer in question has actual knowledge of the information; it does not operate with respect to information that merely could be imputed to the lawyer.
- [9] Paragraphs (a) and (d) do not prohibit a lawyer from jointly representing a private party and a government agency when doing so is permitted by Rule 1.7 and is not otherwise prohibited by law.

Consent required to permit government lawyer to represent the government in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially.

- [9A] A government officer or employee may participate in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially while in private practice or non-governmental employment only if: (i) the government agency gives its informed written consent as required by subparagraph (d)(2)(i); and (ii) the former client gives its informed written consent as required by Rule 1.9, to which the lawyer is subject by subparagraph (d)(1).

This Rule Not Determinative of Disqualification

- [9B] This Rule does not address whether a lawyer or law firm will be disqualified from a representation. See, e.g., Hollywood v. Superior Court (2008) 43 Cal.4th 721 [76 Cal.Rptr.3d 264]. Whether a lawyer or law firm will or will not be disqualified is a matter to be determined by an appropriate tribunal. See, e.g., City & County of San Francisco v. Cobra Solutions, Inc., 38 Cal. 4th 839 [43 Cal.Rptr.3d 771] (2006); Younger v. Superior Court (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 892 [144 Cal.Rptr. 34]. Regarding prosecutors in criminal matters, see Penal Code section 1424.
- [9C] This Rule leaves open the issues of: (1) whether, in a particular matter, a lawyer's conflict under paragraph (d) will be imputed to other lawyers serving in the same governmental agency; and (2) whether the use of a timely screen will avoid that imputation. These issues are a matter of case law.

Matter

- [10] For purposes of paragraph (f) of this Rule, a "matter" may continue in another form. In determining whether two particular matters are the same, the lawyer should consider the extent to which the matters involve the same basic facts, the same or related parties, and the time elapsed.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	ALT2 [PARA (e)] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer who has formerly served as a public officer or employee of the government: (1) is subject to Rule 1.9(c); and	(a) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer who has formerly served as a public officer or employee of the government: (1) is subject to Rule 1.9(c); and	Paragraph (a) and subparagraph (a)(1) are identical to Model Rule 1.11(a) and (a)(1).
(2) shall not otherwise represent a client in connection with a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially as a public officer or employee, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed consent, confirmed in writing, to the representation.	(2) shall not otherwise represent a client in connection with a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially as a public officer or employee, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed written consent, ~~confirmed in writing~~, to the representation. This paragraph shall not apply to matters governed by Rule 1.12(a).	Subparagraph (a)(2) tracks the approach of Model Rule paragraph (a)(2). However, the Commission has changed “consent, confirmed in writing” to California’s heightened standard, “informed written consent” because the latter provides more client protection. The last sentence of this paragraph has been added to make clear that matters that come within the scope of proposed Rule 1.12(a), concerning former judicial officers and employees, are governed by that rule and not by Rule 1.11. Lawyers should not be confused about which rule applies in a given circumstance.
(b) When a lawyer is disqualified from representation under paragraph (a), no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter unless:	(b) When a lawyer is ~~disqualified~~prohibited from representation under paragraph (a), no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter unless:	Paragraph (b) is substantially the same as Model Rule 1.11(b). However, the word “disqualified” has been changed to “prohibited.” Whether a lawyer is potentially subject to discipline will be determined by this Rule, but whether a lawyer will be disqualified from representation will be a matter for decision by the tribunal before whom the lawyer appears.

* Proposed Rule 1.11, ALT2 (PARA (e)) Draft 12.1 (7/8/10); Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	ALT2 [PARA (e)] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		Under paragraph (b), a law firm is permitted to use screening in order to avoid imputation of a conflict from one lawyer to the rest of the law firm. Minority. A minority of the Commission dissents from this paragraph because the use of the word “knowingly” will require actual knowledge before a lawyer who has a conflict of interest under this Rule may be disciplined. The minority believes this will immunize from discipline a lawyer who does not bother to check for conflicts of interest. The lawyer who knows or reasonably should know that he or she is prohibited from representation under this Rule ought to be subject to discipline, and not merely the lawyer that OCTC can prove had actual knowledge.
(1) the disqualified lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and (2) written notice is promptly given to the appropriate government agency to enable it to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this rule.	(1) the ~~disqualified~~personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and (2) written notice is promptly given to the appropriate government agency to enable it to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this ~~rule~~Rule.	Subparagraphs (a)(1) and (a)(2) track the language of the Model Rule. However, “personally prohibited” is substituted for “disqualified” for the same reasons stated in the Explanation for paragraph (b), above, and to focus attention on the individual lawyer whose conflict creates the necessity for the screen. In subparagraph (2), “rule” has been capitalized in accordance with the convention followed by the Commission in referring to these Rules.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	ALT2 [PARA (e)] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(c) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer having information that the lawyer knows is confidential government information about a person acquired when the lawyer was a public officer or employee, may not represent a private client whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter in which the information could be used to the material disadvantage of that person. As used in this Rule, the term "confidential government information" means information that has been obtained under governmental authority and which, at the time this Rule is applied, the government is prohibited by law from disclosing to the public or has a legal privilege not to disclose and which is not otherwise available to the public. A firm with which that lawyer is associated may undertake or continue representation in the matter only if the disqualified lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom.	(c) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer ~~having~~who was a public officer or employee and, during that employment, acquired information that the lawyer knows is confidential government information about a person ~~acquired when the lawyer was a public officer or employee~~, may not represent a private client whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter in which the information could be used to the material disadvantage of that person. As used in this Rule, the term "confidential government information" means information that has been obtained under governmental authority ~~and which, that~~, at the time this Rule is applied, the government is prohibited by law from disclosing to the public, or has a legal privilege not to disclose, and ~~which~~that is not otherwise available to the public. A firm with which that lawyer is associated may undertake or continue representation in the matter only if the ~~disqualified~~personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom.	Paragraph (c) largely tracks the wording of Model Rule 1.11(c). However, the first sentence has been reordered to clarify its meaning in response to a comment received from the Office of Trial Counsel. Also, the subordinate clauses in the second sentence have been broken up by commas , and the word "that" is used for clarity and for correct parallel construction. In the third sentence, "prohibited" has been substituted for the word "disqualified" because this Rule will be applied in disciplinary matters, while whether a law firm will or will not be disqualified is a matter for decision by the tribunal before which the law firm is appearing.
(d) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer currently serving as a public officer or employee:	(d) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer currently serving as a public officer or employee:	Paragraph (d) and its subparagraphs are nearly identical to Model Rule 1.11(d).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	ALT2 [PARA (e)] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(1) is subject to Rules 1.7 and 1.9; and	(1) is subject to Rules 1.7 and 1.9; and
(2) shall not: (i) participate in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially while in private practice or nongovernmental employment, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed consent, confirmed in writing; or	(2) shall not: (i) participate in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially while in private practice or nongovernmental employment, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed written consent; ~~confirmed in writing~~; or	In subparagraph (d)(2)(i), California’s heightened standard, “informed written consent₁” has been substituted for “consent confirmed in writing” because the phrase “informed written consent,” which is used throughout the proposed Rules, provides greater client protection than the Model Rule formulation.
(ii) negotiate for private employment with any person who is involved as a party or as lawyer for a party in a matter in which the lawyer is participating personally and substantially, except that a lawyer serving as a law clerk to a judge, other adjudicative officer or arbitrator may negotiate for private employment as permitted by Rule 1.12(b) and subject to the conditions stated in Rule 1.12(b).	(ii) negotiate for private employment with any person who is involved as a party, or as a lawyer for a party, or with a law firm for a party, in a matter in which the lawyer is participating personally and substantially, except that a lawyer serving as a law clerk to a judge, other adjudicative officer or arbitrator may negotiate for private employment as permitted by Rule 1.12(b) and subject to the conditions stated in Rule 1.12(b).	The phrase “or with a law firm for a party” has been added to broaden the scope of the prohibition on negotiation to encompass not only negotiating with the particular lawyer who is representing the party, but also that lawyer’s law firm.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	ALT2 [PARA (e)] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(e) If a lawyer is prohibited from participating in a matter under paragraph (d) of this Rule, no other lawyer serving in the same government agency as the personally prohibited lawyer may knowingly undertake or continue representation in the matter unless:	Paragraph (e) has no counterpart in the Model Rule. The Commission recommends the adoption of paragraph (e) and its subparagraphs because it reflects current California law and policy that fosters the important duties of confidentiality and loyalty to clients. Under the introductory clause to paragraph (e), when a former private lawyer who is now working for the government is personally prohibited from being involved in a law suit, that lawyer’s prohibition is imputed to all other lawyers in the same government agency. Unlike California, e.g., City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2004) 122 Cal.App.4th 17 [18 Cal.Rptr.3d 403], the Model Rule does not impute a former private lawyer’s prohibition to other lawyers in government. The Commission has determined that the policy underlying imputation in these situations is sound, whether the private lawyer moves to another private firm (see Explanation of Changes for proposed Rule 1.10) or moves to government employment. In either situation, the lawyer’s former private clients have a reasonable expectation that the lawyers they have retained will not switch sides and work in the same firm or office as their opponents. Nevertheless, the imputation of the former private lawyer’s prohibition to other lawyers in the government agency is not irrebuttable. Other lawyers in the office will be permitted to continue the representation so long as the requirements of subparagraphs (1) and (2) are satisfied, i.e., the prohibited lawyer is timely screened and, where practicable, appropriate notice is given to the former private client to enable that client to monitor the screen and ensure it retains its effectiveness.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	ALT2 [PARA (e)] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(1) the personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter; and	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a).
	(2) as soon as practicable after the need for screening arises, and unless prohibited by law or a court order, the personally prohibited lawyer's former client is notified in writing of the circumstances that warranted implementation of the screening procedures required by this paragraph and of the actions taken to comply with those requirements.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a). The first two clauses of paragraph subparagraph (a)(2) have been added to avoid creating a situation where requiring notice might unduly prejudice the public interest, for example, where an ongoing criminal investigation might be compromised by prompt provision of notice to the former client. However, because of concerns with due process rights of an accused, the exception to giving notice is available only to the extent that giving notice would not be practicable under the circumstances (see Comment [9C] for elaboration on this point), or if there is law prohibiting the notice or a court has ordered that notice not be given. Otherwise, the responsible government lawyers will be in violation of the subparagraph if notice is not given.
(e) As used in this Rule, the term "matter" includes: (1) any judicial or other proceeding, application, request for a ruling or other determination, contract, claim, controversy, investigation, charge, accusation, arrest or other particular matter involving a specific party or parties, and	(~~e~~f) As used in this Rule, the term “matter” includes: (1) any judicial or other proceeding, application, request for a ruling or other determination, contract, claim, controversy, investigation, charge, accusation, arrest or other particular matter involving a specific party or parties, and	Proposed paragraph (f) and its subparagraphs are identical to Model Rule 1.1(e) and its subparagraphs. That paragraph has been re-lettered because of the addition of new paragraph (e), which does not have a counterpart in the Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	ALT2 [PARA (e)] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(2) any other matter covered by the conflict of interest rules of the appropriate government agency.	(2) any other matter covered by the conflict of interest rules of the appropriate government agency.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT2 [PARA (e)] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] A lawyer who has served or is currently serving as a public officer or employee is personally subject to the Rules of Professional Conduct, including the prohibition against concurrent conflicts of interest stated in Rule 1.7. In addition, such a lawyer may be subject to statutes and government regulations regarding conflict of interest. Such statutes and regulations may circumscribe the extent to which the government agency may give consent under this Rule. See Rule 1.0(e) for the definition of informed consent.	[1] A lawyer who has served or is currently serving as a public officer or employee is personally subject to ~~these~~ these Rules—~~of Professional Conduct~~, including the prohibition against concurrent conflicts of interest stated in Rule 1.7 and conflicts resulting from duties to former clients as stated in Rule 1.9. In addition, such a lawyer may be subject to statutes and government regulations regarding conflict of interest. See, e.g., Business and Professions Code section 6131. Such statutes and regulations may circumscribe the extent to which the government agency may give consent under this Rule. See Rule ~~1.01.0.1~~ 1.0.1(e-1) for the definition of “informed written consent.”	Proposed Comment [1] is substantially the same as Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [1]. However, the reference to the Rules of Professional Conduct has been changed to “these Rules” to conform with the drafting convention the Commission is following. The reference to Rule 1.9 has been added because a lawyer who served or who is currently serving as a public officer or employee is subject to both Rule 1.7 and Rule 1.9. “Informed consent” has been changed to “informed written consent” in the last sentence because it affords greater protection to the government agency. Following public comment, a reference to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6131 was added as an example of a statute governing the subject matter of this Rule.
[2] Paragraphs (a)(1), (a)(2) and (d)(1) restate the obligations of an individual lawyer who has served or is currently serving as an officer or employee of the government toward a former government or private client. Rule 1.10 is not applicable to the conflicts of interest addressed by this Rule. Rather, paragraph (b) sets forth a special imputation rule for former government lawyers that provides for screening and notice. Because of the special problems raised by imputation within a government agency, paragraph (d) does not impute the conflicts of a lawyer currently serving as an officer or employee of the government	[2] Paragraphs (a)(1), and (a)(2) and (d)(1) restate the obligations of an individual lawyer ~~who has served toward a former government client,~~ whether the lawyer currently is in private practice or nongovernmental employment or the lawyer currently serves as an officer or employee of a different government agency. See Comment [5]. Paragraph (d)(1) restates the obligations to a former private client of an individual lawyer who is currently serving as an officer or employee of the government ~~toward a former government or private client.~~ Rule 1.10 is not applicable to the conflicts	Although generally based on Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [2], Comment [2] has been substantially revised to clarify when the various provisions are applicable. The first sentence clarifies that paragraph (a) applies not only to lawyers who move from government employment to private practice or other nongovernmental employment, but also to lawyers who move from employment by one government agency to another. The second sentence clarifies that paragraph (d)(1) applies when a lawyer has moved from private practice or nongovernmental employment to governmental employment. The third sentence, which is identical to the Model Rule, has been

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT2 [PARA (e)] – Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
to other associated government officers or employees, although ordinarily it will be prudent to screen such lawyers.	of interest addressed by this Rule.] Rather, paragraph (b) sets forth a special imputation rule for former government lawyers that provides for screening and notice. ~~Because of the special problems raised by imputation within a government agency~~ Similarly, paragraph (e) ~~does not impute~~ provides that the conflicts of a lawyer currently serving as an officer or employee of the government shall be imputed to other associated government officers or employees, ~~although ordinarily it will be prudent to screen such lawyers~~ but also provides for screening and notice in certain situations.	placed in brackets pending resolution of the Commission's request for reconsideration of the Board's decision to reject proposed Rule 1.10. The fourth sentence has been modified to provide the exact opposite of the Model Rule, which has no counterpart to proposed paragraph (e) and, contrary to California law, does not impute the personal prohibition of a former government lawyer to other lawyers in the same office or agency as the prohibited lawyer.
[3] Paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2) apply regardless of whether a lawyer is adverse to a former client and are thus designed not only to protect the former client, but also to prevent a lawyer from exploiting public office for the advantage of another client. For example, a lawyer who has pursued a claim on behalf of the government may not pursue the same claim on behalf of a later private client after the lawyer has left government service, except when authorized to do so by the government agency under paragraph (a). Similarly, a lawyer who has pursued a claim on behalf of a private client may not pursue the claim on behalf of the government, except when authorized to do so by paragraph (d). As with paragraphs (a)(1) and (d)(1), Rule 1.10 is not applicable to the conflicts of interest addressed by	[3] Paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2) apply regardless of whether a lawyer is adverse to a former client and are thus designed not only to protect the former client, but also to prevent a lawyer from exploiting public office for the advantage of another client. For example, a lawyer who has pursued a claim on behalf of the government may not pursue the same claim on behalf of a later government or private client after the lawyer has left government service, except when authorized to do so by the government agency under paragraph (a). Similarly, a lawyer who has pursued a claim on behalf of a private client may not pursue the claim on behalf of the government, except when authorized to do so by paragraph (d). ]As with paragraphs (a)(1) and (d)(1), Rule 1.10 is not	Comment [3] is nearly identical to Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [3]. The phrase, "government or" has been added to the second sentence to reflect the fact that paragraph (a) applies whether a lawyer has left government employment for private practice or to work for a different government agency. The last sentence has been placed in brackets pending resolution of the Commission's request for reconsideration of the Board's decision to reject proposed Rule 1.10. The references to specific paragraphs of Rule 1.11 in that sentence have been added for clarity.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT2 [PARA (e)] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
these paragraphs.	applicable to the conflicts of interest addressed by ~~these~~ paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2).¹
[4] This Rule represents a balancing of interests. On the one hand, where the successive clients are a government agency and another client, public or private, the risk exists that power or discretion vested in that agency might be used for the special benefit of the other client. A lawyer should not be in a position where benefit to the other client might affect performance of the lawyer's professional functions on behalf of the government. Also, unfair advantage could accrue to the other client by reason of access to confidential government information about the client's adversary obtainable only through the lawyer's government service. On the other hand, the rules governing lawyers presently or formerly employed by a government agency should not be so restrictive as to inhibit transfer of employment to and from the government. The government has a legitimate need to attract qualified lawyers as well as to maintain high ethical standards. Thus a former government lawyer is disqualified only from particular matters in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially. The provisions for screening and waiver in paragraph (b) are necessary to prevent the disqualification rule from imposing too severe a deterrent against entering public service. The limitation of disqualification in paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2) to matters involving a specific party or	[4] This Rule represents a balancing of interests. On the one hand, where the successive clients are a government agency and another client, public or private, the risk exists that power or discretion vested in that agency might be used for the special benefit of the other client. A lawyer should not be in a position where benefit to the other client might affect performance of the lawyer's professional functions on behalf of the government. Also, unfair advantage could accrue to the other client by reason of access to confidential government information about the client's adversary obtainable only through the lawyer's government service. On the other hand, the rules governing lawyers presently or formerly employed by a government agency should not be so restrictive as to inhibit transfer of employment to and from the government. The government has a legitimate need to attract qualified lawyers as well as to maintain high ethical standards. Thus, a former government lawyer is disqualified only from particular matters in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially. The provisions for screening and waiver in ~~paragraph~~paragraphs (b) and (e) are necessary to prevent ~~the disqualification rule~~this Rule from imposing too severe ~~a deterrent~~an obstacle against entering	Comment [4] is substantially the same as Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [4]. The reference to “this Rule” has been changed because this Rule does not dictate how a tribunal may rule on the subject of disqualification and because the rewording makes the next to last sentence active voice instead of passive. The word “obstacle” has been substituted for “deterrent” in the next to last sentence because paragraph (a), by addressing a lawyer's obligations and limitations on employment after leaving government service, acts as a deterrent to going into public service in the first instance, while paragraph (d)'s provisions more directly pose an obstacle to a lawyer being hired by the government. The last sentence has been revised because this Rule does not dictate whether a lawyer or law firm will be disqualified. Instead, the subject of disqualification will be decided by tribunals on a case by case basis. See also Comment [9C].

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT2 [PARA (e)] – Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule parties, rather than extending disqualification to all substantive issues on which the lawyer worked, serves a similar function.	public service. The ~~limitation~~limitations of ~~disqualification~~representation in paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2) to matters involving a specific party or parties, rather than ~~extending~~imputing conflicts to all substantive issues on which the lawyer worked, serves a similar function.
	[4A] By requiring a former government lawyer to comply with Rule 1.9(c), Rule 1.11(a)(1) protects information obtained while working for the government to the same extent as information learned while representing a private client. Accordingly, unless the information acquired during government service is "generally known" or these Rules would otherwise permit its use or disclosure, the information may not be used or revealed to the government's disadvantage. This provision applies regardless of whether the lawyer was working in a "legal" capacity. Thus, information learned by the lawyer while in public service in an administrative, policy or advisory position also is covered by Rule 1.11(a)(1). Paragraph (c) of this Rule adds further protections against exploitation of confidential information. Paragraph (c) prohibits a lawyer who has information about a person acquired when the lawyer was a public officer or employee, that the lawyer knows is confidential government information, from representing a private client	Comment [4A] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. The Commission recommends its addition to clarify the purposes of Rule 1.11(a)(1) and (c). This comment is nearly identical to New York Rule 1.11, cmt. [4A].

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT2 [PARA (e)] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter in which the information could be used to that person's material disadvantage. A firm with which the lawyer is associated may undertake or continue representation in the matter only if the lawyer who possesses the confidential government information is timely screened. Thus, a purpose and effect of the prohibitions contained in Rule 1.11(c) are to prevent the lawyer's subsequent private client from obtaining an unfair advantage because the lawyer has confidential government information about the client's adversary.
[5] When a lawyer has been employed by one government agency and then moves to a second government agency, it may be appropriate to treat that second agency as another client for purposes of this Rule, as when a lawyer is employed by a city and subsequently is employed by a federal agency. However, because the conflict of interest is governed by paragraph (d), the latter agency is not required to screen the lawyer as paragraph (b) requires a law firm to do. The question of whether two government agencies should be regarded as the same or different clients for conflict of interest purposes is beyond the scope of these Rules. See Rule 1.13 Comment [9].	[5] When a lawyer has been employed by one government agency and then moves to a second government agency, it may be appropriate to treat that second agency as another client for purposes of this Rule, as when a lawyer is employed by a city and subsequently is employed by a federal agency. ~~However, because~~ Because the conflict of interest is governed by ~~paragraph~~paragraphs (d) and (b), the latter agency is ~~not~~ required to screen the lawyer ~~as paragraph (b) requires a law firm to do~~. The question of whether two government agencies should be regarded as the same or different clients for conflict of interest purposes is beyond the scope of these Rules. See Rule 1.13, Comment ~~[9]~~[14]. See also Civil Service Commission v. Superior Court (1984) 163 Cal.App.3d 70 [209 Cal.Rptr. 159].	The first sentence of proposed Comment [5] is identical with that in Comment [5] of the Model Rule. The second sentence has been amended to conform to California law. The reference in the Model Rule Comment to “paragraph (d)” has been changed to “paragraphs (a) and (b)” because the latter paragraphs govern the situation that is described. See also Explanation of Changes for Comment [2], above. In the last sentence, the citation has been changed to Comment [14] of proposed Rule 1.13 because that is the California counterpart of Comment [9] of Model Rule 1.13. A reference to Civil Service Commission v. Superior Court has been added to direct readers to that important case on the issue of when a government entity is the same or a different client.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT2 [PARA (e)] – Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[5A] Paragraphs (a) and (d) do not prohibit a lawyer from jointly representing a private party and a government agency when doing so is permitted by Rule 1.7 and is not otherwise prohibited by law.	Paragraph [5A] is identical to Model Rule [9]. It has been moved to follow Comment [5] because it logically should follow Comment [5].
[6] Paragraphs (b) and (c) contemplate a screening arrangement. See Rule 1.0(k) (requirements for screening procedures). These paragraphs do not prohibit a lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly relating the lawyer's compensation to the fee in the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.	Screening of Former Government Lawyers Pursuant to Paragraphs (b) and (c) [6] Paragraphs (b) and (c) contemplate a screening arrangement for former government lawyers. See Rule ~~1.0~~1.0.1(k) (requirements for screening procedures). These paragraphs do not prohibit a lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly relating the lawyer's compensation to the fee in the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.	Comment [6] is nearly identical to Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [6]. The phrase, “for former government lawyers” has been added to distinguish the screening arrangement permitted by these provisions from the screening arrangement provided in paragraph (e) that may be utilized by former private lawyers who are now in government service.
[7] Notice, including a description of the screened lawyer's prior representation and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.	[7] Notice to the appropriate government agency, including a description of the screened lawyer's prior representation and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.	Comment [7] is nearly identical to Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [7]. The phrase “to the appropriate government agency” is added in order to clarify the appropriate recipient of the notice.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT2 [PARA (e)] – Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[8] Paragraph (c) operates only when the lawyer in question has knowledge of the information, which means actual knowledge; it does not operate with respect to information that merely could be imputed to the lawyer.	[8] Paragraph (c) operates only when the lawyer in question has actual knowledge of the information, ~~which means actual knowledge~~; it does not operate with respect to information that merely could be imputed to the lawyer.	Comment [7] is based on Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [8]. It has been reworded for brevity. Minority. A minority of the Commission disagrees with the substance of this comment because both this comment and the Model Rule permit easy evasion of the client protections of Rule 1.11 by a lawyer who does not, for example, run a conflicts of interest check and thereby evades actual knowledge of the conflict.
[9] Paragraphs (a) and (d) do not prohibit a lawyer from jointly representing a private party and a government agency when doing so is permitted by Rule 1.7 and is not otherwise prohibited by law.	~~[9] Paragraphs (a) and (d) do not prohibit a lawyer from jointly representing a private party and a government agency when doing so is permitted by Rule 1.7 and is not otherwise prohibited by law.~~	Model Rule 1.11, Comment [9], has been renumbered [5A] and placed after Comment [5]. See Explanation of Changes for Comment [5A].

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT2 [PARA (e)] – Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	Consent required to permit government lawyer to represent the government in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially. [9A] A government officer or employee may participate in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially while in private practice or non-governmental employment only if: (i) the government agency gives its informed written consent as required by subparagraph (d)(2)(i); and (ii) the former client gives its informed written consent as required by Rule 1.9, to which the lawyer is subject by subparagraph (d)(1).	Comment [9A] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. The Commission recommends its addition to make clear precisely what consents a former government lawyer must obtain to personally participate in a matter. Although subparagraph (d)(2)(ii) appears on its face to require only the consent of the government agency, the consent of the private lawyer's former client is also required because (d)(1) makes that lawyer subject to Rule 1.9, under which a former client's consent is required for an otherwise prohibited lawyer's personal participation in a matter. The Commission is concerned that without this clarifying comment, the requirement of the former client's consent will not be apparent.
	Screening of Current Government Lawyers Pursuant to Paragraph (e) [9B] Under paragraph (e), lawyers in a government agency are not prohibited from participating in a matter because another lawyer in the agency has participated personally and substantially in the matter, so long as the personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened and notice is given as soon as practicable to the former client to enable it to ensure the government's compliance with the screen. But see Comment [9C].	Comment [9B] has no counterpart in the Model Rule, in part because the Model Rule does not have paragraph (e). With Comment [9B], the Comment clarifies the applicability of paragraph (e) when a lawyer moves from private practice or other nongovernment employment into government employment. A cross-reference to Comment [9D] is provided to direct lawyers to that Comment, which explains an important limitation on the potential availability of screening.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT2 [PARA (e)] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[9C] Paragraph (e)(2) recognizes that, in some circumstances, it may not be practicable for the government agency to provide prompt notice to the former private client. The government agency may not be able to locate the former client. An investigation by the government may be compromised if the fact of the investigation is not kept confidential. For example, if notice that the former lawyer of the target of the investigation is being screened would pose a significant risk that the investigation would be compromised, the government agency may delay providing notice of the screen.	Comment [9C] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It has been added to clarify the applicability of the “practicability” exception to providing notice under paragraph (e)(2). Comment [9C] responds to a comment from a representative of the Department of Justice and explains that certain extraordinary circumstances might exist where the required client notice may be delayed if the giving of such notice at an earlier time would compromise a governmental investigation.
	This Rule Not Determinative of Disqualification [9D] This Rule does not address whether a lawyer or law firm will be disqualified from a representation. See, e.g., Hollywood v. Superior Court (2008) 43 Cal.4th 721 [76 Cal.Rptr.3d 264]. Whether a lawyer or law firm will or will not be disqualified is a matter to be determined by an appropriate tribunal. See, e.g., City & County of San Francisco v. Cobra Solutions, Inc., 38 Cal. 4th 839 [43 Cal.Rptr.3d 771] (2006); Younger v. Superior Court (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 892 [144 Cal.Rptr. 34]. Regarding prosecutors in criminal matters, see Penal Code section 1424.	Comment [9D] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It has been added in order to clarify that, although this Rule affects discipline, whether a lawyer or law firm will or will not be disqualified is a matter to be determined by the appropriate tribunal and is not necessarily dictated by this Rule. The reference to Hollywood v. Superior Court has been added because that case explains the different policies concerning discipline and disqualification. The Comment also calls the reader’s attention to important California decisional law, including Cobra Solutions and Younger, that reject screening when the personally-prohibited lawyer is the head of the office or has direct supervisory responsibility over the lawyers actually handling the matter. The Commission determined that rather than codify these cases in the Rule itself and subject lawyers to discipline in an area of the law that is still developing, these cases should be referenced in a comment to provide notice to lawyers of the potential applicability of this case in the civil disqualification context.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	ALT2 [PARA (e)] – Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[10] For purposes of paragraph (e) of this Rule, a "matter" may continue in another form. In determining whether two particular matters are the same, the lawyer should consider the extent to which the matters involve the same basic facts, the same or related parties, and the time elapsed.	Matter [10] For purposes of paragraph (ef) of this Rule, a "matter" may continue in another form. In determining whether two particular matters are the same, the lawyer should consider the extent to which the matters involve the same basic facts, the same or related parties, and the time elapsed.	Comment [10] is substantively identical to Model Rule 1.11, cmt. [10].

Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees

(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule ALT2 to the Public Comment Draft)

(a) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer who has formerly served as a public officer or employee of the government:

- (1) is subject to Rule 1.9(c); and
- (2) shall not otherwise represent a client in connection with a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially as a public officer or employee, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed written consent to the representation. This paragraph shall not apply to matters governed by Rule 1.12(a).

(b) When a lawyer is prohibited from representation under paragraph (a), no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter unless:

- (1) the personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and
- (2) written notice is promptly given to the appropriate government agency to enable it to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this Rule.

(c) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer who was a public officer or employee and, during that employment, acquired information that the lawyer knows is confidential government information about a person, may not represent a private client whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter in which the information could be used to the material disadvantage of that person. As used in this Rule, the term “confidential government information” means information that has been obtained under governmental authority, that, at the time this Rule is applied, the government is prohibited by law from disclosing to the public, or has a legal privilege not to disclose, and that is not otherwise available to the public. A firm with which that lawyer is associated may undertake or continue representation in the matter only if the personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom.

(d) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer currently serving as a public officer or employee:

- (1) is subject to Rules 1.7 and 1.9; and
- (2) shall not:
 - (i) participate in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially while in private practice or nongovernmental employment, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed written consent; or
 - (ii) negotiate for private employment with any person who is involved as a party, or as a lawyer for a party, or with a law firm for a party, in a matter in which the lawyer is participating personally and substantially, except that a lawyer serving as a law clerk to a judge, other adjudicative officer or arbitrator may negotiate for private employment as permitted by Rule 1.12(b) and subject to the conditions stated in Rule 1.12(b).

(e) If a lawyer is prohibited from participating in a matter under paragraph (d) of this Rule, no other lawyer serving in the same government agency as the personally prohibited lawyer may knowingly undertake or continue representation in the matter unless:

- (1) the personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter; and
- (2) as soon as practicable after the need for screening arises, and unless prohibited by law or a court order, the personally prohibited lawyer's former client is notified in writing of the circumstances that warranted implementation of the screening procedures required by this paragraph and of the actions taken to comply with those requirements.

(ef) As used in this Rule, the term "matter" includes:

- (1) any judicial or other proceeding, application, request for a ruling or other determination, contract, claim, controversy, investigation, charge, accusation, arrest or other particular matter involving a specific party or parties, and
- (2) any other matter covered by the conflict of interest rules of the appropriate government agency.

COMMENT

[1] A lawyer who has served or is currently serving as a public officer or employee is personally subject to these Rules, including the prohibition against concurrent conflicts of interest stated in Rule 1.7 and conflicts resulting from duties to former clients as stated in Rule 1.9. In addition, such a lawyer may be subject to statutes and government regulations regarding conflict of interest. See, e.g., Business and Professions Code section 6131. Such statutes and regulations may circumscribe the extent to which the government agency may give consent under this Rule. See Rule 1.0.1(e-1) for the definition of "informed written consent."

[2] Paragraphs (a)(1) and (a)(2) restate the obligations of an individual lawyer toward a former government client, whether the lawyer currently is in private practice or nongovernmental employment or the lawyer currently serves as an officer or employee of a different government agency. See Comment [5]. Paragraph (d)(1) restates the obligations to a former private client of an individual lawyer who is currently serving as an officer or employee of the government. Rule 1.10 is not applicable to the conflicts of interest addressed by this Rule. Rather, paragraph (b) sets forth a special imputation rule for former government lawyers that provides for screening and notice. ~~Concerning imputation and screening within a government agency, see Comments [9B] and [9C], below. Similarly, paragraph (e) provides that the conflicts of a lawyer currently serving as an officer or employee of the government shall be imputed to other associated government officers or employees but also provides for screening and notice in certain situations.~~

[3] Paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2) apply regardless of whether a lawyer is adverse to a former client and are thus designed not only to protect the former client, but also to prevent a lawyer from exploiting public office for the advantage of another client. For example, a lawyer who has pursued a claim on behalf of the government may not pursue the same claim on behalf of a later government or private client after the lawyer has left government service, except when authorized to do so by the government agency under paragraph (a). Similarly, a lawyer who has pursued a claim on behalf of a private client may not pursue the claim on behalf of the government, except when authorized to do so by paragraph (d). ~~As with paragraphs (a)(1) and (d)(1), Rule 1.10 is not applicable to the conflicts of interest addressed by paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2).~~

[4] This Rule represents a balancing of interests. On the one hand, where the successive clients are a government agency and another client, public or private, the risk exists that power or discretion vested in that agency might be used for the special benefit of the other client. A lawyer should not be in a position where benefit to the other client might affect performance of the lawyer's professional functions on behalf of the government. Also, unfair advantage could accrue to the other client by reason of access to confidential government information about the client's adversary obtainable only through the lawyer's government service. On the other hand, the rules governing lawyers presently or formerly employed by a government agency should not be so restrictive as to inhibit transfer of employment to and from the government. The government has a legitimate need to attract qualified lawyers as well as to maintain high ethical standards. Thus, a former government lawyer is disqualified only from particular matters in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially. The provisions for screening and waiver in ~~paragraph~~paragraphs (b) ~~is~~and (e) are necessary to prevent this Rule from imposing too severe an obstacle against entering public service. The limitations of representation in paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2) to matters involving a specific party or parties, rather than imputing conflicts to all substantive issues on which the lawyer worked, serves a similar function.

[4A] By requiring a former government lawyer to comply with Rule 1.9(c), Rule 1.11(a)(1) protects information obtained while working for the government to the same extent as information learned while representing a private client. Accordingly, unless the information acquired during government service is "generally known" or these Rules would otherwise permit its use or disclosure, the information may not be used or revealed to the government's disadvantage. This provision applies regardless of whether the lawyer was working in a "legal" capacity. Thus, information learned by the lawyer while in public service in an administrative, policy or advisory position also is covered by Rule 1.11(a)(1). Paragraph (c) of this Rule adds further protections against exploitation of confidential information. Paragraph (c) prohibits a lawyer who has information about a person acquired when the lawyer was a public officer or employee, that the lawyer knows is confidential government information, from representing a private client whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter in which the information could be used to that person's material disadvantage. A firm with which the lawyer is associated may undertake or continue representation in the matter only if the lawyer who possesses the confidential government information is timely screened. Thus, a purpose and effect of the prohibitions contained in Rule 1.11(c) are to prevent the lawyer's subsequent private client from obtaining an unfair advantage because the lawyer has confidential government information about the client's adversary.

[5] When a lawyer has been employed by one government agency and then moves to a second government agency, it may be appropriate to treat that second agency as another client for purposes of this Rule, as when a lawyer is employed by a city and subsequently is employed by a federal agency. Because the conflict of interest is governed by paragraphs (a) and (b), the latter agency is required to screen the lawyer. The question of whether two government agencies should be regarded as the same or different clients for conflict of interest purposes is beyond the scope of these Rules. See Rule 1.13, Comment [14]. See also Civil Service Commission v. Superior Court (1984) 163 Cal.App.3d 70 [209 Cal.Rptr. 159].

[5A] Paragraphs (a) and (d) do not prohibit a lawyer from jointly representing a private party and a government agency when doing so is permitted by Rule 1.7 and is not otherwise prohibited by law.

Screening of Former Government Lawyers Pursuant to Paragraphs (b) and (c)

[6] Paragraphs (b) and (c) contemplate a screening arrangement for former government lawyers. See Rule 1.0.1(k) (requirements for screening procedures). These paragraphs do not prohibit a lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly relating the lawyer's compensation to the fee in the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.

[7] Notice to the appropriate government agency, including a description of the screened lawyer's prior representation and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.

[8] Paragraph (c) operates only when the lawyer in question has actual knowledge of the information; it does not operate with respect to information that merely could be imputed to the lawyer.

~~[9] — Paragraphs (a) and (d) do not prohibit a lawyer from jointly representing a private party and a government agency when doing so is permitted by Rule 1.7 and is not otherwise prohibited by law.~~

Consent required to permit government lawyer to represent the government in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially.

[9A] A government officer or employee may participate in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially while in private practice or non-governmental employment only if: (i) the government agency gives its informed written consent as required by subparagraph (d)(2)(i); and (ii) the former client gives its informed written consent as required by Rule 1.9, to which the lawyer is subject by subparagraph (d)(1).

Screening of Current Government Lawyers Pursuant to Paragraph (e)

[9B] Under paragraph (e), lawyers in a government agency are not prohibited from participating in a matter because another lawyer in the agency has participated personally and substantially in the matter, so long as the personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened and notice is given as soon as practicable to the former client to enable it to ensure the government's compliance with the screen. But see Comment [9C].

[9C] Paragraph (e)(2) recognizes that in some circumstances, it may not be practicable for the government agency to provide prompt notice to the former private client. The government agency may not be able to locate the former client. An investigation by the government may be compromised if the fact of the investigation is not kept confidential. For example, if notice that the former lawyer of the target of the investigation is being screened would pose a significant risk that the investigation would be compromised, the government agency may delay providing notice of the screen.

This Rule Not Determinative of Disqualification

[9B D] This Rule does not address whether a lawyer or law firm will be disqualified from a representation. See, e.g., Hollywood v. Superior Court (2008) 43 Cal.4th 721 [76 Cal.Rptr.3d 264]. Whether a lawyer or law firm will or will not be disqualified is a matter to be determined by an appropriate tribunal. See, e.g., City & County of San Francisco v. Cobra Solutions, Inc., 38 Cal. 4th 839 [43 Cal.Rptr.3d 771] (2006); Younger v. Superior Court (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 892 [144 Cal.Rptr. 34]. Regarding prosecutors in criminal matters, see Penal Code section 1424.

~~[9C] This Rule leaves open the issues of: (1) whether, in a particular matter, a lawyer's conflict under paragraph (d) will be imputed to other lawyers serving in the same governmental agency; and (2) whether the use of a timely screen will avoid that imputation. These issues are a matter of case law.~~

Matter

[10] For purposes of paragraph (f) of this Rule, a “matter” may continue in another form. In determining whether two particular matters are the same, the lawyer should consider the extent to which the matters involve the same basic facts, the same or related parties, and the time elapsed.

Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts Of Interest For Former And Current Government Officers And Employees
(Commission's Proposed Rule ALT2 – Clean Version)

- (a) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer who has formerly served as a public officer or employee of the government:
- (1) is subject to Rule 1.9(c); and
 - (2) shall not otherwise represent a client in connection with a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially as a public officer or employee, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed written consent to the representation. This paragraph shall not apply to matters governed by Rule 1.12(a).
- (b) When a lawyer is prohibited from representation under paragraph (a), no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter unless:
- (1) the personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and
 - (2) written notice is promptly given to the appropriate government agency to enable it to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this Rule.
- (c) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer who was a public officer or employee and, during that employment, acquired information that the lawyer knows is confidential government information about a person, may not represent a private client whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter in which the information could be used to the material disadvantage of that person. As used in this Rule, the term “confidential government information” means information that has been obtained under governmental authority, that, at the time this Rule is applied, the government is prohibited by law from disclosing to the public, or has a legal privilege not to disclose, and that is not otherwise available to the public. A firm with which that lawyer is associated may undertake or continue representation in the matter only if the personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom.
- (d) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer currently serving as a public officer or employee:
- (1) is subject to Rules 1.7 and 1.9; and
 - (2) shall not:
 - (i) participate in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially while in private practice or nongovernmental employment, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed written consent; or
 - (ii) negotiate for private employment with any person who is involved as a party, or as a lawyer for a party, or with a law firm for a party, in a matter in which the lawyer is participating personally and substantially, except that a lawyer serving as a law clerk to a judge, other adjudicative

officer or arbitrator may negotiate for private employment as permitted by Rule 1.12(b) and subject to the conditions stated in Rule 1.12(b).

- (e) If a lawyer is prohibited from participating in a matter under paragraph (d) of this Rule, no other lawyer serving in the same government agency as the personally prohibited lawyer may knowingly undertake or continue representation in the matter unless:
 - (1) the personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter; and
 - (2) as soon as practicable after the need for screening arises, and unless prohibited by law or a court order, the personally prohibited lawyer's former client is notified in writing of the circumstances that warranted implementation of the screening procedures required by this paragraph and of the actions taken to comply with those requirements.
- (f) As used in this Rule, the term "matter" includes:
 - (1) any judicial or other proceeding, application, request for a ruling or other determination, contract, claim, controversy, investigation, charge, accusation, arrest or other particular matter involving a specific party or parties, and
 - (2) any other matter covered by the conflict of interest rules of the appropriate government agency.

COMMENT

[1] A lawyer who has served or is currently serving as a public officer or employee is personally subject to these Rules, including the prohibition against concurrent conflicts of interest stated in Rule 1.7 and conflicts resulting from duties to former clients as stated in Rule 1.9. In addition, such a lawyer may be subject to statutes and government regulations regarding conflict of interest. See, e.g., Business and Professions Code section 6131. Such statutes and regulations may circumscribe the extent to which the government agency may give consent under this Rule. See Rule 1.0.1(e-1) for the definition of "informed written consent."

[2] Paragraphs (a)(1) and (a)(2) restate the obligations of an individual lawyer toward a former government client, whether the lawyer currently is in private practice or nongovernmental employment or the lawyer currently serves as an officer or employee of a different government agency. See Comment [5]. Paragraph (d)(1) restates the obligations to a former private client of an individual lawyer who is currently serving as an officer or employee of the government. Rule 1.10 is not applicable to the conflicts of interest addressed by this Rule. Rather, paragraph (b) sets forth a special imputation rule for former government lawyers that provides for screening and notice. Similarly, paragraph (e) provides that the conflicts of a lawyer currently serving as an officer or employee of the government shall be imputed to other associated government officers or employees, but also provides for screening and notice in certain situations.

[3] Paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2) apply regardless of whether a lawyer is adverse to a former client and are thus designed not only to protect the former client, but also to prevent a lawyer from exploiting public office for the advantage of another client. For example, a lawyer who has pursued a claim on behalf of the government may not pursue the same claim on behalf of a later government or private client after the lawyer has left government service, except when authorized to do so by the government agency under paragraph (a). Similarly, a lawyer who has pursued a claim on behalf of a private client may not pursue the claim on behalf of the government, except when authorized to do so by paragraph (d). As with paragraphs (a)(1) and (d)(1), Rule 1.10 is not applicable to the conflicts of interest addressed by paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2).

[4] This Rule represents a balancing of interests. On the one hand, where the successive clients are a government agency and another client, public or private, the risk exists that power or discretion vested in that agency might be used for the special benefit of the other client. A lawyer should not be in a position where benefit to the other client might affect performance of the lawyer's professional functions on behalf of the government. Also, unfair advantage could accrue to the other client by reason of access to confidential government information about the client's adversary obtainable only through the lawyer's government service. On the other hand, the rules governing lawyers presently or formerly employed by a government agency should not be so restrictive as to inhibit transfer of employment to and from the government. The government has a legitimate need to attract qualified lawyers as well as to maintain high ethical standards. Thus, a former government lawyer is disqualified only from particular matters in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially. The provisions for screening and waiver in paragraphs (b) and (e) are necessary to prevent this Rule from imposing too severe an obstacle against entering public service. The limitations of representation in paragraphs (a)(2) and (d)(2) to matters involving a specific party or parties, rather than imputing conflicts to all substantive issues on which the lawyer worked, serves a similar function.

[4A] By requiring a former government lawyer to comply with Rule 1.9(c), Rule 1.11(a)(1) protects information obtained while working for the government to the same extent as information learned while representing a private client. Accordingly, unless the information acquired during government service is "generally known" or these Rules would otherwise permit its use or disclosure, the information may not be used or revealed to the government's disadvantage. This provision applies regardless of whether the lawyer was working in a "legal" capacity. Thus, information learned by the lawyer while in public service in an administrative, policy or advisory position also is covered by Rule 1.11(a)(1). Paragraph (c) of this Rule adds further protections against exploitation of confidential information. Paragraph (c) prohibits a lawyer who has information about a person acquired when the lawyer was a public officer or employee, that the lawyer knows is confidential government information, from representing a private client whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter in which the information could be used to that person's material disadvantage. A firm with which the lawyer is associated may undertake or continue representation in the matter only if the lawyer who possesses the confidential government information is timely screened. Thus, a purpose and effect of the prohibitions contained in Rule 1.11(c) are to prevent the lawyer's subsequent private client from obtaining an unfair advantage because the lawyer has confidential government information about the client's adversary.

[5] When a lawyer has been employed by one government agency and then moves to a second government agency, it may be appropriate to treat that second agency as another client for purposes of this Rule, as when a lawyer is employed by a city and subsequently is employed by a federal agency. Because the conflict of interest is governed by paragraphs (a) and (b), the latter agency is required to screen the lawyer. The question of whether two government agencies should be regarded as the same or different clients for conflict of interest purposes is beyond the scope of these Rules. See Rule 1.13, Comment [14]. See also Civil Service Commission v. Superior Court (1984) 163 Cal.App.3d 70 [209 Cal.Rptr. 159].

[5A] Paragraphs (a) and (d) do not prohibit a lawyer from jointly representing a private party and a government agency when doing so is permitted by Rule 1.7 and is not otherwise prohibited by law.

Screening of Former Government Lawyers Pursuant to Paragraphs (b) and (c)

[6] Paragraphs (b) and (c) contemplate a screening arrangement for former government lawyers. See Rule 1.0.1(k) (requirements for screening procedures). These paragraphs do not prohibit a lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly relating the lawyer's compensation to the fee in the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.

[7] Notice to the appropriate government agency, including a description of the screened lawyer's prior representation and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.

[8] Paragraph (c) operates only when the lawyer in question has actual knowledge of the information; it does not operate with respect to information that merely could be imputed to the lawyer.

Consent required to permit government lawyer to represent the government in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially.

[9A] A government officer or employee may participate in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially while in private practice or non-governmental employment only if: (i) the government agency gives its informed written consent as required by subparagraph (d)(2)(i); and (ii) the former client gives its informed written consent as required by Rule 1.9, to which the lawyer is subject by subparagraph (d)(1).

Screening of Current Government Lawyers Pursuant to Paragraph (e)

[9B] Under paragraph (e), lawyers in a government agency are not prohibited from participating in a matter because another lawyer in the agency has participated personally and substantially in the matter, so long as the personally prohibited lawyer is timely screened and notice is given as soon as practicable to the former client to enable it to ensure the government's compliance with the screen. But see Comment [9C].

[9C] Paragraph (e)(2) recognizes that in some circumstances, it may not be practicable for the government agency to provide prompt notice to the former private client. The government agency may not be able to locate the former client. An investigation by the government may be compromised if the fact of the investigation is not kept confidential. For example, if notice that the former lawyer of the target of the investigation is being screened would pose a significant risk that the investigation would be compromised, the government agency may delay providing notice of the screen.

This Rule Not Determinative of Disqualification

[9D] This Rule does not address whether a lawyer or law firm will be disqualified from a representation. See, e.g., Hollywood v. Superior Court (2008) 43 Cal.4th 721 [76 Cal.Rptr.3d 264]. Whether a lawyer or law firm will or will not be disqualified is a matter to be determined by an appropriate tribunal. See, e.g., City & County of San Francisco v. Cobra Solutions, Inc., 38 Cal. 4th 839 [43 Cal.Rptr.3d 771] (2006); Younger v. Superior Court (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 892 [144 Cal.Rptr. 34]. Regarding prosecutors in criminal matters, see Penal Code section 1424.

Matter

[10] For purposes of paragraph (f) of this Rule, a “matter” may continue in another form. In determining whether two particular matters are the same, the lawyer should consider the extent to which the matters involve the same basic facts, the same or related parties, and the time elapsed.

Proposed Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts of Interest for Former and Current Government Officers and Employees

Minority Dissent to Inclusion of Paragraph (e) Minority Dissent A

A minority of the Commission dissents to the inclusion of Rule 1.11(e), which allows screening, without a former client's knowledge or consent, when a lawyer, possessing a former client's confidential information, becomes employed by a government agency. The Board repeatedly has decided on multiple occasions that screening is a matter with sufficient uncertainty that it should be left to the courts to resolve.

The law in this field is still unsettled, with courts allowing screening in the governmental context and not in others. Even in those situations where screening was permitted, the courts recognized that their decisions were dependent of the particular facts. City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2004) 122 Cal.App.4th 17 [18 Cal.Rptr.3d 403] involved a unique situation in which all parties agreed that no confidential information had in fact been imparted to the city. No court has extended the case in the government context. Most of the screening cases in the government context, including City & County of San Francisco v. Cobra Solutions, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal.4th 839 [43 Cal.Rptr.3d 771], involve creating independent legal units within a government agency, which has nothing to do with the type of screening the Commission majority asks the Board to reconsider.

The screening rule the majority asks the Board to reconsider goes beyond any procedure California courts have authorized. No court has allowed the kind of screening the majority urges on the widespread basis that would result from adopting the majority's proposed screening rule. The law in this field is still evolving and should be left to the courts.

The screening procedure in Rule 1.11(e) differs from other screening proposals in that it allows for screening without any notice to the former client. It would allow for a situation in which a client discusses with a lawyer facts related to a government investigation. The lawyer then becomes employed by the very agency conducting the investigation subject to an unconsented screen erected without the client's knowledge and without the client's ability to verify compliance. The client, who is aware that his or her former lawyer is now employed by the government agency, must live in fear that he or she has revealed information to the lawyer that could further the investigation against the client. The client who learns long after the fact that the lawyer was employed by the government is left with a sense of betrayal.

The legal profession cannot expect to promote client trust and candor when such situations are allowed to occur. A client cannot trust that he or she can communicate with a lawyer in confidence when a government agency erects a screen without notice to the client, and when the client can never verify compliance.

The duty of confidentiality expressed in Business & Professions Code section 6068(e)(1) and Rule 3-100 prohibits a lawyer from using or disclosing any information that a client wants the lawyer to hold inviolate or the disclosure of likely would be embarrassing or detrimental to the client. The duty exists to assure that anyone can discuss with a lawyer how the law applies to his or her most intimate problem without fear of consequence. This duty also exists because effective representation depends on open communication between lawyer and client. (City & County of S.F. v. Superior Court (1951) 37 Cal.2d 227, 235 (1951) ["Adequate legal representation in the ascertainment and enforcement of rights or the prosecution or defense of litigation compels a full disclosure of the facts by the client to his attorney. Unless he makes known to the lawyer all the facts, the advice that follows will be useless, if not misleading."].)

The legal profession invites client candor by imposing an austere duty of confidentiality on lawyers. Through the strict application of this duty, a client never has to worry about revealing confidential information to a lawyer and never has to question their decision to do so. Rule 1.9 extends that purpose by preventing lawyers from putting themselves in a position where they would be tempted to reveal or use against a former client information that the former client imparted in confidence. These Rules are designed to promote client trust in the client's ability to communicate with a lawyer without fear of consequence.

When the lawyer is employed by a government law office, Rule 1.11 imputes the conflict to the other lawyers in the agency in order to assure former clients that the lawyer will not be tempted by the agency's interests to reveal or use the former client's confidential information. California law presumes that confidential information possessed by one lawyer in a law firm is shared by all other lawyers in the firm. This presumption exists because the client has no means to assure that information in the possession of a firm representing the client's adversary will not be shared and used or disclosed against the client's interests. The legal profession cannot assure clients that they can communicate with lawyers in confidence when the client cannot verify that a government agency employing the client's former lawyer is not using the information in circumstances where the agency would be tempted to use it against the client's interests.

As the Court of Appeal stated in Adams v. Aerojet General (2001) 86 Cal.App.4th 1324 in adopting Cal. State Bar Formal Opn. 1998-152:

The vicarious disqualification rule has been established as a prophylactic device to protect the sanctity of former client confidences where a law firm with a member attorney who has acquired knowledge of confidential information material to the current controversy would otherwise be permitted to represent the former client's adversary. "No amount of assurances or screening procedures, no 'cone of silence,' could ever convince the opposing party that the confidences would not be used to its disadvantage. . . . No one could have confidence in the integrity of a legal process in which this is permitted to occur without the parties' consent." (Cho v. Superior Court (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 113, 125 [45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 863], fn. omitted.) As the State Bar Committee observes: "the absence of an effective means of oversight combined with the law firm's interest as an advocate for the current client in the adverse representation are factors that tend to undermine a former client's trust, and in turn the public's trust, in a legal system that would permit such a situation to exist without the former client's consent." (Formal Opn. No. 1998-152, supra, at p. IIA-418.) (Emphasis added.)

Screening without client consent does not protect clients because it cannot be verified by a client. A client who has not expressed confidence in a screen by consenting to it should not be forced to accept screening by fiat. A client who has shared confidential information with a lawyer, justifiably would feel a sense of betrayal to learn after the representation has ended that information the client expected would be held in confidence is in the possession of a government agency that is now prosecuting a matter against the former client.

These considerations apply with equal force when a lawyer, armed with a client's confidential information, becomes employed by a government agency. The Bar cannot fulfill the purpose of the duty of confidentiality, and it cannot expect clients to trust that they can communicate with lawyers in confidence, when a government agency can harbor that confidential information behind an undisclosed, unconsented and unverifiable screen while the agency pursues a course of action against the client in a situation where the information would advance the agency's position. The comments the Commission received do not address that screening comes at the expense of client trust and client protection, which are more important values than finding a way to more predictably impose a screen without client consent. Making screening more predictable protects lawyers. It does not protect clients and client trust in the ability to communicate with lawyers in confidence.

Commission members have not objected to screening in Rule 1.11(b), which applies to lawyers moving from public agencies to private practice or between public agencies. Screening in this context facilitates government service without jeopardizing the interests of private clients. Furthermore, the governmental legal community has participated actively in the Commission's deliberations and has not raised any concerns or objections to screening in this limited context. However, there are very different considerations when the former client is a member of the public. In such situations, screening is not appropriate because it undermines public trust in the ability to communicate with a lawyer in confidence.

Proposed Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts of Interest for Former and Current Government Officers and Employees
Dissent to Recommendation to Adopt Proposed Rule 1.11
Minority Dissent B

Rule 1.11 deals with conflicts of interest for government employees – those entering the government, leaving the government, or moving from one government entity to another.

This rule is both extraordinarily detailed and at the same time quite unnecessary. For those leaving the government, most government organizations have their own standards of ethics which greatly limit the right of departing employees (not just lawyers) to interact for a stated period of time with the agency they just left, and which prohibit the use of internal government materials for private purposes. These rules vary from one government entity to another, but it can fairly be said that all of them are more specific, more protective of the government, and more precise in their penal sanctions than anything generic which the State Bar could recommend to the Supreme Court, including the proposed Rule.

The same thing is largely true with respect to inter-government moves and transfers, where any event is likely to be so specific that it needs no generic, universal regulation by the legal profession. And when it comes to protecting the confidences of private parties in the hands of attorneys entering the government, case law has been generally trusting of screens imposed by the government. When a high government supervisor, or even the head of a government office is involved, case law has been very specific (City and County of San Francisco v. Cobra Solutions, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal.4th 839), and it is continuously evolving as shown by the recent case of In re Charlissee C. (2008) 45 Cal.4th 145.

The Rule is thus unnecessary for guidance, and as in the case of most conflict tools, discipline is virtually nonexistent. The Rules Revision Commission found this subject incredibly theoretical. Its debate, and the lengthy comments to the Commission by the United States Attorney's Office and others, show the difficulty inherent in any effort to include in a single rule a set of variations which account for the infinite variety of government functions. The Commission found the subject so difficult, and so hard to follow, that it is proposing the insertion of subheadings for easier comprehension.

The subject of lawyers entering into government service is certainly one which needs to be addressed. The courts have been protective of mobility of government lawyers, as in Chambers v. Superior Court [citation], and at the same time have seen to the maintenance of attorney independence, as in Charlissee C., supra, and to the avoidance of potential prejudice or partisanship, as in Cobra Solutions, Inc., supra.

It is certain that future cases will present further varieties of issues, which the Commission's draft will have missed despite its diligent efforts. Why, then, burden the profession and the public with an effort to encompass every solution within an impossible framework, where we can be certain that new variations will go in different directions and challenge the courts and counsel? The existence of a rule which did not contemplate such variations will only make such delicate situations more difficult to resolve.

The dissenters can understand the historical reason why writers would wish to address this subject – primarily to flag it for attention and to make sure that it is approached with the sensitivity it deserves. But those days are behind us, and efforts to standardize this hydra-headed subject are more likely to rigidify it than to provide it with the infinite flexibility it requires.

Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts for Government Employees [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 4 Agree = 0 Disagree = 0 Modify = 4 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	M	Yes	(e)	COPRAC supports the implementation of screening through the Rules of Professional Conduct and urges reconsideration and adoption of the prior version of the rule permitting screening including the prior version of subsection (e). COPRAC believes that implementation of screening through a piecemeal, case-by-case approach works to the detriment of the profession. Rather than having the screening doctrine worked out over a period of years through a series of cases, which leaves lawyers uncertain of the application of precedent to their particular situations, better guidance to the profession would be available through an explicit rule, which could be easily referenced, and easily applied. Accordingly, COPRAC urges the reconsideration, and adoption, of the prior language of the rule permitting screening. In addition, case law will determine whether screening will permit a lawyer to avoid disqualification. The rule should inform a lawyer whether screening will permit the lawyer to avoid discipline. Absence of a rule	The Commission recommended screening in the situation covered by former paragraph (e). The Board of Governors deleted original paragraph (e), which dealt with conflicts and screening if a lawyer moved from other employment into government service. However, in light of further public comment, the Commission voted to request that the Board reconsider its rejection of proposed Rule 1.11 with paragraph (e) that provides for imputation within a government agency but affords the opportunity for screening.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts for Government Employees
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 0
Disagree = 0
Modify = 4
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response could subject a lawyer to discipline even if case law develops to permit screening as a method to avoid disqualification.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	M	Yes	1.11(a)	OCTC thanks the Commission for adding B&P Code section 6131 to the Comments, but we still are concerned that subparagraph (a) is incomplete. OCTC believes it should state: Except as law may otherwise expressly permit or prohibit . The same is true of subparagraphs (c) and (d).	The Commission disagrees. Adding the phrase "or prohibit" to paragraphs (a), (c) and (d) would make the wording of those paragraphs illogical. Those paragraphs prohibit representation in defined circumstances. They contain an exception ["Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, . . ."]. Adding the phrase "or prohibit" would mean, to paraphrase, that, "Except as law may otherwise expressly . . . prohibit . . . a lawyer shall not represent a client." That would be a double negative. Its effect would be the opposite of what is intended by the rule. The exception to the rule would negate the law. In plain English, it would mean, "If the law prohibits you from representing a client, you may represent that client."
				1.11(b)	Subparagraph (b) of the rule prohibits an attorney in a firm from knowingly undertaking or continuing representation in such a matter unless the conflicted attorney is timely and effectively screened and is apportioned no part of the fee and written notice is promptly given to the appropriate government agency to enable it to ascertain compliance with the	The Commission disagrees.

Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts for Government Employees
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 0
Disagree = 0
Modify = 4
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				1.11(c)	provisions of the Rule. OCTC agrees with the minority of the Commission who objected to the use of the term “knowingly” because it would immunize attorneys who do not bother to check for conflicts of interest. Disciplinary law has long recognized that gross negligence can constitute misconduct. That would be appropriate here. Further, it would be consistent with Comment [4], of Proposed Rule 1.7, which states: “Ignorance caused by a failure to institute such procedures [referring to conflict detection procedures] will not excuse a lawyer’s violation of this Rule.” OCTC does not object to the concept contained in subparagraph (c), but did find it a little confusing as written. It would suggest that the Commission might want to tighten the language.	The Commission considered this objection when the proposed rule was first published for preliminary public comment. Paragraph (c) was modified in light of this comment. The comment is moot.
				1.11(d)(2)(ii)	OCTC is concerned that subparagraph (d)(2)(ii) prohibiting government officers and employees from negotiating for private employment might be too broad. It would appear to prohibit any criminal prosecutor from negotiating with the public defender’s office for a job.	The Commission disagrees. Paragraph (d)(2)(ii) prohibits government lawyers from negotiating for “private” employment with a party, lawyer, or law firm on the other side. That paragraph is limited to a government lawyer who seeks “private” employment. The Commission thinks that OCTC is misreading the paragraph.
					The Comments are too many and most	The Commission disagrees. The comments provide

Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts for Government Employees
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 0
Disagree = 0
Modify = 4
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					appear more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	useful guidance to lawyers and courts on the application of the Rule.
3	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee ("SDCBA")	M	Yes	(e)	1. The commenter notes the minority objection to screening in the private to government context.	1. This comment is moot because the Board of Governors deleted original paragraph (e) which had been recommended by the Commission. That paragraph dealt with conflicts and screening if a lawyer moves from other employment into government service. However, if paragraph (e) is restored, this comment will become relevant.
				(e)(2)	2. Commenter agrees with the proposed wording of paragraph (e)(2) but expresses concern about how the client could monitor the screen and ensure it retains its effectiveness.	2. This comment is moot because the Board of Governors deleted original paragraph (e), which dealt with conflicts and screening if a lawyer moves from other employment into government service. However, if paragraph (e) is restored, this comment will become relevant.
				(e)	3. Commenter points out that paragraph (e) does not address the head of office and supervisory lawyer situation and thereby is de facto overruling Cobra Solutions .	3. This comment is moot because Board of Governors deleted original paragraph (e), which dealt with conflicts and screening if a lawyer moves from other employment into government service. In addition, Cobra Solutions and other cases are cited in Comment [9B]. Those cases are not impliedly overruled by doing so. Instead, that Comment calls them to the readers' attention so that they are aware of the potential applicability of such cases in the disqualification context. However, if paragraph (e) is restored, this comment will become relevant.

Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts for Government Employees [Sorted by Commenter]							TOTAL = 4 Agree = 0 Disagree = 0 Modify = 4 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				(b) & (c)	4. San Diego County Bar Association agrees with the Commission minority that paragraphs (b) and (c) of Rule 1.11 should be modified to prohibit lawyers in a firm who “know or reasonably should know” that a lawyer in his or her firm is prohibited from representation, from undertaking or continuing representation in such a matter unless the screening is conducted and notice given as set forth in 1.11(b)(1) and (2).	4. The Commission disagrees with the commenter and has retained the “knowingly” standard in the rule and comment. As in the other jurisdictions that have adopted imputation as a disciplinary standard, the Commission concluded that the Model Rule’s standard should be adopted. Although a lawyer without actual knowledge could properly be disqualified in a civil action, the lawyer would not be subject to discipline. The Commission concluded that California should not depart from this approach.
4	U.S. Attorney’s Offices for the Central, Eastern, Northern and Southern Districts of California	M	Yes	Comment [2] & [9C]	We are concerned that the last sentence of Proposed Comment [2] and new Proposed Comments [9B] and [9C], intermingle two distinct concepts, imputation and disqualification, and as a result create the impression that disqualification as the result of imputed conflicts is not unusual, when in fact it is only in extraordinary cases that imputation is appropriate, and only in even more unusual circumstances that disqualification as the result of such imputation is found appropriate. Accordingly, we suggest that the Proposed Comments be modified as follows	The Commission disagrees. The comments do not confuse imputation and disqualification. They have been drafted to keep the two concepts distinct. Comments [9B] and [9C] are physically located separately from Comment [2] in order to avoid confusion. Disqualification of prosecutors’ offices because of imputed conflicts may be unusual in criminal cases, but that is not the limit of Rule 1.11, which also applies to civil and to non-litigation matters. Whether disqualification of prosecutors’ offices is or is not unusual should not be the subject of the Comments. Although the Legislature has made disqualification unusual in situations in which Younger and other precedents apply, and although court decisions express reluctance to disqualify entire offices of prosecutors, the former client of a side-shifting prosecutor is still aggrieved, and the Comments should not sanctify the conflicts of interest in such cases.

Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts for Government Employees
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 0
Disagree = 0
Modify = 4
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					First, we suggest that the text of Proposed Comment [9C], which addresses only imputation and screening for purposes of this Rule, and not disqualification, be modified to make more clear that the Rule does not itself impute conflicts within government agencies, and moved to replace the last sentence in Proposed Comment [2]. This would avoid an unnecessary cross-reference, and bring the Proposed Comment closer to the ABA Model Rule Comments, which include in their Comment [2] the discussion of imputation and screening for current government lawyers. The resulting Comment [2] would read: “Paragraphs (a)(1) and (a)(2) restate the obligations of an individual lawyer toward a former government client, whether the lawyer currently is in private practice or non-governmental employment or the lawyer currently serves as an officer or employee of a different government agency. See Comment [5]. Paragraph (d)(1) restates the obligations to a former private client of an individual lawyer who is currently serving as an officer or employee of the government. Rule 1.10 is not applicable to the conflicts of interest addressed by this Rule. Rather, paragraph (b) sets forth a special imputation rule for former government lawyers that	The Commission disagrees. The effect of these changes would be to change the neutral wording of Comment [9C] (“This Rule leaves open the issues of . . .”) to wording that would be used by the commenters to argue that Rule 1.11 prohibits imputation of conflicts within government offices. The Rules of Professional Conduct should not be reworded to change the analyses and results of disqualification motions. This rule should not define when conflicts will be imputed within government offices for disqualification purposes and should not be written to change the decisional law regarding disqualification motions. California decisions have not accepted Model Rule Comment [2]. In addition, moving Comment [9C] to Comment [2] and merging them would change the significance of both comments. Now, they clearly distinguish conflicts for discipline purposes from conflicts for disqualification purposes. The Commission recommends that the rule not become a revision of decisional law regarding disqualification and that the distinctions between discipline and disqualification be kept clear.

Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts for Government Employees
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4
Agree = 0
Disagree = 0
Modify = 4
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				Comment [9B]	provides for screening and notice. The Rule does not impute a current government lawyer's conflict under paragraph (d) to other lawyers serving in the same governmental agency; whether such imputation will occur and whether the use of a timely screen will avoid that imputation are matters of case law." Second, we would suggest that Proposed Comment [9B], which makes clear that this Rule does not govern disqualification, be modified to make more clear the distinction between criminal and civil cases, remove the citation to Younger (which applied to a criminal case a disqualification standard that has since been displaced by statute), and cite additional case law that has limited the circumstances in which disqualification on the basis of imputed conflicts may be appropriate. The resulting Proposed Comment [9B] would read: "This Rule Not Determinative of Disqualification [9B] This Rule does not address whether a lawyer or law firm will be disqualified from a representation. The policies underlying discipline and disqualification are different. See, e.g., Hollywood v. Superior Court (2008)	The Commission disagrees with the deletion of Younger. Younger still states valid analyses of disqualification standards. In Cobra Solutions, 38 Cal. 4th 839, 850 (2006), the Court stated that the principles discussed in Younger "have not lost their relevance." Not calling Younger to the attention of a reader would be misleading. The Commission does not recommend that additional cases be cited in Comment [9B]. The list of cases that would have to be added to the comment would make the comment far too long. The Commission also disagrees with the proposal to reword the last sentence of Comment [9B]. It now states, "Regarding prosecutors in criminal matters, see Penal Code section 1424." That is the code section the Legislature added to offset Younger and its sequellae. Instead of the neutral wording of the last sentence of Comment [9B], the commenters would change the sentence from alerting a reader to the need to consult the code section to a sentence that would make the code section the limit of

Rule 1.11 Special Conflicts for Government Employees [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 4 Agree = 0 Disagree = 0 Modify = 4 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					43 Cal.4th 721. Whether a lawyer or law firm will or will not be disqualified is a matter to be determined by an appropriate tribunal. See, e.g., In re Charlissee C. , 45 Cal.4 th 145 (2008); City & County of San Francisco v. Cobra Solutions, Inc. , 38 Cal.4 th 839 (2006). Standards for disqualification of criminal prosecutors are set forth in Penal Code section 1424."	disqualification motions. The Comment should not become a basis for changing the premises of disqualification decisions. Other standards may also apply. Moreover, federal courts are not bound by the California Penal Code in deciding disqualification motions. The change the commenters recommend is an attempt to bring the California statute into federal practice by changing the Rules of Professional conduct.

Rule 1.11: Special Conflicts of Interest for Former and Current Government Officers and Employees

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Arizona, Connecticut, and Florida omit the law clerk exception to ABA Model Rule 1.11(d)(2).

California has no provision comparable to ABA Model Rule 1.11.

Colorado: Rule 1.11(b)(2) requires the written notice to contain “a general description of the personally disqualified lawyer’s prior participation in the matter and the screening procedures to be employed.” Colorado also adds a subparagraph (b)(3) prohibiting other lawyers in the firm from undertaking or continuing representation unless the personally disqualified lawyer and the partners of the firm “reasonably believe that the steps taken to accomplish the screening of material information are likely to be effective in preventing material information from being disclosed to the firm and its client.”

District of Columbia: Rule 1.11 tracks the basic provisions of ABA Model Rule 1.11, but D.C. requires a personally disqualified former government lawyer and another lawyer in the firm to file certain documents with the disqualified lawyer’s former agency or department. As an alternative, the rule permits the former government lawyer to file those documents with bar counsel under seal if the firm’s client requests it.

Georgia has adopted a Rule 9.5 that provides as follows:

Rule 9.5 Lawyer as a Public Official

(a) A lawyer who is a public official and represents the State, a municipal corporation in the State, the United States government, their agencies or officials, is bound by the provisions of these Rules.

(b) No provision of these Rules shall be construed to prohibit such a lawyer from taking a legal position adverse to the State, a municipal corporation in the State, the United States government, their agencies or officials, when such action is authorized or required by the U.S. Constitution, the Georgia Constitution or statutes of the United States or Georgia.

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2010, Rule 1.11(a) does not require consent to be confirmed in writing.

Iowa adds the following paragraph to Rule 1.11 relating to part-time prosecutors serving as criminal defense counsel:

(f) Prosecutors for the state or county shall not engage in the defense of an accused in any criminal matter during the time they are engaged in such public responsibilities. However, this paragraph does not apply to a lawyer not regularly employed as a prosecutor for the state or county who serves as a special prosecutor for a specific criminal case, provided that the employment does not create a conflict of interest or the lawyer complies with the requirements of rule 32:1.7(b).

Massachusetts: The law clerk exception in Model Rule 1.11(d)(2)(ii) is extended to law clerks working for mediators.

Missouri: Rule 1.11(e) provides as follows:

(1) A lawyer who also holds public office, whether full or part-time, shall not engage in activities in which his or her personal or professional interests are or foreseeably could be in conflict with his or her official duties or responsibilities. . . .

(2) No lawyer in a firm in which a lawyer holding a public office is associated may undertake or continue representation in a matter in which the lawyer who holds public office would be disqualified, unless the lawyer holding public office is screened in the manner set forth in Rule 4-1.11(a).

New Hampshire adds a detailed provision regarding the responsibilities of “lawyer-officials,” who are defined as lawyers who are “actively engaged in the practice of law” and who are members of a “governmental body.”

New Jersey: Rules 1.11(a), (b), and (d) deviate from the Model Rules as follows:

(a) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, and subject to RPC 1.9, a lawyer who formerly has served as a government lawyer or public officer or employee of the government shall not represent a private client in connection with a matter:

(1) in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially as a public officer or employee; or

(2) for which the lawyer had substantial responsibility as a public officer or employee; or

(3) when the interests of the private party are materially adverse to the appropriate government agency, provided, however, that the application of this provision shall be limited to a period of six months immediately following the termination of the attorney's service as a government lawyer or public officer.

(b) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer who formerly has served as a government lawyer or public officer or employee of the government:

(1) shall be subject to RPC 1.9(c)(2) in respect of information relating to a private party or information that the lawyer knows is confidential government information about a person acquired by the lawyer while serving as a government lawyer or public officer or employee of the government, and

(2) shall not represent a private person whose interests are adverse to that private party in a matter in which the information could be used to the material disadvantage of that party. . . .

(d) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer serving as a government lawyer or public officer or employee of the government:

(1) shall be subject to RPC 1.9(c)(2) in respect of information relating to a private party acquired by the lawyer while in private practice or nongovernmental employment.

(2) shall not participate in a matter (i) in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially while in private practice or nongovernmental employment, or (ii) for which the lawyer had substantial responsibility while in private practice or nongovernmental employment, or (iii) with respect to which the interests of the appropriate government agency are materially adverse to the interests of a private party represented by the lawyer while in private practice or nongovernmental employment, unless under applicable law no one is, or by lawful delegation may be, authorized to act in the lawyer's stead in the matter or unless the private party gives its informed consent, confirmed in writing, and

(3) shall not negotiate for private employment with any person who is involved as a party or as attorney for a party in a matter in which the lawyer is participating personally and substantially or for which the lawyer has substantial responsibility, except that a lawyer serving as a law clerk shall be subject to RPC 1.12 (c). . . .

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 1.11(b) amplifies the procedures necessary to avoid the imputation of a conflict, including that a law firm must “notify, as appropriate, lawyers and nonlawyer personnel within the firm that the personally disqualified lawyer is prohibited from participating in the representation of the current client,” and that “there are no other circumstances in the particular representation that create an appearance of impropriety.” Several new comments offer further guidance regarding these procedures. Rule 1.11(e) specifies that the term “matter” does “not include or apply to agency rulemaking functions.” Rule 1.11(f) is a nearly verbatim adoption of DR 8-101 of the old Model Code.

Oregon expands the “law clerk” exception to include a lawyer who is a “staff lawyer to or otherwise assisting in the official duties of” a judge, other adjudicative officer or arbitrator. Oregon Rule 1.11(d) adds language drawn partly from DR 8-101 of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility providing that, except as law otherwise expressly permits, a lawyer shall not:

(i) use the lawyer's public position to obtain, or attempt to obtain, special advantage in legislative matters for the lawyer or for a client.

(ii) use the lawyer's public position to influence, or attempt to influence, a tribunal to act in favor of the lawyer or of a client.

(iii) accept anything of value from any person when the lawyer knows or it is obvious that the offer is for the purpose of influencing the lawyer's action as a public official.

(iv) either while in office or after leaving office use information the lawyer knows is confidential government information obtained while a public official to represent a private client.

Oregon also deletes ABA Model Rule 1.11(e) and adds these paragraphs to Rule 1.11:

(e) Notwithstanding any Rule of Professional Conduct, and consistent with the "debate" clause, Article IV, section 9, of the Oregon Constitution, or the "speech or debate" clause, Article I, section 6, of the United States Constitution, a lawyer-legislator shall not be subject to discipline for words uttered in debate in either house of the Oregon Legislative Assembly or for any speech or debate in either house of the United States Congress.

(f) A member of a lawyer-legislator's firm shall not be subject to discipline for representing a client in any claim against the State of Oregon provided:

(1) the lawyer-legislator is screened from participation or representation in the matter in accordance with the procedure set forth in Rule 1.10(c) (the required affidavits shall be served on the Attorney General); and

(2) the lawyer-legislator shall not directly or indirectly receive a fee for such representation.

Pennsylvania: Rule 1.11(a)(2) does not require that client consent be "confirmed in writing."

Texas: Rule 1.10(f) specifically excludes "regulation-making" and "rule-making" from the definition of "matter."

Virginia adheres mostly to the original 1983 version of ABA Model Rule 1.11, except that Virginia adds the following language drawn from DR 8-101 of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility as Rule 1.11(a):

(a) A lawyer who holds public office shall not:

(1) use the public position to obtain, or attempt to obtain, a special advantage in legislative matters for the lawyer or for a client under circumstances where the lawyer knows or it is obvious that such action is not in the public interest;

(2) use the public position to influence, or attempt to influence, a tribunal to act in favor of the lawyer or of a client; or

(3) accept anything of value from any person when the lawyer knows or it is obvious that the offer is for the purpose of influencing the lawyer's action as a public official.

Proposed Rule 1.12 [n/a]

“Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator”

(XDraft #6, 02/17/10)

Summary: This proposed new rule regulates the conduct of lawyers who may be asked to represent a client in a matter in which the lawyer previously participated personally and substantially as a judge, arbitrator, mediator or other third-party neutral. The Rule generally prohibits such representation unless all of the parties to the proceedings give their informed written consent. The rule also states that such conflicts may be imputed to other lawyers but that the imputation of the conflict can be avoided by establishing an ethical wall to screen the affected lawyer.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rule

RPC 3-310(A)

Statute

Case law

Cho v. Superior Court (1995) 39 Cal.App.4th 113

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 5
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 3
Abstain 2

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Commission Minority Position, Known Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

Minority Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☐ Yes ☒ No

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

See the introduction and also the explanation for paragraphs (a) and (c) in the Model Rule comparison chart.

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 1.12* Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator or Other Third-Party Neutral

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 1.12 closely tracks Model Rule 1.12, but incorporates three substantive changes: (i) substituting the current California Rules' more client-protective requirement of "informed written consent" for the Model Rule's "informed consent, confirmed in writing," see Explanation of Changes, paragraph (a); (ii) expanding the restriction on employment negotiations between adjudicative officers or their staff and parties or their representatives appearing before them, see Explanation of Changes, paragraph (b); and (iii) limiting to former law clerks the availability of ethical screening to avoid imputed disqualification of a law firm after leaving judicial employment, see Explanation of Changes, paragraphs (c) and (d).

Variation in Other Jurisdictions. Every jurisdiction has adopted some version of Model Rule 1.12; most have adopted Model Rule 1.12 with little or no variation. D.C. Rule 1.12 applies only to non-judicial, third party neutrals. Judges and law clerks are governed under D.C. Rule 1.11. New York, one of only two jurisdictions that has adopted law firm discipline, expressly requires that the law firm to which the former adjudicative officer moves to takes steps to properly screen the former adjudicative officer. There are minor variations concerning consent and notice in other jurisdictions. E.g., Georgia, Pennsylvania.

* Proposed Rule, XDraft 6 (02/17/10).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.12 Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator or Other Third-Party Neutral	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.12 Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator or Other Third-Party Neutral	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) Except as stated in paragraph (d), a lawyer shall not represent anyone in connection with a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially as a judge or other adjudicative officer, or law clerk to such a person or as an arbitrator, mediator or other third-party neutral, unless all parties to the proceeding give informed consent, confirmed in writing.	(a) Except as stated in paragraph (de), a lawyer shall not represent anyone in connection with a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially as a judge or other adjudicative officer, or law clerk to such a person, or as an arbitrator, mediator or other third-party neutral, unless all parties to the proceeding give informed written consent, ~~confirmed in writing~~.	Paragraph (a) is identical to Model Rule 1.12(a), except that the cross-reference is to paragraph (e) because of the addition of new paragraph (c), and the requirement of California's more client-protective "informed written consent" instead of the Model Rule's "informed consent, confirmed in writing."
(b) A lawyer shall not negotiate for employment with any person who is involved as a party or as lawyer for a party in a matter in which the lawyer is participating personally and substantially as a judge or other adjudicative officer or as an arbitrator, mediator or other third-party neutral. A lawyer serving as a law clerk to a judge, or other adjudicative officer may negotiate for employment with a party or lawyer involved in a matter in which the clerk is participating personally and substantially, but only after the lawyer has notified the judge, or other adjudicative officer.	(b) A lawyer shall not ~~negotiate for~~participate in discussions regarding prospective employment with any person who is involved as a party, or as a lawyer for a party, or with a law firm for a party, in a matter in which the lawyer is participating, personally and substantially as a judge or other adjudicative officer, or as an arbitrator, mediator or other third-party neutral. A lawyer serving as a law clerk to a judge or other adjudicative officer may ~~negotiate for~~participate in discussions regarding prospective employment with a party, or with a lawyer ~~involved~~or a law firm for a party in a matter in which the clerk is participating personally and substantially, but only ~~after~~with the ~~lawyer has notified approval of~~ the judge or other adjudicative officer.	Paragraph (b) is a modified version of Model Rule 1.12(b). First, the phrase "negotiate for," that appears in two places, has been replaced with the phrase "participate in discussions regarding prospective." The Commission's replacement language is consistent with the Model Rule language in covering negotiations for employment but also is broader and clearer by covering, for example, initial employment interviews that might not be strictly regarded as employment negotiations. In addition, the Commission's language tracks the language used in Canon 3E(5)(h) of the California Code of Judicial Ethics. Second, the phrase "or with a law firm for a party" has been added for clarification. It makes clear that negotiations are prohibited not only with a lawyer actually appearing in the matter, but also with that lawyer's law firm. The same clarifying change is made in the second sentence. In addition, the Commission has added the

* Proposed Rule, XDraft 6 (02/17/10), redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.12 Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator or Other Third-Party Neutral	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.12 Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator or Other Third-Party Neutral	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule requirement that the judge or adjudicative officer must approve negotiations by a law clerk, not just be given notice of the negotiations as specified in the Model Rule.
	(c) Except as provided in paragraph (d), if a lawyer is disqualified by paragraph (a), no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in the matter.	The Commission has added paragraph (c) to provide for greater confidence in the integrity of the judicial system and in the administration of justice by not allowing judges to leave a case, join a law firm involved in the matter, and have that firm continue to act as counsel in the case over the objection of one of the parties simply by screening the former judge from the case.
(c) If a lawyer is disqualified by paragraph (a), no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in the matter unless:	(~~ed~~) If a lawyer is disqualified by paragraph (a) because of the lawyer's previous service as a law clerk to a judge, adjudicative officer or a tribunal, no lawyer in a law firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in the matter unless:	Paragraph (d) is based on Model Rule 1.12(c). Together with proposed paragraph (c), it permits screening only of law clerks to avoid imputation in a law firm. See Cho v. Superior Court (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 113, 125 [45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 863]. The Commission recommends screening for law clerks because the aforementioned concerns over reduced confidence in the administration of justice by screening adjudicative officers is not as great for law clerks. Further, not permitting screening of law clerks, as is done in other jurisdictions, would place practical limits on job opportunities for temporary clerks in high volume assignments, and might discourage their accepting positions with the courts because of that limitation.
(1) the disqualified lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and	(1) the disqualified lawyer is ~~timely~~ and effectively screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and	In subparagraph (d)(1), the Commission has added “and effectively” to “timely” to emphasize that not only must a screen be implemented in a timely manner, but it also must be effective.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.12 Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator or Other Third-Party Neutral	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.12 Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator or Other Third-Party Neutral	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(2) written notice is promptly given to the parties and any appropriate tribunal to enable them to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this rule.	(2) written notice is promptly given to the parties and any appropriate tribunal to enable them to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this ~~rule~~Rule.	Subparagraph (d)(2) is identical to Model Rule 1.12(c)(2).
(d) An arbitrator selected as a partisan of a party in a multimember arbitration panel is not prohibited from subsequently representing that party.	~~(d)~~ (e) An arbitrator selected as a partisan of a party in a multimember arbitration panel is not prohibited from subsequently representing that party.	Paragraph (e) is identical to Model Rule 1.12(d).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.12 Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator or Other Third-Party Neutral Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.12 Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator or Other Third-Party Neutral Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] This Rule generally parallels Rule 1.11. The term “personally and substantially” signifies that a judge who was a member of a multimember court, and thereafter left judicial office to practice law, is not prohibited from representing a client in a matter pending in the court, but in which the former judge did not participate. So also the fact that a former judge exercised administrative responsibility in a court does not prevent the former judge from acting as a lawyer in a matter where the judge had previously exercised remote or incidental administrative responsibility that did not affect the merits. Compare the Comment to Rule 1.11. The term “adjudicative officer” includes such officials as judges pro tempore, referees, special masters, hearing officers and other parajudicial officers, and also lawyers who serve as part-time judges. Compliance Canons A(2), B(2) and C of the Model Code of Judicial Conduct provide that a part-time judge, judge pro tempore or retired judge recalled to active service, may not “act as a lawyer in any proceeding in which he served as a judge or in any other proceeding related thereto.” Although phrased differently from this Rule, those Rules correspond in meaning.	[1] This Rule generally parallels Rule 1.11. “Personally and substantially” includes the receipt or acquisition of confidential information that is material to the matter. The term “personally and substantially” signifies that a judge who was a member of a multimember court, and thereafter left judicial office to practice law, is not prohibited from representing a client in a matter pending in the court, but in which the former judge did not participate, or acquire confidential information. So also the fact that a former judge exercised administrative responsibility in a court does not prevent the former judge from acting as a lawyer in a matter where the judge had previously exercised remote or incidental administrative responsibility that did not affect the merits, such as uncontested procedural duties typically performed by a presiding or supervising judge or justice. Compare the Comment to Rule 1.11. The term “adjudicative officer” includes such officials as judges pro tempore, referees, special masters, hearing officers and other parajudicial officers, and also lawyers who serve as part-time judges. ~~Compliance Canons A(2), B(2) and C of the Model Code of Judicial Conduct provide that a part-time judge, judge pro tempore or retired judge recalled to active service, may not “act as a lawyer in any proceeding in which he served as a judge or in any other proceeding related thereto.” Although phrased differently from this Rule, those Rules correspond in meaning.~~	Comment [1] is based on Model Rule 1.12, cmt. [1]. The Commission has added language to clarify that the rule also applies when a lawyer acquired confidential information while working in a court, even if the lawyer was not directly involved in the matter, for example, when a law clerk not working on a matter discusses the matter with another clerk who is working on the matter. The Commission has also added language to the third sentence of the Model Rule comment to explain more precisely the kinds of duties that would fall outside the Rule. The last two sentences of Model Rule 1.12, cmt. [1] have been deleted because they are inapplicable in California.

* Proposed Rule, XDraft 6 (2/17/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.12 Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator or Other Third-Party Neutral Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.12 Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator or Other Third-Party Neutral Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[2] Like former judges, lawyers who have served as arbitrators, mediators or other third-party neutrals may be asked to represent a client in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially. This Rule forbids such representation unless all of the parties to the proceedings give their informed consent, confirmed in writing. See Rule 1.0(e) and (b). Other law or codes of ethics governing third-party neutrals may impose more stringent standards of personal or imputed disqualification. See Rule 2.4.	[2] Like former judges, lawyers who have served as arbitrators, mediators or other third-party neutrals may be asked to represent a client in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially. This Rule forbids such representation unless all of the parties to the proceedings give their informed written consent, ~~confirmed in writing~~. [See Rule 1.0(e) ~~and (b)~~.] Other law or codes of ethics governing third-party neutrals may impose more stringent standards of personal or imputed disqualification. See Rule 2.4.	Comment [2] is identical to Model Rule 1.12, cmt. [2], except that California's more client-protective "informed written consent" has been substituted to conform to the changes to paragraph (a). See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a). For the same reason, the reference to Model Rule 1.0(b) (definition of "confirmed in writing") has been deleted.
[3] Although lawyers who serve as third-party neutrals do not have information concerning the parties that is protected under Rule 1.6, they typically owe the parties an obligation of confidentiality under law or codes of ethics governing third-party neutrals. Thus, paragraph (c) provides that conflicts of the personally disqualified lawyer will be imputed to other lawyers in a law firm unless the conditions of this paragraph are met.	[3] Although lawyers who serve as third-party neutrals do not have information concerning the parties that is protected under Rule 1.6, they typically owe the parties an obligation of confidentiality under law or codes of ethics governing third-party neutrals. ~~Thus, paragraph~~ Paragraph (c) provides that conflicts of the personally disqualified lawyer will be imputed to other lawyers in a law firm ~~unless the conditions of this paragraph are met~~.	Comment [3] is based on Model Rule 1.12, cmt. [3]. The revisions are necessary to conform the comment to new paragraph (c), which does not provide for screening of adjudicative officers to avoid imputation of their disqualification to members of their law firms. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (c).
[4] Requirements for screening procedures are stated in Rule 1.0(k). Paragraph (c)(1) does not prohibit the screened lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly related to the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.	[4] Paragraph (d) provides that conflicts of a lawyer personally disqualified because of the lawyer's previous service as a law clerk to a judge, adjudicative officer or a tribunal will be imputed to other lawyers in a law firm unless the conditions of paragraph (d) are met. Requirements for screening procedures are stated in Rule [1.0(k)]. Paragraph ~~(e)~~ (d)(1) does not prohibit the screened lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership	Comment [4] is based on Model Rule 1.12, cmt. [4] and clarifies that the permissive screening provisions in paragraph (d) apply only to law clerks to adjudicative officers. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (d).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.12 Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator or Other Third-Party Neutral Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.12 Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator or Other Third-Party Neutral Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly related to the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.
[5] Notice, including a description of the screened lawyer's prior representation and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.	[5] Notice, including a description of the screened lawyer's prior representation and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.	Comment [5] is identical to Model Rule 1.12, cmt. [5].

Rule 1.12 Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator or Other Third-Party Neutral

(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) Except as stated in paragraph (e), a lawyer shall not represent anyone in connection with a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially as a judge or other adjudicative officer, or law clerk to such a person, or as an arbitrator, mediator or other third-party neutral, unless all parties to the proceeding give informed written consent.
- (b) A lawyer shall not participate in discussions regarding prospective employment with any person who is involved as a party, or as a lawyer for a party, or with a law firm for a party, in a matter in which the lawyer is participating, personally and substantially as a judge or other adjudicative officer, or as an arbitrator, mediator or other third-party neutral. A lawyer serving as a law clerk to a judge or other adjudicative officer may participate in discussions regarding prospective employment with a party, or with a lawyer or a law firm for a party in a matter in which the clerk is participating personally and substantially, but only with the approval of the judge or other adjudicative officer.
- (c) Except as provided in paragraph (d), if a lawyer is disqualified by paragraph (a), no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in the matter.
- (d) If a lawyer is disqualified by paragraph (a) because of the lawyer's previous service as a law clerk to a judge, adjudicative officer or a tribunal, no lawyer in a law firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in the matter unless:
 - (1) the disqualified lawyer is timely and effectively screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and
 - (2) written notice is promptly given to the parties and any appropriate tribunal to enable them to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this Rule.
- (e) An arbitrator selected as a partisan of a party in a multimember arbitration panel is not prohibited from subsequently representing that party.

COMMENT

[1] This Rule generally parallels Rule 1.11. "Personally and substantially" includes the receipt or acquisition of confidential information that is material to the matter. The term "personally and substantially" signifies that a judge who was a member of a multimember court, and thereafter left judicial office to practice law, is not prohibited from representing a client in a matter pending in the court, but in which the former judge did not participate, or acquire confidential information. So also the fact that a former judge exercised administrative responsibility in a court does not prevent the former judge from acting as a lawyer in a matter where the judge had previously exercised remote or incidental administrative responsibility that did not affect the merits, such as uncontested procedural duties typically performed by a presiding or supervising judge or justice. Compare the comment to Rule 1.11. The term "adjudicative officer" includes such officials as judges pro tempore, referees, special masters, hearing officers and other parajudicial officers, and also lawyers who serve as part-time judges.

[2] Like former judges, lawyers who have served as arbitrators, mediators or other third-party neutrals may be asked to represent a client in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially. This Rule forbids such representation unless all of the parties to the proceedings give their informed written consent. See Rule 1.0.1(e-1). Other law or codes of ethics governing third-party neutrals may impose more stringent standards of personal or imputed disqualification. See Rule 2.4.

[3] Although lawyers who serve as third-party neutrals do not have information concerning the parties that is protected under Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e), they typically owe the parties an obligation of confidentiality under law or codes of ethics governing third-party neutrals. Paragraph (c) provides that conflicts of the personally disqualified lawyer will be imputed to other lawyers in a law firm.

[4] Paragraph (d) provides that conflicts of a lawyer personally disqualified because of the lawyer's previous service as a law clerk to a judge, adjudicative officer or a tribunal will be imputed to other lawyers in a law firm unless the conditions of paragraph (d) are met. Requirements for screening procedures are stated in Rule 1.0.1(k). Paragraph (d)(1) does not prohibit the screened lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly related to the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.

[5] Notice, including a description of the screened lawyer's prior representation and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.

Rule 1.12 Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	A	Yes		The Comments are too many and too long. Most of them seem more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.
2	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee	M	Yes		It is unclear whether “personally and substantially” is intended to include anything beside “confidential information that is material to the matter.” If not, then the sentence should read: “Personally and substantially is intended to be limited to the receipt or acquisition of confidential information that is material to the matter.” If so, then the sentence should read: “Personally and substantially is intended to include, without limitation, the receipt or acquisition of confidential information that is material to the matter.” Since the rule is intended to foster confidence in the legal system and clients most likely would be shocked to find a former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator representing an adversary, client's should not have the burden of proving that a former judge's, etc. participation actually entailed the receipt of	Comment [1] states that “personally and substantially” is not limited to the acquisition of confidential information but also includes the judge's personal participation in a matter. Whether a judge personally participated in a matter might be more easily determined than whether the judge received confidential information, and both aspects therefore should be preserved in the Comment.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 1.12 Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					material confidential information. Rather, if a former judge, etc., has heard facts about the substantive claims involved in the former or pending matter, the former judge, etc., should be required to obtain written consent from the parties before undertaking any representation. If this recommendation is adopted, the modified language should read: “‘Personally and substantially’ is intended to include, without limitation, the receipt or acquisition of confidential information that is material to the matter or participation in a matter that included knowledge of facts related to the substantive claims in that matter.”
3	Santa Clara County Bar Association	M	Yes	1.12(b)	Subparagraph (b) is ambiguous as to whether the rule applies to the interviewing stage as opposed to the “negotiating employment” stage. The rule should apply to the interviewing stage though requiring the judges’ approval for an interview is not necessary. The following language should be added at the conclusion of subparagraph (b) as it now reads: “In addition, a law clerk may interview with a party, or with a lawyer or law firm for a party in a matter in which the clerk is participating personally and substantially, but only after notifying the judge or other adjudicative officer.”	The commenter previously submitted this point for the initial public comment distribution of this rule. At that time, the Commission agreed and thereafter subparagraph (b) was amended to read as follows: “A lawyer shall not participate in discussions regarding prospective employment with any person . . . A lawyer serving as a law clerk . . . may participate in discussions regarding prospective employment . . . The that was added also tracks more closely the language used in Canon 3E(5)(h) of the Code of Judicial Ethics.

Rule 1.12: Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator or Other Third-Party Neutral

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California has no direct counterpart to Rule 1.12.

District of Columbia: Rule 1.12 does not include former judges.

Georgia: Rule 1.12(b) adds that a law clerk who accepts employment with a party or lawyer involved in a matter in which the clerk is participating personally and substantively “shall promptly provide written notice of acceptance of employment to all counsel of record in all such matters in which the prospective employee is involved.”

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2010, Rule 1.12(a) does not require consent to be confirmed in writing.

Massachusetts extends the law clerk exception in Rule 1.12(b) to law clerks working for mediators.

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 1.12(a) is a nearly verbatim adoption of DR 9-101(A) of the old Model Code. Rule 1.12(d) describes in more detail the procedures necessary to avoid the imputation of a conflict, and several additional comments offer further guidance regarding these procedures.

Pennsylvania: Rule 1.12 tracks ABA Model Rule 1.12 except Pennsylvania Rule 1.12(a) does not require that client consent be “confirmed in writing.”

Texas has no equivalent to Rule 1.12(d).

Proposed Rule 1.13 [RPC 3-600]

“Organization as Client”

(XDraft # 11.1, 10/20/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 1.13 is based on Model Rule 1.13 but, because of California's strong policy on client confidentiality, diverges from the Model Rule in one significant respect. Unlike the Model Rule, the proposed Rule does not permit a lawyer for an organization to report suspected wrongdoing of the organization's constituents outside the organization's chain of command. See Introduction.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☐ Existing California Law

Rule

RPC 3-600

Statute

Business & Professions Code § 6068(e)(1).

Case law

- ☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

- ☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(14 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 14 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 9

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 1

Abstain 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by consensus ☐

Minority/Dissenting Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☐ Yes ☒ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

In rejecting the Model Rule's provisions that permit a lawyer to report misconduct outside the organization, the proposed Rule creates a potential conflict for California lawyers with the SEC Standards of Professional Conduct, which were promulgated pursuant to the Sarbanes-Oxley Act and which also permit reporting outside the organization. See Introduction.

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 1.13* Organization as Client

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 1.13 is based on Model Rule 1.13. However, the proposed rule diverges significantly from the Model Rule in not permitting a lawyer for an organization to report suspected wrongdoing of the organization's constituents outside the organization's chain of command. The Commission makes this recommendation because the Model Rule provision is based on policy decisions that are inimical to California's traditional emphasis on protection of client confidentiality.

The American Bar Association revised Model Rule 1.13 in August 2003, following the financial debacles involving companies such as Enron, Global Crossing and WorldCom. The revisions of Model Rule 1.13, which permit whistle blowing by lawyers outside the corporate structure, were intended as a companion piece to the ABA's concurrent revisions to Model Rule 1.6, which created exceptions to confidentiality that permit a lawyer to reveal a client's confidential information to prevent or rectify a criminal act reasonably certain to result in financial injury or property loss to a third party. The Commission has recommended rejection of those exceptions for the same reason it recommends rejection of the whistle blowing provision in Model Rule 1.13(c): First, Model Rules 1.6 and 1.13 are inconsistent with the all but absolute duty of confidentiality under § 6068(e). Second, these provisions run counter to California's policy of providing assurance to clients that their secrets are safe, which encourages client candor in communicating with the lawyer and provides the lawyer with the information necessary to promote client compliance with the law. Proposed Rule 1.13 provides that assurance by mandating that a lawyer who knows of wrongdoing by a constituent in the organization attempt to dissuade the constituent from his or her action and, failing that, to go up the organizational ladder – if necessary to highest authority in the organization authorized to act on its behalf, in an attempt to change the course of conduct. If the lawyer's attempts fail, then the lawyer must abide by the lawyer's duty of confidentiality under Business & Professions Code § 6068(e)(1) and not reveal the information outside the corporate chain of command. See Explanation of Changes for Comments [2] and [9].

* Proposed Rule 1.13, XDraft 11.1 (10/20/08).

INTRODUCTION (Continued):

The Commission believes that this approach will better promote the organizational client's compliance with the law by encouraging the client's constituents to be candid with the lawyer, a candor that would be lost if the constituents know the lawyer is authorized to report misconduct outside the organization. In conformance with this approach, both the black letter and comment to the Model Rule have been revised to alert lawyers that ignoring violations of duty or law that will likely injure the organization is not an option. For example, the black letter of Model Rule 1.13(b) has been revised to impose on an organization's lawyer an objective standard ("knows or reasonably should know") to determine when the lawyer must report up the organization's ladder. In addition, the comment to the Rule has been revised to emphasize that a lawyer may no longer hide his or her head in the sand. See, e.g., Explanation of Changes for Comments [4], [5] and [6].

Variation in Other Jurisdictions. Most jurisdictions have adopted to some extent the 2003 revisions to Model Rule 1.13, i.e., they have added revised paragraph (c) and new paragraphs (d) and (e), and accompanying comments, which together address a lawyer's authority to report misconduct outside the organization. Jurisdictions that have not adopted those paragraphs include the District of Columbia, Georgia, Missouri, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Texas.

Potential Conflict with SEC Standards of Professional Conduct. The Commission's proposed Rule arguably creates a potential conflict for California lawyers with the SEC Standards of Professional Conduct, which were promulgated pursuant to the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7245 and which also permit reporting outside an organization. See 17 C.F.R. 205.3(d)(i)-(iii). However, because the SEC rules are permissive and not mandatory, California lawyers should be able to fulfill their duties under proposed Rule 1.13 (as they have been able to do under current rule 3-600), without violating duties imposed under the SEC Rules. See also The New SEC Attorney Conduct Rules v. California's Duty of Confidentiality (Spring 2004), available at <http://www.calbar.ca.gov/calbar/pdfs/SEC-ethics-alert.pdf>.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.13 Organization as Client	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) A lawyer employed or retained by an organization represents the organization acting through its duly authorized constituents.	(a) A lawyer employed or retained by an organization ~~represents~~ shall conform his or her representation to the concept that the client is the organization itself, acting through its duly authorized constituents overseeing the particular engagement.	Paragraph (a) is based on Model Rule 1.13(a), but two clarifying changes have been made: first, emphasis is placed on the fact that the lawyer is obligated to treat the organization as the client; and second, emphasis is placed on the fact that the organization acts through those duly authorized constituents who oversee the particular engagement for which the lawyer has been retained.
(b) If a lawyer for an organization knows that an officer, employee or other person associated with the organization is engaged in action, intends to act or refuses to act in a matter related to the representation that is a violation of a legal obligation to the organization, or a violation of law that reasonably might be imputed to the organization, and that is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, then the lawyer shall proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best interest of the organization. Unless the lawyer reasonably believes that it is not necessary in the best interest of the organization to do so, the lawyer shall refer the matter to higher authority in the organization, including, if warranted by the circumstances, to the highest authority that can act on behalf of the organization as determined by applicable law.	(b) If a lawyer ~~for representing~~ an organization knows that an officer, employee or other person associated with the organization is ~~engaged in action~~ acting, intends to act or refuses to act in a matter related to the representation in a manner that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is (i) a violation of a legal obligation to the organization, or a violation of law ~~that~~ reasonably ~~might be imputed~~ imputable to the organization, and ~~that is~~ (ii) likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, ~~then~~ the lawyer shall proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best lawful interest of the organization. Unless the lawyer reasonably believes that it is not necessary in the best lawful interest of the organization to do so, the lawyer shall refer the matter to higher authority in the organization, including, if warranted by the circumstances, to the highest authority that	Paragraph (b) closely follows Model Rule 1.13(b), but with several changes. First, the word “representing” is substituted for the word “for” as a clarification. Second, the word “acting” is substituted for “engaged in action” for economy of language. Third, the phrase “in a manner” has been added to make the sentence grammatically correct. Fourth, and most important, using “knows or reasonably should know” imposes an objective standard on a lawyer’s determination of whether the constituent’s action is (i) a violation of a legal obligation or a violation of law, and (ii) likely to result in substantial injury to the organization. Although the lawyer must have actual knowledge of the constituent’s action, the lawyer’s analysis of the action’s consequences must be objective. Further, romanettes are used to clarify that both a (i) “violation” (of duty or law) and (ii) likely injury to the organization must be present before the lawyer’s duty to act is triggered. By using the “knows or reasonably should know” standard, the lawyer’s obligations under paragraph (b) are expanded beyond the Model Rule and the rules adopted in most jurisdictions, thereby increasing the likelihood that can act on behalf of the organization as determined by applicable law.	a lawyer will go up the corporate ladder to report malfeasance or misfeasance. Finally, "lawful" has been added as a modifier of "interest" to emphasize that the lawyer's duty only to pursue the best "lawful" interests of the client organization.

* Proposed Rule 1.13, XDraft 11.1 (10/20/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.13 Organization as Client	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(c) Except as provided in paragraph (d), if (1) despite the lawyer's efforts in accordance with paragraph (b) the highest authority that can act on behalf of the organization insists upon or fails to address in a timely and appropriate manner an action or a refusal to act, that is clearly a violation of law, and (2) the lawyer reasonably believes that the violation is reasonably certain to result in substantial injury to the organization, then the lawyer may reveal information relating to the representation whether or not Rule 1.6 permits such disclosure, but only if and to the extent the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to prevent substantial injury to the organization.	~~(c) Except as provided in paragraph (d), if~~ ~~(1) despite the lawyer's efforts in accordance with paragraph (b) the highest authority that can act on behalf of the organization insists upon or fails to address in a timely and appropriate manner an action or a refusal to act, that is clearly a violation of law, and~~ ~~(2) the lawyer reasonably believes that the violation is reasonably certain to result in substantial injury to the organization,~~ ~~then the lawyer may reveal information relating to the representation whether or not Rule 1.6 permits such disclosure, but only if and to the extent the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to prevent substantial injury to the organization.~~	The Commission recommends the deletion of Model Rule 1.13(c) because it is inimical to California's strong policy of protecting the confidentiality and maintaining the trust of the client. See Business & Professions Code § 6068(e)(1) and Explanation of Changes for paragraph (c), below. See also Introduction, ¶¶. 2,3. In recommending that Model Rule 1.13(c) not be adopted, the Commission urges the continuation of the longstanding approach reflected in current California Rule 3-600 of requiring the lawyer to work within the organization in situations defined in paragraph (b) and not to have unilateral discretion to report outside the organizational, conduct that would be contrary to the lawyer's duties under section 6068(e).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.13 Organization as Client	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(c) In taking any action pursuant to paragraph (b), the lawyer shall not violate his or her duty of protecting all confidential information as provided in Business and Professions Code section 6068(e)(1).	Paragraph (c) has no counterpart in the Model Rule. The Commission recommends the adoption of paragraph (c), which correctly states California policy on protecting a client's confidential information. See Introduction, ¶¶. 2,3. See also Explanation of Changes for deleted Model Rule 1.13(c).
(d) Paragraph (c) shall not apply with respect to information relating to a lawyer's representation of an organization to investigate an alleged violation of law, or to defend the organization or an officer, employee or other constituent associated with the organization against a claim arising out of an alleged violation of law.	~~(d) Paragraph (c) shall not apply with respect to information relating to a lawyer's representation of an organization to investigate an alleged violation of law, or to defend the organization or an officer, employee or other constituent associated with the organization against a claim arising out of an alleged violation of law.~~	Because the Commission has recommended deleting Model Rule 1.13(c), see Explanation of Changes, above, it also recommends deletion of Model Rule 1.13(d), which limits the application of deleted paragraph (c).
	(d) If, despite the lawyer's actions in accordance with paragraph (b), the officer, employee or other person insists upon action, or fails to act, in a manner that is a violation of a legal obligation to the organization or a violation of law reasonably imputable to the organization, and is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, the lawyer shall continue to proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best lawful interests of the organization. The lawyer's response may include the lawyer's right and, where appropriate, duty to resign or withdraw in accordance with Rule 1.16.	Paragraph (d) has no counterpart in the Model Rule. The Commission recommends adoption of paragraph (d) because it states, in accordance with California's strong policy of confidentiality, the appropriate course of action a lawyer should take if the lawyer is unsuccessful in persuading the organization's constituents not to pursue action that is a violation of duty or law, and likely to substantially injure the organization. In effect, it rejects the permissive disclosure procedure sanctioned by Model Rule 1.13(c). See Introduction, ¶¶. 2,3.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.13 Organization as Client	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(e) A lawyer who reasonably believes that he or she has been discharged because of the lawyer's actions taken pursuant to paragraphs (b) or (c), or who withdraws under circumstances that require or permit the lawyer to take action under either of those paragraphs, shall proceed as the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to assure that the organization's highest authority is informed of the lawyer's discharge or withdrawal.	(e) A lawyer who reasonably believes that he or she has been discharged because of the lawyer's actions taken pursuant to paragraphs (b) ~~or (c)~~, or who resigns or withdraws under circumstances ~~that require or permit the lawyer to take action under either of those paragraphs,~~described in paragraph (d). shall proceed as the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to assure that the organization's highest authority is informed of the lawyer's discharge or withdrawal.	Paragraph (e) is based on Model Rule 1.13(e), but has been modified to conform to the differences between proposed paragraphs (b), (c) and (d), and Model Rule 1.13(b), (c) and (d).
(f) In dealing with an organization's directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders or other constituents, a lawyer shall explain the identity of the client when the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the organization's interests are adverse to those of the constituents with whom the lawyer is dealing.	(f) In dealing with an organization's directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders, or other constituents, a lawyer representing the organization shall explain the identity of the lawyer's client ~~when~~whenever the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the organization's interests are adverse to those of the ~~constituents~~constituent(s) with whom the lawyer is dealing.	Paragraph (f) is based on Model Rule 1.13(f). The phrase "representing the organization" and the word "lawyer" have been added to clarify when the lawyer's duty under the paragraph is triggered. The second romanette clause, concerning the constituent's mistaken belief, has been added to emphasize the lawyer's duty to avoid misapprehension by an unrepresented person that the lawyer represents that person. See also proposed Rule 4.3. The second sentence of paragraph (f) is carried forward from current California rule 3-600(D). This sentence adds an affirmative duty not to mislead to the duty in the first sentence to correct the constituent's misapprehension.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.13 Organization as Client	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(g) A lawyer representing an organization may also represent any of its directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders or other constituents, subject to the provisions of Rule 1.7. If the organization's consent to the dual representation is required by Rule 1.7, the consent shall be given by an appropriate official of the organization other than the individual who is to be represented, or by the shareholders.	(g) A lawyer representing an organization may also represent any of its directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders or other constituents, subject to the provisions of Rules 1.7, 1.8.2, 1.8.6, and 1.8.7. If the organization's consent to the dual representation is required by Rule 1.7 any of these Rules, the consent shall be given by an appropriate official or body of the organization other than the individual who is to be represented, or by the shareholders.	Paragraph (g) closely follows Model Rule 1.13(g). References to several other rules that might create a dual representation conflict have been added, as well as an appropriate grammatical change ("any of these Rules"). The phrase, "or body" has been added in recognition that an organization often authorizes a group of constituents to consider and approve conflict waivers. This might be, for example, the Board of Directors or a litigation committee of the Board.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
The Entity as the Client [1] An organizational client is a legal entity, but it cannot act except through its officers, directors, employees, shareholders and other constituents. Officers, directors, employees and shareholders are the constituents of the corporate organizational client. The duties defined in this Comment apply equally to unincorporated associations. "Other constituents" as used in this Comment means the positions equivalent to officers, directors, employees and shareholders held by persons acting for organizational clients that are not corporations.	The Entity as the Client [1] ~~An organizational client is a legal entity, but it cannot act except through its officers, directors, employees, shareholders and other constituents. Officers, directors, employees and shareholders are the constituents of the corporate organizational client. The duties defined in this Comment apply equally to~~This Rule applies to all forms of legal organizations such as corporations, limited liability companies, partnerships, and incorporated and unincorporated associations. "Other constituents" as used in this Comment means the positions equivalent toThis Rule also applies to governmental organizations. See Comment [13]. An organizational client cannot act except through individuals who are authorized to conduct its affairs. The identity of an organization's constituents will depend on its form, structure, and chosen terminology. For example, in the case of a corporation, constituents include officers, directors, employees and shareholders held by persons acting for. In the case of other organizational clients that are not corporations, constituents include the equivalents of officers, directors, employees, and shareholders. Any agent or fiduciary authorized to act on behalf of an organization is a constituent of the organization for purposes of the authorized matter.	Although the substance of Model Rule 1.13, cmt. [1] and that of proposed Comment [1] are generally the same, the Commission recommends adoption of proposed Comment [1] because it provides better guidance than the Model Rule comment concerning the nuances of who is the client when a lawyer represents an organization. In particular, the proposed comment gives examples of the kinds of organizations within the rule, (see first sentence) and explains that an agent or fiduciary who acts on behalf of the organization is a constituent within the scope of the Rule for purposes of the matter (last sentence).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[2] When a lawyer is retained by an organization, the lawyer is required to take direction from and communicate with constituent(s) authorized by the organization or by law to instruct or communicate with the lawyer with respect to the matter for which the organization has retained the lawyer.	Comment [2] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It has been added to improve guidance to a lawyer on the constituents within the organization with whom the lawyer should communicate with or from the lawyer should take direction.
[2] When one of the constituents of an organizational client communicates with the organization's lawyer in that person's organizational capacity, the communication is protected by Rule 1.6. Thus, by way of example, if an organizational client requests its lawyer to investigate allegations of wrongdoing, interviews made in the course of that investigation between the lawyer and the client's employees or other constituents are covered by Rule 1.6. This does not mean, however, that constituents of an organizational client are the clients of the lawyer. The lawyer may not disclose to such constituents information relating to the representation except for disclosures explicitly or impliedly authorized by the organizational client in order to carry out the representation or as otherwise permitted by Rule 1.6.	~~[2]~~[3] When one of the constituents When a constituent of an organizational client communicates with the organization's lawyer in that ~~person's~~constituent's organizational capacity, the communication is protected by Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e)(1). Thus, by way of example, if an organizational client requests its lawyer to investigate allegations of wrongdoing, interviews made in the course of that investigation between the lawyer and the client's employees or other constituents are covered by Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e)(1). This does not mean, however, that constituents of an organizational client are the clients of the lawyer. The lawyer may not disclose to such constituents information relating to the representation except ~~for disclosures explicitly or impliedly authorized by the organizational client in order to carry out the representation or as otherwise~~as permitted by Rule 1.6 or Business and Professions Code section 6068(e).	Comment [3] is based on Model Rule 1.13, cmt. [2]. The Comment has been revised to provide appropriate reference to the governing provisions in California. The example provided in the second sentence has been deleted as unnecessary. In addition, that part of the comment that discusses a lawyer's implied authority to disclose client information has been deleted because the Commission has recommended the rejection of the implied authority provision in Model Rule 1.6 ("Confidentiality of Information").

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[3] When constituents of the organization make decisions for it, the decisions ordinarily must be accepted by the lawyer even if their utility or prudence is doubtful. Decisions concerning policy and operations, including ones entailing serious risk, are not as such in the lawyer's province. Paragraph (b) makes clear, however, that when the lawyer knows that the organization is likely to be substantially injured by action of an officer or other constituent that violates a legal obligation to the organization or is in violation of law that might be imputed to the organization, the lawyer must proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best interest of the organization. As defined in Rule 1.0(f), knowledge can be inferred from circumstances, and a lawyer cannot ignore the obvious.	~~[3]~~ When constituents of ~~the an~~ organization make decisions for it, ~~the decisions a lawyer~~ ordinarily must ~~be accepted by~~ accept those lawyer decisions even if their utility or prudence is doubtful. ~~It is not within the lawyer's province to make decisions on behalf of the organization~~ concerning policy and operations, including ones entailing serious risk, ~~are not as such in the lawyer's province. Paragraph (b) makes clear, however, that when the~~. A lawyer, however, has a duty to inform the client of significant developments related to the representation under Rule 1.4 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(m). Paragraph (b) involves one aspect of that duty. It applies when a lawyer knows that the organization is likely to be substantially injured by action of an officer or other constituent of the organization intends to engage, is engaging, or has engaged in conduct that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know (i) violates a legal obligation to the organization or is in a violation of law that might be imputed reasonably imputable to the organization, and (ii) is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization. In those circumstances, the lawyer must proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best lawful interest of the organization.	Comment [4] is based on Model Rule 1.13, cmt. [3]. The first two sentences have been modified to be in the active voice. The third sentence has been added not only to remind lawyers of their duties to inform the client of significant developments, but also to point out that, even if the ultimate decision is the client's, the lawyer generally is obligated to provide the client with information that will enable the client to make an informed decision. The last sentence has been revised to track the modifications to paragraph (b), i.e., the addition of romanettes, to better set forth the trigger for the lawyer's duties to go up the organization ladder.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[5] Paragraph (b) applies when a lawyer knows that an officer or other constituent of the organization intends to engage, is engaging or has engaged in the conduct. Under this knowledge standard, a lawyer is not required to audit the client's activities or initiate an investigation to uncover the existence of such conduct. As defined in Rule 1.0(f) Nevertheless, knowledge can be inferred from circumstances, and a lawyer cannot ignore the obvious.-See Rule 1.0.1(f).	Comment [5] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. The first two sentences clarify that the lawyer is under no duty to investigate his or her client to uncover evidence of wrongdoing. However, the last sentence of the Comment, taken from Model Rule 1.13, cmt. [3], is a reminder that although a lawyer must have actual knowledge of the conduct, the lawyer cannot turn a blind eye to events that indicate a breach of duty or violation of law on the part of a constituent.
	[6] Paragraph (b) distinguishes between knowledge of the conduct and knowledge of the consequences of that conduct. When a lawyer knows of the conduct, the lawyer's obligations under paragraph (b) are triggered when the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the conduct is (i) a violation of a legal obligation to the organization, or a violation of law reasonably imputable to the organization, and (ii) likely to result in substantial injury to the organization. The "knows or reasonably should know" standard requires the lawyer to engage in the level of analysis that a lawyer of reasonable prudence and competence would undertake to ascertain whether the conduct meets the criteria that trigger the lawyer's obligations under paragraph (b).	Comment [6] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It has been added to clarify that, although a lawyer must have actual knowledge of the constituent's action or inaction, (see Explanation for Comment [5]), the lawyer is held to an objective standard in analyzing the situation to determine whether the constituent's action or inaction is a violation of duty or law, and is likely to substantially injure the organizational client.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[4] In determining how to proceed under paragraph (b), the lawyer should give due consideration to the seriousness of the violation and its consequences, the responsibility in the organization and the apparent motivation of the person involved, the policies of the organization concerning such matters, and any other relevant considerations. Ordinarily, referral to a higher authority would be necessary. In some circumstances, however, it may be appropriate for the lawyer to ask the constituent to reconsider the matter; for example, if the circumstances involve a constituent's innocent misunderstanding of law and subsequent acceptance of the lawyer's advice, the lawyer may reasonably conclude that the best interest of the organization does not require that the matter be referred to higher authority. If a constituent persists in conduct contrary to the lawyer's advice, it will be necessary for the lawyer to take steps to have the matter reviewed by a higher authority in the organization. If the matter is of sufficient seriousness and importance or urgency to the organization, referral to higher authority in the organization may be necessary even if the lawyer has not communicated with the constituent. Any measures taken should, to the extent practicable, minimize the risk of revealing information relating to the representation to persons outside the organization. Even in circumstances where a lawyer is not obligated by Rule 1.13 to proceed, a lawyer may bring to the attention of an organizational client, including its highest authority, matters that the lawyer reasonably believes to be of	[4~~7~~] In determining how to proceed under paragraph (b), the lawyer should give due consideration to the seriousness of the violation and its potential consequences, the responsibility in the organization and the apparent motivation of the person involved, the policies of the organization concerning such matters, and any other relevant considerations. Ordinarily, referral to a higher authority would be necessary. In some circumstances, however, it may be appropriate for the lawyer to ask the constituent to reconsider the matter; ~~f.~~ For example, if the circumstances involve a constituent's innocent misunderstanding of law and subsequent acceptance of the lawyer's advice, the lawyer may reasonably conclude that the best interest of the organization does not require that the matter be referred to higher authority. If a constituent persists in conduct contrary to the lawyer's advice, it will be necessary for the lawyer to take steps to have the matter reviewed by a higher authority in the organization. If the matter is of sufficient seriousness and importance or urgency to the organization, referral to higher authority in the organization may be necessary even if the lawyer has not communicated with the constituent. ~~Any measures taken should, to the extent practicable, minimize the risk of revealing information relating to the representation to persons outside the organization. Even in circumstances where a lawyer is not obligated by Rule 1.13 to proceed, a lawyer may bring to the attention of~~ For the responsibility of a subordinate lawyer in	Comment [7] closely follows Model Rule 1.13, cmt. [4]. The last two sentences of the Model Rule comment have been deleted because they are expository practice pointers. In their place, a cross-reference to Rule 5.2, concerning the responsibilities of subordinate lawyers, has been added.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
sufficient importance to warrant doing so in the best interest of the organization.	~~representing an organization, see Rule 5.2, organizational client, including its highest authority, matters that the lawyer reasonably believes to be of sufficient importance to warrant doing so in the best interest of the organization.~~
[5] Paragraph (b) also makes clear that when it is reasonably necessary to enable the organization to address the matter in a timely and appropriate manner, the lawyer must refer the matter to higher authority, including, if warranted by the circumstances, the highest authority that can act on behalf of the organization under applicable law. The organization's highest authority to whom a matter may be referred ordinarily will be the board of directors or similar governing body. However, applicable law may prescribe that under certain conditions the highest authority reposes elsewhere, for example, in the independent directors of a corporation.	~~[5]~~ Paragraph (b) also makes clear that, when it is reasonably necessary to enable the organization to address the matter in a timely and appropriate manner, the lawyer must refer the matter to higher authority, including, if warranted by the circumstances, the highest authority that can act on behalf of the organization under applicable law. The organization's highest authority to whom a matter may be referred ordinarily will be the board of directors or similar governing body. However, applicable law may prescribe that under certain conditions the highest authority reposes elsewhere, for example, in the independent directors of a corporation.	Comment [8] is identical to Model Rule 1.13, cmt. [5].

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[9] Even in circumstances where a lawyer is not obligated to proceed in accordance with paragraph (b), a lawyer may bring to the attention of an organizational client, including its highest authority, matters that the lawyer reasonably believes to be of sufficient importance to warrant doing so in the best interest of the organization. For example, if a lawyer acting on behalf of an organizational client knows that an actual or apparent agent of the organization acts or intends or refuses to act in a matter related to the representation in a manner that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is a violation of a legal duty to the organization or a violation of law reasonably imputable to the organization, but the lawyer does not know or reasonably should know that such conduct is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, paragraph (b) does not apply. Nevertheless, in such circumstances, subject to Business and Professions Code section 6068(e)(1), the lawyer may take such actions as appear to the lawyer to be in the best lawful interest of the organization. Such actions may include among others (i) urging reconsideration of the matter while explaining its likely consequences to the organization; or (ii) referring the matter to a higher authority in the organization, including, if warranted by the seriousness of the matter, to the highest authority, as determined by applicable law, that can act on behalf of the organization.	Comment [9] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It has been added to explain several alternatives a lawyer might take in order to vindicate the lawyer's duty to act "in the best lawful interest of the organization" under the conditions of paragraph (b). Much of the language included here can be found in current California rule 3-600(B). See also Explanation of Changes for paragraph (b) concerning the use of a "knows or reasonably should know" standard.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[8]¹ A lawyer who reasonably believes that he or she has been discharged because of the lawyer's actions taken pursuant to paragraph (b) or (c), or who withdraws in circumstances that require or permit the lawyer to take action under either of these paragraphs, must proceed as the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to assure that the organization's highest authority is informed of the lawyer's discharge or withdrawal.	~~[8]~~¹⁰ A lawyer who reasonably believes that he or she has been discharged because of the lawyer's actions taken pursuant to paragraph (b) ~~or (c)~~, or who resigns or withdraws ~~in circumstances that require or permit the lawyer to take action under either of these paragraphs~~under circumstances described in paragraph (d), must proceed as the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to assure that the organization's highest authority is informed of the lawyer's discharge or withdrawal ~~and the reason for the lawyer's discharge or withdrawal~~.	Comment [10] is based on Model Rule 1.13, cmt. [8]. It is intended to provide guidance to lawyers on how to proceed under paragraph (e). The comment has been modified to conform to proposed paragraph (d), which diverges from the Model Rule. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (e).
	[11]Proceeding in the best lawful interest of the organization under this Rule does not authorize a lawyer to substitute the lawyer's judgment for that of the organization or to take action on behalf of the organization independently of the direction the lawyer receives from the highest authorized constituent overseeing the particular engagement. In determining how to proceed in the best lawful interests of the organization, a lawyer should consider the extent to which the organization should be informed of the circumstances, the actions taken by the organization with respect to the matter and the direction the lawyer has received from the organizational client.	Comment [11] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It has been added to remind lawyers that they are not authorized to substitute their judgment for that of the organization's constituents. See also Comment [4] and the Explanation of Changes thereto.

¹ Commission Note: The Commission recommends a slight reorganization of the proposed counterparts to Model Rule 1.13, cmts. [6] and [7]. Therefore, those Model Rule comments are found below, following proposed Comment [11].

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Relation to Other Rules [6] The authority and responsibility provided in this Rule are concurrent with the authority and responsibility provided in other Rules. In particular, this Rule does not limit or expand the lawyer's responsibility under Rules 1.8, 1.16, 3.3 or 4.1. Paragraph (c) of this Rule supplements Rule 1.6(b) by providing an additional basis upon which the lawyer may reveal information relating to the representation, but does not modify, restrict, or limit the provisions of Rule 1.6(b)(1) - (6). Under paragraph (c) the lawyer may reveal such information only when the organization's highest authority insists upon or fails to address threatened or ongoing action that is clearly a violation of law, and then only to the extent the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to prevent reasonably certain substantial injury to the organization. It is not necessary that the lawyer's services be used in furtherance of the violation, but it is required that the matter be related to the lawyer's representation of the organization. If the lawyer's services are being used by an organization to further a crime or fraud by the organization, Rules 1.6(b)(2) and 1.6(b)(3) may permit the lawyer to disclose confidential information. In such circumstances Rule 1.2(d) may also be applicable, in which event, withdrawal from the representation under Rule 1.16(a)(1) may be required.	Relation to Other Rules ~~[6]~~^[12] The authority and responsibility provided in this Rule are concurrent with the authority and responsibility provided in other Rules. In particular, this Rule does not limit or expand the lawyer's responsibility under Rules 1.4, 1.6, 1.8, 1.16, 3.3, or 4.1, or the 1.8 series of rules. ~~Paragraph (c) of this Rule supplements Rule 1.6(b) by providing an additional basis upon which the lawyer may reveal information relating to the representation, but does not modify, restrict, or limit the provisions of Rule 1.6(b)(1) - (6). Under paragraph (c) the lawyer may reveal such information only when the organization's highest authority insists upon or fails to address threatened or ongoing action that is clearly a violation of law, and then only to the extent the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to prevent reasonably certain substantial injury to the organization. It is not necessary that the lawyer's services be used in furtherance of the violation, but it is required that the matter be related to the lawyer's representation of the organization. If the lawyer's services are being used by an organization to further a crime or fraud by the organization, Rules 1.6(b)(2) and 1.6(b)(3) may permit the lawyer to disclose confidential information. In such circumstances Rule 1.2(d) may also be applicable, in which event, withdrawal from the representation under Rule 1.16(a)(1) may be required.~~	Comment [12] is based on the first two sentences of Model Rule 1.13, cmt. [6]. References to other rules that are applicable in the organizational context and are not superseded by proposed Rule 1.13 have been added. The reference to "1.8" has been replaced by a reference to "the 1.8 series of rules" because of the numbering convention the Commission recommends for those unrelated conflicts rules. The remainder of the Model Rule comment has been deleted because it addresses paragraphs (c) and (d) of the Model Rule, which the Commission has recommended be rejected. See also Explanation for Model Rule 1.13, cmt. [7].

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[7] Paragraph (d) makes clear that the authority of a lawyer to disclose information relating to a representation in circumstances described in paragraph (c) does not apply with respect to information relating to a lawyer's engagement by an organization to investigate an alleged violation of law or to defend the organization or an officer, employee or other person associated with the organization against a claim arising out of an alleged violation of law. This is necessary in order to enable organizational clients to enjoy the full benefits of legal counsel in conducting an investigation or defending against a claim.	~~[7] Paragraph (d) makes clear that the authority of a lawyer to disclose information relating to a representation in circumstances described in paragraph (c) does not apply with respect to information relating to a lawyer's engagement by an organization to investigate an alleged violation of law or to defend the organization or an officer, employee or other person associated with the organization against a claim arising out of an alleged violation of law. This is necessary in order to enable organizational clients to enjoy the full benefits of legal counsel in conducting an investigation or defending against a claim.~~	The Commission recommends rejection of Model Rule 1.13, cmt. [7], because it relates to paragraphs (c) and (d) of Model Rule 1.13, which the Commission has recommended be rejected. See also Explanation for Model Rule 1.13, cmt. [7].

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[13] Absent circumstances that would require withdrawal under paragraph (d), the lawyer may continue to represent an organizational client if, despite the lawyer's actions under paragraph (b), the constituent continues to insist on or continues to act or refuse to act in a manner that triggers the application of paragraph (b). Paragraph (d) confirms that a lawyer may not withdraw from representing an organization unless the lawyer is permitted or required to do so under Rule 1.16. Where the lawyer continues to represent the organization, the lawyer must proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best lawful interests of the organization, including continuing to urge reconsideration, where appropriate. If the lawyer's services are being used by an organization to further a crime or fraud by the organization, Rule 1.2.1 [1.2(d)] may also be applicable, in which event the lawyer may be required to withdraw from the representation under Rule 1.16(a)(1).	Comment [13] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It has been added to provide guidance to lawyers proceeding under paragraph (d).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Government Agency [9] The duty defined in this Rule applies to governmental organizations. Defining precisely the identity of the client and prescribing the resulting obligations of such lawyers may be more difficult in the government context and is a matter beyond the scope of these Rules. See Scope [18]. Although in some circumstances the client may be a specific agency, it may also be a branch of government, such as the executive branch, or the government as a whole. For example, if the action or failure to act involves the head of a bureau, either the department of which the bureau is a part or the relevant branch of government may be the client for purposes of this Rule. Moreover, in a matter involving the conduct of government officials, a government lawyer may have authority under applicable law to question such conduct more extensively than that of a lawyer for a private organization in similar circumstances. Thus, when the client is a governmental organization, a different balance may be appropriate between maintaining confidentiality and assuring that the wrongful act is prevented or rectified, for public business is involved. In addition, duties of lawyers employed by the government or lawyers in military service may be defined by statutes and regulation. This Rule does not limit that authority. See Scope.	Governmental Agency Organizations [9]~~[14]~~ ~~The duty defined in this Rule applies to In representing governmental organizations. Defining, it may be more difficult to define~~ precisely the identity of the client and prescribing the resulting obligations of such lawyers may be more difficult in the government context and is a matter~~the lawyer's obligations. However, those matters are~~ beyond the scope of these Rules. ~~[See Scope [18].]~~ Although in some circumstances the client may be a specific agency, it may also be a branch of government, such as the executive branch, or the government as a whole. ~~For example, if the action or failure to act involves the head of a bureau, either the department of which the bureau is a part or the relevant branch of government may be the client for purposes of this Rule.~~ Moreover, in a matter involving the conduct of government officials, a government lawyer may have authority under applicable law to question such conduct more extensively than that of a lawyer for a private organization in similar circumstances. ~~Thus, when the client is a governmental organization, a different balance may be appropriate between maintaining confidentiality and assuring that the wrongful act is prevented or rectified, for public business is involved.~~ In addition, duties of lawyers employed by the government or lawyers in military service may be defined by statutes and regulations. ~~See Scope~~ This Rule does not limit that authority.	The title of this section of the Comment has been revised to conform to the terms used in the following comment. Comment [14] is based on Model Rule 1.13, cmt. [9], with some revisions. The first two sentences have been revised for clarity. The references to "Scope [18]" and "Scope" have been deleted because the Commission does not recommend the adoption of the Scope section of the Model Rules. See Introduction and Explanation of Changes for proposed Rule 1.0 ("Purpose and Scope of the Rules of Professional Conduct"). The Commission recommends substituting Rule 1.0 for the concepts found in the Preamble and Scope of the Model Rules. Finally, the next to last sentence of the Model Rule comment has been deleted. The Commission has recommended that Model Rule 1.13(c) be rejected, so disclosure outside the organization is not permitted.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[15] Although this Rule does not authorize a governmental organization's lawyer to act as a whistle-blower in violation of Business and Professions Code section 6068(e)(1) or Rule 1.6, a governmental organization has the option of establishing internal organizational rules and procedures that identify an official, agency, organization, or other person to serve as the designated recipient of whistle-blower reports from the organization's lawyers.	Comment [15] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It has been added to clarify that although proposed Rule 1.13 does not permit reporting outside an organizational client, a governmental organization can establish procedures for lawyers to report misconduct within the organization.
Clarifying the Lawyer's Role [10] There are times when the organization's interest may be or become adverse to those of one or more of its constituents. In such circumstances the lawyer should advise any constituent, whose interest the lawyer finds adverse to that of the organization of the conflict or potential conflict of interest, that the lawyer cannot represent such constituent, and that such person may wish to obtain independent representation. Care must be taken to assure that the individual understands that, when there is such adversity of interest, the lawyer for the organization cannot provide legal representation for that constituent individual, and that discussions between the lawyer for the organization and the individual may not be privileged.	Clarifying the Lawyer's Role ~~[10]~~¹⁶ There are times when the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the organization's interest may be or become adverse to those of one or more of its constituents or when the constituent with whom the lawyer is communicating mistakenly believes that the lawyer has formed a lawyer-client relationship with that constituent. ~~↓ Under paragraph (f),~~ in such circumstances the lawyer ~~should advise any constituent, whose interest the lawyer finds adverse to that of the organization of the conflict or potential conflict of interest,~~ must not mislead the constituent into believing that a lawyer-client relationship exists between the lawyer and the constituent when such is not the case and shall make a reasonable effort to correct a constituent's mistaken belief in that regard. In such circumstances, the lawyer must advise the	Comment [16] is based on Model Rule 1.13, cmt. [10]. The Comment has been revised to conform to the revisions made to Model Rule 1.13(f). See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (f), above.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	constituent that the lawyer ~~cannot represent such constituent, and that such person may wish to obtain independent representation. Care must be taken to assure that the individual understands that, when there is such adversity of interest, the lawyer for the organization cannot provide legal representation for that constituent individual, and that discussions~~does not represent the constituent and that communications between the lawyer ~~for and the constituent are not confidential as to~~ the organization and ~~the individual~~ may be disclosed to the organization or used for the benefit of the organization. See Rule 4.3.~~not be privileged.~~
[11] Whether such a warning should be given by the lawyer for the organization to any constituent individual may turn on the facts of each case.	~~[11] Whether such a warning should be given by the lawyer for the organization to any constituent individual may turn on the facts of each case.~~	The Commission recommends deleting Model Rule 1.13, cmt. [11], because it states the obvious.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Dual Representation [12] Paragraph (g) recognizes that a lawyer for an organization may also represent a principal officer or major shareholder.	Dual Representation [12~~17~~] Paragraph (g) ~~recognizes that a~~allows lawyer ~~for~~ to represent both an organization ~~may also represent a principal officer or major shareholder.~~ and a constituent of an organization in the same matter, so long as the lawyer complies with these Rules, including Rules 1.7, 1.8.2, 1.8.6, and 1.8.7. Paragraph (g) requires that the organization's consent to dual representation of the organization and a constituent of the organization must be provided by someone other than the constituent who is to be represented. When there is no appropriate official of the organization to provide consent and the appropriate body of the organization is deadlocked, consent may be given by the shareholders of the organization to the extent allowed by law or by the rules or regulations governing the conduct of the organization's affairs. When there is no appropriate official, body or ownership group that can consent for the organization, the constituent to be represented in the dual representation may provide such consent in some cases. As used in this Rule, "shareholder" includes shareholders of a corporation, members of an association or limited liability company, or partners in a partnership.	Comments [17] and [18] expand upon the terse Model Rule Comment [12] to provide guidance concerning an issue that often arises. The guidance provided in these comments is derived from State Bar Formal Opn. 1999-153.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[18]This Rule does not prohibit lawyers from representing both an organization and a constituent of an organization in separate matters, so long as the lawyer has addressed the conflicts of interest that may arise. ~~{(See State Bar Formal Opn. 2003-163.)}~~ In dealing with a close corporation or small association, lawyers commonly perform professional engagements for both the organization and its major constituents. When a change in control occurs or is threatened, a lawyer's duties as counsel for the organization may preclude the lawyer from representing the organization's constituents in matters related to control of the organization. In resolving such multiple relationships, lawyers must rely on case law. (See Goldstein v. Lees (1975) 46 Cal.App.3d 614 [120 Cal.Rptr. 253]; Woods v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal.App.3d 931 [197 Cal.Rptr. 185]; In re Banks (1978) 283 Ore. 459 [584 P.2d 284]; 1 A.L.R.4th 1105.) Similar issues can arise in a derivative action. (See Forrest v. Baeza (1997) 58 Cal.App.4th 65 [67 Cal.Rptr.2d 857].)	See Explanation of Changes for Comment [17]. The case law citations after the next to last sentence are intended to provide specific examples of the kinds of situations that often require resolution in the organizational context. The last sentence replaces Model Rule 1.13, cmts. [13] and [14], concerning derivative actions. The Commission recommends the rejection of those comments in favor of this sentence and citation. Suitable guidance concerning a lawyer's duties when involved in a derivative action is beyond the scope of a rule comment.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.13 Organization as Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Derivative Actions [13] Under generally prevailing law, the shareholders or members of a corporation may bring suit to compel the directors to perform their legal obligations in the supervision of the organization. Members of unincorporated associations have essentially the same right. Such an action may be brought nominally by the organization, but usually is, in fact, a legal controversy over management of the organization.	~~Derivative Actions~~ ~~[13] Under generally prevailing law, the shareholders or members of a corporation may bring suit to compel the directors to perform their legal obligations in the supervision of the organization. Members of unincorporated associations have essentially the same right. Such an action may be brought nominally by the organization, but usually is, in fact, a legal controversy over management of the organization.~~	See Explanation of Changes for Comment [18], paragraph 3.
[14] The question can arise whether counsel for the organization may defend such an action. The proposition that the organization is the lawyer's client does not alone resolve the issue. Most derivative actions are a normal incident of an organization's affairs, to be defended by the organization's lawyer like any other suit. However, if the claim involves serious charges of wrongdoing by those in control of the organization, a conflict may arise between the lawyer's duty to the organization and the lawyer's relationship with the board. In those circumstances, Rule 1.7 governs who should represent the directors and the organization.	~~[14] The question can arise whether counsel for the organization may defend such an action. The proposition that the organization is the lawyer's client does not alone resolve the issue. Most derivative actions are a normal incident of an organization's affairs, to be defended by the organization's lawyer like any other suit. However, if the claim involves serious charges of wrongdoing by those in control of the organization, a conflict may arise between the lawyer's duty to the organization and the lawyer's relationship with the board. In those circumstances, Rule 1.7 governs who should represent the directors and the organization.~~	See Explanation of Changes for Comment [18], paragraph 3.

Rule ~~3-600~~1.13 Organization as Client
(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

- (a) ~~(A) In representing~~ A lawyer employed or retained by an organization, ~~a member~~ shall conform his or her representation to the concept that the client is the organization itself, acting through its ~~highest~~ duly authorized ~~officer, employee, body, or constituent~~ constituents overseeing the particular engagement.
- (b) If a lawyer representing an organization knows that an officer, employee or other person associated with the organization is acting, intends to act or refuses to act in a matter related to the representation in a manner that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is (i) a violation of a legal obligation to the organization, or a violation of law reasonably imputable to the organization, and (ii) likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, the lawyer shall proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best lawful interest of the organization. Unless the lawyer reasonably believes that it is not necessary in the best lawful interest of the organization to do so, the lawyer shall refer the matter to higher authority in the organization, including, if warranted by the circumstances, to the highest authority that can act on behalf of the organization as determined by applicable law.
- (c) In taking any action pursuant to paragraph (b), the lawyer shall not violate his or her duty of protecting all confidential information as provided in Business and Professions Code section 6068(e)(1).
- (d) If, despite the lawyer's actions in accordance with paragraph (b), the officer, employee or other person insists upon action, or fails to act, in a manner that is a violation of a legal obligation to the organization or a violation of law reasonably imputable to the - organization, and is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, the lawyer shall continue to proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best lawful interests of the organization. The lawyer's response may include the lawyer's right and, where appropriate, duty to resign or withdraw in accordance with Rule 1.16.
- (e) A lawyer who reasonably believes that he or she has been discharged because of the lawyer's actions taken pursuant to paragraph (b), or who resigns or withdraws under circumstances described in paragraph (d), shall proceed as the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to assure that the organization's highest authority is informed of the lawyer's discharge or withdrawal.
- (f) In dealing with an organization's directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders, or other constituents, a lawyer representing the organization shall explain the identity of the lawyer's client whenever the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the organization's interests are adverse to those of the constituent(s) with whom the lawyer is dealing.
- (g) A lawyer representing an organization may also represent any of its directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders or other constituents, subject to the provisions of Rules 1.7, 1.8.2, 1.8.6, and 1.8.7. If the organization's consent to the dual representation is required by any of these Rules, the consent shall be given by an appropriate official or body of the organization other than the individual who is to be represented, or by the shareholders.

COMMENT

The Entity as the Client

- [1] This Rule applies to all forms of legal organizations such as corporations, limited liability companies, partnerships, and incorporated and unincorporated associations. This Rule also applies to governmental organizations. See Comment [13]. An organizational client cannot act except through individuals who are authorized to conduct its affairs. The identity of an organization's constituents will depend on its form, structure, and chosen terminology. For example, in the case of a corporation, constituents include officers, directors, employees and shareholders. In the case of other organizational forms, constituents include the equivalents of officers, directors, employees, and shareholders. Any agent or fiduciary authorized to act on behalf of an organization is a constituent of the organization for purposes of the authorized matter.
- [2] When a lawyer is retained by an organization, the lawyer is required to take direction from and communicate with the constituent(s) authorized by the organization or by law to instruct or communicate with the lawyer with respect to the matter for which the organization has retained the lawyer.
- [3] When a constituent of an organizational client communicates with the organization's lawyer in that constituent's organizational capacity, the communication is protected by Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e)(1). Thus, by way of example, if an organizational client requests its lawyer to investigate allegations of wrongdoing, interviews made in the course of that investigation between the lawyer and the client's employees or other constituents are covered by Rule 1.6 and section 6068(e)(1). This does not mean, however, that constituents of an organizational client are the clients of the lawyer. The lawyer may not disclose to such constituents information relating to the representation except as permitted by Rule 1.6 or by section 6068(e).

- [4] When constituents of an organization make decisions for it, a lawyer ordinarily must accept those decisions even if their utility or prudence is doubtful. It is not within the lawyer's province to make decisions on behalf of the organization concerning policy and operations, including ones entailing serious risk. A lawyer, however, has a duty to inform the client of significant developments related to the representation under Rule 1.4 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(m). Paragraph (b) involves one aspect of that duty. It applies when a lawyer knows that an officer or other constituent of the organization intends to engage, is engaging, or has engaged in conduct that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know (i) violates a legal obligation to the organization or is a violation of law reasonably imputable to the organization, and (ii) is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization. In those circumstances, the lawyer must proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best lawful interest of the organization.
- [5] Paragraph (b) applies when a lawyer knows that an officer or other constituent of the organization intends to engage, is engaging or has engaged in the conduct. Under this knowledge standard, a lawyer is not required to audit the client's activities or initiate an investigation to uncover the existence of such conduct. Nevertheless, knowledge can be inferred from circumstances, and a lawyer cannot ignore the obvious. See Rule 1.0.1(f).

[6] Paragraph (b) distinguishes between knowledge of the conduct and knowledge of the consequences of that conduct. When a lawyer knows of the conduct, the lawyer's obligations under paragraph (b) are triggered when the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the conduct is (i) a violation of a legal obligation to the organization, or a violation of law reasonably imputable to the organization, and (ii) likely to result in substantial injury to the organization. The "knows or reasonably should know" standard requires the lawyer to engage in the level of analysis that a lawyer of reasonable prudence and competence would undertake to ascertain whether the conduct meets the criteria that trigger the lawyer's obligations under paragraph (b).

[7] In determining how to proceed under paragraph (b), the lawyer should give due consideration to the seriousness of the violation and its potential consequences, the responsibility in the organization and the apparent motivation of the person involved, the policies of the organization concerning such matters, and any other relevant considerations. Ordinarily, referral to a higher authority would be necessary. In some circumstances, however, it may be appropriate for the lawyer to ask the constituent to reconsider the matter. For example, if the circumstances involve a constituent's innocent misunderstanding of law and subsequent acceptance of the lawyer's advice, the lawyer may reasonably conclude that the best interest of the organization does not require that the matter be referred to higher authority. If a constituent persists in conduct contrary to the lawyer's advice, it will be necessary for the lawyer to take steps to have the matter reviewed by a higher authority in the organization. If the matter is of sufficient seriousness and importance or urgency to the organization, referral to higher authority in the organization may be necessary even if the lawyer has not communicated with the constituent. For the responsibility of a subordinate lawyer in representing an organization, see Rule 5.2.

[8] Paragraph (b) also makes clear that, when it is reasonably necessary to enable the organization to address the matter in a timely and appropriate manner, the lawyer must refer the matter to higher authority, including, if warranted by the circumstances, the highest authority that can act on behalf of the organization under applicable law. The organization's highest authority to whom a matter may be referred ordinarily will be the board of directors or similar governing body. However, applicable law may prescribe that under certain conditions the highest authority reposes elsewhere, for example, in the independent directors of a corporation.

[9] ~~(B) If~~ Even in circumstances where a ~~member~~ lawyer is not obligated to proceed in accordance with paragraph (b), a lawyer may bring to the attention of an organizational client, including its highest authority, matters that the lawyer reasonably believes to be of sufficient importance to warrant doing so in the best interest of the organization. For example, if a lawyer acting on behalf of an ~~organization~~ organizational client knows that an actual or apparent agent of the organization acts or intends or refuses to act in a matter related to the representation in a manner that ~~is~~ the lawyer knows or ~~may be~~ reasonably should know is a violation of a legal duty to the organization or a violation of law reasonably imputable to the organization, ~~but the lawyer does not know or in a manner which~~ reasonably should know that such conduct is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, ~~the member shall~~ paragraph (b) does not violate his or her duty of protecting all confidential information as provided apply. Nevertheless, in ~~Business and Professions Code section 6068~~ such circumstances, ~~subdivision (e). Subject~~ subject to Business and Professions Code section 6068, ~~subdivision (e)~~(1), the ~~member~~lawyer may take such actions as appear to the ~~member~~lawyer to be in the best lawful interest of the organization. Such actions may include among others: (i) urging reconsideration of the matter while explaining its likely consequences to the organization; or (ii) referring the matter to a higher authority in the organization, including, if warranted by the seriousness of the matter, to the highest authority, as determined by applicable law, that can act on behalf of the organization.

~~(1) — Urging reconsideration of the matter while explaining its likely consequences to the organization; or~~

~~(2) — Referring the matter to the next higher authority in the organization, including, if warranted by the seriousness of the matter, referral to the highest internal authority that can act on behalf of the organization.~~

~~(C) — If, despite the member's actions in accordance with paragraph (B), the highest authority that can act on behalf of the organization insists upon action or a refusal to act that is a violation of law and is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, the member's response is limited to the member's right, and, where appropriate, duty to resign in accordance with rule 3-700.~~

~~(D) — In dealing with an organization's directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders, or other constituents, a member shall explain the identity of the client for whom the member acts, whenever it is or becomes apparent that the organization's interests are or may become adverse to those of the constituent(s) with whom the member is dealing. The member shall not mislead such a constituent into~~

~~believing that the constituent may communicate confidential information to the member in a way that will not be used in the organization's interest if that is or becomes adverse to the constituent.~~

[10] A lawyer who reasonably believes that he or she has been discharged because of the lawyer's actions taken pursuant to paragraph (b), or who resigns or withdraws under circumstances described in paragraph (d), must proceed as the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to assure that the organization's highest authority is informed of the lawyer's discharge or withdrawal and the reason for the lawyer's discharge or withdrawal.

[11] Proceeding in the best lawful interest of the organization under this Rule does not authorize a lawyer to substitute the lawyer's judgment for that of the organization or to take action on behalf of the organization independently of the direction the lawyer receives from the highest authorized constituent overseeing the particular engagement. In determining how to proceed in the best lawful interests of the organization, a lawyer should consider the extent to which the organization should be informed of the circumstances, the actions taken by the organization with respect to the matter and the direction the lawyer has received from the organizational client.

Relation to Other Rules

[12] The authority and responsibility provided in this Rule are concurrent with the authority and responsibility provided in other Rules. In particular, this Rule does not limit or expand the lawyer's responsibility under Rules 1.4, 1.6, 1.16, 3.3, [4.1], or the 1.8 series of Rules.

[13] Absent circumstances that would require withdrawal under paragraph (d), the lawyer may continue to represent an organizational client if, despite the lawyer's actions under paragraph (b), the constituent continues to insist on or continues to act or refuse to act in a manner that triggers the application of paragraph (b). Paragraph (d) confirms that a lawyer may not withdraw from representing an organization unless the lawyer is permitted or required to do so under Rule 1.16. Where the lawyer continues to represent the organization, the lawyer must proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best lawful interests of the organization, including continuing to urge reconsideration, where appropriate. If the lawyer's services are being used by an organization to further a crime or fraud by the organization, Rule 1.2(d) may also be applicable, in which event the lawyer may be required to withdraw from the representation under Rule 1.16(a)(1).

Governmental Organizations

[14] In representing governmental organizations, it may be more difficult to define precisely the identity of the client and the lawyer's obligations. However, those matters are beyond the scope of these Rules. Although in some circumstances the client may be a specific agency, it may also be a branch of government, such as the executive branch, or the government as a whole. For example, if the action or failure to act involves the head of a bureau, either the department of which the bureau is a part or the relevant branch of government may be the client for purposes of this Rule. Moreover, in a matter involving the conduct of government officials, a government lawyer may have authority under applicable law to question such conduct more extensively than that of a lawyer for a private organization in similar circumstances. In addition, duties of lawyers employed by the government or lawyers in military service may be defined by statutes and regulations. This Rule does not limit that authority.

[15] Although this Rule does not authorize a governmental organization's lawyer to act as a whistle-blower in violation of Business and Professions Code section 6068(e)(1) or Rule 1.6, a governmental organization has the option of establishing internal organizational rules and procedures that identify an official, agency, organization, or other person to serve as the designated recipient of whistle-blower reports from the organization's lawyers.

Clarifying the Lawyer's Role

[16] There are times when the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the organization's interest may be or become adverse to those of one or more of its constituents or when the constituent with whom the lawyer is communicating mistakenly believes that the lawyer has formed a lawyer-client relationship with that constituent. Under paragraph (f), in such circumstances the lawyer must not mislead the constituent into believing that a lawyer-client relationship exists between the lawyer and the constituent when such is not the case and shall make a reasonable effort to correct a constituent's mistaken belief in that regard. In such circumstances, the lawyer must advise the constituent that the lawyer does not represent the constituent and that communications between the lawyer and the constituent are not confidential as to the organization and may be disclosed to the organization or used for the benefit of the organization. See Rule 4.3

Dual Representation

(E) A member representing^[17] Paragraph (g) allows lawyers to represent both an organization ~~may also represent any~~ and a constituent of its ~~directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders, or other constituents, subject to an organization in the provisions of rule 3-310~~ same matter, so long as the lawyer complies with these Rules, including Rules 1.7, 1.8.2, 1.8.6, and 1.8.7. ¶ Paragraph (g) requires that the organization's consent to the dual representation ~~is required by rule 3-310, of the consent shall be given by an appropriate organization and a constituent of the organization must be provided by someone other than the individual or constituent who is to be represented.~~ When there is no appropriate official of the organization to provide consent and the appropriate body of the organization is deadlocked, consent may be given by the shareholders of the organization to the extent allowed by law or by the ~~shareholder(s)~~ rules or regulations governing the conduct of the organization's affairs. When there is no appropriate official, body or ownership group that can consent for the organization, the constituent to be represented in the dual representation may provide such consent in some cases. As used in this Rule, "shareholder" includes shareholders of a corporation, members of an association or limited liability company, or partners in a partnership.

Discussion:-

Rule 3-600 is not intended to enmesh members in the intricacies of the entity and aggregate theories of partnership.

Rule 3-600 is not intended to ~~prohibit members from representing both an organization and other parties connected with it, as for instance (as simply~~

~~one example) in establishing employee benefit packages for closely held corporations or professional partnerships.~~

[18] This Rule 3-600 ~~is~~ does not intended to create or to validate artificial distinctions between entities ~~prohibit lawyers from representing both an organization and their officers, employees, or members, nor is it the purpose a constituent of an organization in separate matters, so long as the rule to deny lawyer has addressed the existence or importance conflicts of such formal distinctions interest that may arise.~~ In dealing with a close corporation or small association, ~~members~~ lawyers commonly perform professional engagements for both the organization and its major constituents. When a change in control occurs or is threatened, ~~members are faced with complex decisions involving personal and institutional relationships and loyalties and have frequently had difficulty~~ a lawyer's duties as counsel for the organization may preclude the lawyer from representing the organization's constituents in ~~perceiving their correct duty matters related to control of the organization. In resolving such multiple relationships, lawyers must rely on case law.~~ (See ~~People ex rel Deukmejian v. Brown (1981) 29 Cal.3d 150 [172 Cal.Rptr. 478]; Goldstein v. Lees (1975) 46 Cal.App.3d 614 [120 Cal.Rptr. 253]; Woods v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal.App.3d 931 [197 Cal.Rptr. 185]; In re Banks (1978) 283 Ore. 459 [584 P.2d 284]; 1 A.L.R.4th 1105.) In resolving such multiple relationships, members must rely on case law.~~ Similar issues can arise in a derivative action. (See Forrest v. Baeza (1997) 58 Cal.App.4th 65 [67 Cal.Rptr.2d 857].)

Rule 1.13 Organization as Client
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) A lawyer employed or retained by an organization shall conform his or her representation to the concept that the client is the organization itself, acting through its duly authorized constituents overseeing the particular engagement.
- (b) If a lawyer representing an organization knows that an officer, employee or other person associated with the organization is acting, intends to act or refuses to act in a matter related to the representation in a manner that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is (i) a violation of a legal obligation to the organization, or a violation of law reasonably imputable to the organization, and (ii) likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, the lawyer shall proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best lawful interest of the organization. Unless the lawyer reasonably believes that it is not necessary in the best lawful interest of the organization to do so, the lawyer shall refer the matter to higher authority in the organization, including, if warranted by the circumstances, to the highest authority that can act on behalf of the organization as determined by applicable law.
- (c) In taking any action pursuant to paragraph (b), the lawyer shall not violate his or her duty of protecting all information protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e).
- (d) If, despite the lawyer's actions in accordance with paragraph (b), the officer, employee or other person insists upon action, or fails to act, in a manner that is a violation of a legal obligation to the organization or a violation of law reasonably imputable to the organization, and is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, the lawyer shall continue to proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best lawful interests of the organization. The lawyer's response may include the lawyer's right and, where appropriate, duty to resign or withdraw in accordance with Rule 1.16.
- (e) A lawyer who reasonably believes that he or she has been discharged because of the lawyer's actions taken pursuant to paragraph (b), or who resigns or withdraws under circumstances described in paragraph (d), shall proceed as the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to assure that the organization's highest authority is informed of the lawyer's discharge or withdrawal.
- (f) In dealing with an organization's directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders, or other constituents, a lawyer representing the organization shall explain the identity of the lawyer's client whenever the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the organization's interests are adverse to those of the constituent(s) with whom the lawyer is dealing.
- (g) A lawyer representing an organization may also represent any of its directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders or other constituents, subject to the provisions of Rules 1.7, 1.8.2, 1.8.6, and 1.8.7. If the organization's consent to the dual representation is required by any of these Rules, the consent shall be given by an appropriate official or body of the organization other than the individual who is to be represented, or by the shareholders.

COMMENT

The Entity as the Client

- [1] This Rule applies to all forms of legal organizations such as corporations, limited liability companies, partnerships, and incorporated and unincorporated associations. This Rule also applies to governmental organizations. See Comment [14]. An organizational client cannot act except through individuals who are authorized to conduct its affairs. The identity of an organization's constituents will depend on its form, structure, and chosen terminology. For example, in the case of a corporation, constituents include officers, directors, employees and shareholders. In the case of other organizational forms, constituents include the equivalents of officers, directors, employees, and shareholders. Any agent or fiduciary authorized to act on behalf of an organization is a constituent of the organization for purposes of the authorized matter.
- [2] When a lawyer is retained by an organization, the lawyer is required to take direction from and communicate with the constituent(s) authorized by the organization or by law to instruct or communicate with the lawyer with respect to the matter for which the organization has retained the lawyer.
- [3] When a constituent of an organizational client communicates with the organization's lawyer in that constituent's organizational capacity, the communication is protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6. Thus, by way of example, if an organizational client requests its lawyer to investigate allegations of wrongdoing, interviews made in the course of that investigation between the lawyer and the client's employees or other constituents are covered by section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6. This does not mean, however, that constituents of an organizational client are the clients of the lawyer. The lawyer may not disclose to such constituents information protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6 except as permitted by or by section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6.

- [4] When constituents of an organization make decisions for it, a lawyer ordinarily must accept those decisions even if their utility or prudence is doubtful. It is not within the lawyer's province to make decisions on behalf of the organization concerning policy and operations, including ones entailing serious risk. A lawyer, however, has a duty to inform the client of significant developments related to the representation under Rule 1.4 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(m). Paragraph (b) involves one aspect of that duty. It applies when a lawyer knows that an officer or other constituent of the organization intends to engage, is engaging, or has engaged in conduct that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know (i) violates a legal obligation to the organization or is a violation of law reasonably imputable to the organization, and (ii) is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization. In those circumstances, the lawyer must proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best lawful interest of the organization.
- [5] Paragraph (b) applies when a lawyer knows that an officer or other constituent of the organization intends to engage, is engaging or has engaged in the conduct. Under this knowledge standard, a lawyer is not required to audit the client's activities or initiate an investigation to uncover the existence of such conduct. Nevertheless, knowledge can be inferred from circumstances, and a lawyer cannot ignore the obvious. See Rule 1.0.1(f).

[6] Paragraph (b) distinguishes between knowledge of the conduct and knowledge of the consequences of that conduct. When a lawyer knows of the conduct, the lawyer's obligations under paragraph (b) are triggered when the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the conduct is (i) a violation of a legal obligation to the organization, or a violation of law reasonably imputable to the organization, and (ii) likely to result in substantial injury to the organization. The "knows or reasonably should know" standard requires the lawyer to engage in the level of analysis that a lawyer of reasonable prudence and competence would undertake to ascertain whether the conduct meets the criteria that trigger the lawyer's obligations under paragraph (b).

[7] In determining how to proceed under paragraph (b), the lawyer should give due consideration to the seriousness of the violation and its potential consequences, the responsibility in the organization and the apparent motivation of the person involved, the policies of the organization concerning such matters, and any other relevant considerations. Ordinarily, referral to a higher authority would be necessary. In some circumstances, however, it may be appropriate for the lawyer to ask the constituent to reconsider the matter. For example, if the circumstances involve a constituent's innocent misunderstanding of law and subsequent acceptance of the lawyer's advice, the lawyer may reasonably conclude that the best interest of the organization does not require that the matter be referred to higher authority. If a constituent persists in conduct contrary to the lawyer's advice, it will be necessary for the lawyer to take steps to have the matter reviewed by a higher authority in the organization. If the matter is of sufficient seriousness and importance or urgency to the organization, referral to higher authority in the organization may be necessary even if the lawyer has not communicated with the constituent. For the responsibility of a subordinate lawyer in representing an organization, see Rule 5.2.

[8] Paragraph (b) also makes clear that, when it is reasonably necessary to enable the organization to address the matter in a timely and appropriate manner, the lawyer must refer the matter to higher authority, including, if warranted by the circumstances, the highest authority that can act on behalf of the organization under applicable law. The organization's highest authority to whom a matter may be referred ordinarily will be the board of directors or similar governing body. However, applicable law may prescribe that under certain conditions the highest authority reposes elsewhere, for example, in the independent directors of a corporation.

[9] Even in circumstances where a lawyer is not obligated to proceed in accordance with paragraph (b), a lawyer may bring to the attention of an organizational client, including its highest authority, matters that the lawyer reasonably believes to be of sufficient importance to warrant doing so in the best interest of the organization. For example, if a lawyer acting on behalf of an organizational client knows that an actual or apparent agent of the organization acts or intends or refuses to act in a matter related to the representation in a manner that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is a violation of a legal duty to the organization or a violation of law reasonably imputable to the organization, but the lawyer does not know or reasonably should know that such conduct is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, paragraph (b) does not apply. Nevertheless, in such circumstances, subject to Business and Professions Code section 6068(e), the lawyer may take such actions as appear to the lawyer to be in the best lawful interest of the organization. Such actions may include among others (i) urging reconsideration of the matter while explaining its likely consequences to the organization; or (ii) referring the matter to a higher authority in the organization, including, if warranted by the seriousness of the matter, to the highest authority, as determined by applicable law, that can act on behalf of the organization.

- [10] A lawyer who reasonably believes that he or she has been discharged because of the lawyer's actions taken pursuant to paragraph (b), or who resigns or withdraws under circumstances described in paragraph (d), must proceed as the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to assure that the organization's highest authority is informed of the lawyer's discharge or withdrawal and the reason for the lawyer's discharge or withdrawal.
- [11] Proceeding in the best lawful interest of the organization under this Rule does not authorize a lawyer to substitute the lawyer's judgment for that of the organization or to take action on behalf of the organization independently of the direction the lawyer receives from the highest authorized constituent overseeing the particular engagement. In determining how to proceed in the best lawful interests of the organization, a lawyer should consider the extent to which the organization should be informed of the circumstances, the actions taken by the organization with respect to the matter and the direction the lawyer has received from the organizational client.

Relation to Other Rules

- [12] The authority and responsibility provided in this Rule are concurrent with the authority and responsibility provided in other Rules. In particular, this Rule does not limit or expand the lawyer's responsibility under Rules 1.4, 1.6, 1.16, 3.3, or the 1.8 series of Rules.

- [13] Absent circumstances that would require withdrawal under paragraph (d), the lawyer may continue to represent an organizational client if, despite the lawyer's actions under paragraph (b), the constituent continues to insist on or continues to act or refuse to act in a manner that triggers the application of paragraph (b). Paragraph (d) confirms that a lawyer may not withdraw from representing an organization unless the lawyer is permitted or required to do so under Rule 1.16. Where the lawyer continues to represent the organization, the lawyer must proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best lawful interests of the organization, including continuing to urge reconsideration, where appropriate. If the lawyer's services are being used by an organization to further a crime or fraud by the organization, Rule 1.2(d) may also be applicable, in which event the lawyer may be required to withdraw from the representation under Rule 1.16(a)(1).

Governmental Organizations

- [14] In representing governmental organizations, it may be more difficult to define precisely the identity of the client and the lawyer's obligations. However, those matters are beyond the scope of these Rules. Although in some circumstances the client may be a specific agency, it may also be a branch of government, such as the executive branch, or the government as a whole. For example, if the action or failure to act involves the head of a bureau, either the department of which the bureau is a part or the relevant branch of government may be the client for purposes of this Rule. Moreover, in a matter involving the conduct of government officials, a government lawyer may have authority under applicable law to question such conduct more extensively than that of a lawyer for a private organization in similar circumstances. In addition, duties of lawyers employed by the government or lawyers in military service may be defined by statutes and regulations. This Rule does not limit that authority.

- [15] Although this Rule does not authorize a governmental organization's lawyer to act as a whistle-blower in violation of Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) or Rule 1.6, a governmental organization has the option of establishing internal organizational rules and procedures that identify an official, agency, organization, or other person to serve as the designated recipient of whistle-blower reports from the organization's lawyers.

Clarifying the Lawyer's Role

- [16] There are times when the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the organization's interest may be or become adverse to those of one or more of its constituents or when the constituent with whom the lawyer is communicating mistakenly believes that the lawyer has formed a lawyer-client relationship with that constituent. Under paragraph (f), in such circumstances the lawyer must not mislead the constituent into believing that a lawyer-client relationship exists between the lawyer and the constituent when such is not the case and shall make a reasonable effort to correct a constituent's mistaken belief in that regard. In such circumstances, the lawyer must advise the constituent that the lawyer does not represent the constituent and that communications between the lawyer and the constituent are not confidential as to the organization and may be disclosed to the organization or used for the benefit of the organization. See Rule 4.3

Dual Representation

- [17] Paragraph (g) allows lawyers to represent both an organization and a constituent of an organization in the same matter, so long as the lawyer complies with these Rules, including Rules 1.7, 1.8.2, 1.8.6, and 1.8.7. Paragraph (g) requires that the organization's consent to dual representation of the organization and a constituent of the organization must be provided by someone other than the constituent who is to be represented. When there is no appropriate official of the organization to provide consent and the appropriate body of the organization is deadlocked, consent may be given by the shareholders of the organization to the extent allowed by law or by the rules or regulations governing the conduct of the organization's affairs. When there is no appropriate official, body or ownership group that can consent for the organization, the constituent to be represented in the dual representation may provide such consent in some cases. As used in this Rule, "shareholder" includes shareholders of a corporation, members of an association or limited liability company, or partners in a partnership.
- [18] This Rule does not prohibit lawyers from representing both an organization and a constituent of an organization in separate matters, so long as the lawyer has addressed the conflicts of interest that may arise. In dealing with a close corporation or small association, lawyers commonly perform professional engagements for both the organization and its major constituents. When a change in control occurs or is threatened, a lawyer's duties as counsel for the organization may preclude the lawyer from representing the organization's constituents in matters related to control of the organization. In resolving such multiple relationships, lawyers must rely on case law. See Goldstein v. Lees (1975) 46 Cal.App.3d 614 [120 Cal.Rptr. 253]; Woods v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal.App.3d 931 [197 Cal.Rptr. 185]; In re Banks (1978) 283 Ore. 459 [584 P.2d 284]; 1 A.L.R.4th 1105. Similar issues can arise in a derivative action. See Forrest v. Baeza (1997) 58 Cal.App.4th 65 [67 Cal.Rptr.2d 857].

Rule 1.13. Organization as Client. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 5 Agree = 1 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 1
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	M	Yes		COPRAC agrees that the rule should not permit a lawyer to report outside of the organization as the Model Rule permits. To do so would be contrary to California's statutory protections and historical view on the importance of confidentiality. However, the addition of the objective standard in paragraph (b) is troublesome in that a lawyer could be subject to discipline if he or she "reasonably should have known" that an act is illegal and likely to result in substantial injury to the organization. This language goes beyond both the current California rule and the Model Rule and appears to be unprecedented. What constitutes "reasonably should have known"? Will a tax lawyer be deemed to "reasonably should have known" that an action violates antitrust laws if it is outside the scope of the matter on which he or she is working? If he or she is working for a national firm with lawyers who practice in such areas, will the lawyer be held to a higher standard (essentially imputing the knowledge of others at the firm to that lawyer)?	No response required. The Commission disagreed and did not make any revisions to the Rule. The Commission believes that requiring a lawyer to act when the lawyer has actual knowledge of a constituent's act or failure to act in a matter that relates to the lawyer's representation and knows or reasonably should know that the conduct meets the criteria under paragraph (b) strikes the proper balance in protecting the organization and the public. Having an objective rather than an actual knowledge standard alerts lawyers that ignoring violations of law that will likely injure the organization is no longer an option. "Reasonably should know" is a defined term in the Rules and means that a lawyer of reasonable prudence and competence would ascertain the matter at issue. See Proposed Rule 1.0(j). "Reasonably" is also a defined term and refers to conduct of a reasonable prudent and competent lawyer. Proposed Rule 1.0(h). Comment [6] (rather than Comment [5]) explains the

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 1.13. Organization as Client.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 5 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 1

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Comment [5] says that a lawyer is not required to audit the client's activities or initiate an investigation, but that statement is directed to the portion of paragraph (b) that deals with knowledge of the conduct (not the consequences thereof). For these reasons, COPRAC believes that knowledge also should be the standard with respect to the consequences of the conduct. Further, paragraph (b) mandates that a lawyer refer such matters to a higher authority in the organization "unless the lawyer reasonably believes that it is not necessary in the best lawful interest of the organization." While urging reconsideration to the constituent of the organization with whom the lawyer is dealing is discussed in Comment [7], it is only mentioned as a possibility "in some circumstances." COPRAC recognizes that some occasions may arise in which reporting up the ladder may be necessary, however, contrary to the suggestion of Comment [7], COPRAC believes that in certain situations, urging reconsideration should be the first response. If the general rule becomes reporting up the ladder, the free flow of communication that is essential to the attorney-client relationship will most certainly be damaged, possibly beyond repair, as the	"reasonably should know" standard in the context of the Rule and advises lawyers to engage in the level of analysis that a lawyer of reasonable prudence and competence would undertake to ascertain whether the conduct meets the criteria under paragraph (b) that requires action on the lawyer's part. See response to Orange County Bar Association (above).

Rule 1.13. Organization as Client. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 5 Agree = 1 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 1
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					constituents with whom the lawyer communicates on a regular basis will think twice about speaking openly with counsel. Consequently, COPRAC believes that urging reconsideration should be included in the text of the rule itself as an optional first step, except in exigent circumstances. Similarly, while paragraph (g) requires independent consent for dual representation, Comment [17] recognizes this is not always possible and, therefore, not always required. COPRAC believes that this exception also should be included in the text of the rule. With regard to Comment [17], COPRAC notes that the third sentence appears to be much more restrictive than the language of paragraph (g) that it is interpreting. Paragraph (g) simply permits shareholders to provide consent to dual representation, whereas Comment [17] implies that shareholders may consent only when there is no official to consent and the board is deadlocked. Neither condition is mandated by the rule, and there is no reason for both to be required.	No change in paragraph (g) is necessary. Paragraph (g) closely tracks Model Rule 1.13(g) and Comment [17], which is derived from State Bar Formal Opinion 1993-153, is sufficient to point out there are circumstances when independent consent may not be possible. No change is necessary. The third sentence in Comment [17] is consistent with paragraph (g). Neither the Rule nor the Comment refers to shareholders. The Rule refers to other official or body of the organization while Comment [17] refers to other constituent of the organization.

Rule 1.13. Organization as Client. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 5 Agree = 1 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 1
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Finally, the last sentence of paragraph (d) says that "[t]he lawyer's response may include the lawyer's right and, where appropriate, duty to resign or withdraw in accordance with Rule 1.16." Comment [13] attempts to rephrase this in the following terms: "Paragraph (d) confirms that a lawyer may not withdraw from representing an organization unless the lawyer is permitted or required to do so under Rule 1.16." However, paragraph (d) does not seem to "confirm" such a restriction, but rather merely notes that the duty to resign or withdraw may be a permissible response. As the sentence appears to be unnecessary to Comment [13], COPRAC suggests that it be deleted.	The Commission agreed and has changed the last sentence in Comment [13] to read: Paragraph (d) confirms that the lawyer's response may include the right, and where appropriate, the duty to resign or withdraw in accordance with Rule 1.6."
2	Hazard, Geoffrey, Deborah Rhode & Richard Zitrin (ethics law professors group)	NI	Yes		It is not possible to expect the Commission to draft Model Rule 1.13 in a way that would enable the whistleblower to ever go outside the organization, as the ABA has allowed in narrow circumstances, due to legislative pre-emption.	No response required.
3	Office of Chief Trial Counsel ("OCTC")	M	Yes	1.13(b)	The phrase "other person associated with the organization" contained in subsection (b) of proposed rule 1.13 is vague and overbroad. Whether a person is "associated" with an organization is open to interpretation and, therefore, potential litigation.	The Commission disagrees and no change to paragraph (b) has been made. The quoted phrase comes directly from Model Rule 1.13(b) and is intended to include constituents of the organization who are not officers or employees.

Rule 1.13. Organization as Client. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 5 Agree = 1 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 1
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					OCTC seeks clarification regarding the meaning of this rule. We interpret the proposed rule to apply equally to in-house counsel and to outside counsel. OCTC wishes to clarify whether that is the intent of the rule. If so, we interpret the rule to impose a duty under certain circumstances for outside counsel to withdraw from employment and for in-house counsel to resign from his or her employer organization. OCTC seeks clarification as to whether that is the intent of the rule or whether there are circumstances in which an in-house counsel's response may be less drastic than resignation from his or her place of employment. If resignation is not necessary, OCTC recommends that information set forth in the Comment's to the rule distinguish the circumstances requiring an in-house counsel's withdrawal from representation of the organization to the in-house counsel's resignation. The Comments are too many and too long. Most of them seem more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	Paragraph (a) expressly provides that the rule applies to lawyers "employed or retained" by the organization. The clear intent of the rule is to apply to all lawyers who represent organizational clients including in-house counsel. Paragraph (d) provides that the lawyer's response "may include the lawyer's right and, where appropriate, duty to resign or withdraw in accordance with rule 1.16." Rule 1.16 applies to in-house and outside counsel. Thus, the appropriate response takes into account the circumstances and what is in the best lawful interests of the organization. Distinguishing the circumstances requiring an in-house counsel's withdrawal from the representation from resignation in the comments to the rule is not necessary and would vary depending on the specific circumstances. As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.

Rule 1.13. Organization as Client. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 5 Agree = 1 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 1
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
4	Orange County Bar Association ("OCBA")	M	Yes	1.13(b)	We believe Proposed Rule 1.13 is inconsistent with the position taken in Proposed Rule 1.6 concerning confidential client information. Proposed Rule 1.6(b) restricts permissible disclosure of confidential client information to five limited circumstances, but does not mandate such disclosures if the lawyer chooses not to reveal such information. Further, even in situations where the lawyer reasonably believes that a criminal act by the client is likely to result in substantial bodily harm or death, Proposed Rule 1.6 first requires that the lawyer attempt to persuade the client not to take such action, if doing so is reasonable under the circumstances. In contrast, Proposed Rule 1.13(b) mandates that a lawyer refer certain matters to higher authority in the organization "unless the lawyer reasonably believes that it is not necessary in the best lawful interest of the organization." Urging reconsideration to the constituent of the organization with whom the lawyer is dealing is discussed not in the rule itself, but rather in Comment [7] to Proposed Rule 1.13 as a possibility "in some circumstances," i.e. , as the "exception to the rule" of reporting up the ladder.	The Commission disagrees and has not made the requested changes to the rule. Rule 1.13 is consistent with proposed Rule 1.6. Indeed, paragraph (c) provides that in taking any action pursuant to paragraph (b) the lawyer shall not violate his or her duty to protect all confidential client information. Moreover, reporting up the ladder within the client organization does not violate Rule 1.6 because the client is the organization and the report is made only to the organization. Further, paragraph (b) does not mandate "up the ladder" reporting as the lawyer's first response. In the circumstances that trigger a lawyer's duty under paragraph (b), the lawyer's response is to proceed in the best lawful interests of the organization, which may include urging reconsideration. Comment [7] does not suggest that asking a constituent to reconsider the matter is an exception to the lawyer's obligations under paragraph (b). Paragraph (b) obligates the lawyer to refer the matter to higher authority unless the lawyer reasonably believes it is not necessary in the best lawful interests of the organization to do so. Thus, the Rule does not mandate that a lawyer immediately report up the ladder rather than urging reconsideration as the first step. The Commission disagreed that urging reconsideration as a prerequisite to reporting up the ladder needs to be expressly stated in paragraph (b)

Rule 1.13. Organization as Client. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 5 Agree = 1 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 1
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				Comments [14], [15]	The OCBA recognizes that the five limited circumstances in Proposed Rule 1.6(b) anticipate disclosure to a non-client, whereas Proposed Rule 1.13(b) provides disclosure to a higher authority within the client organization, although Comments [14] and [15] to Proposed Rule 1.13 note that, at times, such a higher authority may be outside of the organization. Nonetheless, suggesting that a lawyer immediately report “up the ladder” rather than urging reconsideration as an initial step would conflict with the policies furthered by the duty of confidentiality as set forth in Comment [2] to Proposed Rule 1.6. The policies furthered by the duty of confidentiality include encouraging the client “to seek legal assistance and to communicate fully and frankly with the lawyer.” The Comment recognizes that “[t]he lawyer needs this information to represent the client effectively and, if necessary, to advise the client to refrain from wrongful conduct.” However, if the lawyer’s first response is the report up the ladder, constituents likely will not advise the lawyer of matters he or she may need to know in connection with the representation, chilling the communication necessary to such representation since the information needed usually will not be provided by the highest authority in the organization, but by its lower-	The Commission believes the proposed Rule better promotes the policies furthered by the duty of confidentiality owed to the organization as described in Rule 1.6, Comment [2]. Comments [14] and [15] provide guidance on identifying the government client including the highest authority for purposes of the rule and do not detract from Rule 1.6.

Rule 1.13. Organization as Client. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 5 Agree = 1 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 1
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					level constituents. We believe that urging reconsideration should be, absent exigent circumstances, a prerequisite to reporting up the ladder and should be expressly included as such in the text of the rule itself. Such a step is particularly important, as the lawyer: (a) may be mistaken about what is in the best interest of the organization; (b) may not understand the constituent's reasons for taking such actions; or (c) may be able to persuade the constituent that his or her intended actions would be ill-advised.
5	San Diego County Bar Association	A	Yes		Lack of uniformity with ABA Model Rule 1.13 is justified to preserve B&P Code section 6068(e) on confidentiality.	No response required.

Rule 1.13: Organization as Client

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Arizona has adopted the 2003 version of ABA Model Rule 1.13 verbatim. Regarding entity clients, the Arizona Legislature has also enacted the following statute, A.R.S. §12-2234, to codify the attorney-client privilege for corporations and other entities in civil cases:

(B) . . . [A]ny communication is privileged between an attorney for a corporation, governmental entity, partnership, business, association or other similar entity or an employer and any employee, agent or member of the entity or employer regarding acts or omissions of or information obtained from the employee, agent or member if the communication is either:

1. For the purpose of providing legal advice to the entity or employer or to the employee, agent or member.

2. For the purpose of obtaining information in order to provide legal advice to the entity or employer or to the employee, agent or member.

(C) The privilege defined in this section shall not be construed to allow the employee to be relieved of a duty to disclose the facts solely because they have been communicated to an attorney.

The statute was passed in reaction to the Arizona Supreme Court's decision in Samaritan Foundation v. Goodfarb, 862 P.2d 870 (Ariz. 1993), which rejected the federal courts' broad view of the attorney-client privilege for corporations announced in Upjohn Co. v. United States, 449 U.S. 383 (1981). The Samaritan court instead adopted a "functional" test for the attorney-client privilege and required a defendant hospital to disclose information that the defendant contended was privileged. The following year, after intense lobbying by corporate interests, the Arizona Legislature enacted §12-2234, which effectively overruled the Samaritan opinion and adopted Upjohn. However, in Roman Catholic Diocese of Phoenix v. Superior Court, 62 P.3d 970 (Ariz. App. 2003), a lower appellate court has held that §12-2334 applies only in civil proceedings and that Samaritan remains good law in criminal cases.

California: Rule 3-600 substantially follows the positions in Rule 1.13 as originally adopted. Among other things, it does not create an exception to confidentiality when conditions like those in Model Rule 1.13(c) are present but says only that the lawyer may, or must, resign.

District of Columbia omits paragraphs (c), (d), and (e) of ABA Model Rule 1.13.

Georgia: Rule 1.13 tracks the pre-2003 version of ABA Model Rule 1.13 verbatim, but Georgia adds the following paragraph (f): “‘Organization’ as used herein includes governmental entities.”

Maryland, Michigan, and New Jersey all retain verbatim the Kutak Commission’s 1981 draft of Rule 1.13(c), which provides that “remedial action” may, if necessary, include “revealing information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6” — but “only if the lawyer reasonably believes that: (1) the highest authority in the organization has acted to further the personal or financial interests of members of the authority which are in conflict with the interests of the organization; and (2) revealing the information is necessary in the best interest of the organization.”

Michigan: Rule 1.13(a) tracks the Kutak Commission’s 1980 draft by providing that a lawyer for an organization represents the organization “as distinct from” its directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders, or other constituents. Moreover, Michigan Rule 1.13(f) provides as follows:

For purposes of this rule “organization” includes any corporation, partnership, association, joint stock company, union, trust, pension fund, unincorporated association, proprietorship or other business entity, state or local government or political subdivision thereof, or non-profit organization.

Minnesota effectively deletes the requirement in ABA Rule 1.13(c)(2) that the lawyer “reasonably believes that the violation is reasonably certain to result in substantial injury to the organization.” Minnesota also deletes ABA Model Rule 1.13(d).

Missouri: Missouri retains the 2002 version of ABA Model Rule 1.13 verbatim and thus has no equivalent to paragraphs (d) and (e) of the current version of ABA Model Rule 1.13.

New Jersey: Rule 1.13(a), which borrows from the Kutak Commission's 1980 draft, states that a lawyer employed or retained to represent an organization represents the organization "as distinct from" its directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders or other constituents. In addition, New Jersey adds that for purposes of Rules 4.2 and 4.3 "the organization's lawyer shall be deemed to represent not only the organizational entity but also the members of its litigation control group," which is defined as follows:

Members of the litigation control group shall be deemed to include current agents and employees responsible for, or significantly involved in, the determination of the organization's legal position in the matter whether or not in litigation, provided, however, that "significant involvement" requires involvement greater, and other than, the supplying of factual information or data respecting the matter. Former agents and employees who were members of the litigation control group shall presumptively be deemed to be represented in the matter by the organization's lawyer but may at any time disavow said representation.

New Jersey Rule 1.13(b) retains verbatim the 1983 version of ABA Model Rule 1.13(b). New Jersey Rule 1.13(c) retains verbatim the Kutak Commission's 1981 draft — see Maryland entry above. New Jersey has not adopted ABA Model Rules 1.13(d) and (e), and New Jersey's equivalent to ABA Model Rule 1.13(f) provides that in dealing with an organization's directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders or other constituents, a lawyer shall explain the identity of the client when the lawyer "believes that such explanation is necessary to avoid misunderstanding on their part." Finally, New Jersey also adds a subparagraph (f) that defines the term "organization" in Rule 1.13 to include "any corporation, partnership, association, joint stock company, union, trust, pension fund, unincorporated association, proprietorship or other business entity, state or local government or political subdivision thereof, or nonprofit organization."

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 1.13 is substantially similar to the pre-2003 version of Model Rule 1.13.

Ohio: Rule 1.13(b) adds "or reasonably should know" after "knows" in the first sentence. Ohio omits ABA Model Rules 1.13(c), (d), and (e). Ohio Rule 1.13(c) provides: "The discretion or duty of the lawyer for an organization to reveal information relating to the representation outside the organization is governed by Rule 1.6(b) and (c)."

Pennsylvania retains the 1983 version of ABA Model Rule 1.13(b) essentially verbatim, and retains the 2002 version of ABA Model Rule 1.13(c).

Texas: Rule 1.12(a) says that a lawyer retained or employed by an organization "represents the entity." Texas Rule 1.12(d) relieves the lawyer of responsibilities to the entity when the lawyer properly withdraws from the representation. Texas Rule 1.12(e) (equivalent to ABA Model Rule 1.13(f)) requires a lawyer to explain the identity of the client “when explanation appears reasonably necessary to avoid misunderstanding. . . .”

Proposed Rule 1.14 [n/a]

“Client with Diminished Capacity”

(XDraft #14, 2/27/10)

Summary: This proposed new rule addresses the special circumstances applicable when a lawyer represents a client who has diminished capacity. It permits, but does not require, a lawyer to notify an individual or organization that has the ability to take action to protect a client who is at risk of undue influence or other harm. The rule excludes representation of minors, clients in criminal matter, and persons who are the subject of conservatorship proceedings.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rule

RPC 3-100

Statute

Bus. & Prof. Code §6068(e); Family Code §3150; Welfare & Institutions Code §§300, 602, 675 et seq., §§5000-5579; and Probate Code, Division 4, Parts 1-8, §§1400-3803; Civil Code § 51 (Unruh Act).

Case law

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 6
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 4
Abstain 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Commission Minority Position, Known Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

Minority Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☒ Yes ☐ No

(See the introduction in the Model Rule comparison chart.)

☐ No Known Stakeholders

☒ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

Representatives of the State Bar's Trusts & Estates Section Executive Committee have appeared at Commission meetings to discuss this rule and provided valuable assistance to the Commission.

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

See the Introduction to the Model Rule comparison chart.

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule Proposed Rule 1.14* Client With Diminished Capacity

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 1.14 generally tracks the language of Model Rule 1.14 with six principal differences: the Rule (1) carves out an exception for minors, defendants in criminal matters and persons who are the subject of guardianship or conservatorship proceedings because the rights of such individuals are separately regulated by California statutes; (2) establishes a stricter standard for when a lawyer can reveal confidential information to protect the client's interests, i.e., "significantly diminished capacity"; (3) provides more detailed guidance regarding what constitutes "significantly diminished capacity"; (4) provides that acting pursuant to paragraph (b) of the proposed Rule to reveal confidential client information in the client's interests is a last resort, and enumerates factors the lawyer should consider before taking such action; (5) emphasizes that the nature and extent of any disclosure pursuant to paragraph (b) is strictly circumscribed; and (6) clarifies that taking action pursuant to paragraph (b) is permissive, not mandatory, and that a lawyer is not subject to discipline for failing to take such action.

Minority. A minority of the Commission believes that the policy of abrogating confidentiality reflected in Model Rule 1.14 is the wrong policy for California because it impairs the trust relationship between clients and lawyers. In particular, the Commission's nonlawyer, public member asserts that the proposed rule wrongly assumes that all lawyers possess the expertise of a psychiatric professional necessary to make a threshold determination that a client's mental capacity is "significantly diminished." Absent this expertise, it is argued that even well-intentioned lawyers will inevitably breach confidentiality to “protect the client” but that the actual result will be serious adverse consequences for the client. The proposed Rule is also opposed based on the following: (1) paragraph (b) does not impose a primary requirement that a lawyer act in a client’s best interest; (2) the Rule excludes representations of a minor, a client in a criminal matter, or a conservatee and this has an unintended effect of chilling the consideration of protective action by the lawyers for those clients; (3) the Rule improperly treats disclosure of confidential information as a first resort rather than a last resort for protecting a client; (4) the Rule does not require a lawyer to ask for a client’s permission before contacting a third party; and (5) the comments to the Rule fail to warn lawyers that the loss of trust and candor in the client-lawyer relationship, following a disclosure of confidential information, may be so severe that it warrants mandatory withdrawal from the client’s representation

* Proposed Rule 1.14, XDraft 14 (2/27/10).

INTRODUCTION (Continued):

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) When a client's capacity to make adequately considered decisions in connection with a representation is diminished, whether because of minority, mental impairment or for some other reason, the lawyer shall, as far as reasonably possible, maintain a normal client-lawyer relationship with the client.	(a) When a client's capacity to make adequately considered decisions in connection with a representation is diminished, whether because of ~~minority~~, mental impairment or ~~for~~ some other reason, the lawyer shall, as far as reasonably possible, maintain a normal ~~client-lawyer~~ client relationship with the client.	Paragraph (a) tracks the language of Model Rule 1.14, except that the reference in section (a) to diminished capacity due to "minority" has been deleted because under California law, the rights and duties of lawyers representing minors are regulated by separate, pertinent statutes. See, e.g., Family Code §3150, Welfare and Institutions Code §§300, 602, 675 et seq. See also Explanation of Changes for paragraph (b) and Comment [9]. The term "client-lawyer" has been changed to "lawyer-client" to conform with California Rule style.
(b) When the lawyer reasonably believes that the client has diminished capacity, is at risk of substantial physical, financial or other harm unless action is taken and cannot adequately act in the client's own interest, the lawyer may take reasonably necessary protective action, including consulting with individuals or entities that have the ability to take action to protect the client and, in appropriate cases, seeking the appointment of a guardian ad litem, conservator or guardian.	~~(b) When the lawyer reasonably believes that the client has diminished capacity, is at risk of substantial physical, financial or other harm unless action is taken and cannot adequately act in the client's own interest, the lawyer may take reasonably necessary protective action, including consulting with individuals or entities that have the ability to take action to protect the client and, in appropriate cases, seeking the appointment of a guardian ad litem, conservator or guardian.~~ (b) Except where the lawyer represents a minor, a client in a criminal matter, or a person who is the subject of a conservatorship proceeding, when the lawyer reasonably believes (i) that the client has significantly diminished	Paragraph (b). The prefatory language in paragraph (b), which permits a lawyer to take limited protective action on behalf of a client with significantly diminished capacity, excludes from its scope lawyers representing (1) minors, (2) criminal defendants and (3) persons who are the subject of conservatorship proceedings because under California law, The rights of such persons are regulated under other statutory schemes. (Family Code sec. 3150 and Welfare and Institutions Code §§300, 602, 675 et seq. in the case of minors; Penal Code section 1368 et seq. in the case of criminal defendants with diminished capacity, and the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act, Welfare and Institutions Code, Division 5, Part 1, §§5000-5579, or Probate Code, Division 4, Parts 1-8, §§1400-3803 in the case of persons who are under conservatorship or who are the subject of a

* Proposed Rule 1.14, XDraft 14 (2/27/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	capacity such that the client is unable to make adequately considered decisions in connection with a representation and further that, as a result of such significantly diminished capacity. (ii) the client is at risk of substantial physical, financial or other harm unless action is taken, and (iii) the client cannot adequately act in his or her own interest, the lawyer may, but is not required to, notify an individual or organization that has the ability to take action to protect the client.	conservatorship or protective proceedings under those statutes). Subparagraphs (b)(ii) and (iii) track the language of Model Rule 1.14(b) but break out the two criteria into separate subparagraphs for ease of reference. In addition, subparagraph (b)(i) provides a clearer standard by requiring that the client have “significantly diminished capacity,” rather than the Model Rule’s reference to the loose concept of “diminished capacity.” Subparagraph (b)(i) also focuses the inquiry on whether the impairment specifically affects the client’s ability to make decisions in connection with the representation in order to increase client protection in the context of the lawyer-client relationship. Finally, the last, unnumbered subparagraph of paragraph (b) limits permissible action by the lawyer to notification of a person or organization that can take action to protect the client. The Commission voted to omit Model Rule 1.14’s reference to permitting the lawyer to seek appointment of a guardian ad litem, conservator or guardian because a lawyer who took such action would be engaging in conduct adverse to the client and that typically would require the lawyer to withdraw from the representation. Instead, the lawyer can address the problem by notifying an individual or organization with the ability to take action to protect the client, as provided in the proposed Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(c) Information relating to the representation of a client with diminished capacity is protected by Rule 1.6. When taking protective action pursuant to paragraph (b), the lawyer is impliedly authorized under Rule 1.6(a) to reveal information about the client, but only to the extent reasonably necessary to protect the client's interests.	(c) Information relating to ~~the representation of~~ a client with diminished capacity is protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6. When taking protective action pursuant to paragraph (b), the lawyer is impliedly authorized under this Rule ~~Rule 1.6(a)~~ to reveal information about the client, but only to the extent the lawyer reasonably believes disclosure is necessary to protect the client's ~~interests~~interest, given the information known to the lawyer at the time of the disclosure.	Paragraph (c) refers to information protected under both Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6, because both address the lawyer's obligation to protect client confidential information under California law. Similar to the Model Rule approach, a lawyer is permitted to reveal information under the concept of "implied authorization." However, unlike the Model Rule approach, which implements "implied authorization" as a part of the confidentiality rule, Rule 1.6, the Commission is recommending that the concept of "implied authorization" only be recognized in this Rule. The Commission's more limited approach reflects California's strong policy in favor of protecting the client's confidential information. The Commission has determined that neither an "implied authorization" rubric nor a specific express exception to confidentiality in either Rule 1.6 or Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) is necessary to effectuate the purposes of proposed Rule 1.14. Analytically, the Commission does not regard the permissive disclosure of information pursuant to Rule 1.14 as an exception to the duty of confidentiality. Under the concept of "implied authorization," a lawyer's disclosure under Rule 1.14 to protect a client with diminished capacity is an act of loyalty and advocacy intended to further the client's interests. Ordinarily, a lawyer seeks the client's informed consent to disclose information in furtherance of the client's representation but when a client has a diminished capacity, obtaining the client's informed consent may not be possible. The

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		Commission's proposed Rule 1.14 recognizes that fact and reflects a policy determination that "implied authorization" is a rule of necessity that is consistent with loyalty and advocacy rather than a breach of the duty of confidentiality.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] The normal client-lawyer relationship is based on the assumption that the client, when properly advised and assisted, is capable of making decisions about important matters. When the client is a minor or suffers from a diminished mental capacity, however, maintaining the ordinary client-lawyer relationship may not be possible in all respects. In particular, a severely incapacitated person may have no power to make legally binding decisions. Nevertheless, a client with diminished capacity often has the ability to understand, deliberate upon, and reach conclusions about matters affecting the client's own well-being. For example, children as young as five or six years of age, and certainly those of ten or twelve, are regarded as having opinions that are entitled to weight in legal proceedings concerning their custody. So also, it is recognized that some persons of advanced age can be quite capable of handling routine financial matters while needing special legal protection concerning major transactions.	[1] The purpose of this Rule is to allow the lawyer to act competently on behalf of the client with diminished capacity, to further the client's goals in the representation, and to protect the client's interests. The normal ~~client-lawyer-client~~ relationship is based on the assumption that the client, when properly advised and assisted, is capable of making decisions about important matters. When the client ~~is a minor or~~ suffers from a diminished mental capacity, however, maintaining the ordinary ~~client-lawyer-client~~ relationship may not be possible in all respects. In particular, a ~~severely incapacitated person~~client with significantly diminished capacity may ~~have no power~~not be competent to make legally binding decisions. Nevertheless, a client with diminished capacity often has the ability to understand, deliberate upon, and reach conclusions about many matters affecting the client's own well-being. For example, ~~children as young as five or six years of age, and certainly those of ten or twelve, are regarded as having opinions that are entitled to weight in legal proceedings concerning their custody. So also, it is recognized that~~some persons of advanced age ~~can be quite~~are capable of handling routine financial matters ~~while needing~~but may need special legal protection concerning major transactions. In addition to the obligations of a lawyer provided in this Rule, lawyers may be required to make reasonable accommodations for clients with disabilities that will permit them to enjoy	Comment [1] is based on Model Rule 1.14, cmt. [1], but (1) adds an introductory sentence to identify the purposes of the rule and (2) omits the reference to minors, representation of whom is addressed in the Family Code and the Welfare and Institutions Code. See Explanation Of Changes to paragraph (a) and the prefatory language of paragraph (b), above. The Commission has also substituted the standard it recommends in the Rule itself, "significantly diminished capacity," for the Model Rule phrase, "severely incapacitated person," which neither appears in the black letter of Model Rule 1.14 nor is defined. The remaining changes are stylistic. The last sentence was added in response to public comment. The Commission agreed that it was appropriate to remind lawyers of their obligations under the Unruh Act in this Rule. The term "lawyer-client" has been substituted for "client-lawyer" throughout the Rule to conform to California rule style.

* Proposed Rule 1.14, XDraft 14 (2/27/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	the provision of full and equal legal services provided by the lawyer. See California Civil Code section 51 (Unruh Civil Rights Act).
[2] The fact that a client suffers a disability does not diminish the lawyer's obligation to treat the client with attention and respect. Even if the person has a legal representative, the lawyer should as far as possible accord the represented person the status of client, particularly in maintaining communication.	[2] The fact that a client suffers ~~a disability~~from diminished capacity does not ~~diminish~~affect the lawyer's obligation to treat the client with attention and respect. Even if the ~~person~~client has a legal representative, the lawyer should as far as possible accord the represented person the full status of client, particularly in maintaining communication. As used in paragraph (a) of this Rule, the lawyer's obligation to "maintain a normal lawyer-client relationship with the client" may require the lawyer to use a manner and means of communication adapted to the client's ability to comprehend and deliberate.	Comment [2] uses the term "diminished capacity" rather than the Model Rule's term "disability" for consistency of reference with the title of the Rule. The remainder of the Comment tracks Model Rule 1.14, cmt. [2], except that a sentence has been added to clarify that the lawyer may need to adapt the method of communication to the client's capacity to comprehend and deliberate.
	[3] As used in paragraph (b), "significantly diminished capacity such that the client is unable to make adequately considered decisions in connection with a representation" shall mean that the client is materially impaired in his or her capacity to understand and appreciate the rights and duties affected by the decision and the significant risks, consequences and reasonable alternatives involved in the decision, as described in Probate Code section 812, by virtue of a deficit in mental function of the types described in Probate Code section 811. However, the reference herein to relevant portions of the Probate Code is intended only to provide guidance to a lawyer who seeks to take protective action	Except for its last sentence, which is based on the last sentence of Model Rule 1.14, cmt. [6], Comment [3] has no Model Rule counterpart. It has been added to provide much-needed clarity to the significantly diminished capacity standard set forth in section (b)(1). It accomplishes this by reference to standards articulated in the Probate Code and by enumerating some of the factors to be considered and steps that may be taken in determining whether the client meets the significantly diminished capacity standard. The last clause of the Comment cautions that the lawyer must take care at all times to maintain lawyer-client confidentiality.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	pursuant to paragraph (b) and does not require the lawyer to seek a legal determination that the client meets the standards of incapacity under Probate Code section 811 et seq. In appropriate circumstances, lawyers are encouraged to seek guidance from an appropriate diagnostician, but a lawyer who seeks such guidance must advise the diagnostician of the confidential nature and circumstances of the consultation. In addition, the lawyer should request the diagnostician to maintain the information disclosed in confidence.	Following public comment, the Commission determined that including the first sentence of Model Rule 1.14, cmt. [6], would be misleading and potentially confusing. Because the first two factors are covered by the Probate Code and the second two factors are inconsistent with the Probate Code, inclusion of the ABA language could create ambiguity as to the appropriate standard to apply and allow a lawyer to base a decision on the ABA factors, which are arguably too broad and too easily met, thus leading to disclosures in cases where it might be inappropriate to breach confidentiality.
	[4] Before taking action pursuant to paragraph (b), the lawyer should take all reasonable steps to preserve client confidentiality and decision-making authority including explaining to the client the need to take such action and requesting the client's permission to do so. However, if the client refuses or is unable to give such permission, the lawyer may proceed under paragraph (b), (i) if no other action is available to the lawyer that is reasonably likely to protect the client from the harm the client faces; and (ii) the lawyer has taken into account such factors as: (1) the amount of time that the lawyer has to make a decision about disclosure; (2) whether the disclosure is likely to lead to proceedings such as involuntary commitment proceedings, which the client	Comment [4] has been added to emphasize that the lawyer's disclosure to a third party of a client's perceived significant diminished capacity should be a last resort, by identifying the steps to be taken and the factors to be considered before making such disclosure. The Comment is an attempt to balance the lawyer's obligation to protect the client's interest in circumstances when the client appears to have impaired ability to cooperate, with the need to maintain lawyer-client confidentiality and the risk that disclosure to a third party will interfere with the lawyer-client relationship.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	may perceive as adverse to her or his interests; (3) whether the disclosure is likely to lead to proceedings which could have an effect on the client's rights under the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution or analogous rights and privacy rights under Article 1 of the Constitution of the State of California; (4) the extent of any other adverse effects to the client that may result from disclosure contemplated by the lawyer; and (5) the nature and extent of information that must be disclosed to prevent the risk of harm to the client. A lawyer may also consider whether the prospective harm to the client is imminent in deciding whether to disclose the confidential information. However, the imminence of the harm is not a prerequisite to disclosure, and a lawyer may disclose the information without waiting until immediately before the harm is likely to occur.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[3] The client may wish to have family members or other persons participate in discussions with the lawyer. When necessary to assist in the representation, the presence of such persons generally does not affect the applicability of the attorney-client evidentiary privilege. Nevertheless, the lawyer must keep the client's interests foremost and, except for protective action authorized under paragraph (b), must to look to the client, and not family members, to make decisions on the client's behalf.	[35] The client may wish to have family members or other persons participate in discussions with the lawyer. When necessary to assist in the representation, the presence of such persons generally ~~does~~will not affect the applicability of the ~~attorney~~lawyer-client ~~evidentiary~~ privilege. ~~Nevertheless~~See Evidence Code section 952. ~~However,~~ the lawyer must keep the client's interests foremost and, except ~~for protective action~~as authorized under paragraph (b), must to look to the client, and not family members, to make decisions on the client's behalf.	Comment [5] is based on Model Rule 1.14, Cmt. [3], but has been modified to add a reference to California Evidence Code 952, which governs in these situations.
[4] If a legal representative has already been appointed for the client, the lawyer should ordinarily look to the representative for decisions on behalf of the client. In matters involving a minor, whether the lawyer should look to the parents as natural guardians may depend on the type of proceeding or matter in which the lawyer is representing the minor. If the lawyer represents the guardian as distinct from the ward, and is aware that the guardian is acting adversely to the ward's interest, the lawyer may have an obligation to prevent or rectify the guardian's misconduct. See Rule 1.2(d).	~~[4] If a legal representative has already been appointed for the client, the lawyer should ordinarily look to the representative for decisions on behalf of the client. In matters involving a minor, whether the lawyer should look to the parents as natural guardians may depend on the type of proceeding or matter in which the lawyer is representing the minor. If the lawyer represents the guardian as distinct from the ward, and is aware that the guardian is acting adversely to the ward's interest, the lawyer may have an obligation to prevent or rectify the guardian's misconduct. See Rule 1.2(d).~~	Model Rule 1.14, Cmt. [4], has been deleted. As noted above, (see Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (a) and (b)), the rights of minors and conservatees are addressed in California statutes. See also Proposed Comment [9].

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Taking Protective Action [5] If a lawyer reasonably believes that a client is at risk of substantial physical, financial or other harm unless action is taken, and that a normal client-lawyer relationship cannot be maintained as provided in paragraph (a) because the client lacks sufficient capacity to communicate or to make adequately considered decisions in connection with the representation, then paragraph (b) permits the lawyer to take protective measures deemed necessary. Such measures could include: consulting with family members, using a reconsideration period to permit clarification or improvement of circumstances, using voluntary surrogate decisionmaking tools such as durable powers of attorney or consulting with support groups, professional services, adult-protective agencies or other individuals or entities that have the ability to protect the client. In taking any protective action, the lawyer should be guided by such factors as the wishes and values of the client to the extent known, the client's best interests and the goals of intruding into the client's decisionmaking autonomy to the least extent feasible, maximizing client capacities and respecting the client's family and social connections.	~~Taking Protective Action~~ ~~[5] If a lawyer reasonably believes that a client is at risk of substantial physical, financial or other harm unless action is taken, and that a normal client-lawyer relationship cannot be maintained as provided in paragraph (a) because the client lacks sufficient capacity to communicate or to make adequately considered decisions in connection with the representation, then paragraph~~Paragraph (b) permits the lawyer to take protective measures deemed necessary to protect the client's interests. Such measures could include: consulting with family members; using a reconsideration period to permit clarification or improvement of circumstances; or using voluntary surrogate decisionmaking tools such as durable powers of attorney or consulting with support groups, professional services, adult-protective agencies or other individuals or entities that have the ability to protect the client. In taking any protective action, the lawyer should be guided by such factors as the wishes and values of the client to the extent known, the client's best interests, and the goals of ~~intruding~~minimizing intrusion into the client's decisionmaking autonomy ~~to the least extent feasible~~, maximizing client capacities and respecting the client's family and social connections.	Comment [6] is based on the latter half of Model Rule 1.14, Cmt. [5], which addresses section (b) of the Rule. The first part of the Model Rule comment merely repeats the language of the black letter rule as the predicate for the substantive comment and has been eliminated as surplusage.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[6] In determining the extent of the client's diminished capacity, the lawyer should consider and balance such factors as: the client's ability to articulate reasoning leading to a decision, variability of state of mind and ability to appreciate consequences of a decision; the substantive fairness of a decision; and the consistency of a decision with the known long-term commitments and values of the client. In appropriate circumstances, the lawyer may seek guidance from an appropriate diagnostician.	~~[6] In determining the extent of the client's diminished capacity, the lawyer should consider and balance such factors as: the client's ability to articulate reasoning leading to a decision, variability of state of mind and ability to appreciate consequences of a decision; the substantive fairness of a decision; and the consistency of a decision with the known long-term commitments and values of the client. In appropriate circumstances, the lawyer may seek guidance from an appropriate diagnostician.~~	The last sentence from MR 1.14, cmt. [6], as revised, has been inserted in Comment [3], above. See Explanation of Changes for Comment [3] concerning the deletion of the first sentence of MR 1.14, cmt. [6].
	[7] Paragraph (b) reflects a balancing between the interests of preserving client confidentiality and of protecting a client with significantly diminished capacity who is at risk of substantial physical, financial or other harm if no action is taken. A lawyer who reveals information as permitted under paragraph (b) is not subject to discipline.	Comment [7] has no Model Rule counterpart. It sets forth the rationale for paragraph (b) and also clarifies that a lawyer who makes a permitted disclosure pursuant to paragraph (b) is not subject to discipline.
[7] If a legal representative has not been appointed, the lawyer should consider whether appointment of a guardian ad litem, conservator or guardian is necessary to protect the client's interests. Thus, if a client with diminished capacity has substantial property that should be sold for the client's benefit, effective completion of the transaction may require appointment of a legal representative. In addition, rules of procedure in litigation sometimes provide that minors or persons with diminished capacity must be represented by a guardian	~~[7] If a legal representative has not been appointed, the lawyer should consider whether appointment of a guardian ad litem, conservator or guardian is necessary to protect the client's interests. Thus, if a client with diminished capacity has substantial property that should be sold for the client's benefit, effective completion of the transaction may require appointment of a legal representative. In addition, rules of procedure in litigation sometimes provide that minors or persons with diminished capacity must be represented by a guardian~~	Model Rule 1.14, Cmt. [7], has been deleted. As noted above, (see Explanation of Changes for paragraph (b)), the proposed Rule does not permit the lawyer to take steps to have a guardian, guardian ad litem or conservator to be appointed for the client. Instead, the Commission has proposed substituting Comment [8], which clarifies that that this Rule does not permit a lawyer to file for appointment of a guardian or conservator where such conduct is not otherwise or next friend if they do not have a general guardian. In many circumstances, however, appointment of a legal representative may be more expensive or traumatic for the client than circumstances in fact require. Evaluation of such circumstances is a matter entrusted to the professional judgment of the lawyer. In considering alternatives, however, the lawyer should be aware of any law that requires the lawyer to advocate the least restrictive action on behalf of the client.	~~or next friend if they do not have a general guardian. In many circumstances, however, appointment of a legal representative may be more expensive or traumatic for the client than circumstances in fact require. Evaluation of such circumstances is a matter entrusted to the professional judgment of the lawyer. In considering alternatives, however, the lawyer should be aware of any law that requires the lawyer to advocate the least restrictive action on behalf of the client. [8] Paragraph (b) does not authorize a lawyer to file a guardianship or conservatorship petition or to take similar action concerning the client, or to take any action that is adverse to the client. Nor does paragraph (b) authorize a lawyer to take such actions on behalf of another person where the lawyer would not otherwise be permitted to do so under Rule 1.7.~~	permitted by Rule 1.7, or to take any action adverse to the client.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Disclosure of the Client's Condition [8] Disclosure of the client's diminished capacity could adversely affect the client's interests. For example, raising the question of diminished capacity could, in some circumstances, lead to proceedings for involuntary commitment. Information relating to the representation is protected by Rule 1.6. Therefore, unless authorized to do so, the lawyer may not disclose such information. When taking protective action pursuant to paragraph (b), the lawyer is impliedly authorized to make the necessary disclosures, even when the client directs the lawyer to the contrary. Nevertheless, given the risks of disclosure, paragraph (c) limits what the lawyer may disclose in	~~Disclosure of the Client's Condition~~ ~~[8] Disclosure of the client's diminished capacity could adversely affect the client's interests. For example, raising the question of diminished capacity could, in some circumstances, lead to proceedings for involuntary commitment. Information relating to the representation is protected by Rule 1.6. Therefore, unless authorized to do so, the lawyer may not disclose such information. When taking protective action pursuant to paragraph (b), the lawyer is impliedly authorized to make the necessary disclosures, even when the client directs the lawyer to the contrary. Nevertheless, given the risks of disclosure, paragraph (c) limits what the lawyer may disclose in~~	Model Rule 1.14, cmt. [8], has been deleted. As noted above, (see Explanation of Changes for paragraph (c)), there is no counterpart in Business & Professions Code § 6068(e) to Model Rule 1.6's concept of "implied authorization," so this Comment does not clarify the strictly limited disclosure permitted under paragraph (b).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
consulting with other individuals or entities or seeking the appointment of a legal representative. At the very least, the lawyer should determine whether it is likely that the person or entity consulted with will act adversely to the client's interests before discussing matters related to the client. The lawyer's position in such cases is an unavoidably difficult one.	~~consulting with other individuals or entities or seeking the appointment of a legal representative. At the very least, the lawyer should determine whether it is likely that the person or entity consulted with will act adversely to the client's interests before discussing matters related to the client. The lawyer's position in such cases is an unavoidably difficult one.~~
	[9] Paragraph (b) applies to the representation of a client with significantly diminished capacity, except in the case of a client who is (1) a minor, (2) involved in a criminal matter or (3) under conservatorship or the subject of a conservatorship or protective proceeding. The rights of such persons are regulated under other statutory schemes. See Family Code § 3150, Welfare and Institutions Code §§300, 602, 675 et seq.; Penal Code section 1368 et seq.; Lanterman-Petris-Short Act, Welfare and Institutions Code, Division 5, Part 1, §§5000-5579; Probate Code, Division 4, Parts 1-8, §§1400-3803.	Comment [9], which has no counterpart in the Model Rule, explains that certain categories of person have been excluded from the rule because the rights of such persons are addressed in specific California statutes. See also Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (b) and (c).
	[10] A lawyer is permitted to act under paragraph (b) but is never required to do so. A lawyer who chooses not to reveal information permitted by paragraph (b) does not violate this Rule.	Comment [10] has no counterpart in Model Rule 1.14. It clarifies that the course of conduct described in paragraph (b) is not mandatory and that a lawyer is not subject to discipline for violation of the rule for failing to take action under paragraph (b).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Emergency Legal Assistance [9] In an emergency where the health, safety or a financial interest of a person with seriously diminished capacity is threatened with imminent and irreparable harm, a lawyer may take legal action on behalf of such a person even though the person is unable to establish a client-lawyer relationship or to make or express considered judgments about the matter, when the person or another acting in good faith on that person's behalf has consulted with the lawyer. Even in such an emergency, however, the lawyer should not act unless the lawyer reasonably believes that the person has no other lawyer, agent or other representative available. The lawyer should take legal action on behalf of the person only to the extent reasonably necessary to maintain the status quo or otherwise avoid imminent and irreparable harm. A lawyer who undertakes to represent a person in such an exigent situation has the same duties under these Rules as the lawyer would with respect to a client.	~~Emergency Legal Assistance~~ ~~[9] In an emergency where the health, safety or a financial interest of a person with seriously diminished capacity is threatened with imminent and irreparable harm, a lawyer may take legal action on behalf of such a person even though the person is unable to establish a client-lawyer relationship or to make or express considered judgments about the matter, when the person or another acting in good faith on that person's behalf has consulted with the lawyer. Even in such an emergency, however, the lawyer should not act unless the lawyer reasonably believes that the person has no other lawyer, agent or other representative available. The lawyer should take legal action on behalf of the person only to the extent reasonably necessary to maintain the status quo or otherwise avoid imminent and irreparable harm. A lawyer who undertakes to represent a person in such an exigent situation has the same duties under these Rules as the lawyer would with respect to a client.~~	The Commission recommends deleting Comments [9] and [10], both of which are addressed to providing emergency legal assistance to a non-client. Comments that are concerned with a lawyer's interactions with non-clients have no place in a Rule that has been carefully crafted to balance the lawyer's obligation to protect a client's interest in circumstances when the client appears to have impaired ability to cooperate, with the need to maintain lawyer-client confidentiality and the risk that disclosure to a third party will interfere with the lawyer-client relationship.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[10] A lawyer who acts on behalf of a person with seriously diminished capacity in an emergency should keep the confidences of the person as if dealing with a client, disclosing them only to the extent necessary to accomplish the intended protective action. The lawyer should disclose to any tribunal involved and to any other counsel involved the nature of his or her relationship with the person. The lawyer should take steps to regularize the relationship or implement other protective solutions as soon as possible. Normally, a lawyer would not seek compensation for such emergency actions taken.	~~[10] A lawyer who acts on behalf of a person with seriously diminished capacity in an emergency should keep the confidences of the person as if dealing with a client, disclosing them only to the extent necessary to accomplish the intended protective action. The lawyer should disclose to any tribunal involved and to any other counsel involved the nature of his or her relationship with the person. The lawyer should take steps to regularize the relationship or implement other protective solutions as soon as possible. Normally, a lawyer would not seek compensation for such emergency actions taken.~~

Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity

(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to the Public Comment Draft)

- (a) When a client's capacity to make adequately considered decisions in connection with a representation is diminished, whether because of mental impairment or some other reason, the lawyer shall, as far as reasonably possible, maintain a normal lawyer-client relationship with the client.
- (b) Except where the lawyer represents a minor, a client in a criminal matter, or a person who is the subject of a conservatorship proceeding, when the lawyer reasonably believes
 - (1) that the client has significantly diminished capacity such that the client is unable to make adequately considered decisions in connection with a representation and further that, as a result of such significantly diminished capacity,
 - (2) the client is at risk of substantial physical, financial or other harm unless action is taken, and
 - (3) the client cannot adequately act in his or her own interest,the lawyer may, but is not required to, notify an individual or organization that has the ability to take action to protect the client.
- (c) Information relating to ~~the representation of~~ a client with diminished capacity is protected by ~~Rule 1.6 and~~ Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6. When taking protective action pursuant to paragraph (b), the lawyer is impliedly authorized under this Rule to reveal information about the client, but only to the extent the lawyer reasonably believes disclosure is necessary to protect the client's interest, given the information known to the lawyer at the time of the disclosure.

COMMENT

[1] The purpose of this Rule is to allow the lawyer to act competently on behalf of the client with diminished capacity, to further the client's goals in the representation, and to protect the client's interests. The normal lawyer-client relationship is based on the assumption that the client, when properly advised and assisted, is capable of making decisions about important matters. When the client suffers from diminished mental capacity, however, maintaining the ordinary lawyer-client relationship may not be possible in all respects. In particular, a client with significantly diminished capacity may not be competent to make legally binding decisions. Nevertheless, a client with diminished capacity often has the ability to understand, deliberate upon, and reach conclusions about many matters affecting the client's own well-being. For example, some persons of advanced age are capable of handling routine financial matters but may need special legal protection concerning major transactions. In addition to the obligations of a lawyer provided in this Rule, lawyers may be required to make reasonable accommodations for clients with disabilities that will permit them to enjoy the provision of full and equal legal services provided by the lawyer. See California Civil Code section 51 (Unruh Civil Rights Act).

[2] The fact that a client suffers from diminished capacity does not affect the lawyer's obligation to treat the client with attention and respect. Even if the client has a legal representative, the lawyer should as far as possible accord the represented person the full status of client, particularly in maintaining communication. As used in paragraph (a) of this Rule, the lawyer's obligation to "maintain a normal lawyer-client relationship with the client" may require the lawyer to use a manner and means of communication adapted to the client's ability to comprehend and deliberate.

[3] As used in paragraph (b), "significantly diminished capacity such that the client is unable to make adequately considered decisions in connection with a representation" shall mean that the client is materially impaired in his or her capacity to understand and appreciate the rights and duties affected by the decision and the significant risks, consequences and reasonable alternatives involved in the decision, as described in Probate Code section 812, by virtue of a deficit in mental function of the types described in Probate Code section 811. However, the reference herein to relevant portions of the Probate Code is intended only to provide guidance to a lawyer who seeks to take protective action pursuant to paragraph (b) and does not require the lawyer to seek a legal determination that the client meets the standards of incapacity under Probate Code section 811 et seq. In appropriate circumstances, lawyers are encouraged to seek guidance from an appropriate diagnostician, but a lawyer who seeks such guidance must advise the diagnostician of the confidential nature and circumstances of the consultation. In addition, the lawyer should request the diagnostician to maintain the information disclosed in confidence.

[4] Before taking action pursuant to paragraph (b), the lawyer should take all reasonable steps to preserve client confidentiality and decision-making authority including explaining to the client the need to take such action and requesting the client's permission to do so. However, if the client refuses or is unable to give such permission, the lawyer may proceed under paragraph (b), (i) if no other action is available to the lawyer that is reasonably likely to protect the client from the harm the client faces; and (ii) the lawyer has taken into account such factors as:

- (1) the amount of time that the lawyer has to make a decision about disclosure;

- (2) whether the disclosure is likely to lead to proceedings such as involuntary commitment proceedings, which the client may perceive as adverse to her or his interests;
- (3) whether the disclosure is likely to lead to proceedings which could have an effect on the client's rights under the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution or analogous rights and privacy rights under Article 1 of the Constitution of the State of California;
- (4) the extent of any other adverse effects to the client that may result from disclosure contemplated by the lawyer; and
- (5) the nature and extent of information that must be disclosed to prevent the risk of harm to the client.

A lawyer may also consider whether the prospective harm to the client is imminent in deciding whether to disclose the confidential information. However, the imminence of the harm is not a prerequisite to disclosure, and a lawyer may disclose the information without waiting until immediately before the harm is likely to occur.

[5] The client may wish to have family members or other persons participate in discussions with the lawyer. When necessary to assist in the representation, the presence of such persons generally will not affect the applicability of the lawyer-client privilege. See Evidence Code section 952. However, the lawyer must keep the client's interests foremost and, except as authorized under paragraph (b), must look to the client, and not family members, to make decisions on the client's behalf.

[6] Paragraph (b) permits the lawyer to take protective measures deemed necessary to protect the client's interests. Such measures could include: consulting with family members; using a reconsideration period to permit clarification or improvement of circumstances; or using voluntary surrogate decision-making tools such as durable powers of attorney or consulting with support groups, professional services, adult-protective agencies or other individuals or entities that have the ability to protect the client. In taking any protective action, the lawyer should be guided by such factors as the wishes and values of the client to the extent known, the client's best interests, and the goals of minimizing intrusion into the client's decision-making autonomy, maximizing client capacities and respecting the client's family and social connections.

[7] Paragraph (b) reflects a balancing between the interests of preserving client confidentiality and of protecting a client with significantly diminished capacity who is at risk of substantial physical, financial or other harm if no action is taken. A lawyer who reveals information as permitted under paragraph (b) is not subject to discipline.

[8] Paragraph (b) does not authorize a lawyer to file a guardianship or conservatorship petition or to take similar action concerning the client, or to take any action that is adverse to the client. Nor does paragraph (b) authorize a lawyer to take such actions on behalf of another person where the lawyer would not otherwise be permitted to do so under Rule 1.7.

[9] Paragraph (b) applies to the representation of a client with significantly diminished capacity, except in the case of a client who is (1) a minor, (2) involved in a criminal matter or (3) ~~who is~~ under conservatorship or the subject of a conservatorship or protective proceeding. The rights of such persons are regulated under other statutory schemes. See Family Code section 3150, Welfare and Institutions Code sections 300, 602, 675 et seq.; Penal Code section 1368 et seq.; Lanterman-Petris-Short Act, Welfare and Institutions Code, Division 5, Part 1, sections 5000-5579; Probate Code, Division 4, Parts 1-8, sections 1400-3803.

[10] A lawyer is permitted to act under paragraph (b) but is never required to do so. A lawyer who chooses not to reveal information permitted by paragraph (b) does not violate this Rule.

Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity
(Commission's Proposed Rule –Clean Version)

- (a) When a client's capacity to make adequately considered decisions in connection with a representation is diminished, whether because of mental impairment or some other reason, the lawyer shall, as far as reasonably possible, maintain a normal lawyer-client relationship with the client.
- (b) Except where the lawyer represents a minor, a client in a criminal matter, or a person who is the subject of a conservatorship proceeding, when the lawyer reasonably believes
 - (1) that the client has significantly diminished capacity such that the client is unable to make adequately considered decisions in connection with a representation and further that, as a result of such significantly diminished capacity,
 - (2) the client is at risk of substantial physical, financial or other harm unless action is taken, and
 - (3) the client cannot adequately act in his or her own interest,the lawyer may, but is not required to, notify an individual or organization that has the ability to take action to protect the client.
- (c) Information relating to a client with diminished capacity is protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6. When taking protective action pursuant to paragraph (b), the lawyer is impliedly authorized under this Rule to reveal information about the client, but only to the extent the lawyer reasonably believes disclosure is necessary to protect the client's interest, given the information known to the lawyer at the time of the disclosure.

COMMENT

[1] The purpose of this Rule is to allow the lawyer to act competently on behalf of the client with diminished capacity, to further the client's goals in the representation, and to protect the client's interests. The normal lawyer-client relationship is based on the assumption that the client, when properly advised and assisted, is capable of making decisions about important matters. When the client suffers from diminished mental capacity, however, maintaining the ordinary lawyer-client relationship may not be possible in all respects. In particular, a client with significantly diminished capacity may not be competent to make legally binding decisions. Nevertheless, a client with diminished capacity often has the ability to understand, deliberate upon, and reach conclusions about many matters affecting the client's own well-being. For example, some persons of advanced age are capable of handling routine financial matters but may need special legal protection concerning major transactions. In addition to the obligations of a lawyer provided in this Rule, lawyers may be required to make reasonable accommodations for clients with disabilities that will permit them to enjoy the provision of full and equal legal services provided by the lawyer. See California Civil Code section 51 (Unruh Civil Rights Act).

[2] The fact that a client suffers from diminished capacity does not affect the lawyer's obligation to treat the client with attention and respect. Even if the client has a legal representative, the lawyer should as far as possible accord the represented person the full status of client, particularly in maintaining communication. As used in paragraph (a) of this Rule, the lawyer's obligation to "maintain a normal lawyer-client relationship with the client" may require the lawyer to use a manner and means of communication adapted to the client's ability to comprehend and deliberate.

[3] As used in paragraph (b), “significantly diminished capacity such that the client is unable to make adequately considered decisions in connection with a representation” shall mean that the client is materially impaired in his or her capacity to understand and appreciate the rights and duties affected by the decision and the significant risks, consequences and reasonable alternatives involved in the decision, as described in Probate Code section 812, by virtue of a deficit in mental function of the types described in Probate Code section 811. However, the reference herein to relevant portions of the Probate Code is intended only to provide guidance to a lawyer who seeks to take protective action pursuant to paragraph (b) and does not require the lawyer to seek a legal determination that the client meets the standards of incapacity under Probate Code section 811 et seq. In appropriate circumstances, lawyers are encouraged to seek guidance from an appropriate diagnostician, but a lawyer who seeks such guidance must advise the diagnostician of the confidential nature and circumstances of the consultation. In addition, the lawyer should request the diagnostician to maintain the information disclosed in confidence.

[4] Before taking action pursuant to paragraph (b), the lawyer should take all reasonable steps to preserve client confidentiality and decision-making authority including explaining to the client the need to take such action and requesting the client’s permission to do so. However, if the client refuses or is unable to give such permission, the lawyer may proceed under paragraph (b), (i) if no other action is available to the lawyer that is reasonably likely to protect the client from the harm the client faces; and (ii) the lawyer has taken into account such factors as:

- (1) the amount of time that the lawyer has to make a decision about disclosure;
- (2) whether the disclosure is likely to lead to proceedings such as involuntary commitment proceedings, which the client may perceive as adverse to her or his interests;

- (3) whether the disclosure is likely to lead to proceedings which could have an effect on the client’s rights under the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution or analogous rights and privacy rights under Article 1 of the Constitution of the State of California;
- (4) the extent of any other adverse effects to the client that may result from disclosure contemplated by the lawyer; and
- (5) the nature and extent of information that must be disclosed to prevent the risk of harm to the client.

A lawyer may also consider whether the prospective harm to the client is imminent in deciding whether to disclose the confidential information. However, the imminence of the harm is not a prerequisite to disclosure, and a lawyer may disclose the information without waiting until immediately before the harm is likely to occur.

[5] The client may wish to have family members or other persons participate in discussions with the lawyer. When necessary to assist in the representation, the presence of such persons generally will not affect the applicability of the lawyer-client privilege. See Evidence Code section 952. However, the lawyer must keep the client’s interests foremost and, except as authorized under paragraph (b), must look to the client, and not family members, to make decisions on the client’s behalf.

[6] Paragraph (b) permits the lawyer to take protective measures deemed necessary to protect the client’s interests. Such measures could include: consulting with family members; using a reconsideration period to permit clarification or improvement of circumstances; or using voluntary surrogate decision-making tools such as durable powers of attorney or consulting with support groups, professional services, adult-protective agencies or other individuals or entities that have the ability to protect the client. In taking any protective action, the lawyer should be guided by such factors as the wishes and values of the client to the extent known, the client's best interests, and the goals of minimizing intrusion into the client's decision-making autonomy, maximizing client capacities and respecting the client's family and social connections.

[7] Paragraph (b) reflects a balancing between the interests of preserving client confidentiality and of protecting a client with significantly diminished capacity who is at risk of substantial physical, financial or other harm if no action is taken. A lawyer who reveals information as permitted under paragraph (b) is not subject to discipline.

[8] Paragraph (b) does not authorize a lawyer to file a guardianship or conservatorship petition or to take similar action concerning the client, or to take any action that is adverse to the client. Nor does paragraph (b) authorize a lawyer to take such actions on behalf of another person where the lawyer would not otherwise be permitted to do so under Rule 1.7.

[9] Paragraph (b) applies to the representation of a client with significantly diminished capacity, except in the case of a client who is (1) a minor, (2) involved in a criminal matter or (3) under conservatorship or the subject of a conservatorship or protective proceeding. The rights of such persons are regulated under other statutory schemes. See Family Code section 3150, Welfare and Institutions Code sections 300, 602, 675 et seq.; Penal Code section 1368 et seq.; Lanterman-Petris-Short Act, Welfare and Institutions Code, Division 5, Part 1, sections 5000-5579; Probate Code, Division 4, Parts 1-8, sections 1400-3803.

[10] A lawyer is permitted to act under paragraph (b) but is never required to do so. A lawyer who chooses not to reveal information permitted by paragraph (b) does not violate this Rule.

Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 7 Agree = 5 Disagree = 2 Modify = 0 NI = 0
No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Allphin, Sondra J.	A	No		I strongly support this proposed rule because I believe it will make it easier for attorneys to protect their clients who have developed diminished capacity.	No response required.
2	COPRAC	A	Yes		COPRAC supports the adoption of Proposed Rule 1.14 and the Comments to the Rule.	No response required.
3	MacCarley, Lisa	D	No		The rule is wrong and should not be adopted, or better yet, should not be applicable to court appointed counsel as such counsel must have a separate role and must not become a tool to promote the agendas of those who are committing fraud.	The reasons stated for the commenter's opposition suggests a misunderstanding of the proposed rule. Under paragraph (b), the proposed rule would establish a new permissive standard allowing a lawyer to take action to prevent wrongful conduct, such as fraud, that threatens the interests of a client with diminished capacity. Also, while the rule does not exempt all appointed counsel, a lawyer who represents a minor, a client in a criminal matter, or a person who is the subject of a conservatorship proceeding is exempted under the terms of paragraph (b), in part, because the rights of such persons are protected under specifically applicable statutory schemes,
4	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	D	Yes		OCTC is concerned that, while this rule attempts to address some important issues, it does not appear to be an enforceable rule as written and appears to undermine the confidentiality rules.	The Commission received a substantial amount of input from many stakeholders who confront the problems this Rule is intended to address. The Rule is substantially narrower than Model Rule 1.14 in the discretion permitted a lawyer who takes action

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 7 Agree = 5
Disagree = 2
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				1.14(b)	Subparagraph (b) leaves too much discretion to an attorney's unqualified personal assessment of a client's abilities and using that unqualified assessment to permit the attorney to reveal a client's confidences. Further, this rule appears to be broadening the exceptions to confidentiality beyond what is permitted by Business & Professions Code section 6068(e). The Comments are more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	pursuant to it. See previous response of the Commission. The Rule expressly limits the actions a lawyer might take to what a lawyer is impliedly permitted to do under current law to advance the interests of the client. As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.
				Comment [1]	Comment [1] is problematic as to when and how to utilize the rule. When and who decides a client is not capable of making decisions - - and how and to whom does the attorney reveal this? If the client is not capable of making the decisions, is the lawyer able to give advice, take direction, or do anything on the client's behalf as to the matter? Comment [3] attempts to address this, but in such broad terms that it is vague and leaves too much	The Commission has revised Comment [3] to remove the third sentence, which raised concerns with several commenters about the conflicting standards a lawyer might employ in determining whether a client suffers from significantly diminished capacity. That should assuage the concerns of the commenter concerning when and how to utilize the Rule. As to the confidentiality concerns the commenter expresses, paragraph (c) expressly provides that a lawyer may reveal information about

Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 7 Agree = 5
Disagree = 2
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					discretion to the attorney. It also states that the attorney may in appropriate situations seek the advice of a diagnostician. While this may be appealing, the Comment creates its own exception to confidentiality not specifically in the rule or section 6068(e). Moreover, the Comment does not define diagnostician. Is it a psychiatrist, a psychologist, a marriage counselor, a priest, or some other person? If this exception is to be permitted, it should be in the rule and more specific. Comment [4] lists a number of considerations for the lawyer in making the decision to reveal the client's confidences. There is, however, nothing in the rule that specifically provides for these considerations. OCTC is concerned that this Comment may make enforcement of the confidentiality rules much more difficult. Comments [5] and [6] state the lawyer may discuss these matters with the client's family members, although the lawyer must keep the client's interest foremost. Again, the question is to what extent is this consistent with Business & Professions Code section	the client to the extent the lawyer reasonably believes disclosure is necessary to protect the client's interests, which is the purpose of consulting with a diagnostician. As noted above, paragraph (c) expressly permits reasonably necessary disclosures. The comment does not attempt to define the term "diagnostician" because the lawyer must act reasonably in making a determination in the specific factual circumstances of a particular representation. The Comment is meant to provide guidance on how to proceed under the black letter of the Rule. This is true in current rule 3-100, which concerns the disclosure of confidential information to prevent a crime likely to result in death or substantial bodily harm. The Discussion to that rule lists factors that a lawyer should consider in deciding how to proceed under the rule. See, e.g., Cal. Rule 3-100, Discussion ¶¶. [6], [9]. See response concerning Comment [1], above.

Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 7 Agree = 5
Disagree = 2
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				Comment [7]	6068(e)? This Comment may make enforcement of the confidentiality rules much more difficult. Comment [7], which is different than the Model Rules Comment [7], explains that section (b) is a balancing between the interest of preserving client confidences and of protecting a client with significantly diminished capacity. It also states that a lawyer who reveals such information is not subject to discipline. This would prevent discipline of almost any attorney who claims that he or she revealed the confidences because they believed it was appropriate under this rule. Thus, what safeguards exist for the client?	As provided in the Rule, the lawyer must not only "believe," but must "reasonably believe." If the lawyer's belief is shown not to have been reasonable, the lawyer would be subject to discipline.
				Comment [8]	Comment [8] states that the lawyer may not file guardianship or conservatorship or similar action or take actions that would violate proposed rule 1.7 (Current Rule 3-310.) According to this Comment, an attorney may reveal confidences to others that may take this action, but not do it themselves. The reason for this is not explained. Is it better to disclose the confidences than to file under seal a motion to the court disclosing the confidences?	This Rule narrows the options a lawyer may take unilaterally. As noted in Comments [1] and [2], a lawyer must treat the client with respect and to the extent possible, maintain a normal lawyer-client relationship. Filing a petition for a conservatorship or guardianship is a radical departure from that relationship. Permitting disclosure to "an individual or organization that has the ability to take action to protect the client" helps assure that the client comes within the protection of an individual or organization that more likely than not is better situated to explore non-legal options on the client's behalf.

Rule 1.14 Client with Diminished Capacity.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 7 Agree = 5
Disagree = 2
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
5	Ross, Scott	A	No		This rule, and the clarifications added by the comments, is an important step forward in protecting elders against financial and physical abuse. I strongly urge that this rule be adopted.	No response required.
6	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee	A	Yes		We approve the new rule in its entirety.	No response required.
7	State Bar Trusts & Estates Section, Executive Committee [Peter Stern] (Public Hearing)	A	Yes		We have been very pleased to see the way Rule 1.14 and now Rule 1.6, which intermeshes with it, have been developed by the RRC, and we strongly encourage their endorsement by the State Bar Board of Governors and by the Supreme Court.	No response required.

Rule 1.14: Client with Diminished Capacity

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California has no rule comparable to ABA Model Rule 1.14.

Indiana adds Rule 1.14(d), which states: “This Rule is not violated if the lawyer acts in good faith to comply with the Rule.”

Massachusetts: Rule 1.14(b) permits a lawyer who reasonably believes that a client lacks capacity as described in Rule 1.14(a) to consult “family members, adult protective agencies, or other individuals or entities that have authority to protect the client, and, if it reasonably appears necessary, the lawyer may seek the appointment of a guardian ad litem, conservator, or guardian, as the case may be.” The lawyer “may not consult any individual or entity that the lawyer believes, after reasonable inquiry, will act in a fashion adverse to the interests of the client. In taking any of these actions the lawyer may disclose confidential information of the client only to the extent necessary to protect the client’s interests.” Massachusetts has no counterpart to ABA Model Rule 1.14(c).

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 1.14 is substantially similar to the Model Rule equivalent, but New York adds Comment 7A, which states as follows: “Prior to withdrawing from the representation of a client whose capacity is in question, the lawyer should consider taking reasonable protective action.”

Texas: Rule 1.02(g) provides: “A lawyer shall take reasonable action to secure the appointment of a guardian or other legal representative for, or seek other protective orders with respect to, a client whenever the lawyer reasonably believes that the client lacks legal competence and that such action should be taken to protect the client.”

Proposed Rule 1.15 [4-100] “Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons”

(Draft #17, 12/12/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 1.15 is a complete rewrite of the general language of ABA Model Rule 1.15 to provide detailed standards for client protection and guidance of lawyers. Parts of the proposal also reject some ABA policies because they are inconsistent with statutes (Business & Professions Code §§ 6091.1 and 6210-6228), violate access to justice concepts, and would impair disciplinary enforcement.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule

Comment

- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☒ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 4-100

Statute

Case law

- ☒ State Rule(s) Variations (See provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

Fifteen states have created their own rule or substantially amended ABA Model Rule 1.15; twelve states have made substantive amendments to the Model Rule. (See Introduction, at par. 6.)

- ☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 10
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 1
Abstain 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart ☒ Yes ☐ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☐ No Known Stakeholders

☒ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

State Bar Office of the Chief Trial Counsel and local bar association ethics committees (see public commenter chart)

☒ Very Controversial – Explanation:

Local bar association ethics committees have differing views on whether Model Rule 1.15 is preferable to the proposed rule. Also, the Los Angeles County Bar Association believes that advance fees should not be required to be held in a client trust account until earned. However, the State Bar Office of the Chief Trial Counsel takes the opposite position on advance fees and favors a requirement that advance fees be held in a client trust account until earned.

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 1.15* Safekeeping Property: Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 1.15 is a complete rewrite of the general language of the ABA Model Rule to provide detailed standards for client protection and guidance of lawyers. The proposed Rule largely codifies existing California law rather than changing it. The existing California law, especially the case law, is complex and the proposed rule reflects that complexity. Codifying the existing law in a comprehensive rule promotes compliance by organizing within a rule structure otherwise disparate and inaccessible trust accounting duties. Parts of the proposal also reject some ABA policies because they are inconsistent with statutes (Business & Professions Code §§ 6091.1 and 6210-6228), violate access to justice concepts, and would impair disciplinary enforcement.

1. The proposal satisfies the need for greater and specific regulation of lawyer conduct in handling entrusted funds and property: ABA Model Rule 1.15 states general principles regarding lawyer handling of other people's funds and property, often with reference to principles of other fiduciaries or accountants that do not apply in this context. California experimented with such general language from 1927-1974 with former Rule 9, California Rules of Professional Conduct. Because lawyer mismanagement of trust funds and property continued to be a substantial percentage of disciplinary investigations and prosecution, Rule 4-100, adopted in 1975 and 1989, rejected continuation of a general approach and added other more specific regulations and standards for record keeping.

2. Although the Mandatory Continuing Legal Education requirement, the State Bar's publication of the Handbook on Client Trust Accounting for California Attorneys and the State Bar Ethics Hotline program have assisted in preventing mismanagement of trust funds and property, handling of trust funds and property continues to be a significant disciplinary issue.

* Proposed Rule, XDraft 17 (12/12/09).

3. According to the State Bar of California Annual Discipline Report for 2007, 12% of all disciplinary complaints arose from allegations of mishandling of funds, and banks made 2617 reports pursuant to Business and Professions Code section 6091.1 of instances of insufficient funds presented against an attorney's client trust account, regardless of whether the instrument was honored.

4. Moreover, when the State Bar Office of Chief Trial Counsel processing of disciplinary complaints was reduced to almost nothing from June 1998 until the system commenced significant operations in early 1999, due to absence of funding and during its 1999 resumption of disciplinary enforcement, the trust account mismanagement spiked dramatically:

(a) The highest number of insufficient funded trust account checks was reported: 4260 in 1998 and 4417 in 1999 (more than 500 reports in the prior and succeeding years. (2000 State Bar of California Annual Discipline Report, at p. 9.)

(b) Moreover, complaints about handling entrusted funds rose to 15% of all disciplinary complaints in 1999 from an average of 10-12% of all disciplinary complaints in prior and succeeding years. (2000 State Bar of California Annual Discipline Report, at p. 11.)

5. These statistics suggest that disciplinary enforcement acts as a deterrent. Therefore, more detailed regulation than provided by the Model Rule is necessary to serve as guidance to lawyers, to protect the public from improper handling of trust funds and property and to increase public confidence in the legal profession's abilities in safekeeping property.

6. A number of other jurisdictions have reached the conclusion that more detailed regulation is needed than is provided by ABA Model Rule 1.15.

(a) The following jurisdictions have either created their own rule or have substantially revised the ABA Model Rule with amendments and additions: Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Virginia, Washington, Wisconsin, and Wyoming.

(b) Many other states have made some substantive amendments to ABA Model Rule 1.15 (Alabama, Connecticut, Indiana, Iowa, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Montana, Nevada, North Dakota, Oregon, and South Carolina.) Gillers, Simon & Perlman (2009) Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards, ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 1.15, Selected State Variations, pp. 189-192; ABA Center for Professional Responsibility, Charts Comparing Professional Conduct Rules at:

<http://www.abanet.org/cpr/jclr/charts.html>

Proposed Rule 1.15:

7. As is true with the corresponding Rules adopted by several other jurisdictions, proposed Rule 1.15 elaborates in some detail on, and gives more specific guidance than, the ABA statements of general principles about how to handle funds and property of others that have been entrusted to the lawyer. The proposed Rule does so by adding sufficient detail designed to instruct the lawyer as to the minimum standards at every phase of handling the funds and property.

8. Proposed Rule 1.15 also expands the scope of ABA Model Rule 1.15 by including:

- (a) standards concerning the handling of electronic financial transactions;
- (b) requirements with respect disciplinary audits; and
- (c) identification of alternatives to keeping disputed property in trust (when a third party and a client dispute distribution of funds or property and do not want the lawyer to maintain the funds) that are available to the lawyer, such as by the use of interpleader.

Minority:

9. A minority believe that Model Rule 1.15 is a much more understandable and workable rule on safekeeping property for California lawyers than this very complex rule for the reasons stated by the Los Angeles County Bar Association Professional Responsibility and Ethics Committee. In addition, California should provide the same level of public protection provided in the Model Rule and in the rule followed by most jurisdictions by requiring advance fees to be deposited in a client trust account. Having such a requirement would greatly simplify this rule and would reconcile this rule with proposed rule 1.5.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property	Commission's Proposed Rule[*] Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) A lawyer shall hold property of clients or third persons that is in a lawyer's possession in connection with a representation separate from the lawyer's own property. Funds shall be kept in a separate account maintained in the state where the lawyer's office is situated, or elsewhere with the consent of the client or third person. Other property shall be identified as such and appropriately safeguarded. Complete records of such account funds and other property shall be kept by the lawyer and shall be preserved for a period of [five years] after termination of the representation.	(a) Duty to deposit entrusted funds in trust account. A lawyer shall ~~hold property of clients or third persons~~deposit all funds that is in the lawyer receives or holds for the benefit of a ~~lawyer's possession~~client or other person in connection with ~~a representation separate from the lawyer's own property. Funds shall be kept in a separate account maintained in the state where the lawyer's office is situated, or elsewhere with the consent~~performance of the client's legal service or third person. Other property shall be identified as such and appropriately safeguarded. Complete records of such account funds and other property shall be keptrepresentation by the lawyer ~~and shall be preserved, including an advance for a period of [five years] after termination of the representation~~costs and expenses, in one or more trust accounts in accordance with this Rule.	In the Commission's opinion, Model Rule 1.15(a) does not provide sufficient guidance or specific regulation necessary for adequate protection of California residents because: Sentence 1: Although the Rule requires segregation of entrusted funds and property from property of the lawyer, it does not require that trust funds be placed in a labeled trust account which can be located by the owner of the funds, and it does not require that any depository be a state or federal regulated financial institution or be federally insured. (See proposed 1.15(a), (b), and (c). The Commission has retained the concepts of segregation in proposed 1.15(a), (f), and (k)(2)). Sentence 2: The Model Rule permits trust funds to be held in another jurisdiction with the permission of the client or a third party. This concept was not adopted because it is contrary to existing California legislative policy regarding (1) requiring IOLTA accounts to be established with the interest to be paid to the State Bar for legal services for the indigent pursuant to Business and Professions Code §§ 6210-6228 and (2) requiring banks to make reports to the State Bar of instances of insufficient funds presented against an attorney's client trust account pursuant to Business and Professions Code § 6091.1; and the difficulty for State Bar Office of Chief Trial Counsel to acquire records from out of state financial institutions where there is no subpoena authority. (See proposed 1.15(b).) However, the Commission proposes adding 1.15(l), discussed below.

^{*} Proposed Rule, XDraft 17 (12/12/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		Sentence 3: The Model Rule's standard that "other property shall be identified as such and appropriately safeguarded" is so general that it does not afford adequate public protection. This standard does not provide specific guidance to lawyers concerning what is "appropriate" safeguarding of other property (such as keeping other property in a safety deposit box which can be located in the event of the lawyer's death or disability) and it does not provide a minimal standard which prosecutors can enforce. (See proposed 1.15(k)(2) - (4).) Sentence 4: The Model Rule's standard of keeping complete records of all accounts and property provides no enforceable standard for disciplinary enforcement and no guidance for lawyers for preventive law purposes. The Commission also rejected the requirement that records be retained for a period of time after termination of the attorney client relationship. Since lawyers often terminate the attorney-client relationship while retaining client or other person's funds and property, the better public protection requires retention of all records for a period of time after the last funds or property are disbursed. (See 1.15(k).)

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(b) A lawyer may deposit the lawyer's own funds in a client trust account for the sole purpose of paying bank service charges on that account, but only in an amount necessary for that purpose.	~~(b)- A lawyer may deposit the lawyer's own funds in a client trust account for the sole purpose of paying bank service charges on that account, but only in an amount necessary for that purpose.~~ (b) Approved depositories for trust accounts. Except as provided in paragraph (l), or as expressly ordered by a tribunal, all trust accounts under this Rule shall be in depositories approved by the California Supreme Court in the State of California. All IOLTA trust accounts as defined in Business and Professions Code section 6211 shall be in depositories that are in compliance with the requirements of Business and Professions Code section 6212.	The Commission retained the subject of Model Rule 1.15(b) in proposed 1.15(f)(1)) (regarding an exception to commingling by depositing personal funds to pay bank service charges but without the limit on amount). The Commission has recommended other exceptions which protect the public including making restitution for funds wrongfully removed and holding disputed attorneys fees and costs in trust until the dispute is resolved. (See proposed 1.15(f).) Paragraph (b) is derived from current rule 4-100(A). The current standard has been modified to require that funds be held in California depositories unless there is a contrary court order or the circumstances fall into the category of multijurisdictional practice covered by paragraph (l).
	(c) Trust account designation. A lawyer shall designate each trust account as "Client Trust Account" or other identifiable fiduciary title.	Paragraph (c), which requires a lawyer to identify each trust account, is carried forward from current rule 4-100 and is intended to afford client protection.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(d) Advances for fees; deposit and accounting. A lawyer may, but is not required to, deposit an advance for fees in a trust account. Regardless of whether the lawyer has deposited an advance for fees in a trust account: (1) subject to Business and Professions Code section 6068(e), the lawyer must account to the client or other person who advanced the fees; and (2) if a client or other person disputes a lawyer's entitlement to a fee, any disputed portion of an advance for fees not yet fixed must be deposited in a trust account.	Added for public protection: The Commission rejected the concept of Model Rule 1.15(c), which requires that all advance fees be placed in a trust account until earned. Many lawyers can follow this principle as a matter of good risk management and to foster good client relations, but there are situations in which the requirement would create harm. For example, lawyers in certain fields of practice, such as criminal defense and family law lawyers, customarily utilize advance fee payments beginning when received and count on this in order to provide services to their clients. If their advance fees had to be deposited in a client trust account, the funds could be seized by client creditors or by law enforcement agencies, so the client would have no funds with which to pay for a defense. Adding the Model Rule's requirement would prevent some lawyers from representing clients, thereby limiting access to justice in those areas. In addition, there are situations in which the client could be harmed if advance fees were placed in the lawyer's trust account, such as when creditors attach or government agencies freeze client trust funds that otherwise would be held to pay legal fees and expenses (S.E.C. v. Interlink Data Network of Los Angeles Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 77 F3d 1201). This, also, is a significant access to justice issue. Finally, our Supreme Court has historically refused to approve such a mandatory rule. The Commission believes these public protection issues are better addressed by a rule that regulates advanced fees and makes the standards for handling such fees explicit. (See Proposed Rule 1.15(d), above.)

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(c) A lawyer shall deposit into a client trust account legal fees and expenses that have been paid in advance, to be withdrawn by the lawyer only as fees are earned or expenses incurred.	(~~ee~~) Duties concerning maintenance and use of trust funds. A lawyer shall maintain inviolate all funds on deposit into a client trust account ~~legal fees and expenses that have been paid in advance,~~ all property entrusted to be withdrawn by the lawyer only as fees are earned for the benefit of a client or expenses incurred ~~other person until distributed in accordance with this Rule.~~	Accepted, with clarifying amendments. The Commission adopted the concept of depositing trust funds , including advanced costs, in proposed Rule 1.15(a), believing that for guidance, the duty to deposit should be the first part of the rule. The concept of the rule has been retained here, but clarified to add the duty not to misappropriate entrusted funds. Rejected mandatory advance fee deposit in trust account: The Commission rejected one concept of Model Rule 1.15(c), which requires that all advance fees be placed in a trust account until earned. Many lawyers can follow this principle as a matter of good risk management and to foster good client relations, but there are situations in which the requirement would create harm. For example, lawyers in certain fields of practice, such as criminal defense and family law lawyers, customarily utilize advance fee payments beginning when received and count on this in order to provide services to their clients. If their advance fees had to be deposited in a client trust account, the funds could be seized by client creditors or by law enforcement agencies, so the client would have funds with which to pay for a defense. Adding the MR's requirement would prevent some lawyers from representing clients, thereby limiting access to justice in those areas. In addition, there are situations in which the client could be harmed if advance fees were placed in the lawyer's trust account, such as when creditors attach or government agencies freeze client trust funds that otherwise would be held to pay legal fees and expenses (S.E.C. v. Interlink Data Network of Los Angeles Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 77 F3d 1201). This, also, is a significant access to justice issue. Finally, our Supreme Court has historically refused to approve such a mandatory rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		The Commission believes these public protection issues are better addressed by a rule that regulates advanced fees and makes the standards for handling such fees explicit. (See Proposed Rule 1.15(d), above.)
	(f) Commingling of lawyer's funds and trust funds prohibited; exceptions. Funds belonging to a lawyer or law firm shall not be commingled with funds held in a trust account established under this Rule except: (1) funds reasonably sufficient to pay bank charges; (2) deposits for overdraft protection that compensate exactly for the amount that the overdraft exceeds the funds on deposit plus any bank charges; (3) the lawyer's or law firm's funds deposited to restore entrusted funds that have been improperly withdrawn; (4) funds in which the lawyer claims an interest but which are disputed by the client or other person; or (5) funds belonging in part to a client or other person and in part, presently or potentially, to the lawyer, but which are claimed by a third party.	Added for public protection: Proposed paragraph (f) adds in mandatory form important details not found in Model Rule 1.5. The Commission believes these additions are needed to assure full compliance with the client-protective purpose of paragraph (a). Each of these requirements is consistent with the Model Rule 1.15, current California rule 4-100, and California case law.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property	Commission's Proposed Rule[*] Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(g) Duties when lawyer's entitlement to funds or property becomes fixed or the lawyer's entitlement is disputed. In the case of property, or funds held in a trust account, that belong in part to a client or other person and in part to the lawyer, the lawyer shall withdraw or distribute the portion belonging to the lawyer at the earliest reasonable time after the lawyer's interest in that portion becomes fixed, provided that: (1) the client or other person may still dispute that the lawyer is entitled to the funds or property; (2) when the right of a lawyer to receive a portion of entrusted funds or property is disputed by the client or other person, the lawyer shall distribute the undisputed portion in accordance with paragraph (k)(7), but shall not distribute the disputed portion until the dispute is finally resolved, the lawyer interpleads the funds or property, or the distribution is authorized by law or court order; (3) a lawyer shall take reasonable steps promptly to resolve any dispute regarding entrusted funds or property in the circumstances of paragraph (g)(2); and (4) if the client or other person disputes the lawyer's interest in entrusted funds or property after the lawyer's interest has become fixed and the lawyer has withdrawn the fixed portion, the lawyer shall have no duty to redeposit the disputed portion in a trust account.	Added for public protection: Because there continues to be much confusion about when a lawyer's entitlement to entrusted funds occurs [Matter of Davis (Review Dept. 2003) 4 Cal.State Bar Ct. Rptr. 576, 586-587 [withdrawal of disputed fees from trust account]], this part of the rule has been expanded. It retains the concept of ABA Model Rule 1.15(d)(e) which was not clear concerning the application of the rule to lawyers' fees and cost.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(h) Duties when a client or other person disputes the other's entitlement to funds or property. When the right of a client or other person to receive a portion of entrusted funds or property is disputed by a client or other person, the lawyer shall not distribute the disputed portion of entrusted funds or property until the dispute is resolved, the lawyer interpleads the funds or property, or the distribution is authorized by law or court order, except that the lawyer shall make any distribution required by paragraph (k)(7).	Added for public protection: Consistent with current California case law, proposed paragraph (h) mandates that a lawyer not unilaterally determine entitlement to entrusted funds or property held by the lawyer when the entitlement is disputed by the client or a third party. Such a unilateral determination by a lawyer is an act of moral turpitude under Business & Professions Code § 6106. (Matter of Davis (Review Dept. 2003) 4 Cal.State Bar Ct. Rptr. 576, 589 [knowing an wilful withdrawal of disputed fees from trust account constituted moral turpitude].) Placing this requirement in Rule 1.15 makes the lawyer's obligation more apparent and therefore fosters compliance.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(d) Upon receiving funds or other property in which a client or third person has an interest, a lawyer shall promptly notify the client or third person. Except as stated in this rule or otherwise permitted by law or by agreement with the client, a lawyer shall promptly deliver to the client or third person any funds or other property that the client or third person is entitled to receive and, upon request by the client or third person, shall promptly render a full accounting regarding such property.	(~~di~~) ~~Upon receiving~~Duties when entitlement to funds or other property in which is disputed by third party. When the right of a client or ~~third~~other person ~~has an interest to receive a portion of entrusted funds or property (1) is disputed by a third party that has a security or ownership interest in the entrusted funds or property or (2) is subject to a court order, the~~ lawyer shall ~~promptly notify~~not distribute the ~~client~~disputed portion until the dispute is resolved, the lawyer interpleads the funds or third person. Except as stated in this ruleproperty, or otherwise permitted the distribution is authorized by law or ~~by agreement with court order.~~ Nevertheless the ~~client,~~ a lawyer shall ~~promptly deliver to the client or third person~~distribute any undisputed entrusted funds or ~~other property that the client or third person is entitled to receive and, upon request~~as required by the client or third person, shall ~~promptly render a full accounting regarding such property~~paragraph (k)(7).	Sentence 1: The Model Rule's notification requirement does not adequately protect the public, because it does not require notification of the amount of funds or the identity or quantity of property received by a lawyer on behalf of another. Therefore, the Commission has retained the concept of notification upon receipt of funds and property but added a component requiring disclosure of what has been received on behalf of another. (See proposed 1.15(k)(1).) Sentence 2: This part of the Model Rule is confusing, and therefore more likely to cause non-compliance, because it mixes concepts of distribution of funds and property with accounting for the use of funds. The Commission has separated these important provisions in proposed 1.15(k)(4) and (7). Moreover, the requirement of rendering a "full accounting" does not provide sufficient public protection because the minimal components of a full accounting are not included in the Rule. The Commission has added such accounting features in proposed 1.15(k)(4) for entrusted funds and in proposed 1.15(d) and Comment [10].

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(e) When in the course of representation a lawyer is in possession of property in which two or more persons (one of whom may be the) claim interests, the property shall be kept separate by the lawyer until the dispute is resolved. The lawyer shall promptly distribute all portions of the property as to which the interests are not in dispute.	~~(e) When in the course of representation a lawyer is in possession of property in which two or more persons (one of whom may be the lawyer) claim interests, the property shall be kept separate by the lawyer until the dispute is resolved. The lawyer shall promptly distribute all portions of the property as to which the interests are not in dispute.~~	Sentence 1: This sentence inaccurately merges concepts of handling funds and property disputed between clients and third parties with disputes about the lawyer's fees and costs and requires that disputed funds be segregated until the dispute is resolved. As noted above, segregation is not adequate public protection. This concept does not adequately protect the public because it does not include within its scope court orders that lawyers hold funds or property, which commonly occurs in litigation or in family law matters. The Commission has separated the types of disputes for clarity of application and has included court orders (see proposed 1.15(h) and (i)). Moreover, maintenance in a trust fund may expose the funds to attachment by judgment creditors of one of the disputants or seizure by government agencies, thereby affording little protection to other disputants. Accordingly, the Commission has provided for interpleader as an alternative to holding funds or property in trust. Sentence 2: The Commission has retained this concept, as reworded to fit the context of proposed 1.15(h) and (i).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(j) Credit card, debit, or other electronically transferred payments. A lawyer may establish a relationship with a merchant bank or electronic payment service so that a client or other person may use credit card, debit, or other electronically transferred payments to pay an advance for fees or costs directly into a trust account, provided that the contract with the merchant bank or electronic payment service requires that the lawyer's obligations for any charges, chargebacks and offsets be paid from a source that is not a trust account.	New concept, added for public protection and guidance: Model Rule 1.15 does not address electronically transferred payments, although they are increasingly common. Proposed paragraph (j) is consistent with current California law as explained in State Bar. Formal Opn. 2007-172 and likely is consistent with the Model Rule. Placing this requirement in Rule 1.15 makes the lawyer's obligation more apparent and therefore fosters compliance.
	(k) Management, recordkeeping and accounting for funds and property held in trust. A lawyer shall: (1) promptly notify a client or other person of the receipt of funds, securities, or other property in which the client or other person claims or has an interest and notify the client or other person of the amount of such funds or the identity or quantity of such property; (2) identify and label securities and property of a client or other person promptly upon receipt, place them in a safe deposit box or other place of safekeeping as soon as practicable, segregate any securities or property from the lawyer's own securities or property of the same character, and notify the client or other person of the location of the property;	Concepts similar to Model Rule 1.15(d) but separated, added and clarified for the protection of the public. The Commission believes that proposed paragraph (k) is consistent with concepts in the Model Rule, but it expresses the Model Rule's general concepts in considerable detail in order to foster lawyer compliance. Greater specificity about the duties of the lawyer for each phase of the rule will give clear guidance about how to handle entrusted funds or property and will provide for easier charging of disciplinary violations. Subparagraph (k)(1) includes the concept of Model Rule 1.15(d) sentence 1, but adds the duty to disclose the amount of such funds or the identity or quantity of such property. Subparagraph (k)(2) includes the concept of Model Rule 1.15(a) sentence 3, reworded slightly for conformity and adds a notification requirement.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(3) maintain complete records of all funds and property of a client or other person coming into the possession of the lawyer; (4) account to the client or other person for whom the lawyer holds funds or property. An accounting shall include, but is not limited to: (i) a statement of all funds and property received by the lawyer as of the date of the accounting, the source, amount of funds or description of property, and date received; (ii) a statement of all distributions of such funds and property, the date of distribution, the amount of funds or description of property distributed, the payee or distributee, and any trust account check number; and (iii) any balance remaining in the possession of the lawyer; (5) preserve records of all entrusted funds or property for a period of no less than five years after final appropriate distribution of such funds or property;	Subparagraph (k)(3) restates the concept of Model Rule 1.15(a), sentence 4, first clause ["Complete records of such account funds and other property shall be kept by the lawyer . . ."]. The Commission has opted for the active voice consistent with the policy of the State Bar, following the Administrative Office of the Courts, to make all rules be in the active not passive voice unless there was a compelling reason. The Commission opted to retain the concept Subparagraph (k)(4) restates the concept of Model Rule 1.15(d), sentence 2, last clause [". .and, upon request by the client or third person, shall promptly render a full accounting regarding such property."] Although Bus. & Prof. C., §6091 creates a duty to provide an accounting upon request, Matter of Brockway (Review Dept. 2006) 4 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 944, suggests that the duty to account under present rule 4-100(B)(3) does not require a client's or other person's request. Because the latter provides greater public protection, the Commission adopted the latter. Subparagraph (k)(5) restates the concept of Model Rule 1.15(a), sentence 4, last clause ([trust account records] "shall be preserved for a period of [five years] after termination of the representation") but changes the trigger [distribution of funds or property] for when the five (5) years starts to run. Because lawyers can terminate representation, without making appropriate distributions of trust funds or property, the records can be destroyed before the client ever learns of any misconduct and before a disciplinary complaint is filed. Therefore, to provide maximum protection for the public, the Commission has recommended that the five years run from the appropriate distribution of trust funds or property.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(6) comply with any order for an audit of such records issued by the State Bar Court pursuant to the Rules of Procedure of the State Bar; and (7) promptly distribute, as requested by a client or other person, any undisputed funds or property in the possession of the lawyer that the client or other person is entitled to receive.	Subparagraph (k)(6) has been added to protect the public in disciplinary proceedings to require lawyers to comply with State Bar Court ordered audits. This concept does not exist in Model Rule 1.15 and is needed for greater public protection. Subparagraph (k)(7) restates Model Rule 1.15(d), sentence 2 ("Except as stated in this rule or otherwise permitted by law or by agreement with the client, a lawyer shall promptly deliver to the client or third person any funds or other property that the client or third person is entitled to receive...") The Commission has opted for a request of the client or other person as a trigger to the duty to distribute funds or property, because it is clearer and because it empowers the client or other person. The proposed rule has been clarified that only "undisputed" funds or property may be distributed by the lawyer.
	(l) Scope and Application of Rule. This Rule does not apply to the following: (1) A member of the State Bar of California residing and practicing law in a state other than California who (i) receives funds or property from a person who is not a resident of California, arising from or related to a legal representation not in California, and (ii) handles the funds or property in accordance with the law of the controlling jurisdiction. See Rule 8.5(b).	This paragraph clarifies application of this Rule to multijurisdictional practice. In particular, subparagraph (l)(4) has been added to help assure accountability and recordkeeping when funds are held in a non-California bank or financial institution. The language used in subparagraph (l)(4) was drafted with input from a representative of the Office of the Chief Trial Counsel.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(2) Funds or property entrusted to a multi-jurisdictional law firm in locations outside of California by clients domiciled outside of California regarding disputes or matters arising or being litigated outside of California, even though the firm maintains an office in California. (3) Lawyers practicing under California Rules of Court 9.47 or 9.48, regarding all matters involving a client or other person domiciled outside of California in which no other party to the matter, residing in California, claims an interest. (4) At the request of the State Bar of California disciplinary agency, a member of the State Bar of California who is subject to subparagraphs (1)(1) and (2) shall provide information respecting the lawyer's or law firm's non-California bank or financial institution account holding client or third party funds, including, but not limited to, requested bank or financial institution records.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(m) Board of Governors' Standards. The Board of Governors of the State Bar shall have the authority to formulate and adopt standards as to what "records" shall be maintained by lawyers in accordance with paragraph (k)(3). The standards formulated and adopted by the Board, as from time to time amended, shall be effective and binding on all lawyers.	The proposed rule includes a provision authorizing the Board of Governors to set standards for record keeping of entrusted property and funds. The lack of adequate record keeping is often the cause of trust account mismanagement and loss of entrusted funds. Standards for appropriate record keeping have reduced the incidence of such misfeasance.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons Comments/Definitions*	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] A lawyer should hold property of others with the care required of a professional fiduciary. Securities should be kept in a safe deposit box, except when some other form of safekeeping is warranted by special circumstances. All property that is the property of clients or third persons, including prospective clients, must be kept separate from the lawyer's business and personal property and, if monies, in one or more trust accounts. Separate trust accounts may be warranted when administering estate monies or acting in similar fiduciary capacities. A lawyer should maintain on a current basis books and records in accordance with generally accepted accounting practice and comply with any recordkeeping rules established by law or court order. See, e.g., ABA Model Financial Recordkeeping Rule.	~~[1] A lawyer should hold property of others with the care required of a professional fiduciary. Securities should be kept in a safe deposit box, except when some other form of safekeeping is warranted by special circumstances. All property that is the property of clients or third persons, including prospective clients, must be kept separate from the lawyer's business and personal property and, if monies, in one or more trust accounts. Separate trust accounts may be warranted when administering estate monies or acting in similar fiduciary capacities. A lawyer should maintain on a current basis books and records in accordance with generally accepted accounting practice and comply with any recordkeeping rules established by law or court order. See, e.g., ABA Model Financial Recordkeeping Rule.~~	Rejected entirely for lack of public protection and guidance: Sentence 1: Since there are many different standards of care for professional fiduciaries in California, this offers no guidance for lawyers who desire to handle funds properly or standards for discipline for the protection of the public. It also is inconsistent with legal duties that lawyers have under law, such as maintaining IOLTA trust accounts (Bus. & Prof. §§6210, et sec.) Sentence 2: This concept (with the added protection of requiring the labelling of securities as belonging to a particular person) has been incorporated into the proposed Rule as 1.15(k)(2). Placing these requirements in the Rule makes them enforceable in disciplinary proceedings for the protection of the public. Sentence 3: The concept of prohibiting commingling is set forth in the proposed Rule. Because this sentence neither clarifies what the duty is nor provides guidance or a disciplinary standard, it was deleted. Sentence 4: Rejected because it is incomplete and therefore may confuse. The concept is discussed more directly in the latter part of added Comment [2]. Sentences 5-6: These sentences are overbroad and provide little guidance. Moreover, they conflict with the record keeping standards which the Board has adopted to give specific guidance regarding the frequency, nature and extent of record keeping for the protection of the public.

* Proposed Rule, Draft 15.3 (5/29/09). Note that Proposed Rule 1.15 includes a "Definitions" sections which precedes the "Comments" section.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons Comments/Definitions*	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	Definitions [1] As used in this Rule, "property" means (a) a tangible or intangible asset, other than funds, in which a client or other person claims any ownership interest or right of possession or enjoyment. Property does not include a client's file except for anything in it that has pecuniary value (e.g., a negotiable instrument) or intrinsic value (e.g., a will or trust). Regarding the client's file, see Rule 1.16(e). All references in this Rule to "a client or other person" mean a client or other person for whose benefit the lawyer holds funds or property.	New comment [1]: Added to clarify for guidance and enforcement purposes the fundamental issues of what "property" and whose "property" are governed by the Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons Comments/Definitions*	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[2] While normally it is impermissible to commingle the lawyer's own funds with client funds, paragraph (b) provides that it is permissible when necessary to pay bank service charges on that account. Accurate records must be kept regarding which part of the funds are the lawyer's.	~~[2] While normally it is impermissible to commingle the lawyer's own funds with client funds, paragraph (b) provides that it is permissible when necessary to pay bank service charges on that account. Accurate records must be kept regarding which part of the funds are the lawyer's.~~ [2] As used in this Rule "in connection with the performance of a legal service or representation" means that there is a relationship between the actions of a lawyer in his or her capacity as a lawyer and the receipt or holding of funds from a client or other person. The provisions of this Rule are also applicable when a lawyer serves a client both as a lawyer and as one who renders nonlegal services. Kelly v. State Bar (1991) 53 Cal.3d 509, 517 [280 Cal.Rptr. 298]. Although lawyers who provide fiduciary services that are not related to the performance of a legal service or representation may be required to handle funds in a fiduciary manner (e.g., when serving as an executor, escrow agent for parties to an escrow who are not clients, or as a trustee for a non-client), this Rule does not govern those activities. Because the latter fiduciary accounts are governed by other law, funds should be maintained in separate fiduciary accounts and not in a trust account established under this Rule. However, the failure to discharge fiduciary duties in relation to the provision of such services may result in discipline for other violations. See, e.g., Business and Professions Code section 6106.	Rejected entirely for redundancy: Sentence 1: This merely repeats the Rule and therefore is deleted as unnecessary. Sentence 2: This also merely repeats the Rule regarding record keeping and is deleted as unnecessary. New Comment [2]: Proposed for definition and clarification of another concept that is essential to the application of the Rule, which is that the Rule applies only when a lawyer acts "in connection with the performance of a legal service or representation". Other laws and regulations might apply to other fiduciary roles, such as when a lawyer acts as the personal representative of a probate estate. This clarification is for guidance and enforcement.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons Comments/Definitions*	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[3] Lawyers often receive funds from which the lawyer's fee will be paid. The lawyer is not required to remit to the client funds that the lawyer reasonably believes represent fees owed. However, a lawyer may not hold funds to coerce a client into accepting the lawyer's contention. The disputed portion of the funds must be kept in a trust account and the lawyer should suggest means for prompt resolution of the dispute, such as arbitration. The undisputed portion of the funds shall be promptly distributed.	~~[3] Lawyers often receive funds from which the lawyer's fee will be paid. The lawyer is not required to remit to the client funds that the lawyer reasonably believes represent fees owed. However, a lawyer may not hold funds to coerce a client into accepting the lawyer's contention. The disputed portion of the funds must be kept in a trust account and the lawyer should suggest means for prompt resolution of the dispute, such as arbitration. The undisputed portion of the funds shall be promptly distributed.~~ [3] As used in this Rule "client" means a prospective, current, or former client for whom not all legal services have been completed, or as to whom not all funds or property have been distributed in accordance with this Rule.	Rejected this language as a comment but incorporated the concepts into the proposed Rule. (See proposed Rule 1.15(d),(g) and (h).) Also, the concepts are clarified in added Comments [12], [13].) New Comment [3]: Proposed for definition of the essential term "client", for guidance and enforcement.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons Comments/Definitions*	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[4] Paragraph (e) also recognizes that third parties may have lawful claims against specific funds or other property in a lawyer's custody, such as a client's creditor who has a lien on funds recovered in a personal injury action. A lawyer may have a duty under applicable law to protect such third party claims against wrongful interference by the client. In such cases, when the third-party claim is not frivolous under applicable law, the lawyer must refuse to surrender the property to the client until the claims are resolved. A lawyer should not unilaterally assume to arbitrate a dispute between the client and the third party, but, when there are substantial grounds for dispute as to the person entitled to the funds, the lawyer may file an action to have a court resolve the dispute.	~~[4] Paragraph (e) also recognizes that third parties may have lawful claims against specific funds or other property in a lawyer's custody, such as a client's creditor who has a lien on funds recovered in a personal injury action. A lawyer may have a duty under applicable law to protect such third party claims against wrongful interference by the client. In such cases, when the third-party claim is not frivolous under applicable law, the lawyer must refuse to surrender the property to the client until the claims are resolved. A lawyer should not unilaterally assume to arbitrate a dispute between the client and the third party, but, when there are substantial grounds for dispute as to the person entitled to the funds, the lawyer may file an action to have a court resolve the dispute.~~ [4] As used in this Rule "entrusted funds" means funds that have been put into the care of a lawyer, by or on behalf of a client or other person in connection with the performance of a legal service or representation, that are held for the benefit of the client or other person, regardless of whether the funds are deposited or held in a trust account. Entrusted funds do not include (i) an advance for fees unless there is an agreement between the lawyer and the client or other person that the advance for fees will be held in trust; (ii) funds belonging wholly to a lawyer or law firm; (iii) payments for undisputed past-due fees; or (iv) undisputed reimbursement by a client or other person for costs advanced by a lawyer or law firm.	Rejected this language as a comment but incorporated the concepts into the proposed Rule. (See proposed Rule 1.15(g) and (h).) New Comment [4]: Proposed for definition and clarification of another essential term, which is what "entrusted funds" are governed by the Rule itself, for guidance and enforcement.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons Comments/Definitions*	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[5] The obligations of a lawyer under this Rule are independent of those arising from activity other than rendering legal services. For example, a lawyer who serves only as an escrow agent is governed by the applicable law relating to fiduciaries even though the lawyer does not render legal services in the transaction and is not governed by this Rule.	~~[5] The obligations of a lawyer under this Rule are independent of those arising from activity other than rendering legal services. For example, a lawyer who serves only as an escrow agent is governed by the applicable law relating to fiduciaries even though the lawyer does not render legal services in the transaction and is not governed by this Rule.~~ [5] As used in this Rule, "advance for fees" means a payment intended by the client as an advance payment for some or all of the services that the lawyer is expected to perform on the client's behalf.	Adopted the concept but rejected its expression: Lawyers acting as escrow agents in a transaction involving a client owe fiduciary duties to the non-client, requiring application of this Rule. (See e.g., Matter of Lilly (Review Dept. 1992) 2 Cal.State Bar Ct. Rptr. 185) This provides important public protection. In order to prevent confusion, the concept has been rewritten as proposed Comment [2]. New Comment [5]: Proposed for definition and clarification of an essential term, for guidance and enforcement.
[6] A lawyers' fund for client protection provides a means through the collective efforts of the bar to reimburse persons who have lost money or property as a result of dishonest conduct of a lawyer. Where such a fund has been established, a lawyer must participate where it is mandatory, and, even when it is voluntary, the lawyer should participate.	~~[6] A lawyers' fund for client protection provides a means through the collective efforts of the bar to reimburse persons who have lost money or property as a result of dishonest conduct of a lawyer. Where such a fund has been established, a lawyer must participate where it is mandatory, and, even when it is voluntary, the lawyer should participate.~~ [6] As used in this Rule, "bank charges" include any administrative or service charges charged to a trust account by an approved depository for trust accounts but does not include merchant account charges, chargebacks, or offsets charged in connection with a merchant account that is attached to a trust account.	Rejected entirely because the Client Security Fund is established independently of these Rules, and participation in it is not voluntary. (Bus. & Prof. Code §6140.5.) New Comment [6]: Proposed for definition and clarification of an essential term, for guidance and enforcement.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons Comments/Definitions*	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	Application of Rule [7] Funds do not take on a fiduciary status merely because they are deposited into a trust account. A lawyer's misuse of a client trust account can result in discipline. In the Matter of McKiernan (Rev. Dept. 1995) 3 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 420 (deposit of non-client business operating funds in trust account was misconduct.)	Added for public protection and guidance: This Comment clarifies that a lawyer is subject to professional discipline for depositing the lawyer's own funds or for depositing non-client business operating funds in a trust account. The purpose of this prohibition is to protect client funds from attachment or execution by the lawyer's or non-client's creditors or other claimants.
	Paragraph (a) - Application to true retainer fees [8] Because a true retainer fee, as defined in Rule 1.5(f)(1), is earned on receipt and so is not held for the benefit of the client, a lawyer may not deposit it in a client trust account. Baranowski v. State Bar (1979) 24 Cal.3d 153, 164 [154 Cal.Rptr. 752].	Added for public protection and guidance to clarify the prohibition against commingling as applied to true retainers.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons Comments/Definitions*	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[9] If any part of a true retainer fee is paid for or applied to fees for the performance of legal services, the entire amount loses its character as a true retainer fee and is converted to an advance for fees. Baranowski v. State Bar (1979) 24 Cal.3d 153, 164, fn.4 [154 Cal.Rptr. 752]; In the Matter of Fonte (Rev. Dept. 1994) 2 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 752, 757. When this occurs, the lawyer must comply with paragraphs (d) and (k)(4) with respect to the entire fee. See also Comment [10].	Added for public protection: This Comment clarifies proper handling of a true retainer converted to an advance for fees. It also clarifies that a converted true retainer should be afforded the same accounting and other protections afforded an advance for fees.
	Paragraph (d) - Advances for fees; accounting for advances for fees [10] Although a lawyer has no duty to deposit an advance for fees in a trust account, the lawyer still has a duty under paragraph (d)(1) to account for all funds received as an advance for fees. In preparing an accounting as required under paragraph (d), a lawyer may follow the standards set forth in Business and Professions Code section 6148(b). In the Matter of Fonte (Rev. Dept. 1994) 2 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 752, 756-758.	Added for public protection and guidance to lawyers: This Comment clarifies that a lawyer has a duty to account to the client for an advance for fees and provides guidance for the form of the accounting.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons Comments/Definitions*	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	Paragraph (e) - Duty to hold funds inviolate [11] Compliance with paragraphs (e) and (k)(4) requires that all withdrawals and disbursements from a trust account must be made in a manner that permits the recipient or payee of the withdrawal to be identified. Paragraphs (e) and (k)(4) are not intended to prohibit electronic transfers or to preclude a means of withdrawal that might be developed in the future, provided that the recipient of the payment is identified. When payment is made by check, the check should be payable to a specific person or entity.	Added for guidance and public protection by providing clarification about proper record keeping.
	Paragraphs (g) - (i) - Disputed fees [12] Paragraph (g)(2) of this Rule applies even when the lawyer claims to have a valid lien on trust funds for the payment for services, costs and expenses.	Added in place of Model Rule Comment [2] for clarification.
	[13] A lawyer may not withhold the undisputed portion of a client's or other person's funds because of a fee dispute. The undisputed amount must be paid promptly to the owner upon demand. Friedman v. State Bar (1990) 50 Cal.3d 235, 240-241 [266 Cal.Rptr. 632].	Added for public protection: This Comment clarifies that undisputed funds must be disbursed to prevent loss of use of the money by the owner.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons Comments/Definitions*	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[14] A lawyer may not unilaterally withdraw disputed fees from a trust account. However, in circumstances coming within paragraphs (h) or (i), a lawyer may interplead the disputed funds or property.	Added for public protection: This Comment clarifies that a lawyer may not unilaterally withdrawal entrusted funds.
	Paragraph (k) - Duties to maintain records and account for receipt of trust funds or property [15] A lawyer who receives client funds in which another person is known to have an interest (e.g., a medical provider lienholder), must also notify that person of the receipt. In the Matter of Respondent P (Rev. Dept. 1993) 2 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 622, 632. Certain statutory liens may have statutory notice requirements applicable to lawyers. See, e.g., Welfare and Institutions Code section 14124.79.	Added for public protection: This Comment clarifies important aspects of a lawyer's duty when holding entrusted funds in which someone other than the client claims an interest.
	[16] With respect to the timing and frequency of a lawyer's accounting under paragraph (k)(4), see Business & Professions Code section 6091.	Added for public protection: This Comment provides clarification by its cross-reference to a related statutory provision.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.15 Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons Comments/Definitions*	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	Other Guidance [17] Trust account practice assistance. For guidance concerning the management and administration of trust accounts under this Rule, see State Bar of California publication "Handbook on Trust Accounting for California Attorneys" and the "California Compendium on Professional Responsibility" Index.	Added for public protection: Because of the wide range of factual situations that can arise under this Rule and its central role in client protection and lawyer discipline, this Comment refers lawyers to additional sources of guidance on the application of the Rule.

Rule ~~4-100~~ Preserving Identity of 1.15: Handling Funds and Property of a Client Clients and Other Persons

(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

- (a) ~~(A) All~~ Duty to deposit entrusted funds ~~received~~ in trust account. A lawyer shall deposit all funds that the lawyer receives or ~~held~~ holds for the benefit of ~~clients by a member~~ client or law firm other person in connection with the performance of a legal service or representation by the lawyer, including ~~advances~~ an advance for costs and expenses, ~~shall be deposited~~ in one or more identifiable bank trust accounts labeled "Trust Account," "Client's Funds Account" or words of similar import, maintained in the State of California, or, ~~accordance~~ with written consent of the client, in any other jurisdiction where there is a substantial relationship between the client or the client's business and the other jurisdiction ~~this Rule. No funds belonging to the member or the law firm shall be deposited therein or otherwise commingled therewith except as follows:~~
- (b) Approved depositories for trust accounts. Except as provided in paragraph (l), or as expressly ordered by a tribunal, all trust accounts under this Rule shall be in depositories approved by the California Supreme Court in the State of California. All IOLTA trust accounts as defined in Business and Professions Code section 6211 shall be in depositories that are in compliance with the requirements of Business and Professions Code section 6212.
- (c) Trust account designation. A lawyer shall designate each trust account as "Client Trust Account" or other identifiable fiduciary title.
- (d) Advances for fees; deposit and accounting. A lawyer may, but is not required to, deposit an advance for fees in a trust account. Regardless of whether the lawyer has deposited an advance for fees in a trust account:
- (1) subject to Business and Professions Code section 6068(e), the lawyer must account to the client or other person who advanced the fees; and
- (2) if a client or other person disputes a lawyer's entitlement to a fee, any disputed portion of an advance for fees not yet fixed must be deposited in a trust account.
- (e) Duties concerning maintenance and use of trust funds. A lawyer shall maintain inviolate all funds on deposit in a trust account and all property entrusted to the lawyer for the benefit of a client or other person until distributed in accordance with this Rule.
- (f) Commingling of lawyer's funds and trust funds prohibited; exceptions. Funds belonging to a lawyer or law firm shall not be commingled with funds held in a trust account established under this Rule except:
- (1) ~~Funds~~ funds reasonably sufficient to pay bank charges;
- (2) deposits for overdraft protection that compensate exactly for the amount that the overdraft exceeds the funds on deposit plus any bank charges;
- (3) the lawyer's or law firm's funds deposited to restore entrusted funds that have been improperly withdrawn;
- (4) funds in which the lawyer claims an interest but which are disputed by the client or other person; or

(5) funds belonging in part to a client or other person and in part, presently or potentially, to the lawyer, but which are claimed by a third party.

(g) ~~(2) Duties when lawyer's entitlement to funds or property becomes fixed or the lawyer's entitlement is disputed. In the case of property, or funds belonging held in a trust account, that belong in part to a client or other person and in part presently or potentially to the member or lawyer, the law firm, lawyer shall withdraw or distribute the portion belonging to the member or law firm must be withdrawn lawyer at the earliest reasonable time after the member's lawyer's interest in that portion becomes fixed. However, when the right of the member or law firm to receive a portion of trust funds is disputed by the client, the disputed portion shall not be withdrawn until the dispute is finally resolved, provided that:~~

~~(B) — A member shall:~~

~~(1) — Promptly notify a client of the receipt of the client's funds, securities, or other properties.~~

(1) the client or other person may still dispute that the lawyer is entitled to the funds or property;

(2) when the right of a lawyer to receive a portion of entrusted funds or property is disputed by the client or other person, the lawyer shall distribute the undisputed portion in accordance with paragraph (k)(7), but shall not distribute the disputed portion until the dispute is finally resolved, the lawyer interpleads the funds or property, or the distribution is authorized by law or court order;

(3) a lawyer shall take reasonable steps promptly to resolve any dispute regarding entrusted funds or property in the circumstances of paragraph (g)(2); and

(4) if the client or other person disputes the lawyer's interest in entrusted funds or property after the lawyer's interest has become fixed and the lawyer has withdrawn the fixed portion, the lawyer shall have no duty to redeposit the disputed portion in a trust account.

(h) Duties when a client or other person disputes the other's entitlement to funds or property. When the right of a client or other person to receive a portion of entrusted funds or property is disputed by a client or other person, the lawyer shall not distribute the disputed portion of entrusted funds or property until the dispute is resolved, the lawyer interpleads the funds or property, or the distribution is authorized by law or court order, except that the lawyer shall make any distribution required by paragraph (k)(7).

(i) Duties when entitlement to funds or property is disputed by third party. When the right of a client or other person to receive a portion of entrusted funds or property (1) is disputed by a third party that has a security or ownership interest in the entrusted funds or property or (2) is subject to a court order, the lawyer shall not distribute the disputed portion until the dispute is resolved, the lawyer interpleads the funds or property, or the distribution is authorized by law or court order. Nevertheless the lawyer shall distribute any undisputed entrusted funds or property, as required by paragraph (k)(7).

(j) Credit card, debit, or other electronically transferred payments. A lawyer may establish a relationship with a merchant bank or electronic payment service so that a client or other person may use credit card, debit, or other electronically transferred payments to pay an advance for fees or costs directly into a trust account, provided that the contract with the merchant bank or electronic payment service requires that the lawyer's obligations for any charges, chargebacks and offsets be paid from a source that is not a trust account.

(k) Management, recordkeeping and accounting for funds and property held in trust. A lawyer shall:

- (1) promptly notify a client or other person of the receipt of funds, securities, or other property in which the client or other person claims or has an interest and notify the client or other person of the amount of such funds or the identity or quantity of such property;
- (2) ~~Identify~~identify and label securities and ~~properties~~property of a client or other person promptly upon receipt~~and~~, place them in a safe deposit box or other place of safekeeping as soon as practicable~~;~~, segregate any securities or property from the lawyer's own securities or property of the same character, and notify the client or other person of the location of the property;
- (3) maintain complete records of all funds and property of a client or other person coming into the possession of the lawyer;
- (4) account to the client or other person for whom the lawyer holds funds or property. An accounting shall include, but is not limited to: (i) a statement of all funds and property received by the lawyer as of the date of the accounting, the source, amount of funds or description of property, and date received; (ii) a statement of all distributions of such funds and property, the date of distribution, the amount of funds or description of property distributed, the payee or distributee, and any trust account check number; and (iii) any balance remaining in the possession of the lawyer;

- (5) ~~(3) Maintain complete~~preserve records of all entrusted funds, securities, and other properties of a client coming into the possession of the member or law firm and render appropriate accounts to the client regarding them; ~~preserve such records~~property for a period of no less than five years after final appropriate distribution of such funds or ~~properties~~property; ~~and comply with any order for an audit of such records issued pursuant to the Rules of Procedure of the State Bar.~~
 - (6) comply with any order for an audit of such records issued by the State Bar Court pursuant to the Rules of Procedure of the State Bar; and
 - (7) ~~(4) Promptly pay or deliver~~promptly distribute, as requested by ~~the~~a client, ~~any funds, securities,~~ or other ~~properties~~person, any undisputed funds or property in the possession of the ~~member which~~lawyer that the client or other person is entitled to receive.
- (l) Scope and Application of Rule. This Rule does not apply to the following:
- (1) A member of the State Bar of California residing and practicing law in a state other than California who (i) receives funds or property from a person who is not a resident of California, arising from or related to a legal representation not in California, and (ii) handles the funds or property in accordance with the law of the controlling jurisdiction. See Rule 8.5(b).

(2) Funds or property entrusted to a multi-jurisdictional law firm in locations outside of California by clients domiciled outside of California regarding disputes or matters arising or being litigated outside of California, even though the firm maintains an office in California.

(3) Lawyers practicing under California Rules of Court 9.47 or 9.48, regarding all matters involving a client or other person domiciled outside of California in which no other party to the matter, residing in California, claims an interest.

(4) At the request of the State Bar of California disciplinary agency, a member of the State Bar of California who is subject to subparagraphs (l)(1) and (2) shall provide information respecting the lawyer's or law firm's non-California bank or financial institution account holding client or third party funds, including, but not limited to, requested bank or financial institution records.

(m) ~~(C)~~Board of Governors' Standards. The Board of Governors of the State Bar shall have the authority to formulate and adopt standards as to what "records" shall be maintained by ~~members and law firms~~lawyers in accordance with ~~subparagraph~~paragraph ~~(Bk)~~(3). The standards formulated and adopted by the Board, as from time to time amended, shall be effective and binding on all ~~members~~lawyers.

COMMENT

Definitions

[1] As used in this Rule, "property" means (a) a tangible or intangible asset, other than funds, in which a client or other person claims any ownership interest or right of possession or enjoyment. Property does not include a client's file except for anything in it that has pecuniary value (e.g., a negotiable instrument) or intrinsic value (e.g., a will or trust). Regarding the client's file, see Rule 1.16(e). All references in this Rule to "a client or other person" mean a client or other person for whose benefit the lawyer holds funds or property.

[2] As used in this Rule "in connection with the performance of a legal service or representation" means that there is a relationship between the actions of a lawyer in his or her capacity as a lawyer and the receipt or holding of funds from a client or other person. The provisions of this Rule are also applicable when a lawyer serves a client both as a lawyer and as one who renders nonlegal services. (Kelly v. State Bar (1991) 53 Cal.3d 509, 517 [280 Cal.Rptr. 298].) Although lawyers who provide fiduciary services that are not related to the performance of a legal service or representation may be required to handle funds in a fiduciary manner (e.g., when serving as an executor, escrow agent for parties to an escrow who are not clients, or as a trustee for a non-client), this Rule does not govern those activities. Because the latter fiduciary accounts are governed by other law, funds should be maintained in separate fiduciary accounts and not in a trust account established under this Rule. However, the failure to discharge fiduciary duties in relation to the provision of such services may result in discipline for other violations. (See, e.g., Business and Professions Code section 6106.)

- [3] As used in this Rule “client” means a prospective, current, or former client for whom not all legal services have been completed, or as to whom not all funds or property have been distributed in accordance with this Rule.
- [4] As used in this Rule “entrusted funds” means funds that have been put into the care of a lawyer, by or on behalf of a client or other person in connection with the performance of a legal service or representation, that are held for the benefit of the client or other person, regardless of whether the funds are deposited or held in a trust account. Entrusted funds do not include (i) an advance for fees unless there is an agreement between the lawyer and the client or other person that the advance for fees will be held in trust; (ii) funds belonging wholly to a lawyer or law firm; (iii) payments for undisputed past-due fees; or (iv) undisputed reimbursement by a client or other person for costs advanced by a lawyer or law firm.
- [5] As used in this Rule, “advance for fees” means a payment intended by the client as an advance payment for some or all of the services that the lawyer is expected to perform on the client’s behalf.
- [6] As used in this Rule, “bank charges” include any administrative or service charges charged to a trust account by an approved depository for trust accounts but does not include merchant account charges, chargebacks, or offsets charged in connection with a merchant account that is attached to a trust account.

Application of Rule

- [7] Funds do not take on a fiduciary status merely because they are deposited into a trust account. A lawyer’s misuse of a client trust account can result in discipline. In the Matter of McKiernan (Rev. Dept. 1995) 3 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 420 (deposit of non-client business operating funds in trust account was misconduct.)

Paragraph (a) - Application to true retainer fees

- [8] Because a true retainer fee, as defined in Rule 1.5(f), is earned on receipt and so is not held for the benefit of the client, a lawyer may not deposit it in a client trust account. (Baranowski v. State Bar (1979) 24 Cal.3d 153, 164 [154 Cal.Rptr. 752].)
- [9] If any part of a true retainer fee is paid for or applied to fees for the performance of legal services, the entire amount loses its character as a true retainer fee and is converted to an advance for fees. (Baranowski v. State Bar (1979) 24 Cal.3d 153, 164, fn. 4 [154 Cal.Rptr. 752]; In the Matter of Fonte (Rev. Dept. 1994) 2 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 752, 757.) When this occurs, the lawyer must comply with paragraphs (d) and (k)(4) with respect to the entire fee. See also Comment [10].

Paragraph (d) - Advances for fees; accounting for advances for fees

- [10] Although a lawyer has no duty to deposit an advance for fees in a trust account, the lawyer still has a duty under paragraph (d)(1) to account for all funds received as an advance for fees. In preparing an accounting as required under paragraph (d), a lawyer may follow the standards set forth in Business and Professions Code section 6148(b). (In the Matter of Fonte (Rev. Dept. 1994) 2 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 752, 756-758.)

~~Standards:-~~

~~Pursuant to rule 4-100(C) the Board of Governors of the State Bar adopted the following standards, effective January 1, 1993, as to what "records" shall be maintained by members and law firms in accordance with subparagraph (B)(3).~~

- ~~(1) A member shall, from the date of receipt of client funds through the period ending five years from the date of appropriate disbursement of such funds, maintain:~~
 - ~~(a) a written ledger for each client on whose behalf funds are held that sets forth:~~
 - ~~(i) the name of such client;~~
 - ~~(ii) the date, amount and source of all funds received on behalf of such client;~~
 - ~~(iii) the date, amount, payee and purpose of each disbursement made on behalf of such client; and~~
 - ~~(iv) the current balance for such client~~
 - ~~(b) a written journal for each bank account that sets forth:~~
 - ~~(i) the name of such account;~~
 - ~~(ii) the date, amount and client affected by each debit and credit; and~~

~~(iii) the current balance in such account;~~

~~(c) all bank statements and canceled checks for each bank account; and~~

~~(d) each monthly reconciliation (balancing) of (a), (b), and (c).~~

Paragraph (e) - Duty to hold funds inviolate

[11] Compliance with paragraphs (e) and (k)(4) requires that all withdrawals and disbursements from a trust account must be made in a manner that permits the recipient or payee of the withdrawal to be identified. Paragraphs (e) and (k)(4) are not intended to prohibit electronic transfers or to preclude a means of withdrawal that might be developed in the future, provided that the recipient of the payment is identified. When payment is made by check, the check should be payable to a specific person or entity.

Paragraphs (g) - (i) - Disputed fees

[12] Paragraph (g)(2) of this Rule applies even when the lawyer claims to have a valid lien on trust funds for the payment for services, costs and expenses.

[13] A lawyer may not withhold the undisputed portion of a client's or other person's funds because of a fee dispute. The undisputed amount must be paid promptly to the owner upon demand. (Friedman v. State Bar (1990) 50 Cal.3d 235, 240-241 [266 Cal.Rptr. 632].)

[14] A lawyer may not unilaterally withdraw disputed fees from a trust account. However, in circumstances coming within paragraphs (h) or (i), a lawyer may interplead the disputed funds or property.

~~(2) — A member shall, from the date of receipt of all securities and other properties held for the benefit of client through the period ending five years from the date of appropriate disbursement of such securities and other properties, maintain a written journal that specifies:~~

~~(a) — each item of security and property held;~~

~~(b) — the person on whose behalf the security or property is held;~~

Paragraph (k) - Duties to maintain records and account for ~~(c) the date of receipt of the security~~trust funds or property;

~~(d) — the date of distribution of the security or property; and~~

~~(e) — person to whom the security or property was distributed.~~

[15] A lawyer who receives client funds in which another person is known to have an interest (e.g., a medical provider lienholder), must also notify that person of the receipt. (In the Matter of Respondent P (Rev. Dept. 1993) 2 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 622, 632) Certain statutory liens may have statutory notice requirements applicable to lawyers. (See, e.g., Welfare and Institutions Code section 14124.79.)

[16] With respect to the timing and frequency of a lawyer's accounting under paragraph (k)(4), see Business & Professions Code section 6091.

Other Guidance

[17] Trust account practice assistance. For guidance concerning the management and administration of trust accounts under this Rule, see State Bar of California publication "Handbook on Trust Accounting for California Attorneys" and the "California Compendium on Professional Responsibility" Index.

Rule 1.15: Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) Duty to deposit entrusted funds in trust account. A lawyer shall deposit all funds that the lawyer receives or holds for the benefit of a client or other person in connection with the performance of a legal service or representation by the lawyer, including an advance for costs and expenses, in one or more trust accounts in accordance with this Rule.
- (b) Approved depositories for trust accounts. Except as provided in paragraph (l), or as expressly ordered by a tribunal, all trust accounts under this Rule shall be in depositories approved by the California Supreme Court in the State of California. All IOLTA trust accounts as defined in Business and Professions Code section 6211 shall be in depositories that are in compliance with the requirements of Business and Professions Code section 6212.
- (c) Trust account designation. A lawyer shall designate each trust account as "Client Trust Account" or other identifiable fiduciary title.
- (d) Advances for fees; deposit and accounting. A lawyer may, but is not required to, deposit an advance for fees in a trust account. Regardless of whether the lawyer has deposited an advance for fees in a trust account:
 - (1) subject to Business and Professions Code section 6068(e), the lawyer must account to the client or other person who advanced the fees; and
 - (2) if a client or other person disputes a lawyer's entitlement to a fee, any disputed portion of an advance for fees not yet fixed must be deposited in a trust account.
- (e) Duties concerning maintenance and use of trust funds. A lawyer shall maintain inviolate all funds on deposit in a trust account and all property entrusted to the lawyer for the benefit of a client or other person until distributed in accordance with this Rule.
- (f) Commingling of lawyer's funds and trust funds prohibited; exceptions. Funds belonging to a lawyer or law firm shall not be commingled with funds held in a trust account established under this Rule except:
 - (1) funds reasonably sufficient to pay bank charges;
 - (2) deposits for overdraft protection that compensate exactly for the amount that the overdraft exceeds the funds on deposit plus any bank charges;
 - (3) the lawyer's or law firm's funds deposited to restore entrusted funds that have been improperly withdrawn;
 - (4) funds in which the lawyer claims an interest but which are disputed by the client or other person; or
 - (5) funds belonging in part to a client or other person and in part, presently or potentially, to the lawyer, but which are claimed by a third party.
- (g) Duties when lawyer's entitlement to funds or property becomes fixed or the lawyer's entitlement is disputed. In the case of property, or funds held in a trust account, that belong in part to a client or other person and in part to the lawyer, the lawyer shall withdraw or distribute the portion belonging to the lawyer at the earliest reasonable time after the lawyer's interest in that portion becomes fixed, provided that:

- (1) the client or other person may still dispute that the lawyer is entitled to the funds or property;
 - (2) when the right of a lawyer to receive a portion of entrusted funds or property is disputed by the client or other person, the lawyer shall distribute the undisputed portion in accordance with paragraph (k)(7), but shall not distribute the disputed portion until the dispute is finally resolved, the lawyer interpleads the funds or property, or the distribution is authorized by law or court order;
 - (3) a lawyer shall take reasonable steps promptly to resolve any dispute regarding entrusted funds or property in the circumstances of paragraph (g)(2); and
 - (4) if the client or other person disputes the lawyer's interest in entrusted funds or property after the lawyer's interest has become fixed and the lawyer has withdrawn the fixed portion, the lawyer shall have no duty to redeposit the disputed portion in a trust account.
- (h) Duties when a client or other person disputes the other's entitlement to funds or property. When the right of a client or other person to receive a portion of entrusted funds or property is disputed by a client or other person, the lawyer shall not distribute the disputed portion of entrusted funds or property until the dispute is resolved, the lawyer interpleads the funds or property, or the distribution is authorized by law or court order, except that the lawyer shall make any distribution required by paragraph (k)(7).

- (i) Duties when entitlement to funds or property is disputed by third party. When the right of a client or other person to receive a portion of entrusted funds or property (1) is disputed by a third party that has a security or ownership interest in the entrusted funds or property or (2) is subject to a court order, the lawyer shall not distribute the disputed portion until the dispute is resolved, the lawyer interpleads the funds or property, or the distribution is authorized by law or court order. Nevertheless the lawyer shall distribute any undisputed entrusted funds or property, as required by paragraph (k)(7).
- (j) Credit card, debit, or other electronically transferred payments. A lawyer may establish a relationship with a merchant bank or electronic payment service so that a client or other person may use credit card, debit, or other electronically transferred payments to pay an advance for fees or costs directly into a trust account, provided that the contract with the merchant bank or electronic payment service requires that the lawyer's obligations for any charges, chargebacks and offsets be paid from a source that is not a trust account.
- (k) Management, recordkeeping and accounting for funds and property held in trust. A lawyer shall:
 - (1) promptly notify a client or other person of the receipt of funds, securities, or other property in which the client or other person claims or has an interest and notify the client or other person of the amount of such funds or the identity or quantity of such property;

- (2) identify and label securities and property of a client or other person promptly upon receipt, place them in a safe deposit box or other place of safekeeping as soon as practicable, segregate any securities or property from the lawyer's own securities or property of the same character, and notify the client or other person of the location of the property;
- (3) maintain complete records of all funds and property of a client or other person coming into the possession of the lawyer;
- (4) account to the client or other person for whom the lawyer holds funds or property. An accounting shall include, but is not limited to: (i) a statement of all funds and property received by the lawyer as of the date of the accounting, the source, amount of funds or description of property, and date received; (ii) a statement of all distributions of such funds and property, the date of distribution, the amount of funds or description of property distributed, the payee or distributee, and any trust account check number; and (iii) any balance remaining in the possession of the lawyer;
- (5) preserve records of all entrusted funds or property for a period of no less than five years after final appropriate distribution of such funds or property;
- (6) comply with any order for an audit of such records issued by the State Bar Court pursuant to the Rules of Procedure of the State Bar; and

- (7) promptly distribute, as requested by a client or other person, any undisputed funds or property in the possession of the lawyer that the client or other person is entitled to receive.

(l) Scope and Application of Rule. This Rule does not apply to the following:

- (1) A member of the State Bar of California residing and practicing law in a state other than California who (i) receives funds or property from a person who is not a resident of California, arising from or related to a legal representation not in California, and (ii) handles the funds or property in accordance with the law of the controlling jurisdiction. See Rule 8.5(b).
- (2) Funds or property entrusted to a multi-jurisdictional law firm in locations outside of California by clients domiciled outside of California regarding disputes or matters arising or being litigated outside of California, even though the firm maintains an office in California.
- (3) Lawyers practicing under California Rules of Court 9.47 or 9.48, regarding all matters involving a client or other person domiciled outside of California in which no other party to the matter, residing in California, claims an interest.
- (4) At the request of the State Bar of California disciplinary agency, a member of the State Bar of California who is subject to subparagraphs (l)(1) and (2) shall provide information respecting the lawyer's or law firm's non-California bank or financial institution account holding client or third party funds, including, but not limited to, requested bank or financial institution records.

- (m) Board of Governors' Standards. The Board of Governors of the State Bar shall have the authority to formulate and adopt standards as to what "records" shall be maintained by lawyers in accordance with paragraph (k)(3). The standards formulated and adopted by the Board, as from time to time amended, shall be effective and binding on all lawyers.

COMMENT

Definitions

- [1] As used in this Rule, "property" means (a) a tangible or intangible asset, other than funds, in which a client or other person claims any ownership interest or right of possession or enjoyment. Property does not include a client's file except for anything in it that has pecuniary value (e.g., a negotiable instrument) or intrinsic value (e.g., a will or trust). Regarding the client's file, see Rule 1.16(e). All references in this Rule to "a client or other person" mean a client or other person for whose benefit the lawyer holds funds or property.
- [2] As used in this Rule "in connection with the performance of a legal service or representation" means that there is a relationship between the actions of a lawyer in his or her capacity as a lawyer and the receipt or holding of funds from a client or other person. The provisions of this Rule are also applicable when a lawyer serves a client both as a lawyer and as one who renders nonlegal services. Kelly v. State Bar (1991) 53 Cal.3d 509, 517 [280 Cal.Rptr. 298]. Although lawyers who provide fiduciary services that are not related to the performance of a legal service or representation may be required to handle funds in a fiduciary manner (e.g., when serving as an executor, escrow agent for parties to an escrow who are not clients, or as a trustee for a non-client), this Rule does not govern those activities. Because the latter fiduciary accounts are governed by other law, funds should be maintained in separate fiduciary accounts and not in a trust account established under this Rule. However, the failure to discharge fiduciary duties in relation to the provision of such services may result in discipline for other violations. See, e.g., Business and Professions Code section 6106.

- [3] As used in this Rule "client" means a prospective, current, or former client for whom not all legal services have been completed, or as to whom not all funds or property have been distributed in accordance with this Rule.
- [4] As used in this Rule "entrusted funds" means funds that have been put into the care of a lawyer, by or on behalf of a client or other person in connection with the performance of a legal service or representation, that are held for the benefit of the client or other person, regardless of whether the funds are deposited or held in a trust account. Entrusted funds do not include (i) an advance for fees unless there is an agreement between the lawyer and the client or other person that the advance for fees will be held in trust; (ii) funds belonging wholly to a lawyer or law firm; (iii) payments for undisputed past-due fees; or (iv) undisputed reimbursement by a client or other person for costs advanced by a lawyer or law firm.
- [5] As used in this Rule, "advance for fees" means a payment intended by the client as an advance payment for some or all of the services that the lawyer is expected to perform on the client's behalf.

- [6] As used in this Rule, “bank charges” include any administrative or service charges charged to a trust account by an approved depository for trust accounts but does not include merchant account charges, chargebacks, or offsets charged in connection with a merchant account that is attached to a trust account.

Application of Rule

- [7] Funds do not take on a fiduciary status merely because they are deposited into a trust account. A lawyer’s misuse of a client trust account can result in discipline. In the Matter of McKiernan (Rev. Dept. 1995) 3 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 420 (deposit of non-client business operating funds in trust account was misconduct.)

Paragraph (a) – Application to true retainer fees

- [8] Because a true retainer fee, as defined in Rule 1.5(f)(1), is earned on receipt and so is not held for the benefit of the client, a lawyer may not deposit it in a client trust account. Baranowski v. State Bar (1979) 24 Cal.3d 153, 164 [154 Cal.Rptr. 752].
- [9] If any part of a true retainer fee is paid for or applied to fees for the performance of legal services, the entire amount loses its character as a true retainer fee and is converted to an advance for fees. Baranowski v. State Bar (1979) 24 Cal.3d 153, 164, fn.4 [154 Cal.Rptr. 752]; In the Matter of Fonte (Rev. Dept. 1994) 2 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 752, 757. When this occurs, the lawyer must comply with paragraphs (d) and (k)(4) with respect to the entire fee. See also Comment [10].

Paragraph (d) – Advances for fees; accounting for advances for fees

- [10] Although a lawyer has no duty to deposit an advance for fees in a trust account, the lawyer still has a duty under paragraph (d)(1) to account for all funds received as an advance for fees. In preparing an accounting as required under paragraph (d), a lawyer may follow the standards set forth in Business and Professions Code section 6148(b). In the Matter of Fonte (Rev. Dept. 1994) 2 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 752, 756–758.

Paragraph (e) – Duty to hold funds inviolate

- [11] Compliance with paragraphs (e) and (k)(4) requires that all withdrawals and disbursements from a trust account must be made in a manner that permits the recipient or payee of the withdrawal to be identified. Paragraphs (e) and (k)(4) do not prohibit electronic transfers or preclude a means of withdrawal that might be developed in the future, provided that the recipient of the payment is identified. When payment is made by check, the check should be payable to a specific person or entity.

Paragraphs (g) – (i) – Disputed fees

- [12] Paragraph (g)(2) of this Rule applies even when the lawyer claims to have a valid lien on trust funds for the payment for services, costs and expenses.
- [13] A lawyer may not withhold the undisputed portion of a client’s or other person’s funds because of a fee dispute. The undisputed amount must be paid promptly to the owner upon demand. Friedman v. State Bar (1990) 50 Cal.3d 235, 240–241 [266 Cal.Rptr. 632].

- [14] A lawyer may not unilaterally withdraw disputed fees from a trust account. However, in circumstances coming within paragraphs (h) or (i), a lawyer may interplead the disputed funds or property.

Paragraph (k) – Duties to maintain records and account for receipt of trust funds or property

- [15] A lawyer who receives client funds in which another person is known to have an interest (e.g., a medical provider lienholder), must also notify that person of the receipt. In the Matter of Respondent P (Rev. Dept. 1993) 2 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 622, 632. Certain statutory liens may have statutory notice requirements applicable to lawyers. See, e.g., Welfare and Institutions Code section 14124.79.
- [16] With respect to the timing and frequency of a lawyer's accounting under paragraph (k)(4), see Business & Professions Code section 6091.

Other Guidance

- [17] Trust account practice assistance. For guidance concerning the management and administration of trust accounts under this Rule, see State Bar of California publication "Handbook on Trust Accounting for California Attorneys" and the "California Compendium on Professional Responsibility" Index.

Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property: Handling Funds
and Property of Clients and Other Persons.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 1
Disagree = 1
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Hazard, Geoffrey, Deborah Rhode & Richard Zitrin (ethics law professors group)	D	Yes		The Commission has developed an extraordinarily detailed and complicated trust account rule. We commend the Commission for the time and energy involved in fashioning such a detailed series of requirements. However, we remain quite concerned that details of this extraordinary nature read more like a handbook than a disciplinary rule. While we have stated that we believe the CRPC must provide guidance as well as simple rules of discipline, we are concerned as to whether the trust account rule may be so complicated as to pose traps for both unwary and wary practitioners. We note that the proposed CRPC rule runs 30 paragraphs, while the ABA rule is five paragraphs long. We believe more work needs to be done on this rule in order to provide practitioners with clear guidance and sufficient simplicity to enable California lawyers to comply with reasonable requirements without getting lost in the interstices of complex linguistics. The Board should return this rule to the Commission with appropriate instructions.	The Commission disagrees for all of the reasons stated in the Introduction, including the number of jurisdictions that have adopted considerably lengthened and complicated trust account rules.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property: Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 3 Agree = 1 Disagree = 1 Modify = 1 NI = 0
No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	M	Yes	1.15(d)	While OCTC supports some of the Commission's additions or changes to the Model Rules and there is much merit to the Commission's explanation that costs are covered by the rule, OCTC disagrees with subparagraph (d) of this rule with allows, but does not require, attorneys to place advanced fees in the trust account. We believe this creates confusion and a lack of consistency. Either every lawyer should be placing advanced fees in the Client Trust Account ("CTA") or no lawyer should be placing advanced fees in the CTA. A rule requiring that advanced fees be deposited into the CTA will protect clients. At least one state appellate court has found that the Current Rule requires attorneys to place advanced fees into the CTA. (See T & R Foods, Inc v. Rose.) Further, the Model Rules and most other jurisdictions require attorneys to place advanced fees in the trust account.	The Commission disagrees on a policy for the reasons stated in the Introduction and due to comments from practitioners in the criminal and civil fields advising that such a requirement would result in seized advanced fee, denying access to justice.
				Comment [10]	If the change requested above is adopted, the first sentence of Comment [10] should be stricken.	The Commission disagrees.
				1.15(d), (g), (h) & (j)	OCTC finds very confusing and inconsistent the proposed rules as to when disputed funds need to be placed in the client trust account. (See Proposed Rules 1.15(d), (g), (h), and	The Commission disagrees. These provisions track California case law, which has not been adopted by the ABA.

Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property: Handling Funds
and Property of Clients and Other Persons.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 1
Disagree = 1
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				1.15(e)	(i.) OCTC suggests deletion of the deviation from the Model Rules regarding these issues. This may require changes to Comments [12] – [14]. OCTC suggests that the term “inviolate” in Proposed Rule 1.15(e) be deleted as it is confusing and unnecessary in light of the rest of the sentence. All client funds should be maintained in a trust account until the time it is permitted to withdraw them. OCTC would also suggest that the rule specifically provide that the misappropriation of funds violates this rule.	The Commission disagrees that it is confusing, since the term has been part of a California trust account rule since 1927 and has been part B&P Code section 6068(e) since 1872.
				1.15(f)	OCTC finds Proposed Rule 1.15(f) confusing and inconsistent. OCTC sees no compelling reason to deviate from the ABA Model Rules and, therefore, OCTC suggests that the first sentence of rule 1.15(a) of the ABA Model Rules be reinstated. OCTC is particularly concerned that there are too many exceptions to the prohibition on the commingling of client funds and this will undermine the rule.	The Commission disagrees and recommends the rule as less confusing because it codifies the existing circumstances which are not commingling.
				1.15(k)(6)	OCTC is concerned that subparagraph (k)(6) does not provide for the Supreme Court or other courts to issue an order for an audit. The rule should not determine jurisdiction or send a message that attorneys can violate a	The Commission disagrees. See B&P Code section 6103.

Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property: Handling Funds
and Property of Clients and Other Persons.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 1
Disagree = 1
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response court order. The Supreme Court has always provided that is has the right to involve itself at any stage of the disciplinary proceedings and investigation. (See Brotsky v. State Bar (1962) 57 Cal.2d 287, 301; In re Rose (2000) 22 Cal.4th 430, 439; Obrien v. Jones (2000) 23 Cal.4th 40, 48. See also In re Accusation of Walker (1948) 32 Cal.2d 488, 490.)
				1.15(k)(7)	OCTC also believes that subparagraph (k)(7) should add the word "authorized" to other person to clarify that only authorized persons can request undisputed funds	The Commission disagrees that any such clarification is needed in the context of the provision.
				1.15(l)	OCTC is concerned that the language of subparagraph (l) is too broad and, as written, no part of the rule applies to those attorneys and firms discussed in the subparagraphs. This seems counter to the purpose of the rule and public protection. OCTC is concerned that rule 1.15(l)(2) and (3) do not state, as rule 1.15(l)(1) does, that if the rule does not apply in those situations, the firms and lawyers handle the funds in accordance with the law of the controlling jurisdiction. OCTC also is concerned how this paragraph is impacted by the Choice of Law Rule (Proposed Rule 8.5).	The Commission disagrees.
					OCTC supports subparagraph (l)(4).	No response required.

Rule 1.15 Safekeeping Property: Handling Funds and Property of Clients and Other Persons. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 3 Agree = 1 Disagree = 1 Modify = 1 NI = 0
No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					There are too many Comments and some of them appear to belong in the Proposed Rule.	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.
3	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.

Rule 1.15: Safekeeping Property

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Arizona: Effective January 1, 2009, Arizona adopted an emergency, interim rule change to Rule 1.15, permitting lawyers to accept credit card payments to cover advance fees, costs, and expenses. The rule change is open for public comment and may be subsequently amended.

District of Columbia: The language of D.C. Rule 1.15 differs significantly from the ABA Model Rule, though the basic requirements are the same. D.C.'s version of Rule 1.17 deals with notification of trust account overdrafts.

Florida: Chapter 5 of Florida's Supreme Court Rules regulates lawyer trust accounts.

Georgia: Rule 1.15(I) generally tracks the 1983 version of ABA Model Rule 1.15, but Georgia adds Rule 1.15(II) to govern trust accounts and IOLTA accounts, and Rule 1.15(III) to govern trust account recordkeeping, overdraft notification, and auditing by disciplinary authorities. Rule 1.15(III) requires that lawyers deposit trust funds in a financial institution that agrees "to report to the State Disciplinary Board whenever any properly payable instrument is presented against a lawyer trust account containing insufficient funds, and the instrument is not honored." The Comment to Rule 1.15(III) explains the overdraft agreement as follows:

[2] The overdraft agreement requires that all overdrafts be reported to the Office of General Counsel of the State Bar of Georgia whether or not the instrument is honored. It is improper for a lawyer to accept "overdraft privileges" or any other arrangement for a personal loan on a client trust account, particularly in exchange for the institution's promise to delay or not to report an overdraft. . . .

[3] The overdraft notification provision is not intended to result in the discipline of every lawyer who overdraws a trust account. The lawyer or institution may explain occasional errors. The provision merely intends that the Office of General Counsel receive an early warning of improprieties so that corrective action, including audits for cause, may be taken.

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2010, Rule 1.15(c) provides that an “advance payment retainer” must be in writing, signed by the client, and include a number of disclosures regarding how the lawyer intends to handle the advance payment. Comment 3B instructs lawyers to read the provision in conjunction with Dowling v. Chicago Options Associates, Inc., 226 Ill. 2d 277 (2007), which distinguishes different types of retainers. According to the Comment, an “advance payment retainer” is “a present payment to the lawyer in exchange for the commitment to provide legal services in the future. Ownership of this retainer passes to the lawyer immediately upon payment.”

Rule 1.15(i) contains a highly unusual provision, originally adopted in 1998 at the urging of the real estate bar, which under certain circumstances permits lawyers to hold funds that have been “deposited but not collected” in a separate Real Estate Funds Account (REFA).

Massachusetts: Rule 1.15 has extensive provisions for deposit of client funds in IOLTA accounts, and contains provisions to ensure that disciplinary authorities are notified in the event a lawyer’s check is dishonored.

Michigan provides for IOLTA accounts in Rule 1.15(d).

Minnesota: Rule 1.15 differs significantly in structure and substance from ABA Model Rule 1.15.

New Jersey: Under Rule 1.15(a), funds must be deposited in New Jersey institutions, without exception. Rule 1.15(a) also incorporates the substance of ABA Model Rule 1.15(b), and requires lawyers to keep trust account records for seven years. New Jersey deletes ABA Model Rule 1.15(c), and New Jersey Rule 1.15(b) deletes the requirement in ABA Model Rule 1.15(d) that a lawyer promptly render a full accounting of property upon request. New Jersey adds 1.15(d), which refers lawyers to section 1:21-6 of the Court Rules on recordkeeping.

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 1.15 addresses the same issues as the Model Rule, but in more detail. For example, New York imposes a seven-year recordkeeping requirement for eight specified categories of documents, such as “records of all deposits in and withdrawals from” trust accounts, and copies of “all retainer and compensation agreements with clients,” “all bills rendered to clients,” and “all records showing payments to lawyers, investigators or other persons, not in the lawyer's regular employ, for services rendered or performed."

Ohio: Rule 1.15 differs significantly from ABA Model Rule 1.15. Among other things, Rule 1.15(f) provides as follows: "Upon dissolution of any law firm, the former partners, managing partners, or supervisory lawyers shall promptly account for all client funds and shall make appropriate arrangements for one of them to maintain all records...." Rule 1.15(h) imposes strict requirements on every lawyer or law firm that "owns an interest in a business that provides a law-related service...."

Pennsylvania: The Pennsylvania rules include requirements and definitions that are far more detailed and nuanced than the Model Rule.

Virginia: Rule 1.15, which substantially incorporates provisions from Virginia's former Code of Professional Responsibility, differs significantly from ABA Model Rule 1.15. Virginia Rule 1.15(d) prescribes the responsibility of lawyers who receive funds or other property in which a client or third person has an interest.

Washington: Rule 1.15A(e) provides that a lawyer "must promptly provide a written accounting to a client or third person after distribution of property or upon request. A lawyer must provide at least annually a written accounting to a client or third person for whom the lawyer is holding funds."

Wisconsin: Rule 1.15 is so highly detailed and so long (about 16 pages) that it has its own table of contents. Rule 1.15(a) defines 10 separate terms (such as "Demand account," "Fiduciary property," and "Financial institution"). Rule 1.15(b)(4) provides: "Unearned fees and advanced payments of fees shall be held in trust until earned by the lawyer.... Funds advanced by a client or 3rd party for payment of costs shall be held in trust until the costs are incurred." Particularly interesting is Rule 1.15(e)(4), which elaborates on a series of "Prohibited transactions," including:

a. Cash. No disbursement of cash shall be made from a trust account or from a deposit to a trust account, and no check shall be made payable to "Cash."

b. Telephone transfers. No deposits or disbursements shall be made to or from a pooled trust account by a telephone transfer of funds. This section does not prohibit any of the following: (1) wire transfers, and (2) telephone transfers between separate, non-pooled demand and separate, non-pooled, non-demand trust accounts that a lawyer maintains for a particular client.

c. Internet transactions. A lawyer shall not make deposits to or disbursements from a trust account by way of an Internet transaction.

d. Electronic transfers by 3rd parties. A lawyer shall not authorize a 3rd party to electronically withdraw funds from a trust account. A lawyer shall not authorize a 3rd party to deposit funds into the lawyer's trust account through a form of electronic deposit that allows the 3rd party making the deposit to withdraw the funds without the permission of the lawyer.

e. Credit card transactions. A lawyer shall not authorize transactions by way of credit card to or from a trust account. However, earned fees may be deposited by way of credit card to a lawyer's business account. . . .

Proposed Rule 1.16 [3-700]

“Declining or Terminating Representation”

(XDraft # 9, 6/29/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 1.16 and the Model Rule 1.16 generally cover the same four topics: situations in which a lawyer must terminate a representation, situations in which a lawyer may do so, the requirement of court authorization when the court’s rules so require, and the lawyer’s conduct when a representation is terminated. The proposed Rule, however, involves several substantive changes to the Model Rule. In addition, following the second round of public comment, a new comment [6A] was added and revisions were made to Comment [9] to clarify a lawyer’s duties upon withdrawal. See Introduction.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule

Comment

- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☒ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 3-700.

Statute

Case law

- ☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

- ☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Public Comment Distribution ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 7

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 1

Abstain 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☐ Yes ☒ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☐ No Known Stakeholders

☒ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

A representative from the Alameda Public Defender's Office expressed a concern that the Rule's requirement that a lawyer return the client's file have an exception for materials a criminal defense lawyer is prohibited by statute from providing a client. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (e)(1).

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 1.16* Declining Or Terminating Representation

July 2010

(Draft rule following consideration of second round of public comment)

INTRODUCTION:

This proposed Rule and the Model Rule generally cover the same four topics: situations in which a lawyer must terminate a representation, situations in which a lawyer may do so, the requirement of court authorization when the court's rules so require, and the lawyer's conduct in terminating a representation. However, the Commission's recommendation includes a number of substantive and drafting changes in the Model Rule. These generally can be summarized as designed to enhance client protection either by narrowing the situations in which a lawyer is permitted to withdraw or by making Rule language clearer and more detailed.

The most fundamental of these changes is the removal of Model Rule 1.16(b)(1), a provision that permits a lawyer to withdraw from a representation whenever this can be accomplished "without material adverse effect on the interest of the client". The Commission views this as nearly carte blanche, permitting a lawyer to abandon a client whenever it is profitable or convenient for a lawyer to do so, limited only by the indefinite, unexplained, and indefinable standard of "material adverse effect" on the client. As more fully explained in the accompanying comparison chart, the Commission believes that, because clients properly place heavy reliance on their lawyers, a lawyer's acceptance of a representation involves a serious commitment to the client. As a result, a lawyer should not make this commitment lightly or only for so long as it might suit the lawyer's convenience, and a lawyer should withdraw from a representation only as permitted by one of the express provisions of this Rule.

* Proposed Rule 1.16, XDraft 9 (6/29/09).

Response to Public Comment. Following the second round of public comment, the Commission made several clarifying changes to the Rule Comment about the lawyer’s duties when a representation is terminated. First, the Commission added new Comment [6A] under the heading, “Scope of Withdrawal.” It clarifies that a lawyer who represents a client in multiple matters, or who works for a single client-employer (e.g., as in-house counsel or for the government), might not be obligated to resign from all representations, or from employment, when the lawyer withdraws in a particular matter. Second, the Commission made revisions to Comment [9] to refer lawyers to other authority in determining whether fees and expenses have been earned and incurred, respectively, and thus need not be returned to a client upon termination of the representation. See Explanation of Changes for Comment [9].

Variations in other jurisdictions: There are a number of local variations in this Rule. These include the following: North Carolina includes in its paragraph (b) counterparts to our recommended paragraphs (b)(1) [client insists on taking a legally unsupported legal position] and (b)(6) [termination of a representation by client consent]. Ohio and New York also have provisions similar to the Commission’s recommended (b)(6). North Dakota has added “reasonably believes” in paragraph (a)(1), like the Commission’s recommendation. Virginia omits paragraph MR (b)(1), as does the Commission’s recommendation. D.C. and New York have the equivalent of the Commission’s recommended (b)(10) [the lawyer believes in good faith, in a proceeding pending before a tribunal, that the tribunal will find the existence of other good cause for withdrawal]. N.Y. in its (c)(7) has an equivalent to our recommended (b)(4) [the client renders it unreasonably difficult for the lawyer to provide effective legal services], in its (c)(8) an equivalent to our recommended (b)(7) [the difficulty of working with co-counsel makes it in the best interests of the client for the lawyer to withdraw], and in its (c)(9) an equivalent to our (b)(8) [the lawyer's mental or physical condition renders it difficult for the lawyer to carry out the employment effectively].

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) Except as stated in paragraph (c), a lawyer shall not represent a client or, where representation has commenced, shall withdraw from the representation of a client if: (1) the representation will result in violation of the rules of professional conduct or other law;	(a) Except as stated in paragraph (c), a lawyer shall not represent a client or, where representation has commenced, shall withdraw from the representation of a client if: (1) the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the representation will result in violation of ~~the rules of professional conduct~~these Rules or ~~other law~~of the State Bar Act;	Paragraph (a) is substantially the same as the Model Rule but makes two changes. First, the Model Rule requires a lawyer to withdraw from a representation if the representation “will” result in a violation by the lawyer. That standard appears to require withdrawal only when the lawyer can predict with certainty that a violation will occur. The Commission proposes to broaden this duty by requiring the lawyer to withdraw if the lawyer “knows or reasonably should know”. Second, the Model Rule phrase “of the rules of professional conduct” is changed to “of these Rules or the State Bar Act” in order to include the related statutory provisions and conform to our style.
(2) the lawyer’s physical or mental condition materially impairs the lawyer’s ability to represent the client; or	(2) the lawyer’s physical or mental condition materially impairs the lawyer’s ability to represent the client competently; or	Model Rule paragraph (a) implies but does not state that a lawyer must withdraw from a representation when the lawyer’s physical or mental condition impairs the lawyer’s ability to represent the client competently, but it omits the word “competently”. The Commission proposes to add that word for clarity.
(3) the lawyer is discharged.	(3) the client discharges the lawyer ~~—is discharged.~~	Paragraph (c) is substantively the same as the Model Rule but has been restated in the active voice to conform to the Guidelines for Drafting and Editing Court Rules.

* Proposed Rule 1.16, XDraft 9 (6/29/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(b) Except as stated in paragraph (c), a lawyer may withdraw from representing a client if: (1) withdrawal can be accomplished without material adverse effect on the interests of the client;	(b) Except as stated in paragraph (c), a lawyer may withdraw from representing a client if: ~~(1) withdrawal can be accomplished without material adverse effect on the interests of the client;~~	Paragraph (b) lists a number of situations in which a lawyer may, but is not required to, withdraw from a representation. The first of these is that a lawyer may terminate a representation whenever doing so will have no “material adverse effect on the interests of the client”, thus permitting withdrawal when it is in the lawyer’s interests but not the client’s. The Commission has rejected this broad authorization, primarily for client protection reasons but also because of the role of lawyers in the legal system. The Commission believes that lawyers generally should accept a representation only with the intent of seeing it through to completion, and that a lawyer’s termination of a representation for the lawyer’s benefit: (i) would be contrary to client expectations and would damage the reputation of lawyers generally and of the legal system; (ii) would allow lawyers to place their own convenience above the protection of the interests of their clients; and (iii) would give to lawyers the unacceptably broad discretion to terminate under the vague standard of a “material adverse effect” on the client (how much financial or other injury to the client would trigger the Model Rule standard?). In summary, a lawyer should not be permitted to terminate a representation for personal convenience, such as in order to accept another, more profitable or prestigious engagement.
	(1) the client insists upon presenting a claim or defense in litigation, or asserting a position or making a demand in a non-litigation matter, that is not warranted under existing law and cannot be supported by good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law;	In place of Model Rule paragraph (a)(1), the Commission proposes to add this paragraph (a)(1), which in substance tracks proposed Rule 3.1 (titled “Meritorious Claims and Contentions”).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(2) the client persists in a course of action involving the lawyer's services that the lawyer reasonably believes is criminal or fraudulent;	(2) the client ~~persists in~~ either seeks to pursue a criminal or fraudulent course of action involving conduct or has used the lawyer's services to advance a course of conduct that the lawyer reasonably believes ~~is criminal~~ was a crime or ~~fraudulent~~ fraud;	Proposed paragraph (b)(2) combines the topics of Model Rule paragraph (b)(2) and (3) in a single paragraph, but with a broadening of Model Rule (b)(3). Model Rule paragraph (b)(3) permits a lawyer to terminate a representation if the "client has used" the lawyer's services to perpetrate a crime or fraud, a phrasing that would seem to require the lawyer's to be certain. This proposal expands the Model Rule to permit termination when the lawyer "reasonably believes" the client has acted in that way. In addition, the drafting of the Model Rule incorrectly has "criminal or fraudulent" modify "the lawyer's services", which is not intended and is eliminated by this revision.
(3) the client has used the lawyer's services to perpetrate a crime or fraud;	(3) the client ~~has used~~ insists that the ~~lawyer's services to perpetrate~~ lawyer pursue a ~~crime~~ course of conduct that is criminal or ~~fraud~~ fraudulent;	In place of Model Rule paragraph (b)(3), which now is part of paragraph (b)(2), this proposal adds the situation in which a client insists that the lawyer pursue a course of conduct that itself would be criminal or fraudulent. This supplements proposed paragraph (b)(2), which addresses the situation in which the lawyer's actions might be perfectly legal, such as simply forming a corporation for a client, but the client's actions are not proper.
(4) a the client insists upon taking action that the lawyer considers repugnant or with which the lawyer has a fundamental disagreement;	(4) ~~a the client insists upon taking action that by other conduct renders it unreasonably difficult for the lawyer considers repugnant or with which to carry out the lawyer has a fundamental disagreement~~ employment effectively;	The Commission has rejected Model Rule paragraph (b)(4). The concept that a client's conduct is "repugnant" to a lawyer is divorced from the proper concern, which is the ability of the lawyer to competently and loyally represent the client and would give the lawyer a broad subjective basis for terminating representations. In its place, proposed paragraph (b)(4) identifies as a basis for permissive withdrawal conduct of the client that materially interferes with the lawyer's ability to act competently. The Commission's rejection was informed by the requirement of Bus. & Prof. C. § 6068(h).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(5) the client fails substantially to fulfill an obligation to the lawyer regarding the lawyer's services and has been given reasonable warning that the lawyer will withdraw unless the obligation is fulfilled;	(5) the client ~~fails—substantially—to fulfill~~breaches a material term of an agreement with or obligation to the lawyer ~~regarding~~relating to the ~~lawyer's services~~representation, and the lawyer has ~~been~~ given the client a reasonable warning after the breach that the lawyer will withdraw unless the client fulfills the agreement or performs the obligation ~~is fulfilled~~;	Proposed paragraph (b)(5) narrows the Model Rule counterpart in order to advance the goal of better client protection. First, the lawyer's right to withdraw is limited to the client's breach of a material term of an agreement with the lawyer. Second, the lawyer's obligation to warn the client of possible termination must come after the client's breach so that, for example, it cannot be buried in a much earlier fee agreement.
	(6) the client knowingly and freely assents to termination of the representation;	The Model Rule and the Commission's proposal include as a mandatory withdrawal the situation in which the client discharges the lawyer. However, the Model Rule overlooks the possibility that a lawyer and client will agree to terminate a representation. Because Rule 1.16 is the exclusive statement of when a lawyer may terminate a representation, the Commission has included this alternative.
	(7) the lawyer believes in good faith that the inability to work with co-counsel makes it in the best interests of the client to withdraw from the representation;	The Model Rule recognizes certain situations in which the lawyer's ability to represent the client might have been materially affected by the client's conduct. However, it overlooks the possibility that a lawyer will not be able to perform in the best interest of a client because of the conduct of co-counsel. As stated above, because Rule 1.16 is the exclusive statement of when a lawyer may terminate a representation, the Commission has included this alternative.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(8) the lawyer's mental or physical condition renders it difficult for the lawyer to carry out the employment effectively;	The Model Rule also overlooks the possibility that a lawyer's own condition might interfere materially with the lawyer's ability to advance the interests of a client. As explained above, because Rule 1.16 is the exclusive statement of when a lawyer may terminate a representation, the Commission has included this alternative.
(6) the representation will result in an unreasonable financial burden on the lawyer or has been rendered unreasonably difficult by the client; or	~~(6)~~ a continuation of the representation will likely to result in an unreasonable financial burden on the lawyer a violation of these Rules or has been rendered unreasonably difficult by the client State Bar Act; or	The Commission rejected Model Rule paragraph (b)(6). As written, it appears to be broad enough to permit a lawyer to terminate a representation simply because of more profitable representation is available. See the explanation above for the Commission's rejection of Model Rule paragraph (b)(1). The lawyer's financial situation would come into play only when so grave that it would affect the lawyer's ability to fulfill the duty of competence.
(7) other good cause for withdrawal exists.	~~(7) other good cause for withdrawal exists.~~	Model Rule paragraph (b)(7) grants to the lawyer the unilateral authority to determine when it is ok to terminate a representation. The Commission has rejected that broad authority for the same reason that it rejected Model Rule paragraph (b)(1), as explained above.
	(10) the lawyer believes in good faith, in a proceeding pending before a tribunal, that the tribunal will find the existence of other good cause for withdrawal.	Proposed paragraph (b)(10) is a narrow substitute for Model Rule paragraph (b)(7). This broadly allows a lawyer to seek court permission to withdraw, leaving the court to control its proceedings.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(c) A lawyer must comply with applicable law requiring notice to or permission of a tribunal when terminating a representation. When ordered to do so by a tribunal, a lawyer shall continue representation notwithstanding good cause for terminating the representation.	(c) ~~A lawyer must comply with applicable law requiring notice to or~~ permission for termination ~~of a tribunal when terminating a representation. When ordered to do so is~~ required by the rules of a tribunal, a lawyer shall ~~continue~~not terminate a representation ~~notwithstanding good cause for terminating the representation before that tribunal without its permission.~~	Proposed paragraph (c) is substantively the same as the Model Rule. However, it eliminates what appears to be a Model Rule assumption that there always is applicable law governing termination of a representation and clarifies that, when there is applicable law, that law takes precedence even if there is no court order directing the lawyer to continue a representation.
(d) Upon termination of representation, a lawyer shall take steps to the extent reasonably practicable to protect a client's interests, such as giving reasonable notice to the client, allowing time for employment of other counsel, surrendering papers and property to which the client is entitled and refunding any advance payment of fee or expense that has not been earned or incurred. The lawyer may retain papers relating to the client to the extent permitted by other law.	~~(d) Upon termination of representation, a lawyer shall take steps to the extent reasonably practicable to protect a client's interests, such as giving reasonable notice to the client, allowing time for employment of other counsel, surrendering papers and property to which the client is entitled and refunding any advance payment of fee or expense that has not been earned or incurred. The lawyer may retain papers relating to the client to the extent permitted by other law.~~	The Commission believes that a lawyer's conduct upon termination of a lawyer-client relationship involves client-protection issues of the highest importance. It therefore has rejected the generalized, unspecific language of Model Rule paragraph (d) in favor of the considerably more detailed requirements of proposed paragraphs (d) and (e). The Commission believes that the definition of a lawyer's duties in this situation should be robust so that lawyers will not be left in doubt as to their obligations and in order to facilitate discipline of lawyers who do not fulfill their obligations. The proposed replacement provisions also make substantive changes, as explained below.
	(d) A lawyer shall not terminate a representation until the lawyer has taken reasonable steps to avoid reasonably foreseeable prejudice to the rights of the client, such as giving the client sufficient notice to permit the client to retain other counsel, and complying with paragraph (e).	Model Rule paragraph (d) requires a lawyer to take certain protective steps upon termination of a representation. The Commission has rejected the timing of this obligation as coming too late. This proposed paragraph obligates the lawyer to take protective steps before terminating a representation.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(e) Upon the termination of a representation for any reason: (1) Subject to any applicable protective order, non-disclosure agreement or statutory limitation, the lawyer promptly shall release to the client, at the request of the client, all client materials and property. "Client materials and property" includes correspondence, pleadings, deposition transcripts, experts' reports and other writings, exhibits, and physical evidence, whether in tangible, electronic or other form, and other items reasonably necessary to the client's representation, whether the client has paid for them or not; and	Proposed paragraph (e) contains a detailed elaboration of a lawyer's duties to a former client upon the termination of a representation. It is substantively consistent with Model Rule paragraph (d). In adding a reference to limitations imposed by applicable protective order, non-disclosure agreements or statutes, this recognizes, for example, the Proposition 15 limitations on the materials to which a criminal defendant is entitled. See proposed Comment [9], below.
	(2) The lawyer promptly shall refund any part of a fee or expense paid in advance that the lawyer has not earned or incurred. This provision is not applicable to a true retainer fee paid solely for the purpose of ensuring the availability of the lawyer for the matter.	Model Ruled paragraph (d) requires the lawyer to refund any advance payment of fee or expense that has not been earned or incurred. This proposal requires that the lawyer promptly refund. Also, this adds a reminder about true retainers because they have caused considerable confusion among lawyers.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] A lawyer should not accept representation in a matter unless it can be performed competently, promptly, without improper conflict of interest and to completion. Ordinarily, a representation in a matter is completed when the agreed-upon assistance has been concluded. See Rules 1.2(c) and 6.5. See also Rule 1.3, Comment [4].	[1] A lawyer should not accept a representation unless the lawyer reasonably believes the lawyer can complete the representation in a matter unless it can be performed competently, promptly compliance with these Rules and the State Bar Act. A lawyer has the obligation or option to withdraw only in the circumstances and only in the manner described in this Rule. This requirement applies, without improper conflict of interest and limitation, to completion any sale under Rules 1.17. Ordinarily, a representation in a matter is completed when the agreed-upon assistance has been concluded. (See Rules 1.2(c) and 6.5.) A lawyer can be subject to discipline for improperly threatening to terminate a representation. See ~~also Rule 1.3~~Matter of Shalant, Comment [4] Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 829 (2005).	This proposed Comment restates the Model Rule Comment as a declarative sentence in line with the Guidelines for Drafting and editing Court Rules. It adds the important substantive reminder that Rule 1.16 provides the exclusive statement of when and how a lawyer may terminate a lawyer-client relationship. Also, it adds references to the State Bar Act and California case law and uses the phrase “these Rules”

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Mandatory Withdrawal [2] A lawyer ordinarily must decline or withdraw from representation if the client demands that the lawyer engage in conduct that is illegal or violates the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law. The lawyer is not obliged to decline or withdraw simply because the client suggests such a course of conduct; a client may make such a suggestion in the hope that a lawyer will not be constrained by a professional obligation.	Mandatory Withdrawal [2] A lawyer ordinarily must decline or withdraw from representation if the client demands that the lawyer engage in conduct that ~~is illegal or violates~~would violate these Rules or other lawthe State Bar Act. The references to these Rules and to the State Bar Act in paragraphs (a)(1) and (b)(3) reflect the primacy of the lawyer's duties, for example, under Business and Professions Code sections 6067, 6068, 6103, and 6106. The lawyer is not obliged to decline or withdraw simply because the client suggests such a course of conduct; a client ~~may~~might make such a suggestion in the hope that a lawyer will not be constrained by a professional obligation. Depending on the circumstances, when the client's conduct permits the lawyer to withdraw, or to seek permission to withdraw where that is required, the lawyer might consider counseling the client regarding the client's conduct, limiting the scope of the representation, or aiding the client in rectifying the client's prior conduct. See Rules 1.2(c) and 1.4.	This proposed Comment is substantively the same as the Model Rule Comment but tracks the Rule changes explained above and adds several references to pertinent California statutes.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[3] When a lawyer has been appointed to represent a client, withdrawal ordinarily requires approval of the appointing authority. See also Rule 6.2. Similarly, court approval or notice to the court is often required by applicable law before a lawyer withdraws from pending litigation. Difficulty may be encountered if withdrawal is based on the client's demand that the lawyer engage in unprofessional conduct. The court may request an explanation for the withdrawal, while the lawyer may be bound to keep confidential the facts that would constitute such an explanation. The lawyer's statement that professional considerations require termination of the representation ordinarily should be accepted as sufficient. Lawyers should be mindful of their obligations to both clients and the court under Rules 1.6 and 3.3.	[3] When a lawyer has been appointed to represent a client, withdrawal ordinarily requires approval of the appointing authority. See also Rule 6.2. ~~Similarly, court approval or notice to the court is often required by applicable law before a lawyer withdraws from pending litigation. Difficulty may be encountered if withdrawal is based on the client's demand that the lawyer engage in unprofessional conduct. The court may request an explanation for the withdrawal, while the lawyer may be bound to keep confidential the facts that would constitute such an explanation. The lawyer's statement that professional considerations require termination of the representation ordinarily should be accepted as sufficient. Lawyers should be mindful of their obligations to both clients and the court under Rules 1.6 and 3.3.~~	The Commission has rejected the last four sentences of the Model Rule Comment because it discusses topics covered by court rules and because it presumes to tell courts what standard of proof they should accept without regard to other facts and circumstances the court might be aware of.
	[4] A lawyer is not subject to discipline for withdrawing under paragraph (a)(1) or (2) if the lawyer has acted reasonably under the facts and circumstances known to the lawyer, even if that belief later is shown to have been wrong.	Proposed Comment [4] has no Model Rule counterpart. It is based on Restatement § 32, Comment f.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Discharge [4] A client has a right to discharge a lawyer at any time, with or without cause, subject to liability for payment for the lawyer's services. Where future dispute about the withdrawal may be anticipated, it may be advisable to prepare a written statement reciting the circumstances.	Discharge ~~[4] A client has a right to discharge a lawyer at any time, with or without cause, subject to liability for payment for the lawyer's services. Where future dispute about the withdrawal may be anticipated, it may be advisable to prepare a written statement reciting the circumstances.~~	The Commission has rejected Model Rule Comments [4] – [6]. The purpose of a Comment is to explain the Rule to which it is attached, and Model Rule Comments [4] – [6] do not do so. Instead, Comment [4] is a practice pointer together with a statement of other law. As a statement of other law, it is not entirely correct because it overlooks the wrongful discharge rights of house counsel under the General Dynamics v. Superior Court line of cases.
[5] Whether a client can discharge appointed counsel may depend on applicable law. A client seeking to do so should be given a full explanation of the consequences. These consequences may include a decision by the appointing authority that appointment of successor counsel is unjustified, thus requiring self-representation by the client.	~~[5] Whether a client can discharge appointed counsel may depend on applicable law. A client seeking to do so should be given a full explanation of the consequences. These consequences may include a decision by the appointing authority that appointment of successor counsel is unjustified, thus requiring self-representation by the client.~~	See the explanation of the rejection of Model Rule Comment [4], above.
[6] If the client has severely diminished capacity, the client may lack the legal capacity to discharge the lawyer, and in any event the discharge may be seriously adverse to the client's interests. The lawyer should make special effort to help the client consider the consequences and may take reasonably necessary protective action as provided in Rule 1.14.	~~[6] If the client has severely diminished capacity, the client may lack the legal capacity to discharge the lawyer, and in any event the discharge may be seriously adverse to the client's interests. The lawyer should make special effort to help the client consider the consequences and may take reasonably necessary protective action as provided in Rule 1.14.~~	See the explanation of Model Rule Comment [4], above. Also, because of the extreme sensitivity of the Rule 1.14 treatment of a lawyer's relationship to a client with diminished capacity, the Commission believes the entire discussion of that subject should be in a single place where the drafters' and the readers' attention can be focused.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Optional Withdrawal [7] A lawyer may withdraw from representation in some circumstances. The lawyer has the option to withdraw if it can be accomplished without material adverse effect on the client's interests. Withdrawal is also justified if the client persists in a course of action that the lawyer reasonably believes is criminal or fraudulent, for a lawyer is not required to be associated with such conduct even if the lawyer does not further it. Withdrawal is also permitted if the lawyer's services were misused in the past even if that would materially prejudice the client. The lawyer may also withdraw where the client insists on a taking action that the lawyer considers repugnant or with which the lawyer has a fundamental disagreement.	Optional Withdrawal ~~[7] A~~ Paragraph (b)(2) permits a lawyer ~~may withdraw from representation in some circumstances. The lawyer has the option to withdraw if it can be accomplished without material adverse effect on the client's interests. Withdrawal is also justified~~ from a representation even if the ~~client persists~~ lawyer is not asked to participate in or further a course of action that the lawyer reasonably believes is criminal or fraudulent, for a lawyer is not required to be associated with such conduct ~~even if.~~ Even when a withdrawal is in these circumstances, the lawyer ~~does not further it. Withdrawal is also permitted if the lawyer's services were misused in the past even if that would materially prejudice the client. The lawyer may also withdraw where the client insists on a taking action that the lawyer considers repugnant or~~ must comply with which the lawyer has a fundamental disagreement this or her duties under Business and Professions Code, section 6068(e)(1) and [Rule 1.6].	This proposed Comment substantially revises Model Rule Comment [7] because of the Commission's rejection of Model Rule paragraph (b)(1). Instead, this provision is directed only to proposed paragraph (b)(2), which as explained above is a combination of Model Rule paragraphs (b)(2) and (b)(3).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[8] A lawyer may withdraw if the client refuses to abide by the terms of an agreement relating to the representation, such as an agreement concerning fees or court costs or an agreement limiting the objectives of the representation.	[86] ~~A~~ Paragraph (b)(5) allows a lawyer ~~may to~~ withdraw from a representation if the client refuses to abide by ~~the terms~~ a material term of an agreement relating to the representation, such as an agreement concerning fees ~~or~~ court costs or other expenses, or an agreement limiting the objectives of the representation.	This paragraph is substantially the same as the corresponding Model Rule Comment but tracks the two substantive changes in the Commission's proposed Rule: (i) the lawyer may terminate a representation under paragraph (b)(5) only if the client has breached a material term of an agreement with the lawyer; and (ii) the Commission's proposed paragraph (b)(5) specifies that an agreement regarding expenses is within the scope of the provision.
	Scope of Withdrawal [6A] When a lawyer withdraws from the representation of a client in a particular matter under paragraph (a) or (b), the lawyer might not be obligated to withdraw from the representation of the same client in other matters. For example, a lawyer might be obligated under paragraph (a)(1) to withdraw from representing a client because the lawyer has a conflict of interest under Rule 1.7(a), but that conflict might not arise in other representations of the client.	Comment [6A], which has no counterpart in the Model Rule, was added in response to final public comment. It clarifies that a lawyer who represents a client in multiple matters, or who works for a single client-employer (e.g., as in-house counsel or for the government), might not be obligated to resign from all representations, or from employment when the lawyer withdraws in a particular matter.
	Permission to Withdraw [7] Lawyers must comply with their obligations to their clients under Rule 1.6 and to the courts under Rule 3.3 when seeking permission to withdraw under paragraph (c). If a tribunal denies a lawyer permission to withdraw, the lawyer is obligated to comply with the tribunal's order. See Business and	Paragraph (c) of both the Model Rule and the Commission's proposed Rule requires that the lawyer comply with any applicable court rules regarding termination of a representation. However, the Model Rule has no explanatory Comment. The Commission has added this paragraph for that purpose and has included references to potentially applicable California statutes

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	Professions Code sections 6068(b), and 6103. This duty applies even if the lawyer sought permission to withdraw because of a conflict of interest. Regarding withdrawal from limited scope representations that involve court appearances, compliance with Rules 3.36 and 5.71 of the California Rules of Court satisfies paragraph (c).	and court rules.
Assisting the Client upon Withdrawal [9] Even if the lawyer has been unfairly discharged by the client, a lawyer must take all reasonable steps to mitigate the consequences to the client. The lawyer may retain papers as security for a fee only to the extent permitted by law. See Rule 1.15.	~~[9] Even if the lawyer has been unfairly discharged by the client, a lawyer must take all reasonable steps to mitigate the consequences to the client. The lawyer may retain papers as security for a fee only to the extent permitted by law. See Rule 1.15.~~	Model Rule Comment [9] expresses a general principle with which the Commission agrees, but it instead recommends the adoption of Comments [8] – [10] in order to more fully explain the extremely important topic of what a lawyer is required to do after the termination of a lawyer-client relationship. This elaboration is believed to advance client protection materially.
	[8] Paragraph (d) requires the lawyer to take "reasonable steps to avoid reasonably foreseeable prejudice to the rights of the client." These steps will vary according to the circumstances. Absent special circumstances, "reasonable steps" do not include providing additional services to the client once the successor counsel has been employed and the lawyer has satisfied paragraph (e). The lawyer must satisfy paragraph (d) even if the lawyer has been unfairly discharged by the client.	Proposed Comment [8] is much the same as Model Rule Comment [9], but with two changes. First, this does not include the Model Rule to retaining liens because they are prohibited under California law. Second, this adds the explanation that a lawyer's post-termination duty to a former client normally does not include an obligation to provide additional legal services – a duty that arguably is implied by the Model Rule's language.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[9] A lawyer's duties under paragraph (e)(1) arise after termination of a representation for any reason and include client papers and property held by a lawyer in any form or format. This obligation codifies existing case law. See Academy of California Optometrists v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 999 [124 Cal.Rptr. 668]; Weiss v. Marcus (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 590 [124 Cal.Rptr. 297]. See Penal Code sections 1054.2 and 1054.10 for examples of statutory restrictions on whether a lawyer may release client papers. Other statutory provisions might require the lawyer to provide client papers to someone other than the client, and in those situations paragraph (e) applies equally to the duty to provide papers to that other person. See Penal Code section 1054.2(b). Paragraph (e) also requires the lawyer to "promptly" return fees and expenses paid in advance that have not been earned or incurred; the question of what fees and expenses have been earned or incurred is governed in part by Rule 1.5. If a client disputes the amount to be returned, the lawyer shall comply with Rule 1.15.	Proposed Comment [9] adds a detailed explanation of the extremely important question of how a lawyer is obligated to handle client files post-termination. It also adds references to important California statutory and case law authority. It also clarifies that the issue of whether fees and expenses have been earned or incurred is governed in part by Rule 1.5, recognizing that other provisions of law might be applicable. E.g., Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6147 & 6148. Finally, it adds a reference to Rule 1.15 with respect to the lawyer's handling of unearned fees when the lawyer and client disagree as to the lawyer's entitlement to additional payment.
	[10]A lawyer's duty under paragraph (e)(1) to release "writings" to the client includes all writings as defined in Evidence Code section 250. A lawyer must comply with paragraph (e)(1) without regard to whether the client has complied with an obligation to pay the lawyer's fees and costs. Paragraph (e)(1) does not prohibit a lawyer from making, at the	Proposed Comment [10] further elaborates on the lawyer's post-termination duties with respect to the former client's file. It: (i) further explains what is included in the client's file by referring to the Evidence Code definition of "writing"; (ii) clarifies that the lawyer's duty to make the file available to the former client does not mean that the lawyer is not permitted to copy the file at the lawyer's own expense; and (iii) explains that, although the Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	lawyer's own expense, and retaining copies of papers released to the client, or to prohibit a claim for the recovery of the lawyer's expense in any subsequent legal proceeding. Paragraph (e)(1) also does not affirmatively grant to the lawyer a right to retain copies of client papers or to recover the cost of copying them; these are issues that might be determined by contract, court order, or rule of law.	does not grant the lawyer the right to copy the file, there might be contractual, court order, or other reasons why the lawyer does not have the right to copy.

Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation

(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to the Public Comment Draft)

- (a) Except as stated in paragraph (c), a lawyer shall not represent a client or, where representation has commenced, shall withdraw from the representation of a client if:
 - (1) the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the representation will result in violation of these Rules or of the State Bar Act;
 - (2) the lawyer's physical or mental condition materially impairs the lawyer's ability to represent the client competently; or
 - (3) the client discharges the lawyer.
- (b) Except as stated in paragraph (c), a lawyer may withdraw from representing a client if:
 - (1) the client insists upon presenting a claim or defense in litigation, or asserting a position or making a demand in a non-litigation matter, that is not warranted under existing law and cannot be supported by good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law;
 - (2) the client either seeks to pursue a criminal or fraudulent course of conduct or has used the lawyer's services to advance a course of conduct that the lawyer reasonably believes was a crime or fraud;
 - (3) the client insists that the lawyer pursue a course of conduct that is criminal or fraudulent;
 - (4) the client by other conduct renders it unreasonably difficult for the lawyer to carry out the employment effectively;
 - (5) the client breaches a material term of an agreement with or obligation to the lawyer relating to the representation, and the lawyer has given the client a reasonable warning after the breach that the lawyer will withdraw unless the client fulfills the agreement or performs the obligation;
 - (6) the client knowingly and freely assents to termination of the representation;
 - (7) the lawyer believes in good faith that the inability to work with co-counsel makes it in the best interests of the client to withdraw from the representation;
 - (8) the lawyer's mental or physical condition renders it difficult for the lawyer to carry out the employment effectively;
 - (9) a continuation of the representation is likely to result in a violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act; or
 - (10) the lawyer believes in good faith, in a proceeding pending before a tribunal, that the tribunal will find the existence of other good cause for withdrawal.
- (c) If permission for termination of a representation is required by the rules of a tribunal, a lawyer shall not terminate a representation before that tribunal without its permission.

- (d) A lawyer shall not terminate a representation until the lawyer has taken reasonable steps to avoid reasonably foreseeable prejudice to the rights of the client, such as giving the client sufficient notice to permit the client to retain other counsel, and complying with paragraph (e).
- (e) Upon the termination of a representation for any reason:
 - (1) Subject to any applicable protective order, non-disclosure agreement or statutory limitation, the lawyer promptly shall release to the client, at the request of the client, all client materials and property. "Client materials and property" includes correspondence, pleadings, deposition transcripts, experts' reports and other writings, exhibits, and physical evidence, whether in tangible, electronic or other form, and other items reasonably necessary to the client's representation, whether the client has paid for them or not; and
 - (2) The lawyer promptly shall refund any part of a fee or expense paid in advance that the lawyer has not earned or incurred. This provision is not applicable to a true retainer fee paid solely for the purpose of ensuring the availability of the lawyer for the matter.

COMMENT

- [1] A lawyer should not accept a representation unless the lawyer reasonably believes the lawyer can complete the representation in compliance with these Rules and the State Bar Act. A lawyer has the obligation or option to withdraw only in the circumstances and only in the manner described in this Rule. This requirement applies, without limitation, to any sale under Rule 1.17. Ordinarily, a representation in a matter is completed when the agreed-upon assistance has been concluded. See Rules 1.2(c) and 6.5. A lawyer can be subject to discipline for improperly threatening to terminate a representation. ~~(See~~ In the Matter of Shalant 4 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 829.

Mandatory Withdrawal

- [2] A lawyer ordinarily must decline or withdraw from representation if the client demands that the lawyer engage in conduct that would violate these Rules or the State Bar Act. The references to these Rules and to the State Bar Act in paragraphs (a)(1) and (b)(3) reflect the primacy of the lawyer's duties, for example, under Business and Professions Code sections 6067, 6068, 6103, and 6106. The lawyer is not obliged to decline or withdraw simply because the client suggests such a course of conduct; a client might make such a suggestion in the hope that a lawyer will not be constrained by a professional obligation. Depending on the circumstances, when the client's conduct permits the lawyer to withdraw, or to seek permission to withdraw where that is required, the lawyer might consider counseling the client regarding the client's conduct, limiting the scope of the representation, or aiding the client in rectifying the client's prior conduct. See Rules 1.2(c) and 1.4.
- [3] When a lawyer has been appointed to represent a client, withdrawal ordinarily requires approval of the appointing authority. See also Rule 6.2.
- [4] A lawyer is not subject to discipline for withdrawing under paragraph (a)(1) or (2) if the lawyer has acted reasonably under the facts and circumstances known to the lawyer, even if that belief later is shown to have been wrong.

Optional Withdrawal

- [5] Paragraph (b)(2) permits a lawyer to withdraw from a representation even if the lawyer is not asked to participate in or further a course of action that the lawyer reasonably believes is criminal or fraudulent, for a lawyer is not required to be associated with such conduct. Even when a withdrawal is in these circumstances, the lawyer must comply with his or her duties under Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e).
- [6] Paragraph (b)(5) allows a lawyer to withdraw from a representation if the client refuses to abide by a material term of an agreement relating to the representation, such as an agreement concerning fees, court costs or other expenses, or an agreement limiting the objectives of the representation.

Scope of Withdrawal

- [6A] When a lawyer withdraws from the representation of a client in a particular matter under paragraph (a) or (b), the lawyer might not be obligated to withdraw from the representation of the same client in other matters. For example, a lawyer might be obligated under paragraph (a)(1) to withdraw from representing a client because the lawyer has a conflict of interest under Rule 1.7(a), but that conflict might not arise in other representations of the client.

Permission to Withdraw

- [7] Lawyers must comply with their obligations to their clients under Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code 6068(e), and to the courts under Rule 3.3 when seeking permission to withdraw under paragraph

(c). If a tribunal denies a lawyer permission to withdraw, the lawyer is obligated to comply with the tribunal's order. See Business and Professions Code sections 6068(b) and 6103. This duty applies even if the lawyer sought permission to withdraw because of a conflict of interest. Regarding withdrawal from limited scope representations that involve court appearances, compliance with Rules 3.36 and 5.71 of the California Rules of Court satisfies paragraph (c).

Assisting the Client upon Withdrawal

- [8] Paragraph (d) requires the lawyer to take "reasonable steps to avoid reasonably foreseeable prejudice to the rights of the client." These steps will vary according to the circumstances. Absent special circumstances, "reasonable steps" do not include providing additional services to the client once the successor counsel has been employed and the lawyer has satisfied paragraph (e). The lawyer must satisfy paragraph (d) even if the lawyer has been unfairly discharged by the client.
- [9] ~~Paragraph~~A lawyer's duties under paragraph (e)~~—states a lawyer's duties when, (1) arise~~ after termination of a representation for any reason,~~new counsel seeks to obtain client files from the lawyer. It applies to and include~~ client papers and property held by a lawyer in any form or format~~and~~. This obligation codifies existing case law. ~~(See Academy of California Optometrists v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 999 [124 Cal.Rptr. 668]; Weiss v. Marcus (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 590 [124 Cal.Rptr. 297].)~~ See Penal Code sections 1054.2 and 1054.10 for examples of statutory restrictions on whether a lawyer may release client papers. Other statutory provisions might require the lawyer to provide client papers to someone other than the client, and in those situations paragraph (e) ~~is intended to apply~~ applies equally to the duty to provide papers to that other person. See Penal Code section 1054.2(b). Paragraph (e) also requires the lawyer to “promptly” return ~~unearned~~ fees and expenses paid in advance that have not been earned or incurred; the question of what fees and expenses have been earned or incurred is governed in part by Rule 1.5. If a client disputes the amount to be returned, the lawyer shall comply with Rule 1.15.

- [10] A lawyer's duty under paragraph (e)(1) to release “writings” to the client includes all writings as defined in Evidence Code section 250. A lawyer must comply with paragraph (e)(1) without regard to whether the client has complied with an obligation to pay the lawyer's fees and costs. Paragraph (e)(1) does not prohibit a lawyer from making, at the lawyer's own expense, and retaining copies of papers released to the client, or to prohibit a claim for the recovery of the lawyer's expense in any subsequent legal proceeding. Paragraph (e)(1) also does not affirmatively grant to the lawyer a right to retain copies of client papers or to recover the cost of copying them; these are issues that might be determined by contract, court order, or rule of law.

Rule ~~3-700 Termination of Employment~~ Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation

(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

~~(A) In General.~~

~~(a) Except as stated in paragraph (c), a lawyer shall not represent a client or, where representation has commenced, shall withdraw from the representation of a client if:~~

- ~~(1) If permission for termination of employment is required by the rules of a tribunal, a member shall not withdraw from employment in a proceeding before that tribunal without its permission.~~
- ~~(2) A member shall not withdraw from employment until the member has taken reasonable steps to avoid reasonably foreseeable prejudice to the rights of the client, including giving due notice to the client, allowing time for employment of other counsel, complying with rule 3-700(D), and complying with applicable laws and rules.~~

~~(B) Mandatory Withdrawal.~~

~~A member representing a client before a tribunal shall withdraw from employment with the permission of the tribunal, if required by its rules, and a member representing a client in other matters shall withdraw from employment, if:~~

- ~~(1) The member knows or should know that the client is bringing an action, conducting a defense, asserting a position in litigation, or~~

~~taking an appeal, without probable cause and for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring any person; or~~

- ~~(2) The member~~the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that ~~continued employment~~the representation will result in violation of these ~~rules~~Rules or of the State Bar Act; ~~or~~
- ~~(3) The member's mental or physical condition renders it unreasonably difficult to carry out the employment effectively.~~
- (2) the lawyer's physical or mental condition materially impairs the lawyer's ability to represent the client competently; or

~~(C) Permissive Withdrawal.~~

~~If rule 3-700(B) is not applicable, a member may not request permission to withdraw in matters pending before a tribunal, and may not withdraw in other matters, unless such request or such withdrawal is because:~~

- ~~(1) The~~the client discharges the lawyer.

~~(b) Except as stated in paragraph (c), a lawyer may withdraw from representing a client if:~~

- ~~(a) the client~~the client insists upon presenting a claim or defense in litigation, or asserting a position or making a demand in a non-litigation matter, that is not warranted under existing law and cannot be supported by good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law; ~~or;~~

- (b) ~~seeks to pursue an illegal course of conduct, or~~
- (2) the client either seeks to pursue a criminal or fraudulent course of conduct or has used the lawyer's services to advance a course of conduct that the lawyer reasonably believes was a crime or fraud;
- (e3) the client insists that the ~~member~~lawyer pursue a course of conduct that is ~~illegal~~criminal or ~~that is prohibited under these rules or the State Bar Act, or~~fraudulent;
- (d4) the client by other conduct renders it unreasonably difficult for the ~~member~~lawyer to carry out the employment effectively, ~~or~~
 - (e) ~~insists, in a matter not pending before a tribunal, that the member engage in conduct that is contrary to the judgment and advice of the member but not prohibited under these rules or the State Bar Act, or~~
- (5) the client breaches a material term of an agreement with or obligation to the lawyer relating to the representation, and the lawyer has given the client a reasonable warning after the breach that the lawyer will withdraw unless the client fulfills the agreement or performs the obligation;
- (f6) ~~breaches an agreement or obligation to the member as~~ client knowingly and freely assents to expenses or fees. termination of the representation;
- (2) ~~The continued employment is likely to result in a violation of these rules or of the State Bar Act; or~~

- (37) ~~The~~the lawyer believes in good faith that the inability to work with co-counsel ~~indicates that~~makes it in the best interests of the client ~~likely will be served by withdrawal~~to withdraw from the representation; ~~or~~
- (48) ~~The member's~~the lawyer's mental or physical condition renders it difficult for the ~~member~~lawyer to carry out the employment effectively; ~~or~~
- (5) ~~The client knowingly and freely assents to termination of the employment; or~~
- (9) a continuation of the representation is likely to result in a violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act; or
- (610) ~~The member~~the lawyer believes in good faith, in a proceeding pending before a tribunal, that the tribunal will find the existence of other good cause for withdrawal.
- (c) If permission for termination of a representation is required by the rules of a tribunal, a lawyer shall not terminate a representation before that tribunal without its permission.
- (d) A lawyer shall not terminate a representation until the lawyer has taken reasonable steps to avoid reasonably foreseeable prejudice to the rights of the client, such as giving the client sufficient notice to permit the client to retain other counsel, and complying with paragraph (e).
- (De) ~~Papers, Property, and Fees.~~ Upon the termination of a representation for any reason:

~~A member whose employment has terminated shall:~~

- (1) Subject to any applicable protective order ~~or~~, non-disclosure agreement or statutory limitation, the lawyer promptly shall release to the client, at the request of the client, all ~~the~~ client ~~papers~~materials and property. "Client ~~papers~~materials and property" includes correspondence, pleadings, deposition transcripts, experts' reports and other writings, exhibits, and physical evidence, ~~expert's reports~~whether in tangible, electronic or other form, and other items reasonably necessary to the client's representation, whether the client has paid for them or not; and
- (2) ~~Promptly~~The lawyer promptly shall refund any part of a fee or expense paid in advance that the lawyer has not ~~been~~ earned or incurred. This provision is not applicable to a true retainer fee ~~which is~~ paid solely for the purpose of ensuring the availability of the ~~member~~lawyer for the matter.

Discussion:

COMMENT

- [1] A lawyer should not accept a representation unless the lawyer reasonably believes the lawyer can complete the representation in compliance with these Rules and the State Bar Act. A lawyer has the obligation or option to withdraw only in the circumstances and only in the manner described in this Rule. This requirement applies, without limitation, to any sale under Rule 1.17. Ordinarily, a representation in a matter is completed when the agreed-upon assistance has been concluded. See Rules 1.2(c) and 6.5. A lawyer can be subject to discipline for improperly threatening to terminate a representation. See In the Matter of Shalant 4 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 829.

Mandatory Withdrawal

- [2] A lawyer ordinarily must decline or withdraw from representation if the client demands that the lawyer engage in conduct that would violate these Rules or the State Bar Act. The references to these Rules and to the State Bar Act in paragraphs (a)(1) and (b)(3) reflect the primacy of the lawyer's duties, for example, under Business and Professions Code sections 6067, 6068, 6103, and 6106. The lawyer is not obliged to decline or withdraw simply because the client suggests such a course of conduct; a client might make such a suggestion in the hope that a lawyer will not be constrained by a professional obligation. Depending on the circumstances, when the client's conduct permits the lawyer to withdraw, or to seek permission to withdraw where that is required, the lawyer might consider counseling the client regarding the client's conduct, limiting the scope of the representation, or aiding the client in rectifying the client's prior conduct. See Rules 1.2(c) and 1.4.
- [3] When a lawyer has been appointed to represent a client, withdrawal ordinarily requires approval of the appointing authority. See also Rule 6.2.
- [4] A lawyer is not subject to discipline for withdrawing under paragraph (a)(1) or (2) if the lawyer has acted reasonably under the facts and circumstances known to the lawyer, even if that belief later is shown to have been wrong.

Optional Withdrawal

- [5] Paragraph (b)(2) permits a lawyer to withdraw from a representation even if the lawyer is not asked to participate in or further a course of action that the lawyer reasonably believes is criminal or fraudulent, for a lawyer is not required to be associated with such conduct. Even when a withdrawal is in these circumstances, the lawyer must comply with his or her duties under Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e).
- [6] Paragraph (b)(5) allows a lawyer to withdraw from a representation if the client refuses to abide by a material term of an agreement relating to the representation, such as an agreement concerning fees, court costs or other expenses, or an agreement limiting the objectives of the representation.

Scope of Withdrawal

- [6A] When a lawyer withdraws from the representation of a client in a particular matter under paragraph (a) or (b), the lawyer might not be obligated to withdraw from the representation of the same client in other matters. For example, a lawyer might be obligated under paragraph (a)(1) to withdraw from representing a client because the lawyer has a conflict of interest under Rule 1.7(a), but that conflict might not arise in other representations of the client.

Permission to Withdraw

- [7] Lawyers must comply with their obligations to their clients under Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code 6068(e), and to the courts under Rule 3.3 when seeking permission to withdraw under paragraph

(c). If a tribunal denies a lawyer permission to withdraw, the lawyer is obligated to comply with the tribunal's order. See Business and Professions Code sections 6068(b) and 6103. This duty applies even if the lawyer sought permission to withdraw because of a conflict of interest. Regarding withdrawal from limited scope representations that involve court appearances, compliance with Rules 3.36 and 5.71 of the California Rules of Court satisfies paragraph (c).

Assisting the Client upon Withdrawal

~~Subparagraph [8] Paragraph (Ad)(2) provides that "a member shall not withdraw from employment until requires the member has taken lawyer to take~~ "reasonable steps to avoid reasonably foreseeable prejudice to the rights of the ~~clients~~ client." ~~What such These steps would include, of course,~~ will vary according to the circumstances. Absent special circumstances, "reasonable steps" do not include providing additional services to the client once the successor counsel has been employed and ~~rule 3-700~~ the lawyer has satisfied paragraph (De). The lawyer must satisfy paragraph (d) even if the lawyer has been satisfied unfairly discharged by the client.

~~Paragraph (D) makes clear the member's [9] A lawyer's duties in the recurring situation in which new counsel seeks to obtain client files from under paragraph (e)(1) arise after termination of a member discharged by the representation for any reason and include client papers and property held by a lawyer in any form or format. # This obligation~~ codifies existing case law. ~~(See Academy of California Optometrists v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 999 [124 Cal.Rptr. 668]; Weiss v. Marcus (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 590 [124 Cal.Rptr. 297]. See Penal Code sections 1054.2 and 1054.10 for examples of statutory restrictions on whether a lawyer may release client papers.~~

Other statutory provisions might require the lawyer to provide client papers to someone other than the client, and in those situations paragraph (e) applies equally to the duty to provide papers to that other person. See Penal Code section 1054.2(b). Paragraph (De) also requires ~~that the member~~lawyer to “promptly” return ~~unearned~~ fees and expenses paid in advance that have not been earned or incurred; the question of what fees and expenses have been earned or incurred is governed in part by Rule 1.5. If a client disputes the amount to be returned, the ~~member~~lawyer shall comply with ~~rule 4-100(A)(2)~~Rule 1.15.

- [10] A lawyer's duty under paragraph (e)(1) to release “writings” to the client includes all writings as defined in Evidence Code section 250. A lawyer must comply with paragraph (e)(1) without regard to whether the client has complied with an obligation to pay the lawyer's fees and costs. Paragraph (De) ~~is~~(1) does not ~~intended to~~ prohibit a ~~member~~lawyer from making, at the ~~member's~~lawyer's own expense, and retaining copies of papers released to the client, ~~nor~~or to prohibit a claim for the recovery of the ~~member's~~lawyer's expense in any subsequent legal proceeding. Paragraph (e)(1) also does not affirmatively grant to the lawyer a right to retain copies of client papers or to recover the cost of copying them; these are issues that might be determined by contract, court order, or rule of law.

Rule 1.16 Declining Or Terminating Representation
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) Except as stated in paragraph (c), a lawyer shall not represent a client or, where representation has commenced, shall withdraw from the representation of a client if:
 - (1) the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the representation will result in violation of these Rules or of the State Bar Act;
 - (2) the lawyer's physical or mental condition materially impairs the lawyer's ability to represent the client competently; or
 - (3) the client discharges the lawyer.
- (b) Except as stated in paragraph (c), a lawyer may withdraw from representing a client if:
 - (1) the client insists upon presenting a claim or defense in litigation, or asserting a position or making a demand in a non-litigation matter, that is not warranted under existing law and cannot be supported by good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law;
 - (2) the client either seeks to pursue a criminal or fraudulent course of conduct or has used the lawyer's services to advance a course of conduct that the lawyer reasonably believes was a crime or fraud;
 - (3) the client insists that the lawyer pursue a course of conduct that is criminal or fraudulent;
 - (4) the client by other conduct renders it unreasonably difficult for the lawyer to carry out the employment effectively;
 - (5) the client breaches a material term of an agreement with or obligation to the lawyer relating to the representation, and the lawyer has given the client a reasonable warning after the breach that the lawyer will withdraw unless the client fulfills the agreement or performs the obligation;
 - (6) the client knowingly and freely assents to termination of the representation;
 - (7) the lawyer believes in good faith that the inability to work with co-counsel makes it in the best interests of the client to withdraw from the representation;
 - (8) the lawyer's mental or physical condition renders it difficult for the lawyer to carry out the employment effectively;
 - (9) a continuation of the representation is likely to result in a violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act; or
 - (10) the lawyer believes in good faith, in a proceeding pending before a tribunal, that the tribunal will find the existence of other good cause for withdrawal.
- (c) If permission for termination of a representation is required by the rules of a tribunal, a lawyer shall not terminate a representation before that tribunal without its permission.

- (d) A lawyer shall not terminate a representation until the lawyer has taken reasonable steps to avoid reasonably foreseeable prejudice to the rights of the client, such as giving the client sufficient notice to permit the client to retain other counsel, and complying with paragraph (e).
- (e) Upon the termination of a representation for any reason:
 - (1) Subject to any applicable protective order, non-disclosure agreement or statutory limitation, the lawyer promptly shall release to the client, at the request of the client, all client materials and property. "Client materials and property" includes correspondence, pleadings, deposition transcripts, experts' reports and other writings, exhibits, and physical evidence, whether in tangible, electronic or other form, and other items reasonably necessary to the client's representation, whether the client has paid for them or not; and
 - (2) The lawyer promptly shall refund any part of a fee or expense paid in advance that the lawyer has not earned or incurred. This provision is not applicable to a true retainer fee paid solely for the purpose of ensuring the availability of the lawyer for the matter.

COMMENT

- [1] A lawyer should not accept a representation unless the lawyer reasonably believes the lawyer can complete the representation in compliance with these Rules and the State Bar Act. A lawyer has the obligation or option to withdraw only in the circumstances and only in the manner described in this Rule. This requirement applies, without limitation, to any sale under Rule 1.17. Ordinarily, a representation in a matter is completed when the agreed-upon assistance has been concluded. See Rules 1.2(c) and 6.5. A lawyer can be subject to discipline for improperly threatening to terminate a representation. See In the Matter of Shalant 4 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 829.

Mandatory Withdrawal

- [2] A lawyer ordinarily must decline or withdraw from representation if the client demands that the lawyer engage in conduct that would violate these Rules or the State Bar Act. The references to these Rules and to the State Bar Act in paragraphs (a)(1) and (b)(3) reflect the primacy of the lawyer's duties, for example, under Business and Professions Code sections 6067, 6068, 6103, and 6106. The lawyer is not obliged to decline or withdraw simply because the client suggests such a course of conduct; a client might make such a suggestion in the hope that a lawyer will not be constrained by a professional obligation. Depending on the circumstances, when the client's conduct permits the lawyer to withdraw, or to seek permission to withdraw where that is required, the lawyer might consider counseling the client regarding the client's conduct, limiting the scope of the representation, or aiding the client in rectifying the client's prior conduct. See Rules 1.2(c) and 1.4.
- [3] When a lawyer has been appointed to represent a client, withdrawal ordinarily requires approval of the appointing authority. See also Rule 6.2.
- [4] A lawyer is not subject to discipline for withdrawing under paragraph (a)(1) or (2) if the lawyer has acted reasonably under the facts and circumstances known to the lawyer, even if that belief later is shown to have been wrong.

Optional Withdrawal

- [5] Paragraph (b)(2) permits a lawyer to withdraw from a representation even if the lawyer is not asked to participate in or further a course of action that the lawyer reasonably believes is criminal or fraudulent, for a lawyer is not required to be associated with such conduct. Even when a withdrawal is in these circumstances, the lawyer must comply with his or her duties under Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e).
- [6] Paragraph (b)(5) allows a lawyer to withdraw from a representation if the client refuses to abide by a material term of an agreement relating to the representation, such as an agreement concerning fees, court costs or other expenses, or an agreement limiting the objectives of the representation.

Scope of Withdrawal

- [6A] When a lawyer withdraws from the representation of a client in a particular matter under paragraph (a) or (b), the lawyer might not be obligated to withdraw from the representation of the same client in other matters. For example, a lawyer might be obligated under paragraph (a)(1) to withdraw from representing a client because the lawyer has a conflict of interest under Rule 1.7(a), but that conflict might not arise in other representations of the client.

Permission to Withdraw

- [7] Lawyers must comply with their obligations to their clients under Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code 6068(e), and to the courts under Rule 3.3 when seeking permission to withdraw under paragraph

(c). If a tribunal denies a lawyer permission to withdraw, the lawyer is obligated to comply with the tribunal's order. See Business and Professions Code sections 6068(b) and 6103. This duty applies even if the lawyer sought permission to withdraw because of a conflict of interest. Regarding withdrawal from limited scope representations that involve court appearances, compliance with Rules 3.36 and 5.71 of the California Rules of Court satisfies paragraph (c).

Assisting the Client upon Withdrawal

- [8] Paragraph (d) requires the lawyer to take "reasonable steps to avoid reasonably foreseeable prejudice to the rights of the client." These steps will vary according to the circumstances. Absent special circumstances, "reasonable steps" do not include providing additional services to the client once the successor counsel has been employed and the lawyer has satisfied paragraph (e). The lawyer must satisfy paragraph (d) even if the lawyer has been unfairly discharged by the client.
- [9] A lawyer's duties under paragraph (e)(1) arise after termination of a representation for any reason and include client papers and property held by a lawyer in any form or format. This obligation codifies existing case law. See Academy of California Optometrists v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 999 [124 Cal.Rptr. 668]; Weiss v. Marcus (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 590 [124 Cal.Rptr. 297]. See Penal Code sections 1054.2 and 1054.10 for examples of statutory restrictions on whether a lawyer may release client papers. Other statutory provisions might require the lawyer to provide client papers to someone other than the client, and in those situations paragraph (e) applies equally to the duty to provide papers to that other person. See Penal Code section 1054.2(b). Paragraph (e) also requires the lawyer to "promptly" return fees and expenses paid in advance that have not been earned or incurred; the question of what fees and expenses have been earned or incurred is governed in part by Rule 1.5. If a client disputes the amount to be returned, the lawyer shall comply with Rule 1.15.

- [10] A lawyer's duty under paragraph (e)(1) to release "writings" to the client includes all writings as defined in Evidence Code section 250. A lawyer must comply with paragraph (e)(1) without regard to whether the client has complied with an obligation to pay the lawyer's fees and costs. Paragraph (e)(1) does not prohibit a lawyer from making, at the lawyer's own expense, and retaining copies of papers released to the client, or to prohibit a claim for the recovery of the lawyer's expense in any subsequent legal proceeding. Paragraph (e)(1) also does not affirmatively grant to the lawyer a right to retain copies of client papers or to recover the cost of copying them; these are issues that might be determined by contract, court order, or rule of law.

Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6 Agree = 3
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Alex, Glenn C.	M	No		The Proposed Rule should be clarified as to the meaning of the term “a representation.” In-house governmental attorneys are sometimes pushed, by their own entities or by “control agencies” into rendering or withholding advice in substance contrary to their professional judgment, or aiding an activity of questionable propriety in a particular matter, or otherwise acting in an inappropriate manner. These circumstances can arise with respect to transactional as well as with litigation attorney positions. (See Rule 1.16(b)(1), in relevant part: “making a demand in a non-litigation matter, that is not warranted under existing law and cannot be supported by good faith argument.”) The Rule should make clear that the in-house governmental attorney may or must (depending on the circumstances) withdraw from “a representation” in the particular matter, but would not be expected (except under the most extreme circumstances) to terminate the attorney’s full-time career employment with his or her agency. In other words, the term “a representation” should be clarified to refer, in most cases, to a particular matter, and not to	This comment observes that a lawyer who terminates a representation under proposed paragraph (a) or (b) does not necessarily have to terminate the entire representation. The letter is written from the standpoint of an in-house governmental lawyer, but the commenter’s point applies not only to all in-house lawyers but also to any lawyer who represents a client in multiple matters. The Commission agrees with the commenter’s observation and has added new Comment [6A] under a new heading: “Scope of Withdrawal”.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6 Agree = 3
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response the overall relationship between an in-house public counsel and his or her employer.
2	Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct ("COPRAC")	A	Yes		COPRAC supports the adoption of Proposed Rule 1.16 and the Comments to the Rule.	No response required.
3	Law Practice Management & Technology Section of California State Bar ("LPMT")	3	Yes	(e)(2)	LPMT believes that Proposed rule 1.16(e)(2) should be revised to clarify that, when a lawyer terminates a representation, the lawyer's obligation to return unearned fees to the client would be subject to Rule 1.5 (which requires flat fee agreement to state that a client may be entitled to a refund of fees if services have not been completed. LPTM suggests that the following language be added to the end of the first sentence of Proposed Rule 1.16(e)(2): "... consistent with Rule 1.5."	This letter is correct that Rule 1.5 is not cited either in Rule 1.16 or in its Comment, and the Commission does believe that there properly is a connection to be made between the two rules. However, the Commission has concluded that the language recommended by LPMT is not accurate because it suggests that the only measure of whether a lawyer has earned a fee is found in Rule 1.5. In fact, there are other measures such as what the fee agreement says and whether the lawyer is permitted by B&P C sections 6146, et seq. to enforce the fee agreement. Instead, the Commission has added a Rule 1.5 reference to Comment [9], and has done so in language that differs from that recommended.
4	Office of Chief Trial Counsel ("OCTC")	M	Yes	1.16(b)	OCTC is concerned that subparagraph (b)(1) and (3) should mandate withdrawal. Proposed rule 1.16(a)(1) requires an attorney to not represent or withdraw from representation if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the representation will result in a violation of these rules. If the client insists upon presenting a defense in litigation or asserting a position or making a demand that is not warranted under	The Commission disagrees and did not make the requested change. OCTC argues that paragraphs (b)(1) and (3) should be mandatory rather than permissive withdrawal situations. These are the two "client insists" categories – the client insists that the lawyer pursue a frivolous claim or defense or that the lawyer pursue a course of conduct that is criminal or fraudulent. The Commission believes that a client's improper direction to a lawyer should not be treated by the lawyer as an escape hatch that

Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6 Agree = 3
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					existing law and cannot be supported by a good faith argument an attorney's following the client's instruction would be a violation of B&P Code sections 6068(c) and (g) and Proposed Rule 3.1. So, how can it just be permissive? OCTC recognizes that Current Rule 3-700 has the same language (although the Current Rule also had language requiring withdrawal if the client is bringing an action, conducting a defense, asserting a position, or taking a appeal without probable cause and for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring any person. We assume this mandatory requirement was taken out because it is already covered by subparagraph (a)(1)). It makes no sense to make the taking of the position a violation but not require withdrawal for a client insisting (as compared to initially requesting) that the attorney take that position. Frivolous litigation is not limited to cases in which a legal claim is entirely without merit. (See Molski v. Evergreen Dynasty Corp (9 th Cir. 2007) 500 Fed.3d 1047, 1060-1, rehearing denied.) Likewise, withdrawal should be mandated if the client insists that the lawyer pursue a course of conduct that is criminal or fraudulent since doing so would be a violation of the these rules and the State Bar Act. Comment [2], in fact, seems inconsistent with placing	permits immediate and automatic withdrawal. Instead, a lawyer's initial response to an improper client demand is not to resign but to fulfill the duty to competently represent the client, including the duty to consult with the client as described in Rule 1.4. In addition, the Commission notes that the two paragraphs to which OCTC points are found in the current rule as rule 3-700(C)(1)(a) and (c), and it does not suggest that they have caused any problem (nor is the Commission otherwise aware of any such problem with the current rule).

Rule 1.16 Declining or Terminating Representation.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6 Agree = 3
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Proposed Rule 1.16(b)(1) and (3) as permissive and consistent with OCTC's view that (b)(1) and (b)(3) should be mandatory. Comments [4], [5], [6], [8], and the first sentence of Comment [9], seem more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	The Commission disagrees and has retained these paragraphs except as modified in response to other comments.
5	Rothschild, Toby	A	No	(e)(1) & Comment [9]	1.16(e)(1) requires files be released "to the client, at the request of the client." Comment [9] defines this duty to apply when "new counsel seeks to obtain client files from the lawyer." The rule and comment should be consistent and make clear that the request can only come from the client, or from a new attorney with client's consent.	The Commission agrees and has modified Comment [9] accordingly.
6	San Diego County Bar Association	A	Yes		Clearer than existing rule	No response required.

Rule 1.16: Declining or Terminating Representation

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Arizona: Rule 1.16(d) adds that “upon the client’s request, the lawyer shall provide the client with all of the client’s documents, and all documents reflecting work performed for the client. The lawyer may retain documents reflecting work performed for the client to the extent permitted by other law only if retaining them would not prejudice the client’s rights.”

California: Rule 3-700 allows a lawyer to withdraw if a client “by other conduct renders it unreasonably difficult for the member to carry out the employment effectively” or if the client “breaches an agreement or obligation to the member as to expenses or fees.” A lawyer may also withdraw if the “inability to work with co-counsel indicates that the best interests of the client likely will be served by withdrawal.”

Connecticut: Connecticut adds the following sentence at the end of Rule

1.16(d): “If the representation of the client is terminated either by the lawyer withdrawing from representation or by the client discharging the lawyer, the lawyer shall confirm the termination in writing to the client before or within a reasonable time after the termination of the representation.”

Florida: In Rule 1.16(a), Florida also requires withdrawal if:

(4) the client persists in a course of action involving the lawyer’s services that the lawyer reasonably believes is criminal or fraudulent, unless the client agrees to disclose and rectify the crime or fraud; or

(5) the client has used the lawyer’s services to perpetrate a crime or fraud, unless the client agrees to disclose and rectify the crime or fraud.

Florida Rule 1.16(b)(2) permits withdrawal if the client insists upon taking action that the lawyer considers repugnant, “imprudent,” or with which the lawyer has a fundamental disagreement. Rule 1.16(d) provides that, upon termination, a lawyer may retain papers “and other property relating to or belonging to the client” to the extent permitted by law.

Louisiana: Rule 1.16(d) adds the following:

Upon written request by the client, the lawyer shall promptly release to the client or the client’s new lawyer the entire file relating to the matter. The lawyer may retain a copy of the file but shall not condition release over issues relating to the expense of copying the file or for any other reason. The responsibility for the cost of copying shall be determined in an appropriate proceeding.

Maryland: Rule 1.16(b)(4) permits withdrawal if the client insists upon taking action “or inaction” that the lawyer considers repugnant.

Massachusetts: Rule 1.16(e) provides as follows:

A lawyer must make available to a former client, within a reasonable time following the client’s request for his or her file, the following:

1. all papers, documents, and other materials the client supplied to the lawyer. The lawyer may at his or her own expense retain copies of any such materials.
2. all pleadings and other papers filed with or by the court or served by or upon any party. The client may be required to pay any copying charge consistent with the lawyer’s actual cost for these materials, unless the client has already paid for such materials.
3. all investigatory or discovery documents for which the client has paid the lawyer’s out-of-pocket costs, including but not limited to medical records, photographs, tapes, disks, investigative reports, expert reports, depositions, and demonstrative evidence. The lawyer may at his or her own expense retain copies of any such materials.

4. if the lawyer and the client have not entered into a contingent fee agreement, the client is entitled only to that portion of the lawyer's work product (as defined in subparagraph (6) below) for which the client has paid.
5. if the lawyer and the client have entered into a contingent fee agreement, the lawyer must provide copies of the lawyer's work product (as defined in subparagraph (6) below). The client may be required to pay any copying charge consistent with the lawyer's actual cost for the copying of these materials.
6. for purposes of this paragraph (e), work product shall consist of documents and tangible things prepared in the course of the representation of the client by the lawyer or at the lawyer's direction by his or her employee, agent, or consultant, and not described in paragraphs (2) or (3) above. Examples of work product include without limitation legal research, records of witness interviews, reports of negotiations, and correspondence.

7. notwithstanding anything in this paragraph (e) to the contrary, a lawyer may not refuse, on grounds of nonpayment, to make available materials in the client's file when retention would prejudice the client unfairly.

Minnesota deletes the last sentence of Rule 1.16(d) ("The lawyer may retain papers relating to the client to the extent permitted by other law") and adds a detailed set of rules regarding a client's right to documents.

Missouri: Rule 1.16(c) provides that, when a lawyer has filed a limited appearance pursuant to Missouri's version of Rule 1.2(c), the lawyer is not subject to the usual rule regarding termination of representation. Rule 1.16(c) provides as follows:

A lawyer must comply with applicable law requiring notice to or permission of a tribunal when terminating a representation unless the lawyer has filed a notice of termination of limited appearance. Except when such notice is filed, a lawyer shall continue representation when ordered to do so by a tribunal notwithstanding good cause for terminating the representation.

New Hampshire: New Hampshire makes the protective steps in Rule 1.16(d) a “condition” to terminating a representation.

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 1.16(a) and (b) is substantially similar to DR 2-109 and 2-110(B) of the old Model Code, respectively. Rule 1.16(c) adds numerous bases for discretionary withdrawals, which are drawn nearly verbatim from DR 2-110(C) of the old Model Code. Finally, Rule 1.16(d) specifies that, “if permission for withdrawal from employment is required by the rules of a tribunal, a lawyer shall not withdraw from employment in a matter before that tribunal without its permission.”

North Carolina: Rule 1.16(b)(4) retains the word “imprudent” and permits withdrawal if the client insists upon taking action “contrary to the advice and judgment of the lawyer. . . .” North Carolina also adds Rule 1.16(b)(8), which permits withdrawal if “the client insists upon presenting a claim or defense that is not warranted under existing law and cannot be supported by good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law.”

Texas: Rule 1.15(d) permits a lawyer to retain papers relating to the client to the extent permitted by other law “only if such retention will not prejudice the client in the subject matter of the representation.”

Virginia: Rule 1.16(b)(1) replaces “criminal or fraudulent” with “illegal or unjust.” Rule 1.16(e) specifies in detail the papers to which a client is entitled after a lawyer withdraws and whether the client or the lawyer must bear the cost of duplication. The client’s entitlement does not depend upon “whether or not the client has paid the fees and costs owed a lawyer.”

Proposed Rule 1.17 [2-300]

“Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice”

(Draft #9, 6/30/10)

Summary: Proposed Rule 1.17 regulates the sale of a law practice. It includes provisions recently added by the ABA to Model Rule 1.17 that permit the sale not only of an entire law practice, but also of a substantive field of the practice or a geographic area of the practice. However, the Model Rule provisions concerning the required notice to be given to clients whose matters are included in the sale have been substantially replaced by the counterpart provisions in current rule 2-300 to provide better protection for the interests of the clients whose matters are being transferred. Additions to the rule and changes in the comments have been made for better client protection. See Introduction and Explanation of Changes below.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule

Comment

- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☒ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 2-300.

Statute

Bus. & Prof. Code section 16600

Case law

- ☒ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

At least 16 states have adopted a version of Model Rule 1.17, some based on the 1990 version and others on the Ethics 2000 version, with substantive or no changes. The Commission decided to preserve the notice requirements of the current California rule.

- ☒ Other Primary Factor(s)

The memorandum from Judy Johnson to the Board of Governors and members of the Board Committee on Member Oversight dated June 18, 2008, regarding Appointment of a Career Transition Planning Taskforce, recommended that the Commission consider whether the rule permitting the sale of an entire law practice should be changed to permit the sale of a part of a law practice, to offer greater options for a lawyer to make a smooth transition to retirement.

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 5

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 4

Abstain 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Commission Minority Position, Known Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

Minority/Dissenting Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart ☒ Yes ☐ No

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☒ Very Controversial – Explanation:

Adopting the Model Rule provision that permits lawyers to sell a geographic area of practice or a substantive field of practice is viewed by some members of the profession as a lessening of client protection and further commercialization of the practice of law. See Introduction and Minority Dissent, attached.

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 1.17* Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 1.17 regulates the sale of a law practice. California was the first state in the nation to adopt a rule permitting the purchase and sale of a law practice. The American Bar Association copied some of California's rule by amendment to its Model Rules prior to 2002. The 2002 amendments to Model Rule 1.17 permit the sale not only of an entire law practice, but also of a substantive field of the practice or a geographic area of the practice. This proposed Rule substantially adopts those changes. See (1), below. However, the Model Rule provisions concerning the notice required to be given to clients whose matters are included in the sale have been substantially replaced by the counterpart provisions in current Rule 2-300 to provide better protection for the interests of the clients. Further protections have been added to promote protection of the clients of the selling lawyer. For example, (1) the sale of the practice, or of a substantive field of practice, or of a geographic area of practice must include all of substantially all of the practice or all of substantially all of the field or area of practice; lawyers will not be permitted to "cherry pick" lucrative matters and leave clients with less lucrative matters to fend for themselves; (2) the selling lawyer must cease practice if the entire practice is sold, or cease practice in the particular substantive field or geographic area of practice if only a substantive field or geographic area of practice is sold; (3) although the use of brokers to facilitate a sale is permitted, a lawyer may only sell the practice to a lawyer, not to a broker or other intermediary, ensuring continuity of representation and protection of the seller's clients; (4) fees may not be increased solely by reason of the sale, and clients are protected by requiring the purchaser to abide by pre-existing fee agreements; and (5) appropriate protections for confidentiality of the clients have been made part of the rule.

* Proposed Rule 1.17, XDraft 9 (6/30/10).

Originally, the Commission circulated two proposed rules for public comment, namely Rule 1.17.1 and Rule 1.17.2. They, respectively, would have dealt with sale of an entire practice and sale of a geographic area of practice or of a substantive area of practice. Those proposals received substantial criticism. In addition, there was substantial dissent within the Commission about those proposals. The current proposal is a single rule, dealing with the purchase and sale of an entire law practice, of a geographic area of a law practice, or of a substantive field of practice. This Rule moots many of the criticisms of the earlier proposals. In addition, it addresses one of the recommendations of the Executive Director of the Bar, Judy Johnson, to the Board of Governors concerning Appointment of a Career Transition Planning Taskforce. In her memorandum, Ms. Johnson suggested that the Commission consider whether the rule permitting the sale of an entire law practice should be changed to permit the sale of a part of a law practice. She pointed out that greater flexibility in the sale of a law practice would offer greater options for a lawyer to make a smooth transition to retirement. The proposed Rule addresses that subject.

Minority. A minority of the Commission strongly disagrees with proposed Rule 1.17, taking the position that adoption of the proposed Rule will unnecessarily add to the commercialization of the legal profession. The proposed Rule is unlike current California rule 2-300, which is narrowly drafted to permit a solo practitioner upon retirement to recoup through a one-time sale of his or her practice the good will developed in the practice over the practitioner's professional lifetime. By permitting the sale of a practice under strictly controlled conditions, the current rule both (i) avoids the former use of sham associations of lawyers to facilitate transfer of a practice, and (ii) provides clients with appropriate notice and protections against potential violations of confidentiality, fee increases, and abandonment of their matters. In addition, the current rule levels the playing field for solo practitioners and lawyers practicing in firms, the latter have been able before the current rule to realize upon retirement the value of the good will developed by the law firm of which they were members. The proposed Rule, on the other hand, while purporting to carry forward the client protections of current rule 2-300, permits not just the sale of a practice by a lawyer upon retirement, but also the sale of a practice by a law firm, or the sale of a "substantive field of practice" or a "geographic area of practice" by either a lawyer or a law firm. As discussed more fully in the Minority's Dissent, below, the minority sees great potential for abuse by lawyers and law firms seeking to capitalize on market perceptions of the value of their lawyer-client relationships. The vagueness of the terms "geographic area" and "substantive field" practically invite clever lawyers to use the rule in ways that will benefit them and risk injury to their clients. Unlike the current rule, which was created to address a genuine concern, no compelling reason for this change has been advanced by its proponents, other than that there might be situations where there could be a genuine special need to carve out some part of an established practice and to sell it. The minority urges that the proposed Rule not be adopted. See full Minority Dissent, below.

Variations in Other Jurisdictions. Twenty-nine states have adopted a rule identical to, or substantially similar to, the Ethics 2000 version of Model Rule 1.17 (2002), which permits the sale of an area of a law practice. Seventeen states (including California) currently have rules that only permit the sale of an entire law practice. Five states have no counterpart to either the 1990 (entire practice) or the 2002 (area of practice) version of the Model Rule, (Alabama, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas). Of the 17 states that require sales of the entire practice, three (Michigan, Tennessee and West Virginia) have recommended the adoption of the 2002 version Model Rule, and two others (Georgia and Hawaii) have not yet concluded their review of the Ethics 2000 rules. A number of states (e.g., Florida, Illinois, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania) diverge substantially from the Model Rule and include additional provisions intended to protect the clients of the selling lawyer.

Proposed Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice Minority Dissent

A minority of the Commission strongly disagrees with this proposed Rule. The adoption of the proposed rule would create a sea change in the practice of law, commercializing it beyond anyone's prior imagination.

The current rule was created by this Commission in the 1980s and adopted by the Supreme Court of California on recommendation of the Board of Governors for the specific purpose of allowing senior lawyers in solo practice, facing retirement or appointment to a public position such as a judgeship, or their estates after their deaths, to realize the value of their practices by the sale of those practices without the use of transparent devices such as pretended last minute "partnerships;" see Geffen v. Moss (1975) 53 Cal.App.3d 215. To avoid the use of these pretend relationships and to give single practitioners an opportunity to realize the value of what they created over a lifetime - as exists in larger law firms (see Howard v. Babcock (1993) 6 Cal.4th 409), the State Bar proposed the current rule. It was the first authority ever that allowed the one-time sale of such a practice, and it does so only under stringent conditions that protect clients through provisions for confidentiality during the sale negotiations and against fee increases by reason of the transfer.

The American Bar Association later adopted a version of this Rule at the instance of the California State Bar delegation. It was promoted on the floor of the ABA

House of Delegates by the then President of the State Bar, Terry Anderlini.

But the current proposal has transformed this modest and reasonable provision into one that would permit and cause the commercial exploitation of a law practice in ways heretofore undreamed of. Under the proposed rule, a lawyer (and thus, a law firm as well) may sell a substantive field of practice or a geographic area of practice. And unlike the current rule, there is the anticipation that the selling lawyer may even return to the practice he or she has merchandised. See proposed Comment [2A]: "Return to private practice, or return to the practice in the substantive field or geographic area of the practice that was sold, as a result of an unanticipated change in circumstances does not necessarily result in a violation." The concept of "extraordinary circumstances" is not defined by the Rule, which gives the lawyer the ability to make a business of selling some or all of a law practice rather than fulfilling commitments made to the clients.

The dissenters can see a sea change in the practice if this rule is adopted. Since the rule contains no definition of either the concept of "geographic area" or "substantive field" of practice and since probably no limiting definition is possible, an imaginative or greedy lawyer can sell a case or matter, or a set of a few cases or matters, by describing the sales package in a way which excludes the lawyer's other cases in the field, or in other geographic areas of the state or nation.

As some examples, suppose that a lawyer is consulted about a major personal injury case, beyond the lawyer's normal skills and capacities. Can the lawyer sell his or her "major personal injuries" practice instead of handling the case him- or herself or associating a more skilled lawyer with client consent per current rule 2-200? Suppose that the lawyer has no background in intellectual property law but is consulted by a current client about a major patent infringement case which may well produce a contingent fee in 7 or even 8 figures? Instead of finding a lawyer competent in the field and referring the matter to that lawyer, can the lawyer now sell his or her "intellectual property practice," consisting of a single matter, to the highest bidder, as long as the confidentiality provisions of this proposed rule are observed? Why would the temptation to sell be any less if the "big winner" case was one of several, where the seller might be quite willing to give up the others in order to cash in on the one "big deal"?

Or consider the case of a "national" law firm that opened a California office with considerable fanfare, spent a fair amount on the facility, on recruitment of lawyers and on promotion of the practice, but found the branch unprofitable. There have been such instances in the past, and the offices were simply closed. If this rule is adopted, the law firm could hire a marketer and would probably succeed in selling the unprofitable practice to another law firm, since its days in California were numbered in any event.

One argument made in favor of the gross expansion of California's current, narrowly-drawn rule is that the buying and selling of law practices should be permitted because a law practice is simply an asset. The minority rejects this crass view of the trust that a client invests in a lawyer when placing a matter in the lawyer's hands. A second defense of the expansion is that it would entirely eliminate practice sales in the guise of short-term partnerships. The minority also rejects this argument, which amounts to saying that everyone should be permitted to do a bad thing because some people do it. Finally, it has been argued that the current rule discriminates against sole practitioners because all other private practice lawyers have law firm buy-out or retirement arrangements. This claim is false. The minority is unaware of such plans in the vast number of smaller law firm, except in some smaller firms arrangements for the return of original buy-in payments or for payment of a departing partner's share of accrued receivables. Finally, it bears repeating that, although most of the arguments in favor of this expansion are directed to the position of sole practitioners, the proposed rule explicitly permits law firms to engage in the business of buying and selling all or part of law practices. The minority believes there is no compelling reason to expand the current rule, and that its consequences should be rejected firmly.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale Of Law Practice	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
A lawyer or a law firm may sell or purchase a law practice, or an area of law practice, including good will, if the following conditions are satisfied:	A lawyer or a law firm may sell or purchase a law practice, a substantive field of practice, or a geographic area of ~~law~~ practice, including good will, only if the ~~following~~ conditions set forth in paragraphs (a) through (g) are satisfied:	The introductory paragraph of proposed Rule 1.17 is based on the introductory paragraph of Model Rule 1.17. However, the proposed paragraph makes it explicit that a lawyer or law firm may sell or purchase a substantive aspect of a practice or a geographic area of practice, and not just an entire practice, so that permission to do so is not merely inferred. In addition, the proposed paragraph adds the word “only,” to make explicit that a sale other than in accordance with the provisions of the Rule is not permissible. The Commission voted to adopt the approach of the Model Rule to permit sale of a geographic area of practice or of a substantive practice area. When lawyers or law firms need to adapt their practices in anticipation of retirement, for economic reasons, for client needs, or for other reasons, allowing them to be flexible regarding what aspects of the law practice are sold gives them greater options. For example, if a lawyer finds himself or herself no longer able to practice litigation effectively, he or she could sell the litigation aspect of his or her practice and continue to practice law in non-litigation areas. Similarly, if a lawyer has a practice in both northern and southern California, he or she might choose to sell one aspect of the geographic area of practice in order not to have to commute to different parts of the state. As stated in the Introduction and below, a minority of the Commission disagrees with the proposed Rule's provisions to permit the sale of a substantive field or geographic area of practice. See full dissent, below.

* Proposed Rule 1.17, XDraft 9 (6/30/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale Of Law Practice	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) The seller ceases to engage in the private practice of law, or in the area of practice that has been sold, [in the geographic area] [in the jurisdiction] (a jurisdiction may elect either version) in which the practice has been conducted;	(a) The seller ceases to engage in the private practice of law entirely, or in the ~~area of practice that has been sold, [in the~~ substantive field or geographic area] ~~[in the jurisdiction] (a jurisdiction may elect either version)~~ in which the ~~practice has been~~ seller conducted; the portion of the practice being sold.	Paragraph (a) is based on Model Rule 1.17(a). The Commission recommends adopting both of the Model Rule's alternatives – a sale of a substantive aspect of the practice and of a geographic area of a practice. Wording changes have been made to clarify the options available to a lawyer or law firm under the proposed Rule.
(b) The entire practice, or the entire area of practice, is sold to one or more lawyers or law firms;	(b) The seller makes the entire practice, or the entire substantive field or geographic area of the practice, ~~is sold~~ available for sale to one or more lawyers or law firms;.	Paragraph (b) is based on Model Rule 1.17(b). However, the Commission recognizes that a sale of an entire practice or entire area of practice may not be possible. For example, a purchaser may have conflicts of interest that preclude the purchaser from representing some of the seller's clients. Thus, as with current Rule 2-300, the Commission recommends that the Rule only require the seller to make the entire practice, or entire substantive field or geographic area of the practice, available for sale, and recommends that the actual transaction include all or substantially all of the practice. As reflected in proposed Comment [2], if not all of the seller's clients are willing to retain the purchaser, that does not destroy the validity of the transaction. See also Explanation of Changes for paragraph (c). Paragraph (b) has also been reworded to clarify that the transaction may encompass the entire practice, the entire substantive field of practice, or the entire geographic area of the practice, consistent with the introductory paragraph and with paragraph (a).
	(c) The purchase and sale includes all or substantially all of the practice, or of the substantive field or geographic area of the practice.	Proposed paragraph (c) has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It has been added to complement proposed paragraph (b) and emphasize that not only must the seller make available the entire practice, or field or area of practice, but the actual transfer must include all or substantially all of the practice. This requirement is necessary to prevent a lawyer from making "available for sale" his or her practice, but selling only the most lucrative client files.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale Of Law Practice	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(c) The seller gives written notice to each of the seller's clients regarding:	~~(c) The seller gives written notice to each of the seller's clients regarding:~~ (d) If the purchase or sale contemplates the transfer of responsibility for work not yet completed or responsibility for client files or information protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6, then:	Paragraph (d) contains the same concepts as Model Rule 1.17(c), but goes much further in providing protection for the seller's clients. Model Rule 1.17(c) merely requires notice from the seller of the proposed sale, the client's right to other counsel or to take possession of the file, and the presumption that client consent to the transfer will be presumed if the client does not object within ninety days. Proposed paragraph (d), on the other hand, carries forward current California Rule 2-300, which is far more protective of client rights and contains a more robust explanation of the contents of the notice that must be given to clients. For example, current rule 2-300 recognizes that, if the seller is deceased or incapacitated, he or she may not be able to give the required notice. Proposed paragraph (d) and its subparagraphs continue the substance of the notice requirements under current Rule 2-300, spelling out in more detail what the notice must contain and distinguishing between the circumstance in which the seller is deceased or incapacitated (in which case the purchaser gives the required notice) and all other sales (in which the case the seller gives the required notice). The Commission concluded that the California approach gives more protection for the clients of the seller.
(1) the proposed sale;	~~(1) the proposed sale;~~ (1) If the seller is deceased, or has a conservator or other person acting in a representative capacity, and no lawyer	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (d).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale Of Law Practice	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	has been appointed to act for the seller pursuant to Business and Professions Code section 6180.5, prior to the transfer, the purchaser:
	(i) shall cause a written notice to be given to each of the seller's clients whose matters are included in the sale, stating that the interest in the law practice is being transferred to the purchaser; that the client has the right to retain other counsel and might have the right to act in his or her own behalf; that the client may take possession of any client papers and property in the form or format held by the lawyer as provided by Rule 1.16(e); and that, if no response is received to the notice within 90 days after it is sent or, if the client's rights would be prejudiced by a failure of the purchaser to act during that time, the purchaser may act on behalf of the client until otherwise notified by the client; and	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (d).
	(ii) shall obtain the written consent of the client, provided that the affected client's consent shall be presumed until the purchaser is otherwise	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (d).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale Of Law Practice	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule notified by the client if the purchaser receives no response to the paragraph (d)(1)(i) notification within 90 days after it is sent to the client's last address as shown on the records of the seller, or if the client's rights would be prejudiced by a failure of the purchaser to act during the 90-day period.
(2) the client's right to retain other counsel or to take possession of the file; and	(2) ~~the client's right to retain other counsel or to take possession of the file; and~~ In all other circumstances, not less than 90 days prior to the transfer:	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (d).
(3) the fact that the client's consent to the transfer of the client's files will be presumed if the client does not take any action or does not otherwise object within ninety (90) days of receipt of the notice.	~~(3) the fact that the client's consent to the transfer of the client's files will be presumed if the client does not take any action or does not otherwise object within ninety (90) days of receipt of the notice.~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (d).
	(i) the seller, or the lawyer appointed to act for the seller pursuant to Business and Professions Code section 6180.5, shall cause a written notice to be given to each of the seller's clients whose matters are included in the sale, stating that the interest in the law practice is being	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (d).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale Of Law Practice	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule transferred to the purchaser; that the client has the right to retain other counsel and might have the right to act in his or her own behalf; that the client may take possession of any client papers and property in the form or format held by the lawyer as provided by Rule 1.16(e); and that, if no response is received to the notice within 90 days after it is sent or, if the client's rights would be prejudiced by a failure of the purchaser to act during the 90 day period, the purchaser may act on behalf of the client until otherwise notified by the client; and
	(ii) the seller, or the lawyer appointed to act for the seller pursuant to Business and Professions Code section 6180.5, shall obtain the written consent of each of the seller's clients whose matters are included in the sale, prior to the transfer, provided that the client's consent shall be presumed if neither the seller nor the purchaser receives a response to the paragraph (d)(2)(i) notice within 90 days after it is sent to the client's last address as shown on the records of the seller, or if the client's rights would be prejudiced by	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (d).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale Of Law Practice	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	a failure of the purchaser to act during the 90 day period, unless either the seller or the purchaser is otherwise notified by the client.
If a client cannot be given notice, the representation of that client may be transferred to the purchaser only upon entry of an order so authorizing by a court having jurisdiction. The seller may disclose to the court in camera information relating to the representation only to the extent necessary to obtain an order authorizing the transfer of a file.	~~If a client cannot be given notice, the representation of that client may be transferred to the purchaser only upon entry of an order so authorizing by a court having jurisdiction. The seller may disclose to the court in camera information relating to the representation only to the extent necessary to obtain an order authorizing the transfer of a file.~~	The final, unnumbered subparagraph of Model Rule 1.17(c) has been deleted because it is substantively incorrect. See Explanation of Changes for Comment [8], below. The problem it is intended to resolve, inability to notify a client of the selling lawyer, is addressed by subparagraphs (c)(1) and (2) of the proposed Rule.
(d) The fees charged clients shall not be increased by reason of the sale.	(e) ~~The fees charged clients shall not be increased by reason of the sale.~~ Fees charged to clients shall not be increased solely by reason of the purchase, and, unless the scope of the work is narrowed or expanded with the clients' informed consent, the purchaser assumes the seller's obligations under existing client agreements regarding fees and the scope of work.	Paragraph (e) is based on Model Rule 1.17(d), but adds a requirement that the purchaser must assume the seller's obligations under existing client agreements regarding fees and the scope of work unless the client otherwise gives informed consent. Therefore, a client will not be confronted with an increase in fees or fee rate solely by virtue of the sale.
	(f) If substitution is required by the rules of a tribunal in which a matter is pending, all steps necessary to substitute a lawyer shall be taken.	Paragraph (f) has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It carries forward current rule 2-300(C), and is intended to provide further protection for the seller's clients by requiring adherence to the requirements of tribunals that permit withdrawal and substitution of lawyers. The Commission concluded that this requirement should be continued in the black letter of the rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale Of Law Practice	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(g) A lawyer shall not disclose confidential client information to a nonlawyer in connection with a purchase or sale under this Rule.	Paragraph (g) has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It carries forward current rule 2-300(E). The Commission concluded assuring that confidentiality is protected is an essential aspect of client protection if a practice is sold.
	(h) This Rule does not apply to the admission to or retirement from a law partnership or law corporation, retirement plans and similar arrangements, or sale of tangible assets of a law practice.	Paragraph (h) is based on Model Rule 1.17, cmt. [14] and current rule 2-300(F), both of which provide that the Rule does not apply to admission to or retirement from a law partnership or law corporation, retirement plans, or similar arrangements nor to the sale of tangible assets of a practice. The Commission concluded that this exclusion from the scope of the Rule should be in the black letter of the rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale of Law Practice Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] The practice of law is a profession, not merely a business. Clients are not commodities that can be purchased and sold at will. Pursuant to this Rule, when a lawyer or an entire firm ceases to practice, or ceases to practice in an area of law, and other lawyers or firms take over the representation, the selling lawyer or firm may obtain compensation for the reasonable value of the practice as may withdrawing partners of law firms. See Rules 5.4 and 5.6.	[1] The practice of law is a profession, not merely a business. Clients are not commodities that can be purchased and sold at will. Pursuant to this Rule, when a lawyer or an entire firm ceases to practice, or ceases to practice in an area of law, and other lawyers or firms take over the representation, the selling lawyer or firm may obtain compensation for the ~~reasonable value of the~~ practice as may withdrawing partners of law firms. See Rules 5.4 and 5.6.	Comment [1] is nearly identical to Model Rule 1.17, cmt. [1], except that the phrase “reasonable value of the” has been deleted. The black letter rule does not require that the price for which the practice is sold be “reasonable,” and the Comment should not do so either.
	[1A] As used in this Rule, a selling “lawyer” includes the personal representative of the estate of a deceased lawyer, the trustee of a trust of which a law practice is an asset, an attorney in fact under a lawyer’s durable power of attorney, a conservator of the estate of a lawyer, or a lawyer appointed to act for the seller pursuant to Business and Professions Code sections 6180, 6185 and 6190.4.	Comment [1A] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. The Commission concluded that this Rule should permit and apply to sales of practices by certain fiduciaries acting for a lawyer or lawyer’s estate. Current California Rule 2-300 expressly applies to sales by such fiduciaries. Rather than including an enumeration of all such fiduciaries in the introductory paragraph of the proposed Rule, the Commission elected to include them by defining the word “lawyer” in this Comment. This comment adds clarity to the proposed Rule that is not found in the Model Rule. In addition, by spelling out the types of fiduciaries who may act on behalf of the lawyer or his or her estate, this Comment avoids the risk that a generic word such as “fiduciary” could be interpreted to include purchases and sales of law practices by brokers, which is not permitted under this Rule. See Comment [12A] and Explanation of Changes thereto.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale of Law Practice Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Termination of Practice by the Seller [2] The requirement that all of the private practice, or all of an area of practice, be sold is satisfied if the seller in good faith makes the entire practice, or the area of practice, available for sale to the purchasers. The fact that a number of the seller's clients decide not to be represented by the purchasers but take their matters elsewhere, therefore, does not result in a violation. Return to private practice as a result of an unanticipated change in circumstances does not necessarily result in a violation. For example, a lawyer who has sold the practice to accept an appointment to judicial office does not violate the requirement that the sale be attendant to cessation of practice if the lawyer later resumes private practice upon being defeated in a contested or a retention election for the office or resigns from a judiciary position.	Termination of Practice by the Seller [2] The requirement that all of the private practice, or all of a ~~an~~ substantive field or geographic area of practice, be sold is satisfied if the seller in good faith makes the entire practice, or the entire substantive field or geographic area of practice, available for sale to the purchasers. The fact that a number of the seller's clients decide not to be represented by the purchasers but take their matters elsewhere, or refuse to discharge the selling lawyer, therefore, does not result in a violation. If a client does not agree to retain the purchaser, the selling lawyer is not relieved from responsibility for the representation unless the seller is permitted to withdraw from the representation. See Rule 1.16.	Comments [2] and [2A] are based on Model Rule 1.17, cmt. [2]. However, the Model Rule comment has been divided into two parts for clarity. Proposed Comment [2] is substantially the same as the first part of the Model Rule comment. The phrase "substantive field or geographic" has been added to modify the phrase "area of practice" to make explicit that the comment applies to the sale of the entire practice or to sales of substantive fields of practice or to sales of geographic areas of practice. In addition, proposed Comment [2] recognizes that clients have the right to refuse to discharge the selling lawyer, by adding that concept to the second sentence. The last sentence has been added to highlight that the selling lawyer is not relieved from responsibility unless he or she is substituted out, or has permission to withdraw, in accordance with Rule 1.16.
	[2A] Return to private practice, or return to the practice in the substantive field or geographic area of the practice that was sold, as a result of an unanticipated change in circumstances does not necessarily result in a violation. For example, a lawyer who has sold ~~the a~~ practice to accept an appointment to judicial office does not violate the requirement that the sale be attendant to cessation of practice if the lawyer later resumes private practice upon being defeated in a contested or a	Comment [2A] is the second half of Model Rule Comment [2], which addresses the kinds of situations under which a return to private practice is permitted after a lawyer has availed himself or herself of the benefits of the Rule. The word "the" has been changed to the word "a," because, in the second sentence, a sale of a specific practice is not at issue. The added clause in the first sentence clarifies that a lawyer may also return to a substantive field or geographic area of practice in the event of unanticipated changes in circumstances.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale of Law Practice Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	retention election for the office or resigns or retires from a ~~judiciary~~judicial position.	The phrase “or retires” has been added in the last sentence at the suggestion of public comment received from COPRAC because a judge may elect to retire and return to private practice. The word “judiciary” has been changed to “judicial” because that is the appropriate adjective to modify “position.”
[3] The requirement that the seller cease to engage in the private practice of law does not prohibit employment as a lawyer on the staff of a public agency or a legal services entity that provides legal services to the poor, or as in-house counsel to a business.	[3] The requirement that the seller cease to engage in the private practice of law does not prohibit employment as a lawyer on the staff of a public agency or a legal services entity that provides legal services to the poor, or as in-house counsel to a business.	Comment [3] is identical to Model Rule 1.17, cmt. [3].
	[3A] An agreement for sale of a law practice that otherwise complies with this Rule does not violate this Rule if it contains a provision for a reasonable transitional period during which the seller may continue to practice and represent clients for the purpose of facilitating the transition of consenting clients to the purchaser.	Comment [3A] has no counterpart in the Model ‘Rule. The Comment was added following public comment to permit the described situation, which would protect clients by facilitating a smooth transition of their matters from one lawyer to another.
[4] The Rule permits a sale of an entire practice attendant upon retirement from the private practice of law within the jurisdiction. Its provisions, therefore, accommodate the lawyer who sells the practice on the occasion of moving to another state. Some states are so large that a move from one locale therein to another is tantamount to leaving the jurisdiction in which the lawyer has engaged in the practice of law. To also accommodate lawyers so	[4] ~~The~~This Rule permits a sale of an entire practice attendant upon retirement from the private practice of law within this state or within a defined geographic area of this state. ~~the jurisdiction. Its provisions, therefore, accommodate the lawyer who sells the practice on the occasion of moving to another state. Some states are so large that a move from one locale therein to another is tantamount to leaving the jurisdiction in which the lawyer has~~	Comment [4] is based on Model Rule 1.17, cmt. [4], but has been revised extensively to provide guidance on the application of the Rule. Much of the Model Rule Comment [4] is a form of “use note” for guidance to states that choose to follow the Model Rule. Irrelevant parts of that “use note” have been deleted and explicit language added to explain the rights of a seller who sells a part of a practice located in a defined geographic area. Once this Rule is adopted in California, much of the use note would not be needed, but guidance about the rights of a seller in a sale of a situated, states may permit the sale of the practice when the lawyer leaves the geographical area rather than the jurisdiction. The alternative desired should be indicated by selecting one of the two provided for in Rule 1.17(a).	~~engaged in the practice of law. To also accommodate lawyers so situated, states may permit the sale of the practice when the lawyer leaves the geographical area rather than the jurisdiction. The alternative desired should be indicated by selecting one of the two provided for in Rule 1.17.~~ A seller does not violate this Rule by either (i) selling a California practice but continuing to practice in other jurisdictions; or (ii) selling a practice in one geographic area of this state but continuing to practice in another geographic area of this state, as agreed to by seller and purchaser. An agreement for the sale of the geographic area or areas of a law practice should state as precisely as possible the specific geographic area or areas being sold.	geographic aspect of a practice would be appropriate. The last sentence has been added at COPRAC's suggestion to emphasize the importance of precisely defining the scope of the geographic area of practice being sold.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale of Law Practice Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[5] This Rule also permits a lawyer or law firm to sell an area of practice. If an area of practice is sold and the lawyer remains in the active practice of law, the lawyer must cease accepting any matters in the area of practice that has been sold, either as counsel or co-counsel or by assuming joint responsibility for a matter in connection with the division of a fee with another lawyer as would otherwise be permitted by Rule 1.5(e). For example, a lawyer with a substantial number of estate planning matters and a substantial number of probate administration cases may sell the estate planning portion of the practice but remain in the practice of law by concentrating on probate administration; however, that practitioner may not thereafter accept any estate planning matters.	[5] This Rule also permits a lawyer or law firm to sell ~~an area~~ a substantive field of practice. If ~~an area~~ a substantive field of practice is sold and the lawyer remains in the active practice of law, the lawyer must cease accepting any matters in the ~~area~~ substantive field of practice that has been sold, either as counsel or co-counsel, or by assuming joint responsibility for a matter in connection with the division of a fee with another lawyer as would otherwise be permitted by Rule ~~1.5(e)~~ 1.5.1. For example, a lawyer with a substantial number of estate planning matters and a substantial number of probate administration cases may sell the estate planning portion of the practice but remain in the practice of law by concentrating on probate administration; however, that practitioner	Comment [5] is substantially the same as Model Rule 1.17, cmt. [5]. "Substantive field" has been substituted for the word "area" because the Commission concluded that there could be confusion between the word "area" in reference to a geographic location of the practice and the word "area" in the sense of a substantive aspect of the practice. As a result, the Commission concluded that the recommended wording provides greater clarity. The reference to Rule 1.5(e) has been changed to Rule 1.5.1 because that is the number of the counterpart to Model Rule 1.5(e) in the proposed new California Rules. The Commission revised the third sentence for clarity and to conform it with the California approach to this Rule. If a lawyer makes the entire practice in this state or in a geographic area available for purchase, he or she will have complied with this

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale of Law Practice Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Although a lawyer who leaves a jurisdiction or geographical area typically would sell the entire practice, this Rule permits the lawyer to limit the sale to one or more areas of the practice, thereby preserving the lawyer's right to continue practice in the areas of the practice that were not sold.	may not thereafter accept any estate planning matters. Although a lawyer ~~who leaves a jurisdiction or geographically~~law firm that sells the practice in this state or in a geographic area ~~typically would sell of this state must make~~ the entire practice in this state or in the geographic area available for purchase, this Rule permits the ~~lawyer~~seller to limit the sale to one or more ~~areas~~substantive fields of the practice, thereby preserving the lawyer's right to continue practice in the areas of the practice that were not sold.	Rule, even if purchasers cannot be found for the entire practice or entire practice in this state or in a geographic area. See also Explanation of Changes for paragraph (c).
Sale of Entire Practice or Entire Area of Practice [6] The Rule requires that the seller's entire practice, or an entire area of practice, be sold. The prohibition against sale of less than an entire practice area protects those clients whose matters are less lucrative and who might find it difficult to secure other counsel if a sale could be limited to substantial fee-generating matters. The purchasers are required to undertake all client matters in the practice or practice area, subject to client consent. This requirement is satisfied, however, even if a purchaser is unable to undertake a particular client matter because of a conflict of interest.	Sale of Entire Practice or Entire Area of Practice [6] ~~The~~This Rule requires that all or substantially all of the seller's entire law practice, or an entire geographic or substantive area of practice, be sold. The prohibition against sale of less than substantially all of an entire law practice, entire geographic area of practice or entire substantive field of practice protects those clients whose matters are less lucrative and who might find it difficult to secure other counsel if a sale could be limited to substantial fee-generating matters. The purchasers are required to undertake all client matters in the law practice ~~or practice, geographic area of practice, or substantive field of practice~~, subject to client consent or other contingencies. This requirement is satisfied, however, even if a purchaser is unable to undertake ~~a particular client matters because of a conflict of interest because, for example, the purchaser has a~~	Comment [6] is based on Model Rule 1.17, cmt. [6]. However, sentences within it have been expanded to clarify that it applies regardless of whether the sale is of an entire practice, of an entire geographic area of practice, or of an entire substantive field of practice. The last phrase has been added to the fourth sentence of this Comment because a conflict of interest is not the only circumstance under which the purchaser may not be able to undertake a particular client matter. Clients always have the option to refuse to retain the purchaser. The last two sentences have been added at COPRAC's suggestion to provide guidance on the meaning of "all of substantially all," a phrase not found in the Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale of Law Practice Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	conflict of interest, a client decides not to retain the purchaser, or the purchaser lacks the ability to undertake a matter. Whether the purchase and sale includes all or substantially all of the practice, or of the substantive field or geographic area of the practice, is to be measured by taking into account only that portion of the practice that, in accordance with these Rules, should be transferred to the purchasers. For example, a sale of only a portion of a practice may satisfy this Rule if it includes all or substantially all of the practice excluding client matters subject to a conflict of interest, matters where the clients choose to retain other counsel, and, if the seller becomes employed as in-house counsel to a business that was a client, matters for such business.
Client Confidences, Consent and Notice [7] Negotiations between seller and prospective purchaser prior to disclosure of information relating to a specific representation of an identifiable client no more violate the confidentiality provisions of Model Rule 1.6 than do preliminary discussions concerning the possible association of another lawyer or mergers between firms, with respect to which client consent is not required. Providing the purchaser access to client-specific information relating to the representation and to the file, however, requires client consent. The Rule provides that before such information can be disclosed by the	Client Confidences, Consent and Notice [7] ~~Negotiations~~Disclosures in confidence of client identities and matters during negotiations between seller and prospective purchaser ~~prior to disclosure for the purpose of information relating to a specific representation~~ascertaining actual or potential conflicts of an identifiable client interest no more violate the confidentiality provisions of ~~Model Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and~~ Rule 1.6 than do preliminary discussions concerning the possible association of another lawyer or mergers between firms, with respect to which client consent is not required. Providing the purchaser	Comment [7] is based on Model Rule 1.17, cmt. [7]. However, the first sentence has been reworded for clarity. Not all aspects of negotiations between seller and prospective purchaser are necessarily confidential. In preliminary discussions, the seller should be able to disclose in confidence client identities and matters, so the purchaser has an understanding of the scope of the practice and can check for conflicts of interest. However, the seller should not at that stage disclose specific confidential information nor give the purchaser access to the file. That information and access should only be provided by the seller with the consent of the client. The first sentence has been reworded to make those concepts explicit, and the word “confidential” has

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale of Law Practice Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
seller to the purchaser the client must be given actual written notice of the contemplated sale, including the identity of the purchaser, and must be told that the decision to consent or make other arrangements must be made within 90 days. If nothing is heard from the client within that time, consent to the sale is presumed.	access to client-specific information ~~relating to the representation~~ protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6 ~~and~~ to the file, however, requires client consent. ~~The~~ This Rule provides that, before such information can be disclosed by the seller to the purchaser, the client must be given actual written notice of the contemplated sale, including the identity of the ~~purchaser~~ purchasing lawyer or law firm, and must be told that the decision to consent or make other arrangements must be made within 90 days. If nothing is heard from the client within that time, consent to the sale is presumed. However, confidential information may be disclosed to the purchaser if necessary to protect a client from harm, damage or loss of rights, unless the client has made known that the client does not want to retain the purchaser or unless the seller and purchaser have ascertained that the purchaser has actual or potential conflicts of interest that preclude the purchaser from representing the client.	been added to the second sentence for that same reason. The third sentence has been modified – “purchaser” deleted and “purchasing lawyer or law firm” substituted for it – in order to make explicit that the concept applies regardless of whether the purchaser is an individual lawyer or law firm. In an emergency situation, it may be necessary for the seller to disclose confidential information to the purchaser, in order for the purchaser to protect a client from harm, damage, or loss of rights. The last sentence has been added to this Comment in order to permit a purchaser to obtain access to confidential information if necessary to protect a client in such an emergency.
[8] A lawyer or law firm ceasing to practice cannot be required to remain in practice because some clients cannot be given actual notice of the proposed purchase. Since these clients cannot themselves consent to the purchase or direct any other disposition of their files, the Rule requires an order from a court having jurisdiction authorizing their transfer or other disposition. The Court can be expected to determine whether reasonable efforts to	[8] ~~[RESERVED] A lawyer or law firm ceasing to practice cannot be required to remain in practice because some clients cannot be given actual notice of the proposed purchase. Since these clients cannot themselves consent to the purchase or direct any other disposition of their files, the Rule requires an order from a court having jurisdiction authorizing their transfer or other disposition. The Court can be expected to determine whether reasonable efforts to~~	The Commission recommends that Model Rule Comment [8] not be adopted because it is substantively wrong. Under California law and rules, a seller may not withdraw from representation unless he, she, or it has first complied with Rule 1.16 or the client has agreed to the discharge or has substituted the seller with new counsel. In addition, a lawyer may not disclose confidential information to a tribunal, even in camera, because that may waive confidentiality of the information.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale of Law Practice Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
locate the client have been exhausted, and whether the absent client's legitimate interests will be served by authorizing the transfer of the file so that the purchaser may continue the representation. Preservation of client confidences requires that the petition for a court order be considered in camera. (A procedure by which such an order can be obtained needs to be established in jurisdictions in which it presently does not exist).	~~locate the client have been exhausted, and whether the absent client's legitimate interests will be served by authorizing the transfer of the file so that the purchaser may continue the representation. Preservation of client confidences requires that the petition for a court order be considered in camera. (A procedure by which such an order can be obtained needs to be established in jurisdictions in which it presently does not exist).~~
[9] All elements of client autonomy, including the client's absolute right to discharge a lawyer and transfer the representation to another, survive the sale of the practice or area of practice.	[9] All elements of client autonomy, including the client's absolute right to discharge a lawyer and transfer the representation to another, survive the sale of the law practice ~~or, a geographic~~ area of the practice, or a substantive field of practice.	Comment [9] is based on Model Rule 1.17, cmt. [9]. The revisions are intended to make explicit that clients have autonomy in choosing their lawyer regardless of whether the sale is a sale of an entire practice, of a geographic area of practice, or of a substantive field of practice.
Fee Arrangements Between Client and Purchaser [10] The sale may not be financed by increases in fees charged the clients of the practice. Existing arrangements between the seller and the client as to fees and the scope of the work must be honored by the purchaser.	Fee Arrangements Between Client and Purchaser [10] ~~The~~Paragraph (e) provides that the sale may not be financed solely by increases in fees charged the clients of the law practice. Existing arrangements between the seller and the client as to fees and the scope of the work must be honored by the purchaser unless precluded by conflicts of interest, or unless the scope of work is changed with client consent. The purchaser may be required to enter into new fee agreements with each client. See, e.g., Business and Professions Code sections 6147 & 6148.	Comment [10] is based on Model Rule 1.17, cmt. [10]. However, the first sentence has been modified so that it expressly calls the reader's attention to paragraph (e). The word "solely" has been added because that is contained in the black letter rule. The word "law" has been added to make explicit that this Rule applies to the sale of a law practice, not to the sale of other lines of business. The "unless" clause in the second sentence has been added to conform to the language of paragraph (e). See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (e). The last sentence has been added to the Model Rule comment to remind purchasers that under this Rule, they must comply with California requirements regarding fee agreements, such as Business & Professions Code sections 6147 and 6148.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale of Law Practice Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Other Applicable Ethical Standards [11] Lawyers participating in the sale of a law practice or a practice area are subject to the ethical standards applicable to involving another lawyer in the representation of a client. These include, for example, the seller's obligation to exercise competence in identifying a purchaser qualified to assume the practice and the purchaser's obligation to undertake the representation competently (see Rule 1.1); the obligation to avoid disqualifying conflicts, and to secure the client's informed consent for those conflicts that can be agreed to (see Rule 1.7 regarding conflicts and Rule 1.0(e) for the definition of informed consent); and the obligation to protect information relating to the representation (see Rules 1.6 and 1.9).	Other Applicable Ethical Standards [11] ~~Lawyers participating in the sale of a law practice or a practice area are subject to the ethical standards applicable to involving another lawyer in the representation of a client. These include, for example, the seller's obligation to exercise competence in identifying a purchaser qualified to assume the practice and the purchaser's obligation to undertake the representation competently (see Rule 1.1); the obligation to avoid disqualifying conflicts, and to secure the client's informed consent for those conflicts that can be agreed to (see Rule 1.7 regarding conflicts and Rule 1.0(e) for the definition of informed consent); and the obligation to protect information relating to the representation (see Rules 1.6 and 1.9).~~ Lawyers participating in the sale of a law practice, a geographic area of practice, or a substantive field of practice must act in accordance with all applicable ethical standards. These include, for example, the following: The purchaser is obligated to check for potential conflicts of interest so as to avoid conflicts of interest (see, e.g., Rule 1.7 regarding concurrent conflicts and Rule 1.9 regarding conflicts arising from past representations) and thereafter to provide legal services competently (see Rule 1.1). Following a sale, the seller is obligated to continue to protect confidential client information (see	Comment [11] is based on Model Rule 1.17, cmt. [11], but has been substantially revised to correct an apparent error in the Model Rule comment. The examples in the Model Rule comment focus on the seller's ethical duties in connection with the sale of a law practice. The Commission concluded, however, that most of the examples described duties that a purchaser incurs in connection with a sale. The Commission has clarified which duties a purchaser has and which duties a seller has in its revision of the Comment.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale of Law Practice Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	Business & Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6) to avoid new representations that are in conflict with continuing duties to former clients (see Rule 1.9).
[12] If approval of the substitution of the purchasing lawyer for the selling lawyer is required by the rules of any tribunal in which a matter is pending, such approval must be obtained before the matter can be included in the sale (see Rule 1.16).	[12] If approval of the substitution of the purchasing lawyer for the selling lawyer is required by the rules of any tribunal in which a matter is pending, ~~such approval must be obtained before~~ the matter ~~can~~ may be included in the sale, but the approval of the tribunal must be obtained before the seller is relieved of responsibility for the matter. See Rule 1.16.	Comment [12] is based on Model Rule 1.17, cmt. [12]. However, it has been revised to clarify the contractual realities of selling a practice and obtaining a tribunal's permission to withdraw. A sale may contemplate including a given matter within the scope of the sale, and the parties will have to enter into a contract for sale before they can implement it. Nevertheless, if the approval of a tribunal is required before the purchaser may be substituted for the seller, both paragraph (f) of this proposed Rule and this comment now make explicit that the tribunal's approval must be obtained before the seller is relieved of responsibility for the matter.
	[12A] Although the services of a broker may be used to assist in a purchase and sale under this Rule, the Rule does not permit such a sale to a broker or other intermediary. Whether a fee may be paid to a nonlawyer broker for arranging a sale or purchase of a law practice under this Rule is governed by the terms of the sale agreement and other law. Other Rules may also apply. See, e.g., Rule 5.4(a) (prohibiting sharing legal fees with a nonlawyer), and Rule 7.2(b) (prohibiting a lawyer from giving anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services).	Comment [12A] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. The Commission concluded that a sale to a broker should not be permitted. A seller or a purchaser may utilize the services of a broker, if permitted by other law. However, this Rule does not permit a sale to a broker or other intermediary. In addition, other rules and other law govern whether a fee may be paid to a nonlawyer broker for arranging a sale or purchase of a law practice or any aspect of it. For example, proposed Rule 5.4(a) prohibits sharing legal fees with a nonlawyer, and proposed Rule 7.2(b) prohibits a lawyer from giving anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services. Lawyers and the public should be made aware of these restrictions. Therefore, they are spelled out in this Comment.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale of Law Practice Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Applicability of the Rule [13] This Rule applies to the sale of a law practice of a deceased, disabled or disappeared lawyer. Thus, the seller may be represented by a nonlawyer representative not subject to these Rules. Since, however, no lawyer may participate in a sale of a law practice which does not conform to the requirements of this Rule, the representatives of the seller as well as the purchasing lawyer can be expected to see to it that they are met.	Applicability of the Rule [13] This Rule applies to the sale of a law practice of a deceased, ~~disabled~~impaired or disappeared lawyer, or by a trustee. Thus, the seller may be represented by a nonlawyer representative not subject to these Rules. ~~Since, however, or the seller may be a lawyer acting in a fiduciary capacity. Because~~ no lawyer may ~~participate~~assist in a sale of a law practice ~~which that~~ does not ~~conform to the requirements of comply with~~ this Rule, ~~the representatives of the seller as well as a nonlawyer fiduciary who is represented by counsel, a lawyer selling in a fiduciary capacity, and~~ the purchasing lawyer ~~can be expected to see to it that they are met~~must all comply with this Rule. See, e.g., Rule 8.4(a).	Comment [13] is based on Model Rule 1.17, cmt. [13]. The word "impaired" has been substituted for "disabled" because the selling lawyer may be physically disabled but still able to participate in the sale, and the intent is to apply this Rule to a sale on behalf of a selling lawyer who is incapacitated. In addition, the phrase "or by a trustee" has been added because a lawyer, for estate and tax planning purposes, may hold the ownership of his or her practice in a trust. In the second sentence, the alternative of a seller being a lawyer acting in a fiduciary capacity has been added because a lawyer may be the attorney-in-fact, conservator, or trustee for another lawyer. In the third sentence, the word "because" has been substituted for "since, however," to rectify the temporal implication. The phrase "assist in" has been substituted for "participate in" in order to clarify that a lawyer need not be a purchaser or seller in order to violate this Rule. A lawyer for a purchaser or seller must assure that the sale of the practice complies with this Rule. Accordingly, the balance of the third sentence has been revised to make these concepts explicit.
[14] Admission to or retirement from a law partnership or professional association, retirement plans and similar arrangements, and a sale of tangible assets of a law practice, do not constitute a sale or purchase governed by this Rule.	[14] [RESERVED] ~~Admission to or retirement from a law partnership or professional association, retirement plans and similar arrangements, and a sale of tangible assets of a law practice, do not constitute a sale or purchase governed by this Rule.~~	Model Rule 1.17, cmt. [14] has been deleted because the substance of it has been moved into paragraph (h) of the black letter rule. An exception to a rule should appear in the rule itself. Because this exception appears in the proposed Rule, repeating it in the comment is not necessary.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.17 Sale of Law Practice Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 1.17 Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[15] This Rule does not apply to the transfers of legal representation between lawyers when such transfers are unrelated to the sale of a practice or an area of practice.	[15] This Rule does not apply to the transfers of legal representation between lawyers when such transfers are unrelated to the sale of a practice or or, a geographic area of practice, or a substantive field of practice.	Comment [15] is based on Model Rule 1.17, cmt. [15]. Language has been added to clarify that the Rule only applies to the sale of an entire practice, of a geographic area of practice, or of a substantive field of practice.
	[15A]The purchase of a law practice in accordance with this Rule does not constitute the conveyance of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services in violation of Rule 7.2(b).	Comment [15A] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. This Comment has been added to clarify that the sale of law practice in compliance with this Rule does not violate Rule 7.2(b).
	[15B]Lawyers who engage in a transaction described in this Rule also must comply with Rules 1.5.1 and 5.4 when applicable.	Comment [15B] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. This Comment has been added to help assure that lawyers who engage in a transaction under this Rule are alerted to the requirement of complying with proposed Rules 1.5.1 and 5.4.
	[15C]If a lawyer whose practice is sold is deceased, his or her estate must also comply with Business and Professions Code section 6180, et seq., including but not limited to the notice requirements therein.	Comment [15C] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. The Commission recommends addition of this Comment so that people who endeavor to conduct a sale of a practice of a deceased lawyer are alerted of the necessity of complying with the State Bar Act.

Rule 1.17: Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice
(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to the Public Comment Draft)

A lawyer or a law firm may sell or purchase a law practice, a substantive field of practice, or a geographic area of practice, including good will, only if the conditions set forth in paragraphs (a) through (g) are satisfied:

- (a) The seller ceases to engage in the private practice of law entirely, or in the substantive field or geographic area in which the seller conducted the portion of the practice being sold.
- (b) The seller makes the entire practice, or the entire substantive field or geographic area of the practice, available for sale to one or more lawyers or law firms.
- (c) The purchase and sale includes all or substantially all of the practice, or of the substantive field or geographic area of the practice.
- (d) If the purchase or sale contemplates the transfer of responsibility for work not yet completed or responsibility for client files or information protected by ~~Rule 1.6 and~~ Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6, then:
 - (1) If the seller is deceased, or has a conservator or other person acting in a representative capacity, and no lawyer has been appointed to act for the seller pursuant to Business and Professions Code section 6180.5, prior to the transfer, the purchaser:
 - (i) shall cause a written notice to be given to each of the seller's clients whose matters are included in the sale, stating that the interest in the law practice is being transferred to the purchaser; that the client has the right to retain other counsel and might have the right to act in his or her own behalf; that the client may take possession of any client papers and property in the form or format held by the lawyer as provided by Rule 1.16(e); and that, if no response is received to the notice within 90 days after it is sent or, if the client's rights would be prejudiced by a failure of the purchaser to act during that time, the purchaser may act on behalf of the client until otherwise notified by the client; and

- (ii) shall obtain the written consent of the client, provided that the affected client's consent shall be presumed until the purchaser is otherwise notified by the client if the purchaser receives no response to the paragraph (d)(1)(i) notification within 90 days after it is sent to the client's last address as shown on the records of the seller, or if the client's rights would be prejudiced by a failure of the purchaser to act during the 90-day period.
- (2) In all other circumstances, not less than 90 days prior to the transfer:
- (i) the seller, or the lawyer appointed to act for the seller pursuant to Business and Professions Code section 6180.5, shall cause a written notice to be given to each of the seller's clients whose matters are included in the sale, stating that the interest in the law practice is being transferred to the purchaser; that the client has the right to retain other counsel and might have the right to act in his or her own behalf; that the client may take possession of any client papers and property in the form or format held by the lawyer as provided by Rule 1.16(e); and that, if no response is received to the notice within 90 days after it is sent or, if the client's rights would be prejudiced by a failure of the purchaser to act during the 90 day period, the purchaser may act on behalf of the client until otherwise notified by the client; and

- (ii) the seller, or the lawyer appointed to act for the seller pursuant to Business and Professions Code section 6180.5, shall obtain the written consent of each of the seller's clients whose matters are included in the sale, prior to the transfer, provided that the client's consent shall be presumed if neither the seller nor the purchaser receives a response to the paragraph (d)(2)(i) notice within 90 days after it is sent to the client's last address as shown on the records of the seller, or if the client's rights would be prejudiced by a failure of the purchaser to act during the 90 day period, unless either the seller or the purchaser is otherwise notified by the client.
- (e) Fees charged to clients shall not be increased solely by reason of the purchase, and, unless the scope of the work is narrowed or expanded with the clients' informed consent, the purchaser assumes the seller's obligations under existing client agreements regarding fees and the scope of work.
- (f) If substitution is required by the rules of a tribunal in which a matter is pending, all steps necessary to substitute a lawyer shall be taken.
- (g) A lawyer shall not disclose confidential client information to a nonlawyer in connection with a purchase or sale under this Rule.

- (h) This Rule does not apply to the admission to or retirement from a law partnership or law corporation, retirement plans and similar arrangements, or sale of tangible assets of a law practice.

COMMENT

- [1] The practice of law is a profession, not merely a business. Clients are not commodities that can be purchased and sold at will. Pursuant to this Rule, when a lawyer or an entire firm ceases to practice, or ceases to practice in an area of law, and other lawyers or firms take over the representation, the selling lawyer or firm may obtain compensation for the practice as may withdrawing partners of law firms. See Rules 5.4 and 5.6.
- [1A] As used in this Rule, a selling "lawyer" includes the personal representative of the estate of a deceased lawyer, the trustee of a trust of which a law practice is an asset, an attorney in fact under a lawyer's durable power of attorney, a conservator of the estate of a lawyer, or a lawyer appointed to act for the seller pursuant to Business and Professions Code sections 6180, 6185 and 6190.4.

Termination of Practice by the Seller

- [2] The requirement that all of the private practice, or all of a substantive field or geographic area of practice, be sold is satisfied if the seller in good faith makes the entire practice, or the entire substantive field or geographic area of practice, available for sale to the purchasers. The fact that a number of the seller's clients decide not to be represented by the purchasers but take their matters elsewhere, or refuse to discharge the selling lawyer, therefore, does not result in a violation. If a client does not agree to retain the purchaser, the selling lawyer is not relieved from responsibility for the representation unless the seller is permitted to withdraw from the representation. See Rule 1.16.

- [2A] Return to private practice, or return to the practice in the substantive field or geographic area of the practice that was sold, as a result of an unanticipated change in circumstances does not necessarily result in a violation. For example, a lawyer who has sold a practice to accept an appointment to judicial office does not violate the requirement that the sale be attendant to cessation of practice if the lawyer later resumes private practice upon being defeated in a contested or a retention election for the office or resigns or retires from a judicial position.
- [3] The requirement that the seller cease to engage in the private practice of law does not prohibit employment as a lawyer on the staff of a public agency or a legal services entity that provides legal services to the poor, or as in-house counsel to a business.
- [3A] An agreement for sale of a law practice that otherwise complies with this Rule does not violate this Rule if it contains a provision for a reasonable transitional period during which the seller may continue to practice and represent clients for the purpose of facilitating the transition of consenting clients to the purchaser.
- [4] This Rule permits a sale of an entire practice attendant upon retirement from the private practice of law within this state or within a defined geographic area of this state. A seller does not violate this Rule by either (i) selling a California practice but continuing to practice in other jurisdictions; or (ii) selling a practice in one geographic area of this state but continuing to practice in another geographic area of this state, as agreed to by seller and purchaser. An agreement for the sale of a geographic area or areas of a law practice should state as precisely as possible the specific geographic area or areas being sold.
- [5] This Rule also permits a lawyer or law firm to sell a substantive field of practice. If a substantive field of practice is sold and the lawyer remains in the active practice of law, the lawyer must cease accepting any matters in the substantive field of practice that has been sold, either as counsel or co-counsel, or by assuming joint responsibility for a matter in connection with the division of a fee with another lawyer as would otherwise be permitted by Rule 1.5.1. For example, a lawyer with a substantial number of estate planning matters and a substantial number of probate administration cases may sell the estate planning portion of the practice but remain in the practice of law by concentrating on probate administration; however, that practitioner may not thereafter accept any estate planning matters. Although a lawyer or law firm that sells the practice in this state or in a geographic area of this state must make the entire practice in this state or in the geographic area available for purchase, this Rule permits the seller to limit the sale to one or more substantive fields of the practice, thereby preserving the lawyer's right to continue practice in the areas of the practice that were not sold.

Sale of Entire Practice or Entire Area of Practice

- [6] This Rule requires that all or substantially all of the seller's entire law practice, or an entire geographic or substantive area of practice, be sold. The prohibition against sale of less than substantially all of an entire law practice, entire geographic area of practice or entire substantive field of practice protects those clients whose matters are less lucrative and who might find it difficult to secure other counsel if a sale could be limited to substantial fee-generating matters. The purchasers are required to undertake all client matters in the law practice, geographic area of practice, or substantive field of practice, subject to client consent or other contingencies. This requirement is satisfied, however, even if a purchaser is unable to undertake particular client matters because, for example, the purchaser has a conflict of interest, a client decides not to retain the purchaser, or the purchaser lacks the ability to undertake a matter. Whether the purchase and sale includes all or substantially all of the practice, or of the substantive field or geographic area of the practice, is to be measured by taking into account only that portion of the practice that, in accordance with these Rules, should be transferred to the purchasers. For example, a sale of only a portion of a practice may satisfy this Rule if it includes all or substantially all of the practice excluding client matters subject to a conflict of interest, matters where the clients choose to retain other counsel, and, if the seller becomes employed as in-house counsel to a business that was a client, matters for such business.

Client Confidences, Consent and Notice

- [7] Disclosures in confidence of client identities and matters during negotiations between seller and prospective purchaser for the purpose of ascertaining actual or potential conflicts of interest no more violate the confidentiality provisions of Model Business and Professions Code section 6068\(e\) and Rule 1.6 than do preliminary discussions concerning the possible association of another lawyer or mergers between firms, with respect to which client consent is not required. Providing the purchaser access to client-specific ~~confidential~~ information ~~relating to the representation protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6~~ or to the file, however, requires client consent. This Rule provides that, before such information can be disclosed by the seller to the purchaser, the client must be given actual written notice of the contemplated sale, including the identity of the purchasing lawyer or law firm, and must be told that the decision to consent or make other arrangements must be made within 90 days. If nothing is heard from the client within that time, consent to the sale is presumed. However, confidential information may be disclosed to the purchaser if necessary to protect a client from harm, damage or loss of rights, unless the client has made known that the client does not want to retain the purchaser or unless the seller and purchaser have ascertained that the purchaser has actual or potential conflicts of interest that preclude the purchaser from representing the client.

[8] [RESERVED]

- [9] All elements of client autonomy, including the client's absolute right to discharge a lawyer and transfer the representation to another, survive the sale of the law practice, a geographic area of the practice, or a substantive field of practice.

Fee Arrangements Between Client and Purchaser

- [10] Paragraph (e) provides that the sale may not be financed solely by increases in fees charged the clients of the law practice. Existing arrangements between the seller and the client as to fees and the scope of the work must be honored by the purchaser unless precluded by conflicts of interest, or unless the scope of work is changed with client consent. The purchaser may be required to enter into new fee agreements with each client. –See, e.g., Business and Professions Code sections 6147 and 6148.

Other Applicable Ethical Standards

- [11] Lawyers participating in the sale of a law practice, a geographic area of practice, or a substantive field of practice must act in accordance with all applicable ethical standards. These include, for example, the following: The purchaser is obligated to check for potential conflicts of interest so as to avoid conflicts of interest (see, e.g., Rule 1.7 regarding concurrent conflicts and Rule 1.9 regarding conflicts arising from past representations) and thereafter to provide legal services competently (see Rule 1.1). Following a sale, the seller is obligated to continue to protect confidential client information (see ~~Rule 1.6 and~~ Business and Professions Code section 6068(e)(~~4~~) and Rule 1.6) and to avoid new representations that are in conflict with continuing duties to former clients (see Rule 1.9).

- [12] If approval of the substitution of the purchasing lawyer for the selling lawyer is required by the rules of any tribunal in which a matter is pending, the matter may be included in the sale, but the approval of the tribunal must be obtained before the seller is relieved of responsibility for the matter. -See Rule 1.16.
- [12A] Although the services of a broker may be used to assist in a purchase and sale under this Rule, the Rule does not permit such a sale to a broker or other intermediary. Whether a fee may be paid to a nonlawyer broker for arranging a sale or purchase of a law practice under this Rule is governed by the terms of the sale agreement and other law. Other Rules may also apply. See, e.g., Rule 5.4(a) (prohibiting sharing legal fees with a nonlawyer), and Rule 7.2(b) (prohibiting a lawyer from giving anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services).

Applicability of the Rule

- [13] This Rule applies to the sale of a law practice of a deceased, impaired or disappeared lawyer, or by a trustee. Thus, the seller may be represented by a nonlawyer representative not subject to these Rules, or the seller may be a lawyer acting in a fiduciary capacity. Because no lawyer may assist in a sale of a law practice that does not comply with this Rule, a nonlawyer fiduciary who is represented by counsel, a lawyer selling in a fiduciary capacity, and the purchasing lawyer must all comply with this Rule. See, e.g., Rule 8.4(a).

- [14] [RESERVED]
- [15] This Rule does not apply to the transfers of legal representation between lawyers when such transfers are unrelated to the sale of a practice, a geographic area of practice, or a substantive field of practice.
- [15A] The purchase of a law practice in accordance with this Rule does not constitute the conveyance of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services in violation of Rule 7.2(b).
- [15B] Lawyers who engage in a transaction described in this Rule also must comply with Rules 1.5.1 and 5.4 when applicable.
- [15C] If a lawyer whose practice is sold is deceased, his or her estate must also comply with Business and Professions Code section 6180, et seq., including but not limited to the notice requirements therein.

Rule ~~2-300 Sale or~~ 1.17: Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice ~~of a Member, Living or Deceased~~

(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

~~All or substantially all of the law practice of a member, living or deceased, including goodwill, may be sold to another member or law firm subject to all the following conditions:~~

A lawyer or a law firm may sell or purchase a law practice, a substantive field of practice, or a geographic area of practice, including good will, only if the conditions set forth in paragraphs (a) through (g) are satisfied:

~~(A) Fees charged to clients shall not be increased solely by reason of such sale.~~

(a) The seller ceases to engage in the private practice of law entirely, or in the substantive field or geographic area in which the seller conducted the portion of the practice being sold.

(b) The seller makes the entire practice, or the entire substantive field or geographic area of the practice, available for sale to one or more lawyers or law firms.

(c) The purchase and sale includes all or substantially all of the practice, or of the substantive field or geographic area of the practice.

~~(Bd)~~ If the purchase or sale contemplates the transfer of responsibility for work not yet completed or responsibility for client files or information protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068, ~~subdivision (e) and Rule 1.6~~, then:

(1) ~~if~~ if the seller is deceased, or has a conservator or other person acting in a representative capacity, and no ~~member~~ lawyer has been appointed to act for the seller pursuant to Business and

Professions Code section 6180.5, ~~then~~ prior to the transfer, the purchaser:

(ai) ~~the purchaser~~ shall cause a written notice to be given to each of the client's clients whose matters are included in the sale, stating that the interest in the law practice is being transferred to the purchaser; that the client has the right to retain other counsel and might have the right to act in his or her own behalf; that the client may take possession of any client papers and property, ~~as required in the form or format held by rule 3-700~~ the lawyer as provided by Rule 1.16(D); and that, if no response is received to the ~~notification notice~~ notification within 90 days ~~of the sending of such notice, after it is sent~~ or in the event, if the client's rights would be prejudiced by a failure of the purchaser to act during that time, the purchaser may act on behalf of the client until otherwise notified by the client. ~~Such notice shall comply with the requirements as set forth in rule 1-400(D) and any provisions relating to attorney-client fee arrangements;~~ and

(bii) ~~the purchaser~~ shall obtain the written consent of the client, provided that ~~such~~ the affected client's consent shall be presumed until the purchaser is otherwise notified by the client if the purchaser receives no response ~~is received~~ to the paragraph (d)(1)(i) notification ~~specified in subparagraph (a)~~ within 90 days ~~of the date of the sending of such notification~~ after it is sent to the client's last address as shown on the records of the seller, or if the client's rights would be prejudiced by a failure of the purchaser to act during ~~such~~the 90-day period.

(2) ~~in~~In all other circumstances, not less than 90 days prior to the transfer;

(a) the seller, or the ~~member~~lawyer appointed to act for the seller pursuant to Business and Professions Code section 6180.5, shall cause a written notice to be given to each of the client's clients whose matters are included in the sale, stating that the interest in the law practice is being transferred to the purchaser; that the client has the right to retain other counsel and might have the right to act in his or her own behalf; that the client may take possession of any client papers and property, ~~as required in the form or format held by rule 3-700~~the lawyer as provided by Rule 1.16(D); and that, if no response is received to the ~~notification~~notice within 90 days after it is sent or, if the client's rights would be prejudiced by a failure of the sending of such notice~~purchaser to act during the 90 day period,~~ the purchaser may act on behalf of the client until otherwise notified by the client. ~~Such notice shall comply with the requirements as set forth in rule 1-400(D) and any provisions relating to attorney-client fee arrangements;~~ and

(b) the seller, or the ~~member~~lawyer appointed to act for the seller pursuant to Business and Professions Code section 6180.5, shall obtain the written consent of each of the client's clients whose matters are included in the sale, prior to the transfer, provided that ~~such~~the client's consent shall be presumed ~~until otherwise notified by the~~ ~~client~~ if ~~neither the seller nor the purchaser receives a response is received to the notification specified in subparagraph (a)(2)(i) notice~~ within 90 days of the date of the sending of such notification after it is sent to the client's last address as shown on the records of the seller, or if the client's rights would be prejudiced by a failure of the purchaser to act during the 90 day period, unless either the seller or the purchaser is otherwise notified by the client.

(e) Fees charged to clients shall not be increased solely by reason of the purchase, and, unless the scope of the work is narrowed or expanded with the clients' informed consent, the purchaser assumes the seller's obligations under existing client agreements regarding fees and the scope of work.

(f) If substitution is required by the rules of a tribunal in which a matter is pending, all steps necessary to substitute a ~~member~~lawyer shall be taken.

(d) ~~All activity of a purchaser or potential purchaser under this rule shall be subject to compliance with rules 3-300 and 3-310 where applicable.~~

(g) ~~Confidential information~~A lawyer shall not ~~be disclosed~~disclose confidential client information to a ~~non-member~~nonlawyer in connection with a purchase or sale under this ~~rule~~Rule.

(h) ~~Admission~~This Rule does not apply to the admission to or retirement from a law partnership or law corporation, retirement plans and similar arrangements, or sale of tangible assets of a law practice ~~shall not be deemed a sale or purchase under this rule.~~

Discussion:COMMENT

~~Paragraph (A) is intended to prohibit the purchaser from charging the former clients of the seller a higher fee than the purchaser is charging his or her existing clients.~~

[1] The practice of law is a profession, not merely a business. Clients are not commodities that can be purchased and sold at will. Pursuant to this Rule, when a lawyer or an entire firm ceases to practice, or ceases to practice in an area of law, and other lawyers or firms take over the representation, the selling lawyer or firm may obtain compensation for the practice as may withdrawing partners of law firms. See Rules 5.4 and 5.6.

[1A] As used in this Rule, a selling "lawyer" includes the personal representative of the estate of a deceased lawyer, the trustee of a trust of which a law practice is an asset, an attorney in fact under a lawyer's durable power of attorney, a conservator of the estate of a lawyer, or a lawyer appointed to act for the seller pursuant to Business and Professions Code sections 6180, 6185 and 6190.4.

Termination of Practice by the Seller

[2] The requirement that all of the private practice, or all of a substantive field or geographic area of practice, be sold is satisfied if the seller in good faith makes the entire practice, or the entire substantive field or geographic area of practice, available for sale to the purchasers. The fact that a number of the seller's clients decide not to be represented by the purchasers but take their matters elsewhere, or refuse to discharge the selling lawyer, therefore, does not result in a violation. If a client does not agree to retain the purchaser, the selling lawyer is not relieved from responsibility for the representation unless the seller is permitted to withdraw from the representation. See Rule 1.16.

[2A] ~~"All~~Return to private practice, or ~~substantially all~~return to the practice in the substantive field or geographic area of the ~~law practice of a member"~~ means, for purposes of rule 2-300, that ~~was sold, for as a~~ result of an unanticipated change in circumstances does not necessarily result in a violation. For example, a ~~member may retain one or two clients~~lawyer who ~~have such~~has sold a longstanding personal and professional relationship with the member that transfer of those clients' files is not feasible. ~~Conversely, rule 2-300 is not intended~~practice to ~~authorize~~accept an appointment to judicial office does not violate the requirement that the sale be attendant to cessation of ~~a law~~ practice if the lawyer later resumes private practice upon being defeated in a ~~piecemeal fashion except as may be required by subparagraph (B)(1)(a)~~contested or ~~paragraph (D)~~a retention election for the office or resigns or retires from a judicial position.

[3] The requirement that the seller cease to engage in the private practice of law does not prohibit employment as a lawyer on the staff of a public agency or a legal services entity that provides legal services to the poor, or as in-house counsel to a business.

[3A] An agreement for sale of a law practice that otherwise complies with this Rule does not violate this Rule if it contains a provision for a reasonable transitional period during which the seller may continue to practice and represent clients for the purpose of facilitating the transition of consenting clients to the purchaser.

[4] This Rule permits a sale of an entire practice attendant upon retirement from the private practice of law within this state or within a defined geographic area of this state. A seller does not violate this Rule by either (i) selling a California practice but continuing to practice in other jurisdictions; or (ii) selling a practice in one geographic area of this state but continuing to practice in another geographic area of this state, as agreed to by seller and purchaser. An agreement for the

- [5] sale of a geographic area or areas of a law practice should state as precisely as possible the specific geographic area or areas being sold. This Rule also permits a lawyer or law firm to sell a substantive field of practice. If a substantive field of practice is sold and the lawyer remains in the active practice of law, the lawyer must cease accepting any matters in the substantive field of practice that has been sold, either as counsel or co-counsel, or by assuming joint responsibility for a matter in connection with the division of a fee with another lawyer as would otherwise be permitted by Rule 1.5.1. For example, a lawyer with a substantial number of estate planning matters and a substantial number of probate administration cases may sell the estate planning portion of the practice but remain in the practice of law by concentrating on probate administration; however, that practitioner may not thereafter accept any estate planning matters. Although a lawyer or law firm that sells the practice in this state or in a geographic area of this state must make the entire practice in this state or in the geographic area available for purchase, this Rule permits the seller to limit the sale to one or more substantive fields of the practice, thereby preserving the lawyer's right to continue practice in the areas of the practice that were not sold.

Sale of Entire Practice or Entire Area of Practice

- [6] This Rule requires that all or substantially all of the seller's entire law practice, or an entire geographic or substantive area of practice, be sold. The prohibition against sale of less than substantially all of an entire law practice, entire geographic area of practice or entire substantive field of practice protects those clients whose matters are less lucrative and who might find it difficult to secure other counsel if a sale could be limited to substantial fee-generating matters. The purchasers are required to undertake all client matters in the law practice, geographic area of practice, or substantive field of practice, subject to client consent or other contingencies. This requirement is satisfied, however, even if a purchaser is unable to undertake particular client matters because, for example, the purchaser has a conflict of interest, a client decides not to retain the purchaser, or the purchaser lacks the ability to undertake a matter. Whether the purchase and sale includes all or substantially all of the practice, or of the substantive field or geographic area of the practice, is to be measured by taking into account only that portion of the practice that, in accordance with these Rules, should be transferred to the purchasers. For example, a sale of only a portion of a practice may satisfy this Rule if it includes all or substantially all of the practice excluding client matters subject to a conflict of interest, matters where the clients choose to retain other counsel, and, if the seller becomes employed as in-house counsel to a business that was a client, matters for such business.

Client Confidences, Consent and Notice

- [7] Disclosures in confidence of client identities and matters during negotiations between seller and prospective purchaser for the purpose of ascertaining actual or potential conflicts of interest no more violate the confidentiality provisions of Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6 than do preliminary discussions concerning the possible association of another lawyer or mergers between firms, with respect to which client consent is not required. Providing the purchaser access to client-specific information protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6 or to the file, however, requires client consent. This Rule provides that, before such information can be disclosed by the seller to the purchaser, the client must be given actual written notice of the contemplated sale, including the identity of the purchasing lawyer or law firm, and must be told that the decision to consent or make other arrangements must be made within 90 days. If nothing is heard from the client within that time, consent to the sale is presumed. However, confidential information may be disclosed to the purchaser if necessary to protect a client from harm, damage or loss of rights, unless the client has made known that the client does not want to retain the purchaser or unless the seller and purchaser have ascertained that the purchaser has actual or potential conflicts of interest that preclude the purchaser from representing the client.

[8] [RESERVED]

~~Transfer of individual client matters, where permitted, is governed by rule 2-200. Payment of a fee to a non-lawyer broker for arranging the sale or purchase of a law practice is governed by rule 1-320.~~

[9] All elements of client autonomy, including the client's absolute right to discharge a lawyer and transfer the representation to another, survive the sale of the law practice, a geographic area of the practice, or a substantive field of practice.

Fee Arrangements Between Client and Purchaser

[10] Paragraph (e) provides that the sale may not be financed solely by increases in fees charged the clients of the law practice. Existing arrangements between the seller and the client as to fees and the scope of the work must be honored by the purchaser unless precluded by conflicts of interest, or unless the scope of work is changed with client consent. The purchaser may be required to enter into new fee agreements with each client. See, e.g., Business and Professions Code sections 6147 and 6148.

Other Applicable Ethical Standards

[11] Lawyers participating in the sale of a law practice, a geographic area of practice, or a substantive field of practice must act in accordance with all applicable ethical standards. These include, for example, the following: The purchaser is obligated to check for potential conflicts of interest so as to avoid conflicts of interest (see, e.g., Rule 1.7 regarding concurrent conflicts and Rule 1.9 regarding conflicts arising from past representations) and thereafter to provide legal services competently (see Rule 1.1). Following a sale, the seller is obligated to continue to protect confidential client information (see Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6) and to avoid new representations that are in conflict with continuing duties to former clients (see Rule 1.9).

[12] If approval of the substitution of the purchasing lawyer for the selling lawyer is required by the rules of any tribunal in which a matter is pending, the matter may be included in the sale, but the approval of the tribunal must be obtained before the seller is relieved of responsibility for the matter. See Rule 1.16.

[12A] Although the services of a broker may be used to assist in a purchase and sale under this Rule, the Rule does not permit such a sale to a broker or other intermediary. Whether a fee may be paid to a nonlawyer broker for arranging a sale or purchase of a law practice under this Rule is governed by the terms of the sale agreement and other law. Other Rules may also apply. See, e.g., Rule 5.4(a) (prohibiting sharing legal fees with a nonlawyer), and Rule 7.2(b) (prohibiting a lawyer from giving anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services).

Applicability of the Rule

[13] This Rule applies to the sale of a law practice of a deceased, impaired or disappeared lawyer, or by a trustee. Thus, the seller may be represented by a nonlawyer representative not subject to these Rules, or the seller may be a lawyer acting in a fiduciary capacity. Because no lawyer may assist in a sale of a law practice that does not comply with this Rule, a nonlawyer fiduciary who is represented by counsel, a lawyer selling in a fiduciary capacity, and the purchasing lawyer must all comply with this Rule. See, e.g., Rule 8.4(a).

[14] [RESERVED]

[15] This Rule does not apply to the transfers of legal representation between lawyers when such transfers are unrelated to the sale of a practice, a geographic area of practice, or a substantive field of practice.

[15A] The purchase of a law practice in accordance with this Rule does not constitute the conveyance of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services in violation of Rule 7.2(b).

[15B] Lawyers who engage in a transaction described in this Rule also must comply with Rules 1.5.1 and 5.4 when applicable.

[15C] If a lawyer whose practice is sold is deceased, his or her estate must also comply with Business and Professions Code section 6180, et seq., including but not limited to the notice requirements therein.

Rule 1.17: Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice (Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

A lawyer or a law firm may sell or purchase a law practice, a substantive field of practice, or a geographic area of practice, including good will, only if the conditions set forth in paragraphs (a) through (g) are satisfied:

- (a) The seller ceases to engage in the private practice of law entirely, or in the substantive field or geographic area in which the seller conducted the portion of the practice being sold.
- (b) The seller makes the entire practice, or the entire substantive field or geographic area of the practice, available for sale to one or more lawyers or law firms.
- (c) The purchase and sale includes all or substantially all of the practice, or of the substantive field or geographic area of the practice.
- (d) If the purchase or sale contemplates the transfer of responsibility for work not yet completed or responsibility for client files or information protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6, then:
 - (1) If the seller is deceased, or has a conservator or other person acting in a representative capacity, and no lawyer has been appointed to act for the seller pursuant to Business and Professions Code section 6180.5, prior to the transfer, the purchaser:
 - (i) shall cause a written notice to be given to each of the seller's clients whose matters are included in the sale, stating that the interest in the law practice is being transferred to the purchaser; that the client has the right to retain other counsel and might have the right to act in his or her own behalf; that the client may take possession of any client papers and property in the form or format held by the lawyer as provided by Rule 1.16(e); and that, if no response is received to the notice within 90 days after it is sent or, if the client's rights would be prejudiced by a failure of the purchaser to act during that time, the purchaser may act on behalf of the client until otherwise notified by the client; and

- (ii) shall obtain the written consent of the client, provided that the affected client's consent shall be presumed until the purchaser is otherwise notified by the client if the purchaser receives no response to the paragraph (d)(1)(i) notification within 90 days after it is sent to the client's last address as shown on the records of the seller, or if the client's rights would be prejudiced by a failure of the purchaser to act during the 90-day period.
- (2) In all other circumstances, not less than 90 days prior to the transfer:
- (i) the seller, or the lawyer appointed to act for the seller pursuant to Business and Professions Code section 6180.5, shall cause a written notice to be given to each of the seller's clients whose matters are included in the sale, stating that the interest in the law practice is being transferred to the purchaser; that the client has the right to retain other counsel and might have the right to act in his or her own behalf; that the client may take possession of any client papers and property in the form or format held by the lawyer as provided by Rule 1.16(e); and that, if no response is received to the notice within 90 days after it is sent or, if the client's rights would be prejudiced by a failure of the purchaser to act during the 90 day period, the purchaser may act on behalf of the client until otherwise notified by the client; and

- (ii) the seller, or the lawyer appointed to act for the seller pursuant to Business and Professions Code section 6180.5, shall obtain the written consent of each of the seller's clients whose matters are included in the sale, prior to the transfer, provided that the client's consent shall be presumed if neither the seller nor the purchaser receives a response to the paragraph (d)(2)(i) notice within 90 days after it is sent to the client's last address as shown on the records of the seller, or if the client's rights would be prejudiced by a failure of the purchaser to act during the 90 day period, unless either the seller or the purchaser is otherwise notified by the client.

- (e) Fees charged to clients shall not be increased solely by reason of the purchase, and, unless the scope of the work is narrowed or expanded with the clients' informed consent, the purchaser assumes the seller's obligations under existing client agreements regarding fees and the scope of work.
- (f) If substitution is required by the rules of a tribunal in which a matter is pending, all steps necessary to substitute a lawyer shall be taken.
- (g) A lawyer shall not disclose confidential client information to a nonlawyer in connection with a purchase or sale under this Rule.

- (h) This Rule does not apply to the admission to or retirement from a law partnership or law corporation, retirement plans and similar arrangements, or sale of tangible assets of a law practice.

COMMENT

- [1] The practice of law is a profession, not merely a business. Clients are not commodities that can be purchased and sold at will. Pursuant to this Rule, when a lawyer or an entire firm ceases to practice, or ceases to practice in an area of law, and other lawyers or firms take over the representation, the selling lawyer or firm may obtain compensation for the practice as may withdrawing partners of law firms. See Rules 5.4 and 5.6.
- [1A] As used in this Rule, a selling "lawyer" includes the personal representative of the estate of a deceased lawyer, the trustee of a trust of which a law practice is an asset, an attorney in fact under a lawyer's durable power of attorney, a conservator of the estate of a lawyer, or a lawyer appointed to act for the seller pursuant to Business and Professions Code sections 6180, 6185 and 6190.4.

Termination of Practice by the Seller

- [2] The requirement that all of the private practice, or all of a substantive field or geographic area of practice, be sold is satisfied if the seller in good faith makes the entire practice, or the entire substantive field or geographic area of practice, available for sale to the purchasers. The fact that a number of the seller's clients decide not to be represented by the purchasers but take their matters elsewhere, or refuse to discharge the selling lawyer, therefore, does not result in a violation. If a client does not agree to retain the purchaser, the selling lawyer is not relieved from responsibility for the representation unless the seller is permitted to withdraw from the representation. See Rule 1.16.

- [2A] Return to private practice, or return to the practice in the substantive field or geographic area of the practice that was sold, as a result of an unanticipated change in circumstances does not necessarily result in a violation. For example, a lawyer who has sold a practice to accept an appointment to judicial office does not violate the requirement that the sale be attendant to cessation of practice if the lawyer later resumes private practice upon being defeated in a contested or a retention election for the office or resigns or retires from a judicial position.
- [3] The requirement that the seller cease to engage in the private practice of law does not prohibit employment as a lawyer on the staff of a public agency or a legal services entity that provides legal services to the poor, or as in-house counsel to a business.
- [3A] An agreement for sale of a law practice that otherwise complies with this Rule does not violate this Rule if it contains a provision for a reasonable transitional period during which the seller may continue to practice and represent clients for the purpose of facilitating the transition of consenting clients to the purchaser.
- [4] This Rule permits a sale of an entire practice attendant upon retirement from the private practice of law within this state or within a defined geographic area of this state. A seller does not violate this Rule by either (i) selling a California practice but continuing to practice in other jurisdictions; or (ii) selling a practice in one geographic area of this state but continuing to practice in another geographic area of this state, as agreed to by seller and purchaser. An agreement for the sale of a geographic area or areas of a law practice should state as precisely as possible the specific geographic area or areas being sold.

- [5] This Rule also permits a lawyer or law firm to sell a substantive field of practice. If a substantive field of practice is sold and the lawyer remains in the active practice of law, the lawyer must cease accepting any matters in the substantive field of practice that has been sold, either as counsel or co-counsel, or by assuming joint responsibility for a matter in connection with the division of a fee with another lawyer as would otherwise be permitted by Rule 1.5.1. For example, a lawyer with a substantial number of estate planning matters and a substantial number of probate administration cases may sell the estate planning portion of the practice but remain in the practice of law by concentrating on probate administration; however, that practitioner may not thereafter accept any estate planning matters. Although a lawyer or law firm that sells the practice in this state or in a geographic area of this state must make the entire practice in this state or in the geographic area available for purchase, this Rule permits the seller to limit the sale to one or more substantive fields of the practice, thereby preserving the lawyer's right to continue practice in the areas of the practice that were not sold.

Sale of Entire Practice or Entire Area of Practice

- [6] This Rule requires that all or substantially all of the seller's entire law practice, or an entire geographic or substantive area of practice, be sold. The prohibition against sale of less than substantially all of an entire law practice, entire geographic area of practice or entire substantive field of practice protects those clients whose matters are less lucrative and who might find it difficult to secure other counsel if a sale could be limited to substantial fee-generating matters. The purchasers are required to undertake all client matters in the law practice, geographic area of practice, or substantive field of practice, subject to client consent or other contingencies. This requirement is satisfied, however, even if a purchaser is unable to undertake particular client matters because, for example, the purchaser has a conflict of interest, a client decides not to retain the purchaser, or the purchaser lacks the ability to undertake a matter. Whether the purchase and sale includes all or substantially all of the practice, or of the substantive field or geographic area of the practice, is to be measured by taking into account only that portion of the practice that, in accordance with these Rules, should be transferred to the purchasers. For example, a sale of only a portion of a practice may satisfy this Rule if it includes all or substantially all of the practice excluding client matters subject to a conflict of interest, matters where the clients choose to retain other counsel, and, if the seller becomes employed as in-house counsel to a business that was a client, matters for such business.

Client Confidences, Consent and Notice

- [7] Disclosures in confidence of client identities and matters during negotiations between seller and prospective purchaser for the purpose of ascertaining actual or potential conflicts of interest no more violate the confidentiality provisions of Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6 than do preliminary discussions concerning the possible association of another lawyer or mergers between firms, with respect to which client consent is not required. Providing the purchaser access to client-specific information protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6 or to the file, however, requires client consent. This Rule provides that, before such information can be disclosed by the seller to the purchaser, the client must be given actual written notice of the contemplated sale, including the identity of the purchasing lawyer or law firm, and must be told that the decision to consent or make other arrangements must be made within 90 days. If nothing is heard from the client within that time, consent to the sale is presumed. However, confidential information may be disclosed to the purchaser if necessary to protect a client from harm, damage or loss of rights, unless the client has made known that the client does not want to retain the purchaser or unless the seller and purchaser have ascertained that the purchaser has actual or potential conflicts of interest that preclude the purchaser from representing the client.

- [8] [RESERVED]
- [9] All elements of client autonomy, including the client's absolute right to discharge a lawyer and transfer the representation to another, survive the sale of the law practice, a geographic area of the practice, or a substantive field of practice.

Fee Arrangements Between Client and Purchaser

- [10] Paragraph (e) provides that the sale may not be financed solely by increases in fees charged the clients of the law practice. Existing arrangements between the seller and the client as to fees and the scope of the work must be honored by the purchaser unless precluded by conflicts of interest, or unless the scope of work is changed with client consent. The purchaser may be required to enter into new fee agreements with each client. See, e.g., Business and Professions Code sections 6147 and 6148.

Other Applicable Ethical Standards

- [11] Lawyers participating in the sale of a law practice, a geographic area of practice, or a substantive field of practice must act in accordance with all applicable ethical standards. These include, for example, the following: The purchaser is obligated to check for potential conflicts of interest so as to avoid conflicts of interest (see, e.g., Rule 1.7 regarding concurrent conflicts and Rule 1.9 regarding conflicts arising from past representations) and thereafter to provide legal services competently (see Rule 1.1). Following a sale, the seller is obligated to continue to protect confidential client information (see Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) and Rule 1.6) and to avoid new representations that are in conflict with continuing duties to former clients (see Rule 1.9).

- [12] If approval of the substitution of the purchasing lawyer for the selling lawyer is required by the rules of any tribunal in which a matter is pending, the matter may be included in the sale, but the approval of the tribunal must be obtained before the seller is relieved of responsibility for the matter. See Rule 1.16.
- [12A] Although the services of a broker may be used to assist in a purchase and sale under this Rule, the Rule does not permit such a sale to a broker or other intermediary. Whether a fee may be paid to a nonlawyer broker for arranging a sale or purchase of a law practice under this Rule is governed by the terms of the sale agreement and other law. Other Rules may also apply. See, e.g., Rule 5.4(a) (prohibiting sharing legal fees with a nonlawyer), and Rule 7.2(b) (prohibiting a lawyer from giving anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services).

Applicability of the Rule

- [13] This Rule applies to the sale of a law practice of a deceased, impaired or disappeared lawyer, or by a trustee. Thus, the seller may be represented by a nonlawyer representative not subject to these Rules, or the seller may be a lawyer acting in a fiduciary capacity. Because no lawyer may assist in a sale of a law practice that does not comply with this Rule, a nonlawyer fiduciary who is represented by counsel, a lawyer selling in a fiduciary capacity, and the purchasing lawyer must all comply with this Rule. See, e.g., Rule 8.4(a).

- [14] [RESERVED]
- [15] This Rule does not apply to the transfers of legal representation between lawyers when such transfers are unrelated to the sale of a practice, a geographic area of practice, or a substantive field of practice.
- [15A] The purchase of a law practice in accordance with this Rule does not constitute the conveyance of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services in violation of Rule 7.2(b).
- [15B] Lawyers who engage in a transaction described in this Rule also must comply with Rules 1.5.1 and 5.4 when applicable.
- [15C] If a lawyer whose practice is sold is deceased, his or her estate must also comply with Business and Professions Code section 6180, et seq., including but not limited to the notice requirements therein.

Rule 1.17 Sale of a Law Practice
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Hazard, Geoffrey, Deborah Rhode and Richard Zitrin (for group of law professors)	M	Yes		1. Re: Geographical area: The Commission has conflated the reference to "geographic area of practice" in the ABA rule -allowing a selling lawyer to cease practice in a state or particular "geographic area" -into selling off different geographic areas themselves. This is clearly a misinterpretation of the current ABA rule, intended or otherwise. Importantly, this also damages clients. Sale of an "area" would allow a large law firm to sell all its San Diego clients, or San Joaquin clients, to another firm even while it continues to practice in the same field. Clients will then be shunted to another law firm not of their choosing in a wide variety of circumstances. This rule was designed to allow lawyers or law firms that are retiring or moving or materially changing their practice to forward their practices to other qualified lawyers. The geographical area sale proposed by CRPC 1.17 is far too broad, allowing buying and selling of areas as if the practice of law were only a business and not also a	The Commission disagrees. Model Rule 1.17 expressly includes as one of its permissive clauses the sale of a practice in a geographic area. It is not confined to a sale of a practice in an entire state. See, e.g., S.C. Rule 1.17. If a lawyer wants to cut back the size of his or her practice in lieu of retiring entirely, he or she could stop accepting cases that would have to be filed in Southern California and confine his or her practice in the future to Northern California. The Commission interprets this as but one of the many possible applications of the Model Rule. While there is disagreement among the Commission members on this point, in the end the Commission has made a policy decision favoring a more expansive interpretation of the Rule, along the lines of the South Carolina rule, that permits the sale of all or substantially all of a practice in a geographic area. As to the concern expressed that this reading will result in clients being "shunted" between law firms, the Commission notes that the Rule does not make clients chattel. Instead, it permits the sale of all or part of the practice. Clients will continue to be free to reject the buyer as their new lawyer, and the selling firm will remain

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 1.17 Sale of a Law Practice [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 3 Agree = 1 Disagree = 0 Modify = 2 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				1.17(e)	profession, and clients were products to be bought and sold. This breadth should be narrowed substantially. 2. Re: No increase of fees: Section (e) of the current proposed rule says that the fee to the client shall not be increased "solely" by reason of the purchase of the practice. Section (d) of the ABA rule makes this fee increase absolute. We strongly believe that the California language should also be absolute, and that the word "solely" should be stricken.	responsible for the client matter unless permitted or required to withdraw in accordance with Rule 1.16. The Commission disagrees. Paragraph (e) is taken from the current Rule 2-300. Model Rule 1.17(d) does not contemplate the realities of the transition when all or part of a practice is sold. For example, the buyer and a client who wants to be represented by the buyer will normally enter into a new engagement agreement. In doing so, the client may want to expand or contract the scope of the work to be performed by the new lawyer. The fees charged to the client may properly be increased or decreased accordingly. By providing that fees charged to clients may not be increased "solely" by reason of the sale, current Rule 2-300(A) and proposed Rule 1.17(e) provide the necessary flexibility to permit such arrangements.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	M	Yes		OCTC's concern is that as to both deceased and living clients it provides that the notice to the client can state that if there is no response to the notice the buyer may act. It does not say the buyer is required to act. This could create a problem. There should be a provision that if the client does not specifically consent to the transfer of his or	The Commission disagrees. These provisions are in current Rule 2-300. The Commission is not aware of any problem with them. The rule should not require the buyer to act if the client does not respond. The buyer may not be permitted to act on behalf of the client. For example, the buyer may have an actual or potential conflict of interest, and the non-responsive client must be given an

Rule 1.17 Sale of a Law Practice
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					her file, the current attorney may not withdraw without complying with the rules governing withdrawal. (There are also some Comments providing this, but OCTC believes that it should be in the rule itself.)	opportunity to give his or her informed, written consent to the representation before the buyer may act. Instead, the selling lawyer retains responsibility. If a given client has not responded to the notice, requiring the buyer to act might be inconsistent with Rule 1.16 and other rules. Conversely, if the lawyer whose practice is sold is deceased or incapacitated, the corpse or the incapacitated lawyer should not be required to retain the file and continue to represent the client.
					There are too many Comments and they seem more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	The Commission disagrees with the proposal to move compliance with Rule 1.16 into the black letter paragraphs of this rule. Doing so would permit double charging of disciplinary violations without cause. The Comments should direct the attention of selling lawyers to other rules with which they must comply.
				Comment [2]	Comment [2] says See Rule 1.16 when it should state that the seller is permitted to withdraw only if in compliance with rule 1.16.	The Commission disagrees. The Commission agrees in part. The Commission has reworded the last clause of Comment [2] to state: "... unless the seller withdraws from the representation in compliance with Rule 1.16." The Commission has stricken the sentence that used to say, "See Rule 1.16."

Rule 1.17 Sale of a Law Practice [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 3 Agree = 1 Disagree = 0 Modify = 2 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				Comments [1A], [12], [15A], [15B]	Comments [1A], [12], [15A], and [15B] should be in the rule, not the Comments.	The Commission disagrees. Relatively early in the drafting process, the Commission considered placing Comment [1A] in the black letter rule. However, doing so made the rule more awkward, so the Commission recommends that its contents be in the Comment. Not all definitions need to be in the black letter rule. The Commission disagrees with moving Comments 12, 15A and 15B into the black letter rule. That would invite double charging without cause. One of the functions of comments is to call lawyers' attention to other potentially applicable standards.
				Comments [7] & [11]	Comments [7] and [11] are too long, burying information and being hard to read and understand. Comment [11] involves two different concepts: conflict checks and confidentiality. They should be separated into two separate comments	The Commission disagrees. Comment [7] is adapted from Model Rule Comment [7]. The buyer should not normally obtain access to client-specific confidential information relating to the representation or to the file without client consent. The Comment gives guidance on compliance if the client does not respond to notice. The Commission disagrees with the remark concerning Comment [11].
3	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.

Rule 1.17: Purchase and Sale of a Law Practice

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Arkansas adds Rule 1.17(e), which requires the seller to file a detailed and timely affidavit with the Committee on Professional Conduct showing that the seller has complied with the notice provisions of Rule 1.17.

California: Rule 2-300, using different language, addresses the same policy issues as Rule 1.17 and provides that “fees shall not be increased solely by reason of” the sale. “All or substantially all” of a practice may be sold.

Colorado: Rule 1.17(a) is satisfied only if the seller ceases to engage in the private practice of law “in Colorado,” or in the area of practice “in Colorado” that has been sold.

Florida omits the requirement in ABA Model Rule 1.17(a) that the seller cease practicing law, and adds or modifies several provisions, including the following:

(c) Court Approval Required. If a representation involves pending litigation, there shall be no substitution of counsel or termination of representation unless authorized by the court. . . .

(d) Client Objections. If a client objects to the proposed substitution of counsel, the seller shall comply with the requirements of rule 4-1.16(d) [which governs withdrawal]. . . .

(e) Existing Fee Contracts Controlling. The purchaser shall honor the fee agreements that were entered into between the seller and the seller’s clients. The fees charged clients shall not be increased by reason of the sale.

Florida’s Comment to subparagraph (f) provides as follows:

The sale may not be financed by increases in fees charged the clients of the practice. Existing agreements between the seller and the client as to fees and the scope of the work must be honored by the purchaser. This obligation of the purchaser is a factor that can be taken into account by seller and purchaser when negotiating the sale price of the practice.

Georgia: Rule 1.17 tracks the 1990 version of ABA Model Rule 1.17 verbatim except that Georgia deletes paragraph (a) (requiring that the seller stop practicing law).

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2010, Rule 1.17 also applies to “the estate of a deceased lawyer or the guardian or authorized representative of a disabled lawyer....”

Kansas: Kansas omits ABA Model Rule 1.17 entirely.

Maryland: Rule 1.17 differs significantly from ABA Model Rule 1.17. Maryland Rule 1.17(a)(1) permits the sale of a law practice, upon appropriate notice, if “(1) Except in the case of death, disability, or appointment of the seller to judicial office, the entire practice that is the subject of the sale has been in existence at least five years prior to the date of sale” and “(2) The practice is sold as an entirety to another lawyer or law firm.”

Michigan: Rule 1.17(a) provides that a “lawyer or a law firm may sell or purchase a private law practice, including good will, according to this rule.” Michigan adds Rule 1.17(e), which permits the “sale of the good will of a law practice . . . conditioned upon the seller ceasing to engage in the private practice of law for a reasonable period of time within the geographical area in which the practice has been conducted.”

Minnesota: Rule 1.17(b), which is based on the 1990 version of ABA Model Rule 1.17, provides as follows:

(b) The buying lawyer or firm of lawyers shall not increase the fees charged to clients by reason of the sale for a period of at least one year from the date of the sale. The buying lawyer or firm of lawyers shall honor all existing fee agreements for at least one year from the date of the sale and shall continue to completion, on the same terms agreed to by the selling lawyer and the client, any matters that the selling lawyer has agreed to do on a pro bono publico basis or for a reduced fee.

Rule 1.17(d) provides that the notice to clients must include a “summary of the buying lawyer’s or law firm’s professional background, including education and experience and the length of time that the buyer lawyer or members of the buying law firm has been in practice.” Minnesota also adds four paragraphs, including Rule 1.17(f), which permits the selling lawyer to promise that he or she “will not engage in the practice of law for a reasonable period of time within a reasonable geographic area and will not advertise for or solicit clients within that area for that time,” and Rule 1.17(g), which provides that the selling lawyer “shall retain responsibility for the proper management and disposition of all inactive files that are not transferred as part of the sale of the law practice.”

Missouri: Rule 1.17(d) adopts the ABA mandate that fees charged to clients shall not be increased by reason of the sale of the practice, but adds that the purchaser may “refuse to undertake the representation unless the client consents to pay the purchaser fees at a rate not exceeding the fees charged by the purchaser for rendering substantially similar services prior to the initiation of the purchase negotiations.”

New Jersey: Rule 1.17 permits a lawyer or firm to sell or purchase a law practice, including goodwill, if the seller is ceasing to engage in private law practice in New Jersey, the practice is sold as an entirety and certain notices are given to the clients of the seller and by publication in the New Jersey Law Journal and the New Jersey Lawyer at least 30 days in advance of the sale.

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 1.17 allows for the sale of a “law practice, including goodwill, to one or more lawyers or law firms.” The parties may agree “on reasonable restrictions on the seller’s private practice of law.” Provisions are made for protecting confidential information and checking for conflicts.

North Carolina: Rule 1.17(d) provides that if a conflict of interest disqualifies the purchaser from representing a client, then “the seller’s notice to the client shall advise the client to retain substitute counsel.” In addition, Rule 1.17(g) permits the purchaser to pay the seller in installments — but the seller “shall have no say regarding the purchaser’s conduct of the law practice.”

Ohio: Rule 1.17 incorporates most of the substantive provisions of the Model Rule, but uses different language and adds many different provisions. For example, Ohio Rule 1.17(a) requires that a law practice must be sold “in its entirety, except where a conflict of interest is present that prevents the transfer of representation of a client or class of clients.” In addition, Rule 1.17(a) prohibits the sale or purchase of a law practice “where the purchasing lawyer is buying the practice for the sole or primary purpose of reselling the practice to another lawyer or law firm,” and Rule 1.17(d)(1) requires the sale agreement to include a statement that “the purchasing lawyer is purchasing the law practice in good faith and with the intention of delivering legal services to clients of the selling lawyer and others in need of legal services.”

Ohio Rule 1.17(d)(2) requires the sale agreement to provide that “the purchasing lawyer will honor any fee agreements between the selling lawyer and the clients of the selling lawyer relative to legal representation that is ongoing at the time of the sale,” but the purchasing lawyer “may negotiate fees with clients of the selling lawyer for legal representation that is commenced after the date of the sale.” Rule 1.17(d)(3) generally permits the sale agreement to include terms that “reasonably limit the ability of the selling lawyer to reenter the practice of law,” but prohibits such limitations “if the selling lawyer is selling his or her law practice to enter academic, government, or public service or to serve as in-house counsel to a business.”

Ohio Rule 1.17(e) specifies in considerable detail what the notice to clients must contain, and a Rule 1.17(g) allows the selling lawyer and purchasing lawyer to give notice of the sale to a missing client by publishing notice of the sale in a newspaper. A Rule 1.17(i) provides as follows:

(i) Neither the selling lawyer nor the purchasing lawyer shall attempt to exonerate the lawyer or law firm from or limit liability to the former or prospective client for any malpractice or other professional negligence. The provisions of Rule 1.8(h) shall be incorporated in all agreements for the sale or purchase of a law practice. The selling lawyer or the purchasing lawyer, or both, may agree to provide for the indemnification or other contribution arising from any claim or action in malpractice or other professional negligence.

Oklahoma: Rule 1.17(a) requires the selling lawyer to cease practice only “in the geographic area in Oklahoma in which the practice has been conducted,” not in the entire state. Rule 1.17(b)(2) provides that matters shall not be transferred to a purchaser “unless the seller has reasonable basis to believe that the purchaser has the requisite knowledge and skill to handle such matters, or reasonable assurances are obtained that such purchaser will either acquire such knowledge and skill or associate with another lawyer having such competence.” Rule 1.17(c) requires the “signed written consent of each client whose representation is proposed to be transferred” unless the client takes no action within 90 days of the notice. Rule 1.17(d) permits the purchaser to “refuse to undertake the representation unless the client consents to pay the purchaser fees at a rate not exceeding the fees charged by the purchaser for rendering substantially similar services prior to the initiation of the purchase negotiations.”

Pennsylvania: Rule 1.17 differs significantly from ABA Model Rule 1.17. For example, Pennsylvania Rule 1.17(b) requires that the seller must sell the practice “as an entirety to a single lawyer,” and explains that a practice is sold as an entirety “if the purchasing lawyer assumes responsibility for all of the active files” except those specified in Rule 1.17(g). Rule 1.17(d) adds the following: “Existing agreements between the seller and the client concerning fees and the scope of work must be honored by the purchaser, unless the client gives informed consent confirmed in writing.” Pennsylvania also adds Rules 1.17(e) and (g), which provide as follows:

(e) The agreement of sale shall include a clear statement of the respective responsibilities of the parties to maintain and preserve the records and files of the seller’s practice, including client files.

(g) The sale shall not be effective as to any client for whom the proposed sale would create a conflict of interest for the purchaser or who cannot be represented by the purchaser because of other requirements of the Pennsylvania Rules of Professional Conduct or rules of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court governing the practice of law in Pennsylvania, unless such conflict, requirement or rule can be waived by the client and the client gives informed consent.

Virginia: Virginia requires the selling lawyer, in notifying clients about the proposed sale, to disclose “any proposed change in the terms of the future representation including the fee arrangement.” Nonetheless, Virginia also adopts ABA Model Rule 1.17(d).

Proposed Rule 1.18 [N/A]
“Duties to Prospective Client”
(ALT1, XDraft 3, 6/17/10 and ALT2, XDraft 7, 6/29/10)

Summary: Proposed Rule 1.18 closely tracks Model Rule 1.18 and clarifies the duties a lawyer owes to prospective clients who consult with the lawyer to seek representation. There is no California Rule counterpart, but the duty to protect confidential information of a prospective client is found in Evid. Code § 951. Following the Supreme Court’s disposition of the petition for review and requests for depublishation in Kirk v. First American Title, and further public comment, the Commission requests that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision on Rule 1.18 (see version ALT1, attached) and adopt a provision permitting unconsented screening in limited circumstances described in paragraph (d)(2) of attached version ALT2. In the alternative, the Commission requests that the Board forward to the Supreme Court both versions of the Rule to permit the Court to make an informed decision on this issue. See Introduction.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☒ Existing California Law

Rule

Statute

Evid. Code § 951

Case law

People v. Gionis (1995) 9 Cal.4th 1196 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 456];
Kirk v. First American Title Ins. Co. (2010) 183 Cal.App.4th 776, 108 Cal.Rptr.3d 620.

- ☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

Nevada Rule 1.18.

- ☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 7
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 3
Abstain 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Commission Minority Position, Known Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

Minority Position Included. (See Introduction): ☒ Yes ☐ No

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☒ Very Controversial – Explanation:

A number of lawyers in California reject the concept of non-consensual screening, which is provided for in paragraph (d)(2), in the private law firm context. See Introduction.

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 1.18* Duties to Prospective Client*

July 2010

(Draft rule following consideration of second round of public comment and the California Supreme Court's disposition of Kirk v. First American Title.)

INTRODUCTION & EXPLANATION OF REQUEST FOR RECONSIDERATION OF BOARD'S DECISION NOT TO INCLUDE A PROVISION PERMITTING UNCONSENTED ETHICAL SCREENING IN THE LIMITED SITUATION DESCRIBED IN PROPOSED RULE 1.18(d)(2):

Summary of the Commission's Request. The Commission believes that the Supreme Court's disposition of the Kirk case, Kirk v. First American Title Ins. Co. (2010) 183 Cal.App.4th 776, 108 Cal.Rptr.3d 620, as well as comments received during both rounds of public comment, have created changed circumstances that warrant the Commission's return to the Board to seek reconsideration of the Board's previous vote on proposed Rule 1.18, and to request that the Board adopt that version of Rule 1.18, attached, that permits unconsented ethical screening in the limited situations described in paragraph (d)(2). This version of the Rule is denominated as "ALT2". The version of Rule 1.18 approved by the Board at its May 2010 meeting is also attached (denominated as "ALT1" in these materials).

Procedural History of the Board's Consideration of Rule 1.10 and Kirk. At its May, 2010 meeting, the Regulation and Admissions Committee of the Board of Governors voted to recommend the adoption of a version of proposed Rule 1.18 without paragraph (d)(2). Paragraph (d)(2) would permit screening under limited circumstances: only when the lawyer to be screened can show that the lawyer "took reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more information that prohibits representation than was reasonably necessary to determine whether to represent the prospective client." Although the rule adopted by the Board contained no express rule provision concerning ethical screening, it did contain two comments expressing the Board's position that the issue of ethical screening should be left to resolution by case law.

Contemporaneously with the Board's action, a petition for review of the Court of Appeals decision in Kirk was filed with the Supreme Court, together with several requests to depublish the decision. On June 23, 2010, the Supreme Court denied review and also denied all requests that the Court of Appeal decision be depublished.

* Proposed Rule 1.18, version ALT1, XDraft 3 (6/17/10) and version ALT2, XDraft 7 (6/29/10).

Significance of the Supreme Court's Actions in Kirk, a decision involving a consultation with a prospective client. The Commission believes that the Supreme Court's actions in the Kirk case warrant the Board reversing itself and adopting a version of Rule 1.18 that permits unconsented ethical screening in the limited circumstances as approved by the Court of Appeals. In Kirk, the Supreme Court denied both the petition for review and numerous requests that the Court of Appeal decision be depublished. The Supreme Court was squarely presented with addressing the issue of screening in the prospective client situation, the very subject matter of Rule 1.18. The Court of Appeals had concluded that screening in the private lawyer context in limited circumstances was warranted. In reaching that decision, the court found it "significant" that "a majority of the Commission for the Revision of the Rules of Professional Conduct believed that screening should be ethically permissible in limited circumstances." 183 Cal.App.4th at 805 (emphasis in original). The same court questioned the rationale that permitted screening of a lawyer who has moved into government service from a private firm, but not the same lawyer who had moved from one private firm to another. Id. at 806 n. 25 ("The law cannot possibly be that [a law firm] could effectively screen [the lawyer] if he was tainted from information obtained when he worked for the [government], but cannot effectively screen him if he was tainted from information obtained when he worked for [a private client]. The court also noted that the policy rationales traditionally used by courts to distinguish between screening in a government context and screening in the private context were not compelling and, for the most part, applied equally in the private firm context. Id. at 805 n. 24. Some have argued that much the Court of Appeal's opinion was dicta and should not be relied upon as sign post for the direction the Supreme Court would take as to screening in the private context. However, as to the prospective client situation, the court's opinion clearly was not dicta. Regardless, if the Supreme Court thought the Court of Appeal was in error in reaching its conclusions, then surely the the Court would have granted the petition for review to set the record straight or, failing that, would at least have depublished the opinion to remove the inference that judges and lawyers should look to it for guidance. The Supreme Court, however, did neither, suggesting it was satisfied not only with the Court of Appeal's conclusion on the specific issue before it (screening in the prospective client context), but also its arguably broader pronouncements on screening in the limited situations presented in the Commission's proposed Rule.

Commission Request. Accordingly, the Commission requests that the Board reconsider its decision not to address unconsented screening directly in Rule 1.18 and adopt the Commission's proposed Rule, ALT2, that permits such screening only in the limited circumstances set forth in paragraph (d)(2). The Commission understands the important role that confidentiality plays in encouraging client candor, typically a prerequisite to a lawyer's effective representation of a client. This Rule recognizes that role and balances the need for prospective clients to be secure in their secrets and the need for lawyers to obtain sufficient information to determine whether they should – or even can – accept the representation. Thus, the limited availability of screening under this Rule should not impair the flow of information between lawyer and client.

Further, the Commission urges the Board not to continue to pursue the piecemeal, case-by-case approach that is sanctioned in the rule draft it approved at its May 2010 meeting. In this respect, the Commission agrees fully with the comment submitted by the State Bar's Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct ("COPRAC") during the second public comment period:

"COPRAC believes that implementation of screening through a piecemeal, case-by-case approach works to the detriment of the profession. Rather than having the screening doctrine worked out over a period of years through a series of cases, which leaves lawyers uncertain of the application of precedent to their particular situations, better guidance to the profession would be available through an explicit rule, which could be referenced easily, and uniformly applied. We strongly believe that this would provide superior guidance and clarity to the professional seeking to comply with their ethical duties." See June 14, 2010 Letter from COPRAC to Harry B. Sondheim, Commission Chair (in complete public comment, provided with this submission).

Alternatively, the Commission requests that the Board of Governors forward to the Supreme Court the attached ALT2 version of the Rule that the Commission has approved, in addition to the version of the Rule that the Board approved at its May 2010 meeting ("ALT1"). The Commission believes the Supreme Court should have the benefit of having an alternative in making its decision to approve a Rule counterpart to Model Rule 1.18 that permits screening.

Description of Proposed Rule 1.18, Version ALT2. Proposed Rule 1.18, version ALT2, is based on Model Rule 1.18 and clarifies the duties a lawyer owes to prospective clients who consult with the lawyer to seek legal services or advice. Model Rule 1.18 is a new Rule that the ABA approved in 2002 to address the "concern that important events occur in the period during which a lawyer and prospective client are considering whether to form a client-lawyer relationship. For the most part, the current Model Rules do not address that pre-retention period." See Model Rule 1.18, Reporter's Explanation of Changes, ¶. 1, available at <http://www.abanet.org/cpr/e2k/e2k-rule118rem.html> (last visited 11/18/09).¹ Adopting Rule 1.18 will put the important duties that might arise during the pre-retention period front and center for the profession.

There is no California Rule counterpart, but the duty to protect confidential information of a prospective client, even if no attorney-client relationship results, is found in Cal. Evid. Code § 951, which does not require the formation of a lawyer-client relationship but instead defines "client" as a person who "consults" with a lawyer in the lawyer's capacity as a lawyer "for the purpose of securing legal service or advice." Section 951 is discussed at length in Cal. State Bar Formal Opn. 2003-161, available at http://www.calbar.ca.gov/calbar/pdfs/ethics/OPN_2003_161.pdf [last visited 11/18/09].

¹ The Reporter's Explanation of Changes for each of the Model Rules, as recommended by the Ethics 2000 Commission, is available at http://www.abanet.org/cpr/e2k/e2k-report_home.html [last visited 11/18/09].

The proposed Rule closely tracks Model Rule 1.18, with a number of changes that are intended to: (i) conform the Rule to the language of the Evidence Code [see Explanation of Changes to paragraph (a)]; (ii) limit the scope of a prospective client's protected information by requiring it that be "confidential," while at the same time broadening the scope to include confidential information learned not only "in" the initial consultation but also learned "as a result of" that consultation [see Explanation of Changes to paragraph (b)]; (iii) substituting the well-settled "material to the matter" standard developed over many years in California case law for the ambiguous "significantly harmful to that in the matter" standard that is used in Model Rule 1.18 [see Explanation of Changes for paragraph (c)]; (iv) adding clarifying language and requiring a more rigorous ethical screen than is required by the Model Rule to protect the prospective client's confidential information [see Explanation of Changes for paragraph (d)].

The Comment to proposed Rule 1.18 largely tracks the comment to Model Rule 1.18. The changes made are intended primarily to conform the comment to the revisions to the black letter of the Rule.

Disagreement Over the inclusion of a provision permitting unconsented screening of the consulted lawyer when confidential information is learned during the pre-retention period. The Commission voted 5-5 to strike from proposed Rule 1.18 the concept of unconsented screening and so the concept, which is part of Model Rule 1.18, remains in the rule as paragraph (d)(2).

Those who favor a unconsented screening provision note that it is available to a law firm only in limited situations – where the consulted lawyer "took reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more information that prohibits representation than was reasonably necessary to determine whether to represent the prospective client." Proponents of this view take the position that the proposed Rule appropriately balances the interests of the prospective client and the interests of the firm's affected client in retaining the lawyer of its choice. The lawyer who might have acquired the prospective client's information despite the lawyer's "reasonable measures" is screened to protect the information.

Those who oppose the inclusion of unconsented screening in this Rule take the position that "[t]his unilateral power would enable lawyers to receive material confidential information from a prospective client, without any notice to the potential client of the consequences, and then to appear against that person in the very matter in which representation was sought." A detailed statement of this position, with citation to authority, is provided in these materials after the Rule & Comment Comparison Chart, below. See Statement Opposing Unconsented Screening.

Minority. A minority of the Commission maintains that there is no reason for the Board to reconsider its decision. The Board repeatedly has decided on multiple occasions that screening is a matter with sufficient uncertainty that it should be left to the courts to resolve. Kirk v. First American Title Ins. Co. (2010) 183 Cal.App.4th 776, 108 Cal.Rptr.3d 620, does not change that conclusion.

Kirk created a highly circumstantial standard that will require further applications in the courts before any general conclusions regarding the scope of the standard can be drawn. Kirk endorsed the Board's decision not to provide for screening in Rule 1.10, stating, "We agree with the Board of Governors that the issue of whether attorney screening can overcome vicarious disqualification in the context of an attorney moving between private law firms is not clearly settled in California." (183 Cal.App.4th at 805) The highly circumstantial test which Kirk announced leaves the law unsettled and should be left to evolve in the courts. The Supreme Court's decision to not decertify the opinion and to decline review of the Court of Appeal decision does not mean the Court endorsed the decision. (See e.g. Cal Rule of Ct, Rule 8.1125(d).) Nor does it make the law any more settled in light of Kirk's highly circumstantial test.

The screening rule the majority asks the Board to reconsider has nothing to do with the test in Kirk. The proposed screening rule would allow for screening without any of the balancing of interests the Kirk standard requires. Limiting screening to situations where a lawyer has taken reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more confidential information than was necessary to determine whether the represent the prospective client, offers minimal client protection. Once past the conflicts check stage, a lawyer's determination whether to represent a prospective client frequently involves a discussion in which prospective clients reveal confidential information. The California Supreme Court has recognized that "Even the briefest conversation between a lawyer and a client can result in the disclosure of confidences." (People ex rel. Dept. of Corporations v. Speedee Oil Change Systems, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 1135, 1148.)

Furthermore, the proposed screening rule still suffers from the fundamental problem that a client has no means to assure that information in the possession of a firm representing the client's adversary will not be shared and used or disclosed against the client's interests. The proposed screening rule cannot overcome the fact that the affected client is prevented by law firm's duties of confidentiality and the lawyer-client privilege from knowing whether there is actual compliance. The legal profession cannot engender client trust by imposing screens on a wary public. The comments the Commission received do not address that screening comes at the expense of client trust and client protection, which are more important values than finding a way to impose a screen without client consent more predictably.

Variations in Other Jurisdictions. Every jurisdiction that has completed its Ethics 2000 review of its Rules of Professional Conduct has adopted some version of Model Rule 1.18. One of those jurisdictions (D.C.) does not permit unconsented screening. Several jurisdictions do not require that the consulted lawyer take "reasonable measures" to avoid exposure to information not necessary to decide whether to accept the representation. (E.g., North Carolina, Oregon). Nevada moves into the black letter of the Rule Comments [2] and [5] of the Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client	[ALT1 – NO SCREEN] – Board’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) A person who discusses with a lawyer the possibility of forming a client-lawyer relationship with respect to a matter is a prospective client.	(a) A person who ~~discusses with~~, directly or through an authorized representative, consults a lawyer for the possibility~~purpose~~ of ~~forming a client-retaining the lawyer relationship with respect to a matter~~or securing legal service or advice from the lawyer in the lawyer’s professional capacity, is a prospective client.	Paragraph (a) is based on Model Rule 1.18(a) but has been revised to track the language from the California Evidence Code concerning the lawyer-client privilege. The concept of “authorized representative” through whom a client may act is derived from Evid. Code §§ 951 (“Client”) and 954 (“Holder of the Privilege”). The clause, “securing legal service or advice from the lawyer in the lawyer’s professional capacity” is also taken from section 951. Utilizing the Evidence Code language conforms the Rule to the statutory language for the privilege, which applies even if the lawyer is not retained as counsel. See Evid. Code § 951 (“‘client’ means a person who ... consults a lawyer ...”). See also Cal. State Bar Formal Opn. 2003-161.
(b) Even when no client-lawyer relationship ensues, a lawyer who has had discussions with a prospective client shall not use or reveal information learned in the consultation, except as Rule 1.9 would permit with respect to information of a former client.	(b) Even when no ~~client-lawyer-client~~ relationship ensues, a lawyer who has ~~had discussions~~communicated with a prospective client shall not use or reveal confidential information learned ~~in~~as a result of the consultation, except as Rule 1.9 would permit with respect to information of a former client.	Paragraph (b) largely tracks Model Rule 1.18(b). The term “lawyer-client” has been substituted for the Model Rule’s “client-lawyer” to conform to the style of California rules and statutes. The phrase “has communicated with” has been substituted for “has had discussions with” because “discuss” is a subset of “communicate,” and the Commission determined that given the wide range of communication modes available to prospective clients, the broader term is more inclusive, and so more protective, of the prospective client’s communication. The phrase “as a result of” has been substituted for “in” because a lawyer often will have to investigate further to determine whether

* Proposed Rule 1.18, ALT1 [NO SCREEN], Draft 3 (6/17/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client	[ALT1 – NO SCREEN] – Board’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		the lawyer is willing or able to accept the representation. That information should also be protected. See Comment [3]. However, the word “confidential” has been added to narrow the scope of protection afforded a prospective client. Although a current or former client should be entitled to protection by the lawyer of all information the lawyer learned as a result of a representation, only information which is learned “as a result” of the consultation and which is confidential should be protected in the prospective client situation.
(c) A lawyer subject to paragraph (b) shall not represent a client with interests materially adverse to those of a prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter if the lawyer received information from the prospective client that could be significantly harmful to that person in the matter, except as provided in paragraph (d). If a lawyer is disqualified from representation under this paragraph, no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter, except as provided in paragraph (d).	(c) A lawyer subject to paragraph (b) shall not represent a client with interests materially adverse to those of a prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter if the lawyer received confidential information from the prospective client that ~~could be significantly harmful~~ is material to ~~that person in~~ the matter, except as provided in paragraph (d). If a lawyer is ~~disqualified~~ prohibited from representation under this paragraph, no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter, except as provided in paragraph (d).	Paragraph (c) is based on Model Rule 1.18(c). with several changes. As to the addition of “confidential” to modify “information,” see Explanation of Changes for paragraph (b). The phrase “is material to the matter” has been substituted for “could be significantly harmful to that person in the matter” to track California case law on successive representation conflicts of interest, which focuses on the materiality of the information learned in the prior representation or consultation. See, e.g., Jessen v. Hartford General Casualty Co., 111 Cal.App.4th 698, 3 Cal.Rptr.3d 877, 884-885 (2003). See also Knight v. Ferguson, 149 Cal.App.4th 1207, 57 Cal.Rptr.3d 823 (2007); Ochoa v. Fordel, 146 Cal.App.4th 898, 53 Cal.Rptr.3d 277 (2007); Faughn v. Perez, 145 Cal.App.4th 592, 51 Cal.Rptr.3d 692 (2006); Farris v. Fireman’s Fund Ins. Co., 119 Cal.App.4th 671, 14 Cal.Rptr.3d 618 (2004). The word “prohibited” has been substituted for “disqualification”

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client	[ALT1 – NO SCREEN] – Board’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		because the rule is intended as a disciplinary rule, not a civil disqualification standard.
(d) When the lawyer has received disqualifying information as defined in paragraph (c), representation is permissible if:	(d) When the lawyer has received ~~disqualifying~~ information that prohibits representation as defined in paragraph (c), representation of the affected client is permissible if: both the affected client and the prospective client have given informed written consent.	The introductory clause to paragraph (d) is based on the corresponding clause in Model Rule 1.18(d), with several changes. The phrase, “that prohibits representation” is substituted for “disqualified” because the rule is intended as a disciplinary rule, not a civil disqualification standard. The phrase “of the affected client” has been added to clarify that the issue is whether the lawyer or the lawyer’s firm can represent a current client who might be affected by the consultation with the prospective client because the current client might be prohibited from retaining his or her preferred lawyer. Because the Commission recommends the deletion of subparagraph (d)(2), see Introduction and Explanation for subparagraph (d)(2), the language of Model Rule 1.18(d)(1), which permits representation provided client consent is obtained, has been moved into the introductory paragraph. The language is identical to that of Model Rule 1.18(d)(1), except that California’s heightened “informed written consent” standard has been substituted for the Model Rule’s “consent, confirmed in writing” standard.
(1) both the affected client and the prospective client have given informed consent, confirmed in writing, or:	~~(1) both the affected client and the prospective client have given informed consent, confirmed in writing, or:~~	As noted above, the language in Model Rule 1.18(d)(1) has been moved into paragraph (d).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client	[ALT1 – NO SCREEN] – Board’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(2) the lawyer who received the information took reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more disqualifying information than was reasonably necessary to determine whether to represent the prospective client; and	~~(2) the lawyer who received the information took reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more disqualifying information than was reasonably necessary to determine whether to represent the prospective client; and~~	See Introduction. The Commission recommends that Rule 1.18 be adopted without the provisions in Model Rule 1.18(d)(2) that permit a law firm that has received a prospective client’s confidential information to implement an ethical screen unilaterally and without the prospective client’s consent. In part, the Commission believes that allowing screening without a prospective client’s consent undermines the extremely important role of confidentiality and trust in a prospective lawyer-client relationship.
(i) the disqualified lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and	~~(i) the disqualified lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and~~	See Explanation of Changes for subparagraph (d)(2).
(ii) written notice is promptly given to the prospective client.	~~(ii) written notice is promptly given to the prospective client.~~	See Explanation of Changes for subparagraph (d)(2).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	[ALT1 – NO SCREEN] – Board’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] Prospective clients, like clients, may disclose information to a lawyer, place documents or other property in the lawyer's custody, or rely on the lawyer's advice. A lawyer's discussions with a prospective client usually are limited in time and depth and leave both the prospective client and the lawyer free (and sometimes required) to proceed no further. Hence, prospective clients should receive some but not all of the protection afforded clients.	[1] Prospective clients, like clients, may disclose information to a lawyer, place documents or other property in the lawyer's custody, or rely on the lawyer's advice. A lawyer's discussions with a prospective client usually are limited in time and depth and leave both the prospective client and the lawyer free ~~to~~ and sometimes required to proceed no further. Hence, although the range of a prospective client's information that is protected is the same as that of a client, a law firm is permitted, in the limited circumstances provided under paragraph (d), to accept or continue representation of a client with interests adverse to the prospective client in the subject matter of the protection afforded clientsconsultation. See Comments [3] and [4]. As used in this Rule, prospective client includes an authorized representative of the client.	Comment [1] is based on Model Rule 1.18, cmt. [1]. The Model Rule language, in the third sentence, stating that “prospective clients should receive some but not all of the protection afforded clients” has been replaced with: a statement that a prospective client’s information is protected “to the same extent as that of a client;” and a reference to the provision in paragraph (d) for seeking client consent to accept or continue a representation of a client who is adverse to a prospective client. This deviation from the Model Rule language, in part, reflects the Commission’s view that a lawyer’s duties to a prospective client should encourage trust and confidence in the context of a consultation. In addition, new language has been included that provides cross to Comments [3] and [4] for guidance and a new last sentence has been added to clarify that whether a prospective client consults directly with the lawyer or through an authorized representative, the effect is the same. See also Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a).
[2] Not all persons who communicate information to a lawyer are entitled to protection under this Rule. A person who communicates information unilaterally to a lawyer, without any reasonable expectation that the lawyer is willing to discuss the possibility of forming a client-lawyer relationship, is not a “prospective client” within the meaning of paragraph (a).	[2] Not all persons who communicate information to a lawyer are entitled to protection under this Rule. A person who by any means communicates information unilaterally to a lawyer, without any reasonable expectation that the lawyer is willing to discuss the possibility of forming a client-lawyer relationship or to discuss the prospective client's matter in the lawyer's professional capacity, is not a “prospective client” within the meaning of paragraph (a). Similarly, a person who discloses information to	Comment [2] is based on Model Rule 1.18, cmt. [2]. The phrase “by any means” has been added to emphasize that there are a plethora of modes by which prospective clients can communicate their interest in retaining a lawyer. See also Explanation of Changes to paragraph (b) (substitution of “communicate” for “discussion”). The addition of the clause, “or to discuss the prospective client’s matter in the lawyer’s professional capacity,” has been added to track the language in paragraph (a), which in turn is derived from

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	[ALT1 – NO SCREEN] – Board’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	a lawyer after the lawyer has stated his or her unwillingness or inability to consult with the person in the lawyer’s professional capacity would not have such a reasonable expectation. See People v. Gionis (1995) 9 Cal.4th 1196 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 456]. In addition, a person who communicates information to a lawyer for purposes that do not include a good faith intention to retain the lawyer in the subject matter of the communication is not a prospective client within the meaning of this Rule.	Evid. Code § 951. The third sentence provides a citation to and brief summary of a seminal California Supreme Court case, Gionis, which provides important guidance to clients and lawyers alike that a lawyer can expressly disclaim that a lawyer-client communication will take place. The fourth sentence, which is taken nearly verbatim from a corresponding comment to Nevada Rule 1.18, was added pursuant to the recommendation in a public comment and clarifies that a person who communicates with a lawyer without intending to retain the lawyer but for some other reason, e.g., to cause the lawyer’s disqualification from representing the person’s opponent in the matter, is not a prospective client and therefore is not afforded the protections of the Rule.
	[2A]Whether a lawyer’s representations or conduct evidence a willingness to participate in a consultation is examined from the viewpoint of the reasonable expectations of the prospective client. The factual circumstances relevant to the existence of a consultation include, for example: whether the parties meet by pre-arrangement or by chance; the prior relationship, if any, of the parties; whether the communications between the parties took place in a public or private place; the presence or absence of third parties; the duration of the communication; and, most important, the demeanor of the parties, particularly any conduct of the attorney encouraging or discouraging the communication and conduct of either party suggesting an understanding that the communication is or is not confidential.	Comment [2A] has no counterpart in Model Rule 1.18. It has been added to provide helpful guidance to lawyers concerning the relevant factors to analyze to determine whether a lawyer has indicated by words or conduct an interest in consulting with a prospective client in the lawyer’s professional capacity. See Cal. State Bar Ethics Opn. 2003-161.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	[ALT1 – NO SCREEN] – Board’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[3] It is often necessary for a prospective client to reveal information to the lawyer during an initial consultation prior to the decision about formation of a client-lawyer relationship. The lawyer often must learn such information to determine whether there is a conflict of interest with an existing client and whether the matter is one that the lawyer is willing to undertake. Paragraph (b) prohibits the lawyer from using or revealing that information, except as permitted by Rule 1.9, even if the client or lawyer decides not to proceed with the representation. The duty exists regardless of how brief the initial conference may be.	[3] It is often necessary for a prospective client to reveal information to the lawyer during an initial consultation prior to the decision about formation of a client-lawyer relationship. The lawyer often must learn such information to determine whether there is a conflict of interest with an existing client and whether the matter is one that the lawyer is willing to undertake. ~~Paragraph~~ Sometimes the lawyer must investigate further after the initial consultation with the prospective client to determine whether the matter is one the lawyer is willing or able to undertake. Regardless of whether the lawyer has learned such information during the initial consultation or during the subsequent investigation, paragraph (b) prohibits the lawyer from using or revealing that information, except as permitted by Rule 1.9, even if the client or lawyer decides not to proceed with the representation. The duty exists regardless of how brief the initial conference may be.	Comment [3] is based on Model Rule 1.18, cmt. [3]. The new third sentence (“Sometimes the ...”) and the language added to the third Model Rule sentence “Regardless of ...”) have been added in recognition that information needed to determine whether a lawyer is willing or able to accept a representation might occur outside the initial client consultation, but nevertheless will be protected. See also Explanation of Changes for paragraph (b).
[4] In order to avoid acquiring disqualifying information from a prospective client, a lawyer considering whether or not to undertake a new matter should limit the initial interview to only such information as reasonably appears necessary for that purpose. Where the information indicates that a conflict of interest or other reason for non-representation exists, the lawyer should so inform the prospective client or decline the representation. If the prospective client wishes to retain the lawyer,	[4] In order to avoid acquiring ~~disqualifying~~ information from a prospective client that would prohibit representation as provided in paragraph (c), a lawyer considering whether or not to undertake a new matter ~~should~~must limit the initial interview to only such information as reasonably appears necessary for that purpose. Where the information indicates that a conflict of interest or other reason for non-representation exists, the lawyer should so inform the prospective client or decline the	Comment [4] is similar to Model Rule 1.18, cmt. [4]. The first sentence has been modified to substitute language describing a prohibited representation for the Model Rule term “disqualifying” to reflect that this Rule is primarily intended as a rule of discipline. A reference to Rule 1.9 (“Duties to Former Clients”) has been added to conform to the Model Rule comment’s reference to “former clients”.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	[ALT1 – NO SCREEN] – Board’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
and if consent is possible under Rule 1.7, then consent from all affected present or former clients must be obtained before accepting the representation.	representation. If the prospective client wishes to retain the lawyer, and if consent is possible under ~~Rule~~Rules 1.7 and 1.9, then consent from all affected present or former clients must be obtained before accepting the representation.
[5] A lawyer may condition conversations with a prospective client on the person’s informed consent that no information disclosed during the consultation will prohibit the lawyer from representing a different client in the matter. See Rule 1.0(e) for the definition of informed consent. If the agreement expressly so provides, the prospective client may also consent to the lawyer’s subsequent use of information received from the prospective client.	[5] A lawyer may condition conversations with a prospective client on the person’s informed consent that ~~no~~ information disclosed during the consultation will not prohibit the lawyer from representing a different client in the matter. See Rule ~~1.01.0.1~~1.01.0.1(e) for the definition of informed consent. ~~If However, the agreement expressly so provides, lawyer must take~~ reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more information that prohibits representation than is reasonably necessary to determine whether to represent the prospective client ~~may also consent to the lawyer’s subsequent use of information received from the prospective client.~~	Comment [5] is based on Model Rule 1.18, cmt. [5]. The change to the first sentence is for clarity. No change in meaning is intended. The last sentence has been extensively modified to change the Model Rule’s emphasis from a lawyer’s ability to obtain a prospective client’s consent to use of the information to the lawyer’s obligation to limit his or her exposure to information that would serve to prohibit the lawyer’s representation of a current client. The latter approach is more in keeping with California’s strong policy obligating lawyers to protect confidential information.
[6] Even in the absence of an agreement, under paragraph (c), the lawyer is not prohibited from representing a client with interests adverse to those of the prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter unless the lawyer has received from the prospective client information that could be significantly harmful if used in the matter.	[6] Even in the absence of an agreement with the prospective client, under paragraph (c), the lawyer is not prohibited from ~~representing~~either accepting or continuing the representation of a client with interests materially adverse to those of the prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter unless the lawyer has received from the prospective client information that ~~could be significantly harmful if used in~~ is material to the matter. For a discussion of the meaning of	Comment [6] is based on Model Rule 1.18, cmt. [6], with some revisions to clarify the intent of the Rule or to conform the Comment to revisions made to paragraph (c). First, the phrase “with the prospective client” has been added as a transition from the previous Comment. Second, the clause, “either continuing or accepting the representation” has been added to clarify that the concept of “representing” includes both ongoing representations and new matters. Third, as in paragraph (c), the phrase “is material to” has been substituted for “could be significantly harmful if used in” for the reasons stated in the Explanation of

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	[ALT1 – NO SCREEN] – Board’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	“materially adverse” as used in paragraph (c), see Rule 1.9, Comment [7]. For a discussion of the meaning of “substantially related” as used in paragraph (c), see Rule 1.9, Comments [4] - [6].	Changes for paragraph (c). Finally, the last two sentences have been added to provide a cross-reference to several comments to Rule 1.9, which provide guidance to lawyers on the application of the “substantially related” and “material” standards in paragraph (c).
[7] Under paragraph (c), the prohibition in this Rule is imputed to other lawyers as provided in Rule 1.10, but, under paragraph (d)(1), imputation may be avoided if the lawyer obtains the informed consent, confirmed in writing, of both the prospective and affected clients. In the alternative, imputation may be avoided if the conditions of paragraph (d)(2) are met and all disqualified lawyers are timely screened and written notice is promptly given to the prospective client. See Rule 1.0(k) (requirements for screening procedures). Paragraph (d)(2)(i) does not prohibit the screened lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly related to the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.	[7] Under paragraph (c), the prohibition in this Rule is imputed to other lawyers as provided in Rule 1.10, but, under paragraph (d), the consequences of imputation may be avoided if the lawyer obtains the informed written consent, ~~confirmed in writing~~, of both the prospective and affected clients. ~~In the alternative, imputation may be avoided if the conditions of paragraph (d)(2) are met and all disqualified lawyers are timely screened and written notice is promptly given to the prospective client. See Rule 1.0(k) (requirements for screening procedures). Paragraph (d)(2)(i) does not prohibit the screened lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly related to the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.~~	Comment [7] is based on Model Rule 1.18, cmt. [7]. As the proposed rule does not provide for unconsented screening, the language related to the protocol has been deleted. See also Explanation of Changes for subparagraphs (d) and (d)(2).
[8] Notice, including a general description of the subject matter about which the lawyer was consulted, and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.	~~[8] Notice, including a general description of the subject matter about which the lawyer was consulted, and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.~~ Rule 1.18 leaves open the issue of	Comment [8] has no counterpart in the Model Rules. It has been added to effectuate the Board’s intent that the law of screening be developed through court decisions. The Comment is intended to assuage concerns that the implementation of an ethical screen would necessarily subject a lawyer or group of lawyers to discipline because this Rule does not expressly provide for

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	[ALT1 – NO SCREEN] – Board’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	whether, in a particular matter, use of a timely screen will avoid the imputation of a conflict of interest under paragraph (c). Whether timely implementation of a screen will avoid imputation of a conflict of interest in litigation, transactional, or other contexts is a matter of case law.	screening. Model Rule 1.18, cmt. [8], which concerns the required notice in the event a screen is implemented, has been deleted because the proposed Rule does not expressly provide for screening.
[9] For the duty of competence of a lawyer who gives assistance on the merits of a matter to a prospective client, see Rule 1.1. For a lawyer's duties when a prospective client entrusts valuables or papers to the lawyer's care, see Rule 1.15.	[9] For the duty of competence of a lawyer who gives assistance on the merits of a matter to a prospective client, see Rule 1.1. For a lawyer's duties when a prospective client entrusts valuables or papers to the lawyer's care, see Rule 1.15.	Comment [9] is identical to Model Rule 1.18, cmt. [9].

Rule 1.18: Duties to Prospective Client

(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule ALT1 to the Public Comment Draft)

- (a) A person who, directly or through an authorized representative, consults a lawyer for the purpose of retaining the lawyer or securing legal service or advice from the lawyer in the lawyer's professional capacity, is a prospective client.
- (b) Even when no lawyer-client relationship ensues, a lawyer who has communicated with a prospective client shall not use or reveal confidential information learned as a result of the consultation, except as Rule 1.9 would permit with respect to information of a former client.
- (c) A lawyer subject to paragraph (b) shall not represent a client with interests materially adverse to those of a prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter if the lawyer received confidential information from the prospective client that is material to the matter, except as provided in paragraph (d). If a lawyer is prohibited from representation under this paragraph, no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter, except as provided in paragraph (d).
- (d) When the lawyer has received information that prohibits representation as defined in paragraph (c), representation of the affected client is permissible if both the affected client and the prospective client have given informed written consent.

COMMENT

- [1] Prospective clients, like clients, may disclose information to a lawyer, place documents or other property in the lawyer's custody, or rely on the lawyer's advice. A lawyer's discussions with a prospective client usually are limited in time and depth and leave both the prospective client and the lawyer free, and sometimes required, to proceed no further. Hence, although the range of a prospective client's information that is protected is the same as that of a client, a law firm is permitted, in the limited circumstances provided under paragraph (d), to accept or continue representation of a client with interests adverse to the prospective client in the subject matter of the consultation. See Comments [3] and [4]. As used in this Rule, prospective client includes an authorized representative of the client.

- [2] Not all persons who communicate information to a lawyer are entitled to protection under this Rule. A person who by any means communicates information unilaterally to a lawyer, without any reasonable expectation that the lawyer is willing to discuss the possibility of forming a client-lawyer relationship or to discuss the prospective client's matter in the lawyer's professional capacity, is not a "prospective client" within the meaning of paragraph (a). Similarly, a person who discloses information to a lawyer after the lawyer has stated his or her unwillingness or inability to consult with the person in the lawyer's professional capacity would not have such a reasonable expectation. See People v. Gionis (1995) 9 Cal.4th 1196 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 456]. In addition, a person who communicates information to a lawyer for purposes that do not include a good faith intention to retain the lawyer in the subject matter of the communication is not a prospective client within the meaning of this Rule.

- [2A] Whether a lawyer's representations or conduct evidence a willingness to participate in a consultation is examined from the viewpoint of the reasonable expectations of the prospective client. The factual circumstances relevant to the existence of a consultation include, for example: whether the parties meet by pre-arrangement or by chance; the prior relationship, if any, of the parties; whether the communications between the parties took place in a public or private place; the presence or absence of third parties; the duration of the communication; and, most important, the demeanor of the parties, particularly any conduct of the attorney encouraging or discouraging the communication and conduct of either party suggesting an understanding that the communication is or is not confidential.

- [3] It is often necessary for a prospective client to reveal information to the lawyer during an initial consultation prior to the decision about formation of a client-lawyer relationship. The lawyer often must learn such information to determine whether there is a conflict of interest with an existing client and whether the matter is one that the lawyer is willing to undertake. Sometimes the lawyer must investigate further after the initial consultation with the prospective client to determine whether the matter is one the lawyer is willing or able to undertake. Regardless of whether the lawyer has learned such information during the initial consultation or during the subsequent investigation, paragraph (b) prohibits the lawyer from using or revealing that information, except as permitted by Rule 1.9, even if the client or lawyer decides not to proceed with the representation. The duty exists regardless of how brief the initial conference may be.
- [4] In order to avoid acquiring information from a prospective client that would prohibit representation as provided in paragraph (c), a lawyer considering whether or not to undertake a new matter must limit the initial interview to only such information as reasonably appears necessary for that purpose. Where the information indicates that a conflict of interest or other reason for non-representation exists, the lawyer should so inform the prospective client or decline the representation. If the prospective client wishes to retain the lawyer, and if consent is possible under Rules 1.7 and 1.9, then consent from all affected present or former clients must be obtained before accepting the representation.

- [5] A lawyer may condition conversations with a prospective client on the person's informed consent that information disclosed during the consultation will not prohibit the lawyer from representing a different client in the matter. See Rule 1.0.1(e) for the definition of informed consent. However, the lawyer must take reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more information that prohibits representation than is reasonably necessary to determine whether to represent the prospective client.
- [6] Even in the absence of an agreement with the prospective client, under paragraph (c), the lawyer is not prohibited from either accepting or continuing the representation of a client with interests materially adverse to those of the prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter unless the lawyer has received from the prospective client information that is material to the matter. For a discussion of the meaning of "materially adverse" as used in paragraph (c), see Rule 1.9, ~~comment~~Comment [7]. For a discussion of the meaning of "substantially related" as used in paragraph (c), see Rule 1.9, ~~comments~~Comments [4] – [6].
- [7] Under paragraph (c), the prohibition in this Rule is imputed to other lawyers as provided in Rule 1.10, but, under paragraph (d)(4), the consequences of imputation may be avoided if the lawyer obtains the informed written consent of both the prospective and affected clients.

- [8] Rule 1.18 leaves open the issue of whether, in a particular matter, use of a timely screen will avoid the imputation of a conflict of interest under paragraph (c). Whether timely implementation of a screen will avoid imputation of a conflict of interest in litigation, transactional, or other contexts is a matter of case law.
- [9] For the duty of competence of a lawyer who gives assistance on the merits of a matter to a prospective client, see Rule 1.1. For a lawyer's duties when a prospective client entrusts valuables or papers to the lawyer's care, see Rule 1.15.

Rule 1.18: Duties to Prospective Client
(Commission's Proposed Rule ALT1 – Clean Version)

- (a) A person who, directly or through an authorized representative, consults a lawyer for the purpose of retaining the lawyer or securing legal service or advice from the lawyer in the lawyer's professional capacity, is a prospective client.
- (b) Even when no lawyer-client relationship ensues, a lawyer who has communicated with a prospective client shall not use or reveal confidential information learned as a result of the consultation, except as Rule 1.9 would permit with respect to information of a former client.
- (c) A lawyer subject to paragraph (b) shall not represent a client with interests materially adverse to those of a prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter if the lawyer received confidential information from the prospective client that is material to the matter, except as provided in paragraph (d). If a lawyer is prohibited from representation under this paragraph, no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter, except as provided in paragraph (d).
- (d) When the lawyer has received information that prohibits representation as defined in paragraph (c), representation of the affected client is permissible if both the affected client and the prospective client have given informed written consent.

COMMENT

- [1] Prospective clients, like clients, may disclose information to a lawyer, place documents or other property in the lawyer's custody, or rely on the lawyer's advice. A lawyer's discussions with a prospective client usually are limited in time and depth and leave both the prospective client and the lawyer free, and sometimes required, to proceed no further. Hence, although the range of a prospective client's information that is protected is the same as that of a client, a law firm is permitted, in the limited circumstances provided under paragraph (d), to accept or continue representation of a client with interests adverse to the prospective client in the subject matter of the consultation. See Comments [3] and [4]. As used in this Rule, prospective client includes an authorized representative of the client.

- [2] Not all persons who communicate information to a lawyer are entitled to protection under this Rule. A person who by any means communicates information unilaterally to a lawyer, without any reasonable expectation that the lawyer is willing to discuss the possibility of forming a client-lawyer relationship or to discuss the prospective client's matter in the lawyer's professional capacity, is not a "prospective client" within the meaning of paragraph (a). Similarly, a person who discloses information to a lawyer after the lawyer has stated his or her unwillingness or inability to consult with the person in the lawyer's professional capacity would not have such a reasonable expectation. See People v. Gionis (1995) 9 Cal.4th 1196 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 456]. In addition, a person who communicates information to a lawyer for purposes that do not include a good faith intention to retain the lawyer in the subject matter of the communication is not a prospective client within the meaning of this Rule.

- [2A] Whether a lawyer's representations or conduct evidence a willingness to participate in a consultation is examined from the viewpoint of the reasonable expectations of the prospective client. The factual circumstances relevant to the existence of a consultation include, for example: whether the parties meet by pre-arrangement or by chance; the prior relationship, if any, of the parties; whether the communications between the parties took place in a public or private place; the presence or absence of third parties; the duration of the communication; and, most important, the demeanor of the parties, particularly any conduct of the attorney encouraging or discouraging the communication and conduct of either party suggesting an understanding that the communication is or is not confidential.

- [3] It is often necessary for a prospective client to reveal information to the lawyer during an initial consultation prior to the decision about formation of a client-lawyer relationship. The lawyer often must learn such information to determine whether there is a conflict of interest with an existing client and whether the matter is one that the lawyer is willing to undertake. Sometimes the lawyer must investigate further after the initial consultation with the prospective client to determine whether the matter is one the lawyer is willing or able to undertake. Regardless of whether the lawyer has learned such information during the initial consultation or during the subsequent investigation, paragraph (b) prohibits the lawyer from using or revealing that information, except as permitted by Rule 1.9, even if the client or lawyer decides not to proceed with the representation. The duty exists regardless of how brief the initial conference may be.
- [4] In order to avoid acquiring information from a prospective client that would prohibit representation as provided in paragraph (c), a lawyer considering whether or not to undertake a new matter must limit the initial interview to only such information as reasonably appears necessary for that purpose. Where the information indicates that a conflict of interest or other reason for non-representation exists, the lawyer should so inform the prospective client or decline the representation. If the prospective client wishes to retain the lawyer, and if consent is possible under Rules 1.7 and 1.9, then consent from all affected present or former clients must be obtained before accepting the representation.

- [5] A lawyer may condition conversations with a prospective client on the person's informed consent that information disclosed during the consultation will not prohibit the lawyer from representing a different client in the matter. See Rule 1.0.1(e) for the definition of informed consent. However, the lawyer must take reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more information that prohibits representation than is reasonably necessary to determine whether to represent the prospective client.
- [6] Even in the absence of an agreement with the prospective client, under paragraph (c), the lawyer is not prohibited from either accepting or continuing the representation of a client with interests materially adverse to those of the prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter unless the lawyer has received from the prospective client information that is material to the matter. For a discussion of the meaning of "materially adverse" as used in paragraph (c), see Rule 1.9, Comment [7]. For a discussion of the meaning of "substantially related" as used in paragraph (c), see Rule 1.9, Comments [4] – [6].
- [7] Under paragraph (c), the prohibition in this Rule is imputed to other lawyers as provided in Rule 1.10, but, under paragraph (d), the consequences of imputation may be avoided if the lawyer obtains the informed written consent of both the prospective and affected clients.

- [8] Rule 1.18 leaves open the issue of whether, in a particular matter, use of a timely screen will avoid the imputation of a conflict of interest under paragraph (c). Whether timely implementation of a screen will avoid imputation of a conflict of interest in litigation, transactional, or other contexts is a matter of case law.
- [9] For the duty of competence of a lawyer who gives assistance on the merits of a matter to a prospective client, see Rule 1.1. For a lawyer's duties when a prospective client entrusts valuables or papers to the lawyer's care, see Rule 1.15.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) A person who discusses with a lawyer the possibility of forming a client-lawyer relationship with respect to a matter is a prospective client.	(a) A person who ~~discusses with~~, directly or through an authorized representative, consults a lawyer ~~for the possibility~~purpose of ~~forming a client-retaining the lawyer relationship with respect to a matter~~or securing legal service or advice from the lawyer in the lawyer’s professional capacity, is a prospective client.	Paragraph (a) is based on Model Rule 1.18(a) but has been revised to track the language from the California Evidence Code concerning the lawyer-client privilege. The concept of “authorized representative” through whom a client may act is derived from Evid. Code §§ 951 (“Client”) and 954 (“Holder of the Privilege”). The clause, “securing legal service or advice from the lawyer in the lawyer’s professional capacity” is also taken from section 951. Utilizing the Evidence Code language conforms the Rule to the statutory language for the privilege, which applies even if the lawyer is not retained as counsel. See Evid. Code § 951 (“‘client’ means a person who ... consults a lawyer ...”). See also Cal. State Bar Formal Opn. 2003-161.
(b) Even when no client-lawyer relationship ensues, a lawyer who has had discussions with a prospective client shall not use or reveal information learned in the consultation, except as Rule 1.9 would permit with respect to information of a former client.	(b) Even when no ~~client-lawyer-client~~ relationship ensues, a lawyer who has ~~had discussions~~communicated with a prospective client shall not use or reveal confidential information learned ~~in~~as a result of the consultation, except as Rule 1.9 would permit with respect to information of a former client.	Paragraph (b) largely tracks Model Rule 1.18(b). The term “lawyer-client” has been substituted for the Model Rule’s “client-lawyer” to conform to the style of California rules and statutes. The phrase “has communicated with” has been substituted for “has had discussions with” because “discuss” is a subset of “communicate,” and the Commission determined that given the wide range of communication modes available to prospective clients, the broader term is more inclusive, and so more protective, of the prospective client’s communication. The phrase “as a result of” has been substituted for “in” because a lawyer often will have to investigate further to determine whether

* Proposed Rule 1.18, XDraft 7 (6/29/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		the lawyer is willing or able to accept the representation. That information should also be protected. See Comment [3]. However, the word “confidential” has been added to narrow the scope of protection afforded a prospective client. Although a current or former client should be entitled to protection by the lawyer of all information the lawyer learned as a result of a representation, only information which is learned “as a result” of the consultation and which is confidential should be protected in the prospective client situation.
(c) A lawyer subject to paragraph (b) shall not represent a client with interests materially adverse to those of a prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter if the lawyer received information from the prospective client that could be significantly harmful to that person in the matter, except as provided in paragraph (d). If a lawyer is disqualified from representation under this paragraph, no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter, except as provided in paragraph (d).	(c) A lawyer subject to paragraph (b) shall not represent a client with interests materially adverse to those of a prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter if the lawyer received confidential information from the prospective client that ~~could be significantly harmful~~ is material to ~~that person in~~ the matter, except as provided in paragraph (d). If a lawyer is ~~disqualified~~ prohibited from representation under this paragraph, no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter, except as provided in paragraph (d).	Paragraph (c) is based on Model Rule 1.18(c). with several changes. As to the addition of “confidential” to modify “information,” see Explanation of Changes for paragraph (b). The phrase “is material to the matter” has been substituted for “could be significantly harmful to that person in the matter” to track California case law on successive representation conflicts of interest, which focuses on the materiality of the information learned in the prior representation or consultation. See, e.g., Jessen v. Hartford General Casualty Co., 111 Cal.App.4th 698, 3 Cal.Rptr.3d 877, 884-885 (2003). See also Knight v. Ferguson, 149 Cal.App.4th 1207, 57 Cal.Rptr.3d 823 (2007); Ochoa v. Fordel, 146 Cal.App.4th 898, 53 Cal.Rptr.3d 277 (2007); Faughn v. Perez, 145 Cal.App.4th 592, 51 Cal.Rptr.3d 692 (2006); Farris v. Fireman’s Fund Ins. Co., 119 Cal.App.4th 671, 14 Cal.Rptr.3d 618 (2004).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		The word “prohibited” has been substituted for “disqualification” because the rule is intended as a disciplinary rule, not a civil disqualification standard.
(d) When the lawyer has received disqualifying information as defined in paragraph (c), representation is permissible if:	(d) When the lawyer has received ~~disqualifying~~ information that prohibits representation as defined in paragraph (c), representation of the affected client is permissible if:	The introductory clause to paragraph (d) is based on the corresponding clause in Model Rule 1.18(d), with several changes. The phrase, “that prohibits representation” is substituted for “disqualified” because the rule is intended as a disciplinary rule, not a civil disqualification standard. The phrase “of the affected client” has been added to clarify that the issue is whether the lawyer or the lawyer’s firm can represent a current client who might be affected by the consultation with the prospective client because the current client might be prohibited from retaining his or her preferred lawyer.
(1) both the affected client and the prospective client have given informed consent, confirmed in writing, or:	(1) both the affected client and the prospective client have given informed written consent, ~~confirmed in writing, or:~~	Subparagraph (d)(1) is based on Model Rule 1.18(d)(1), except that California’s stricter “informed written consent” standard has been substituted for the Model Rule’s “consent, confirmed in writing” standard.
(2) the lawyer who received the information took reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more disqualifying information than was reasonably necessary to determine whether to represent the prospective client; and	(2) the lawyer who received the information took reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more ~~disqualifying~~ information that prohibits representation than was reasonably necessary to determine whether to represent the prospective client; and	Subparagraph (d)(1) is based on Model Rule 1.18(d)(2), except that the phrase, “that prohibits representation” is substituted for “disqualified” because the rule is intended as a disciplinary rule, not a civil disqualification standard.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule* Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(i) the disqualified lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and	(i) the ~~disqualified~~prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and	Subparagraph (d)(2)(i) is based on Model Rule 1.18(d)(2)(i), except that the word “prohibited” has been substituted for “disqualified” because the rule is intended as a disciplinary rule, not a civil standard. The phrase “and effectively” has been added to the paragraph to provide an added layer of protection to the client by requiring that an ethical screen not only be timely, but also effective. This language is taken from New York Rule 1.11.
(ii) written notice is promptly given to the prospective client.	(ii) written notice is promptly given to the prospective client to enable the prospective client to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this Rule.	Subparagraph (d)(2)(ii) is based on Model Rule 1.18(d)(2)(ii), except for the addition of the clause, “to enable the prospective client to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this Rule.” The addition of this clause, taken from New York Rule 1.11, apprises lawyers of what the notice is intended to accomplish.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] Prospective clients, like clients, may disclose information to a lawyer, place documents or other property in the lawyer's custody, or rely on the lawyer's advice. A lawyer's discussions with a prospective client usually are limited in time and depth and leave both the prospective client and the lawyer free (and sometimes required) to proceed no further. Hence, prospective clients should receive some but not all of the protection afforded clients.	[1] Prospective clients, like clients, may disclose information to a lawyer, place documents or other property in the lawyer's custody, or rely on the lawyer's advice. A lawyer's discussions with a prospective client usually are limited in time and depth and leave both the prospective client and the lawyer free ~~to~~ and sometimes required ~~to~~ to proceed no further. Hence, although the range of a prospective clients should receive some but not all client's information that is protected is the same as that of a client, a law firm is permitted, in the limited circumstances provided under paragraph (d), to accept or continue representation of a client with interests adverse to the prospective client in the subject matter of the protection afforded clientsconsultation. See Comments [3] and [4]. As used in this Rule, prospective client includes an authorized representative of the client.	Comment [1] is based on Model Rule 1.18, cmt. [1]. The Model Rule language, in the third sentence, stating that “prospective clients should receive some but not all of the protection afforded clients” has been replaced with: a statement that a prospective client’s information is protected “to the same extent as that of a client;” and a reference to the provision in paragraph (d) for seeking client consent to accept or continue a representation of a client who is adverse to a prospective client. This deviation from the Model Rule language, in part, reflects the Commission's view that a lawyer's duties to a prospective client should encourage trust and confidence in the context of a consultation. In addition, new language has been included that provides cross to Comments [3] and [4] for guidance and a new last sentence has been added to clarify that whether a prospective client consults directly with the lawyer or through an authorized representative, the effect is the same. See also Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a).
[2] Not all persons who communicate information to a lawyer are entitled to protection under this Rule. A person who communicates information unilaterally to a lawyer, without any reasonable expectation that the lawyer is willing to discuss the possibility of forming a client-lawyer relationship, is not a “prospective client” within the meaning of paragraph (a).	[2] Not all persons who communicate information to a lawyer are entitled to protection under this Rule. A person who by any means communicates information unilaterally to a lawyer, without any reasonable expectation that the lawyer is willing to discuss the possibility of forming a client-lawyer relationship or to discuss the prospective client's matter in the lawyer's professional capacity, is not a “prospective client” within the meaning of paragraph (a). Similarly, a person who discloses information to	Comment [2] is based on Model Rule 1.18, cmt. [2]. The phrase “by any means” has been added to emphasize that there are a plethora of modes by which prospective clients can communicate their interest in retaining a lawyer. See also Explanation of Changes to paragraph (b) (substitution of “communicate” for “discussion”). The addition of the clause, “or to discuss the prospective client's matter in the lawyer's professional capacity,” has been added to track the language in paragraph (a), which in turn is derived from

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	a lawyer after the lawyer has stated his or her unwillingness or inability to consult with the person in the lawyer's professional capacity would not have such a reasonable expectation. See People v. Gionis (1995) 9 Cal.4th 1196 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 456]. In addition, a person who communicates information to a lawyer for purposes that do not include a good faith intention to retain the lawyer in the subject matter of the communication is not a prospective client within the meaning of this Rule.	Evid. Code § 951. The third sentence provides a citation to and brief summary of a seminal California Supreme Court case, Gionis, which provides important guidance to clients and lawyers alike that a lawyer can expressly disclaim that a lawyer-client communication will take place. The fourth sentence, which is taken nearly verbatim from a corresponding comment to Nevada Rule 1.18, was added pursuant to the recommendation in a public comment and clarifies that a person who communicates with a lawyer without intending to retain the lawyer but for some other reason, e.g., to cause the lawyer's disqualification from representing the person's opponent in the matter, is not a prospective client and therefore is not afforded the protections of the Rule.
	[2A]Whether a lawyer's representations or conduct evidence a willingness to participate in a consultation is examined from the viewpoint of the reasonable expectations of the prospective client. The factual circumstances relevant to the existence of a consultation include, for example: whether the parties meet by pre-arrangement or by chance; the prior relationship, if any, of the parties; whether the communications between the parties took place in a public or private place; the presence or absence of third parties; the duration of the communication; and, most important, the demeanor of the parties, particularly any conduct of the attorney encouraging or discouraging the communication and conduct of either party suggesting an understanding that the communication is or is not confidential.	Comment [2A] has no counterpart in Model Rule 1.18. It has been added to provide helpful guidance to lawyers concerning the relevant factors to analyze to determine whether a lawyer has indicated by words or conduct an interest in consulting with a prospective client in the lawyer's professional capacity. See Cal. State Bar Ethics Opn. 2003-161.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[3] It is often necessary for a prospective client to reveal information to the lawyer during an initial consultation prior to the decision about formation of a client-lawyer relationship. The lawyer often must learn such information to determine whether there is a conflict of interest with an existing client and whether the matter is one that the lawyer is willing to undertake. Paragraph (b) prohibits the lawyer from using or revealing that information, except as permitted by Rule 1.9, even if the client or lawyer decides not to proceed with the representation. The duty exists regardless of how brief the initial conference may be.	[3] It is often necessary for a prospective client to reveal information to the lawyer during an initial consultation prior to the decision about formation of a client-lawyer relationship. The lawyer often must learn such information to determine whether there is a conflict of interest with an existing client and whether the matter is one that the lawyer is willing to undertake. ~~Paragraph~~ Sometimes the lawyer must investigate further after the initial consultation with the prospective client to determine whether the matter is one the lawyer is willing or able to undertake. Regardless of whether the lawyer has learned such information during the initial consultation or during the subsequent investigation, paragraph (b) prohibits the lawyer from using or revealing that information, except as permitted by Rule 1.9, even if the client or lawyer decides not to proceed with the representation. The duty exists regardless of how brief the initial conference may be.	Comment [3] is based on Model Rule 1.18, cmt. [3]. The new third sentence (“Sometimes the ...”) and the language added to the third Model Rule sentence “Regardless of ...”) have been added in recognition that information needed to determine whether a lawyer is willing or able to accept a representation might occur outside the initial client consultation, but nevertheless will be protected. See also Explanation of Changes for paragraph (b).
[4] In order to avoid acquiring disqualifying information from a prospective client, a lawyer considering whether or not to undertake a new matter should limit the initial interview to only such information as reasonably appears necessary for that purpose. Where the information indicates that a conflict of interest or other reason for non-representation exists, the lawyer should so inform the prospective client or decline the representation. If the prospective client wishes to retain the lawyer,	[4] In order to avoid acquiring ~~disqualifying~~ information from a prospective client that would prohibit representation as provided in paragraph (c), a lawyer considering whether or not to undertake a new matter ~~should~~must limit the initial interview to only such information as reasonably appears necessary for that purpose. Where the information indicates that a conflict of interest or other reason for non-representation exists, the lawyer should so inform the prospective client or decline the	Comment [4] is similar to Model Rule 1.18, cmt. [4]. The first sentence has been modified to substitute language describing a prohibited representation for the Model Rule term “disqualifying” to reflect that this Rule is primarily intended as a rule of discipline. A reference to Rule 1.9 (“Duties to Former Clients”) has been added to conform to the Model Rule comment’s reference to “former clients”.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
and if consent is possible under Rule 1.7, then consent from all affected present or former clients must be obtained before accepting the representation.	representation. If the prospective client wishes to retain the lawyer, and if consent is possible under ~~Rule~~Rules 1.7 and 1.9, then consent from all affected present or former clients must be obtained before accepting the representation.
[5] A lawyer may condition conversations with a prospective client on the person’s informed consent that no information disclosed during the consultation will prohibit the lawyer from representing a different client in the matter. See Rule 1.0(e) for the definition of informed consent. If the agreement expressly so provides, the prospective client may also consent to the lawyer’s subsequent use of information received from the prospective client.	[5] A lawyer may condition conversations with a prospective client on the person’s informed consent that ~~no~~ information disclosed during the consultation will not prohibit the lawyer from representing a different client in the matter. See Rule ~~1.0~~1.0.1(e) for the definition of informed consent. ~~If However, the agreement expressly so provides,~~lawyer must take reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more information that prohibits representation than is reasonably necessary to determine whether to represent the prospective client~~may. See also consent to the lawyer’s subsequent use of information received from the prospective client~~Comment [7].	Comment [5] is based on Model Rule 1.18, cmt. [5]. The change to the first sentence is for clarity. No change in meaning is intended. The last sentence has been extensively modified to change the Model Rule’s emphasis from a lawyer’s ability to obtain a prospective client’s consent to use of the information to the lawyer’s obligation to limit his or her exposure to information that would serve to prohibit the lawyer’s representation of a current client. The latter approach is more in keeping with California’s strong policy obligating lawyers to protect confidential information.
[6] Even in the absence of an agreement, under paragraph (c), the lawyer is not prohibited from representing a client with interests adverse to those of the prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter unless the lawyer has received from the prospective client information that could be significantly harmful if used in the matter.	[6] Even in the absence of an agreement with the prospective client, under paragraph (c), the lawyer is not prohibited from ~~representing~~either accepting or continuing the representation of a client with interests materially adverse to those of the prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter unless the lawyer has received from the prospective client information that ~~could be significantly harmful if used in~~is material to the	Comment [6] is based on Model Rule 1.18, cmt. [6], with some revisions to clarify the intent of the Rule or to conform the Comment to revisions made to paragraph (c). First, the phrase “with the prospective client” has been added as a transition from the previous Comment. Second, the clause, “either continuing or accepting the representation” has been added to clarify that the concept of “representing” includes both ongoing representations and new matters. Third, as in paragraph (c), the phrase “is material to” has been substituted for “could be significantly matter. For a discussion of the meaning of “materially adverse” as used in paragraph (c), see Rule 1.9, Comment [7]. For a discussion of the meaning of “substantially related” as used in paragraph (c), see Rule 1.9, Comments [4] - [6].	harmful if used in” for the reasons stated in the Explanation of Changes for paragraph (c). Finally, the last two sentences have been added to provide a cross-reference to several comments to Rule 1.9, which provide guidance to lawyers on the application of the “substantially related” and “material” standards in paragraph (c).

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[7] Under paragraph (c), the prohibition in this Rule is imputed to other lawyers as provided in Rule 1.10, but, under paragraph (d)(1), imputation may be avoided if the lawyer obtains the informed consent, confirmed in writing, of both the prospective and affected clients. In the alternative, imputation may be avoided if the conditions of paragraph (d)(2) are met and all disqualified lawyers are timely screened and written notice is promptly given to the prospective client. See Rule 1.0(k) (requirements for screening procedures). Paragraph (d)(2)(i) does not prohibit the screened lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly related to the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.	[7] Under paragraph (c), the prohibition in this Rule is imputed to other lawyers as provided in Rule 1.10, but, under paragraph (d)(1), the consequences of imputation may be avoided if the lawyer obtains the informed written consent ~~confirmed in writing~~, of both the prospective and affected clients. In the alternative, imputation may be avoided if the conditions of paragraph (d)(2) are met and all ~~disqualified~~prohibited lawyers are timely screened and written notice is promptly given to the prospective client. See Rule ~~1.0~~1.0.1(k) (requirements for screening procedures). In some instances, for example when the prospective client is a person who is not experienced in the use of legal services, it may be appropriate at the beginning of the consultation for the lawyer to explain to the prospective client that the lawyer’s firm might subsequently screen the lawyer in the event the lawyer declines the representation and the firm accepts representation of the client’s adversary. Paragraph (d)(2)(i) does not prohibit the screened lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly related to the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.	Comment [7] is based on Model Rule 1.18, cmt. [7]. California’s stricter “informed written consent” standard has been substituted for the Model Rule’s “consent, confirmed in writing” standard. The term “prohibited” has been substituted for “disqualified” to reflect that this Rule is primarily intended as a rule of discipline. In addition, new language was added at the suggestion of a public commenter to provide specific guidance to lawyers concerning additional precautions, such as specific disclosures, that might be appropriate in certain circumstances, for example, when the prospective client is a person who is not an experienced user of legal services. To foster confidence and candor in the consultation, the new language indicates that it may be appropriate in such situations for a lawyer to explain how a screen might be used in the event of subsequent conflict of interest.

ABA Model Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	ALT2 [SCREEN] – Commission’s Proposed Rule Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[8] Notice, including a general description of the subject matter about which the lawyer was consulted, and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.	[8] Notice, including a general description of the subject matter about which the lawyer was consulted, and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given to the prospective client as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.	Comment [8] is based on Model Rule 1.18, cmt. [8]. The phrase “to the prospective client” has been added to clarify that the notice must be given so that the prospective client may monitor the effectiveness of the screen.
[9] For the duty of competence of a lawyer who gives assistance on the merits of a matter to a prospective client, see Rule 1.1. For a lawyer's duties when a prospective client entrusts valuables or papers to the lawyer's care, see Rule 1.15.	[9] For the duty of competence of a lawyer who gives assistance on the merits of a matter to a prospective client, see Rule 1.1. For a lawyer's duties when a prospective client entrusts valuables or papers to the lawyer's care, see Rule 1.15.	Comment [9] is identical to Model Rule 1.9, cmt. [9].

Rule 1.18: Duties to Prospective Client
(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule ALT2 to the Public Comment Draft ALT1)

- (a) A person who, directly or through an authorized representative, consults a lawyer for the purpose of retaining the lawyer or securing legal service or advice from the lawyer in the lawyer's professional capacity, is a prospective client.
- (b) Even when no lawyer-client relationship ensues, a lawyer who has communicated with a prospective client shall not use or reveal confidential information learned as a result of the consultation, except as Rule 1.9 would permit with respect to information of a former client.
- (c) A lawyer subject to paragraph (b) shall not represent a client with interests materially adverse to those of a prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter if the lawyer received confidential information from the prospective client that is material to the matter, except as provided in paragraph (d). If a lawyer is prohibited from representation under this paragraph, no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter, except as provided in paragraph (d).
- (d) When the lawyer has received information that prohibits representation as defined in paragraph (c), representation of the affected client is permissible if ~~both the affected client and the prospective client have given informed written consent~~:

(1) both the affected client and the prospective client have given informed written consent, or

(2) the lawyer who received the information took reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more information that prohibits representation than was reasonably necessary to determine whether to represent the prospective client; and

(i) the prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and

(ii) written notice is promptly given to the prospective client to enable the prospective client to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this Rule.

Comment

[1] Prospective clients, like clients, may disclose information to a lawyer, place documents or other property in the lawyer's custody, or rely on the lawyer's advice. A lawyer's discussions with a prospective client usually are limited in time and depth and leave both the prospective client and the lawyer free, and sometimes required, to proceed no further. Hence, although the range of a prospective client's information that is protected is the same as that of a client, a law firm is permitted, in the limited circumstances provided under paragraph (d), to accept or continue representation of a client with interests adverse to the prospective client in the subject matter of the consultation. See Comments [3] and [4]. As used in this Rule, prospective client includes an authorized representative of the client.

[2] Not all persons who communicate information to a lawyer are entitled to protection under this Rule. A person who by any means communicates information unilaterally to a lawyer, without any reasonable expectation that the lawyer is willing to discuss the possibility of forming a client-lawyer relationship or to discuss the prospective client's matter in the lawyer's professional capacity, is not a "prospective client" within the meaning of paragraph (a). Similarly, a person who discloses information to a lawyer after the lawyer has stated his or her unwillingness or inability to consult with the person in the lawyer's professional capacity would not have such a reasonable expectation. See People v. Gionis (1995) 9 Cal.4th 1196 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 456]. In addition, a person who communicates information to a lawyer for purposes that do not include a good faith intention to retain the lawyer in the subject matter of the communication is not a prospective client within the meaning of this Rule.

[2A] Whether a lawyer's representations or conduct evidence a willingness to participate in a consultation is examined from the viewpoint of the reasonable expectations of the prospective client. The factual circumstances relevant to the existence of a consultation include, for example: whether the parties meet by pre-arrangement or by chance; the prior relationship, if any, of the parties; whether the communications between the parties took place in a public or private place; the presence or absence of third parties; the duration of the communication; and, most important, the demeanor of the parties, particularly any conduct of the attorney encouraging or discouraging the communication and conduct of either party suggesting an understanding that the communication is or is not confidential.

[3] It is often necessary for a prospective client to reveal information to the lawyer during an initial consultation prior to the decision about formation of a client-lawyer relationship. The lawyer often must learn such information to determine whether there is a conflict of interest with an existing client and whether the matter is one that the lawyer is willing to undertake. Sometimes the lawyer must investigate further after the initial consultation with the prospective client to determine whether the matter is one the lawyer is willing or able to undertake. Regardless of whether the lawyer has learned such information during the initial consultation or during the subsequent investigation, paragraph (b) prohibits the lawyer from using or revealing that information, except as permitted by Rule 1.9, even if the client or lawyer decides not to proceed with the representation. The duty exists regardless of how brief the initial conference may be.

[4] In order to avoid acquiring information from a prospective client that would prohibit representation as provided in paragraph (c), a lawyer considering whether or not to undertake a new matter must limit the initial interview to only such information as reasonably appears necessary for that purpose. Where the information indicates that a conflict of interest or other reason for non-representation exists, the lawyer should so inform the prospective client or decline the representation. If the prospective client wishes to retain the lawyer, and if consent is possible under Rules 1.7 and 1.9, then consent from all affected present or former clients must be obtained before accepting the representation.

[5] A lawyer may condition conversations with a prospective client on the person's informed consent that information disclosed during the consultation will not prohibit the lawyer from representing a different client in the matter. See Rule 1.0.1(e) for the definition of informed consent. However, the lawyer must take reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more information that prohibits representation than is reasonably necessary to determine whether to represent the prospective client. [See also Comment \[7\].](#)

[6] Even in the absence of an agreement with the prospective client, under paragraph (c), the lawyer is not prohibited from either accepting or continuing the representation of a client with interests materially adverse to those of the prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter unless the lawyer has received from the prospective client information that is material to the matter. For a discussion of the meaning of “materially adverse” as used in paragraph (c), see Rule 1.9, ~~comment~~Comment [7]. For a discussion of the meaning of “substantially related” as used in paragraph (c), see Rule 1.9, ~~comments~~Comments [4] - [6].

[7] Under paragraph (c), the prohibition in this Rule is imputed to other lawyers as provided in Rule 1.10, but, under paragraph (d)(1), the consequences of imputation may be avoided if the lawyer obtains the informed written consent of both the prospective and affected clients. In the alternative, imputation may be avoided if the conditions of paragraph (d)(2) are met and all prohibited lawyers are timely screened and written notice is promptly given to the prospective client. See Rule 1.0.1(k) (requirements for screening procedures). In some instances, for example when the prospective client is a person who is not experienced in the use of legal services, it may be appropriate at the beginning of the consultation for the lawyer to explain to the prospective client that the lawyer's firm might subsequently screen the lawyer in the event the lawyer declines the representation and the firm accepts representation of the client's adversary. Paragraph (d)(2)(i) does not prohibit the screened lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly related to the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.

[8] ~~Rule 1.18 leaves open the issue of whether, in a particular matter, use of a timely screen will avoid the imputation of a conflict of interest under paragraph (c). Whether timely implementation of a screen will avoid imputation of a conflict of interest in litigation, transactional, or other contexts is a matter of case law.~~Notice, including a general description of the subject matter about which the lawyer was consulted, and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given to the prospective client as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.

[9] For the duty of competence of a lawyer who gives assistance on the merits of a matter to a prospective client, see Rule 1.1. For a lawyer's duties when a prospective client entrusts valuables or papers to the lawyer's care, see Rule 1.15.

Rule 1.18: Duties to Prospective Client
(Commission's Proposed Rule ALT2 – Clean Version)

- (a) A person who, directly or through an authorized representative, consults a lawyer for the purpose of retaining the lawyer or securing legal service or advice from the lawyer in the lawyer's professional capacity, is a prospective client.
- (b) Even when no lawyer-client relationship ensues, a lawyer who has communicated with a prospective client shall not use or reveal confidential information learned as a result of the consultation, except as Rule 1.9 would permit with respect to information of a former client.
- (c) A lawyer subject to paragraph (b) shall not represent a client with interests materially adverse to those of a prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter if the lawyer received confidential information from the prospective client that is material to the matter, except as provided in paragraph (d). If a lawyer is prohibited from representation under this paragraph, no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter, except as provided in paragraph (d).
- (d) When the lawyer has received information that prohibits representation as defined in paragraph (c), representation of the affected client is permissible if:
 - (1) both the affected client and the prospective client have given informed written consent, or
 - (2) the lawyer who received the information took reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more information that prohibits representation than was reasonably necessary to determine whether to represent the prospective client; and
 - (i) the prohibited lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and
 - (ii) written notice is promptly given to the prospective client to enable the prospective client to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this Rule.

Comment

[1] Prospective clients, like clients, may disclose information to a lawyer, place documents or other property in the lawyer's custody, or rely on the lawyer's advice. A lawyer's discussions with a prospective client usually are limited in time and depth and leave both the prospective client and the lawyer free, and sometimes required, to proceed no further. Hence, although the range of a prospective client's information that is protected is the same as that of a client, a law firm is permitted, in the limited circumstances provided under paragraph (d), to accept or continue representation of a client with interests adverse to the prospective client in the subject matter of the consultation. See Comments [3] and [4]. As used in this Rule, prospective client includes an authorized representative of the client.

[2] Not all persons who communicate information to a lawyer are entitled to protection under this Rule. A person who by any means communicates information unilaterally to a lawyer, without any reasonable expectation that the lawyer is willing to discuss the possibility of forming a client-lawyer relationship or to discuss the prospective client's matter in the lawyer's professional capacity, is not a "prospective client" within the meaning of paragraph (a). Similarly, a person who discloses information to a lawyer after the lawyer has stated his or her unwillingness or inability to consult with the person in the lawyer's professional capacity would not have such a reasonable expectation. See People v. Gionis (1995) 9 Cal.4th 1196 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 456]. In addition, a person who communicates information to a lawyer for purposes that do not include a good faith intention to retain the lawyer in the subject matter of the communication is not a prospective client within the meaning of this Rule.

[2A] Whether a lawyer's representations or conduct evidence a willingness to participate in a consultation is examined from the viewpoint of the reasonable expectations of the prospective client. The factual circumstances relevant to the existence of a consultation include, for example: whether the parties meet by pre-arrangement or by chance; the prior relationship, if any, of the parties; whether the communications between the parties took place in a public or private place; the presence or absence of third parties; the duration of the communication; and, most important, the demeanor of the parties, particularly any conduct of the attorney encouraging or discouraging the communication and conduct of either party suggesting an understanding that the communication is or is not confidential.

[3] It is often necessary for a prospective client to reveal information to the lawyer during an initial consultation prior to the decision about formation of a client-lawyer relationship. The lawyer often must learn such information to determine whether there is a conflict of interest with an existing client and whether the matter is one that the lawyer is willing to undertake. Sometimes the lawyer must investigate further after the initial consultation with the prospective client to determine whether the matter is one the lawyer is willing or able to undertake. Regardless of whether the lawyer has learned such information during the initial consultation or during the subsequent investigation, paragraph (b) prohibits the lawyer from using or revealing that information, except as permitted by Rule 1.9, even if the client or lawyer decides not to proceed with the representation. The duty exists regardless of how brief the initial conference may be.

[4] In order to avoid acquiring information from a prospective client that would prohibit representation as provided in paragraph (c), a lawyer considering whether or not to undertake a new matter must limit the initial interview to only such information as reasonably appears necessary for that purpose. Where the information indicates that a conflict of interest or other reason for non-representation exists, the lawyer should so inform the prospective client or decline the representation. If the prospective client wishes to retain the lawyer, and if consent is possible under Rules 1.7 and 1.9, then consent from all affected present or former clients must be obtained before accepting the representation.

[5] A lawyer may condition conversations with a prospective client on the person's informed consent that information disclosed during the consultation will not prohibit the lawyer from representing a different client in the matter. See Rule 1.0.1(e) for the definition of informed consent. However, the lawyer must take reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more information that prohibits representation than is reasonably necessary to determine whether to represent the prospective client. See also Comment [7].

[6] Even in the absence of an agreement with the prospective client, under paragraph (c), the lawyer is not prohibited from either accepting or continuing the representation of a client with interests materially adverse to those of the prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter unless the lawyer has received from the prospective client information that is material to the matter. For a discussion of the meaning of "materially adverse" as used in paragraph (c), see Rule 1.9, Comment [7]. For a discussion of the meaning of “substantially related” as used in paragraph (c), see Rule 1.9, Comments [4] – [6].

[7] Under paragraph (c), the prohibition in this Rule is imputed to other lawyers as provided in Rule 1.10, but, under paragraph (d)(1), the consequences of imputation may be avoided if the lawyer obtains the informed written consent of both the prospective and affected clients. In the alternative, imputation may be avoided if the conditions of paragraph (d)(2) are met and all prohibited lawyers are timely screened and written notice is promptly given to the prospective client. See Rule 1.0.1(k) (requirements for screening procedures). In some instances, for example when the prospective client is a person who is not experienced in the use of legal services, it may be appropriate at the beginning of the consultation for the lawyer to explain to the prospective client that the lawyer’s firm might subsequently screen the lawyer in the event the lawyer declines the representation and the firm accepts representation of the client’s adversary. Paragraph (d)(2)(i) does not prohibit the screened lawyer from receiving a salary or partnership share established by prior independent agreement, but that lawyer may not receive compensation directly related to the matter in which the lawyer is disqualified.

[8] Notice, including a general description of the subject matter about which the lawyer was consulted, and of the screening procedures employed, generally should be given to the prospective client as soon as practicable after the need for screening becomes apparent.

[9] For the duty of competence of a lawyer who gives assistance on the merits of a matter to a prospective client, see Rule 1.1. For a lawyer’s duties when a prospective client entrusts valuables or papers to the lawyer’s care, see Rule 1.15.

Proposed Rule 1.18: Duties to Prospective Client

Minority Dissent to Inclusion of Paragraph (d)(2)

A minority of the Commission members oppose the unconsented screening provisions in paragraph (d)(2). The screening rule the majority asks the Board to reconsider has nothing to do with the test recently announced in Kirk v. First American Title Ins. Co. (2010) 183 Cal.App.4th 776. The proposed screening rule would allow for screening without any of the balancing of interests the Kirk standard requires.

Paragraph (d)(2) would allow screening in situations where the law in California is still evolving. Kirk created a highly circumstantial standard that will require further applications in the courts before any general conclusions regarding the scope of the standard can be drawn. Kirk endorsed the Board's decision not to provide for screening in Rule 1.10, stating, "We agree with the Board of Governors that the issue of whether attorney screening can overcome vicarious disqualification in the context of an attorney moving between private law firms is not clearly settled in California." (Slip Opn at p. 35.) The highly circumstantial test which Kirk announced leaves the law unsettled and should be left to evolve in the courts. The Supreme Court's decision to not decertify the opinion and to decline review of the Court of Appeal decision does not mean the Court endorsed the decision. (See e.g. Cal Rule of Ct, Rule 8.1125(d).) Nor does it make the law any more settled in light of Kirk's highly circumstantial test.

Limiting screening to situations where a lawyer has taken reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more confidential information than was necessary to determine whether the represent the prospective client, offers minimal client protection. Once past the conflicts check stage, a lawyer's determination whether to represent a prospective frequently involves a discussion in which a prospective client reveal confidential information. The California Supreme Court has recognized that "Even the briefest conversation between a lawyer and a client can result in the disclosure of confidences." (People ex rel. Dept. of Corporations v. Speedee Oil Change Systems, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 1135, 1148.)

Commission members oppose allowing ethical screens without client consent in this Rule because it would permit a law firm that has received a prospective client's confidential information to adopt an ethical screen unilaterally and without the prospective client's consent. Allowing screening without a prospective client's consent undermines the extremely important role of confidentiality and trust in a prospective lawyer-client relationship.

The duty of confidentiality expressed in Business & Professions Code section 6068(e)(1) and Rule 3-100 prohibits a lawyer from using or disclosing any information that a client wants the lawyer to hold inviolate or the disclosure of likely would be embarrassing or detrimental to the client. The duty extends to prospective clients, who communicate with lawyers for the purpose of retention, even if it does not result. The duty exists to assure that anyone can discuss with a lawyer how the law applies to his or her most intimate problem without fear of consequence. This duty also exists because__effective representation depends on open communication between lawyer and client. (City & County of S.F. v. Superior Court (1951) 37 Cal.2d 227, 235 (1951) ["Adequate legal representation in the ascertainment and enforcement of rights or the prosecution or defense of litigation compels a full disclosure of the facts by the client to his attorney. Unless he makes known to the lawyer all the facts, the advice that follows will be useless, if not misleading."].)

The legal profession invites prospective client candor by imposing an austere duty of confidentiality on lawyers. Through the strict application of this duty, a prospective client never has to worry about revealing confidential information to a lawyer and never has to question their decision to do so. Rule 1.9 extends that purpose by preventing lawyers from putting themselves in a position where they would be tempted to reveal or use against the prospective client information that the prospective client imparted in confidence.

Rule 1.18 imputes the conflict to the lawyer's firm in order to assure prospective clients that the lawyer will not be tempted by the interest of the lawyer's firm to reveal information the prospective client imparted to the lawyer in confidence. Imputation is necessary because the prospective client has no means to assure that information in the possession of a firm representing the prospective client's adversary will not be shared and used or disclosed against the prospective client's interests. Imputation does not turn on whether lawyers in large firms are presumed to share information. It turns on the firm's interest as an advocate for an adversary, the availability of the information within the law firm and the prospective client's inability to know whether a screen has been violated.

The legal profession cannot assure prospective clients that they can communicate with lawyers in confidence when the prospective client cannot verify that the law firm is not using the information in circumstances where the law firm would be tempted to use it against the prospective client. As the Court of Appeal stated in Adams v. Aerojet General (2001) 86 Cal.App.4th 1324 in adopting Cal. State Bar Formal Opn. 1998-152:

The vicarious disqualification rule has been established as a prophylactic device to protect the sanctity of former client confidences where a law firm with a member attorney who has acquired knowledge of confidential information material to the current controversy would otherwise be permitted to represent the former client's adversary. "No amount of assurances or screening procedures, no 'cone of silence,' could ever convince the opposing party that the confidences would not be used to its disadvantage. . . . No one could have confidence in the integrity of a legal process in which this is permitted to occur without the parties' consent." (Cho v. Superior Court (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 113, 125 [45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 863], fn. omitted.) As the State Bar Committee observes: "the absence of an effective means of oversight combined with the law firm's interest as an advocate for the current client in the adverse representation are factors that tend to undermine a former client's trust, and in turn the public's trust, in a legal system that would permit such a situation to exist without the former client's consent." (Formal Opn. No. 1998-152, supra, at p. IIA-418.) (Emphasis added.)

Screening without client consent does not protect prospective clients and undermines prospective clients' ability to communicate with lawyers without fear of consequence because a prospective client cannot be verify compliance. A prospective client who has not expressed confidence in a law firm by consenting to the use of an ethical screen should not be forced to accept screening by law firm fiat. A prospective client who has shared confidential information with a lawyer, justifiably would feel a sense of betrayal to learn that information the prospective client expected would be held in confidence is in the possession of the law firm that now represents the prospective client's adversary in a situation where that information could benefit that adversary.

The comments the Commission received do not address that screening comes at the expense of client trust and client protection, which are more important values than finding a way to impose a screen without client consent more predictably. While making screening more predictable protects lawyers, it does not protect prospective clients with confidential information at stake. The Bar cannot fulfill the purpose of the duty of confidentiality, and it cannot expect prospective clients to trust that they can communicate with lawyers in confidence, when a law firm can harbor that confidential information behind an unconsented and unverifiable screen while the firm represents the prospective client's adversary.

Kirk is but one decision, whose significance will be measured over time. It presents a highly controversial standard that for the first time allows other interests to outweigh the duty of confidentiality. Given the significance of the duty of confidentiality, it is left to be seen how courts will engage in that balancing and whether they will allow other interests to outweigh the protection of prospective client trust in the ability to communicate with a lawyer in confidence. The courts should be left to resolve the scope and application of the Kirk. Screening should not be imposed on a client by a Rule of Professional Conduct.

Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 4 Agree = 0 Disagree = 1 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct ("COPRAC")	D	Yes		COPRAC supports the implementation of screening in California through the Rules of Professional Conduct, and accordingly, prefers the prior version of the rule in which paragraph (d) permitted screening to rebut the presumption of shared confidences if "the lawyer who received the information took reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more information that prohibits representation than was reasonably necessary to determine whether to represent the prospective client." If the rule were to permit screening, it should not require that the screening have been, in hindsight, "effective," but rather should require that the lawyer or firm took reasonable measures to screen the prohibited lawyer. COPRAC believes that implementation of screening through a piecemeal, case-by-case approach works to the detriment of the profession by leaving lawyers uncertain of the application of precedent to their particular situations. Accordingly, COPRAC urges the reconsideration, and adoption, of the prior language of the rule permitting screening.	1. As the commenter noted, the Board of Governors voted to adopt a version of proposed Rule 1.18 that does not permit unilateral screening as provided in deleted paragraph (d)(2). However, in light of the Supreme Court's decision to deny review in Kirk v. First American Title Ins. Co. (2010) 183 Cal.App.4th 776, 108 Cal.Rptr.3d 620, rev. denied (6/23/10), and also to deny a request for depublication of the Court of Appeal opinion, the Commission voted to request that the Board reconsider its rejection of proposed Rule 1.198 with a provision permitting screening in the limited circumstances provided in paragraph (d)(2).

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 4 Agree = 0 Disagree = 1 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					In addition, even if case law develops to permit screening as a method to avoid disqualification, the absence of screening in the rule could nevertheless subject a lawyer to discipline. If this change is not adopted, we are concerned that the language, as drafted may contain a contradiction, in that the rule says that you can undertake the representation if both lawyer and client give informed written consent, but the comment directs lawyers to abide by case law, which may allow screening. Is the Commission relying on the fact that the new provision in the rule does not use the word "only" before "if both the affected client and the prospective client have given informed written consent" to avoid internal inconsistency? If so, we are concerned that this may end up causing confusion. Finally, we note that Comment [7] incorrectly refers to paragraph (d)(1), when there is no longer a subparagraph (1). In the event the Commission does not follow our recommendation, this reference should be amended to refer to paragraph (d).	2. The Commission understands the commenter's concerns but has not made any suggested change. Pursuant to proposed Rule 1.0, the comments to the Rules "provide guidance for their interpretation and for acting in compliance with the Rules." When read in conjunction with Comment [8], the implementation of a screen by itself will not subject the lawyers involved to discipline. 3. The noted discrepancy has been corrected.

Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client [Sorted by Commenter]							TOTAL = 4 Agree = 0 Disagree = 1 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel ("OCTC")	M	Yes	1.18(c),(d)	1. The Commission states that this is a new rule to California, although OCTC believes it is part of the common law, invokes the current rules, or exists in some other rule such as competence, confidences, and conflicts. 2. OCTC is concerned that subparagraphs (c) and (d) are essentially a repeat of the conflict rules and the concept of waivers and screens in those rules. Further, these sections are not complete as there are non-waivable conflicts. OCTC believes this is not the place for the conflict rules and that any conflict rules should be in a separate rule. 3. Many of the Comments are more appropriately placed in treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinion. The inclusion of factors in 2A could be confusing and give the impression they are the exclusive factors. Further, if they are to be considered, it should be in the rule.	1. The Commission is not aware of any Rule of Professional Conduct that addresses duties owed to prospective clients. Thus, this is a "new rule" for California, although some of its concepts can be found in the Evidence Code and ethics opinions. 2. The Commission disagrees with the commenter. As noted previously, a conflict that might arise from a consultation with a prospective client is distinguishable from a former client conflict, requiring that it be treated separately from other conflicts situations. Moreover, non-waivable conflicts typically arise in concurrent representation situations and thus are more appropriately treated under Rule 1.7. 3. As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.
3	Orange County Bar Association ("OCBA")	M	Yes		The OCBA supports the adoption of proposed Rule 1.18 with one substantive change. Specifically, the OCBA notes that paragraph (d) states that, "[w]hen the lawyer has received information that prohibits representation as defined in paragraph (c),	1. See Response to COPRAC, ¶.2, above.

Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 0
Disagree = 1
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response representation of the affected client is permissible if both the affected client and the prospective client have given informed written consent." While this statement does not say "...permissible only if...", the language could be interpreted to imply that such a representation can only be undertaken with informed written consent. This interpretation is reinforced by the language of paragraph (c) insofar as it provides a direct prohibition with regard to "represent[ing] a client with interests materially adverse to those of a prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter if the lawyer received confidential information from the prospective client that is material to the matter, except as provided in paragraph (d)." This single exception is repeated in the next sentence of paragraph (c) with regard to imputation. However, Comment [8] states that "Rule 1.18 leaves open the issue of whether, in a particular matter, use of a timely screen will avoid the imputation of a conflict of interest under paragraph (c). Whether timely implementation of a screen will avoid imputation of a conflict of interest in litigation, transactional, or other contexts is a matter of case law." This appears to contradict the language of the proposed Rule itself, in that paragraph (d) could be read to suggest that a non-

Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Client [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 4 Agree = 0 Disagree = 1 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					consensual screen (even if supported by case law) would not be permitted because it does not involve informed written consent by both clients. To correct this inconsistency, the OCBA suggests revising the language of paragraph (d) to add either of the following at the end of the sentence: "...or if otherwise allowed pursuant to case law" or "...or if otherwise allowed by law." On a non-substantive note, the OCBA notes that Comment [7] still refers to paragraph (d)(1), even though subparagraph (1) was removed in the Commission's revisions to this proposed Rule. It appears that this reference was meant to be to paragraph (d) itself.	2. The noted discrepancy has been corrected.
4	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee	M	Yes		Delete paragraph (d)(2). We agree with the opposition's concerns about the unilateral nature of paragraph (d)(2) and that it could enable law firms to receive material confidential information from a prospective client, without any notice to the potential client of the consequences, and then to appear against that person in the very matter in which representation was sought without their consent. It seems requiring informed written consent of both the affected client and the prospective client pursuant to paragraph (d)(1) is the better approach.	The Board of Governors voted to adopt a version of proposed Rule 1.18 that does not permit unilateral screening as provided in deleted paragraph (d)(2), thereby implementing the commenter's suggested change.

Rule 1.18: Duties to Prospective Client

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Connecticut: Rule 1.18(a) defines a “prospective client” as a person who discusses “or communicates” with a lawyer concerning the possibility of forming a client-lawyer relationship with respect to a matter.

District of Columbia adopts the essence of Rule 1.18 except that it omits Model Rule 1.18(d)(2) and (2)(ii) while retaining the language in (2)(i).

Florida omits the words “significantly harmful” from paragraph (c), so a lawyer is personally disqualified if he or she received information “that could be used to the disadvantage” of the prospective client.

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2010, Rule 1.18(d) does not require that a prospective client receive notice when a firm employs a screen to avoid a conflict of interest.

Maryland deletes the introductory language in ABA Model Rule 1.18(d)(2) and all of Rule 1.18(d)(2)(ii). Thus, Maryland Rule 1.18(d) is a single sentence permitting representation if either “both the affected client and the prospective client have given informed consent, confirmed in writing, or the disqualified lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom.”

Missouri: Rule 1.18(d)(2) deletes the ABA Model Rule requirements that the lawyer who received the disqualifying information be apportioned no part of the fee and that written notice be promptly given to the prospective client.

Nevada: Nevada adds the following new paragraphs to Rule 1.18:

(e) A person who communicates information to a lawyer without any reasonable expectation that the lawyer is willing to discuss the possibility of forming a client-lawyer relationship, or for purposes which do not include a good faith intention to retain the lawyer in the subject matter of the consultation, is not a “prospective client” within the meaning of this Rule.

(f) A lawyer may condition conversations with a prospective client on the person’s informed consent that no information disclosed during the consultation will prohibit the lawyer from representing a different client in the matter. If the agreement expressly so provides, the prospective client may also consent to the lawyer’s subsequent use of information received from the prospective client.

(g) Whenever a prospective client shall request information regarding a lawyer or law firm for the purpose of making a decision regarding employment of the lawyer or law firm:

- (1) The lawyer or law firm shall promptly furnish (by mail if requested) the written information described in Rule 1.4(c).
- (2) The lawyer or law firm may furnish such additional factual information regarding the lawyer or law firm deemed valuable to assist the client.
- (3) If the information furnished to the client includes a fee contract, the top of each page of the contract shall be marked "SAMPLE" in red ink in a type size one size larger than the largest type used in the contract and the words "DO NOT SIGN" shall appear on the client signature line.

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 1.18(d) describes in more detail the procedures necessary to avoid a conflict as a result of consultations with prospective clients. Comments 7A-7C offer further guidance regarding these procedures. New York adds Rule 1.18(e), which provides (in language copied partly from Comment 2 to Model Rule 1.18) that a "prospective client" does not include a person who "(1) communicates information unilaterally to a lawyer, without any reasonable expectation that the lawyer is willing to discuss the possibility of forming a client-lawyer relationship" or "(2) communicates with a lawyer for the purpose of disqualifying the lawyer...."

North Carolina omits the language in Rule 1.18(d)(2) requiring "reasonable measures to avoid exposure" to unnecessary confidential information. North Carolina does not require that a disqualified lawyer be denied part of the fee.

Oregon omits the language in Rule 1.18(d)(2) requiring "reasonable measures to avoid exposure" to unnecessary confidential information.

South Carolina: Rule 1.18(a) provides that a person with whom a lawyer discusses the possibility of forming a client-lawyer relationship with respect to a matter is a prospective client "only when there is a reasonable expectation that the lawyer is likely to form the relationship."

Vermont: In the rules effective September 1, 2009, Rule 1.18(a) extends prospective client status only to those people who are "in good faith" seeking to hire that attorney.

Proposed Rule 2.1 [n/a]

“Advisor”

(XDFT5.2, 07/06/10)

Summary: Proposed Rule 2.1 is based on Model Rule 2.1 and describes a lawyer's role as a client's advisor. It provides that a lawyer must exercise independent professional judgment and render candid advice.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☐ Existing California Law

Rule

Statute

Case law

- ☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

- ☒ Other Primary Factor(s)

This Model Rule has no counterpart in the current California rules but in stating the duty of independent professional judgment, the rule emphasizes an important principle that is fully consistent with California law.

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 6
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 2
Abstain 2

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Commission Minority Position, Known Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

Minority Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☐ Yes ☒ No

☐ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☒ Very Controversial – Explanation:

Comments received during the initial comment period asserted that the proposed Rule should not be adopted because it is not a disciplinary rule, it is not enforceable, is unnecessary and provides for advice that is beyond a lawyer's expertise. Comments received during the subsequent comment period objected to the Commission's omission of comments found in Model Rule 2.1.

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 2.1* Advisor

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 2.1 is based on Model Rule 2.1 and describes a lawyer's role as a client's advisor. There is no counterpart to this Rule in the California rules and the Commission is recommending adoption of the first sentence of the Model Rule without any change. The Commission is recommending that the second sentence of the Model Rule not be adopted, but that the sentence be incorporated into Comment [2] to the proposed Rule. Although it is anticipated that the Rule may not be frequently applied as a lawyer disciplinary standard, the Commission recognizes the importance of this Rule as guidance to lawyers and clients on a lawyer's duty to exercise independent professional judgment.

Regarding the comments to the Rule, the Commission is recommending adoption of modified versions of two of the Model Rule Comments, and deletion of three Model Rule comments. For the most part, deletions have been made to focus the rule on key concepts of independent professional judgment and candor. The commentary concerning a lawyer's responsibility to render advice on factors beyond technical legal considerations, such as moral or social factors, was viewed as inconsistent with the terms of the Rule itself, which provides only that a lawyer duly consider these factors in rendering legal advice. A new Comment [1] has been added that clarifies the concept of independent professional judgment. The first two Comments of the Model Rule counterpart have been modified to remove references that suggest the frequency in which non-legal considerations might arise in the course of representing clients. The Commission determined that the Model Rule statements may not be the case and are unnecessary to make the point of the comment and to clarify that the standards in the Rule are permissive, rather than mandatory requirements in every representation.

* Proposed Rule 2.1, XDFT5.2 (07-06-10)

The Commission added a new Comment [1], which explains the independent judgment standard in the Rule. The Commission added the Comment because the concept of independent judgment in California is a fairly well defined concept. Courts in other jurisdictions have not been consistent in their application of the independent judgment standard. In some cases, courts in other jurisdictions have applied the independent judgment standard in a way that would be inconsistent with a lawyer's duty of loyalty to a client. Comment [1] was added to assure a clear and consistent application of the independent judgment standard."

ABA Model Rule Rule 2.1 Advisor	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 2.1 Advisor	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
In representing a client, a lawyer shall exercise independent professional judgment and render candid advice. In rendering advice, a lawyer may refer not only to law but to other considerations such as moral, economic, social and political factors, that may be relevant to the client's situation.	In representing a client, a lawyer shall exercise independent professional judgment and render candid advice.~~In rendering advice, a lawyer may refer not only to law but to other considerations such as moral, economic, social and political factors, that may be relevant to the client's situation.~~	The proposed Rule is identical to the first sentence of the Model Rule. In response to public comment, the second sentence of the Model Rule was deleted and moved to Comment [2].

* Proposed Rule 2.1, XDraft 5.2(7/6/10); Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 2.1 Advisor Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 2.1 Advisor Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[1] Independent professional judgment is an essential element of a lawyer's relationship with a client. Independent professional judgment is judgment that is not influenced by duties, relationships or interests that are not properly part of the lawyer-client relationship.	The Commission added a new Comment [1] which clarifies the concept of "independent professional judgment." Although one public comment expressed concerns about any possible language relating the concept to the loyalty, the Commission's new Comment [1] does not equate independent professional judgment with the concept of loyalty.
Scope of Advice [1] A client is entitled to straightforward advice expressing the lawyer's honest assessment. Legal advice often involves unpleasant facts and alternatives that a client may be disinclined to confront. In presenting advice, a lawyer endeavors to sustain the client's morale and may put advice in as acceptable a form as honesty permits. However, a lawyer should not be deterred from giving candid advice by the prospect that the advice will be unpalatable to the client.	~~Scope of Advice~~ [~~1~~2] A client is entitled to straightforward advice expressing the lawyer's honest assessment. Legal advice ~~often involves unpleasant~~may involve facts and alternatives that a client may find unpleasant and may be disinclined to confront. In presenting advice, a lawyer endeavors to sustain the client's morale and may put advice in as acceptable a form as honesty permits. However, a lawyer should not be deterred from giving candid advice by the prospect that the advice will be unpalatable to the client.	Comment [2] is based on Model Rule 2.1, cmt.[1]. The heading "Scope of Advice" has been deleted as unnecessary and inaccurate given the Commission's narrower version of the rule. The first sentence of the comment has been revised to replace with word "often" with the word "may" because the Model Rule language makes a judgment about what often occurs in a lawyer client relationship that is not necessarily the case and is unnecessary to make the point of the Comment. The reference to "unpleasant facts and alternative" was changed to state "facts and alternatives that a client may find unpleasant" in response to public comment that it is the client's perception of the facts, rather than the facts themselves, that determine whether they are unpleasant.

ABA Model Rule Rule 2.1 Advisor Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 2.1 Advisor Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[2] Advice couched in narrow legal terms may be of little value to a client, especially where practical considerations, such as cost or effects on other people, are predominant. Purely technical legal advice, therefore, can sometimes be inadequate. It is proper for a lawyer to refer to relevant moral and ethical considerations in giving advice. Although a lawyer is not a moral advisor as such, moral and ethical considerations impinge upon most legal questions and may decisively influence how the law will be applied.	~~[23] Advice~~In some cases, advice couched in narrow legal terms may be of little value to a client, especially where practical considerations, such as cost or effects on other people, are predominant. ~~Purely technical legal advice, therefore, can sometimes be inadequate. It is proper for a lawyer to refer to relevant moral and ethical considerations in giving advice.~~ Although a lawyer is not a moral advisor ~~as such, moral and ethical considerations impinge upon most legal questions and~~in rendering advice, a lawyer may ~~decisively influence how the~~refer not only to law will, but to other considerations such as moral, economic, social and political factors that may be appliedrelevant to the client's situation.	Comment [3] is based on Model Rule 2.1, cmt. [2]. The first sentence was revised to clarify that it is not intended to state a proposition that applies in every representation. The second sentence has been deleted because it may suggest to some lawyers that there is a risk of disciplinary exposure if a lawyer provides competent advice but does not also provide advice on moral issues. The third sentence was deleted and its substance incorporated into the last sentence. The last sentence was revised to incorporate language that was taken from the second sentence of the proposed Rule. The Model Rule Comment language in the last sentence was replaced with the second sentence from the proposed Rule, because the deleted language makes a judgment that moral and ethical considerations impinge on most legal questions, that may not be the case and is not necessary to make the point of the Comment.
[3] A client may expressly or impliedly ask the lawyer for purely technical advice. When such a request is made by a client experienced in legal matters, the lawyer may accept it at face value. When such a request is made by a client inexperienced in legal matters, however, the lawyer's responsibility as advisor may include indicating that more may be involved than strictly legal considerations.	~~[3] A client may expressly or impliedly ask the lawyer for purely technical advice. When such a request is made by a client experienced in legal matters, the lawyer may accept it at face value. When such a request is made by a client inexperienced in legal matters, however, the lawyer's responsibility as advisor may include indicating that more may be involved than strictly legal considerations.~~	Model Rule, cmt. [3], has been deleted because the proposition stated therein may be construed as creating a substantive legal standard that goes beyond the terms of the rule itself.

ABA Model Rule Rule 2.1 Advisor Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 2.1 Advisor Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[4] Matters that go beyond strictly legal questions may also be in the domain of another profession. Family matters can involve problems within the professional competence of psychiatry, clinical psychology or social work; business matters can involve problems within the competence of the accounting profession or of financial specialists. Where consultation with a professional in another field is itself something a competent lawyer would recommend, the lawyer should make such a recommendation. At the same time, a lawyer's advice at its best often consists of recommending a course of action in the face of conflicting recommendations of experts.	~~[4] Matters that go beyond strictly legal questions may also be in the domain of another profession. Family matters can involve problems within the professional competence of psychiatry, clinical psychology or social work; business matters can involve problems within the competence of the accounting profession or of financial specialists. Where consultation with a professional in another field is itself something a competent lawyer would recommend, the lawyer should make such a recommendation. At the same time, a lawyer's advice at its best often consists of recommending a course of action in the face of conflicting recommendations of experts~~	Model Rule, cmt. [4], has been deleted as unnecessary practice pointers that distract and potentially undermine the primary message to lawyers and clients that there is a duty of independent professional judgment and candor.

ABA Model Rule Rule 2.1 Advisor Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 2.1 Advisor Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Offering Advice [5] In general, a lawyer is not expected to give advice until asked by the client. However, when a lawyer knows that a client proposes a course of action that is likely to result in substantial adverse legal consequences to the client, the lawyer's duty to the client under Rule 1.4 may require that the lawyer offer advice if the client's course of action is related to the representation. Similarly, when a matter is likely to involve litigation, it may be necessary under Rule 1.4 to inform the client of forms of dispute resolution that might constitute reasonable alternatives to litigation. A lawyer ordinarily has no duty to initiate investigation of a client's affairs or to give advice that the client has indicated is unwanted, but a lawyer may initiate advice to a client when doing so appears to be in the client's interest.	~~Offering Advice~~ ~~[5] In general, a lawyer is not expected to give advice until asked by the client. However, when a lawyer knows that a client proposes a course of action that is likely to result in substantial adverse legal consequences to the client, the lawyer's duty to the client under Rule 1.4 may require that the lawyer offer advice if the client's course of action is related to the representation. Similarly, when a matter is likely to involve litigation, it may be necessary under Rule 1.4 to inform the client of forms of dispute resolution that might constitute reasonable alternatives to litigation. A lawyer ordinarily has no duty to initiate investigation of a client's affairs or to give advice that the client has indicated is unwanted, but a lawyer may initiate advice to a client when doing so appears to be in the client's interest.~~	Model Rule, cmt. [5], has been deleted, in part, because the Commission has included comparable guidance in other proposed rules. For example, the proposed rule on client communication, Rule 1.4, includes Comment [1] that, in part, states: “Depending upon the circumstances, a lawyer may also be obligated pursuant to paragraphs (a)(2) or (a)(3) to communicate with the client concerning the opportunity to engage in alternative dispute resolution processes.”

Rule 2.1 Advisor

(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to the Public Comment Draft)

In representing a client, a lawyer shall exercise independent professional judgment and render candid advice.

Comment

Scope of Advice

[1] Independent professional judgment is an essential element of a lawyer's relationship with a client. Independent professional judgment is judgment that is not influenced by duties, relationships or interests that are not properly part of the lawyer-client relationship. A client is entitled to straightforward advice expressing the lawyer's honest assessment. Legal advice may involve facts and alternatives that a client may find unpleasant and may be disinclined to confront. In presenting advice, a lawyer endeavors to sustain the client's morale and may put advice in as acceptable a form as honesty permits. However, a lawyer should not be deterred from giving candid advice by the prospect that the advice will be unpalatable to the client.

[2] In some cases, advice couched in narrow legal terms may be of little value to a client, especially where practical considerations, such as cost or effects on other people, are predominant. Although a lawyer is not a moral advisor, in rendering advice, a lawyer may refer not only to law, but to other considerations such as moral, economic, social and political factors that may be relevant to the client's situation.

Rule 2.1 Advisor

(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

Rule 2.1 Advisor

In representing a client, a lawyer shall exercise independent professional judgment and render candid advice.

Comment

[1] Independent professional judgment is an essential element of a lawyer's relationship with a client. Independent professional judgment is judgment that is not influenced by duties, relationships or interests that are not properly part of the lawyer-client relationship.

[2] A client is entitled to straightforward advice expressing the lawyer's honest assessment. Legal advice may involve facts and alternatives that a client may find unpleasant and may be disinclined to confront. In presenting advice, a lawyer endeavors to sustain the client's morale and may put advice in as acceptable a form as honesty permits. However, a lawyer should not be deterred from giving candid advice by the prospect that the advice will be unpalatable to the client.

[3] In some cases, advice couched in narrow legal terms may be of little value to a client, especially where practical considerations, such as cost or effects on other people, are predominant. Although a lawyer is not a moral advisor, in rendering advice, a lawyer may refer not only to law, but to other considerations such as moral, economic, social and political factors that may be relevant to the client's situation.

Rule 2.1 Advisor.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6 Agree = 3
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Robert K. Rogers	M	No		I believe that the Rules should apply to an attorney's professional advice based upon the facts and the law. Extending the professional relationship to include more socially or morally relevant terms would tentatively impose a duty that is more personal than professional. The proposed change balances this by excluding the broader duty and merely making reference to it in a permissive way in the notes.	The Commission fully considered this comment, but concluded that no changes to the Rule are required.
2	COPRAC	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
3	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
4	Barbara Weber	M	No		These comments are regarding attorney discipline as it relates to construction defect claims and suits, and Proposed Rule 2.1. Prevent solicitation by Plaintiff counsel via mass mailings and door to door solicitation. Concerned with "ambulance chasers" and "witch hunts." Attached examples of "fraudulent solicitation letters to unsuspecting homeowners."	The Commission fully considered this comment, but concluded that no changes to the Rule are required. In part, the commenter expresses concerns about the enforcement of the rules, including the consequences rule violations, rather than the substantive content of the rules.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 2.1 Advisor.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6 Agree = 3
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Plaintiff counsel, at time of filing, must record notice of claim/suit to the property. This will protect unsuspecting purchasers or subsequent owners by notifying them upon title search that named property is in litigation/claim status. Owners commonly will not disclose this type of info to subsequent owners which is in direct violation of Cal. Civ. Code section 1102.6. Claimants shall receive a one page summary that shall be signed and notarized by Claimant and submitted with filing of claim to courts. Example: Truth in Lending Act of 2009 for Credit Cards which was enacted has made the dissemination of legal jargon much more user friendly. Real Property filings; at any time during the process of a claim/suit, the ownership of the property changes from original named claimant, property shall automatically be dismissed. New owner of property would need to sign new claim document (see paragraph above) in order for property to remain in claim/suit. In order to fully comply with litigation, Claimant must be present in court in order to file. Again, this would help to prevent

Rule 2.1 Advisor.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6 Agree = 3
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					frivolous filings. If a Claimant knew that he/she had to attend a court filing, they would be fully and completely aware of what they have initiated. SB 800 claims and construction defects claims that are not properly filed as stated in Civil Code should immediately be dismissed from court and the filing attorney group FINED for monopolizing the court system. Due to the current recession, all sorts of lawsuits have put a strain on the court system, which currently is overburdened and understaffed due to state deficits at an all time high. The impact of unfounded lawsuits impacts the availability of the court system to handle legitimate claims and filings. If you hit them in their checkbooks, they will think twice before filing an illegitimate claim. Tougher disciplinary standards for violations of professional conduct should include fines at the least, up to and including, disbarment. It is mandatory that the State Bar protect the public from lawyers who take advantage of homeowners. These firms need not conjure up issues in a home that do not exist. Homeowners are already on edge with the economic conditions and these suits/claims only exacerbate the problems by further devaluing properties.

Rule 2.1 Advisor. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 6 Agree = 3 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
5	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	A	Yes	Comments [1] & [2]	Comments [1] and [2] seem more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.
6	Hazard, Geoffrey, Deborah Rhode & Richard Zitrin (ethics law professors group)	M	Yes		Re: Strengthening the comments: The Commission has chosen to adopt a weakened version of this rule. In particular, in order for this rule to be effective, the truncated comments must be expanded to include, ¶ 3 and the first two sentences of, ¶5 of the ABA rule. Also, the Commission eliminated the sentence in, ¶ 2 of the Comment that states, "Purely technical legal advice, therefore, can sometimes be inadequate." Apparently, this occurred because some Commission members were concerned about creating a "gotcha" civil liability against lawyers. This could be easily remedied by replacing the word "inadequate" with "insufficient," and striking the word "therefore." Re: Independent professional judgment: We understand as this letter is being distributed for signature, some effort may be made by Commission members to add a definition of "independent professional judgment" to this rule. While we have no draft of that proposal, we strongly caution the Board about	The Commission does not agree with the comment. The Commission rejected Comment [3] from the Model Rule because the proposition stated therein could be construed as creating a substantive legal standard that goes beyond the Rule itself. The Commission rejected Model Rule Comment [5] because it is covered in Rule 1.4. The second sentence of Comment [2] was deleted because it may suggest to some lawyers that there is a risk of disciplinary exposure if a lawyer provides competent advice but does not also provide advice on moral issues. The commenters' proposed revision does not resolve the concern the Commission had with the Comment. The Commission has adopted a new Comment [1] which addresses the concept of "independent professional judgment." The new Comment does not equate independent professional judgment with the concept of loyalty.

Rule 2.1 Advisor. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 6 Agree = 3 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					adopting a sudden definition of this complex and exceptionally important term without it being fully and completely vetted. This is particularly true of any effort to equate "independent professional judgment" with "loyalty" - two vital and important concepts that are nevertheless not the same.

Rule 2.1: Advisor

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California has no direct counterpart to Rule 2.1.

Colorado adds the following sentence at the end of Rule 2.1: “In a matter involving or expected to involve litigation, a lawyer should advise the client of alternative forms of dispute resolution that might reasonably be pursued to attempt to resolve the legal dispute or to reach the legal objective sought.”

Georgia moves the second sentence of the ABA rule to a Comment, and adds the following sentence to the text of the rule in its place: “A lawyer should not be deterred from giving candid advice by the prospect that the advice will be unpalatable to the client.”

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 2.1 adds the word “psychological” after “moral, economic, social” but is otherwise substantially the same as the Model Rule.

Texas: Rule 2.01 begins, “In advising or otherwise representing a client . . . ,” and Texas deletes the second sentence of ABA Model Rule 2.1.

Proposed Rule 2.4 [n/a]
“Lawyer as Third-Party Neutral”
(XDraft #7, 9/13/07)

Summary: Proposed Rule 2.4, which closely tracks Model Rule 2.4, applies to lawyers when they serve as third party neutrals.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule

Comment

- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☐ Existing California Law

Rule

Statute

Case law

- ☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

- ☒ Other Primary Factor(s)

Judicial Council Standards for Mediators in Court Connected Mediation Programs; Judicial Council Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators in Contractual Arbitration.

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 8

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 2

Abstain/Not Voting 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Dissenting Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart ☒ Yes ☐ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☐ No Known Stakeholders

☒ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

ADR Services, Inc., Alternative Resolution Centers, California Dispute Resolution Council, California Judges Association, JAMS, Judicate West, NASD, NYSE, State Bar Committee on Alternative Dispute Resolution, State Bar of California

☒ Very Controversial – Explanation:

Stakeholders maintain that the services they provide are not the practice of law and therefore, the State Bar should not regulate third party neutral lawyers. See Introduction, ¶¶. 2 & 3. See also Comment [4] to proposed Rule & Explanation of Changes to Comment [4].

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 2.4* Lawyer as Third-Party Neutral

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 2.4 substantially follows ABA Model Rule 2.4, except that the Rule has been modified to emphasize that it applies to “neutral” arbitrators but not to “party” arbitrators, whose duties are different. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a). In addition, a few changes have been made to conform the Rule to current California law, and to reference the State Bar Act, where appropriate.

A minority of the Commission believes that Rule 2.4 should go further in providing a means by which the State Bar can discipline lawyers who engage in misconduct while acting as a third party neutral, whether through appointment by a court or by agreement of the parties. In light of the reality that many lawyers in California now provide services as third party neutrals, either in supplement to or in place of their traditional services, the public comment version of the Rule tracked Model Rule 2.4 but also incorporated by reference selected provisions of the Judicial Council Standards for Mediators in Court Connected Mediation Programs and the Judicial Council Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators in Contractual Arbitration. Thus, under the public comment version of the proposed rule, a lawyer serving as a third party neutral would have been subject to discipline for violating any of the selected standards incorporated in the rule. The Judicial Council standards selected by the Commission included provisions addressing conflicts of interest, confidentiality, ex parte communication and other standards that the Commission believed were relevant to the particular context of a lawyer, as opposed to a non-lawyer, serving as a third party neutral. The Commission’s regulatory strategy of setting a lawyer disciplinary standard by incorporating by reference provisions found outside of the Rules of Professional Conduct was based on current California rules 1-700 and 1-710, both of which both incorporate by reference selected provisions of the Code of Judicial Ethics.

* Proposed Rule, XDraft 7 (9/13/07)

INTRODUCTION (Continued):

Nearly all of the public comment received opposed the Commission's approach of incorporating Judicial Council standards as disciplinary rules. Following consideration of the public comment and presentations at Commission meetings made by several of the commentators, the Commission voted to delete those portions of the proposed rule that would incorporate the Judicial Council standards as disciplinary rules. In taking this action, the Commission considered alternate approaches of: (1) "codifying" in the rule itself, the language of the selected standards; and (2) restructuring the rule, along the lines of California's current trust accounting rule 4-100, to include an enabling provision authorizing the Board to adopt standards for regulating lawyer conduct when acting as a third-party neutral. Neither option garnered the support of a majority of the Commission members. In addition, concerns about the practical obstacle of statutory mediation confidentiality would have persisted even under these alternatives to formulating a broader rule.

Minority. A minority of the Commission believes that incorporating by reference the Judicial Council standards, as was done in earlier drafts of proposed Rule 2.4, is the appropriate approach to regulating conduct of lawyers serving as neutrals, and that it would provide better public protection. The minority also points out that virtually all of the public comment that opposed the original version of the rule came from individuals or entities offering commercial ADR services, or from professional organizations which represent the interests of such individuals or entities.

ABA Model Rule Rule 2.4 Lawyer Serving as Third-Party Neutral	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 2.4 Lawyer as Third-Party Neutral	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) A lawyer serves as a third-party neutral when the lawyer assists two or more persons who are not clients of the lawyer to reach a resolution of a dispute or other matter that has arisen between them. Service as a third-party neutral may include service as an arbitrator, a mediator or in such other capacity as will enable the lawyer to assist the parties to resolve the matter.	(a) A lawyer serves as a third-party neutral when the lawyer ~~assists~~is engaged to assist impartially two or more persons who are not clients of the lawyer to reach a resolution of a dispute, or other matter, that has arisen between them. Service as a third-party neutral may include service as ~~a~~a neutral arbitrator, a mediator or in such other capacity as will enable the lawyer to assist the parties to resolve the matter.	This section is nearly identical to the corresponding Model Rule 2.4(a). Changes have been made to clarify that this Rule is applicable only when the lawyer is acting as a neutral arbitrator. Party arbitrators owe different duties to the parties that have retained them and should not necessarily be subject to the same standards as neutral arbitrators.
(b) A lawyer serving as a third-party neutral shall inform unrepresented parties that the lawyer is not representing them. When the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that a party does not understand the lawyer's role in the matter, the lawyer shall explain the difference between the lawyer's role as a third-party neutral and a lawyer's role as one who represents a client.	(b) A lawyer serving as a third-party neutral shall inform unrepresented parties that the lawyer is not representing them. When the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that a party does not understand the lawyer's role in the matter, the lawyer shall explain the difference between the lawyer's role as a third-party neutral and a lawyer's role as one who represents a client.	This section is identical to ABA Model Rule 2.4(b).

* Proposed Rule 4.2, Draft 7 (9/13/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 2.4 Lawyer Serving as Third-Party Neutral Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 2.4 Lawyer as Third-Party Neutral Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] Alternative dispute resolution has become a substantial part of the civil justice system. Aside from representing clients in dispute-resolution processes, lawyers often serve as third-party neutrals. A third-party neutral is a person, such as a mediator, arbitrator, conciliator or evaluator, who assists the parties, represented or unrepresented, in the resolution of a dispute or in the arrangement of a transaction. Whether a third-party neutral serves primarily as a facilitator, evaluator or decisionmaker depends on the particular process that is either selected by the parties or mandated by a court.	[1] Alternative dispute resolution has become a substantial part of the civil justice system. Aside from representing clients in dispute-resolution processes, lawyers often serve as third-party neutrals. A third-party neutral is a person, such as a mediator, neutral arbitrator, conciliator or evaluator, who assists the parties, represented or unrepresented, in the resolution of a dispute or in the arrangement of a transaction. Whether a third-party neutral serves primarily as a facilitator, evaluator or decisionmaker depends on the particular process that is either selected by the parties or mandated by a court.	Comment [1] is nearly identical to comment [1] to Model Rule 2.4. The word "neutral" has been added to emphasize that the Rule applies when a lawyer is acting as an impartial neutral. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a).
[2] The role of a third-party neutral is not unique to lawyers, although, in some court-connected contexts, only lawyers are allowed to serve in this role or to handle certain types of cases. In performing this role, the lawyer may be subject to court rules or other law that apply either to third-party neutrals generally or to lawyers serving as third-party neutrals. Lawyer-neutrals may also be subject to various codes of ethics, such as the Code of Ethics for Arbitration in Commercial Disputes prepared by a joint committee of the American Bar Association and the American Arbitration Association or the Model Standards of Conduct for Mediators jointly prepared by the American Bar Association, the American Arbitration Association and the Society of Professionals in Dispute Resolution.	[2] The role of a third-party neutral is not unique to lawyers, although, in some court-connected contexts, only lawyers are allowed to serve in this role or to handle certain types of cases. In performing this role, the lawyer may be subject to court rules or other law that apply either to third-party neutrals generally or to lawyers serving as third-party neutrals. Lawyer-neutrals may also be subject to various codes of ethics, such as the ~~Code of Ethics for Arbitration in Commercial Disputes prepared by a joint committee of the American Bar Association and the American Arbitration Association or the Model Standards of Conduct for Mediators jointly prepared by the American Bar Association, the American Arbitration Association and the Society of Professionals in Dispute Resolution.~~ Judicial Council	Comment [2] is identical to Model Rule 2.4, cmt. [2], except that the standards applicable to lawyers acting as third party neutrals in California have been substituted in place of the corresponding ABA standards.

ABA Model Rule Rule 2.4 Lawyer Serving as Third-Party Neutral Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 2.4 Lawyer as Third-Party Neutral Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	Standards for Mediators in Court Connected Mediation Programs or the Judicial Council Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators in Contractual Arbitration.
[3] Unlike nonlawyers who serve as third-party neutrals, lawyers serving in this role may experience unique problems as a result of differences between the role of a third-party neutral and a lawyer's service as a client representative. The potential for confusion is significant when the parties are unrepresented in the process. Thus, paragraph (b) requires a lawyer-neutral to inform unrepresented parties that the lawyer is not representing them. For some parties, particularly parties who frequently use dispute-resolution processes, this information will be sufficient. For others, particularly those who are using the process for the first time, more information will be required. Where appropriate, the lawyer should inform unrepresented parties of the important differences between the lawyer's role as third-party neutral and a lawyer's role as a client representative, including the inapplicability of the attorney-client evidentiary privilege. The extent of disclosure required under this paragraph will depend on the particular parties involved and the subject matter of the proceeding, as well as the particular features of the dispute-resolution process selected.	[3] Unlike nonlawyers who serve as third-party neutrals, lawyers serving in this role may experience unique problems as a result of differences between the role of a third-party neutral and a lawyer's service as a client representative. The potential for confusion is significant when the parties are unrepresented in the process. Thus, paragraph (b) requires a lawyer-neutral to inform unrepresented parties that the lawyer is not representing them. For some parties, particularly parties who frequently use dispute-resolution processes, this information will be sufficient. For others, particularly those who are using the process for the first time, more information will be required. Where appropriate, the lawyer should inform unrepresented parties of the important differences between the lawyer's role as third-party neutral and a lawyer's role as a client representative, including the inapplicability of the attorney-client evidentiary privilege. The extent of disclosure required under this paragraph will depend on the particular parties involved and the subject matter of the proceeding, as well as the particular features of the dispute-resolution process selected.	Comment [3] is identical to Model Rule 2.4, cmt. [3].

ABA Model Rule Rule 2.4 Lawyer Serving as Third-Party Neutral Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 2.4 Lawyer as Third-Party Neutral Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[4] This Rule recognizes the inherent power of the Supreme Court of California to discipline a lawyer for conduct in which the lawyer engages either in or out of the legal profession. In re Scott (1991) 52 Cal.3d 968 [277 Cal.Rptr. 201]. The Supreme Court's inherent power is not diminished simply because a lawyer acts as a third-party neutral as opposed to an advocate for a client. Nothing in this rule is intended to address the issue of whether a lawyer's conduct as a third-party neutral constitutes the practice of law.	Comment [4] has no counterpart in Model Rule 2.4. It has been added to emphasize the California Supreme Court's authority to regulate lawyers when acting as third party neutrals, regardless of whether such conduct constitutes the practice of law.
[4] A lawyer who serves as a third-party neutral subsequently may be asked to serve as a lawyer representing a client in the same matter. The conflicts of interest that arise for both the individual lawyer and the lawyer's law firm are addressed in Rule 1.12.	~~[4]~~[5] A lawyer who serves as a third-party neutral subsequently may be asked to serve as a lawyer representing a client in the same matter. The conflicts of interest that arise for both the individual lawyer and the lawyer's law firm are addressed in Rule 1.12. ~~Depending upon the circumstances of the matter, a conflict of interest may preclude the lawyer from accepting the representation. Cf. Cho v. Superior Court (1995) 39 Cal. App.4th 113 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 863] (former judge who was hired by defendant disqualified where judge had received ex parte confidential information from plaintiff while presiding over the same action, and screening would not be effective to avoid imputed disqualification of defendant's firm.)~~	~~The second sentence of Model Rule 2.4, cmt. [4], has been deleted and replaced with a reference to California case law relating to when a former third party neutral is precluded from accepting a later representation of one of the parties because of a conflict of interest. Comment [5] is identical to Model Rule 2.4, cmt. [4].~~

ABA Model Rule Rule 2.4 Lawyer Serving as Third-Party Neutral Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 2.4 Lawyer as Third-Party Neutral Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[5] Lawyers who represent clients in alternative dispute-resolution processes are governed by the Rules of Professional Conduct. When the dispute-resolution process takes place before a tribunal, as in binding arbitration (see Rule 1.0(m)), the lawyer's duty of candor is governed by Rule 3.3. Otherwise, the lawyer's duty of candor toward both the third-party neutral and other parties is governed by Rule 4.1.	~~[5]~~[6] Lawyers who represent clients in alternative dispute-resolution processes are governed by ~~the~~these Rules ~~of Professional Conduct and the State Bar Act. When the dispute-resolution process takes place before a tribunal, as in binding arbitration (see Rule 1.0(m)), the lawyer's duty of candor is governed by Rule 3.3. Otherwise, the lawyer's duty of candor toward both the third-party neutral and other parties is governed by Rule 4.1.~~	Comment [6] is identical to Model Rule 2.4, cmt. [5], except that it references the Rules of Professional Conduct and the State Bar Act generally, rather than Model Rules 1.0(m) and 3.3.
	[7] Nothing in this Rule shall be deemed to limit the applicability of any other rule or law.	Comment [7] has no counterpart in Model Rule 2.4. This Comment has been added in recognition that the conduct of lawyers who serve as third party neutrals may also be subject to other regulation.
	[8] This Rule is not intended to apply to temporary judges, referees or court-appointed arbitrators. See Rule 2.4.1.	Comment [8] has no counterpart in Model Rule 2.4. The comment has been included to reference proposed Rule 2.4.1 and clarify that when lawyers act as temporary judges, referees, or court-appointed arbitrators, Rule 2.4.1, and not this Rule, applies.

Rule 2.4 Lawyer as Third-Party Neutral

(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) A lawyer serves as a third-party neutral when the lawyer is engaged to assist impartially two or more persons who are not clients of the lawyer to reach a resolution of a dispute, or other matter, that has arisen between them. Service as a third-party neutral may include service as a neutral arbitrator, a mediator or in such other capacity as will enable the lawyer to assist the parties to resolve the matter.
- (b) A lawyer serving as a third-party neutral shall inform unrepresented parties that the lawyer is not representing them. When the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that a party does not understand the lawyer's role in the matter, the lawyer shall explain the difference between the lawyer's role as a third-party neutral and a lawyer's role as one who represents a client.

COMMENT

- [1] Alternative dispute resolution has become a substantial part of the civil justice system. Aside from representing clients in dispute resolution processes, lawyers often serve as third-party neutrals. A third-party neutral is a person, such as a mediator, neutral arbitrator, conciliator or evaluator, who assists the parties, represented or unrepresented, in the resolution of a dispute or in the arrangement of a transaction. Whether a third-party neutral serves primarily as a facilitator, evaluator or decision maker depends on the particular process that is either selected by the parties or mandated by a court.
- [2] The role of a third-party neutral is not unique to lawyers, although, in some court connected contexts, only lawyers are allowed to serve in this role or to handle certain types of cases. In performing this role, the lawyer may be subject to court rules or other law that apply either to third-party neutrals generally or to lawyers serving as third-party neutrals. Lawyer neutrals may also be subject to various codes of ethics, such as the Judicial Council Standards for Mediators in Court Connected Mediation Programs or the Judicial Council Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators in Contractual Arbitration.

- [3] Unlike non lawyers who serve as third-party neutrals, lawyers serving in this role may experience unique problems as a result of differences between the role of a third-party neutral and a lawyer's service as a client representative. The potential for confusion is significant when the parties are unrepresented in the process. Thus, paragraph (b) requires a lawyer neutral to inform unrepresented parties that the lawyer is not representing them. For some parties, particularly parties who frequently use dispute resolution processes, this information will be sufficient. For others, particularly those who are using the process for the first time, more information will be required. Where appropriate, the lawyer should inform unrepresented parties of the important differences between the lawyer's role as third-party neutral and a lawyer's role as a client representative, including the inapplicability of the attorney client evidentiary privilege. The extent of disclosure required under this paragraph will depend on the particular parties involved and the subject matter of the proceeding, as well as the particular features of the dispute-resolution process selected.
- [4] This Rule recognizes the inherent power of the Supreme Court of California to discipline a lawyer for conduct in which the lawyer engages either in or out of the legal profession. In re Scott (1991) 52 Cal.3d 968 [277 Cal.Rptr. 201]. The Supreme Court's inherent power is not diminished simply because a lawyer acts as a third-party neutral as opposed to an advocate for a client. Nothing in this rule is intended to address the issue of whether a lawyer's conduct as a third-party neutral constitutes the practice of law.

- [5] A lawyer who serves as a third-party neutral subsequently may be asked to serve as a lawyer representing a client in the same matter. The conflicts of interest that arise for both the individual lawyer and the lawyer's law firm are addressed in Rule 1.12.
- [6] Lawyers who represent clients in alternative dispute resolution processes are governed by these Rules and the State Bar Act.
- [7] Nothing in this Rule shall be deemed to limit the applicability of any other rule or law.
- [8] This Rule is not intended to apply to temporary judges, referees or court-appointed arbitrators. See Rule 2.4.1.

Rule 2.4 Lawyers as Third-Party Neutral. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 2 Agree = 2 Disagree = 0 Modify = 0 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	A	Yes	Comments [1], [3] & [4]	Comments [1], [3] and [4] seem more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 2.4: Lawyer Serving as Third-Party Neutral

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2010, Illinois Rule 2.4(b) requires third-party neutrals to explain to unrepresented parties “the difference between the lawyer’s role as a third-party neutral and a lawyer’s role as one who represents a client” regardless of whether the lawyer believes the unrepresented parties misunderstand the lawyer’s role.

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 2.4 is substantially the same as Model Rule 2.4.

South Carolina: Rule 2.4 adds a new subparagraph (c) that permits a lawyer to serve as a neutral only if the lawyer or law firm does not represent (and has not previously represented) any party in the matter.

Tennessee: Rule 2.4 defines the circumstances under which a lawyer may act as a “dispute resolution neutral,” the limitations on a lawyer who assumes that position, the circumstances under which the lawyer must withdraw from the position, and the lawyer’s responsibilities following withdrawal. The rule and its comment are much more extensive than Model Rule 2.4.

Virginia: Long before the ABA adopted Model Rule 2.4 in 2002, Virginia adopted its own Rule 2.10 (Third Party Neutral) and Rule 2.11 (Mediator), which provide as follows:

Virginia Rule 2.10 Third Party Neutral

(a) A third party neutral assists parties in reaching a voluntary settlement of a dispute through a structured process known as a dispute resolution proceeding. The third party neutral does not represent any party.

(b) A lawyer who serves as a third party neutral

(1) shall inform the parties of the difference between the lawyer’s role as third party neutral and the lawyer’s role as one who represents a client;

(2) shall encourage unrepresented parties to seek legal counsel before an agreement is executed; and

(3) may encourage and assist the parties in reaching a resolution of their dispute; but

(4) may not compel or coerce the parties to make an agreement.

(c) A lawyer may serve as a third party neutral only if the lawyer has not previously represented and is not currently representing one of the parties in connection with the subject matter of the dispute resolution proceeding. . . .

(g) A lawyer who serves as a third party neutral shall not charge a fee contingent on the outcome of the resolution proceeding.

(h) This Rule does not apply to joint representation, which is covered by Rule 1.7.

Virginia Rule 2.11 Mediator

(a) A lawyer-mediator is a third party neutral (see Rule 2.10) who facilitates communication between the parties and, without deciding the issues or imposing a solution on the parties, enables them to understand and resolve their dispute.

(b) Prior to agreeing to mediate and throughout the mediation process a lawyer- mediator should reasonably determine that:

(1) mediation is an appropriate process for the parties;

(2) each party is able to participate effectively within the context of the mediation process; and

(3) each party is willing to enter and participate in the process in good faith.

(c) A lawyer-mediator may offer legal information if all parties are present or separately to the parties if they consent. The lawyer-mediator shall inform unrepresented parties or those parties who are not accompanied by legal counsel about the importance of reviewing the lawyer-mediator's legal information with legal counsel.

(d) A lawyer-mediator may offer evaluation of, for example, strengths and weaknesses of positions, assess the value and cost of alternatives to settlement or assess the barriers to settlement (collectively referred to as evaluation) only if such evaluation is incidental to the facilitative role and does not interfere with the lawyer-mediator's impartiality or the self-determination of the parties. . . .

Proposed Rule 2.4.1 [RPC 1-710]
“Lawyer as Temporary Judge, Referee, or Court-Appointed Arbitrator”
(XDraft #5, 6/23/07)

Summary: Proposed Rule 2.4.1 carries forward current California Rule 1-710, which clarifies that lawyers are subject to Canon 6D of the Code of Judicial Ethics, when they act as temporary judges, etc.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☒ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☒ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rule

RPC 1-710.

Statute

Case law

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 9
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 1
Abstain/Not Voting 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Dissenting Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☐ Yes ☒ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 2.4.1* Lawyer as Temporary Judge, Referee, or Court-Appointed Arbitrator

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 2.4.1 has no ABA Model Rule counterpart. This Rule currently exists as California Rule 1-710, which clarifies that lawyers are subject to Canon 6D of the Code of Judicial Ethics when they act as temporary judges, referees, or court-appointed neutrals. The Rule also requires compliance with Canon 6D, and provides a disciplinary path for lawyers who violate the Canon.

Current Rule 1-710 originated from a Supreme Court request sent to the State Bar in 1996, following the Supreme Court's consideration of a report and recommendation of the Supreme Court Advisory Committee on Judicial Ethics, the body which drafted the CA Code of Judicial Ethics that became effective on January 15, 1996. In drafting that Code, the Advisory Committee determined that while standards could be imposed on lawyers serving as temporary judges, the Commission on Judicial Performance lacked disciplinary jurisdiction over the conduct of lawyers. Accordingly, the Supreme Court directed the State Bar to consider a new Rule of Professional Conduct that would permit the Bar to discipline lawyers who violate Canon 6D while acting in a judicial capacity. In response to the Supreme Court's request, Rule 1-710 was developed and adopted by the Board of Governors and subsequently approved by the Supreme Court.

* Proposed Rule 2.4.1, XDraft 5 (6/23/07).

No Comparable ABA Model Rule (Text provided is current California Rule 1-710)	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 2.4.1 Lawyer as Temporary Judge, Referee, or Court-Appointed Arbitrator	Explanation of Changes to the California Rule of Professional Conduct
A member who is serving as a temporary judge, referee, or court-appointed arbitrator, and is subject under the Code of Judicial Ethics to Canon 6D, shall comply with the terms of that canon.	A lawyer who is serving as a temporary judge, referee, or court-appointed arbitrator, and is subject to Canon 6D of the Code of Judicial Ethics, shall comply with the terms of that canon.	There is no ABA Model Rule counterpart to proposed Rule 2.4.1. This Rule currently appears as California Rule 1-710, and the Commission recommends that it be carried over into the new rules. The Commission recommends only a few changes be made to current rule 1-710 to conform to California rule drafting style.

* Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

No Comparable ABA Model Rule (Text provided is current California Rule 1-710)	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 2.4.1 Lawyer as Temporary Judge, Referee, or Court-Appointed Arbitrator Comment	Explanation of Changes to the California Rule of Professional Conduct
This rule is intended to permit the State Bar to discipline members who violate applicable portions of the Code of Judicial Ethics while acting in a judicial capacity pursuant to an order or appointment by a court.	[1] This Rule is intended to permit the State Bar to discipline lawyers who violate applicable portions of the Code of Judicial Ethics while acting in a judicial or quasi-judicial capacity pursuant to an order or appointment by a court.	Comment [1] is based on paragraph 1 of the Discussion to current rule 1-710. The only substantive change recommended is the expansion of the comment to make clear the rule covers lawyers acting in "quasi-judicial" capacities as well as acting as temporary judges.
Nothing in rule 1-710 shall be deemed to limit the applicability of any other rule or law. (Added by order of the Supreme Court, operative March 18, 1999.)	[2] Nothing in this Rule shall be deemed to limit the applicability of any other rule or law.	Comment [2] is based on paragraph 2 of the Discussion to current rule 1-710. The Commission recommends that it be carried over into the new rule. No substantive changes are recommended to comment [2].
	[3] This Rule is not intended to apply to a lawyer serving as a third-party neutral in a mediation or a settlement conference, or as a neutral arbitrator pursuant to an arbitration agreement. See Rule 2.4.	Comment [3] is a new comment, and has been included to cross-reference new Rule 2.4 relating to lawyers who are acting as third party neutrals.

* Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

Rule ~~1-710~~ Member 2.4.1 Lawyer as Temporary Judge, Referee, or Court-Appointed Arbitrator
(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

A ~~member~~lawyer who is serving as a temporary judge, referee, or court-appointed arbitrator, and is subject ~~under to Canon 6D of~~ the Code of Judicial Ethics ~~to Canon 6D~~, shall comply with the terms of that canon.

~~Discussion:~~COMMENT

- [1] This ~~rule~~Rule is intended to permit the State Bar to discipline ~~members~~lawyers who violate applicable portions of the Code of Judicial Ethics while acting in a judicial or quasi-judicial capacity pursuant to an order or appointment by a court.
- [2] Nothing in ~~rule 1-710~~this Rule shall be deemed to limit the applicability of any other rule or law.
~~(Added by order of the Supreme Court, operative March 18, 1999.)~~
- [3] This Rule is not intended to apply to a lawyer serving as a third-party neutral in a mediation or a settlement conference, or as a neutral arbitrator pursuant to an arbitration agreement. See Rule 2.4.

Rule 2.4.1 Lawyer as Temporary Judge, Referee, or Court-Appointed Arbitrator (Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

A lawyer who is serving as a temporary judge, referee, or court-appointed arbitrator, and is subject to Canon 6D of the Code of Judicial Ethics, shall comply with the terms of that canon.

COMMENT

- [1] This Rule is intended to permit the State Bar to discipline lawyers who violate applicable portions of the Code of Judicial Ethics while acting in a judicial or quasi-judicial capacity pursuant to an order or appointment by a court.
- [2] Nothing in this Rule shall be deemed to limit the applicability of any other rule or law.
- [3] This Rule is not intended to apply to a lawyer serving as a third-party neutral in a mediation or a settlement conference, or as a neutral arbitrator pursuant to an arbitration agreement. See Rule 2.4.

Rule 2.4.1 Lawyers as Temporary Judge, Referee, or Court-Appointed Arbitrator.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 2 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Proposed Rule 3.1 [3-200]

“Meritorious Claims and Contentions”

(XDraft #5, 10/3/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 3.1 imposes discipline on a lawyer for bringing or continuing frivolous claims, etc. It is nearly identical to Model Rule 3.1 but makes minor wording changes to insure a broader coverage for the Rule, and for clarity.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart
Rule	Comments
☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 3-200.

Statute

Case law

Zamos v. Stroud, (2004) 32 Cal.4th 958 [12 Cal.Rptr.3d 54].

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 7
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 2
Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☐ Yes ☒ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 3.1* Meritorious Claims and Contentions

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 3.1 Proposed Rule 3.1 imposes discipline on a lawyer for bringing or continuing frivolous claims, etc. It is nearly identical to Model Rule 3.1 but makes minor wording changes to insure a broader coverage for the Rule and for clarity. See Explanation of Changes for the Rule.

Variation in Other Jurisdictions. See Explanation of Changes for the Rule.

* Proposed Rule, XDraft 5 (10/3/09).

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.1 Meritorious Claims and Contentions	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.1 Meritorious Claims and Contentions	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
A lawyer shall not bring or defend a proceeding, or assert or controvert an issue therein, unless there is a basis in law and fact for doing so that is not frivolous, which includes a good faith argument for an extension, modification or reversal of existing law. A lawyer for the defendant in a criminal proceeding, or the respondent in a proceeding that could result in incarceration, may nevertheless so defend the proceeding as to require that every element of the case be established.	(a) A lawyer shall not bring, continue or defend a proceeding, or assert or controvert an issue therein, unless there is a basis in law and fact for doing so that is not frivolous, which includes a good faith argument for an extension, modification or reversal of existing law. (b) A lawyer for the defendant in a criminal proceeding, or for the respondent in a proceeding that could result in incarceration, may nevertheless so defend the proceeding as to require that every element of the case be established.	Proposed Rule 3.1 is based on Model Rule 3.1, with only minor changes to broaden the rule's scope and to provide clarity. The addition of the word "continue" in paragraph (a) is intended to ensure broad coverage in the public interest. See also Zamos v. Stroud (2004) 32 Cal.4th 958 [12 Cal.Rptr.3d 54]. The division of the Rule into two paragraphs and the addition of the word "for" in paragraph (b) is for clarity. Variation in other Jurisdictions: Most states follow the Model Rule verbatim. A number of other jurisdictions have divided the Model Rule into two paragraphs as the Commission recommends. E.g., Montana, Wisconsin, and Wyoming. One state has taken the opposite tack and reduced the two sentences of the Model Rule to a single sentence. See Oregon Rule 3.1. Wyoming adds a third paragraph that parallels the substance of FRCP 11(b), concerning the legal effect of a lawyer's signing a pleading, motion or other court document. The Commission is not aware of any other jurisdiction that has added "continue" to its rule. New Jersey has not adopted the second sentence of MR 3.1. Several states elaborate on the word "incarceration," adding or substituting such phrases as "or commitment" (North Dakota), "involuntary institutionalization" (D.C.), or "deprivation of liberty" (Wisconsin).

* Proposed Rule, Draft 5 (10/3/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.1 Meritorious Claims and Contentions Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.1 Meritorious Claims and Contentions Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] The advocate has a duty to use legal procedure for the fullest benefit of the client's cause, but also a duty not to abuse legal procedure. The law, both procedural and substantive, establishes the limits within which an advocate may proceed. However, the law is not always clear and never is static. Accordingly, in determining the proper scope of advocacy, account must be taken of the law's ambiguities and potential for change.	[1] The advocate has a duty to use legal procedure for the fullest benefit of the client's cause, but also a duty not to abuse legal procedure. The law, both procedural and substantive, establishes the limits within which an advocate may proceed. However, the law is not always clear and never is static. Accordingly, in determining the proper scope of advocacy, account must be taken of the law's ambiguities and potential for change.	Comment [1] is identical to Model Rule 3.1, cmt. [1].
[2] The filing of an action or defense or similar action taken for a client is not frivolous merely because the facts have not first been fully substantiated or because the lawyer expects to develop vital evidence only by discovery. What is required of lawyers, however, is that they inform themselves about the facts of their clients' cases and the applicable law and determine that they can make good faith arguments in support of their clients' positions. Such action is not frivolous even though the lawyer believes that the client's position ultimately will not prevail. The action is frivolous, however, if the lawyer is unable either to make a good faith argument on the merits of the action taken or to support the action taken by a good faith	[2] The filing of an action or defense or similar action taken for a client is not frivolous merely because the facts have not first been fully substantiated or because the lawyer expects to develop vital evidence only by discovery. What is required of lawyers, however, is that they inform themselves about the facts of their clients' cases and the applicable law and determine that they can make good faith arguments in support of their clients' positions. Such action is not frivolous even though the lawyer believes that the client's position ultimately will not prevail. The action is frivolous, however, if the lawyer is unable either to make a good faith argument on the merits of the action taken or to support the action taken by a good faith	Comment [2] is based on Model Rule 3.1, cmt. [3]. The added language clarifies that the Proposed Rule is consistent with the provisions of the State Bar Act and other law.

* Proposed Rule, Draft 5 (10/3/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.1 Meritorious Claims and Contentions Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.1 Meritorious Claims and Contentions Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
argument for an extension, modification or reversal of existing law.	argument for an extension, modification or reversal of existing law. This Rule also prohibits a lawyer from continuing an action after the lawyer knows that it has no basis in law or fact for doing so that is not frivolous. See Business and Professions Code sections 6068(c) and (g), Code of Civil Procedure section 128.7, and Rule 11(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.
[3] The lawyer's obligations under this Rule are subordinate to federal or state constitutional law that entitles a defendant in a criminal matter to the assistance of counsel in presenting a claim or contention that otherwise would be prohibited by this Rule.	[3] The lawyer's obligations under this Rule are subordinate to federal or state constitutional law that entitles a defendant in a criminal matter to the assistance of counsel in presenting a claim or contention that otherwise would be prohibited by this Rule.	Comment [3] is identical to Model Rule 3.1, cmt. [1].
	[4] This Rule is intended to apply to proceedings of all kinds, including appellate and writ proceedings.	Comment [4] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It reinforces the intended broad scope of this Rule.

Rule ~~3-200 Prohibited Objectives of Employment~~ 3.1 Meritorious Claims and Contentions

(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

~~A member shall not seek, accept, or continue employment if the member knows or should know that the objective of such employment is:~~

~~(A) To bring an action, conduct a defense, assert a position in litigation, or take an appeal, without probable cause and for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring any person; or~~

~~(a) (B) To present a claim~~ A lawyer shall not bring, continue or defend a proceeding, or assert or controvert an issue therein, unless there is a basis in litigation law and fact for doing so that is not warranted under existing law ~~frivolous, unless it can be supported by which includes~~ a good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of ~~such~~ existing law.

~~(b) A lawyer for the defendant in a criminal proceeding, or for the respondent in a proceeding that could result in incarceration, may nevertheless so defend the proceeding as to require that every element of the case be established.~~

Comment

[1] The advocate has a duty to use legal procedure for the fullest benefit of the client's cause but also a duty not to abuse legal procedure. The law, both procedural and substantive, establishes the limits within which an advocate may proceed. However, the law is not always clear and never is static. Accordingly, in determining the proper scope of advocacy, account must be taken of the law's ambiguities and potential for change.

[2] The filing of an action or defense or similar action taken for a client is not frivolous merely because the facts have not first been fully substantiated or because the lawyer expects to develop vital evidence only by discovery. What is required of lawyers, however, is that they inform themselves about the facts of their clients' cases and the applicable law and determine that they can make good faith arguments in support of their clients' positions. Such action is not frivolous even though the lawyer believes that the client's position ultimately will not prevail. The action is frivolous, however, if the lawyer is unable either to make a good faith argument on the merits of the action taken or to support the action taken by a good faith argument for an extension, modification or reversal of existing law. This Rule also prohibits a lawyer from continuing an action after the lawyer knows that it has no basis in law or fact for doing so that is not frivolous. See Business and Professions Code sections 6068(c) and (g), Civil Procedure Code section 128.7, and Rule 11(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

[3] The lawyer's obligations under this Rule are subordinate to federal or state constitutional law that entitles a defendant in a criminal matter to the assistance of counsel in presenting a claim or contention that otherwise would be prohibited by this Rule.

[4] This Rule applies to proceedings of all kinds, including appellate and writ proceedings.

Rule 3.1 Meritorious Claims and Contentions
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) A lawyer shall not bring, continue or defend a proceeding, or assert or controvert an issue therein, unless there is a basis in law and fact for doing so that is not frivolous, which includes a good faith argument for an extension, modification or reversal of existing law.
- (b) A lawyer for the defendant in a criminal proceeding, or for the respondent in a proceeding that could result in incarceration, may nevertheless so defend the proceeding as to require that every element of the case be established.

Comment

- [1] The advocate has a duty to use legal procedure for the fullest benefit of the client's cause but also a duty not to abuse legal procedure. The law, both procedural and substantive, establishes the limits within which an advocate may proceed. However, the law is not always clear and never is static. Accordingly, in determining the proper scope of advocacy, account must be taken of the law's ambiguities and potential for change.
- [2] The filing of an action or defense or similar action taken for a client is not frivolous merely because the facts have not first been fully substantiated or because the lawyer expects to develop vital evidence only by discovery. What is required of lawyers, however, is that they inform themselves about the facts of their clients' cases and the applicable law and determine that they can make good faith arguments in support of their clients' positions. Such action is not frivolous even though the lawyer believes that the client's position ultimately will not prevail. The action is frivolous, however, if the lawyer is unable either to make a good faith argument on the merits of the action taken or to support the action taken by a good faith argument for an extension, modification or reversal of existing law. This Rule also prohibits a lawyer from continuing an action after the lawyer knows that it has no basis in law or fact for doing so that is not frivolous. See Business and Professions Code sections 6068(c) and (g), Civil Procedure Code section 128.7, and Rule 11(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

- [3] The lawyer's obligations under this Rule are subordinate to federal or state constitutional law that entitles a defendant in a criminal matter to the assistance of counsel in presenting a claim or contention that otherwise would be prohibited by this Rule.
- [4] This Rule applies to proceedings of all kinds, including appellate and writ proceedings.

Rule 3.1 Meritorious Claims and Contentions.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Alex, Glenn C.	M	No		The Proposed Rule should be clarified as to the meaning of the term "proceeding." Rule 3.1 should be clarified to indicate the extent to which it does or does not apply to arbitrations, mediations, and non-adjudicatory hearings and other matters (awards of grants by public bodies, for example; and processes by which public agencies select contractors and enter into agreement with them). Perhaps this can be accomplished through better integration of cross-references with Proposed Rule 3.9 and Rule 4.1.	The Commission disagrees that a definition of "proceeding" is necessary in rule 3.1 or in the terminology rule. The term "proceeding" is a term of common usage and is used in other rules (e.g, Rule 3.3(d), Rule 3.5(b) Rule 3.6(a). Defining "proceeding" would be like defining "litigation," "trial" or "matter" in the rules. Lawyers are expected to understand the meaning of terms common to the practice of law such as "proceeding" in complying with the rules. (see Black's Law Dictionary). In addition, the Commission is not recommending adoption of Rule 4.1.
2	COPRAC	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
3	Office of Chief Trial Counsel ("OCTC")	M	Yes		OCTC is concerned that Proposed Rule 3.1 has narrowed what is currently contained in rule 3-200(A). It removes the prohibition on bringing an action whose purpose is to harass or maliciously injure any person. We believe that still belongs in the rules. The Comments are too long and they cover subjects and discussions best left to treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	The Commission disagrees and has made no change to this rule. Rule 3.1 tracks the Model Rule and in many ways is broader than current rule 3-200(A). Other rules, including Rule 3.4(e) and 8.4(c) and (d) would also protect against actions brought for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring any person. The Commission disagrees and believes the four comments are appropriate and useful in understanding and complying with the rule.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 3.1 Meritorious Claims and Contentions.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 1
Disagree =
Modify = 2
NI =

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				Comment [2]	While Comment [2] references Civil Procedure Code section 128.7 and Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, it, especially the first sentence, could be interpreted to be contrary to Civil Procedure Code section 128.7 and Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, which require an attorney to make an inquiry reasonable under the circumstances. The duty to make a reasonable inquiry should be stated in a clearer language. It should also be made clearer that attorneys may have a duty to even investigate their client's statements. (See Butler v. State Bar (1986) 42 Cal.3d 323, 329 ["While an attorney may often rely upon statements made by the client without further investigation, circumstances known to the attorney may require an investigation."])	The Commission does not believe that Comment [2] can be reasonably read to be contrary to CCP § 128.7 or FRCP 11. The statement that the rule requires that lawyers inform themselves about the facts of their client's case and the applicable law and determine that they can make good faith arguments in support of their clients' positions is consistent with the duty to make a reasonable inquiry. This statement which comes from Model Rule Comment [2] coupled with citations to both statutes is adequate to eliminate a reasonable interpretation to the contrary.

Rule 3.1: Meritorious Claims and Contentions

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Arizona generally tracks ABA Model Rule 3.1, but the “unless” clause in the first sentence applies if there is a “good faith” basis in law and fact, which “may include” a good faith “and nonfrivolous” argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law.

California: Rule 3-200 provides:

A member shall not seek, accept, or continue employment if the member knows or should know that the objective of such employment is:

(A) To bring an action, conduct a defense, assert a position in litigation, or take an appeal, without probable cause and for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring any person; or

(B) To present a claim or defense in litigation that is not warranted under existing law, unless it can be supported by a good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of such existing law.

Also, California Business & Professions Code §6068(c) states that an attorney has a duty to “counsel or maintain those actions, proceedings, or defenses only as appear to him or her legal or just, except the defense of a person charged with a public offense.” In addition, California Civil Code §§128.5, 128.6, and 128.7 provide sanctions for bad faith lawsuits and for frivolous litigation tactics.

Colorado: Rule 1.2(c) permits a lawyer to “provide limited representation to pro se parties . . . ,” but Rule 11(b) of the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure provides as follows:

Limited Representation

. . . Pleadings or papers filed by the pro se party that were prepared with the drafting assistance of the attorney shall include the attorney’s name, address, telephone number and registration number. . . . The attorney in providing such drafting assistance may rely on the pro se party’s representation of facts, unless the attorney has reason to believe that such representations are false or materially insufficient, in which instance the attorney shall make an independent reasonable inquiry into the facts. . . .

Merely “helping to draft the pleading or paper filed by the pro se party” constitutes a certification by the attorney that the pro se client’s document is “(1) well-grounded in fact based upon a reasonable inquiry of the pro se party by the attorney . . . and (3) is not interposed for any improper purpose, such as to harass or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation.”

District of Columbia: The second sentence of Rule 3.1 provides that a lawyer for the defendant in a criminal proceeding, or for the respondent in a proceeding that could result in “involuntary institutionalization, shall, if the client elects to go to trial or to a contested factfinding hearing, nevertheless so defend the proceeding as to require that the government carry its burden of proof.”

Georgia rejects ABA Model Rule 3.1 and instead retains the language of DR 7-102(A)(1) and (A)(2) from the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility.

New Jersey adds the phrase “the lawyer knows or reasonably believes” after “unless” in the first sentence and adds “or the establishment of new law” at the end of the first sentence.

New Mexico creates a Rule 3.0 (Rule 16-300), which specifies as follows:

In the course of any judicial or quasi-judicial proceeding before a tribunal, a lawyer shall refrain from intentionally manifesting, by words or conduct, bias or prejudice based on race, gender, religion, national origin, disability, age or sexual orientation against the judge, court personnel, parties, witnesses, counsel or others. This rule does not preclude legitimate advocacy when race, gender, religion, national origin, disability, age or sexual orientation is material to the issues in the proceeding.

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, New York adds Rule 3.1(b), which has no Model Rule equivalent. It defines conduct as “frivolous” if “(1) the lawyer knowingly advances a claim or defense that is unwarranted under existing law, except that the lawyer may advance such claim or defense if it can be supported by good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law; (2) the conduct has no reasonable purpose other than to delay or prolong the resolution of litigation, in violation of Rule 3.2, or serves merely to harass or maliciously injure another; or (3) the lawyer knowingly asserts material factual statements that are false.”

Proposed Rule 3.3 [5-200]

“Candor Toward the Tribunal”

(XDraft #12.1, 6/30/10)

Summary: Proposed Rule 3.3, which is based on Model Rule 3.3, sets forth specific duties of a lawyer in representing a client in a matter before a tribunal. The Rule replaces current Rule 5-200 (Trial Conduct), which is narrower in scope than Model Rule 3.3. The Rule imposes on lawyers the same duties as the Model Rule to avoid conduct that undermines the integrity of the adjudicative process, with several significant differences. See Introduction & Explanation of Changes.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule

Comment

- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☒ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 5-200

Statute

Case law

Batt v. City and County of San Francisco (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 65, 82 n.9.

- ☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

- ☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 9

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 2

Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Commission Minority Position, Known Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

Minority Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☒ Yes ☐ No
(See the introduction in the Model Rule comparison chart.)

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

The Rule imports into the disciplinary rules several duties that are not expressed in current rule 5-200, but which are established in case law. In its public comment, OCTC objected to perceived changes in the standard set by current rule 5-200. Also, a comment from ethics law professors objected to the deviation from the Model Rule in paragraph (c).

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 3.3* Candor to the Tribunal

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 3.3 sets forth specific duties of a lawyer in representing a client in a matter before a tribunal. The proposed Rule, which is based on Model Rule 3.3, replaces current Rule 5-200 (Trial Conduct), which is less precise and narrower in scope than Model Rule 3.3. The proposed Rule sets forth substantially the same special duties of lawyers, as officers of the court and legal system, to avoid conduct that undermines the integrity of the adjudicative process, as the Model Rule with several significant differences. Those differences between proposed Rule 3.3 and the Model Rule relate primarily to California's policy of strictly limiting disclosures of confidential client information. See, e.g., Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (a)(3), (b) and (c). Other significant departures from the Model Rule include a change to paragraph (c), which sets forth the duration of the lawyer's duties under this Rule. The Model Rule extends the lawyer's duties through the conclusion of the proceeding. The Commission instead recommends that the duties "continue to the conclusion of the proceeding or the representation, whichever comes first." Other changes in the comments include a more detailed discussion of a lawyer's obligations to cite legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction, (Comment [4]), a discussion of California authority governing a lawyer's conduct when representing a criminal defendant who chooses to testify (Comment [7]), and consideration of the more limited remedial measures available in light of California's confidentiality duty (Comments [9]-[11].)

* Proposed Rule 3.3, XDraft 12.1 (6/30/10).

Minority. A minority of the Commission believes that, aside from the changes made to the Model Rule to conform the proposed Rule to California's policy of strictly limiting disclosures of confidential information and certain other clarifying changes, most of the revisions to the Model Rule that the Commission is recommending are unwarranted. In particular, the minority takes the position that the change the Commission has implemented to paragraph (c) concerning the duration of the duties under this Rule runs counter to prevailing authority in every other jurisdiction and threatens to undermine the integrity of the judicial process. See Minority Statement in Explanation of Changes for paragraph (c). See also Explanation of Changes for Comment [6].

A separate minority takes issue with subparagraph (a)(2). See Explanation of Changes for subparagraph (a)(2).

Variations in Other Jurisdictions. Every jurisdiction has adopted a version of Model Rule 3.3. See Selected State Variations excerpt, below.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) A lawyer shall not knowingly: (1) make a false statement of fact or law to a tribunal or fail to correct a false statement of material fact or law previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer;	(a) A lawyer shall not knowingly: (1) make a false statement of fact or law to a tribunal or fail to correct a false statement of material fact or law previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer;	Subparagraph (a)(1) is identical to Model Rule (a)(1).
(2) fail to disclose to the tribunal legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction known to the lawyer to be directly adverse to the position of the client and not disclosed by opposing counsel; or	(2) fail to disclose to the tribunal legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction known to the lawyer to be directly adverse to the position of the client and not disclosed by opposing counsel; or	Subparagraph (a)(2) is identical to Model Rule (a)(2). The Commission determined that the Model Rule comports with California law. See, e.g., Batt v. City and County of San Francisco, 155 Cal.App.4th 65, 82n. 9 (2007). However, see Comment [4], which notes that this requirement might implicate constitutional concerns when a lawyer is engaged in the defense of a criminal defendant. Minority. A minority view is that the requirement to disclose adverse authority that is not disclosed by opposing counsel where opposing counsel is present is contrary to California law, citing, Schaefer v. State Bar, 26 Cal.2d 739, 747-748 (1945).
(3) offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false. If a lawyer, the lawyer's client, or a witness called by the lawyer, has offered material evidence and the lawyer comes to know of its falsity, the lawyer shall take reasonable remedial measures, including, if necessary,	(3) offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false. If a lawyer, the lawyer's client, or a witness called by the lawyer, has offered material evidence, and the lawyer comes to know of its falsity, the lawyer shall take reasonable remedial measures, including, if necessary, disclosure to the	Subparagraph (a)(3) is similar to Model Rule 3.3(a)(3) except that it does not require disclosure of the false evidence to the tribunal if the disclosure is prohibited by Business and Professions Code § 6068(e). The paragraph reflects the rule in California that a lawyer's duty of candor to a tribunal is circumscribed by the lawyer's duty under section 6068(e) to preserve client confidential information.

* Proposed Rule 3.3, XDraft 12.1 (6/30/10); Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
disclosure to the tribunal. A lawyer may refuse to offer evidence, other than the testimony of a defendant in a criminal matter, that the lawyer reasonably believes is false.	tribunal, unless disclosure is prohibited by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e). A lawyer may refuse to offer evidence, other than the testimony of a defendant in a criminal matter, that the lawyer reasonably believes is false.
(b) A lawyer who represents a client in an adjudicative proceeding and who knows that a person intends to engage, is engaging or has engaged in criminal or fraudulent conduct related to the proceeding shall take reasonable remedial measures, including, if necessary, disclosure to the tribunal.	(b) A lawyer who represents a client in an adjudicative proceeding and who knows that a person intends to engage, is engaging or has engaged in criminal or fraudulent conduct related to the proceeding shall take reasonable remedial measures, ~~including, if necessary, disclosure to the tribunal~~extent permitted by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e).	Paragraph (b) imposes a special obligation on lawyers to protect a tribunal against criminal or fraudulent conduct that undermines the integrity of the adjudicative process. See Comment [12]. Paragraph (b) follows Model Rule 3.3(b), except it substitutes the clause, "to the extent permitted by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e)" for the phrase "if necessary, disclosure to the Tribunal" at the end of the paragraph. See the Explanation of Changes to paragraph (a)(3).
(c) The duties stated in paragraphs (a) and (b) continue to the conclusion of the proceeding, and apply even if compliance requires disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.	(c) The duties stated in paragraphs (a) and (b) continue to the conclusion of the proceeding or the representation, whichever comes first ~~and apply even if compliance requires disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.~~	Paragraph (c) is a significant departure from Model Rule 3.3(c) in two respects. First, unlike the Model Rule that imposes an obligation through the conclusion of the proceeding, paragraph (c) provides that the obligations set forth in paragraphs (a) and (b) should end either with the termination of the representation or the conclusion of the proceeding. The Commission determined that the lawyer lacks standing after termination of the lawyer's employment and that the lawyer should not have a duty to be involved in a time-consuming controversy after the lawyer has been discharged which could abrogate the lawyer's loyalty to a former client.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		Second, paragraph (c) deletes the clause “and apply even if compliance requires disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.” See the Explanation of Changes to paragraph (a)(3). Minority. A minority of the Commission opposes the first departure from the Model Rule for a number of reasons: (1) a lawyer who has been terminated or has withdrawn does not lack standing to correct the lawyer's false statement of material law or fact under paragraph (a); (2) the lawyer would not interfere with the relationship between the former client and the client's new lawyer by advising the new lawyer of relevant facts including the existence of criminal or fraudulent conduct in the proceeding or urging that corrective action be taken (see Comment [10]); (3) the lawyer may only take remedial measures under paragraph (a)(3) and (b) to the extent permitted under Business and Professions Code §6068(e); (4) the proposal would allow lawyers to circumvent paragraphs (a) and (b) by simply withdrawing from the representation; and (5) no known state variation limits paragraph 3.3(c) as proposed.
(d) In an ex parte proceeding, a lawyer shall inform the tribunal of all material facts known to the lawyer that will enable the tribunal to make an informed decision, whether or not the facts are adverse.	(d) In an ex parte proceeding, a lawyer shall inform the tribunal of all material facts known to the lawyer that will enable the tribunal to make an informed decision, whether or not the facts are adverse.	Following consideration of public comment, the Commission revised paragraph (d) to be identical to the ABA counterpart, in part, because using the Model Rule language will foster consistency in regulating lawyer conduct. As distributed for public, the prior language, among other changes, diverged from the Model Rule language by deleting the term “material.”

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] This Rule governs the conduct of a lawyer who is representing a client in the proceedings of a tribunal. See Rule 1.0(m) for the definition of "tribunal." It also applies when the lawyer is representing a client in an ancillary proceeding conducted pursuant to the tribunal's adjudicative authority, such as a deposition. Thus, for example, paragraph (a)(3) requires a lawyer to take reasonable remedial measures if the lawyer comes to know that a client who is testifying in a deposition has offered evidence that is false.	[1] This Rule governs the conduct of a lawyer who is representing a client in the proceedings of a tribunal. See Rule ~~1-01.0.1~~ 1.0.1(m) for the definition of "tribunal." It also applies when the lawyer is representing a client in an ancillary proceeding conducted pursuant to the tribunal's adjudicative authority, such as a deposition. Thus, for example, paragraph (a)(3) requires a lawyer to take reasonable remedial measures if the lawyer comes to know that a client who is testifying in a deposition has offered evidence that is false.	Comment [1] is identical to the Model Rule counterpart, except that the reference for the definition of tribunal is to Rule 1.0.1, which is the number assigned to the Terminology section in the Proposed Rules.
[2] This Rule sets forth the special duties of lawyers as officers of the court to avoid conduct that undermines the integrity of the adjudicative process. A lawyer acting as an advocate in an adjudicative proceeding has an obligation to present the client's case with persuasive force. Performance of that duty while maintaining confidences of the client, however, is qualified by the advocate's duty of candor to the tribunal. Consequently, although a lawyer in an adversary proceeding is not required to present an impartial exposition of the law or to vouch for the evidence submitted in a cause;, the lawyer must not allow the tribunal to be misled by false statements of law or fact or evidence that the lawyer knows to be false.	[2] This Rule sets forth the special duties of lawyers as officers of the court to avoid conduct that undermines the integrity of the adjudicative process. A lawyer acting as an advocate in an adjudicative proceeding has an obligation to present the client's case with persuasive force. ~~Performance of that duty while maintaining confidences of the client, however, is qualified by the advocate's duty of candor to the tribunal. Consequently~~ However, although a lawyer in an adversary proceeding is not required to present an impartial exposition of the law or to vouch for the evidence submitted in a cause;, the lawyer must not ~~allow the tribunal to be misled by~~ make false statements of law or fact or present evidence that the lawyer knows to be false. For example, the prohibition in paragraph (a)(1) against making false statements of law or failing to correct a material	The first two sentences in Comment [2] are identical to the Model Rule counterpart. The third sentence in Model Rule Comment [2] is deleted because the lawyer's duty of confidentiality under Business and Professions Code § 6068(e) is not qualified by the lawyer's duty of candor to the tribunal. The next-to-last sentence is the same as the ABA counterpart, except for several grammatical changes and to clarify that the lawyer's obligation is to not make false statements of law or fact or present evidence the lawyer knows to be false rather than ensuring that the tribunal will not be misled. The last sentence has no counterpart in the Model Rule and is a revision of current California rule 5-200(D), which

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	misstatement of law includes a prohibition on a lawyer citing as authority a decision that has been overruled or a statute that has been repealed or declared unconstitutional, or failing to correct such a citation previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer.	prohibits the citation to invalid authority. The Commission determined that adding the substance of current rule 5-200(D), which is more specific than proposed paragraph (a)(1), would provide guidance on the kinds of conduct that paragraph (a)(1) covers. As provided in paragraph (a)(1), the sentence also clarifies that a lawyer is also required to correct an invalid citation previously made to the tribunal.
Representations by a Lawyer [3] An advocate is responsible for pleadings and other documents prepared for litigation, but is usually not required to have personal knowledge of matters asserted therein, for litigation documents ordinarily present assertions by the client, or by someone on the client's behalf, and not assertions by the lawyer. Compare Rule 3.1. However, an assertion purporting to be on the lawyer's own knowledge, as in an affidavit by the lawyer or in a statement in open court, may properly be made only when the lawyer knows the assertion is true or believes it to be true on the basis of a reasonably diligent inquiry. There are circumstances where failure to make a disclosure is the equivalent of an affirmative misrepresentation. The obligation prescribed in Rule 1.2(d) not to counsel a client to commit or assist the client in committing a fraud applies in litigation. Regarding compliance with Rule 1.2(d), see the Comment to that Rule. See also the Comment to Rule 8.4(b).	Representations by a Lawyer [3] ~~An advocate~~A lawyer is responsible for pleadings and other documents prepared for litigation, but is usually not required to have personal knowledge of ~~matters~~the facts asserted therein, ~~for~~because litigation documents ordinarily present assertions of fact by the client, or ~~by someone on the client's behalf~~a witness, and not ~~assertions~~ by the lawyer. Compare Rule 3.1. However, an assertion of fact purporting to be based on the lawyer's own knowledge, as in a declaration or an affidavit by the lawyer or in a statement in open court, may properly be made only when the lawyer knows the assertion is true or believes it to be true on the basis of a reasonably diligent inquiry. Bryan v. Bank of America (2001) 86 Cal.App.4th 185 [103 Cal.Rptr.2d 148]. There are circumstances where failure to make a disclosure is the equivalent of an affirmative misrepresentation. Di Sabatino v. State Bar (1980) 27 Cal.3d 159 [162 Cal.Rptr. 458]. The obligation prescribed in Rule 1.2(d) not to counsel a client to commit or assist the client in committing a fraud	The first sentence in Comment [3] is similar to the ABA counterpart, except that "lawyer" is substituted for "advocate," since "advocate" is not the defined term in the rules. The sentence includes several grammatical changes to make the sentence more clear without changing its substance. The second, third, fourth and fifth sentences are similar to Model Rule Comment [3], except for several grammatical changes and the inclusion of a lawyer's declaration in addition to an affidavit. Citations to two applicable cases have been added.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule applies in litigation. Regarding compliance with Rule 1.2(d), see the Comment to that Rule. See also the Comment to Rule 8.4(b).
Legal Argument [4] Legal argument based on a knowingly false representation of law constitutes dishonesty toward the tribunal. A lawyer is not required to make a disinterested exposition of the law, but must recognize the existence of pertinent legal authorities. Furthermore, as stated in paragraph (a)(2), an advocate has a duty to disclose directly adverse authority in the controlling jurisdiction that has not been disclosed by the opposing party. The underlying concept is that legal argument is a discussion seeking to determine the legal premises properly applicable to the case.	Legal Argument [4] ~~Legal argument based on~~Although a knowingly false representation of law constitutes dishonesty toward the tribunal. A lawyer is not required to make a disinterested exposition of the law, but must recognize the existence of pertinent legal authoritiesargument based on a knowing false representation of law constitutes dishonesty toward the tribunal. Furthermore, as stated in paragraph A tribunal that is fully informed on the applicable law is better able to make a fair and accurate determination of the matter before it. Paragraph (a)(2), an advocate has requires a dutylawyer to disclose directly adverse and legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction that is known to the lawyer and that has not been disclosed by the opposing party. The underlying concept is that legal argument is a discussion seeking to determine Legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction may include legal premises properly applicableauthority outside the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits, such as a federal statute or case that is determinative of an issue in a state court proceeding or a Supreme Court decision that is binding on a lower court. Under this Rule, the lawyer must disclose authorities the court needs to be aware of in order to rule intelligently on the matter. Paragraph (a)(2) does not impose on	The first sentence of Comment [4] is derived from the first sentence in Comment [4] of the comments to the New York Rules of Professional Conduct. The sentence, in effect, reverses the first and second sentences in the Model Rule comment without changing the meaning. The second sentence is new and helps explain the reason for the obligation to disclose applicable law. The third sentence largely tracks its Model Rule counterpart, except that it substitutes “lawyer” for “advocate,” and adds the requirement that the legal authority be known to the lawyer. The fourth and fifth sentences provide guidance on what constitutes “legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction.” The sixth sentence is new and was added in response to public comments that raised concerns that imposing on a criminal defense lawyer the obligations of subparagraph (a)(2) might implicate constitutional principles of due process and effective assistance of counsel. The final sentence is new and provides guidance concerning the lawyer’s obligations under paragraph (a)(4) of the Rule, a provision that has no counterpart in the Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	lawyers a general duty to cite authority from outside the jurisdiction in which the tribunal is located. Whether a criminal defense lawyer is required to disclose directly adverse legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction involves constitutional principles that are beyond the scope of these Rules. In addition, a lawyer may not knowingly edit and submit to a tribunal language from a book, statute, rule, or decision in such a way as to mislead the court, or knowingly fail to correct an inadvertent material misquotation that the lawyer previously made to the case tribunal.
Offering Evidence [5] Paragraph (a)(3) requires that the lawyer refuse to offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false, regardless of the client's wishes. This duty is premised on the lawyer's obligation as an officer of the court to prevent the trier of fact from being misled by false evidence. A lawyer does not violate this Rule if the lawyer offers the evidence for the purpose of establishing its falsity.	Offering Evidence [5] Paragraph (a)(3) requires that the lawyer refuse to offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false, regardless of the client's wishes. ~~This duty is premised on the lawyer's obligation as an officer of the court to prevent the trier of fact from being misled by false evidence.~~ A lawyer does not violate this Rule if the lawyer offers the evidence for the purpose of establishing its falsity.	The first sentence in Comment [5] is identical to the Model Rule counterpart. The second sentence in the Model Rule Comment has been deleted. The final sentence in Comment [5] is identical to the Model Rule counterpart.
[6] If a lawyer knows that the client intends to testify falsely or wants the lawyer to introduce false evidence, the lawyer should seek to persuade the client that the evidence should not be offered. If the persuasion is ineffective and the lawyer continues to represent the client, the lawyer must refuse to offer	[6] If a lawyer knows that the client intends to testify falsely or wants the lawyer to introduce false evidence, the lawyer should seek to persuade the client that the evidence should not be offered. If the persuasion is ineffective and the lawyer continues to represent the client, the lawyer must refuse to offer	The first and second sentences in Comment [6] are identical to the Model Rule counterpart. The third sentence has been added to point the reader to Comment [7], which provides relates to a lawyer's duties concerning testimony by a criminal defendant.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
the false evidence. If only a portion of a witness's testimony will be false, the lawyer may call the witness to testify but may not elicit or otherwise permit the witness to present the testimony that the lawyer knows is false.	the false evidence. With respect to criminal defendants, see Comment [7]. If only a portion of a witness's testimony will be false, the lawyer may call the witness to testify but may not elicit ~~or otherwise permit the witness to present~~ the testimony that the lawyer knows is false or base arguments to the trier of fact on evidence known to be false.	The fourth sentence diverges from its Model Rule counterpart in two respects. First, it provides additional guidance that a lawyer may not base arguments to the trier of fact on the evidence known to be false. Second, the clause, "or otherwise permit the witness to present testimony that the lawyer knows to be false," has been stricken. The Commission believes that clause lays a trap for the unwary lawyer who might call a friendly witness who unexpectedly testifies falsely. Because the lawyer was not offering the evidence for the purpose of establishing its falsity, see Comment [5], or was in a position to "prevent" or not "otherwise permit" the evidence because of its unexpectedness, the lawyer could be subject to discipline merely by having called the witness. Minority. A minority of the Commission disagrees. The minority takes the position that reading the subject clause in conjunction with Comment [5] (not a violation if offered to establish its falsity) and Comment [9] (concerning remedial measures available) assuages the concerns of the Commission and public commenters.
[7] The duties stated in paragraphs (a) and (b) apply to all lawyers, including defense counsel in criminal cases. In some jurisdictions, however, courts have required counsel to present the accused as a witness or to give a narrative statement if the accused so desires, even if counsel knows that the testimony or statement will be false. The obligation of the advocate under the Rules of Professional Conduct is subordinate to such requirements. See	[7] The duties stated in paragraphs (a) and (b) apply to all lawyers, including defense counsel in criminal cases. ~~In some jurisdictions, however, courts have required counsel to present the accused as a witness or to give a narrative statement if~~ criminal defendant insists on testifying, and the accused so desires, even if counsel ~~lawyer~~ knows that the testimony ~~or statement~~ will be false, the lawyer may offer the testimony in a narrative form if the lawyer	The first sentence in Comment [7] is identical to the Model Rule counterpart. The second sentence in the Model Rule Comment has been replaced because California and Ninth Circuit law permits defense counsel to ask a criminal defendant client to testify in the "narrative" fashion as explained in the second sentence and in the cases cited in the proposed comment.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
also Comment [9].	made reasonable efforts to dissuade the client from the unlawful course of conduct and the lawyer has sought permission from the court to withdraw as required by Rule 1.16. Business and Professions Code section 6068(d); People v. Guzman (1988) 45 Cal.3d 915 [248 Cal.Rptr. 467], disapproved on other grounds in Price v. Superior Court (2001) 25 Cal.4th 1046, 1069 fn.13 [108 Cal.Rptr.2d 409]; People v. Johnson (1998) 62 Cal.App.4th 608 [72 Cal.Rptr.2d 805]; People v. Jennings (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 899 [83 Cal.Rptr.2d 33]; People v. Brown (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 1335, 1340 [250 Cal.Rptr. 762]. The ~~obligation~~obligations of ~~the advocate~~a lawyer under ~~the~~these Rules ~~of Professional Conduct is~~and the State Bar Act are subordinate to ~~such requirements. See also Comment [9]~~applicable constitutional provisions.	The third sentence adds a reference to the State Bar Act, which also regulates a lawyer's conduct before tribunals. The reference to Comment [9] has been deleted because the Commission recommends deletion of Model Rule 3.3, cmt. [9].
[8] The prohibition against offering false evidence only applies if the lawyer knows that the evidence is false. A lawyer's reasonable belief that evidence is false does not preclude its presentation to the trier of fact. A lawyer's knowledge that evidence is false, however, can be inferred from the circumstances. See Rule 1.0(f). Thus, although a lawyer should resolve doubts about the veracity of testimony or other evidence in favor of the client, the lawyer cannot ignore an obvious falsehood.	[8] The prohibition against offering false evidence only applies if the lawyer knows that the evidence is false. A lawyer's reasonable belief that evidence is false does not preclude its presentation to the trier of fact. See, e.g., People v. Bolton (2008) 166 Cal.App.4th 343, [82 Cal.Rptr.3d 671]. A lawyer's knowledge that evidence is false, however, can be inferred from the circumstances. See Rule ~~1.0~~1.0.1(f). Thus, although a lawyer should resolve doubts about the veracity of testimony or other evidence in favor of the client, the lawyer cannot ignore an obvious falsehood.	Comment [8] is identical to the Model Rule counterpart, except that a citation to an important California case on the concept discussed has been added and the cross-reference changed to "1.0(f)" changed to "1.0.1(f)," Proposed Rule 1.0.1 ("Terminology" is the counterpart to Model Rule 1.0.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[9] Although paragraph (a)(3) only prohibits a lawyer from offering evidence the lawyer knows to be false, it permits the lawyer to refuse to offer testimony or other proof that the lawyer reasonably believes is false. Offering such proof may reflect adversely on the lawyer's ability to discriminate in the quality of evidence and thus impair the lawyer's effectiveness as an advocate. Because of the special protections historically provided criminal defendants, however, this Rule does not permit a lawyer to refuse to offer the testimony of such a client where the lawyer reasonably believes but does not know that the testimony will be false. Unless the lawyer knows the testimony will be false, the lawyer must honor the client's decision to testify. See also Comment [7].	~~[9] Although paragraph (a)(3) only prohibits a lawyer from offering evidence the lawyer knows to be false, it permits the lawyer to refuse to offer testimony or other proof that the lawyer reasonably believes is false. Offering such proof may reflect adversely on the lawyer's ability to discriminate in the quality of evidence and thus impair the lawyer's effectiveness as an advocate. Because of the special protections historically provided criminal defendants, however, this Rule does not permit a lawyer to refuse to offer the testimony of such a client where the lawyer reasonably believes but does not know that the testimony will be false. Unless the lawyer knows the testimony will be false, the lawyer must honor the client's decision to testify. See also Comment [7].~~	Model Rule Comment [9] has been deleted because it does not provide useful guidance and is not consistent with current California law.
Remedial Measures [10] Having offered material evidence in the belief that it was true, a lawyer may subsequently come to know that the evidence is false. Or, a lawyer may be surprised when the lawyer's client, or another witness called by the lawyer, offers testimony the lawyer knows to be false, either during the lawyer's direct examination or in response to cross-examination by the opposing lawyer. In such situations or if the lawyer knows of the falsity of testimony elicited from the client during a deposition, the lawyer must take reasonable remedial measures. In such situations, the advocate's proper course is to remonstrate with the	Remedial Measures ~~[10]~~ Having offered material evidence in the belief that it was true, a lawyer may subsequently come to know that the evidence is false. Or, a lawyer may be surprised when the lawyer's client, or another witness called by the lawyer, offers testimony the lawyer knows to be false, either during the lawyer's direct examination or in response to cross-examination by the opposing lawyer. In such situations or if the lawyer knows of the falsity of testimony elicited from the client during a deposition, the lawyer must take reasonable remedial measures. ~~In such situations, the advocate's~~ The lawyer's proper course is to	The first sentence in Comment [9] is identical to the first sentence in Model Rule Comment [10]. The second sentence is identical to its Model Rule counterpart. The third sentence is identical to the third sentence in Model Rule Comment [10]. The fourth sentence is derived from the fourth sentence in Model Rule Comment [10]. The proposed Comment replaces "advocate's" with "lawyer's", since advocate is not a defined client confidentially, advise the client of the lawyer's duty of candor to the tribunal and seek the client's cooperation with respect to the withdrawal or correction of the false statements or evidence. If that fails, the advocate must take further remedial action. If withdrawal from the representation is not permitted or will not undo the effect of the false evidence, the advocate must make such disclosure to the tribunal as is reasonably necessary to remedy the situation, even if doing so requires the lawyer to reveal information that otherwise would be protected by Rule 1.6. It is for the court tribunal then to determine what should be done — making a statement about the matter to the trier of fact, ordering a mistrial or perhaps nothing.	remonstrate with the client confidentially, advise the client of the consequences of providing perjured testimony and of the lawyer's duty of candor to the tribunal, and seek the client's cooperation with respect to the withdrawal or correction of the false statements or evidence. If that fails, the ~~advocate~~lawyer must take further remedial ~~action. If withdrawal from measures, see Comment [10], and may be required to seek permission to withdraw under Rule 1.16(b), depending on the~~ representation is not permitted or will not undo the effectmateriality of the false evidence, ~~the advocate must make such disclosure to the tribunal as is reasonably necessary to remedy the situation, even if doing so requires the lawyer to reveal information that otherwise would be protected by Rule 1.6. It is for the court tribunal then to determine what should be done — making a statement about the matter to the trier of fact, ordering a mistrial or perhaps nothing.~~	term in the rules and expands on the remedial measures to be taken to include advising the client of the consequences of providing perjured testimony. The fifth sentence combines the fourth and fifth sentences in Model Rule Comment [10]. It changes “advocate” to “lawyer” and clarifies that remedial measures may require seeking permission to withdraw depending on the materiality of the false evidence. The sentence departs from the ABA counterpart which obligates a lawyer to reveal information that would otherwise be protected by the lawyer's duty of confidentiality. Thus, the fifth and sixth sentences of the Model Rule Comment have been substantially revised.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[11] The disclosure of a client's false testimony can result in grave consequences to the client, including not only a sense of betrayal but also loss of the case and perhaps a prosecution for perjury. But the alternative is that the lawyer cooperate in deceiving the court, thereby subverting the truth-finding process which the adversary system is designed to implement. See Rule 1.2(d). Furthermore, unless it is clearly understood that the lawyer will act upon the duty to disclose the existence of false evidence, the client can simply reject the lawyer's advice to reveal the false	~~[11] The disclosure of a client's false testimony can result in grave consequences to the client, including not only a sense of betrayal but also loss of the case and perhaps a prosecution for perjury. But the alternative is that the lawyer cooperate in deceiving the court, thereby subverting the truth-finding process which the adversary system is designed to implement. See Rule 1.2(d). Furthermore, unless it is clearly understood that the lawyer will act upon the duty to disclose the existence of false evidence, the client can simply reject the lawyer's advice to reveal the false~~	Model Rule Comment [11] is not included because the State Bar Act and California case law obligate a lawyer to protect the client's confidential information, which duty is not superseded by the lawyer's obligation of candor toward a tribunal. See Business and Professions Code § 6068(e).

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
evidence and insist that the lawyer keep silent. Thus the client could in effect coerce the lawyer into being a party to fraud on the court.	~~evidence and insist that the lawyer keep silent. Thus the client could in effect coerce the lawyer into being a party to fraud on the court.~~
	[10] Reasonable remedial measures under paragraphs (a)(3) and (b) refer to measures that are available under these Rules and the State Bar Act, and which a reasonable lawyer would consider appropriate under the circumstances to comply with the lawyer's duty of candor to the tribunal. See e.g., Rules 1.2(d), 1.4, 1.16 and 8.4; Business and Professions Code sections 6068(d) and 6128. Remedial measures also include explaining to the client the lawyer's obligations under this Rule and, where applicable, the reasons for lawyer's decision to seek permission from the tribunal to withdraw, and remonstrating further with the client to take corrective action that would eliminate the need for the lawyer to withdraw. If the client is an organization, the lawyer should also consider the provisions of Rule 1.13. Remedial measures do not include disclosure of client confidential information, which the lawyer is required to maintain inviolate under Business and Professions Code section 6068(e).	Comment [10] has no Model Rule counterpart and is intended to provide guidance on what constitutes "reasonable remedial measures" under paragraphs (a)(3) and (b).
	[11] A lawyer's duty to take reasonable remedial measures under paragraph (a)(3) is limited to the proceeding in which the lawyer has offered the evidence in question. A lawyer's duty to take remedial measures under paragraph (b) does not	Comment [11] has no Model Rule counterpart and is intended to clarify that the obligation to take "reasonable remedial measures" under paragraph (a)(3) is limited to the proceeding in which the lawyer has offered the evidence in question and that the duty to take remedial measures under paragraph (b)

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	apply to another lawyer who is retained to represent a person in an investigation or proceeding concerning that person's conduct in the prior proceeding.	does not apply to another lawyer who is retained to investigate or represent a person concerning that person's conduct in the prior proceeding.
Preserving Integrity of Adjudicative Process [12] Lawyers have a special obligation to protect a tribunal against criminal or fraudulent conduct that undermines the integrity of the adjudicative process, such as bribing, intimidating or otherwise unlawfully communicating with a witness, juror, court official or other participant in the proceeding, unlawfully destroying or concealing documents or other evidence or failing to disclose information to the tribunal when required by law to do so. Thus, paragraph (b) requires a lawyer to take reasonable remedial measures, including disclosure if necessary, whenever the lawyer knows that a person, including the lawyer's client, intends to engage, is engaging or has engaged in criminal or fraudulent conduct related to the proceeding.	Preserving Integrity of Adjudicative Process [12] Lawyers have a special obligation to protect a tribunal against criminal or fraudulent conduct that undermines the integrity of the adjudicative process, such as bribing, intimidating or otherwise unlawfully communicating with a witness, juror, court official or other participant in the proceeding, unlawfully destroying or concealing documents or other evidence relating to the proceeding or failing to disclose information to the tribunal when required by law to do so. See Rule 3.4. Thus, paragraph (b) requires a lawyer to take reasonable remedial measures, ~~including disclosure if necessary,~~ whenever the lawyer knows that a person, including the lawyer's client, intends to engage, is engaging or has engaged in criminal or fraudulent conduct related to the proceeding.	Comment [12] is identical to its Model Rule counterpart, except that it clarifies that "other evidence" referred to in the comment is evidence relating to the proceeding. It adds a cross-reference to Rule 3.4. The Comment deletes the phrase "including disclosure if necessary" for the reasons explained in the changes to paragraphs (a)(3) and (b).
Duration of Obligation [13] A practical time limit on the obligation to rectify false evidence or false statements of law and fact has to be established. The conclusion of the proceeding is a reasonably definite point for the termination of the obligation. A proceeding has concluded within the	Duration of Obligation [13] A Paragraph (c) establishes a practical time limit on the obligation to rectify false evidence or false statements of law and fact ~~has to be established. The~~ Either the conclusion of the proceeding is or of the representation provides a reasonably definite point for	The first sentence in Comment [13] derives from the Model Rule counterpart and no material change is intended. The second sentence conforms the Model Rule comment to the changes recommended for paragraph (c). It also departs meaning of this Rule when a final judgment in the proceeding has been affirmed on appeal or the time for review has passed.	the termination of the ~~obligation~~mandatory obligations under this Rule. A proceeding has concluded within the meaning of this Rule when a final judgment in the proceeding has been affirmed on appeal or the time for review has passed. There may be obligations that go beyond this Rule. See, e.g., Rule 3.8.	from the Model Rule by referring to “mandatory” obligations under the rule. The third sentence is identical to the Model Rule. A fourth sentence has been added to clarify that there may be obligations that go beyond the rule, citing, for example, Rule 3.8 on duties of prosecutors.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Ex Parte Proceedings [14] Ordinarily, an advocate has the limited responsibility of presenting one side of the matters that a tribunal should consider in reaching a decision; the conflicting position is expected to be presented by the opposing party. However, in any ex parte proceeding, such as an application for a temporary restraining order, there is no balance of presentation by opposing advocates. The object of an ex parte proceeding is nevertheless to yield a substantially just result. The judge has an affirmative responsibility to accord the absent party just consideration. The lawyer for the represented party has the correlative duty to make disclosures of material facts known to the lawyer and that the lawyer reasonably believes are necessary to an informed decision.	Ex Parte Proceedings ~~[14] — Ordinarily, an advocate has the limited responsibility of presenting one side of the matters that a tribunal should consider in reaching a decision; the conflicting position is expected to be presented by the opposing party. However, in any ex parte proceeding, such as an application for a temporary restraining order, there is no balance of presentation by opposing advocates. The object of an ex parte proceeding is nevertheless to yield a substantially just result. The judge has an affirmative responsibility to accord the absent party just consideration. The lawyer for the represented party has the correlative duty to make disclosures of material facts known to the lawyer and that the lawyer reasonably believes are necessary to an informed decision.~~	Model Rule 3.3, Comment [14] is not included in the comments to proposed Rule 3.3.

Withdrawal [15] Normally, a lawyer's compliance with the duty of candor imposed by this Rule does not require that the lawyer withdraw from the representation of a client whose interests will be or have been adversely affected by the lawyer's disclosure. The lawyer may, however, be required by Rule 1.16(a) to seek permission of the tribunal to withdraw if the lawyer's compliance with this Rule's duty of candor results in such an extreme deterioration of the client-lawyer relationship that the lawyer can no longer competently represent the client. Also see Rule 1.16(b) for the circumstances in which a lawyer will be permitted to seek a tribunal's permission to withdraw. In connection with a request for permission to withdraw that is premised on a client's misconduct, a lawyer may reveal information relating to the representation only to the extent reasonably necessary to comply with this Rule or as otherwise permitted by Rule 1.6.	Withdrawal [15] ~~Normally, a~~ lawyer's compliance with the duty of candor imposed by this Rule does not require that the lawyer withdraw from the representation of a client whose interests will be or have been adversely affected by the lawyer's ~~disclosure~~taking reasonable remedial measures. The lawyer may, however, be required by Rule 1.16(a) to seek permission of the tribunal to withdraw if the lawyer's compliance with this Rule's duty of candor results in ~~such an extreme~~a deterioration of the ~~client-lawyer-client~~ relationship such that the lawyer can no longer competently and diligently represent the client, or where continued employment will result in a violation of these Rules. Also see Rule 1.16(b) for the circumstances in which a lawyer will be permitted to seek a tribunal's permission to withdraw. ~~In connection~~ This Rule does not modify the lawyer's obligations under Rule 1.6 or Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) or the California Rules of Court with ~~a~~respect to any request ~~for permission~~ to withdraw that is premised on a client's misconduct, ~~a lawyer may reveal information relating to the representation only to the extent reasonably necessary to comply with this Rule or as otherwise permitted by Rule 1.6.~~	The first sentence in comment [14] is similar to the first sentence in Model Rule Comment [15], except "disclosure" is replaced with "taking reasonable remedial measures" to make the comment consistent with the wording of the proposed Rule. The second sentence is also similar to the Model Rule counterpart except that it provides clearer guidance on when the deterioration of the lawyer-client relationship may require the lawyer to seek the tribunal's permission to withdraw. The third sentence duplicates the third sentence in the Model Rule Comment. The fourth sentence does not have a counterpart in Model Rule Comment [15] and has been added to clarify that the lawyer's obligations under this Rule are not superseded by the lawyer's obligations under the State Bar Act or the California Rules of Court in requesting permission to withdraw. The Comment departs from Model Rule [15] in that it does not permit the lawyer to reveal confidential client information to the extent reasonably necessary to comply with this rule or with Model Rule 1.6.

Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal
(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to the Public Comment Draft)

- (a) A lawyer shall not knowingly:
- (1) make a false statement of fact or law to a tribunal or fail to correct a false statement of material fact or law previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer;
 - (2) fail to disclose to the tribunal legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction known to the lawyer to be directly adverse to the position of the client and not disclosed by opposing counsel; or
 - (3) offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false. If a lawyer, the lawyer's client, or a witness called by the lawyer, has offered material evidence, and the lawyer comes to know of its falsity, the lawyer shall take reasonable remedial measures, including, if necessary, disclosure to the tribunal, unless disclosure is prohibited by Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e). A lawyer may refuse to offer evidence, other than the testimony of a defendant in a criminal matter, that the lawyer reasonably believes is false.
- (b) A lawyer who represents a client in an adjudicative proceeding and who knows that a person intends to engage, is engaging or has engaged in criminal or fraudulent conduct related to the proceeding shall take reasonable remedial measures to the extent permitted by Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e).
- (c) The duties stated in paragraphs (a) and (b) continue to the conclusion of the proceeding or the representation, whichever comes first.

- (d) In an ex parte proceeding, a lawyer shall inform the tribunal of all ~~facts known to the lawyer that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know, are needed to enable the tribunal to make an informed decision, whether or not the facts are adverse.~~ material facts known to the lawyer that will enable the tribunal to make an informed decision, whether or not the facts are adverse.

Comment

- [1] This Rule governs the conduct of a lawyer who is representing a client in the proceedings of a tribunal. See Rule 1.0.1(m) for the definition of "tribunal." It also applies when the lawyer is representing a client in an ancillary proceeding conducted pursuant to the tribunal's adjudicative authority, such as a deposition. Thus, for example, paragraph (a)(3) requires a lawyer to take reasonable remedial measures if the lawyer comes to know that a client who is testifying in a deposition has offered evidence that is false.
- [2] This Rule sets forth the special duties of lawyers as officers of the court to avoid conduct that undermines the integrity of the adjudicative process. A lawyer acting as an advocate in an adjudicative proceeding has an obligation to present the client's case with persuasive force. However, although a lawyer in an adversary proceeding is not required to present an impartial exposition of the law or to vouch for the evidence submitted in a cause, the lawyer must not make false statements of law or fact or present evidence that the lawyer knows to be false. For example, the prohibition in paragraph (a)(1) against making false statements of law or failing to correct a material misstatement of law includes a prohibition on a lawyer citing as authority a decision that has been overruled or a statute that has been repealed or declared unconstitutional, or failing to correct such a citation previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer.

Representations by a Lawyer

- [3] A lawyer is responsible for pleadings and other documents prepared for litigation but is usually not required to have personal knowledge of the facts asserted therein because litigation documents ordinarily present assertions of fact by the client, or a witness, and not by the lawyer. Compare Rule 3.1. However, an assertion of fact purporting to be based on the lawyer's own knowledge, as in a declaration or an affidavit by the lawyer or in a statement in open court, may properly be made only when the lawyer knows the assertion is true or believes it to be true on the basis of a reasonably diligent inquiry. Bryan v. Bank of America (2001) 86 Cal.App.4th 185 [103 Cal.Rptr.2d 148]. There are circumstances where failure to make a disclosure is the equivalent of an affirmative misrepresentation. Di Sabatino v. State Bar (1980) 27 Cal.3d 159 [162 Cal.Rptr. 458]. The obligation prescribed in Rule 1.2(d) not to counsel a client to commit or assist the client in committing a fraud applies in litigation. Regarding compliance with Rule 1.2(d), see the comment to that Rule. See also the comment to Rule 8.4(b).

Legal Argument

- [4] Although a lawyer is not required to make a disinterested exposition of the law, legal argument based on a knowing false representation of law constitutes dishonesty toward the tribunal. A tribunal that is fully informed on the applicable law is better able to make a fair and accurate determination of the matter before it. Paragraph (a)(2) requires a lawyer to disclose directly adverse and legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction that is known to the lawyer and that has not been disclosed by the opposing party. Legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction may include legal authority outside the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits, such as a federal statute or case that is determinative of an issue in a state court proceeding or a Supreme Court decision that is binding on a lower court. Under this Rule, the lawyer must disclose authorities the court needs to be aware of in order to rule intelligently on the matter. Paragraph (a)(2) does not impose on lawyers a general duty to cite authority from outside the jurisdiction in which the tribunal is located. Whether a criminal defense lawyer is required to disclose directly adverse legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction involves constitutional principles that are beyond the scope of these Rules. In addition, a lawyer may not knowingly edit and submit to a tribunal language from a book, statute, rule, or decision in such a way as to mislead the court, or knowingly fail to correct an inadvertent material misquotation that the lawyer previously made to the tribunal.

Offering Evidence

- [5] Paragraph (a)(3) requires that the lawyer refuse to offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false, regardless of the client's wishes. A lawyer does not violate this Rule if the lawyer offers the evidence for the purpose of establishing its falsity.
- [6] If a lawyer knows that the client intends to testify falsely or wants the lawyer to introduce false evidence, the lawyer should seek to persuade the client that the evidence should not be offered. If the persuasion is ineffective and the lawyer continues to represent the client, the lawyer must refuse to offer the false evidence. With respect to criminal defendants, see Comment [7]. If only a portion of a witness's testimony will be false, the lawyer may call the witness to testify but may not elicit the testimony that the lawyer knows is false or base arguments to the trier of fact on evidence known to be false.

[7] The duties stated in paragraphs (a) and (b) apply to all lawyers, including defense counsel in criminal cases. If a criminal defendant insists on testifying, and the lawyer knows that the testimony will be false, the lawyer may offer the testimony in a narrative form if the lawyer made reasonable efforts to dissuade the client from the unlawful course of conduct and the lawyer has sought permission from the court to withdraw as required by Rule 1.16. ~~Business and Professions Code~~ section 6068(d); People v. Guzman (1988) 45 Cal.3d 915 [248 Cal.Rptr. 467], disapproved on other grounds in Price v. Superior Court (2001) 25 Cal.4th 1046, 1069 fn.13 [108 Cal.Rptr.2d 409]; People v. Johnson (1998) 62 Cal.App.4th 608 [72 Cal.Rptr.2d 805]; People v. Jennings (1999) 70 Cal.App.4th 899 [83 Cal.Rptr.2d 33]; People v. Brown (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 1335, 1340 [250 Cal.Rptr. 762]. ~~The obligations of a lawyer under these Rules and the State Bar Act are subordinate to applicable constitutional provisions.~~

[8] The prohibition against offering false evidence only applies if the lawyer knows that the evidence is false. A lawyer's reasonable belief that evidence is false does not preclude its presentation to the trier of fact. See, e.g., People v. Bolton (2008) 166 Cal.App.4th 343, [82 Cal.Rptr.3d 671]. A lawyer's knowledge that evidence is false, however, can be inferred from the circumstances. See Rule 1.0.1(f). Thus, although a lawyer should resolve doubts about the veracity of testimony or other evidence in favor of the client, the lawyer cannot ignore an obvious falsehood.

Remedial Measures

[9] Having offered material evidence in the belief that it was true, a lawyer may subsequently come to know that the evidence is false. Or, a lawyer may be surprised when the lawyer's client, or another witness called by the lawyer, offers testimony the lawyer knows to be false, either during the lawyer's direct examination or in response to cross-examination by the opposing lawyer. In such situations or if the lawyer knows of the falsity of testimony elicited from the client during a deposition, the lawyer must take reasonable remedial measures. The lawyer's proper course is to remonstrate with the client confidentially, advise the client of the consequences of providing perjured testimony and of the lawyer's duty of candor to the tribunal, and seek the client's cooperation with respect to the withdrawal or correction of the false statements or evidence. If that fails, the lawyer must take further remedial measures, see Comment [10], and may be required to seek permission to withdraw under Rule 1.16(b), depending on the materiality of the false evidence.

[10] Reasonable remedial measures under paragraphs (a)(3) and (b) refer to measures that are available under these Rules and the State Bar Act, and which a reasonable lawyer would consider appropriate under the circumstances to comply with the lawyer's duty of candor to the tribunal. See e.g., Rules 1.2(d), 1.4, 1.16 and 8.4; Business and Professions Code sections 6068(d) and 6128. Remedial measures also include explaining to the client the lawyer's obligations under this Rule and, where applicable, the reasons for lawyer's decision to seek permission from the tribunal to withdraw, and remonstrating further with the client to take corrective action that would eliminate the need for the lawyer to withdraw. If the client is an organization, the lawyer should also consider the provisions of Rule 1.13. Remedial measures do not include disclosure of client confidential information, which the lawyer is required to maintain inviolate under Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e).

[11] A lawyer's duty to take reasonable remedial measures under paragraph (a)(3) is limited to the proceeding in which the lawyer has offered the evidence in question. A lawyer's duty to take remedial measures under paragraph (b) does not apply to another lawyer who is retained to represent a person in an investigation or proceeding concerning that person's conduct in the prior proceeding.

Preserving Integrity of Adjudicative Process

- [12] Lawyers have a special obligation to protect a tribunal against criminal or fraudulent conduct that undermines the integrity of the adjudicative process, such as bribing, intimidating or otherwise unlawfully communicating with a witness, juror, court official or other participant in the proceeding, unlawfully destroying or concealing documents or other evidence relating to the proceeding or failing to disclose information to the tribunal when required by law to do so. See Rule 3.4. Thus, paragraph (b) requires a lawyer to take reasonable remedial measures whenever the lawyer knows that a person, including the lawyer's client, intends to engage, is engaging or has engaged in criminal or fraudulent conduct related to the proceeding.

Duration of Obligation

- [13] Paragraph (c) establishes a practical time limit on the obligation to rectify false evidence or false statements of law and fact. Either the conclusion of the proceeding or of the representation provides a reasonably definite point for the termination of the mandatory obligations under this Rule. A proceeding has concluded within the meaning of this Rule when a final judgment in the proceeding has been affirmed on appeal or the time for review has passed. There may be obligations that go beyond this Rule. See, e.g., Rule 3.8.

Withdrawal

- [14] A lawyer's compliance with the duty of candor imposed by this Rule does not require that the lawyer withdraw from the representation of a client whose interests will be or have been adversely affected by the lawyer's taking reasonable remedial measures. The lawyer may, however, be required by Rule 1.16(a) to seek permission of the tribunal to withdraw if the lawyer's compliance with this Rule's duty of candor results in a deterioration of the lawyer-client relationship such that the lawyer can no longer competently and diligently represent the client, or where continued employment will result in a violation of these Rules. Also see Rule 1.16(b) for the circumstances in which a lawyer will be permitted to seek a tribunal's permission to withdraw. This Rule does not modify the lawyer's obligations under Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) or the California Rules of Court with respect to any request to withdraw that is premised on a client's misconduct.

Rule ~~5-200 Trial Conduct~~ 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal

(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

~~In presenting a matter to a tribunal, a member:~~

~~(a) A lawyer shall not knowingly:~~

~~(A) Shall employ, for the purpose of maintaining the causes confided to the member such means only as are consistent with truth;~~

~~(B) Shall not seek to mislead the judge, judicial officer, or jury by an artifice or false statement of fact or law;~~

~~(1) make a false statement of fact or law to a tribunal or fail to correct a false statement of material fact or law previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer;~~

~~(C) Shall not intentionally misquote to a tribunal the language of a book, statute, or decision;~~

~~(2) fail to disclose to the tribunal legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction known to the lawyer to be directly adverse to the position of the client and not disclosed by opposing counsel; or~~

~~(D) Shall not, knowing its invalidity, cite as authority a decision that has been overruled or a statute that has been repealed or declared unconstitutional; and~~

~~(3) offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false. If a lawyer, the lawyer's client, or a witness called by the lawyer, has offered material evidence, and the lawyer comes to know of its falsity, the lawyer shall take reasonable remedial measures, including, if necessary, disclosure to the tribunal, unless disclosure is~~ prohibited by Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e). A lawyer may refuse to offer evidence, other than the testimony of a defendant in a criminal matter, that the lawyer reasonably believes is false.

~~(E) Shall not assert personal knowledge of the facts at issue, except when testifying as a witness~~

(b) A lawyer who represents a client in an adjudicative proceeding and who knows that a person intends to engage, is engaging or has engaged in criminal or fraudulent conduct related to the proceeding shall take reasonable remedial measures to the extent permitted by Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e).

(c) The duties stated in paragraphs (a) and (b) continue to the conclusion of the proceeding or the representation, whichever comes first.

(d) In an ex parte proceeding, a lawyer shall inform the tribunal of all material facts known to the lawyer that will enable the tribunal to make an informed decision, whether or not the facts are adverse.

Comment

[1] This Rule governs the conduct of a lawyer who is representing a client in the proceedings of a tribunal. See Rule 1.0.1(m) for the definition of "tribunal." It also applies when the lawyer is representing a client in an ancillary proceeding conducted pursuant to the tribunal's adjudicative authority, such as a deposition. Thus, for example, paragraph (a)(3) requires a lawyer to take reasonable remedial measures if the lawyer comes to know that a client who is testifying in a deposition has offered evidence that is false.

- [2] This Rule sets forth the special duties of lawyers as officers of the court to avoid conduct that undermines the integrity of the adjudicative process. A lawyer acting as an advocate in an adjudicative proceeding has an obligation to present the client's case with persuasive force. However, although a lawyer in an adversary proceeding is not required to present an impartial exposition of the law or to vouch for the evidence submitted in a cause, the lawyer must not make false statements of law or fact or present evidence that the lawyer knows to be false. For example, the prohibition in paragraph (a)(1) against making false statements of law or failing to correct a material misstatement of law includes a prohibition on a lawyer citing as authority a decision that has been overruled or a statute that has been repealed or declared unconstitutional, or failing to correct such a citation previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer.

Representations by a Lawyer

- [3] A lawyer is responsible for pleadings and other documents prepared for litigation but is usually not required to have personal knowledge of the facts asserted therein because litigation documents ordinarily present assertions of fact by the client, or a witness, and not by the lawyer. Compare Rule 3.1. However, an assertion of fact purporting to be based on the lawyer's own knowledge, as in a declaration or an affidavit by the lawyer or in a statement in open court, may properly be made only when the lawyer knows the assertion is true or believes it to be true on the basis of a reasonably diligent inquiry. Bryan v. Bank of America (2001) 86 Cal.App.4th 185 [103 Cal.Rptr.2d 148]. There are circumstances where failure to make a disclosure is the equivalent of an affirmative misrepresentation. Di Sabatino v. State Bar (1980) 27

Cal.3d 159 [162 Cal.Rptr. 458]. The obligation prescribed in Rule 1.2(d) not to counsel a client to commit or assist the client in committing a fraud applies in litigation. Regarding compliance with Rule 1.2(d), see the comment to that Rule. See also the comment to Rule 8.4(b).

Legal Argument

- [4] Although a lawyer is not required to make a disinterested exposition of the law, legal argument based on a knowing false representation of law constitutes dishonesty toward the tribunal. A tribunal that is fully informed on the applicable law is better able to make a fair and accurate determination of the matter before it. Paragraph (a)(2) requires a lawyer to disclose directly adverse legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction that is known to the lawyer and that has not been disclosed by the opposing party. Legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction may include legal authority outside the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits, such as a federal statute or case that is determinative of an issue in a state court proceeding or a Supreme Court decision that is binding on a lower court. Under this Rule, the lawyer must disclose authorities the court needs to be aware of in order to rule intelligently on the matter. Paragraph (a)(2) does not impose on lawyers a general duty to cite authority from outside the jurisdiction in which the tribunal is located. Whether a criminal defense lawyer is required to disclose directly adverse legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction involves constitutional principles that are beyond the scope of these Rules. In addition, a lawyer may not knowingly edit and submit to a tribunal language from a book, statute, rule, or decision in such a way as to mislead the court, or knowingly fail to correct an inadvertent material misquotation that the lawyer previously made to the tribunal.

Offering Evidence

- [5] Paragraph (a)(3) requires that the lawyer refuse to offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false, regardless of the client's wishes. A lawyer does not violate this Rule if the lawyer offers the evidence for the purpose of establishing its falsity.
- [6] If a lawyer knows that the client intends to testify falsely or wants the lawyer to introduce false evidence, the lawyer should seek to persuade the client that the evidence should not be offered. If the persuasion is ineffective and the lawyer continues to represent the client, the lawyer must refuse to offer the false evidence. With respect to criminal defendants, see Comment [7]. If only a portion of a witness's testimony will be false, the lawyer may call the witness to testify but may not elicit the testimony that the lawyer knows is false or base arguments to the trier of fact on evidence known to be false.
- [7] The duties stated in paragraphs (a) and (b) apply to all lawyers, including defense counsel in criminal cases. If a criminal defendant insists on testifying, and the lawyer knows that the testimony will be false, the lawyer may offer the testimony in a narrative form if the lawyer made reasonable efforts to dissuade the client from the unlawful course of conduct and the lawyer has sought permission from the court to withdraw as required by Rule 1.16. (Business and Professions Code section 6068(d); People v. Guzman (1988) 45 Cal.3d 915 [248 Cal.Rptr. 467], disapproved on other grounds in Price v. Superior Court (2001) 25 Cal.4th 1046, 1069 fn.13 [108 Cal.Rptr.2d 409]; People v. Johnson (1998) 62 Cal.App.4th 608 [72 Cal.Rptr.2d 805]; People v. Jennings (1999) 70 Cal.App.4th 899 [83 Cal.Rptr.2d 33]; People v. Brown (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 1335, 1340 [250 Cal.Rptr. 762].) The obligations of a lawyer under these Rules and the State Bar Act are subordinate to applicable constitutional provisions.

- [8] The prohibition against offering false evidence only applies if the lawyer knows that the evidence is false. A lawyer's reasonable belief that evidence is false does not preclude its presentation to the trier of fact. See, e.g., People v. Bolton (2008) 166 Cal.App.4th 343, [82 Cal.Rptr.3d 671]. A lawyer's knowledge that evidence is false, however, can be inferred from the circumstances. See Rule 1.0.1(f). Thus, although a lawyer should resolve doubts about the veracity of testimony or other evidence in favor of the client, the lawyer cannot ignore an obvious falsehood.

Remedial Measures

- [9] Having offered material evidence in the belief that it was true, a lawyer may subsequently come to know that the evidence is false. Or, a lawyer may be surprised when the lawyer's client, or another witness called by the lawyer, offers testimony the lawyer knows to be false, either during the lawyer's direct examination or in response to cross-examination by the opposing lawyer. In such situations or if the lawyer knows of the falsity of testimony elicited from the client during a deposition, the lawyer must take reasonable remedial measures. The lawyer's proper course is to remonstrate with the client confidentially, advise the client of the consequences of providing perjured testimony and of the lawyer's duty of candor to the tribunal, and seek the client's cooperation with respect to the withdrawal or correction of the false statements or evidence. If that fails, the lawyer must take further remedial measures, see Comment [10], and may be required to seek permission to withdraw under Rule 1.16(b), depending on the materiality of the false evidence.
- [10] Reasonable remedial measures under paragraphs (a)(3) and (b) refer to measures that are available under these Rules and the State Bar Act, and which a reasonable lawyer would consider appropriate under the circumstances to comply with the lawyer's duty of candor to the tribunal. See e.g., Rules 1.2(d), 1.4, 1.16 and 8.4; Business and Professions Code sections 6068(d) and 6128. Remedial measures also include explaining to the client the lawyer's obligations under this Rule and, where applicable, the reasons for lawyer's decision to seek permission from the tribunal to withdraw, and remonstrating further with the client to take corrective action that would eliminate the need for the lawyer to withdraw. If the client is an organization, the lawyer should also consider the provisions of Rule 1.13. Remedial measures do not include disclosure of client confidential information, which the lawyer is required to maintain inviolate under Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e).

- [11] A lawyer's duty to take reasonable remedial measures under paragraph (a)(3) is limited to the proceeding in which the lawyer has offered the evidence in question. A lawyer's duty to take remedial measures under paragraph (b) does not apply to another lawyer who is retained to represent a person in an investigation or proceeding concerning that person's conduct in the prior proceeding.

Preserving Integrity of Adjudicative Process

- [12] Lawyers have a special obligation to protect a tribunal against criminal or fraudulent conduct that undermines the integrity of the adjudicative process, such as bribing, intimidating or otherwise unlawfully communicating with a witness, juror, court official or other participant in the proceeding, unlawfully destroying or concealing documents or other evidence relating to the proceeding or failing to disclose information to the tribunal when required by law to do so. See Rule 3.4. Thus, paragraph (b) requires a lawyer to take reasonable remedial measures whenever the lawyer knows that a person, including the lawyer's client, intends to engage, is engaging or has engaged in criminal or fraudulent conduct related to the proceeding.

Duration of Obligation

- [13] Paragraph (c) establishes a practical time limit on the obligation to rectify false evidence or false statements of law and fact. Either the conclusion of the proceeding or of the representation provides a reasonably definite point for the termination of the mandatory obligations under this Rule. A proceeding has concluded within the meaning of this Rule when a final judgment in the proceeding has been affirmed on appeal or the time for review has passed. There may be obligations that go beyond this Rule. See, e.g., Rule 3.8.

Withdrawal

- [14] A lawyer's compliance with the duty of candor imposed by this Rule does not require that the lawyer withdraw from the representation of a client whose interests will be or have been adversely affected by the lawyer's taking reasonable remedial measures. The lawyer may, however, be required by Rule 1.16(a) to seek permission of the tribunal to withdraw if the lawyer's compliance with this Rule's duty of candor results in a deterioration of the lawyer-client relationship such that the lawyer can no longer competently and diligently represent the client, or where continued employment will result in a violation of these Rules. Also see Rule 1.16(b) for the circumstances in which a lawyer will be permitted to seek a tribunal's permission to withdraw. This Rule does not modify the lawyer's obligations under Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) or the California Rules of Court with respect to any request to withdraw that is premised on a client's misconduct.

Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) A lawyer shall not knowingly:
- (1) make a false statement of fact or law to a tribunal or fail to correct a false statement of material fact or law previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer;
 - (2) fail to disclose to the tribunal legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction known to the lawyer to be directly adverse to the position of the client and not disclosed by opposing counsel; or
 - (3) offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false. If a lawyer, the lawyer's client, or a witness called by the lawyer, has offered material evidence, and the lawyer comes to know of its falsity, the lawyer shall take reasonable remedial measures, including, if necessary, disclosure to the tribunal, unless disclosure is prohibited by Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e). A lawyer may refuse to offer evidence, other than the testimony of a defendant in a criminal matter, that the lawyer reasonably believes is false.
- (b) A lawyer who represents a client in an adjudicative proceeding and who knows that a person intends to engage, is engaging or has engaged in criminal or fraudulent conduct related to the proceeding shall take reasonable remedial measures to the extent permitted by Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e).
- (c) The duties stated in paragraphs (a) and (b) continue to the conclusion of the proceeding or the representation, whichever comes first.
- (d) In an ex parte proceeding, a lawyer shall inform the tribunal of all material facts known to the lawyer that will enable the tribunal to make an informed decision, whether or not the facts are adverse.

Comment

- [1] This Rule governs the conduct of a lawyer who is representing a client in the proceedings of a tribunal. See Rule 1.0.1(m) for the definition of "tribunal." It also applies when the lawyer is representing a client in an ancillary proceeding conducted pursuant to the tribunal's adjudicative authority, such as a deposition. Thus, for example, paragraph (a)(3) requires a lawyer to take reasonable remedial measures if the lawyer comes to know that a client who is testifying in a deposition has offered evidence that is false.
- [2] This Rule sets forth the special duties of lawyers as officers of the court to avoid conduct that undermines the integrity of the adjudicative process. A lawyer acting as an advocate in an adjudicative proceeding has an obligation to present the client's case with persuasive force. However, although a lawyer in an adversary proceeding is not required to present an impartial exposition of the law or to vouch for the evidence submitted in a cause, the lawyer must not make false statements of law or fact or present evidence that the lawyer knows to be false. For example, the prohibition in paragraph (a)(1) against making false statements of law or failing to correct a material misstatement of law includes a prohibition on a lawyer citing as authority a decision that has been overruled or a statute that has been repealed or declared unconstitutional, or failing to correct such a citation previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer.

Representations by a Lawyer

- [3] A lawyer is responsible for pleadings and other documents prepared for litigation but is usually not required to have personal knowledge of the facts asserted therein because litigation documents ordinarily present assertions of fact by the client, or a witness, and not by the lawyer. Compare Rule 3.1. However, an assertion of fact purporting to be based on the lawyer's own knowledge, as in a declaration or an affidavit by the lawyer or in a statement in open court, may properly be made only when the lawyer knows the assertion is true or believes it to be true on the basis of a reasonably diligent inquiry. Bryan v. Bank of America (2001) 86 Cal.App.4th 185 [103 Cal.Rptr.2d 148]. There are circumstances where failure to make a disclosure is the equivalent of an affirmative misrepresentation. Di Sabatino v. State Bar (1980) 27 Cal.3d 159 [162 Cal.Rptr. 458]. The obligation prescribed in Rule 1.2(d) not to counsel a client to commit or assist the client in committing a fraud applies in litigation. Regarding compliance with Rule 1.2(d), see the comment to that Rule. See also the comment to Rule 8.4(b).

Legal Argument

- [4] Although a lawyer is not required to make a disinterested exposition of the law, legal argument based on a knowing false representation of law constitutes dishonesty toward the tribunal. A tribunal that is fully informed on the applicable law is better able to make a fair and accurate determination of the matter before it. Paragraph (a)(2) requires a lawyer to disclose directly adverse and legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction that is known to the lawyer and that has not been disclosed by the opposing party. Legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction may include legal authority outside the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits, such as a federal statute or case that is determinative of an issue in a state court proceeding or a Supreme Court decision that is binding on a lower court. Under this Rule, the lawyer must disclose authorities the court needs to be aware of in order to rule intelligently on the matter. Paragraph (a)(2) does not impose on lawyers a general duty to cite authority from outside the jurisdiction in which the tribunal is located. Whether a criminal defense lawyer is required to disclose directly adverse legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction involves constitutional principles that are beyond the scope of these Rules. In addition, a lawyer may not knowingly edit and submit to a tribunal language from a book, statute, rule, or decision in such a way as to mislead the court, or knowingly fail to correct an inadvertent material misquotation that the lawyer previously made to the tribunal.

Offering Evidence

- [5] Paragraph (a)(3) requires that the lawyer refuse to offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false, regardless of the client's wishes. A lawyer does not violate this Rule if the lawyer offers the evidence for the purpose of establishing its falsity.
- [6] If a lawyer knows that the client intends to testify falsely or wants the lawyer to introduce false evidence, the lawyer should seek to persuade the client that the evidence should not be offered. If the persuasion is ineffective and the lawyer continues to represent the client, the lawyer must refuse to offer the false evidence. With respect to criminal defendants, see Comment [7]. If only a portion of a witness's testimony will be false, the lawyer may call the witness to testify but may not elicit the testimony that the lawyer knows is false or base arguments to the trier of fact on evidence known to be false.
- [7] The duties stated in paragraphs (a) and (b) apply to all lawyers, including defense counsel in criminal cases. If a criminal defendant insists on testifying, and the lawyer knows that the testimony will be false, the lawyer may offer the testimony in a narrative form if the lawyer made reasonable efforts to dissuade the client from the unlawful course of conduct and the lawyer has sought permission from the court to withdraw as required by Rule 1.16. Business and Professions Code section 6068(d); People v. Guzman (1988) 45 Cal.3d 915 [248 Cal.Rptr. 467], disapproved on other grounds in Price v. Superior Court (2001) 25 Cal.4th 1046, 1069 fn.13 [108 Cal.Rptr.2d 409]; People v. Johnson (1998) 62 Cal.App.4th 608 [72 Cal.Rptr.2d 805]; People v. Jennings (1999) 70 Cal.App.4th 899 [83 Cal.Rptr.2d 33]; People v. Brown (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 1335, 1340 [250 Cal.Rptr. 762]. The obligations of a lawyer under these Rules and the State Bar Act are subordinate to applicable constitutional provisions.

- [8] The prohibition against offering false evidence only applies if the lawyer knows that the evidence is false. A lawyer's reasonable belief that evidence is false does not preclude its presentation to the trier of fact. See, e.g., People v. Bolton (2008) 166 Cal.App.4th 343, [82 Cal.Rptr.3d 671]. A lawyer's knowledge that evidence is false, however, can be inferred from the circumstances. See Rule 1.0.1(f). Thus, although a lawyer should resolve doubts about the veracity of testimony or other evidence in favor of the client, the lawyer cannot ignore an obvious falsehood.

Remedial Measures

- [9] Having offered material evidence in the belief that it was true, a lawyer may subsequently come to know that the evidence is false. Or, a lawyer may be surprised when the lawyer's client, or another witness called by the lawyer, offers testimony the lawyer knows to be false, either during the lawyer's direct examination or in response to cross-examination by the opposing lawyer. In such situations or if the lawyer knows of the falsity of testimony elicited from the client during a deposition, the lawyer must take reasonable remedial measures. The lawyer's proper course is to remonstrate with the client confidentially, advise the client of the consequences of providing perjured testimony and of the lawyer's duty of candor to the tribunal, and seek the client's cooperation with respect to the withdrawal or correction of the false statements or evidence. If that fails, the lawyer must take further remedial measures, see Comment [10], and may be required to seek permission to withdraw under Rule 1.16(b), depending on the materiality of the false evidence.

- [10] Reasonable remedial measures under paragraphs (a)(3) and (b) refer to measures that are available under these Rules and the State Bar Act, and which a reasonable lawyer would consider appropriate under the circumstances to comply with the lawyer's duty of candor to the tribunal. See e.g., Rules 1.2(d), 1.4, 1.16 and 8.4; Business and Professions Code sections 6068(d) and 6128. Remedial measures also include explaining to the client the lawyer's obligations under this Rule and, where applicable, the reasons for lawyer's decision to seek permission from the tribunal to withdraw, and remonstrating further with the client to take corrective action that would eliminate the need for the lawyer to withdraw. If the client is an organization, the lawyer should also consider the provisions of Rule 1.13. Remedial measures do not include disclosure of client confidential information, which the lawyer is required to maintain inviolate under Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e).
- [11] A lawyer's duty to take reasonable remedial measures under paragraph (a)(3) is limited to the proceeding in which the lawyer has offered the evidence in question. A lawyer's duty to take remedial measures under paragraph (b) does not apply to another lawyer who is retained to represent a person in an investigation or proceeding concerning that person's conduct in the prior proceeding.

Preserving Integrity of Adjudicative Process

[12] Lawyers have a special obligation to protect a tribunal against criminal or fraudulent conduct that undermines the integrity of the adjudicative process, such as bribing, intimidating or otherwise unlawfully communicating with a witness, juror, court official or other participant in the proceeding, unlawfully destroying or concealing documents or other evidence relating to the proceeding or failing to disclose information to the tribunal when required by law to do so. See Rule 3.4. Thus, paragraph (b) requires a lawyer to take reasonable remedial measures whenever the lawyer knows that a person, including the lawyer's client, intends to engage, is engaging or has engaged in criminal or fraudulent conduct related to the proceeding.

Duration of Obligation

[13] Paragraph (c) establishes a practical time limit on the obligation to rectify false evidence or false statements of law and fact. Either the conclusion of the proceeding or of the representation provides a reasonably definite point for the termination of the mandatory obligations under this Rule. A proceeding has concluded within the meaning of this Rule when a final judgment in the proceeding has been affirmed on appeal or the time for review has passed. There may be obligations that go beyond this Rule. See, e.g., Rule 3.8.

Withdrawal

[14] A lawyer's compliance with the duty of candor imposed by this Rule does not require that the lawyer withdraw from the representation of a client whose interests will be or have been adversely affected by the lawyer's taking reasonable remedial measures. The lawyer may, however, be required by Rule 1.16(a) to seek permission of the tribunal to withdraw if the lawyer's compliance with this Rule's duty of candor results in a deterioration of the lawyer-client relationship such that the lawyer can no longer competently and diligently represent the client, or where continued employment will result in a violation of these Rules. Also see Rule 1.16(b) for the circumstances in which a lawyer will be permitted to seek a tribunal's permission to withdraw. This Rule does not modify the lawyer's obligations under Rule 1.6 and Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) or the California Rules of Court with respect to any request to withdraw that is premised on a client's misconduct.

Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 3 Agree = 0 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Hazard, Geoffrey, Deborah Rhode & Richard Zitrin (ethics law professors group)	M	Yes	(c)	In sharp contrast to the Model Rule, which requires candor until the matter is resolved, paragraph (c) requires that the duty of candor continues until the conclusion of the proceeding or representation, whichever occurs first. The effect of this provision permits lawyers to absolve themselves of their duty on candor while the adjudicative proceeding is pending. Also, because a lawyer need not have made an appearance in the matter to implicate the duty of candor, the proposed rule may also allow a lawyer to "withdraw" and thus from the duty without any imprimatur from the tribunal.	The Commission fully considered the commenter's view, which is aligned with the Commission minority position on paragraph (c), but the majority position was reaffirmed. The Commission continues to believe that a lawyer lacks standing after termination of the lawyer's employment and that the lawyer should not have a duty to be involved in a time-consuming controversy after the lawyer has been discharged because such involvement could abrogate the lawyer's loyalty to a former client.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel ("OCTC")	M	Yes		OCTC is concerned that this proposed rule requires knowingly. Rule 1.0 defines knowingly as "actual knowledge." However, this is contrary to established California law. An attorney's unqualified and unequivocal statements to judges under circumstances that should have caused him or her at least some uncertainty are at a minimum deceptive and support a finding of culpability. (In the Matter of Chesnut (Review Dept. 2000) 4 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 166, 173-174.)	The Commission disagrees. Both Harney and Chesnut were decided under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(d), and would not be affected by this Rule. Moreover, the definition of "know" in proposed Rule 1.0.1(f) (based on MR 1.0(f)) does not permit reckless disregard of the facts.

Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 0
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					That is, California disciplines attorneys for dishonesty or moral turpitude based on gross negligence. (See sections 6068(d) and 6106; Vaughn v. State Bar (1972) 6 Cal.3d 847, 857 and 859; In the Matter of Harney (Review Dept. 1995) 3 Cal. State Bar 266, 2381-282; In the Matter of Chesnut (Review Dept. 2000) 4 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 166, 173-174; In the Matter of Dale (Review Dept. 2005) 4 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 798 [gross negligence in representation to third party]; In the Matter of Loftus (Review Dept. 2007) 5 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 80; In the Matter of Casey (Review Dept. 2008) 5 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 117. See also Comment 2B to proposed rule 8.4.) In fact, CCP section 128.7 requires that all statements in pleadings be made "after an inquiry reasonable under the circumstances." We should not be allowing lawyers to make false statements without proper inquiry and a good faith basis for the statement. Moreover, while good faith may be a defense to a charge of misrepresentation, this is because it is a statutory violation, not a rule violation. Good faith is generally not a defense to a violation of a Rule of Professional Conduct. (See In the Matter of Broderick (Review Dept. 1994) 3 Cal.

Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 0
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					State Bar Ct. Rpt. 138, 148; Zitny v. State Bar, supra, 64 Cal.2d at 793.) Further, this rule is inconsistent with proposed rules 8.2, 8.4, 4.2, and Comment 2B of proposed rule 8.4. While negligence is not a basis for discipline, gross negligence is. While we could still prosecute attorneys for gross negligence under sections 6068(d) and 6106 (and apparently 8.4) that creates inconsistent duties and could mislead attorneys into believing that actual knowledge is required for discipline when gross negligence can support discipline for this conduct. OCTC is concerned that the proposed rule omits the term "artifice" as provided in current rule 5-200(b). If the Commission is intending to further limit the rule, OCTC opposes that. OCTC believes the word should remain in the rule.	The Commission disagrees that removing "artifice" from the Rule will narrow OCTC's ability to charge lawyers. The word is found in Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(d), so OCTC will not lose the ability to make such a charge. Moreover, the term "artifice" is from an statute enacted in 1872 and is not a term that is in common usage in modern lawyer regulation or is one that has received sufficient application or interpretation to provide lawyers with adequate advance guidance. The Commission believes that closely tracking the wording of the Model Rule will enhance compliance with the duty of candor and provide better public protection.

Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 0
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					OCTC is concerned that the proposed rule omits without Comment the following language in the current rule: 1) prohibiting an attorney from intentionally misquoting to a tribunal the language of a book, statute or decision; and 2) shall not knowing its invalidity cite as authority a decision that has been overruled or a statute that has been repealed or declared unconstitutional. (See current rule 5-200(c) and (d).) OCTC is aware that some of this language was removed by the Board of Governors because they believed that it was duplicative of proposed rule 3.3(a)(1) and (2). However, some form of this language has existed in the rules since the original Rules of Professional Conduct. OCTC requests a comment to explain that this is not a change in the law, but merely because it is already covered by proposed rule 3.3(a)(1) and (2). OCTC is concerned that the rule omits the language in current rule 5-200(E) that an attorney "[s]hall not assert personal knowledge of the facts at issue, except when testifying as a witness." OCTC knows of no reason to omit that language and has seen attorneys violate this rule in an attempt to prejudice a party and deny	The Commission disagrees that the proposed rule signals a change in the law regarding the proper citing of legal authority and believes that Comments [2] and [4] make it sufficiently clear that the prohibitions under current 5-200(c) come with the provisions of paragraph (a) and that no further comment is necessary. No change is necessary. The provision from current rule 5-200(E) is properly in proposed Rule 3.4(g) on advocacy and not in this rule.

Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 0
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					them a fair trial. (See e.g. In the Matter of Philip E. Kay, Case No. 01-0-193. The hearing department finding and recommendation in Kay's case is currently pending before the California Supreme Court, Supreme Court Case No. S 180405.) OCTC suggests that this language be included in the rule. In a similar vein, OCTC is concerned that nowhere in the proposed rules do they provide for when an attorney 1) states or alludes at trial to evidence that the attorney knows or reasonably should know is not relevant or admissible evidence or has already been ruled inadmissible (see Hawk v. Superior Court (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 108, 118); 2) states the attorney's belief in the credibility of a witness (see Hawk v. Superior Court, supra, 42 Cal.App.3d at 123); or 3) includes when an attorney violates discovery orders of a court. OCTC recognizes that arguably they could be included in proposed rule 3.4, but they are not there either. They should be somewhere. There are too many Comments, many are too long, and they cover subjects and discussions best left to treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to

Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 3 Agree = 0 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Comment 3 is too long. If knowingly is stricken from the rule, this Comment should be also stricken. Further, this comment does not address CCP 128.7 or Rule 11 or that an attorney may have a duty to investigate even the client's claims in some situations. (See Butler v. State Bar (1986) 42 Cal.3d 323, 329 ["While an attorney may often rely upon statements made by the client without further investigation, circumstances known to the attorney may require an investigation."])	lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations. The Commission disagrees. As to length, see previous paragraph. As to the stated concerns re CCP 128.7, an inquiry is only required if reasonable under the circumstances. As Comment [8] recognizes, a "lawyer cannot ignore an obvious falsehood."
3	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee ("SDCBA")	M	Yes	Paragraph (d) Comment [9]	Agree with a Commission minority that there is "insufficient reason for departing from the ABA standard, followed in most jurisdictions, and that [paragraph subdivision (d)] is unclear and would subject lawyers to being second-guessed on what facts were 'needed' to enable a tribunal to make an informed decision in a particular matter." The existing ABA Model Rule, making the lawyer take reasonable remedial measures when the lawyer learns of the falsity in response to cross-examination by the opposing lawyer best serves the concept	The Commission agrees with SDCBA. Paragraph (d) has been changed to track Model Rule paragraph (d) for better clarity and consistency in regulating lawyer conduct. No change is necessary. Comment [9] provides that the duty to take corrective measures applies when the lawyer learns of false testimony occurring on cross examination.

Rule 3.3 Candor Toward the Tribunal. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 3 Agree = 0 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				Comment [6]	of “Candor Toward the Tribunal,” and should remain intact. It should be noted that the “Explanation of Changes to ABA Model Rule” for Comment [6] notes that a Minority of the Commission believed the clause “or otherwise permit the witness to present testimony that the lawyer knows to be false,” in the last sentence of Comment [6], “lays a trap for the unwary lawyer who might call a friendly witness who unexpectedly testifies falsely. . . .” The Majority believed the reading of the subject clause in conjunction with Comment [5] (not a violation if offered to establish its falsity) and Comment [9] (concerning remedial measures available) “assuages the Minority’s concerns.” SDCBA thinks a clearer explanation of the relationship between Comment [6] and Comment [9] would be helpful to guide the lawyer in applying the proposed rule.	The Commission fully considered the commenter’s view of the minority position but the majority position was reaffirmed with the one substantive change being the adoption of the Model Rule counterpart language for paragraph (d).

Rule 3.3: Candor Toward the Tribunal

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California: Rule 5-200 provides as follows:

In presenting a matter to a tribunal, a member:

(A) Shall employ, for the purpose of maintaining the causes confided to the member such means only as are consistent with truth;

(B) Shall not seek to mislead the judge, judicial officer, or jury by an artifice or false statement of fact or law;

(C) Shall not intentionally misquote to a tribunal the language of a book, statute, or decision;

(D) Shall not, knowing its invalidity, cite as authority a decision that has been overruled or a statute that has been repealed or declared unconstitutional; and

(E) Shall not assert personal knowledge of the facts at issue, except when testifying as a witness.

In addition, California Business & Professions Code §6068(d) provides that it is the duty of an attorney to employ “those means only as are consistent with truth, and never to seek to mislead the judge or any judicial officer by an artifice or false statement of fact or law.” And §6128(a) makes an attorney guilty of a misdemeanor if the attorney engages in “any deceit or collusion, or consents to any deceit or collusion, with intent to deceive the court or any party.”

District of Columbia: Rule 3.3(a)(1) provides that a lawyer shall not knowingly make a false statement of fact or law to a tribunal or fail to correct a false statement of material fact or law previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer, “unless correction would require disclosure of information that is prohibited by Rule 1.6.” Rule 3.3(a)(2) is nearly identical to ABA Model Rule 1.2(d). D.C.’s equivalent to ABA Model Rule 3.3(a)(2) applies to undisclosed, directly adverse legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction not disclosed by opposing counsel and known to be “dispositive of a question at issue.”

D.C. Rule 3.3(a)(4) provides that a lawyer shall not knowingly offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false, “except as provided in paragraph (b).” D.C. Rule 3.3(b) adopts the so-called “narrative method” for presenting false testimony by providing as follows:

When the witness who intends to give evidence that the lawyer knows to be false is the lawyer’s client and is the accused in a criminal case, the lawyer shall first make a good-faith effort to dissuade the client from presenting the false evidence; if the lawyer is unable to dissuade the client, the lawyer shall seek leave of the tribunal to withdraw. If the lawyer is unable to dissuade the client or to withdraw without seriously harming the client, the lawyer may put the client on the stand to testify in a narrative fashion, but the lawyer shall not examine the client in such manner as to elicit testimony which the lawyer knows to be false, and shall not argue the probative value of the client’s testimony in closing argument.

Rule 3.3(c) provides simply: “The duties stated in paragraph (a) continue to the conclusion of the proceeding.” D.C. omits both the second sentence of ABA Model Rule 3.3(a)(3) (“If a lawyer . . . has offered material evidence and the lawyer comes to know of its falsity . . .”), and all of ABA Model Rule 3.3(b) (“A lawyer . . . who knows that a person . . . has engaged in criminal or fraudulent conduct relating to the proceeding . . .”) but covers both situations by adding Rule 3.3(d), which provides as follows: “(d) A lawyer who receives information clearly establishing that a fraud has been perpetrated upon the tribunal shall promptly take reasonable remedial measures, including disclosure to the tribunal to the extent disclosure is permitted by Rule 1.6(d).” (The relevant part of D.C. Rule 1.6(d)(2) provides that when a client has used or is using a lawyer’s services to further a crime or fraud, the lawyer may reveal client confidences and secrets to the extent reasonably necessary to “prevent, mitigate or rectify substantial injury to the financial interests or property of another that is reasonably certain to result or has resulted from the client’s commission of the crime or fraud.”) Finally, D.C. omits ABA Model Rule 3.3(d) (regarding ex parte proceedings).

Florida: Rule 3.3 provides that a lawyer shall not (a)(4) Permit any witness, including a criminal defendant, to offer testimony or other evidence that the lawyer knows to be false. A lawyer may not offer testimony that the lawyer knows to be false in the form of a narrative unless so ordered by the tribunal. If a lawyer has offered material evidence and thereafter comes to know of its falsity, the lawyer shall take reasonable remedial measures.

Florida Rule 3.3(b) provides that “the duties stated in Rule 3.3(a) continue beyond the conclusion of the proceeding.” Florida has not adopted any equivalent to ABA Model Rule 3.3(b). Florida Rule 3.3(c) provides only that a lawyer “may refuse to offer evidence that the lawyer reasonably believes is false.”

Maryland adds the following Rule 3.3(e): “[A] lawyer for an accused in a criminal case need not disclose that the accused intends to testify falsely or has testified falsely if the lawyer reasonably believes that the disclosure would jeopardize any constitutional right of the accused.”

Massachusetts: Rule 3.3(b) states that the conclusion of the proceedings includes “all appeals.” Rule 3.3(e) permits a lawyer representing a criminal defendant to elicit false testimony in narrative fashion if withdrawal is not otherwise possible without prejudicing the defendant. However, “the lawyer shall not argue the probative value of the false testimony in closing argument or in any other proceedings, including appeals.” A lawyer who is unable to withdraw when he or she knows that a criminal defendant will testify falsely “may not prevent the client from testifying” but must not “examine the client in such a manner as to elicit any testimony from the client the lawyer knows to be false.”

New Jersey adheres closely to the pre-2002 version of ABA Model Rule 3.3 but adds, in a new Rule 3.3(a)(5), that a lawyer shall not fail to disclose to the tribunal a material fact “knowing that the omission is reasonably certain to mislead the tribunal.” Also, New Jersey Rule 1.6(b)(2) requires a lawyer to reveal confidences to prevent a client from committing “a criminal, illegal or fraudulent act that the lawyer reasonably believes is likely to perpetrate a fraud upon a tribunal.”

New Mexico specifies in Rule 16-303(E) that a lawyer must disclose to a tribunal whether the lawyer is representing the client in a “limited manner.”

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 3.3(c) omits the phrase “continue to the conclusion of the proceeding” (and thus has no express time limit). New York also adds Rule 3.3(e), which is substantially similar to 7-106(B)(2) of the old Model Code. Rule 3.3(f), which also has no Model Rule equivalent, is substantially similar to 7-106(C)(5)-(7) of the old Model Code, but it also prohibits “conduct intended to disrupt the tribunal.” New York adds Comment 6A, which addresses the rule’s application to prosecutors, and omits Comment 13 concerning the duration of the Rule 3.3 obligation.

North Dakota: Rule 3.3(a)(3) provides that if a lawyer, the lawyer’s client, or a witness called by the lawyer has offered material evidence and the lawyer comes to know of its falsity, then:

the lawyer shall take reasonable remedial measures, including, if necessary, disclosure to the tribunal unless the evidence was contained in testimony of the lawyer’s client. If the evidence was contained in testimony of the lawyer’s client, the lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to convince the client to consent to disclosure. If the client refuses to consent to disclosure, the lawyer shall seek to withdraw from the representation without disclosure. If withdrawal is not permitted, the lawyer may continue the representation and such continuation alone is not a violation of these rules. The lawyer may not use or argue the client’s false testimony.

Ohio: Rule 3.3(c) provides that the duties stated in Rules 3.3(a) and (b) continue “until the issue to which the duty relates is determined by the highest tribunal that may consider the issue, or the time has expired for such determination. . . .”

Oregon provides that the duties in Rule 3.3(a) and (b) are suspended if “compliance requires disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.”

Pennsylvania adds that it applies if a lawyer, the lawyer's client, or a witness called by the lawyer has offered material evidence "before a tribunal or in an ancillary proceeding conducted pursuant to a tribunal's adjudicative authority, such as a deposition. . . ."

Texas: Rule 3.03(b) and (c) provides:

(b) If a lawyer has offered material evidence and comes to know of its falsity, the lawyer shall make a good faith effort to persuade the client to authorize the lawyer to correct or withdraw the false evidence. If such efforts are unsuccessful, the lawyer shall take reasonable remedial measures, including disclosure of the true facts.

(c) The duties stated in paragraphs (a) and (b) continue until remedial legal measures are no longer reasonably possible.

Virginia: Rule 3.3(a)(2) provides that a lawyer shall not knowingly "fail to disclose a fact to a tribunal when disclosure is necessary to avoid assisting a criminal or fraudulent act by the client, subject to Rule 1.6." Virginia Rule 3.3(a)(3) requires disclosure only of "controlling" legal authority and omits the word "directly" before "adverse." (The Comment explains that "directly" was deleted because "the limiting effect of that term could seriously dilute the paragraph's meaning.") Virginia Rule 3.3(a)(4) and Rule 3.3(b) are identical to the pre-2002 version of ABA Model Rule 3.3(a)(4) and Rule 3.3(c). Virginia omits ABA Model Rules 3.3(b) and (c) and adds a new paragraph taken verbatim from DR 7-102(B)(2) of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility that provides: "A lawyer who receives information clearly establishing that a person other than a client has perpetrated a fraud upon a tribunal shall promptly reveal the fraud to the tribunal."

Proposed Rule 3.4 [5-200(E)][5-220][5-310(A)] “Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel” (XDraft #6, 09/19/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 3.4 describes litigation abuses that threaten the goal of the fair administration of justice that is intended to provide a level playing field. The proposed Rule generally tracks Model Rule 3.4, supplemented by provisions from current California rules 5-200, 5-220, and 5-310.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart
Rule	Comment
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rules

Rules 5-220, 5-310

Statute

Case law

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 6
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 2
Abstain 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☐ Yes ☒ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 3.4* Fairness To Opposing Party And Counsel

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 3.4 describes litigation abuses that threaten the goals of the fair administration of justice that is intended to provide a level playing field. The proposed rule generally tracks ABA Model Rule 3.4, supplemented by provisions in current California rules 5-200, 5-220, and 5-310.

Proposed Rule 3.4 omits all or part of Model Rule 3.4(d), (e) and (f), as well as the comment paragraphs associated with those provisions. The Commission believes that adoption of those provisions would chill legitimate advocacy and be inconsistent with legislative policy regarding discovery.

Variations in Other Jurisdictions. Twelve states have revised the substance of ABA Model Rule 3.4. (See State Variation Chart.)

* Proposed Rule 3.4, XDraft 6 (9/19/09).

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
A lawyer shall not: (a) unlawfully obstruct another party's access to evidence or unlawfully alter, destroy or conceal a document or other material having potential evidentiary value. A lawyer shall not counsel or assist another person to do any such act;	A lawyer shall not: (a) unlawfully obstruct another party's access to evidence, or unlawfully alter, destroy or conceal a document or other material having potential evidentiary value. A lawyer shall not counsel or assist another person to do any such act;	Paragraph (a) is identical to Model Rule 3.4(a).
	(b) suppress any evidence that the lawyer or the lawyer's client has a legal obligation to reveal or to produce;	Paragraph (b) carries forward current rule 5-220; it does not have a counterpart in the Model Rule. Retaining the concept of rule 5-220 adds a layer of public protection by prohibiting suppression of evidence. Paragraph (b) makes specific what might be implied by paragraph (a), thus eliminating the possibility of confusion. See also paragraph (d), below.¹
(b) falsify evidence, counsel or assist a witness to testify falsely, or offer an inducement to a witness that is prohibited by law;	(b) falsify evidence, or counsel or assist a witness to testify falsely, ~~or offer an inducement to a witness that is prohibited by law;~~	Paragraph (c) tracks Model Rule 3.4(b), except the concept of offering an unlawful inducement to a witness has been moved to another paragraph dealing with conduct toward witnesses. (See paragraph (e) below.)

* Proposed Rule 3.4, XDraft 6 (9/19/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(d) advise or directly or indirectly cause a person to secrete himself or herself or to leave the jurisdiction of a tribunal for the purpose of making that person unavailable as a witness therein;	Paragraph (d) carries forward current rule 5-310(A); it does not have a Model Rule counterpart. Retaining the concept of rule 5-310(A) adds a layer of public protection by prohibiting a lawyer from advising or causing a person to be unavailable, which is a subset of evidence obstruction and suppression. Paragraph (d) makes specific what might be implied by paragraph (a), thus eliminating the possibility of confusion. See also paragraphs (a) and (b), above.²
	(e) offer an inducement to a witness that is prohibited by law, or directly or indirectly pay, offer to pay, or acquiesce in the payment of compensation to a witness contingent upon the content of the witness's testimony or the outcome of the case. Except where prohibited by law, a lawyer may advance, guarantee, or acquiesce in the payment of:	Paragraph (e) melds ABA Model Rule 3.4(b)'s concept of "offer[ing] an inducement to a witness that is prohibited by law. . ." with current rule 5-310(B)'s prohibitions concerning witness compensation that are not found in the Model Rule.
	(1) expenses reasonably incurred by a witness in attending or testifying;	Subparagraph (e)(1) carries forward current rule 5-310(B)(1), which the Commission believes is good public policy that facilitates presentation of witness testimony by compensating for reasonable expenses.

² RM: SHOULD SAY A MORE "SPECIFIC" LAYER BECAUSE (d) IS REALLY A SUBSET OF (a)—OBSTRUCTING ACCESS TO EVIDENCE

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(2) reasonable compensation to a witness for loss of time in attending or testifying; or	Subparagraph (e)(2) carries forward current rule 5-310(B)(2), which the Commission believes is good public policy that facilitates presentation of witness testimony by compensating witnesses who provide testimony for earnings lost by reason of their appearance in litigation proceedings.
	(3) a reasonable fee for the professional services of an expert witness.	Subparagraph (e)(3) carries forward current rule 5-310(B)(3), which the Commission believes essential to the ability of litigants to prove cases where expert witnesses are necessary or desirable.
(c) knowingly disobey an obligation under the rules of a tribunal, except for an open refusal based on an assertion that no valid obligation exists;	(ef) knowingly disobey an obligation under the rules of a tribunal, except for an open refusal based on an assertion that no valid obligation exists; or	Paragraph (f) is identical to Model Rule 3.4(c).

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(d) in pretrial procedure, make a frivolous discovery request or fail to make reasonably diligent effort to comply with a legally proper discovery request by an opposing party;	~~(d) in pretrial procedure, make a frivolous discovery request or fail to make reasonably diligent effort to comply with a legally proper discovery request by an opposing party;~~	Model Rule 3.4(d) has been rejected because it conflicts with California legislative policy, which provides for: (1) a comprehensive system of discovery remedies (e.g., C.C.P., § 2019 – 2036.050); (2) Court supervision of discovery misconduct and abuse through a variety of means, including sanctions and contempt(e.g., C.C.P., § 1992, 2019.030, 2020.240, 2023.010, 2023.020); and (3) no reporting of attorney sanctions for discovery matters (Bus. & Prof. C.,§6068(o)(3)) The Commission believes that this public policy is sound because: (1) the tribunal before which a matter is pending is better equipped to control discovery delay or frivolous requests; (2) discovery misconduct is not necessarily indicative of unfitness to practice law; and (3) more serious discovery abuses can subject a lawyer to discipline through other standards (e.g., Bus. & Prof. C., §6103 – failure to comply with court order; §6068(b) --failure to maintain respect for the courts; or other parts of this Rule).
	(g) in trial, assert personal knowledge of facts in issue except when testifying as a witness.	Paragraph (g) is based in part on Model Rule 3.4(e), and in part on current rule 5-200(E).

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(e) in trial, allude to any matter that the lawyer does not reasonably believe is relevant or that will not be supported by admissible evidence, assert personal knowledge of facts in issue except when testifying as a witness, or state a personal opinion as to the justness of a cause, the credibility of a witness, the culpability of a civil litigant or the guilt or innocence of an accused; or	~~(e) in trial, allude to any matter that the lawyer does not reasonably believe is relevant or that will not be supported by admissible evidence, assert personal knowledge of facts in issue except when testifying as a witness, or state a personal opinion as to the justness of a cause, the credibility of a witness, the culpability of a civil litigant or the guilt or innocence of an accused; or~~	Except for what has been proposed as paragraph (g), the Commission recommends rejecting Model Rule 3.4(e) because it is overbroad, ambiguous and is likely to chill legitimate advocacy. Abuses can best be controlled by the trial judge through proper objections by the opponent.
(f) request a person other than a client to refrain from voluntarily giving relevant information to another party unless: (1) the person is a relative or an employee or other agent of a client; and (2) the lawyer reasonably believes that the person's interests will not be adversely affected by refraining from giving such information.	~~(f) request a person other than a client to refrain from voluntarily giving relevant information to another party unless:~~ ~~(1) the person is a relative or an employee or other agent of a client; and~~ ~~(2) the lawyer reasonably believes that the person's interests will not be adversely affected by refraining from giving such information.~~	Commenters objected to Model Rule 3.4(f) arguing that it is ambiguous, overly broad and duplicative, and in conflict with paragraph (a). On reconsideration, the Commission agreed.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] The procedure of the adversary system contemplates that the evidence in a case is to be marshalled competitively by the contending parties. Fair competition in the adversary system is secured by prohibitions against destruction or concealment of evidence, improperly influencing witnesses, obstructive tactics in discovery procedure, and the like.	[1] The procedures^s of the adversary system contemplates that the evidence in a case is to be marshalled competitively by the contending parties. Fair competition in the adversary system is secured by prohibitions against destruction or concealment of evidence, improperly influencing witnesses, obstructive tactics in discovery procedure, and the like.	Comment [1] adopts Model Rule 3.4, comment [1], only making "procedure" plural.
[2] Documents and other items of evidence are often essential to establish a claim or defense. Subject to evidentiary privileges, the right of an opposing party, including the government, to obtain evidence through discovery or subpoena is an important procedural right. The exercise of that right can be frustrated if relevant material is altered, concealed or destroyed. Applicable law in many jurisdictions makes it an offense to destroy material for purpose of impairing its availability in a pending proceeding or one whose commencement can be foreseen. Falsifying evidence is also generally a criminal offense. Paragraph (a) applies to evidentiary material generally, including computerized information. Applicable law may permit a lawyer to take temporary possession of physical evidence of client crimes for the purpose of conducting a limited examination that will not alter or destroy material characteristics of the evidence. In such a case, applicable law may require the lawyer to turn the evidence over to the police or other prosecuting	[2] Documents and other items of evidence are often essential to establish a claim or defense. Subject to evidentiary privileges, the right of an opposing party, including the government, to obtain evidence through discovery or subpoena is an important procedural right. The exercise of that right can be frustrated if relevant material is altered, concealed or destroyed. ~~Applicable law in many jurisdictions makes it an~~ It is a criminal offense to destroy material for purpose of impairing its availability in a pending proceeding or one whose commencement can be foreseen. (See, e.g., Penal Code section 135; 18 United States Code section 1501-1520.) Falsifying evidence is also generally a criminal offense. (See, e.g., Penal Code section 132; 18 United States Code section 1519.) Paragraph (a) applies to evidentiary material generally, including computerized information. Applicable law may permit a lawyer to take temporary possession of physical evidence of client crimes for the purpose of conducting a limited examination that will not alter or	Comment [2] largely tracks Model Rule 3.4, deleting only the reference to law in other jurisdictions and adding California citations to support the principles stated in the Comment.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
authority, depending on the circumstances.	destroy material characteristics of the evidence. ~~In such a case, applicable~~ Applicable law may require ~~the a~~ lawyer to turn ~~the~~ evidence over to the police or other prosecuting ~~authority~~authorities, depending on the circumstances. (See People v. Lee (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 514, 526 [83 Cal.Rptr. 715]; People v. Meredith (1981) 29 Cal.3d 682 [175 Cal.Rptr. 612].)
[3] With regard to paragraph (b), it is not improper to pay a witness's expenses or to compensate an expert witness on terms permitted by law. The common law rule in most jurisdictions is that it is improper to pay an occurrence witness any fee for testifying and that it is improper to pay an expert witness a contingent fee.	~~[3] With regard to paragraph (b), it is not improper to pay a witness's expenses or to compensate an expert witness on terms permitted by law. The common law rule in most jurisdictions is that it is improper to pay an occurrence witness any fee for testifying and that it is improper to pay an expert witness a contingent fee.~~	The Commission recommends that Comment [3] to Model Rule 3.4 be rejected because (1) the first sentence is too general to provide definition of the rule or guidance; and (2) the second sentence is unnecessary because it refers to common law in other jurisdictions, which is irrelevant to the common law of California and therefore can provide little guidance. Moreover, the topic is more comprehensively addressed in proposed paragraph (e).
	[3] A violation of a civil or criminal discovery rule or statute does not by itself establish a violation of this Rule. This Rule does not establish a standard that governs civil or criminal discovery disputes.	Proposed comment [3] has no counterpart in the Model Rule; it clarifies the scope of the Rule. In that regard, the Comment is intended to prevent abuse of the Rule by parties who might attempt to claim that a discovery violation under the rules regulating discovery is equivalent to a breach of professional obligations under this Rule.
[4] Paragraph (f) permits a lawyer to advise employees of a client to refrain from giving information to another party, for the employees may identify their interests with those of the client. See also Rule 4.2.	~~[4] Paragraph (f) permits a lawyer to advise employees of a client to refrain from giving information to another party, for the employees may identify their interests with those of the client. See also Rule 4.2.~~	The Commission recommends that Comment [4] to Model Rule 3.4, which clarifies Model Rule 3.4(f) be rejected because the Commission's has proposed deleting of paragraph (f).

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[4] Paragraph (e) permits a lawyer to pay a non-expert witness for the time spent preparing for a deposition or trial. Compensation for preparation time or for time spent testifying must be reasonable in light of all the circumstances and cannot be contingent upon the content of the witness's testimony or on the outcome of the matter. Possible bases upon which to determine reasonable compensation include the witness' normal rate of pay if currently employed, what the witness last earned if currently unemployed, or what others earn for comparable activity.	Comment [4] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It attempts to provide guidance regarding application of this Rule. (See e.g., California State Bar Formal Opn. No. 1997-149.)

Rule ~~5-220~~ ~~Suppression of Evidence~~ 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel

(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

A lawyer shall not:

- (a) unlawfully obstruct another party's access to evidence, or unlawfully alter, destroy or conceal a document or other material having potential evidentiary value. A lawyer shall not counsel or assist another person to do any such act;
- (b) ~~A member shall not~~ suppress any evidence that the ~~member~~ lawyer or the ~~member's~~ lawyer's client has a legal obligation to reveal or to produce;
- (c) falsify evidence or counsel or assist a witness to testify falsely;

~~Rule 5-310 Prohibited Contact With Witnesses~~

~~A member shall not:~~

- (d) ~~(A) Advise~~ advise or directly or indirectly cause a person to secrete himself or herself or to leave the jurisdiction of a tribunal for the purpose of making that person unavailable as a witness therein;
- (e) ~~(B) Directly~~ offer an inducement to a witness that is prohibited by law, or directly or indirectly pay, offer to pay, or acquiesce in the payment of compensation to a witness contingent upon the content of the witness's testimony or the outcome of the case. Except where prohibited by law, a ~~member~~ lawyer may advance, guarantee, or acquiesce in the payment of:

- (1) ~~Expenses~~ expenses reasonably incurred by a witness in attending or testifying;
- (2) ~~Reasonable~~ reasonable compensation to a witness for loss of time in attending or testifying; or
- (3) ~~A~~ a reasonable fee for the professional services of an expert witness.
- (f) knowingly disobey an obligation under the rules of a tribunal except for an open refusal based on an assertion that no valid obligation exists; or

~~Rule 5-200(E) Trial Conduct~~

- (g) ~~(E) Shall not~~ in trial, assert personal knowledge of ~~the~~ facts ~~at~~ in issue, except when testifying as a witness.

Comment

- [1] The procedures of the adversary system contemplates that the evidence in a case is to be marshalled competitively by the contending parties. Fair competition in the adversary system is secured by prohibitions against destruction or concealment of evidence, improperly influencing witnesses, obstructive tactics in discovery procedure, and the like.

- [2] Documents and other items of evidence are often essential to establish a claim or defense. Subject to evidentiary privileges, the right of an opposing party, including the government, to obtain evidence through discovery or subpoena is an important procedural right. The exercise of that right can be frustrated if relevant material is altered, concealed or destroyed. It is a criminal offense to destroy material for purpose of impairing its availability in a pending proceeding or one whose commencement can be foreseen. (See, e.g., Penal Code section 135; 18 United States Code section 1501-1520.) Falsifying evidence is also generally a criminal offense. (See, e.g., Penal Code section 132; 18 United States Code section 1519.) Paragraph (a) applies to evidentiary material generally, including computerized information. Applicable law may permit a lawyer to take temporary possession of physical evidence of client crimes for the purpose of conducting a limited examination that will not alter or destroy material characteristics of the evidence. Applicable law may require a lawyer to turn evidence over to the police or other prosecuting authorities, depending on the circumstances. (See People v. Lee (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 514, 526 [83 Cal.Rptr. 715]; People v. Meredith (1981) 29 Cal.3d 682 [175 Cal.Rptr. 612].)
- [3] A violation of a civil or criminal discovery rule or statute does not by itself establish a violation of this Rule. This Rule does not establish a standard that governs civil or criminal discovery disputes.
- [4] Paragraph (e) permits a lawyer to pay a non-expert witness for the time spent preparing for a deposition or trial. Compensation for preparation time or for time spent testifying must be reasonable in light of all the circumstances and cannot be contingent upon the content of the witness's testimony or on the outcome of the matter. Possible bases upon which to determine reasonable compensation include the witness' normal rate of pay if currently employed, what the witness last earned if currently unemployed, or what others earn for comparable activity.

Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel

(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

A lawyer shall not:

- (a) unlawfully obstruct another party's access to evidence, or unlawfully alter, destroy or conceal a document or other material having potential evidentiary value. A lawyer shall not counsel or assist another person to do any such act;
- (b) suppress any evidence that the lawyer or the lawyer's client has a legal obligation to reveal or to produce;
- (c) falsify evidence or counsel or assist a witness to testify falsely;
- (d) advise or directly or indirectly cause a person to secrete himself or herself or to leave the jurisdiction of a tribunal for the purpose of making that person unavailable as a witness therein;
- (e) offer an inducement to a witness that is prohibited by law, or directly or indirectly pay, offer to pay, or acquiesce in the payment of compensation to a witness contingent upon the content of the witness's testimony or the outcome of the case. Except where prohibited by law, a lawyer may advance, guarantee, or acquiesce in the payment of:
 - (1) expenses reasonably incurred by a witness in attending or testifying;
 - (2) reasonable compensation to a witness for loss of time in attending or testifying; or
 - (3) a reasonable fee for the professional services of an expert witness.
- (f) knowingly disobey an obligation under the rules of a tribunal except for an open refusal based on an assertion that no valid obligation exists; or
- (g) in trial, assert personal knowledge of facts in issue except when testifying as a witness.

Comment

- [1] The procedures of the adversary system contemplates that the evidence in a case is to be marshalled competitively by the contending parties. Fair competition in the adversary system is secured by prohibitions against destruction or concealment of evidence, improperly influencing witnesses, obstructive tactics in discovery procedure, and the like.
- [2] Documents and other items of evidence are often essential to establish a claim or defense. Subject to evidentiary privileges, the right of an opposing party, including the government, to obtain evidence through discovery or subpoena is an important procedural right. The exercise of that right can be frustrated if relevant material is altered, concealed or destroyed. It is a criminal offense to destroy material for purpose of impairing its availability in a pending proceeding or one whose commencement can be foreseen. See, e.g., Penal Code section 135; 18 United States Code section 1501-1520. Falsifying evidence is also generally a criminal offense. See, e.g., Penal Code section 132; 18 United States Code section 1519. Paragraph (a) applies to evidentiary material generally, including computerized information. Applicable law may permit a lawyer to take temporary possession of physical evidence of client crimes for the purpose of conducting a limited examination that will not alter or destroy material characteristics of the evidence. Applicable law may require a lawyer to turn evidence over to the police or other prosecuting authorities, depending on the circumstances. See People v. Lee (1970) 3 Cal.App.3d 514, 526 [83 Cal.Rptr. 715]; People v. Meredith (1981) 29 Cal.3d 682 [175 Cal.Rptr. 612].

- [3] A violation of a civil or criminal discovery rule or statute does not by itself establish a violation of this Rule. This Rule does not establish a standard that governs civil or criminal discovery disputes.
- [4] Paragraph (e) permits a lawyer to pay a non-expert witness for the time spent preparing for a deposition or trial. Compensation for preparation time or for time spent testifying must be reasonable in light of all the circumstances and cannot be contingent upon the content of the witness's testimony or on the outcome of the matter. Possible bases upon which to determine reasonable compensation include the witness' normal rate of pay if currently employed, what the witness last earned if currently unemployed, or what others earn for comparable activity.

Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	M	Yes	3.4(f)	While OCTC supports the intent of this rule, it is concerned that subsection (f) of this rule is vague and potentially overbroad. It is unclear whether “an obligation under the rules of a tribunal” includes, for example, local court rules or a judge’s individualized preferences. Without additional clarification or definition, the intended meaning of this rule will be a major source of debate, confusion, and litigation. OCTC requests clarification from the Commission whether the Proposed Rule is violated when a lawyer advises a person that he or she need not voluntarily speak with opposing counsel/party in the matter.	The Commission disagrees. The Commission does not believe that such clarification is needed or possible in this rule.
				Comment [2]	Many of the Comments cover subjects and discussions best left to treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions. Some of the Comments are too long and Comment [2] has too many ideas for one Comment.	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 3.4 Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
3	San Diego County Bar Association	M	Yes		Paragraph (e)(3) is overbroad and unnecessary to accomplish the policy objective of preventing improper influence of witness testimony. It should be limited to prevent undue influence of fact witnesses and an attorney should not be penalized if an expert is paid an amount that another person believes is too high to be objectively or subjectively reasonable. Paragraph (h) is overbroad because it is not limited to the discovery or litigation context and is unnecessary and duplicative in light of section (a).	Commission did not make the requested revision, in part, because, expert witness fees are addressed in the existing rule and the Commission was not aware of any manifest problems. Commission deleted paragraph (h).

Rule 3.4: Fairness to Opposing Party and Counsel

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Alabama adds two exceptions that allow a lawyer to ask a non-client not to give information to another party if: “(2) the person may be required by law to refrain from disclosing the information; or (3) the information pertains to covert law enforcement investigations in process, such as the use of undercover law enforcement agents.”

California: Compare Rule 5-200 (reprinted in the Selected State Variations following ABA Model Rule 3.3 above) and Rule 5-220, which provides that a lawyer “shall not suppress any evidence that the member or the member’s client has a legal obligation to reveal or to produce.” Also, Rule 5-310 provides that a member shall not:

(A) Advise or directly or indirectly cause a person to secrete himself or herself or to leave the jurisdiction of a tribunal for the purpose of making that person unavailable as a witness therein.

(B) Directly or indirectly pay, offer to pay, or acquiesce in the payment of compensation to a witness contingent upon the content of the witness’s testimony or the outcome of the case. Except where prohibited by law, a member may advance, guarantee, or acquiesce in the payment of:

(1) Expenses reasonably incurred by a witness in attending or testifying.

(2) Reasonable compensation to a witness for loss of time in attending or testifying.

(3) A reasonable fee for the professional services of an expert witness.

In addition, California Penal Code §135, which was enacted in 1872, provides as follows:

Destroying evidence. Every person who, knowing that any book, paper, record, instrument in writing, or other matter or thing, is about to be produced in evidence upon any trial, inquiry, or investigation whatever, authorized by law, willfully destroys or conceals the same, with intent thereby to prevent it from being produced, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

District of Columbia: Rule 3.4 provides that a lawyer shall not:

(a) Obstruct another party's access to evidence or alter, destroy, or conceal evidence, or counsel or assist another person to do so, if the lawyer reasonably should know that the evidence is or may be the subject of discovery or subpoena in any pending or imminent proceeding. Unless prohibited by law, a lawyer may receive physical evidence of any kind from the client or from another person. If the evidence received by the lawyer belongs to anyone other than the client, the lawyer shall make a good-faith effort to preserve it and to return it to the owner, subject to Rule 1.6; . . .

(g) Peremptorily strike jurors for any reason prohibited by law.

Florida: Rule 3.4(a) replaces the ABA phrase “having potential evidentiary value” with the phrase “that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is relevant to a pending or a reasonably foreseeable proceeding. . . .” Rule 3.4(b) provides that a lawyer shall not “fabricate” evidence, and provides that a lawyer shall not offer an inducement to a witness, except a lawyer may pay a witness reasonable expenses incurred by the witness in attending or testifying at proceedings; a reasonable, noncontingent fee for professional services of an expert witness; and reasonable compensation to reimburse a witness for the loss of compensation incurred by reason of preparing for, attending, or testifying at proceedings.

Florida Rule 3.4(d) deletes the phrase “to make a reasonably diligent effort,” instead providing that a lawyer shall not “intentionally” fail to comply with a legally proper discovery request by an opposing party. Florida Rules 3.4(g) and (h) expand upon DR 7-105 of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility by providing that a lawyer must not present, participate in presenting, or threaten to present either criminal charges or “disciplinary charges under these rules” solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.

Georgia: Rule 3.4(b) borrows language from DR 7-109(C) of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility. Georgia omits ABA Model Rules 3.4 (c), (d), and (e) entirely. Georgia Rule 3.4(f) adds that a lawyer may request a person not to volunteer information to another party “if the information is subject to the assertion of a privilege by the client.”

Georgia also adds a new Rule 3.4(g), based on ABA Model Rule 4.4, which provides that a lawyer shall not “use methods of obtaining evidence that violate the legal rights of the opposing party or counsel,” and a new Rule 3.4(h), taken verbatim from DR 7-105 of the ABA Model Code, which provides that a lawyer shall not “present, participate in presenting or threaten to present criminal charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.”

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2010, Illinois expands on ABA Model Rule 3.4(b)'s command not to “offer an inducement to a witness that is prohibited by law.” Comment 3 elaborates on this restriction in even more detail.

Massachusetts: Rule 3.4(g) tracks DR 7-109(C) of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility. Rule 3.4(h) retains the language of DR 7-105. Rule 3.4(i) says that a lawyer shall not, “in appearing in a professional capacity before a tribunal, engage in conduct manifesting bias or prejudice based on race, sex, religion, national origin, disability, age, or sexual orientation against a party, witness, counsel, or other person,” but the paragraph expressly does not preclude “legitimate advocacy” when the same factors or similar ones are “an issue in the proceeding.”

New Jersey adds Rule 3.4(g), which provides, based on DR 7-105 of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility, that a lawyer shall not “present, participate in presenting, or threaten to present criminal charges to obtain an improper advantage in a civil matter.”

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 3.4 draws almost exclusively on the old Model Code. Rule 3.4(a)(1)-(2) is substantially the same as DR 7-109(A)-(B). Rule 3.4(a)(3)-(6) is substantially the same as DR 7-102(A)(3), (4), (6), and (8). Rule 3.4(b) is substantially similar to DR 7-109(C). Rule 3.4(c) is substantially the same as DR 7-106(A), and Rule 3.4(d) is substantially the same as DR 7-106(C)(1)-(4). New York adds several comments, including Comment 5, which describes the use of threats:

The use of threats in negotiation may constitute the crime of extortion. However, not all threats are improper. For example, if a lawyer represents a client who has been criminally harmed by a third person (for example, a theft of property), the lawyer’s threat to report the crime does not constitute extortion when honestly claimed in an effort to obtain restitution or indemnification for the harm done. But extortion is committed if the threat involves conduct of the third person unrelated to the criminal harm (for example, a threat to report tax evasion by the third person that is unrelated to the civil dispute).

North Carolina: Rule 3.4(b) adds that a lawyer shall not “counsel or assist a witness to hide or leave the jurisdiction for the purpose of being unavailable as a witness.” Rule 3.4(c) provides that a lawyer shall not “advise a client to disobey” an obligation under the rules of a tribunal, except that “a lawyer acting in good faith may take appropriate steps to test the validity of such an obligation.” Rule 3.4(f)(1) limits the “employee” exception to a “managerial employee.”

Ohio: The exception clause in Ohio Rule 3.4(c) applies to an open refusal based on a “good faith” assertion that no valid obligation exists. Rule 3.4(d) provides that a lawyer engaged in pretrial procedure shall not “intentionally or habitually” make a frivolous “motion or” discovery request. Ohio omits Rule 3.4(f) because it is inconsistent with a lawyer’s obligations under Ohio law, and Ohio adds a new Rule 3.4(g) that provides that a lawyer shall not “advise or cause a person to hide or to leave the jurisdiction of a tribunal for the purpose of becoming unavailable as a witness.”

Oklahoma omits the clause “other than the testimony of a defendant in a criminal matter” in the last sentence of Rule 3.4(a)(3). In addition, Oklahoma adds a new Rule 3.4(a)(4), which provides that a lawyer “shall not knowingly .

. . fail to disclose a fact to a tribunal when disclosure is necessary to avoid assisting a criminal or fraudulent act by the client.”

Oregon: Rules 3.4(b) and (g) provide that a lawyer shall not:

(b) falsify evidence; counsel or assist a witness to testify falsely; offer an inducement to a witness that is prohibited by law; or pay, offer to pay, or acquiesce in payment of compensation to a witness contingent upon the content of the witness's testimony or the outcome of the case; except that a lawyer may advance, guarantee or acquiesce in the payment of: (1) expenses reasonably incurred by a witness in attending or testifying; (2) reasonable compensation to a witness for the witness's loss of time in attending or testifying; or (3) a reasonable fee for the professional services of an expert witness. . . .

(g) threaten to present criminal charges to obtain an advantage in a civil matter unless the lawyer reasonably believes the charge to be true and if the purpose of the lawyer is to compel or induce the person threatened to take reasonable action to make good the wrong which is the subject of the charge.

Pennsylvania: Rule 3.4(b) deletes the ABA phrase “or offer an inducement to a witness that is prohibited by law” and substitutes language nearly identical to DR 7-109(C) of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility. Pennsylvania deletes ABA Model Rule 3.4(c) and substitutes the language of DR 7-106(C)(4). Pennsylvania deletes subparagraphs (d) and (e) of ABA Model Rule 3.4, and adds “and such conduct is not prohibited by Rule 4.2” at the end of Pennsylvania Rule 3.4(d), which is equivalent to ABA Model Rule 3.4(f).

Texas: Rule 3.04(a)'s prohibition on unlawfully altering, destroying, or concealing evidence applies “in anticipation of a dispute.” (Regarding “unlawfully,” Texas Penal Law §37.09 makes it a felony if a person “knowing that an investigation or official proceeding is pending or in progress . . . alters, destroys, or conceals any record, document, or thing with intent to impair its verity, legibility, or availability as evidence,” but §37.09 does not apply to items that are “privileged” or “work product.”) Texas Rule 3.04(b) retains the substance of DR 7-109(C) of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility. Rule 3.04(c) retains language from DR 7-106(C), and Rule 3.04(c)(5) provides that a lawyer shall not “engage in conduct intended to disrupt the proceedings.” Rule 3.04(d) provides that a lawyer shall not knowingly disobey “or advise the client to disobey” an obligation under the tribunal's “standing rules” or under a “ruling” by the tribunal, except for an open refusal based either on an assertion that no valid obligation exists “or on the client's willingness to accept any sanctions arising from such disobedience.”

Virginia eliminates the word “unlawfully” from Rule 3.4(a), and provides that a lawyer shall not alter, destroy or conceal material having potential evidentiary value “for the purpose of obstructing a party's access to evidence.” Rule 3.4 (b) and (c) incorporates language from DR 7-109(B) and (C) of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility. Rule 3.4(i), which expands on DR 7-105 of the Model Code, provides that a lawyer shall not present or threaten to present criminal “or disciplinary” charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter, and Rule 3.4(j) is taken verbatim from DR 7-102(A)(1) of the Model Code but adds “or initiate criminal charges” to the list of forbidden conduct.

Proposed Rule 3.5 [5-300][5-320]

“Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal”

(XDraft # 5, 10/7/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 3.5 concerns the same general subject matter as Model Rule 3.5 but carries forward the specificity of current California Rules 5-300 [Contact with Officials] and 5-320 [Contact with Jurors]. By including specific guidance in the proposed Rule on conduct is prohibited in interacting with the tribunal and jurors, proposed Rule 3.5 better serves these Rules’ purpose of protecting the integrity of the legal system and promoting the administration of justice.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule

Comment

- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☒ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 5-300, 5-320.

Statute

Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 206 (Communications with Jurors).

Case law

- ☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

- ☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 9

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 1

Abstain 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☐ Yes ☒ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 3.5*: Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 3.5 concerns the same general subject matter as Model Rule 3.5 but carries forward the specificity of current California Rules 5-300 [Contact with Officials] and 5-320 [Contact with Jurors]. Rule 3.5(a)-(c) continue policies of prohibiting (1) the giving or loaning anything of value to a judge, judicial officer, or judicial employee and (2) ex parte communications concerning the merits of a matter pending before a tribunal with judges, judicial officers and other judicial personnel, with noted exceptions. Proposed Rule 3.5(d)–(l) continue policies of prohibiting certain communications with jurors, members of jury venires and their families, as well as regulating communications with discharged jurors. The Commission decided not to recommend adoption of Model Rule 3.5 due to its overbreadth and lack of specificity. The Commission believes that proposed Rule 3.5 better serves these Rules’ purpose of protecting the integrity of the legal system and promoting the administration of justice by specifying the conduct that is prohibited.

The policies underlying proposed Rule 3.5 and Model Rule 3.5 are substantially similar.

- a. Model Rule 3.5(a) prohibits lawyers from seeking to influence judges, officials and jurors by means prohibited by law. Proposed Rule 3.5(a) prohibits lawyers from giving or lending anything of value to a judge, judicial officer, or employee. By prohibiting acts that historically have resulted in influence peddling, the proposed Rule (1) clarifies, by creating a “bright line” stating precisely what “seeking to influence” means; and (2) clearly defines what is not prohibited. Proposed Rule 5.3(d) – (l) prevents lawyers from unduly influencing jurors by prohibiting outright certain communications and contacts, while regulating others.

* Proposed Rule 3.5, XDraft 5 (10/7/09).

INTRODUCTION (Continued):

- b. Model Rule 3.5(b) prohibits all ex parte contact with judges, officials and jurors during a proceeding unless authorized to do so by law or court order. Proposed Rule 3.5 specifies the circumstances when ex parte communications with judges, judicial officers and personnel, and jurors are prohibited; when any communications with jurors are prohibited; and when certain communications are permitted in order to create a brighter line for compliance with the law and for establishing proof in disciplinary and regulatory proceedings.

Defining what conduct is acceptable and what is not better aids judicial personnel, lawyers and jurors from engaging in conduct that may be well meaning, but which reflects adversely upon the fairness of the judicial process, thereby ultimately providing better public protection.

State Variations: Many jurisdictions have revised ABA Model Rule 3.5 to add specificity; some, like California, have opted to retain more specific language similar to current rules 5-300 and 5-320. (See State Variations Chart.)

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
A lawyer shall not: (a) seek to influence a judge, juror, prospective juror or other official by means prohibited by law;	~~A lawyer shall not:~~ ~~(a) seek to influence a judge, juror, prospective juror or other official by means prohibited by law;~~	See Explanation of Changes for proposed paragraph (a), below.
	(a) Except as permitted by the Code of Judicial Ethics, a lawyer shall not directly or indirectly give or lend anything of value to a judge, official, or employee of a tribunal unless the personal or family relationship between the lawyer and the judge, official, or employee is such that gifts are customarily given and exchanged. This Rule shall not prohibit a lawyer from contributing to the campaign fund of a judge running for election or confirmation pursuant to applicable law pertaining to such contributions.	See Introduction. Paragraph (a) carries forward nearly verbatim the provisions of current rule 5-300(A) ("lawyer" has been substituted for "member"). The Commission determined that carrying forward the specificity of the provision in current California rules 5-300 and 5-320 would avoid challenges of overbreadth and vagueness and better serve these Rules' purpose of protecting the integrity of the legal system and promoting the administration of justice by specifying the conduct that is prohibited.
(b) communicate ex parte with such a person during the proceeding unless authorized to do so by law or court order;	~~(b) communicate ex parte with such a person during the proceeding unless authorized to do so by law or court order;~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a).

* Proposed Rule 3.5, XDraft 5 (10/7/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(b) Unless authorized to do so by law, the Code of Judicial Ethics, a ruling of a tribunal, or a court order, a lawyer shall not directly or indirectly communicate with or argue to a judge or judicial officer upon the merits of a contested matter pending before the judge or judicial officer, except: (1) in open court; (2) with the consent of all other counsel in the matter; (3) in the presence of all other counsel in the matter; (4) in writing with a copy thereof furnished promptly to all other counsel; or (5) in ex parte matters as permitted by law.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a). Paragraph (b) carries forward the substance of current rule 5-300(B). The clause, "Unless authorized to do so by law, the Code of Judicial Ethics, a ruling of a tribunal, or a court order," has been added to track the "unless authorized by to do so by law or court order" in Model Rule 3.5(b).

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(c) As used in this Rule, “judge” and “judicial officer” shall include law clerks, research attorneys, other court personnel who participate in the decisionmaking process, and neutral arbitrators.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a). Paragraph (c) carries forward the substance of current rule 5-300(C). Paragraph (c) clarifies that the prohibitions in paragraphs (a) and (b) extend to any court personnel who participate in decisionmaking and might affect the outcome. The phrase, “and neutral arbitrators” has been added so the Rule will also apply in an arbitration setting. This added phrase recognizes that much of the work of the judicial system now takes place before court-appointed and other third-party neutrals.
	(d) A lawyer connected with a case shall not communicate directly or indirectly with anyone the lawyer knows to be a member of the venire from which the jury will be selected for trial of that case.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a). Paragraph (d) carries forward the substance of current rule 5-320(A) nearly verbatim, with only “lawyer” substituted for “member.”
	(e) During a trial a lawyer connected with the case shall not communicate directly or indirectly with any juror.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a). Paragraph (e) carries forward the substance of current rule 5-320(B) nearly verbatim, with only “lawyer” substituted for “member.”
	(f) During a trial a lawyer who is not connected with the case shall not communicate directly or indirectly concerning the case with anyone the lawyer knows is a juror in the case.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a). Paragraph (f) carries forward the substance of current rule 5-320(C) nearly verbatim, with only “lawyer” substituted for “member.”

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(c) communicate with a juror or prospective juror after discharge of the jury if: (1) the communication is prohibited by law or court order; (2) the juror has made known to the lawyer a desire not to communicate; or (3) the communication involves misrepresentation, coercion, duress or harassment; or	(eg) A lawyer shall not communicate directly or indirectly with a juror or prospective juror after discharge of the jury if: (1) the communication is prohibited by law or court order; (2) the juror has made known to the lawyer a desire not to communicate;~~or~~ (3) the communication involves misrepresentation, coercion, duress or harassment; or (4) the communication is intended to influence the juror's actions in future jury service.	Paragraph (g) is nearly identical to Model Rule 3.5(c), except communicate is modified by the phrase "directly or indirectly" to conform with the prohibitions in paragraphs (d), (e) and (f). The addition of that language is intended to prevent lawyers from communicating through a third party to avoid the prohibitions of the Rule.
(d) engage in conduct intended to disrupt a tribunal.	~~(d) engage in conduct intended to disrupt a tribunal.~~	The Commission recommends that Model Rule 3.5(d) not be adopted because it is vague and subject to overbreadth challenges. See Introduction.
	(h) A lawyer shall not directly or indirectly conduct an out of court investigation of a person who is either a member of a venire or a juror in a manner likely to influence the state of mind of such person in connection with present or future jury service.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a). Paragraph (h) carries forward the substance of current rule 5-320(E) nearly verbatim, with only "lawyer" substituted for "member." Paragraph (h) supplements proposed paragraph (g)(4).

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(i) All restrictions imposed by this Rule also apply to communications with, or investigations of, members of the family of a person who is either a member of a venire or a juror.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a). Paragraph (i) carries forward the substance of current rule 5-320(F) nearly verbatim, with only “lawyer” substituted for “member.” The addition of that language is intended to prevent lawyers from influencing jurors through communications with, or investigations of, family members of jurors or potential jurors.
	(j) A lawyer shall reveal promptly to the court improper conduct by a person who is either a member of a venire or a juror, or by another toward a person who is either a member of a venire or a juror or a member of his or her family, of which the lawyer has knowledge.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a). Paragraph (j) carries forward the substance of current rule 5-320(G) nearly verbatim, with only “lawyer” substituted for “member.”
	(k) This Rule does not prohibit a lawyer from communicating with persons who are members of a venire or jurors as a part of the official proceedings.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a). Paragraph (k) carries forward the substance of current rule 5-320(H) nearly verbatim, with only “lawyer” substituted for “member.”
	(l) For the purposes of this Rule, “juror” means any empaneled, discharged, removed, or excused juror.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a). Paragraph (l) carries forward the substance of current rule 5-320(I) nearly verbatim. In addition to substituting “lawyer” for “member,” proposed paragraph (l) includes “removed” juror within the definition of “juror.”

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] Many forms of improper influence upon a tribunal are proscribed by criminal law. Others are specified in the ABA Model Code of Judicial Conduct, with which an advocate should be familiar. A lawyer is required to avoid contributing to a violation of such provisions.	[1] Many forms of improper influence upon a tribunal are proscribed by criminal law. Others are specified in the ~~ABA Model Code of Judicial Conduct~~ Ethics and Code Civ. P. section 170.9, with which an advocate should be familiar. A lawyer is required to avoid contributing to a violation of such provisions.	Comment [1] is identical to Model Rule 3.5, cmt. [1], except that it references the California Code of Judicial Ethics, the governing judicial code in California, and to Code Civ. P. section 170.9. Section 170.9 is a public official gift statute that overlaps with Canon 4D(5) of the Code of Judicial Ethics in restricting judges' acceptance of gifts.
[2] During a proceeding a lawyer may not communicate ex parte with persons serving in an official capacity in the proceeding, such as judges, masters or jurors, unless authorized to do so by law or court order.	[2] During a proceeding a lawyer may not communicate ex parte with persons serving in an official capacity in the proceeding, such as judges, masters or jurors, unless authorized to do so by law or court order, but a lawyer who is serving as a temporary judge, referee or court-appointed arbitrator under Rule 2.4.1 may do so in the performance of that service. "Promptly" as used in paragraph (b)(4) of this Rule means that a copy of a communication to a judge should be sent to opposing counsel by means likely to result in receipt of the copy of the communication substantially simultaneously to its receipt by the judge.	Comment [2] is based on Model Rule 3.5, cmt. [2]. The last clause of the Comment has been added to provide guidance to lawyers acting as temporary judges pursuant to proposed Rule 2.4.1 (which in is based on current rule 1-710), a rule that has no counterpart in the Model Rules. The last sentence of this Comment has been added to address concerns over possible gamesmanship in which a lawyer uses a slow method to deliver to opposing counsel a communication the lawyer has delivered quickly to a court, thus potentially interfering with opposing counsel's ability to participate.
	[3] For guidance on permissible communications with a juror or prospective juror after discharge of the jury, see also Code of Civil Procedure, section 206.	Comment [3] provides a cross-reference to California statutory law for specific guidance on permissible communications with jurors or prospective jurors.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[3] A lawyer may on occasion want to communicate with a juror or prospective juror after the jury has been discharged. The lawyer may do so unless the communication is prohibited by law or a court order but must respect the desire of the juror not to talk with the lawyer. The lawyer may not engage in improper conduct during the communication.	~~[34]~~-A It is improper for a lawyer ~~may on occasion want to communicate with a juror who has been removed, discharged, or prospective juror after excused from an empaneled jury, regardless of whether notice is given to other counsel, until such time as the entire jury has been discharged. The lawyer may do so from further service or~~ unless the communication is ~~prohibited by law or a court order but must respect the desire~~part of the ~~juror not to talk with official proceedings of the lawyer. The lawyer may not engage in improper conduct during the communication~~case.	The subject matter of proposed Comment [4] is the same as that of Model Rule 3.5, cmt. [3]: communication with jurors or prospective jurors. However, the tenor of the Model Rule Comment has been recast to stress what is prohibited under the Rule rather than what is permitted. The former approach better reflects the primary function of these Rules as disciplinary rules.
[4] The advocate's function is to present evidence and argument so that the cause may be decided according to law. Refraining from abusive or obstreperous conduct is a corollary of the advocate's right to speak on behalf of litigants. A lawyer may stand firm against abuse by a judge but should avoid reciprocation; the judge's default is no justification for similar dereliction by an advocate. An advocate can present the cause, protect the record for subsequent review and preserve professional integrity by patient firmness no less effectively than by belligerence or theatrics.	~~[4] The advocate's function is to present evidence and argument so that the cause may be decided according to law. Refraining from abusive or obstreperous conduct is a corollary of the advocate's right to speak on behalf of litigants. A lawyer may stand firm against abuse by a judge but should avoid reciprocation; the judge's default is no justification for similar dereliction by an advocate. An advocate can present the cause, protect the record for subsequent review and preserve professional integrity by patient firmness no less effectively than by belligerence or theatrics.~~	The Commission recommends that Model Rule 3.5, cmt. [4], which relates to Model Rule 3.5(d), not be adopted as the Commission also recommends that Model Rule 3.5(d) not be adopted.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[5] The duty to refrain from disruptive conduct applies to any proceeding of a tribunal, including a deposition. See Rule 1.0(m).	~~[5] The duty to refrain from disruptive conduct applies to any proceeding of a tribunal, including a deposition. See Rule 1.0(m).~~	The Commission recommends that Model Rule 3.5, cmt. [5], which relates to Model Rule 3.5(d), not be adopted as the Commission also recommends that Model Rule 3.5(d) not be adopted.

Rule ~~5-300~~ ~~Contact With Officials~~ 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal

(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

~~(a)(A)~~ ~~A member~~ Except as permitted by the Code of Judicial Ethics, a lawyer shall not directly or indirectly give or lend anything of value to a judge, official, or employee of a tribunal unless the personal or family relationship between the ~~member~~ lawyer and the judge, official, or employee is such that gifts are customarily given and exchanged. ~~Nothing contained in this rule~~ This Rule shall not prohibit a ~~member~~ lawyer from contributing to the campaign fund of a judge running for election or confirmation pursuant to applicable law pertaining to such contributions.

~~(b)(B)~~ ~~A member~~ Unless authorized to do so by law, the Code of Judicial Ethics, a ruling of a tribunal, or a court order, a lawyer shall not directly or indirectly communicate with or argue to a judge or judicial officer upon the merits of a contested matter pending before ~~such~~ the judge or judicial officer, except:

- (1) ~~In~~ in open court; ~~or~~
- (2) ~~With~~ with the consent of all other counsel in ~~such~~ the matter; ~~or~~
- (3) ~~In~~ in the presence of all other counsel in ~~such~~ the matter; ~~or~~
- (4) ~~In~~ in writing with a copy thereof furnished promptly to ~~such~~ all other counsel; or
- (5) ~~In~~ in ex parte matters as permitted by law.

~~(c)(C)~~ As used in this ~~rule~~ Rule, "judge" and "judicial officer" shall include law clerks, research attorneys, ~~or~~ other court personnel who participate in the ~~decision-making~~ decisionmaking process and neutral arbitrators.

Rule ~~5-320~~ ~~Contact With Jurors~~

~~(d)(A)~~ A ~~member~~ lawyer connected with a case shall not communicate directly or indirectly with anyone the ~~member~~ lawyer knows to be a member of the venire from which the jury will be selected for trial of that case.

~~(e)(B)~~ During a trial a ~~member~~ lawyer connected with the case shall not communicate directly or indirectly with any juror.

~~(f)(A)~~ During a trial a ~~member~~ lawyer who is not connected with the case shall not communicate directly or indirectly concerning the case with anyone the ~~member~~ lawyer knows is a juror in the case.

~~(B) After discharge of the jury from further consideration of a case a member shall not ask questions of or make comments to a member of that jury that are intended to harass or embarrass the juror or to influence the juror's actions in future jury service.~~

~~(g)~~ A lawyer shall not communicate directly or indirectly with a juror or prospective juror after discharge of the jury if:

- (1) the communication is prohibited by law or court order;
- (2) the juror has made known to the lawyer a desire not to communicate;

(3) the communication involves misrepresentation, coercion, duress or harassment; or

(4) the communication is intended to influence the juror's actions in future jury service.

(h)(C) A ~~member~~lawyer shall not directly or indirectly conduct an out of court investigation of a person who is either a member of ~~the~~a venire or a juror in a manner likely to influence the state of mind of such person in connection with present or future jury service.

(i)(D) All restrictions imposed by this ~~rule~~Rule also apply to communications with, or investigations of, members of the family of a person who is either a member of ~~the~~a venire or a juror.

(j)(E) A ~~member~~lawyer shall reveal promptly to the court improper conduct by a person who is either a member of a venire or a juror, or by another toward a person who is either a member of a venire or a juror or a member of his or her family, of which the ~~member~~lawyer has knowledge.

(k)(F) This ~~rule~~Rule does not prohibit a ~~member~~lawyer from communicating with persons who are members of a venire or jurors as a part of the official proceedings.

(l)(G) For the purposes of this ~~rule~~Rule, "juror" means any ~~empanelled~~empaneled, discharged, removed, or excused juror.

COMMENT

[1] Many forms of improper influence upon a tribunal are proscribed by criminal law. Others are specified in the Code of Judicial Ethics and Code Civ. P. section 170.9, with which an advocate should be familiar. A lawyer is required to avoid contributing to a violation of such provisions.

[2] During a proceeding a lawyer may not communicate ex parte with persons serving in an official capacity in the proceeding, such as judges, masters or jurors, unless authorized to do so by law or court order, but a lawyer who is serving as a temporary judge, referee or court-appointed arbitrator under Rule 2.4.1 may do so in the performance of that service. "Promptly" as used in paragraph (b)(4) of this Rule means that a copy of a communication to a judge should be sent to opposing counsel by means likely to result in receipt of the copy of the communication substantially simultaneously to its receipt by the judge.

[3] For guidance on permissible communications with a juror or prospective juror after discharge of the jury, see also Code of Civil Procedure, section 206.

[4] It is improper for a lawyer to communicate with a juror who has been removed, discharged, or excused from an empaneled jury, regardless of whether notice is given to other counsel, until such time as the entire jury has been discharged from further service or unless the communication is part of the official proceedings of the case.

Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal (Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) Except as permitted by the Code of Judicial Ethics, a lawyer shall not directly or indirectly give or lend anything of value to a judge, official, or employee of a tribunal unless the personal or family relationship between the lawyer and the judge, official, or employee is such that gifts are customarily given and exchanged. This Rule shall not prohibit a lawyer from contributing to the campaign fund of a judge running for election or confirmation pursuant to applicable law pertaining to such contributions.
- (b) Unless authorized to do so by law, the Code of Judicial Ethics, a ruling of a tribunal, or a court order, a lawyer shall not directly or indirectly communicate with or argue to a judge or judicial officer upon the merits of a contested matter pending before the judge or judicial officer, except:
 - (1) in open court;
 - (2) with the consent of all other counsel in the matter;
 - (3) in the presence of all other counsel in the matter;
 - (4) in writing with a copy thereof furnished promptly to all other counsel; or
 - (5) in ex parte matters as permitted by law.
- (c) As used in this Rule, “judge” and “judicial officer” shall include law clerks, research attorneys, other court personnel who participate in the decisionmaking process, and neutral arbitrators.
- (d) A lawyer connected with a case shall not communicate directly or indirectly with anyone the lawyer knows to be a member of the venire from which the jury will be selected for trial of that case.
- (e) During a trial a lawyer connected with the case shall not communicate directly or indirectly with any juror.
- (f) During a trial a lawyer who is not connected with the case shall not communicate directly or indirectly concerning the case with anyone the lawyer knows is a juror in the case.
- (g) A lawyer shall not communicate directly or indirectly with a juror or prospective juror after discharge of the jury if:
 - (1) the communication is prohibited by law or court order;
 - (2) the juror has made known to the lawyer a desire not to communicate;
 - (3) the communication involves misrepresentation, coercion, duress or harassment; or
 - (4) the communication is intended to influence the juror's actions in future jury service.
- (h) A lawyer shall not directly or indirectly conduct an out of court investigation of a person who is either a member of a venire or a juror in a manner likely to influence the state of mind of such person in connection with present or future jury service.

- (i) All restrictions imposed by this Rule also apply to communications with, or investigations of, members of the family of a person who is either a member of a venire or a juror.
- (j) A lawyer shall reveal promptly to the court improper conduct by a person who is either a member of a venire or a juror, or by another toward a person who is either a member of a venire or a juror or a member of his or her family, of which the lawyer has knowledge.
- (k) This Rule does not prohibit a lawyer from communicating with persons who are members of a venire or jurors as a part of the official proceedings.
- (l) For the purposes of this Rule, “juror” means any empaneled, discharged, removed, or excused juror.

COMMENT

- [1] Many forms of improper influence upon a tribunal are proscribed by criminal law. Others are specified in the Code of Judicial Ethics and Code Civ. P. section 170.9, with which an advocate should be familiar. A lawyer is required to avoid contributing to a violation of such provisions.
- [2] During a proceeding a lawyer may not communicate ex parte with persons serving in an official capacity in the proceeding, such as judges, masters or jurors, unless authorized to do so by law or court order, but a lawyer who is serving as a temporary judge, referee or court-appointed arbitrator under Rule 2.4.1 may do so in the performance of that service. “Promptly” as used in paragraph (b)(4) of this Rule means that a copy of a communication to a judge should be sent to opposing counsel by means likely to result in receipt of the copy of the communication substantially simultaneously to its receipt by the judge.

- [3] For guidance on permissible communications with a juror or prospective juror after discharge of the jury, see also Code of Civil Procedure, section 206.
- [4] It is improper for a lawyer to communicate with a juror who has been removed, discharged, or excused from an empaneled jury, regardless of whether notice is given to other counsel, until such time as the entire jury has been discharged from further service or unless the communication is part of the official proceedings of the case.

Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Office of Chief Trial Counsel ("OCTC")	M	Yes		OCTC recommends that subparagraph (g) also include that a lawyer shall not communicate to the juror or prospective jurors after discharge when the communication is intended to prevent the juror from communicating with the other party or the court. (Lind v. Medevac (1990) 219 Cal.app.3d 516.) While this has been interpreted under what is now subparagraph (g)(4), it would be clearer and more enforceable if it was its own prohibition. Comment [4] seems more appropriate for a treatise, law review article, or ethics opinion.	The Commission disagrees that a specific prohibition is necessary or desired, given that paragraph (g)(4) has already been found to apply in the described circumstances. The Commission disagrees with the commenter's assessment and has concluded that Comment [4] provides clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on the duration of the described duty.
2	San Diego County Bar Association	M	Yes		Delete requirement that lawyers be familiar with the Code of Judicial Ethics.	Commission did not make the requested revision. The clause comes from MR 3.5, cmt. [1]. The clause is aspirational ("should") rather than mandatory ("must"), so it would not have disciplinary consequences. Moreover, it is in the comment to the Rule, not the Rule itself. It does not "impose" a requirement on lawyers. Finally, an advocate who regularly appears before tribunals should be familiar with the Code of Judicial Ethics.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 3.5 Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 3 Agree = 1 Disagree = 0 Modify = 2 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
3	State Bar Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct (COPRAC)	A	Y		Supports rule as drafted.	No response required.

Rule 3.5: Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Arizona clarifies that Rule 3.5(a) applies only to an official “of a tribunal,” and substitutes “likely” for “intended” in Rule 3.5(d).

California: Rule 5-300 provides as follows:

(A) A member shall not directly or indirectly give or lend anything of value to a judge, official, or employee of a tribunal unless the personal or family relationship between the member and the judge, official, or employee is such that gifts are customarily given and exchanged. Nothing contained in this rule shall prohibit a member from contributing to the campaign fund of a judge running for election or confirmation pursuant to applicable law pertaining to such contributions.

(B) A member shall not directly or indirectly communicate with or argue to a judge or judicial officer upon the merits of a contested matter pending before such judge or judicial officer, except:

(1) In open court; or

(2) With the consent of all other counsel in such matter; or

(3) In the presence of all other counsel in such matter; or

(4) In writing with a copy thereof furnished to such other counsel; or

(5) In ex parte matters.

(C) As used in this rule, “judge” and “judicial officer” shall include law clerks, research attorneys, or other court personnel who participate in the decision-making process.

Florida: Rule 3.5(a) provides that a lawyer shall not seek to influence a judge, juror, prospective juror, or other decision maker “except as permitted by law or the rules of court.” Rule 3.5(d), governing communications with jurors, former jurors, and prospective jurors, generally tracks DR 7-108 of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility, but adds that a lawyer shall not:

(4) after dismissal of the jury in a case with which the lawyer is connected, initiate communication with or cause another to initiate communication with any juror regarding the trial except to determine whether the verdict may be subject to legal challenge; provided, a lawyer may not interview jurors for this purpose unless the lawyer has reason to believe that grounds for such challenge may exist; and provided further, before conducting any such interview the lawyer must file in the cause a notice of intention to interview setting forth the name of the juror or jurors to be interviewed. A copy of the notice must be delivered to the trial judge and opposing counsel a reasonable time before such interview. . . .

Georgia: Rule 3.5 adopts most of the pre-2002 version of ABA Model Rule 3.5 verbatim, but alters the introductory phrase to make clear that the prohibitions apply “without regard to whether the lawyer represents a client in the matter.”

Maryland: Rule 3.5 includes several sui generis provisions, including a prohibition against discussing employment of a judge before whom the lawyer’s firm has a matter, a limitation on contacts with discharged jurors, and a requirement to report knowledge of improper contacts with jurors or prospective jurors.

Massachusetts: Rule 3.5(d) restricts the ability of lawyers connected to a case to initiate a communication with a member of the jury after discharge without leave of the court.

Michigan: Rule 3.5(c) retains the language of DR 7-106(C)(6) of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility.

Nevada adds Rule 3.5(e):

(e) Before the jury is sworn to try the cause, a lawyer may investigate the prospective jurors to ascertain any basis for challenge, provided that a lawyer or the lawyer’s employees or independent contractors may not, at any time before the commencement of the trial, conduct or authorize any investigation of the prospective jurors, through any means which are calculated or likely to lead to communication with prospective jurors of any allegations or factual circumstances relating to the case at issue. Conduct prohibited by this Rule includes, but is not limited to, any direct or indirect communication with a prospective juror, a member of the juror’s family, any employer, or any other person that may lead to direct or indirect communication with a prospective juror.

New Jersey: Rule 3.5(b) provides only that a lawyer shall not communicate ex parte with anyone specified in subparagraph (a) “except as permitted by law,” and New Jersey Rule 3.5(c) says only that a lawyer shall not “engage in conduct intended to disrupt a tribunal.” New Jersey deletes ABA Model Rules 3.5(c)(1)-(3) and Rule 3.5(d).

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 3.5 draws heavily on the old Model Code. Rule 3.5(a)(1)-(2) is similar to 7-110(A) and (B), respectively. Rule 3.5(a)(4) is similar to DR 7-108(A) and (B)(1), and Rule 3.5(a)(6) is similar to DR 7-108(E). Rule 3.5(b)-(d) is nearly identical to DR 7-108(B)(2), 7-108(F), and 7-108(G), respectively.

North Carolina: Rule 3.5 adds language from DR 7-106(C)(5)-(7), DR 7-108(D),(F), and (G), and DR 7-110(B) of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility.

Ohio replaces the term “judge” with the term “judicial officer” throughout Rule 3.5. Ohio adds Rule 3.5(a)(2), which provides that a lawyer shall not “lend anything of value or give anything of more than de minimis value to a judicial officer, official, or employee of a tribunal.” Ohio Rule 3.5(a)(3) provides that a lawyer shall not communicate ex parte with “(i) a judicial officer or other official as to the merits of the case during the proceeding unless authorized to do so by law or court order” or “(ii) a juror or prospective juror during the proceeding unless otherwise authorized to do so by law or court order.” Ohio also adds a new Rule 3.5(b), which provides that a lawyer “shall reveal promptly to the tribunal improper conduct by a juror or prospective juror, or by another toward a juror, prospective juror, or family member of a juror or prospective juror, of which the lawyer has knowledge.”

Texas: Rule 3.05 is substantially the same as DR 7-110(B) of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility. Rule 3.06 borrows heavily from DR 7-108, but rearranges the order somewhat, adds references to an “alternate juror,” and provides in Rule 3.06(A)(2) that a lawyer shall not “seek to influence a venireman or juror concerning the merits of a pending matter by means prohibited by law or applicable rules of practice or procedure.”

Virginia: Rule 3.5(a)(2) generally tracks DR 7-108(D) of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility but adds that a lawyer shall not “after discharge of the jury from further consideration of a case: (i) ask questions of or make comments to a member of that jury that are calculated merely to harass or embarrass the juror or to influence the juror’s actions in future jury service.” A new Rule 3.5(e) adds exceptions to the rule against ex parte communications with a judge.

Proposed Rule 3.6 [5-120] “Trial Publicity”

(XDraft #5, 12/12/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 3.6 largely tracks Model Rule 3.6, which regulates lawyer conduct concerning pre-trial publicity. Proposed Rule 3.6 adopts the revised Model Rule with changes intended to facilitate construction of the Rule and to protect client confidentiality. See Introduction. The proposed Rule also retains some of the Discussion to rule 5-120, the current California counterpart to Model Rule 3.6, and most of the Model Rule comment. See Explanation of Changes.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule

Comment

- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☒ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 5-120

Statute

Bus. & Prof. Code §6103.7.

Case law

Gentile v. State Bar of Nevada, (1991) 501 U.S. 1030, 111 S.Ct. 2720, 115 L. Ed.2d 888

- ☒ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

D.C. Rule 3.6.

- ☒ Other Primary Factor(s)

The history of adoption of the current Rule 5-120.

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 7

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 2

Abstain 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☐ Yes ☒ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

Two commenters, including the Santa Clara County Bar Association, believe the Rule should not be adopted.

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 3.6* Trial Publicity

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Current Rule 5-120 is the California counterpart to Model Rule 3.6. When adopted in 1995, Rule 5-120 adopted the language in Model Rule 3.6 verbatim; however, the Discussion to the rule differed from the Model Rule. The ABA modified Model Rule 3.6 in 2000.

Proposed Rule 3.6 adopts the revised Model Rule with minor changes to assist in the construction of the Rule and to assure that the Rule does not supersede a lawyer's duty to maintain a client's confidential information. The proposed Rule retains some of the Discussion to current rule 5-120 and retains most of the Model Rule Comments. However, the proposed Rule contains a revised Comment [1], which incorporates concepts in Comments [1] and [3] to the Model Rule and in Comment [1] to the version of the Model Rule adopted by Washington D.C.

Follow public comment, the Commission made three changes to the Rule. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (b)(6) and Comment [4].

* Proposed Rule 3.6, XDraft 5 (12/12/09).

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) A lawyer who is participating or has participated in the investigation or litigation of a matter shall not make an extrajudicial statement that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know will be disseminated by means of public communication and will have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adjudicative proceeding in the matter.	(a) A lawyer who is participating or has participated in the investigation or litigation of a matter shall not make an extrajudicial statement that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know will (i) be disseminated by means of public communication and ~~will~~ (ii) have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adjudicative proceeding in the matter.	In the course of the Commission's deliberations, there was some confusion over whether the "knows or reasonably should know" standard applied to both the means of dissemination and the likelihood of material prejudice or only to the means of dissemination. Comment [3] to the Model Rule states that the knowledge standard applies to both, but the language in the paragraph is not as clear as the Comment. To assure that the Rule would not be misread and clarify that the knowledge standard applies to both, the Commission voted to add the roman numerals.
(b) Notwithstanding paragraph (a), a lawyer may state: (1) the claim, offense or defense involved and, except when prohibited by law, the identity of the persons involved; (2) information contained in a public record; (3) that an investigation of a matter is in progress; (4) the scheduling or result of any step in litigation; (5) a request for assistance in obtaining evidence and information necessary	(b) Notwithstanding paragraph (a), and to the extent permitted by [Rule 1.6], a lawyer may state: (1) the claim, offense or defense involved and, except when prohibited by law, the identity of the persons involved; (2) information contained in a public record; (3) that an investigation of a matter is in progress; (4) the scheduling or result of any step in litigation; (5) a request for assistance in obtaining	A number of states have adopted revisions to Model Rule 3.6. The Commission reviewed all of the variations. One such variation is in the Ohio version of the rule, which added the words in the beginning of paragraph (b) "and if permitted by Rule 1.6..." The Commission adopted a variation of the Ohio language in order to assure that paragraph (b) would not be considered an exception to a lawyer's overriding duty to maintain a client's confidential information. The Commission felt that adding this language was particularly necessary because some of the subparagraphs of paragraph (b) refer to categories of information that could constitute client confidential information.

* Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
thereto; (6) a warning of danger concerning the behavior of a person involved, when there is reason to believe that there exists the likelihood of substantial harm to an individual or to the public interest; and (7) in a criminal case, in addition to subparagraphs (1) through (6): (i) the identity, residence, occupation and family status of the accused; (ii) if the accused has not been apprehended, information necessary to aid in apprehension of that person; (iii) the fact, time and place of arrest; and (iv) the identity of investigating and arresting officers or agencies and the length of the investigation.	evidence and information necessary thereto; (6) a warning of danger concerning the behavior of a person involved, when there is reason to believe that there exists the likelihood of substantial harm to an individual or to the public ~~interest~~ but only to the extent that dissemination by public communication is reasonably necessary to protect the individual or the public; and (7) in a criminal case, in addition to subparagraphs (1) through (6): (i) the identity, residence, occupation and family status of the accused; (ii) if the accused has not been apprehended, information necessary to aid in apprehension of that person; (iii) the fact, time and place of arrest; and (iv) the identity of investigating and arresting officers or agencies and the length of the investigation.	Paragraph (b)(6) was revised to make clear that the exception applies only to the extent the dissemination is reasonably necessary to protect an individual or the public. In addition, the reference to “public interest” was changed to “public” to more clearly focus the exception on protecting health and safety.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(c) Notwithstanding paragraph (a), a lawyer may make a statement that a reasonable lawyer would believe is required to protect a client from the substantial undue prejudicial effect of recent publicity not initiated by the lawyer or the lawyer's client. A statement made pursuant to this paragraph shall be limited to such information as is necessary to mitigate the recent adverse publicity.	(c) Notwithstanding paragraph (a), a lawyer may make a statement that a reasonable lawyer would believe is required to protect a client from the substantial undue prejudicial effect of recent publicity not initiated by the lawyer or the lawyer's client. A statement made pursuant to this paragraph shall be limited to such information as is necessary to mitigate the recent adverse publicity.
(d) No lawyer associated in a firm or government agency with a lawyer subject to paragraph (a) shall make a statement prohibited by paragraph (a).	(d) No lawyer associated in a law firm or government agency with a lawyer subject to paragraph (a) shall make a statement prohibited by paragraph (a).	The Commission changed the reference from "firm" to "law firm" to conform the terminology the Commission has proposed for use throughout the Rules. The purpose of the change here is to distinguish between lawyers engaged in the practice of law in a law firm from lawyers engaged in business associations that do not entail the practice of law, where application of the Rule would be inappropriate.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] It is difficult to strike a balance between protecting the right to a fair trial and safeguarding the right of free expression. Preserving the right to a fair trial necessarily entails some curtailment of the information that may be disseminated about a party prior to trial, particularly where trial by jury is involved. If there were no such limits, the result would be the practical nullification of the protective effect of the rules of forensic decorum and the exclusionary rules of evidence. On the other hand, there are vital social interests served by the free dissemination of information about events having legal consequences and about legal proceedings themselves. The public has a right to know about threats to its safety and measures aimed at assuring its security. It also has a legitimate interest in the conduct of judicial proceedings, particularly in matters of general public concern. Furthermore, the subject matter of legal proceedings is often of direct significance in debate and deliberation over questions of public policy.	[1] ~~This Rule prohibits a lawyer who is difficult participating or has participated in an adjudicative proceeding from making public statements that the lawyer knows or should know will have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing the adjudicative proceeding. The Rule is intended to strike a proper balance between protecting the right to a fair trial and safeguarding the right of free expression, which are both guaranteed by the Constitution. Preserving~~ On one hand, publicity should not be allowed to adversely affect the fair administration of justice. On the other hand, litigants have a right to present their side of a dispute to the public, and the public has an interest in receiving information about matters that are in litigation. Although a lawyer involved in the litigation is often in an advantageous position to further these legitimate objectives, preserving the right to a fair trial necessarily entails some curtailment of the information that may be disseminated ~~about a party~~ prior to trial, particularly where trial by jury is involved. ~~If there were no such limits, the result would be the practical nullification of the protective effect of the rules of forensic decorum and the exclusionary rules of evidence. On the other hand, there are vital social interests served by the free dissemination of information about events having legal consequences and about legal proceedings themselves. The public has a right~~Rule applies only to know about threats to its	Rule 3.6 reflects a balancing of concerns that the practitioner needs to understand in order to apply the Rule. That balancing of policies needs to be addressed succinctly in the introduction to the Comment. The Commission concluded that Comment [1] to the Model Rule is too theoretical and does not spell out the balance clearly. The Commission found that the D.C. Comment did a much better job of framing the considerations that underlie the Rule; however, the Commission felt that the D.C. Comment did not pick up concepts in Comment [3] to the Model Rule that also are pertinent. The proposed Comment is intended to put all of the governing concepts together in one place. It does this by combining the elements of Comment [1] as adopted by the Washington D.C. Bar and Comments [1] and [3] to the Model Rule. The first sentence is derived from the first sentence of Comment [3] to the Model Rule. The second sentence is based on Comment [1] to the Model Rule and Comment [1] to the Washington D.C. rule. The third sentence is a modified version from the Washington D.C. rule. The only difference is that the D.C. comment states that publicity should not be allowed to “influence the fair administration of justice.” The proposed Comment changes that reference to “adversely affect the fair administration of justice,” which the Commission concluded more closely tracks the intent of the Rule. The fourth sentence is taken from the D.C. Comment. The fifth sentence is based on the D.C. Comment. The sixth and seventh sentences are taken from Comment [3] to the Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	~~safety and measures aimed at assuring its security. It also has a legitimate interest~~lawyers who are, or who have been involved in the ~~conduct~~investigation or litigation of ~~judicial proceedings~~a case, particularly in matters of general public concern. Furthermore, the subject matter of legal proceedings is often of direct significance in debate and ~~deliberation over questions of public policy~~their associates.
[2] Special rules of confidentiality may validly govern proceedings in juvenile, domestic relations and mental disability proceedings, and perhaps other types of litigation. Rule 3.4(c) requires compliance with such rules.	~~[2] Special rules of confidentiality may validly govern proceedings in juvenile, domestic relations and mental disability proceedings, and perhaps other types of litigation. Rule 3.4(c) requires compliance with such rules.~~	Comment [2] to the Model Rule was moved to Comment [8]. The Commission concluded that the Model Rule Comment [2] is out of place and does not flow logically with the comments that precede and follow it.
[3] The Rule sets forth a basic general prohibition against a lawyer's making statements that the lawyer knows or should know will have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adjudicative proceeding. Recognizing that the public value of informed commentary is great and the likelihood of prejudice to a proceeding by the commentary of a lawyer who is not involved in the proceeding is small, the rule applies only to lawyers who are, or who have been involved in the investigation or litigation of a case, and their associates.	~~[3] The Rule sets forth a basic general prohibition against a lawyer's making statements that the lawyer knows or should know will have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adjudicative proceeding. Recognizing that the public value of informed commentary is great and the likelihood of prejudice to a proceeding by the commentary of a lawyer who is not involved in the proceeding is small, the rule applies only to lawyers who are, or who have been involved in the investigation or litigation of a case, and their associates.~~	Model Rule Comment [3] is incorporated into Comment [1]

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[4] Paragraph (b) identifies specific matters about which a lawyer's statements would not ordinarily be considered to present a substantial likelihood of material prejudice, and should not in any event be considered prohibited by the general prohibition of paragraph (a). Paragraph (b) is not intended to be an exhaustive listing of the subjects upon which a lawyer may make a statement, but statements on other matters may be subject to paragraph (a).	[4] Paragraph (b) identifies specific matters about which a lawyer's statements would not ordinarily be considered to present a substantial likelihood of material prejudice, and should not in any event be considered prohibited by the general prohibition of paragraph (a). Paragraph (b) is not intended to be an exhaustive listing of the subjects upon which a lawyer may make a statement, but statements on other matters may be subject to paragraph (a).	Comment [2] adopts Model Rule Comment [4].
	[3] Whether an extrajudicial statement violates this Rule depends on many factors, including, without limitation: (1) whether the extrajudicial statement is made for the purpose of influencing a trier of fact about a material fact in issue and presents information clearly inadmissible as evidence in the matter; (2) whether the extrajudicial statement presents information the member knows is false, deceptive, or the use of which would violate Business and Professions Code section 6068(d) or Rule 3.3; and (3) the timing of the statement.	Comment [3] is a modified version of the second paragraph of the Discussion to current Rule 5-120. It is proposed in place of Comment [5] to the Model Rule. The Discussion to the current rule includes a fourth factor which states, "whether the extrajudicial statement violates a lawful "gag" order, or protective order, statute, rule of court, or special rule of confidentiality (for example, in juvenile, domestic, mental disability, and certain criminal proceedings)." The Commission deleted this factor, because the subject matter is now covered by proposed Rule 3.4. The Commission also revised the first factor to insert the phrase "for the purpose of influencing a trier of fact about" in place of the phrase "for the purpose of proving or disproving a material fact in issue." The change was made to clarify that the focus of the Rule is on improper attempts to influence the trier of fact. In response to public comment, the Commission moved the reference from the end of the clause to clarify that the attempt to influence the trier of fact relates to the purpose of the statement.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[5] There are, on the other hand, certain subjects that are more likely than not to have a material prejudicial effect on a proceeding, particularly when they refer to a civil matter triable to a jury, a criminal matter, or any other proceeding that could result in incarceration. These subjects relate to:	~~[5] There are, on the other hand, certain subjects that are more likely than not to have a material prejudicial effect on a proceeding, particularly when they refer to a civil matter triable to a jury, a criminal matter, or any other proceeding that could result in incarceration. These subjects relate to:~~	Model Rule Comment [5] was not included in current California rule 5-120, when it was originally proposed to the Supreme Court. The Commission unanimously decided not to include the Comment in proposed Rule 3.6. Comment [5] is problematic in that it refers to subjects that “are more likely to have a material prejudicial effect on a proceeding;” however, the statements would be permissible under the proposed Rule in some circumstances. The Comment does not address when the subjects would not prejudice a proceeding. It does not give the practitioner any guidance regarding when it would be permissible to discuss the subjects. As a result, the Comment tends to chill speech in situations where the Model Rule would not prohibit it. The Commission believes that proposed Comment [3] better addresses the issues by providing simple criteria for determining when the proposed Rule applies, while, at the same time, recognizing that there may be other factors.
(1) the character, credibility, reputation or criminal record of a party, suspect in a criminal investigation or witness, or the identity of a witness, or the expected testimony of a party or witness; (2) in a criminal case or proceeding that could result in incarceration, the possibility of a plea of guilty to the offense or the existence or contents of any confession, admission, or statement given by a defendant or suspect or that person's refusal or failure to make a statement;	~~(1) the character, credibility, reputation or criminal record of a party, suspect in a criminal investigation or witness, or the identity of a witness, or the expected testimony of a party or witness;~~ ~~(2) in a criminal case or proceeding that could result in incarceration, the possibility of a plea of guilty to the offense or the existence or contents of any confession, admission, or statement given by a defendant or suspect or that person's refusal or failure to make a statement;~~

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(3) the performance or results of any examination or test or the refusal or failure of a person to submit to an examination or test, or the identity or nature of physical evidence expected to be presented; (4) any opinion as to the guilt or innocence of a defendant or suspect in a criminal case or proceeding that could result in incarceration; (5) information that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is likely to be inadmissible as evidence in a trial and that would, if disclosed, create a substantial risk of prejudicing an impartial trial; or (6) the fact that a defendant has been charged with a crime, unless there is included therein a statement explaining that the charge is merely an accusation and that the defendant is presumed innocent until and unless proven guilty.	~~(3) the performance or results of any examination or test or the refusal or failure of a person to submit to an examination or test, or the identity or nature of physical evidence expected to be presented;~~ ~~(4) any opinion as to the guilt or innocence of a defendant or suspect in a criminal case or proceeding that could result in incarceration;~~ ~~(5) information that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is likely to be inadmissible as evidence in a trial and that would, if disclosed, create a substantial risk of prejudicing an impartial trial; or~~ ~~(6) the fact that a defendant has been charged with a crime, unless there is included therein a statement explaining that the charge is merely an accusation and that the defendant is presumed innocent until and unless proven guilty.~~
[6] Another relevant factor in determining prejudice is the nature of the proceeding involved. Criminal jury trials will be most sensitive to extrajudicial speech. Civil trials may be less sensitive. Non-jury hearings and arbitration proceedings may be even less affected. The Rule	~~[6]~~ Another relevant factor in determining prejudice is the nature of the proceeding involved. Criminal jury trials will be most sensitive to extrajudicial speech. Civil trials may be less sensitive. Non-jury hearings and arbitration proceedings may be even less affected. The Rule	Comment [4] adopts Model Rule Comment [6].

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule will still place limitations on prejudicial comments in these cases, but the likelihood of prejudice may be different depending on the type of proceeding.	will still place limitations on prejudicial comments in these cases, but the likelihood of prejudice may be different depending on the type of proceeding.
[7] Finally, extrajudicial statements that might otherwise raise a question under this Rule may be permissible when they are made in response to statements made publicly by another party, another party's lawyer, or third persons, where a reasonable lawyer would believe a public response is required in order to avoid prejudice to the lawyer's client. When prejudicial statements have been publicly made by others, responsive statements may have the salutary effect of lessening any resulting adverse impact on the adjudicative proceeding. Such responsive statements should be limited to contain only such information as is necessary to mitigate undue prejudice created by the statements made by others.	~~[7] Finally~~Under paragraph (c), extrajudicial statements that might otherwise raise a question under this Rule may be permissible when they are made in response to statements made publicly by another party, another party's lawyer, or third persons, where a reasonable lawyer would believe a public response is required in order to avoid prejudice to the lawyer's client. When prejudicial statements have been publicly made by others, responsive statements may ~~have the salutary effect of lessening~~lessen any resulting adverse impact on the adjudicative proceeding. Such responsive statements ~~should~~must be limited to ~~contain only such~~ information ~~as is~~ necessary to mitigate undue prejudice created by ~~the~~ statements ~~made by~~of others.	These changes were made to conform the Comment to the proposed Rule. The reference to paragraph (c) is intended to orient the reader to the portion of the proposed Rule to which it pertains. It conforms to the form the Commission has adopted for other Rules. The Commission deleted the words "have the salutary effect of lessening" and replace them with the word "lessen." The Commission concluded that the deleted language could be read as promoting responsive statements and that a less supportive tone was more appropriate. The word "must" was substituted for the word "should" to conform to the text of paragraph (c) of the proposed Rule. The Model Rule Comment is inconsistent with paragraph (c). Since the text of the Rule governs over the Comment, the Commission concluded that the Comment language should be revised in order to avoid misleading lawyers who rely on the Comment, without realizing that it is inconsistent with the proposed Rule.
[8] See Rule 3.8(f) for additional duties of prosecutors in connection with extrajudicial statements about criminal proceedings.	~~[8]~~6 See Rule 3.8(f) for additional duties of prosecutors in connection with extrajudicial statements about criminal proceedings.	Comment [6] adopts Model Rule Comment [8].
	[7] Special rules of confidentiality may govern proceedings in juvenile, family law and mental disability proceedings, and perhaps other matters. See Rule [3.4(f)], which requires compliance with such rules.	This Comment [7] is Comment [2] to the Model Rule that was moved to the end of the Comments. The Commission concluded that Model Rule Comment [2] is out of place and does not flow logically with the comments that precede and follow it.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[8] Special rules of confidentiality may govern proceedings in juvenile, family law and mental disability proceedings, and perhaps other matters. See Rule 3.4(f), which requires compliance with such rules.	This Comment is Comment [2] to the Model Rule that was moved to the end of the Comments. The Commission concluded that Model Rule Comment [2] is out of place and does not flow logically with the comments that precede and follow it.

Rule ~~5-120~~3.6 Trial Publicity
(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

- (a) ~~(A)~~ A ~~member~~lawyer who is participating or has participated in the investigation or litigation of a matter shall not make an extrajudicial statement that ~~a reasonable person would expect to~~the lawyer knows or reasonably should know will (i) be disseminated by means of public communication ~~if the member knows or reasonably should know that it will~~and (ii) have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adjudicative proceeding in the matter.
- (b) ~~(B)~~Notwithstanding paragraph ~~(Aa)~~, and to the extent permitted by Rule 1.6, a ~~member~~lawyer may state:
- (1) the claim, offense or defense involved and, except when prohibited by law, the identity of the persons involved;
 - (2) ~~the~~information contained in a public record;
 - (3) that an investigation of ~~the~~a matter is in progress;
 - (4) the scheduling or result of any step in litigation;
 - (5) a request for assistance in obtaining evidence and information necessary thereto;
 - (6) a warning of danger concerning the behavior of a person involved, when there is reason to believe that there exists the likelihood of substantial harm to an individual or to the public interest but only to the extent that dissemination by public communication is reasonably necessary to protect the individual or the public; and
- (7) in a criminal case, in addition to subparagraphs (1) through (6):
- ~~(a)~~(i) the identity, residence, occupation, and family status of the accused;
 - ~~(b)~~(ii) if the accused has not been apprehended, ~~the~~ information necessary to aid in apprehension of that person;
 - ~~(c)~~(iii) the fact, time, and place of arrest; and
 - ~~(d)~~(iv) the identity of investigating and arresting officers or agencies and the length of the investigation.
- (c) ~~(C)~~Notwithstanding paragraph ~~(Aa)~~, a ~~member~~lawyer may make a statement that a reasonable ~~member~~lawyer would believe is required to protect a client from the substantial undue prejudicial effect of recent publicity not initiated by the ~~member~~lawyer or the ~~member's~~lawyer's client. A statement made pursuant to this paragraph shall be limited to such information as is necessary to mitigate the recent adverse publicity.
- (d) No lawyer associated in a law firm or government agency with a lawyer subject to paragraph (a) shall make a statement prohibited by paragraph (a).

Discussion:

~~Rule 5-120 is intended to apply equally to prosecutors and criminal defense counsel.~~

COMMENT

- [1] This Rule prohibits a lawyer who is participating or has participated in an adjudicative proceeding from making public statements that the lawyer knows or should know will have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing the adjudicative proceeding. The Rule is intended to strike a proper balance between protecting the right to a fair trial and safeguarding the right of free expression, which are both guaranteed by the Constitution. On one hand, publicity should not be allowed to adversely affect the fair administration of justice. On the other hand, litigants have a right to present their side of a dispute to the public, and the public has an interest in receiving information about matters that are in litigation. Although a lawyer involved in the litigation is often in an advantageous position to further these legitimate objectives, preserving the right to a fair trial necessarily entails some curtailment of the information that may be disseminated prior to trial, particularly where trial by jury is involved. The Rule applies only to lawyers who are, or who have been involved in the investigation or litigation of a case, and their associates.
- [2] Paragraph (b) identifies specific matters about which a lawyer's statements would not ordinarily be considered to present a substantial likelihood of material prejudice, and should not in any event be considered prohibited by the general prohibition of paragraph (a). Paragraph (b) is not intended to be an exhaustive listing of the subjects upon which a lawyer may make a statement, but statements on other matters may be subject to paragraph (a).

- [3] Whether an extrajudicial statement violates ~~rule 5-120~~this Rule depends on many factors, including, without limitation: (1) whether the extrajudicial statement is made for the purpose of influencing a trier of fact about a material fact in issue and presents information clearly inadmissible as evidence in the matter ~~for the purpose of proving or disproving a material fact in issue~~; (2) whether the extrajudicial statement presents information the member knows is false, deceptive, or the use of which would violate Business and Professions Code section 6068(d); ~~(3) whether the extrajudicial statement violates a lawful "gag" order, or protective order, statute, rule of court, or special rule of confidentiality (for example, in juvenile, domestic, mental disability, and certain criminal proceedings)~~Rule 3.3; and ~~(4)~~ (3) the timing of the statement.

~~Paragraph (A) is intended to apply to statements made by or on behalf of the member.~~

~~Subparagraph (B)(6) is not intended to create, augment, diminish, or eliminate any application of the lawyer-client privilege or of Business and Professions Code section 6068(e) regarding the member's duty to maintain client confidence and secrets. (Added by order of the Supreme Court, operative October 1, 1995.)~~

- [4] Another relevant factor in determining prejudice is the nature of the proceeding involved. Criminal jury trials will be most sensitive to extrajudicial speech. Civil trials may be less sensitive. Non-jury hearings and arbitration proceedings may be even less affected. The Rule will still place limitations on prejudicial comments in these cases, but the likelihood of prejudice may be different depending on the type of proceeding.

- [5] Under paragraph (c), extrajudicial statements that might otherwise raise a question under this Rule may be permissible when they are made in response to statements made publicly by another party, another party's lawyer, or third persons, where a reasonable lawyer would believe a public response is required in order to avoid prejudice to the lawyer's client. When prejudicial statements have been publicly made by others, responsive statements may lessen any resulting adverse impact on the adjudicative proceeding. Such responsive statements must be limited to information necessary to mitigate undue prejudice created by statements of others.
- [6] See Rule 3.8(f) for additional duties of prosecutors in connection with extrajudicial statements about criminal proceedings.
- [7] Special rules of confidentiality may govern proceedings in juvenile, family law and mental disability proceedings, and perhaps other matters. See Rule [3.4(f)], which requires compliance with such rules.
- [8] Special rules of confidentiality may govern proceedings in juvenile, family law and mental disability proceedings, and perhaps other matters. See Rule 3.4(f), which requires compliance with such rules.

Rule 3.6: Trial Publicity
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) A lawyer who is participating or has participated in the investigation or litigation of a matter shall not make an extrajudicial statement that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know will (i) be disseminated by means of public communication and (ii) have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adjudicative proceeding in the matter.
 - (i) the identity, residence, occupation and family status of the accused;
 - (ii) if the accused has not been apprehended, information necessary to aid in apprehension of that person;
 - (iii) the fact, time and place of arrest; and
 - (iv) the identity of investigating and arresting officers or agencies and the length of the investigation.
- (b) Notwithstanding paragraph (a), and to the extent permitted by Rule 1.6, a lawyer may state:
 - (1) the claim, offense or defense involved and, except when prohibited by law, the identity of the persons involved;
 - (2) information contained in a public record;
 - (3) that an investigation of a matter is in progress;
 - (4) the scheduling or result of any step in litigation;
 - (5) a request for assistance in obtaining evidence and information necessary thereto;
 - (6) a warning of danger concerning the behavior of a person involved, when there is reason to believe that there exists the likelihood of substantial harm to an individual or to the public but only to the extent that dissemination by public communication is reasonably necessary to protect the individual or the public; and
 - (7) in a criminal case, in addition to subparagraphs (1) through (6):
 - (c) Notwithstanding paragraph (a), a lawyer may make a statement that a reasonable lawyer would believe is required to protect a client from the substantial undue prejudicial effect of recent publicity not initiated by the lawyer or the lawyer's client. A statement made pursuant to this paragraph shall be limited to such information as is necessary to mitigate the recent adverse publicity.
 - (d) No lawyer associated in a law firm or government agency with a lawyer subject to paragraph (a) shall make a statement prohibited by paragraph (a).

COMMENT

- [1] This Rule prohibits a lawyer who is participating or has participated in an adjudicative proceeding from making public statements that the lawyer knows or should know will have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing the adjudicative proceeding. The Rule is intended to strike a proper balance between protecting the right to a fair trial and safeguarding the right of free expression, which are both guaranteed by the Constitution. On one hand, publicity should not be allowed to adversely affect the fair administration of justice. On the other hand, litigants have a right to present their side of a dispute to the public, and the public has an interest in receiving information about matters that are in litigation. Although a lawyer involved in the litigation is often in an advantageous position to further these legitimate objectives, preserving the right to a fair trial necessarily entails some curtailment of the information that may be disseminated prior to trial, particularly where trial by jury is involved. The Rule applies only to lawyers who are, or who have been involved in the investigation or litigation of a case, and their associates.

- [2] Paragraph (b) identifies specific matters about which a lawyer's statements would not ordinarily be considered to present a substantial likelihood of material prejudice, and should not in any event be considered prohibited by the general prohibition of paragraph (a). Paragraph (b) is not intended to be an exhaustive listing of the subjects upon which a lawyer may make a statement, but statements on other matters may be subject to paragraph (a).
- [3] Whether an extrajudicial statement violates this Rule depends on many factors, including, without limitation: (1) whether the extrajudicial statement is made for the purpose of influencing a trier of fact about a material fact in issue and presents information clearly inadmissible as evidence in the matter; (2) whether the extrajudicial statement presents information the member knows is false, deceptive, or the use of which would violate Business and Professions Code section 6068(d) or Rule 3.3; and (3) the timing of the statement.

- [4] Another relevant factor in determining prejudice is the nature of the proceeding involved. Criminal jury trials will be most sensitive to extrajudicial speech. Civil trials may be less sensitive. Non-jury hearings and arbitration proceedings may be even less affected. The Rule will still place limitations on prejudicial comments in these cases, but the likelihood of prejudice may be different depending on the type of proceeding.
- [5] Under paragraph (c), extrajudicial statements that might otherwise raise a question under this Rule may be permissible when they are made in response to statements made publicly by another party, another party's lawyer, or third persons, where a reasonable lawyer would believe a public response is required in order to avoid prejudice to the lawyer's client. When prejudicial statements have been publicly made by others, responsive statements may lessen any resulting adverse impact on the adjudicative proceeding. Such responsive statements must be limited to information necessary to mitigate undue prejudice created by statements of others.
- [6] See Rule 3.8(f) for additional duties of prosecutors in connection with extrajudicial statements about criminal proceedings.
- [7] Special rules of confidentiality may govern proceedings in juvenile, family law and mental disability proceedings, and perhaps other matters. See Rule 3.4(f), which requires compliance with such rules.

Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 5 Agree = 2
Disagree = 1
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	M	Yes		There are too many Comments, many are too long, and they cover subjects and discussions best left to treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.
				Comment [8]	Comment [8] is identical to Comment [7] and should, therefore, be stricken.	Comment [8] was deleted.
3	Public Defender of Los Angeles County	M	Yes	Comments [7] & [8]	Comments [7] and [8] seem duplicative.	Comment [8] was deleted.
4	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
5	Santa Clara County Bar Association	D	Yes		This is an unnecessary rule and constitutionally infirm in that it attempts to prohibit speech that is protected by the 1 st Amendment. Much of the conduct/speech which this rule attempts to proscribe is actually covered by other rules which are set in contexts that do not violate the 1 st Amendment, such as, an attorney	The Commission disagrees and believes that the rule affords important public protection, including but not limited to, promoting respect and confidence in the legal profession. The Commission is not aware of any successful constitutional challenges to the existing California rule which is substantially similar to the proposed rule.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 3.6 Trial Publicity. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 5 Agree = 2 Disagree = 1 Modify = 2 NI = 0
No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response misrepresenting the facts of case; or engaging in conduct that undermines the ability of a litigant to receive a fair trial such as deceit, deception or fraud.

Rule 3.6: Trial Publicity

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Alabama: In the rules effective June 2008, Rule 3.8(a) provides as follows:

(a) A lawyer shall not make an extrajudicial statement that a reasonable person would expect to be disseminated by means of public communication if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that it will have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adjudicative proceeding in the matter.

Alabama Rule 3.8(b) provides that a statement referred to in Rule 3.8(a) ordinarily is likely to have a materially prejudicial effect if it refers to “a civil matter triable to a jury, a criminal matter, or any other proceeding that could result in incarceration” and the statement relates to one of the subjects listed in Comment 5 to ABA Model Rule 3.6 (which Alabama moves to the text of the rule). Alabama omits Rule 3.6(d).

California: Rule 5-120 tracks the pre-2002 version of ABA Model Rule 3.6 nearly verbatim, except that California omits subparagraph (d).

District of Columbia: Rule 3.6 consists of only one sentence: “A lawyer engaged in a case being tried to a judge or jury shall not make an extrajudicial statement that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know will be disseminated by means of mass public communication and will create a serious and imminent threat of material prejudice to the proceeding.”

Florida: Rule 3.6(a) omits the ABA phrase “who is participating or has participated in the investigation or litigation of a matter” and provides that a lawyer shall not make an extrajudicial statement that a “reasonable person” would expect to be disseminated by means of public communication if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that it will have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adjudicative proceeding “due to its creation of an imminent and substantial detrimental effect on that proceeding.” Florida deletes ABA Model Rule 3.6(b), (c), and (d), and substitutes the following Rule 3.6(b):

Statements of Third Parties. A lawyer shall not counsel or assist another person to make such a statement. Counsel shall exercise reasonable care to prevent investigators, employees, or other persons assisting in or associated with a case from making extrajudicial statements that are prohibited under this rule.

Georgia: Rule 3.6(a), (c), and (d) tracks the pre-2002 version of ABA Model Rule 3.6 verbatim, but Georgia has relegated Rule 3.6(b) to a new paragraph 5B of the Comment, which notes that there are “certain subjects which are more likely than not to have no material prejudicial effect on a proceeding.” The Comment then lists all of the items in ABA Model Rule 3.6(b) as examples of things that a lawyer may “usually” state.

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2010, Rule 3.6(a) prohibits an extrajudicial statement if the lawyer “knows or reasonably should know” that the statement would “pose a serious and imminent threat to the fairness of an adjudicative proceeding in the matter.”

Iowa: In Rule 3.6, Iowa adds a paragraph (e) that provides: “Any communication made under paragraph (b) that includes information that a defendant will be or has been charged with a crime must also include a statement explaining that a criminal charge is merely an accusation and the defendant is presumed innocent until and unless proven guilty.”

Michigan places the text of Rule 3.6(b) in the Comment and omits the balance of the rule.

New Jersey deletes ABA Model Rule 3.6(d).

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, New York moves Rule 3.6(b)-(d) to Rule 3.6(c)-(e) and uses 3.6(b) for a list of subjects that are likely to have a material prejudicial effect. The list is drawn nearly verbatim from Comment 5 of the Model Rules.

North Carolina adds a new Rule 3.6(e), which provides that Rule 3.6 does not “preclude a lawyer from replying to charges of misconduct publicly made against the lawyer or from participating in the proceedings of legislative, administrative, or other investigative bodies.”

Ohio: Rule 3.6(b) makes clear that a lawyer may not engage in trial publicity if doing so would violate a duty of confidentiality under Rule 1.6.

Texas: Rule 3.07(a) begins “[i]n the course of representing a client” in place of the ABA phrase “[a] lawyer who is participating or has participated in the investigation or litigation of a matter,” then tracks ABA Model Rule 3.6(a) verbatim, but Texas, at the end of Rule 3.07(a), adds that a lawyer “shall not counsel or assist another person to make such a statement.”

Texas Rule 3.07(b) provides that a lawyer “ordinarily will violate paragraph (a), and the likelihood of a violation increases if the adjudication is ongoing or imminent,” by making an extrajudicial statement described in Rule 3.07(a) if the statement refers to five specified categories of information, which track verbatim the items listed in Comment 5 to ABA Model Rule 3.6 — except that Texas omits from this list “(6) the fact that a defendant has been charged with a crime, unless there is included therein a statement explaining that the charge is merely an accusation and that the defendant is presumed innocent until and unless proven guilty.”

Texas Rule 3.07(c) generally tracks ABA Model Rule 3.6(b), with slight variations. Texas omits ABA Model Rule 3.6(c) and (d).

Virginia: Rule 3.6 provides as follows:

(a) A lawyer participating in or associated with the investigation or the prosecution or the defense of a criminal matter that may be tried by a jury shall not make or participate in making an extrajudicial statement that a reasonable person would expect to be disseminated by means of public communication that the lawyer knows, or should know, will have a substantial likelihood of interfering with the fairness of the trial by a jury.

(b) A lawyer shall exercise reasonable care to prevent employees and associates from making an extrajudicial statement that the lawyer would be prohibited from making under this Rule.

Proposed Rule 3.7 [5-210]

“Lawyer as Witness”

(XDraft #8.1, 6/30/10)

Summary: The Commission has recommended much of the substance and language of ABA Model Rule 3.7(a). However, with the substitution of the more client-protective provision in current California rule 5-210(C) for Model Rule 3.7(a)(3), the Commission is recommending continued adherence to the more limited scope of the California rule.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart
Rule	Comment
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☒ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☒ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 5-210

Statute

Case law

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 7
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 4
Abstain 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☒ Yes ☐ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☒ Very Controversial – Explanation:

Public comments from COPRAC and ethics law professors take the position that the scope of the rule should not be limited to a lawyer's appearance in a jury trial. This rule would retain a longstanding policy difference between the ABA and California approach.

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 3.7* Lawyer as a Witness

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

1. The Commission is recommending that much of the substance and language of ABA Model Rule 3.7(a) not be adopted. Instead, the Commission recommends continued adherence to the more limited scope of the California rule.
2. First, the Commission recommends carrying forward current rule 5-210's limitation of the Rule to jury trials. The Commission has concluded that any threat to of the trier of fact being confused by a lawyer's dual role as advocate and witness is substantially diminished in a bench trial. As a sophisticated evaluator of testimony and evidence, a bench officer would not be expected to be confused by the lawyer's dual role.
3. Second, the Commission recommends that Model Rule 3.7(a)(3) be deleted because it refers to principles of disqualification for substantial hardship to the client. Because authority over disqualification does not reside with the State Bar but rather with the courts, a disciplinary rule should not limit the right of judiciary to protect the fair administration of justice nor improperly intrude on the judicial function. Instead, the Commission recommends carrying forward current rule 5-210(C), which protects the client's autonomy by ensuring the client is fully informed to decide whether to consent to the lawyer's dual role. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a)(3).
4. Third, the Commission for the most part recommends rejecting the ABA Model Rule comments, which reflect the broader scope of the ABA Rule and thus are not pertinent to the proposed Rule, or which relate to disqualification issues. See Explanation of Changes for Model Rule 3.7, cmts. [1] – [6], below.
5. Minority. A minority of the Commission disagrees with the recommendation to carry forward current rule 5-210's limitation of the proposed Rule to jury trials and with the recommendation to carry forward Rule 5-210(C). The minority prefers Model Rule approach, which emphasizes protecting and ensuring the integrity of the judicial process. See Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (a)(1) and (a)(3), and Explanation of Changes for rejected Model Rule Comments [1] – [3], below. See also, a separately provided minority statement.

* Proposed Rule 3.7, XDraft 8.1 (6/30/10).

Proposed Rule 3.7 Lawyer as a Witness

Rules Revision Commission – Minority Dissent

The majority eliminates important public protection from the advocate-witness rule. Model Rule 3.7 is the prevailing standard in the U.S. and is consistent with case law in California. No other jurisdiction limits the rule to jury trials, and for good reason, since the objectives of the rule also apply to bench trials. Annot. Model Rules at pages 359-360. The well recognized purpose of the rule includes protecting the fairness of the judicial process which includes the tribunal and the interests of other parties to the proceeding as well as addressing conflicts of interest. Hazard & Hodes, The Law Governing Lawyers § 33.6; Restatement Third, Law Governing Lawyers §108, Cmt. b and reporter's notes. Protecting the fairness of the judicial process is one of the stated purposes of the California rules. Proposed Rule 1.0(a); There are no comments explaining the limited purpose of paragraph (a) in contrast to the Model Rule comments (1) – (3). The advocate-witness rule has important applications in criminal cases. See, e.g., People v. Donaldson, 93 Cal. App. 4th 916 (2001)(citing Model Rule 3.7(a)); U.S. v. Edwards, 154 F.3d 915 (9th Cir. 1998) Consent of the client will not suffice in these situations. Conflicts under this rule are not limited to advocates testifying in jury trials. California's current rule 5-210 was adopted 30 years ago to overturn Comden v. Superior Court (1979) 20 Cal. 3d 907 and is outdated. The concern raised by that decision is adequately addressed in paragraph (b) of the proposed rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.7 Lawyer as a Witness	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.7 Lawyer as a Witness	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) A lawyer shall not act as advocate at a trial in which the lawyer is likely to be a necessary witness unless:	(a) A lawyer shall not act as an advocate ~~at~~in a jury trial in which the lawyer is likely to be a necessary witness unless:	The Commission recommends retaining the approach in current California rule 5-210, whose application is limited to jury trials. The Commission notes that any threat of the trier of fact being confused by a lawyer's dual role as advocate and witness is substantially diminished in a bench trial. As a sophisticated evaluator of testimony and evidence, a bench officer would not be expected to be confused by the lawyer's dual role. Minority. A minority of the Commission believes that the Rule should also apply to bench trials, as in every other jurisdiction in the country. See complete Dissent, below.
(1) the testimony relates to an uncontested issue;	(1) the testimony relates to an uncontested issue or matter;	Adopted the ABA Model Rule with addition: Added "matter" in addition to "issue" for public protection. Issue is too narrow if standing alone and might not include a lawyers' uncontested testimony about a different or related legal case or transaction.
(2) the testimony relates to the nature and value of legal services rendered in the case; or	(2) the testimony relates to the nature and value of legal services rendered in the case; or	Adopted the ABA Model Rule.

* Proposed Rule, XDraft 8.1 (6/30/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.7 Lawyer as a Witness	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.7 Lawyer as a Witness	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(3) disqualification of the lawyer would work substantial hardship on the client.	~~(3) disqualification of the lawyer would work substantial hardship on the client.~~ (3) the lawyer has obtained the informed written consent of the client. If the lawyer represents the People or a governmental entity, the consent shall be obtained from the head of the office or a designee of the head of the office by which the lawyer is employed.	Rejected the ABA Model Rule to increase public protection and retained the provision in current California rule 5-210(C): Disqualification is not relevant to discipline. California courts have the inherent authority to disqualify an advocate/witness irrespective of compliance with the rule. See Smith, Smith & Kring v. Superior Court (Oliver) (App. 4 Dist. 1997) 60 Cal.App.4th 573, 581, 70 Cal.Rptr.2d 507. In place of Model Rule 3.7(a)(3), the Commission has substituted current California rule 5-210(C). If the role of advocate/witness creates conflicts of interest, for public protection reasons, the client should be fully informed in writing of those conflicts, the facts and circumstances necessary to make an informed and intelligent decision and consent in writing, as is required in the first sentence of the Commission's proposed paragraph (a)(3). A substantial hardship alone should not be the determinative issue without client consent. The second sentence of proposed paragraph (a)(3) identifies the required source of consent in a governmental entity context. Minority. A second minority group of Commission members takes the position that the one of the purposes of the Rules in general and this Rule in particular is to protect the judicial process and the administration of justice. Permitting a lawyer to be both advocate and witness based only on the consent of a client who could likely be benefited by any confusion caused by the lawyer's dual role, poses a threat to the fair administration of justice. This minority believes that Model Rule 3.7(a)(3) provides the appropriate balancing of interests by permitting a lawyer to engage in such dual roles when the court has determined the client would otherwise suffer a hardship if the lawyer were disqualified.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.7 Lawyer as a Witness	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.7 Lawyer as a Witness	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(b) A lawyer may act as advocate in a trial in which another lawyer in the lawyer's firm is likely to be called as a witness unless precluded from doing so by Rule 1.7 or Rule 1.9.	(b) A lawyer may act as advocate in a trial in which another lawyer in the lawyer's firm is likely to be called as a witness unless precluded from doing so by [Rule 1.7] or [Rule 1.9].	Adopted the ABA Model Rule. Brackets have been placed around "Rule 1.7" and "Rule 1.9" pending the Commission's final recommendation concerning these rules.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.7 Lawyer as a Witness Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.7 Lawyer as a Witness Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] Combining the roles of advocate and witness can prejudice the tribunal and the opposing party and can also involve a conflict of interest between the lawyer and client.	~~[1] Combining the roles of advocate and witness can prejudice the tribunal and the opposing party and can also involve a conflict of interest between the lawyer and client.~~	Rejected ABA Model Rule 3.7. Comment [1], because the comment's overbreadth is not a meaningful explanation of the Rule. As noted in the Rule Explanation, California's rule is more limited in scope than the Model Rule. There have been no published California cases criticizing the rule as being prejudicial. There have not been significant disciplinary complaints or legal malpractice cases concerning the current California rule. The California policy has worked well and should be continued. Minority. The same minority group of Commission members that opposes the substitution of current California rule 5-210(C) for Model Rule 3.7(a)(3) because of its potentially deleterious effect on the fair administration of justice, see Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a)(3), objects to the deletion of MR 3.7, cmts. [1]-[3]. The minority notes that these comments contain important statements of the policies that underlie the Rule, regardless of whether Model Rule 3.7(a)(3) is rejected.
Advocate-Witness Rule [2] The tribunal has proper objection when the trier of fact may be confused or misled by a lawyer serving as both advocate and witness. The opposing party has proper objection where the combination of roles may prejudice that party's rights in the litigation. A witness is required to testify on the basis of personal knowledge, while an advocate is expected to explain and comment on evidence given by others. It may not be clear whether a statement by an advocate-witness	~~Advocate-Witness Rule~~ ~~[2] The tribunal has proper objection when the trier of fact may be confused or misled by a lawyer serving as both advocate and witness. The opposing party has proper objection where the combination of roles may prejudice that party's rights in the litigation. A witness is required to testify on the basis of personal knowledge, while an advocate is expected to explain and comment on evidence given by others. It may not be clear whether a statement by an advocate-witness~~	Rejected ABA Model Rule 3.7, Comment [2] because the issues addressed do not relate to enforcing a disciplinary rule but rather to a judge's consideration of principles in furtherance of the fair administration of justice, including disqualification, limitation of witness testimony, and the use of judicial instruction. In California, the principles for the guidance of judges are set forth in more detail in case law. (See e.g., See, e.g. for civil cases: Smith, Smith & Kring v. Superior Court (Oliver) (App. 4 Dist. 1997) 60 Cal.App.4th 573, 579-582, 70 Cal.Rptr.2d 507 and for criminal cases: People v. Dunkle (2005), 36 Cal.4th 861,32 Cal.Rptr.3d 23, rehearing denied, certiorari denied 126 S.Ct. 1884, 547 U.S. 1100, 164 L.Ed.2d 571; People v. Donaldson should be taken as proof or as an analysis of the proof	~~should be taken as proof or as an analysis of the proof~~	(App. 5 Dist. 2001) 113 Cal.Rptr.2d 548, 93 Cal.App.4th 916. Minority. See Explanation of Changes, Comment [1].

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.7 Lawyer as a Witness Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.7 Lawyer as a Witness Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[3] To protect the tribunal, paragraph (a) prohibits a lawyer from simultaneously serving as advocate and necessary witness except in those circumstances specified in paragraphs (a)(1) through (a)(3). Paragraph (a)(1) recognizes that if the testimony will be uncontested, the ambiguities in the dual role are purely theoretical. Paragraph (a)(2) recognizes that where the testimony concerns the extent and value of legal services rendered in the action in which the testimony is offered, permitting the lawyers to testify avoids the need for a second trial with new counsel to resolve that issue. Moreover, in such a situation the judge has firsthand knowledge of the matter in issue; hence, there is less dependence on the adversary process to test the credibility of the testimony.	~~[3] To protect the tribunal, paragraph (a) prohibits a lawyer from simultaneously serving as advocate and necessary witness except in those circumstances specified in paragraphs (a)(1) through (a)(3). Paragraph (a)(1) recognizes that if the testimony will be uncontested, the ambiguities in the dual role are purely theoretical. Paragraph (a)(2) recognizes that where the testimony concerns the extent and value of legal services rendered in the action in which the testimony is offered, permitting the lawyers to testify avoids the need for a second trial with new counsel to resolve that issue. Moreover, in such a situation the judge has firsthand knowledge of the matter in issue; hence, there is less dependence on the adversary process to test the credibility of the testimony.~~	The Commission recommends omitting ABA Model Rule 3.7, Comment [3]. It is inconsistent with the Rule the Commission recommends and would usurp the judiciary's own authority and role to control the proceedings before it in its duty to the fair administration of justice. These aspects, as set forth above, are the subject of case law unrelated to disciplinary proceedings and are therefore inappropriate for a disciplinary rule. Minority. See Explanation of Changes, Comment [1].
[4] Apart from these two exceptions, paragraph (a)(3) recognizes that a balancing is required between the interests of the client and those of the tribunal and the opposing party. Whether the tribunal is likely to be misled or the opposing party is likely to suffer prejudice depends on the nature of the case, the importance and probable tenor of the lawyer's testimony, and the probability that the	~~[4] Apart from these two exceptions, paragraph (a)(3) recognizes that a balancing is required between the interests of the client and those of the tribunal and the opposing party. Whether the tribunal is likely to be misled or the opposing party is likely to suffer prejudice depends on the nature of the case, the importance and probable tenor of the lawyer's testimony, and the probability that the~~	Rejected ABA Model Rule comment [4], which is an explanation for ABA Model Rule 3.7(a)(3), which in turn was rejected because it addresses disqualification. As already noted in the Rule Explanation for paragraph (a)(3), disqualification is an inappropriate subject for disciplinary purposes, because it concerns the reasons and factors relating to a court's inherent power to disqualify a lawyer.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.7 Lawyer as a Witness Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.7 Lawyer as a Witness Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
lawyer's testimony will conflict with that of other witnesses. Even if there is risk of such prejudice, in determining whether the lawyer should be disqualified, due regard must be given to the effect of disqualification on the lawyer's client. It is relevant that one or both parties could reasonably foresee that the lawyer would probably be a witness. The conflict of interest principles stated in Rules 1.7, 1.9 and 1.10 have no application to this aspect of the problem.	~~lawyer's testimony will conflict with that of other witnesses. Even if there is risk of such prejudice, in determining whether the lawyer should be disqualified, due regard must be given to the effect of disqualification on the lawyer's client. It is relevant that one or both parties could reasonably foresee that the lawyer would probably be a witness. The conflict of interest principles stated in Rules 1.7, 1.9 and 1.10 have no application to this aspect of the problem.~~
[5] Because the tribunal is not likely to be misled when a lawyer acts as advocate in a trial in which another lawyer in the lawyer's firm will testify as a necessary witness, paragraph (b) permits the lawyer to do so except in situations involving a conflict of interest.	~~[5] Because the tribunal is not likely to be misled when a lawyer acts as advocate in a trial in which another lawyer in the lawyer's firm will testify as a necessary witness, paragraph (b) permits the lawyer to do so except in situations involving a conflict of interest.~~	Rejected ABA Model Rule 3.7, Comment [5] because the comment merely suggests the reason for paragraph (b), rather than provide guidance in its application.
Conflict of Interest [6] In determining if it is permissible to act as advocate in a trial in which the lawyer will be a necessary witness, the lawyer must also consider that the dual role may give rise to a conflict of interest that will require compliance with Rules 1.7 or 1.9. For example, if there is likely to be substantial conflict between the testimony of the client and that of the lawyer, the representation involves a conflict of interest that requires compliance with Rule 1.7. This would be true even	~~Conflict of Interest~~ ~~[6] In determining if it is permissible to act as advocate in a trial in which the lawyer will be a necessary witness, the lawyer must also consider that the dual role may give rise to a conflict of interest that will require compliance with Rules 1.7 or 1.9. For example, if there is likely to be substantial conflict between the testimony of the client and that of the lawyer, the representation involves a conflict of interest that requires compliance with Rule 1.7. This would be true even~~	Rejected ABA Model Rule comment [6] because the concepts discussed are already addressed in the Commission's proposed paragraph (a)(3). The concept of compliance with conflict of interest rules has been adopted as part of the informed written consent of the client contained in paragraph (a)(3). Moreover, because the Commission's proposed Rule 1.7 does not include "material limitations" conflicts, the reference to it would be inappropriate because the scope is limited to conflicts among concurrent clients.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.7 Lawyer as a Witness Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.7 Lawyer as a Witness Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
though the lawyer might not be prohibited by paragraph (a) from simultaneously serving as advocate and witness because the lawyer's disqualification would work a substantial hardship on the client. Similarly, a lawyer who might be permitted to simultaneously serve as an advocate and a witness by paragraph (a)(3) might be precluded from doing so by Rule 1.9. The problem can arise whether the lawyer is called as a witness on behalf of the client or is called by the opposing party. Determining whether or not such a conflict exists is primarily the responsibility of the lawyer involved. If there is a conflict of interest, the lawyer must secure the client's informed consent, confirmed in writing. In some cases, the lawyer will be precluded from seeking the client's consent. See Rule 1.7. See Rule 1.0(b) for the definition of "confirmed in writing" and Rule 1.0(e) for the definition of "informed consent."	~~though the lawyer might not be prohibited by paragraph (a) from simultaneously serving as advocate and witness because the lawyer's disqualification would work a substantial hardship on the client. Similarly, a lawyer who might be permitted to simultaneously serve as an advocate and a witness by paragraph (a)(3) might be precluded from doing so by Rule 1.9. The problem can arise whether the lawyer is called as a witness on behalf of the client or is called by the opposing party. Determining whether or not such a conflict exists is primarily the responsibility of the lawyer involved. If there is a conflict of interest, the lawyer must secure the client's informed consent, confirmed in writing. In some cases, the lawyer will be precluded from seeking the client's consent. See Rule 1.7. See Rule 1.0(b) for the definition of "confirmed in writing" and Rule 1.0(e) for the definition of "informed consent."~~
[7] Paragraph (b) provides that a lawyer is not disqualified from serving as an advocate because a lawyer with whom the lawyer is associated in a firm is precluded from doing so by paragraph (a). If, however, the testifying lawyer would also be disqualified by Rule 1.7 or Rule 1.9 from representing the client in the matter, other lawyers in the firm will be precluded from representing the client by Rule 1.10 unless the client gives informed consent under the conditions stated in Rule 1.7.	~~[7]~~ Paragraph (b) provides that a lawyer is not disqualified from serving as an advocate because a lawyer with whom the lawyer is associated in a firm is precluded from doing so by paragraph (a). If, however, the testifying lawyer would also be disqualified by Rule 1.7 or Rule 1.9 from representing the client in the matter, other lawyers in the firm will be precluded from representing the client by Rule 1.10 unless the client gives informed consent under the conditions stated in Rule 1.7~~(b)~~.	Adopted ABA Model Rule, Comment [7], with Rules 1.7, 1.9, and 1.10 bracketed, pending the Commission's final recommendation concerning.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.7 Lawyer as a Witness Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.7 Lawyer as a Witness Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[2] A lawyer's obligation to make a written disclosure and obtain written consent is satisfied when the lawyer makes the required disclosure, and the client gives consent, on the record in court before a licensed court reporter who transcribes the disclosure and consent. See the definition of "written" in Rule 1.0.1(n).	Proposed Comment [2] has been added to address circumstances where client consent is documented as a part of a transcribed proceeding. The comment clarifies that this transcription satisfies the requirement for written disclosure and consent.

Rule 3.7: Lawyer as Witness

(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to the Public Comment Draft)

- (a) A lawyer shall not act as an advocate ~~before in~~ a jury ~~trial~~ in which the lawyer is likely to be a necessary witness unless:
- (1) the testimony relates to an uncontested issue or matter;
 - (2) the testimony relates to the nature and value of legal services rendered in the case; or
 - (3) the lawyer has obtained the informed written consent of the client. If the lawyer represents the People or a governmental entity, the consent shall be obtained from the head of the office or a designee of the head of the office by which the lawyer is employed.
- (b) A lawyer may act as advocate in a trial in which another lawyer in the lawyer's firm is likely to be called as a witness unless precluded from doing so by ~~{Rule 1.7}~~ or ~~{Rule 1.9}~~.

~~[2] — This Rule is not applicable in proceedings before legislative, administrative or other entities when not acting as a tribunal. See Rule 3.9. For example, the Rule would not apply where a lawyer testifies on behalf of the client in a hearing before a legislative body concerning the adoption of legislation; but would apply to a lawyer's testimony in impeachment hearings before Congress.~~

~~[32]~~ A lawyer's obligation to make a written disclosure and obtain written consent is satisfied when the lawyer makes the required disclosure, and the client gives consent, on the record in court before a licensed court reporter who transcribes the disclosure and consent. See the definition of "written" in ~~{Rule 1.0.1(n)}~~.

COMMENT

[1] Paragraph (b) provides that a lawyer is not disqualified from serving as an advocate because a lawyer with whom the lawyer is associated in a firm is precluded from doing so by paragraph (a). If, however, the testifying lawyer would also be disqualified by ~~{Rule 1.7}~~ or ~~{Rule 1.9}~~ from representing the client in the matter, other lawyers in the firm will be precluded from representing the client by ~~{Rule 1.10}~~ unless the client gives informed consent under the conditions stated in ~~{Rule 1.7(b)}~~.

Rule 5-210 Member As 3.7 Lawyer as Witness
(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

- (a) A ~~member~~lawyer shall not act as an advocate ~~before in~~ a jury trial which ~~will hear testimony from the member~~lawyer is likely to be a necessary witness unless:
- (1) ~~(A) The~~the testimony relates to an uncontested issue or matter; ~~or~~
- (2) ~~(B) The~~the testimony relates to the nature and value of legal services rendered in the case; or
- (3) ~~(C) The member~~the lawyer has obtained the informed, written consent of the client. If the ~~member~~lawyer represents the People or a governmental entity, the consent shall be obtained from the head of the office or a designee of the head of the office by which the ~~member~~lawyer is employed ~~and shall be consistent with principles of recusal.~~
- (b) A lawyer may act as advocate in a trial in which another lawyer in the lawyer's firm is likely to be called as a witness unless precluded from doing so by Rule 1.7 or Rule 1.9.

Discussion:-

~~Rule 5-210 is intended to apply to situations in which the member knows or should know that he or she ought to be called as a witness in litigation in which there is a jury. This rule is not intended to encompass situations in which the member is representing the client in an adversarial proceeding and is testifying before a judge. In non-adversarial proceedings, as where the member testifies~~

~~on behalf of the client in a hearing before a legislative body, rule 5-210 is not applicable.~~

~~Rule 5-210 is not intended to apply to circumstances in which a lawyer in an advocate's firm will be a witness. (Amended by order of Supreme Court, operative September 14, 1992.)~~

COMMENT

- [1] Paragraph (b) provides that a lawyer is not disqualified from serving as an advocate because a lawyer with whom the lawyer is associated in a firm is precluded from doing so by paragraph (a). If, however, the testifying lawyer would also be disqualified by Rule 1.7 or Rule 1.9 from representing the client in the matter, other lawyers in the firm will be precluded from representing the client by Rule 1.10 unless the client gives informed consent under the conditions stated in Rule 1.7.
- [2] A lawyer's obligation to make a written disclosure and obtain written consent is satisfied when the lawyer makes the required disclosure, and the client gives consent, on the record in court before a licensed court reporter who transcribes the disclosure and consent. See the definition of "written" in Rule 1.0.1(n).

Rule 3.7: Lawyer as Witness
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) A lawyer shall not act as an advocate in a jury trial in which the lawyer is likely to be a necessary witness unless:
- (1) the testimony relates to an uncontested issue or matter;
 - (2) the testimony relates to the nature and value of legal services rendered in the case; or
 - (3) the lawyer has obtained the informed written consent of the client. If the lawyer represents the People or a governmental entity, the consent shall be obtained from the head of the office or a designee of the head of the office by which the lawyer is employed.
- (b) A lawyer may act as advocate in a trial in which another lawyer in the lawyer's firm is likely to be called as a witness unless precluded from doing so by Rule 1.7 or Rule 1.9.

[2] A lawyer's obligation to make a written disclosure and obtain written consent is satisfied when the lawyer makes the required disclosure, and the client gives consent, on the record in court before a licensed court reporter who transcribes the disclosure and consent. See the definition of "written" in Rule 1.0.1(n).

COMMENT

[1] Paragraph (b) provides that a lawyer is not disqualified from serving as an advocate because a lawyer with whom the lawyer is associated in a firm is precluded from doing so by paragraph (a). If, however, the testifying lawyer would also be disqualified by Rule 1.7 or Rule 1.9 from representing the client in the matter, other lawyers in the firm will be precluded from representing the client by Rule 1.10 unless the client gives informed consent under the conditions stated in Rule 1.7(b).

Rule 3.7 Lawyer as Witness. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 5 Agree = 2 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	M	Yes		The Proposed Rule has been revised from the prior Rule, which applied to all trials, not just jury trials. COPRAC continues to support a version of Rule 3.7 that would apply to both bench and jury trials. COPRAC does not agree that bench officers would not be confused by a lawyer's dual role since practice background when taking the bench and length of time on the bench vary greatly, and both may impact how any given judge perceives an attorney who also acts as a witness.	The Commission disagrees with this policy for the reasons set forth in the Introduction.
2	Hazard, Geoffrey, Deborah Rhode & Richard Zitrin (ethics law professors group)	M	Yes		"We agree with California construction(of proposed rule)...the client should be able to get the full assistance of counsel, including testimony, so long as informed consent is given. Nevertheless, conflicts of interest can and may occur...The issue is the conflict of interest by virtue of the lawyer's testimony, not the forum. The rule should be modified to strike the word 'jury' and add the word 'tribunal.'" We note that the definition of "tribunal" as proposed is seriously flawed in its narrow construction.(see infra.)	The Commission disagrees with this policy for disciplinary purposes for the reasons set forth in the Introduction.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 3.7 Lawyer as Witness. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 5 Agree = 2 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
3	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	A	Yes		While this is the current law, OCTC does not understand why the client's informed written consent only applies to jury trials. It seems that clients in non-jury matters should also be advised of the risks of this situation and give their informed written consent. Comment [2] seems more appropriate for a treatise, law review article, or ethics opinion.	The Commission disagrees with this policy for disciplinary purposes for the reasons set forth in the Introduction. As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.
4	Rothschild, Toby	A	No	Comment [2]	Comment [2] addresses the lawyer as witness in non-tribunal proceedings. This comment was necessary when the draft rule covered all proceedings. When it was limited to testimony before a jury, Comment [2] became unnecessary.	The Commission agreed and deleted Comment [2]. In addition, see the response to SDCBA.
5	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee	M	Yes	3.7(a)	Propose adding the word "jury" before the word "trial" in the first line of part (a) of the new rule. Add a Comment illustrating that the rule is not applicable in non-adversarial proceedings, as where the lawyer testifies on behalf of the client in a hearing before a legislative body.	The Commission revised paragraph (a) to refer to a "jury trial." Because the Commission has revised the rule to apply only to jury trials, the Commission deleted, as unnecessary, Comment [2] which addressed other proceedings such as appearances before a legislative body.

Rule 3.7: Lawyer as Witness

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California: Rule 5-210 provides as follows:

A member shall not act as an advocate before a jury which will hear testimony from the member unless:

(A) The testimony relates to an uncontested matter; or

(B) The testimony relates to the nature and value of legal services rendered in the case; or

(C) The member has the informed written consent of the client. If the member represents the People or a governmental entity, the consent shall be obtained from the head of the office or a designee of the head of the office by which the member is employed and shall be consistent with principles of recusal.

District of Columbia: Rule 3.7(b) provides that a lawyer may not act as advocate in a trial in which another lawyer in the lawyer's firm is likely to be called as a witness "if the other lawyer would be precluded from acting as advocate in the trial by Rule 1.7 or Rule 1.9." D.C. also adds that the provisions of Rule 3.7(b) "do not apply if the lawyer who is appearing as an advocate is employed by, and appears on behalf of, a government agency."

Florida: Rule 3.7(a) applies when a lawyer is likely to be a necessary witness "on behalf of the client," and creates an exception when "the testimony will relate solely to a matter of formality and there is no reason to believe that substantial evidence will be offered in opposition to the testimony." Florida adopts ABA Model Rule 3.7(b) verbatim.

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 3.7(a) applies only when a lawyer is likely to be a necessary witness "on a significant issue of fact." Rule 3.7(a) also adds two additional exceptions: "(4) the testimony will relate solely to a matter of formality, and there is no reason to believe that substantial evidence will be offered in opposition to the testimony; or (5) the testimony is authorized by the tribunal."

Ohio adds a new Rule 3.7(c), which provides as follows: "A government lawyer participating in a case shall not testify or offer the testimony of another lawyer in the same government agency, except where division (a) applies or where permitted by law."

Texas: Rule 3.08(a) disqualifies a lawyer if the lawyer knows or believes that the lawyer is or may be a witness “necessary to establish an essential fact on behalf of the lawyer’s client,” unless specified exceptions apply. The exceptions are substantially identical to DR 5-101(B)(1)-(3) of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility, but Texas adds an exception if “(4) the lawyer is a party to the action and is appearing pro se,” and Texas applies the “substantial hardship” exception only if “the lawyer has promptly notified opposing counsel that the lawyer expects to testify in the matter. . . .” Texas Rules 3.08(b) and (c) provide as follows:

(b) A lawyer shall not continue as an advocate in a pending adjudicatory proceeding if the lawyer believes that the lawyer will be compelled to furnish testimony that will be substantially adverse to the lawyer’s client, unless the client consents after full disclosure.

(c) Without the client’s informed consent, a lawyer may not act as advocate in an adjudicatory proceeding in which another lawyer in the lawyer’s firm is prohibited by paragraphs (a) or (b) from serving as advocate. If the lawyer to be called as a witness could not also serve as an advocate under this Rule, that lawyer shall not take an active role before the tribunal in the presentation of the matter.

Virginia: In Rule 3.7(a), Virginia substitutes “adversarial proceeding” for “trial.” In Rule 3.7(b), Virginia incorporates language from DR 5-102(B) of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility to deal with situations in which a lawyer learns that he or she may be called as a witness “other than on behalf of the client” after accepting the representation.

Proposed Rule 3.8 [RPC 5-110]

“Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor”

(XDraft # 10, 6/28/10)

Summary: This amended rule states the responsibilities of a prosecutor to assure that charges are supported by probable cause and addresses when and how a prosecutor must respond to new exculpatory information, including evidence demonstrating the innocence of a defendant who has been convicted, regardless of whether or not the conviction was obtained in the prosecutor’s jurisdiction.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☒ Existing California Law

Rule

RPC 5-110

Statute

Case law

- ☒ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

New York

- ☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 10

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 1

Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Commission Minority Position, Known Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

Minority Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☒ Yes ☐ No

(See the introduction and explanation of paragraph (g) in the Model Rule comparison chart.)

☐ No Known Stakeholders

☒ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

Prosecutors have appeared at Commission meetings to address the proposed requirements for responding to new exculpatory information.

☒ Very Controversial – Explanation:

See the Introduction and Explanation of Changes for Commission minority positions on paragraph (c) (re seeking waiver of pretrial rights from unrepresented accused) and paragraph (g) (re a prosecutor's response to new exculpatory evidence). In addition, see the public commenter chart for objections received from prosecutors and other commenters concerning these same paragraphs and also concerning paragraph (b) (re reasonable efforts to assure that the accused has been advised of the right to counsel) and paragraph (f) (re reasonable supervision of extra-judicial statements by persons under the supervision or direction of a prosecutor).

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Not Controversial – Explanation

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 3.8* Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor

June 2010

(Draft rule revised following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 3.8 adopts in substance ABA Model Rule 3.8, as amended in February 2008, which imposes special obligations on prosecutors in criminal cases.

However, Proposed Rule 3.8 clarifies and, in some instances, expands the scope of a prosecutor's duties under the Model Rule to provide greater certainty to prosecutors and greater procedural protection to the criminal defendant, specifically by (1) providing that the prohibition on prosecution of a charge not supported by probable cause applies at all stages of prosecution; (2) clarifying the prosecutor's duties to disclose exculpatory information during a proceeding; (3) adding a new comment explaining the "reasonable efforts" standard used in paragraph (b); and (4) adding a new comment clarifying that paragraph (c) does not prohibit prosecutors from seeking from an unrepresented accused a reasonable waiver of time for initial appearance or preliminary hearing.

In addition, the Commission is recommending the adoption of provisions recently added by the ABA (paragraphs (g) and (h)) to expand the scope of a prosecutor's duty of prompt disclosure of evidence demonstrating the innocence of a defendant who has been convicted, regardless of whether or not the conviction was obtained in the prosecutor's jurisdiction. This Model Rule provision is under consideration in a number of jurisdictions (e.g., Delaware and Michigan) but, to date, only Wisconsin has adopted it.

Minority. A minority of the Commission objects to the inclusion of Rule 3.8(c) which is based upon ABA Model Rule 3.8(c) because it conflicts with California law. Although this portion of the Model Rule may be appropriate for other jurisdictions, it conflicts with Penal Code section 860, as interpreted in In re Jones (1968) 265 Cal.App.2d 376, 381. The court in the Jones case held that an accused can only waive a preliminary hearing if represented by counsel. Yet paragraph (c) allows a prosecutor to obtain a waiver of a preliminary hearing if the accused has been permitted to appear in propria persona. Comment [2] correctly states "prosecutors should not seek to obtain waivers of preliminary hearings...from unrepresented accused persons" since California law would not permit them to do this, while the text of 3.8(c) would allow this if the court permits the defendant to appear in propria persona. A minority of the Commission also objects to the inclusion of Model Rule 3.8(g)(1) on the ground that it is unclear how a prosecutor whose jurisdiction did not obtain the conviction, would know if the information is "new, credible and material creating a reasonable likelihood...." See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (g), below.

* Proposed Rule 3.8, XDraft 10 (6/28/10).

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
The prosecutor in a criminal case shall: (a) refrain from prosecuting a charge that the prosecutor knows is not supported by probable cause;	~~The~~A prosecutor in a criminal case shall: (a) refrain from commencing or prosecuting a charge that the prosecutor knows is not supported by probable cause;	The proposed language of paragraph (a) adopts the language of the ABA Model Rule and adds language to increase client protection. The additional language clarifies that the scope of prohibited conduct includes both prosecuting and the act of commencing a prosecution that a prosecutor knows is not supported by probable cause.
(b) make reasonable efforts to assure that the accused has been advised of the right to, and the procedure for obtaining, counsel and has been given reasonable opportunity to obtain counsel;	(b) make reasonable efforts to assure that the accused has been advised of the right to, and the procedure for obtaining, counsel and has been given reasonable opportunity to obtain counsel;	The proposed language of paragraph (b) is identical to that of the ABA Model Rule.
(c) not seek to obtain from an unrepresented accused a waiver of important pretrial rights, such as the right to a preliminary hearing;	(c) not seek to obtain from an unrepresented accused a waiver of important pretrial rights, such as the right to a preliminary hearing, unless the tribunal has approved the appearance of the accused in propria persona;	The proposed language of paragraph (c) adopts the language of the ABA Model Rule but carves out an exception to the rule where the accused is not represented by counsel but where the accused is proceeding in propria persona with leave of the tribunal. Minority. A minority of the Commission objects to the inclusion of Rule 3.8(c) due to concerns about a conflict with existing California law. (See Introduction.)

* Proposed Rule 3.8, XDraft 10 (6/28/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(d) make timely disclosure to the defense of all evidence or information known to the prosecutor that tends to negate the guilt of the accused or mitigates the offense, and, in connection with sentencing, disclose to the defense and to the tribunal all unprivileged mitigating information known to the prosecutor, except when the prosecutor is relieved of this responsibility by a protective order of the tribunal;	(d) ~~make~~comply with all constitutional obligations, as defined by relevant case law, regarding the timely disclosure to the defense of all evidence or information known to the prosecutor that tends to negate the guilt of the accused or mitigates the offense, and, in connection with sentencing, disclose to the defense and to the tribunal all unprivileged mitigating information known to the prosecutor, except when the prosecutor is relieved of this responsibility by a protective order of the tribunal;	The proposed language of paragraph (d) generally follows the ABA Model Rule but further clarifies that the requirement of a prosecutor's timely disclosure to the defense is circumscribed by the constitution, as defined and applied in relevant case law.
(e) not subpoena a lawyer in a grand jury or other criminal proceeding to present evidence about a past or present client unless the prosecutor reasonably believes:	(e) not subpoena a lawyer in a grand jury ~~or other proceeding,~~ criminal proceeding, or civil proceeding related to a criminal matter to present evidence about a past or present client unless the prosecutor reasonably believes:	Paragraph (e) largely recommends the Model Rule language. Based on public comments received, the Commission also recommends the addition of a reference to civil proceedings related to a criminal matter. Explanations for any variations are provided next to the subparagraphs.
(1) the information sought is not protected from disclosure by any applicable privilege;	(1) the information sought is not protected from disclosure by any applicable privilege or the work product doctrine;	The proposed language of paragraph (e)(1) is taken from the ABA Model Rule, but the Commission has included an additional reference to the work product doctrine because, under California law, work product protection does not constitute a privilege.
(2) the evidence sought is essential to the successful completion of an ongoing investigation or prosecution; and	(2) the evidence sought is ~~essential~~reasonably necessary to the successful completion of an ongoing investigation or prosecution; and	The proposed language of paragraph (e)(2) is taken from the ABA Model Rule, except that the standard for evidence to be disclosed has been changed from "essential to the successful completion etc." to "reasonably necessary to the successful completion etc."

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		in order to provide greater guidance to the prosecutor. It is a difficult, if not impossible, task to decide ex ante what evidence will be “essential” to a successful prosecution and therefore a permissible subject of a subpoena addressed to a lawyer. The standard of “evidence reasonably necessary to the successful prosecution” is more readily applicable and creates less risk for a prosecutor attempting to evaluate evidence at the start, or in the midst, of an investigation or prosecution.
(3) there is no other feasible alternative to obtain the information;	(3) there is no other ~~feasible~~reasonable alternative to obtain the information;	The proposed language of paragraph (e)(3) is taken from the ABA Model Rule, except that the availability of an alternative that will preclude subpoena to a lawyer had been changed from “feasible” to “reasonable” in order to invoke a frequently used standard that will provide clearer guidance for the prosecutor. If “feasible” means only that the alternative is theoretically possible even if not reasonable, the standard is too low. If “feasible” means that the alternative is reasonable, the more familiar term “reasonable” should be used.
(f) except for statements that are necessary to inform the public of the nature and extent of the prosecutor's action and that serve a legitimate law enforcement purpose, refrain from making extrajudicial comments that have a substantial likelihood of heightening public condemnation of the accused and exercise reasonable care to prevent investigators, law enforcement personnel, employees or other persons assisting or associated with the prosecutor in a criminal case from making an extrajudicial	(f) ~~except for statements that are necessary to inform the public of the nature and extent of the prosecutor's action and that serve a legitimate law enforcement purpose, refrain from making extrajudicial comments that have a substantial likelihood of heightening public condemnation of the accused and~~ exercise reasonable care to prevent persons under the supervision or direction of the prosecutor, including investigators, law enforcement personnel, employees or other persons	The proposed language of paragraph (f) is taken from the ABA Model Rule, except that the reference to the prosecutor's ability to make statements that serve a legitimate law enforcement purpose, etc. subject to the duty to refrain from making extrajudicial comments with a substantial likelihood of heightening public condemnation of the accused has been deleted as an unnecessary and imprecise re-formulation of the more detailed Model Rule paragraphs 3.6(a) and (b).

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
statement that the prosecutor would be prohibited from making under Rule 3.6 or this Rule.	assisting or associated with the prosecutor in a criminal case from making an extrajudicial statement that the prosecutor would be prohibited from making under Rule 3.6 ~~or this Rule.~~
(g) When a prosecutor knows of new, credible and material evidence creating a reasonable likelihood that a convicted defendant did not commit an offense of which the defendant was convicted, the prosecutor shall: (1) promptly disclose that evidence to an appropriate court or authority, and (2) if the conviction was obtained in the prosecutor's jurisdiction, (i) promptly disclose that evidence to the defendant unless a court authorizes delay, and (ii) undertake further investigation, or make reasonable efforts to cause an investigation, to determine whether the defendant was convicted of an offense that the defendant did not commit.	(g) When a prosecutor knows of new, credible and material evidence creating a reasonable likelihood that a convicted defendant did not commit an offense of which the defendant was convicted, the prosecutor shall: (1) promptly disclose that evidence to an appropriate court or authority, and (2) if the conviction was obtained in the prosecutor's jurisdiction, (i) promptly disclose that evidence to the defendant unless a court authorizes delay, and (ii) undertake further investigation, or make reasonable efforts to cause an investigation, to determine whether the defendant was convicted of an offense that the defendant did not commit.	Paragraph (g) and all of its subparagraphs are taken verbatim from the Model Rule. The ABA amended Model Rule 3.8 in February 2008 by adding paragraphs (g) and (h) to impose on prosecutors a duty to take certain steps when they know of "new, credible and material evidence" that indicates a convicted defendant was innocent of the crime for which the defendant was convicted. The Commission agrees with the policies underlying these paragraphs and recommend their adoption. See also Explanation of Changes for Comments [6A] through [9]. Minority. A minority of the Commission objects to the inclusion of Model Rule 3.8(g)(1) on the ground that it is unclear how a prosecutor whose jurisdiction did not obtain the conviction, would know if the information is "new, credible and material creating a reasonable likelihood...." The minority argues that the way the rule is drafted suggests that if a prosecutor knows of information and it turns out later on that the information was "new, credible and material information creating a reasonable doubt," the prosecutor may be subject to discipline unless the prosecutor always discloses to a court or appropriate authority any information he or she receives. The majority, however, takes the position that rather than create a trap for unwary prosecutors, the "new, credible and material" modifier was specifically added to the proposed New York rule on which paragraph (g) is based to create a higher standard for triggering the prosecutor's duty of disclosure. The language used encourages prosecutors to err on the side of disclosure in close cases, but does not require the disclosure of all exculpatory information of which the prosecutor might become aware.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(h) When a prosecutor knows of clear and convincing evidence establishing that a defendant in the prosecutor's jurisdiction was convicted of an offense that the defendant did not commit, the prosecutor shall seek to remedy the conviction.	(h) When a prosecutor knows of clear and convincing evidence establishing that a defendant in the prosecutor's jurisdiction was convicted of an offense that the defendant did not commit, the prosecutor shall seek to remedy the conviction.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (g).

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] A prosecutor has the responsibility of a minister of justice and not simply that of an advocate. This responsibility carries with it specific obligations to see that the defendant is accorded procedural justice and that guilt is decided upon the basis of sufficient evidence, and that special precautions are taken to prevent and to rectify the conviction of innocent persons. The extent of mandated remedial action is a matter of debate and varies in different jurisdictions. Many jurisdictions have adopted the ABA Standards of Criminal Justice Relating to the Prosecution Function, which are the product of prolonged and careful deliberation by lawyers experienced in both criminal prosecution and defense. Competent representation of the sovereignty may require a prosecutor to undertake some procedural and remedial measures as a matter of obligation. Applicable law may require other measures by the prosecutor and knowing disregard of those obligations or a systematic abuse of prosecutorial discretion could constitute a violation of Rule 8.4.	[1] A prosecutor has the responsibility of a minister of justice and not simply that of an advocate. This responsibility carries with it specific obligations to see that the defendant is accorded procedural justice, that guilt is decided upon the basis of sufficient evidence, and that special precautions are taken to prevent and to rectify the conviction of innocent persons. ~~The extent of mandated remedial action is a matter of debate and varies in different jurisdictions. Many jurisdictions have adopted the ABA Standards of Criminal Justice Relating to the Prosecution Function, which are the product of prolonged and careful deliberation by lawyers experienced in both criminal prosecution and defense.~~ Competent representation of the ~~sovereignty~~<ins>sovereign</ins> may require a prosecutor to undertake some procedural and remedial measures as a matter of obligation. Applicable law may require other measures by the prosecutor ~~and knowing~~<ins>Knowing</ins> disregard of those obligations, or a systematic abuse of prosecutorial discretion, could constitute a violation of Rule 8.4.	The deleted language is unnecessary. The final two sentences of proposed Comment [1] to the ABA Model Rule are a sufficient caution that there may be law or standards governing these obligations or imposing additional obligations upon a prosecutor, violation of which could also constitute a violation of Rule 8.4.
	[1A] The term “prosecutor” in this Rule includes the office of the prosecutor and all lawyers affiliated with the prosecutor's office who are responsible for the prosecution function.	This definition is intended to clarify, but not to expand, the scope of persons covered by the Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[1B] Paragraph (b) does not change the obligations imposed on prosecutors by applicable law. Paragraph (b) does not apply where there is no right to counsel. "Reasonable efforts" include determining, where appropriate, whether an accused has been advised of the right to, and the procedure for obtaining, counsel and taking appropriate measures if this has not been done.	Proposed Comment [1B] is intended to clarify paragraph 3.8(b), which is adopted from the ABA Model Rule. In response to concerns raised by public commenters, a new second sentence was added to make clear that if there is no applicable legal right to counsel, then paragraph (b) imposes no duty on prosecutors.
[2] In some jurisdictions, a defendant may waive a preliminary hearing and thereby lose a valuable opportunity to challenge probable cause. Accordingly, prosecutors should not seek to obtain waivers of preliminary hearings or other important pretrial rights from unrepresented accused persons. Paragraph (c) does not apply, however, to an accused appearing pro se with the approval of the tribunal. Nor does it forbid the lawful questioning of a an uncharged suspect who has knowingly waived the rights to counsel and silence.	[2] ~~In some jurisdictions, a~~ defendant may waive a preliminary hearing and thereby lose a valuable opportunity to challenge probable cause. Accordingly, prosecutors should not seek to obtain waivers of preliminary hearings or other important pretrial rights from unrepresented accused persons. Paragraph (c) ~~does not apply, however, to an accused appearing pro se with the approval of the tribunal. Nor does it~~not forbid the lawful questioning of an uncharged suspect who has knowingly waived the ~~rights~~right to counsel and ~~silence~~the right to remain silent. Paragraph (c) also does not forbid prosecutors from seeking from an unrepresented accused a reasonable waiver of time for initial appearance or preliminary hearing as a means of facilitating the accused's voluntary cooperation in an ongoing law enforcement investigation.	Proposed Comment [2] is adopted from Comment [2] to the ABA Model Rule, except that the exception governing an accused who is appearing in propria persona with approval of the tribunal has been moved into the black letter rule and therefore removed from the comment. See paragraph (c).
	[2A] The obligations in paragraph (d) apply only with respect to controlling case law existing at the time of the obligation and not with respect to subsequent case law that is determined to apply retroactively. The disclosure	The first sentence of proposed Comment [3] has been added to clarify that paragraph (d) is intended to apply in the disciplinary context to prevent discipline being imposed in the situation in which a prosecutor followed

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	obligations in paragraph (d) apply even if the defendant is acquitted or is able to avoid prejudice on grounds unrelated to the prosecutor's failure to disclose the evidence or information to the defense.	the law at the time the case was pending, but the law was subsequently changed and applied retroactively. Although the new law and court decision will apply to the defendant's case, the prosecutor should not be disciplined because he or she could not have known that the law would change and be applied retroactively. The second sentence in proposed Comment [3] was added at the request of OCTC to clarify that a prosecutor is subject to discipline for failure to fulfill paragraph (d)'s disclosure obligations even if the non-disclosure does not result in actual prejudice to the defendant.
[3] The exception in paragraph (d) recognizes that a prosecutor may seek an appropriate protective order from the tribunal if disclosure of information to the defense could result in substantial harm to an individual or to the public interest.	[3] The exception in paragraph (d) recognizes that a prosecutor may seek an appropriate protective order from the tribunal if disclosure of information to the defense could result in substantial harm to an individual or to the public interest.	Proposed Comment [3] is adopted verbatim from Comment [3] of the ABA Model Rule.
[4] Paragraph (e) is intended to limit the issuance of lawyer subpoenas in grand jury and other criminal proceedings to those situations in which there is a genuine need to intrude into the client-lawyer relationship.	[4] Paragraph (e) is intended to limit the issuance of lawyer subpoenas in grand jury and other criminal proceedings to those situations in which there is a genuine need to intrude into the ~~client-lawyer~~client or other privileged relationship.	Proposed Comment [4] is adopted from Comment [4] of the ABA Model Rule, but the requirement of "genuine need" has been expanded to include situations in which there would be an intrusion into privileged relationships other than the lawyer-client relationship.
[5] Paragraph (f) supplements Rule 3.6, which prohibits extrajudicial statements that have a substantial likelihood of prejudicing an adjudicatory proceeding. In the context of a criminal prosecution, a prosecutor's	[5] Paragraph (f) supplements Rule 3.6, which prohibits extrajudicial statements that have a substantial likelihood of prejudicing an adjudicatory proceeding. ~~In the context of a criminal prosecution, a prosecutor's~~	Proposed Comment [5] is adopted from Comment [5] of the ABA Model Rule, but omits the vague standard that (1) would protect a prosecutor's extrajudicial statements made for a "legitimate law enforcement purpose;" and (2)

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
extrajudicial statement can create the additional problem of increasing public condemnation of the accused. Although the announcement of an indictment, for example, will necessarily have severe consequences for the accused, a prosecutor can, and should, avoid comments which have no legitimate law enforcement purpose and have a substantial likelihood of increasing public opprobrium of the accused. Nothing in this Comment is intended to restrict the statements which a prosecutor may make which comply with Rule 3.6(b) or 3.6(c).	~~extrajudicial statement can create the additional problem of increasing public condemnation of the accused. Although the announcement of an indictment, for example, will necessarily have severe consequences for the accused, a prosecutor can, and should, avoid comments which have no legitimate law enforcement purpose and have a substantial likelihood of increasing public opprobrium of the accused. Nothing in this~~ Comment This comment ~~is not~~ intended to restrict the statements which a prosecutor may make ~~which~~that comply with Rule 3.6(b) or 3.6(c).	does not provide adequate guidance to a prosecutor who could be disciplined under paragraph 3.8[f] for extrajudicial statements that "have a substantial likelihood of increasing public opprobrium of the accused." Instead, the Proposed Comment, like the Model Rule, confirms that paragraph 3.8[f] is not intended to prohibit statements by a prosecutor in compliance with paragraphs (b) or (c) of Rule 3.6, the rule governing trial publicity.
[6] Like other lawyers, prosecutors are subject to Rules 5.1 and 5.3, which relate to responsibilities regarding lawyers and nonlawyers who work for or are associated with the lawyer's office. Paragraph (f) reminds the prosecutor of the importance of these obligations in connection with the unique dangers of improper extrajudicial statements in a criminal case. In addition, paragraph (f) requires a prosecutor to exercise reasonable care to prevent persons assisting or associated with the prosecutor from making improper extrajudicial statements, even when such persons are not under the direct supervision of the prosecutor. Ordinarily, the reasonable care standard will be satisfied if the prosecutor issues the appropriate cautions to law-enforcement personnel and other relevant individuals.	~~[6] Like other lawyers, prosecutors~~ Prosecutors are subject to Rules 5.1 and 5.3. ~~Ordinarily, which relate to responsibilities regarding lawyers and nonlawyers who work for or are associated with the lawyer's office. Paragraph (f) reminds the prosecutor of the importance of these obligations in connection with the unique dangers of improper extrajudicial statements in a criminal case. In addition, paragraph (f) requires a prosecutor to exercise reasonable care to prevent persons assisting or associated with~~ standard will be satisfied if the prosecutor ~~from making improper extrajudicial statements, even when such persons are not under~~ issues the direct supervision of the prosecutor appropriate cautions to law-enforcement personnel and other relevant individuals. Ordinarily, the reasonable care standard will be satisfied if the prosecutor issues the appropriate cautions to law-enforcement personnel and other relevant individuals.	The public comment version of Comment [6] was adopted verbatim from Comment [6] of the ABA Model Rule. A public commenter, however, correctly noted that the ABA language of Comment [6] stated that the duty applies "even when such persons are not under the direct supervision of the prosecutor." This is inconsistent with the language used in paragraph (f) of the rule and, for that reason, the Commission has now deleted much of the ABA language in Comment [6]. The comment now states: "Prosecutors are subject to Rules 5.1 and 5.3. Ordinarily, the reasonable care standard will be satisfied if the prosecutor issues the appropriate cautions to law-enforcement personnel and other relevant individuals."

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[6A] Like other lawyers, prosecutors are also subject to Rule 3.3, which requires a lawyer to take reasonable remedial measures to correct material evidence that the lawyer has offered when that lawyer comes to know of its falsity. See Rule 3.3, Comment [12].	Proposed Comment [6A] has been added to clarify that prosecutors are also subject to Rule 3.3, which imposes an obligation upon a lawyer who has offered material evidence that the lawyer later comes to know is false.
[7] When a prosecutor knows of new, credible and material evidence creating a reasonable likelihood that a person outside the prosecutor's jurisdiction was convicted of a crime that the person did not commit, paragraph (g) requires prompt disclosure to the court or other appropriate authority, such as the chief prosecutor of the jurisdiction where the conviction occurred. If the conviction was obtained in the prosecutor's jurisdiction, paragraph (g) requires the prosecutor to examine the evidence and undertake further investigation to determine whether the defendant is in fact innocent or make reasonable efforts to cause another appropriate authority to undertake the necessary investigation, and to promptly disclose the evidence to the court and, absent court-authorized delay, to the defendant. Consistent with the objectives of Rules 4.2 and 4.3, disclosure to a represented defendant must be made through the defendant's counsel, and, in the case of an unrepresented defendant, would ordinarily be accompanied by a request to a court for the appointment of counsel to assist the defendant in taking such legal measures as may be appropriate.	[7] When a prosecutor knows of new, credible and material evidence creating a reasonable likelihood that a person ~~outside the prosecutor's jurisdiction~~ was convicted of a crime that the person did not commit, and the conviction was obtained outside the prosecutor's jurisdiction, paragraph (g)(1) requires prompt disclosure to the court or other appropriate authority, such as the chief prosecutor of the jurisdiction where the conviction occurred. If the conviction was obtained in the prosecutor's jurisdiction, paragraph (g)(2) requires the prosecutor to examine the evidence and undertake further investigation to determine whether the defendant is in fact innocent. The scope of the inquiry under paragraph (g)(2) will depend on the circumstances. In some cases, the prosecutor may recognize the need to reinvestigate the underlying case; in others, it may be appropriate to await development of the record in collateral proceedings initiated by the defendant. The nature of a paragraph (g)(2) inquiry or investigation must be such as to provide a "reasonable belief," as defined in Rule 1.0.1(i), that the conviction should or should not be set aside. Alternatively, the prosecutor is required under paragraph (g)(2) to make reasonable efforts to cause another appropriate authority to undertake the necessary investigation, and to promptly disclose the evidence to the court and, absent court-authorized delay, to the defendant. Consistent with the objectives	Proposed Comment [7] is adopted from Comment [7] of the ABA Model Rule, except for three amendments or additions. First, the first sentence has been revised to clarify that a prosecutor has duties even when the wrongly-convicted person was convicted outside the prosecutor's jurisdiction. Second, a third sentence has been added and the fourth sentence of the Model Rule comment has been revised to provide guidance to prosecutors about the scope of the inquiry they are required to make. Third, the last sentence of the Comment has been added to clarify that the duties imposed on the prosecutor are not dependent upon whether the lawyer of the wrongly-convicted defendant could have discovered the evidence.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	of Rules 4.2 and 4.3, disclosure to a represented defendant must be made through the defendant's counsel, and, in the case of an unrepresented defendant, would ordinarily be accompanied by a request to a court for the appointment of counsel to assist the defendant in taking such legal measures as may be appropriate. The post-conviction disclosure duty applies to new, credible and material evidence of innocence regardless of whether it could previously have been discovered by the defense.
[8] Under paragraph (h), once the prosecutor knows of clear and convincing evidence that the defendant was convicted of an offense that the defendant did not commit, the prosecutor must seek to remedy the conviction. Necessary steps may include disclosure of the evidence to the defendant, requesting that the court appoint counsel for an unrepresented indigent defendant and, where appropriate, notifying the court that the prosecutor has knowledge that the defendant did not commit the offense of which the defendant was convicted.	[8] Under paragraph (h), once the prosecutor knows of clear and convincing evidence that the defendant was convicted of an offense that the defendant did not commit, the prosecutor must seek to remedy the conviction. Necessary steps may include disclosure of the evidence to the defendant, requesting that the court appoint counsel for an unrepresented indigent defendant and, where appropriate, notifying the court that the prosecutor has knowledge that the defendant did not commit the offense of which the defendant was convicted.	Proposed Comment [8] is adopted verbatim from Comment [8] to ABA Model Rule.
[9] A prosecutor's independent judgment, made in good faith, that the new evidence is not of such nature as to trigger the obligations of sections (g) and (h), though subsequently determined to have been erroneous, does not constitute a violation of this Rule.	[9] A prosecutor's independent judgment, made in good faith, that the new evidence is not of such nature as to trigger the obligations of sections (g) and (h), ~~though subsequently determined to have been erroneous,~~ does not constitute a violation of this Rule even if the judgment is subsequently determined to have been erroneous. For purposes of this rule, a judgment is	Proposed Comment [9] largely tracks Comment [9] to the ABA Model Rule. Additional explanatory language has been added in response to public comments expressing concerns that the Model Rule language on the "good faith" standard is inadequate.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor Comments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	made in good faith if the prosecutor reasonably believes that the new evidence does not create a reasonable likelihood that a convicted defendant did not commit an offense of which the defendant was convicted.
	[10] A current or former prosecutor, and any lawyer associated with such person in a law firm, is prohibited from advising, aiding or promoting the defense in any criminal matter or proceeding in which the prosecutor has acted or participated. See Business and Professions Code section 6131. See also Rule 1.7, Comment [16]	For guidance, proposed Comment [10] refers to a specific California statutory prohibition applicable to both current and former prosecutors. Comment [10] also includes a cross reference to the Comment [16] of Rule 1.7 that addresses the concept that there may be conflicts of interest to which a client cannot consent because the representation is prohibited by applicable law.

Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor
(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to the Public Comment Draft)

A prosecutor in a criminal case shall:

- (a) refrain from commencing or prosecuting a charge that the prosecutor knows is not supported by probable cause;
- (b) make reasonable efforts to assure that the accused has been advised of the right to, and the procedure for obtaining, counsel and has been given reasonable opportunity to obtain counsel;
- (c) not seek to obtain from an unrepresented accused a waiver of important pretrial rights, such as the right to a preliminary hearing, unless the tribunal has approved the appearance of the accused in propria persona;
- (d) comply with all constitutional obligations, as defined by relevant case law, regarding the timely disclosure to the defense of all evidence or information known to the prosecutor that tends to negate the guilt of the accused or mitigates the offense, and, in connection with sentencing, disclose to the defense and to the tribunal all unprivileged mitigating information known to the prosecutor, except when the prosecutor is relieved of this responsibility by a protective order of the tribunal;
- (e) not subpoena a lawyer in a grand jury proceeding, criminal proceeding, or civil proceeding related to a criminal matter to present evidence about a past or present client unless the prosecutor reasonably believes:
 - (1) the information sought is not protected from disclosure by any applicable privilege or the work product doctrine;
 - (2) the evidence sought is reasonably necessary to the successful completion of an ongoing investigation or prosecution; and
 - (3) there is no other reasonable alternative to obtain the information;
- (f) exercise reasonable care to prevent persons under the supervision or direction of the prosecutor, including investigators, law enforcement personnel, employees or other persons assisting or associated with the prosecutor in a criminal case from making an extrajudicial statement that the prosecutor would be prohibited from making under Rule 3.6.
- (g) When a prosecutor knows of new, credible and material evidence creating a reasonable likelihood that a convicted defendant did not commit an offense of which the defendant was convicted, the prosecutor shall:
 - (1) promptly disclose that evidence to an appropriate court or authority, and
 - (2) if the conviction was obtained in the prosecutor's jurisdiction,
 - (i) promptly disclose that evidence to the defendant unless a court authorizes delay, and
 - (ii) undertake further investigation, or make reasonable efforts to cause an investigation, to determine whether the defendant was convicted of an offense that the defendant did not commit.
- (h) When a prosecutor knows of clear and convincing evidence establishing that a defendant in the prosecutor's jurisdiction was convicted of an offense that the defendant did not commit, the prosecutor shall seek to remedy the conviction.

Comment

- [1] A prosecutor has the responsibility of a minister of justice and not simply that of an advocate. This responsibility carries with it specific obligations to see that the defendant is accorded procedural justice, that guilt is decided upon the basis of sufficient evidence, and that special precautions are taken to prevent and to rectify the conviction of innocent persons. Competent representation of the sovereign may require a prosecutor to undertake some procedural and remedial measures as a matter of obligation. Applicable law may require other measures by the prosecutor. Knowing disregard of those obligations, or a systematic abuse of prosecutorial discretion, could constitute a violation of Rule 8.4.
- [1A] The term “prosecutor” in this Rule includes the office of the prosecutor and all lawyers affiliated with the prosecutor’s office who are responsible for the prosecution function.
- [1B] Paragraph (b) does not change the obligations imposed on prosecutors by applicable law. Paragraph \(b\) does not apply where there is no right to counsel. “Reasonable efforts” include determining, where appropriate, whether an accused has been advised of the right to, and the procedure for obtaining, counsel and taking appropriate measures if this has not been done.
- [2] A defendant may waive a preliminary hearing and thereby lose a valuable opportunity to challenge probable cause. Accordingly, prosecutors should not seek to obtain waivers of preliminary hearings or other important pretrial rights from unrepresented accused persons. Paragraph (c), however, does not forbid the lawful questioning of an uncharged suspect who has knowingly waived the right to counsel and the right to remain silent. Paragraph (c) also does not forbid prosecutors from seeking from an unrepresented accused a reasonable waiver of time for initial appearance or preliminary hearing as a means of facilitating the accused’s voluntary cooperation in an ongoing law enforcement investigation.
- [2A] The obligations in paragraph (d) apply only with respect to controlling case law existing at the time of the obligation and not with respect to subsequent case law that is determined to apply retroactively. The disclosure obligations in paragraph (d) apply even if the defendant is acquitted or is able to avoid prejudice on grounds unrelated to the prosecutor’s failure to disclose the evidence or information to the defense.
- [3] The exception in paragraph (d) recognizes that a prosecutor may seek an appropriate protective order from the tribunal if disclosure of information to the defense could result in substantial harm to an individual or to the public interest.
- [4] Paragraph (e) is intended to limit the issuance of lawyer subpoenas in grand jury and other criminal proceedings to those situations in which there is a genuine need to intrude into the lawyer-client or other privileged relationship.
- [5] Paragraph (f) supplements Rule 3.6, which prohibits extrajudicial statements that have a substantial likelihood of prejudicing an adjudicatory proceeding. This comment is not intended to restrict the statements which a prosecutor may make that comply with Rule 3.6(b) or 3.6(c).
- [6] ~~Like other lawyers, prosecutors are subject to Rules 5.1 and 5.3, which relate to responsibilities regarding lawyers and nonlawyers who work for or are associated with the lawyer’s office. Paragraph (f) reminds the prosecutor of the importance of these obligations in connection with the unique dangers of improper extrajudicial statements in a criminal case. In addition, paragraph (f) requires a prosecutor to exercise reasonable~~ ~~care to prevent persons assisting or associated with the prosecutor from making improper extrajudicial statements, even when such persons are not under the direct supervision of the prosecutor.~~ Prosecutors are subject to Rules 5.1 and 5.3. Ordinarily, the reasonable care standard will be satisfied if the prosecutor issues the appropriate cautions to law-enforcement personnel and other relevant individuals.

- [6A] Like other lawyers, prosecutors are also subject to Rule 3.3, which requires a lawyer to take reasonable remedial measures to correct material evidence that the lawyer has offered when that lawyer comes to know of its falsity. See Rule 3.3, Comment [12].
- [7] When a prosecutor knows of new, credible and material evidence creating a reasonable likelihood that a person was convicted of a crime that the person did not commit, and the conviction was obtained outside the prosecutor's jurisdiction, paragraph (g)(1) requires prompt disclosure to the court or other appropriate authority, such as the chief prosecutor of the jurisdiction where the conviction occurred. If the conviction was obtained in the prosecutor's jurisdiction, paragraph (g)(2) requires the prosecutor to examine the evidence and undertake further investigation to determine whether the defendant is in fact innocent. The scope of an inquiry under paragraph (g)(2) will depend on the circumstances. In some cases, the prosecutor may recognize the need to reinvestigate the underlying case; in others, it may be appropriate to await development of the record in collateral proceedings initiated by the defendant. The nature of a paragraph (g)(2) inquiry or investigation must be such as to provide a "reasonable belief," as defined in Rule 1.0.1(i), that the conviction should or should not be set aside. Alternatively, the prosecutor is required under paragraph (g)(2) to make reasonable efforts to cause another appropriate authority to undertake the necessary investigation, and to promptly disclose the evidence to the court and, absent court-authorized delay, to the defendant. Consistent with the objectives of Rules 4.2 and 4.3, disclosure to a represented defendant must be made through the defendant's counsel, and, in the case of an unrepresented defendant, would ordinarily be accompanied by a request to a court for the appointment of counsel to assist the defendant in taking such legal measures as may be appropriate. The post-conviction disclosure duty applies to new, credible and material evidence of innocence regardless of whether it could previously have been discovered by the defense.

- [8] Under paragraph (h), once the prosecutor knows of clear and convincing evidence that the defendant was convicted of an offense that the defendant did not commit, the prosecutor must seek to remedy the conviction. Necessary steps may include disclosure of the evidence to the defendant, requesting that the court appoint counsel for an unrepresented indigent defendant and, where appropriate, or notifying the court that the prosecutor has knowledge that the defendant did not commit the offense of which the defendant was convicted.
- [9] A prosecutor's independent judgment, made in good faith, that the new evidence is not of such nature as to trigger the obligations of sections (g) and (h), does not constitute a violation of this Rule even if the judgment is subsequently determined to have been erroneous. For purposes of this rule, a judgment is made in good faith if the prosecutor reasonably believes that the new evidence does not create a reasonable likelihood that a convicted defendant did not commit an offense of which the defendant was convicted.
- [10] A current or former prosecutor, and any lawyer associated with such person in a law firm, is prohibited from advising, aiding or promoting the defense in any criminal matter or proceeding in which the prosecutor has acted or participated. See Business and Professions Code section 6131. See also Rule 1.7, Comment [16]

Rule 5-110 Performing the Duty3.8 Special Responsibilities of Member in Government Service a Prosecutor

(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

~~A member in government service shall not institute or cause to be instituted criminal charges when the member knows or should know that the charges are not supported by probable cause. If, after the institution of criminal charges, the member in government service having responsibility for prosecuting the charges becomes aware that those charges are not supported by probable cause, the member shall promptly so advise the court in which the criminal matter is pending.~~

A prosecutor in a criminal case shall:

- (a) refrain from commencing or prosecuting a charge that the prosecutor knows is not supported by probable cause;
- (b) make reasonable efforts to assure that the accused has been advised of the right to, and the procedure for obtaining, counsel and has been given reasonable opportunity to obtain counsel;
- (c) not seek to obtain from an unrepresented accused a waiver of important pretrial rights, such as the right to a preliminary hearing, unless the tribunal has approved the appearance of the accused in propria persona;
- (d) comply with all constitutional obligations, as defined by relevant case law, regarding the timely disclosure to the defense of all evidence or information known to the prosecutor that tends to negate the guilt of the accused or mitigates the offense, and, in connection with sentencing, disclose to the defense and to the tribunal all unprivileged mitigating information known to the prosecutor, except when the prosecutor is relieved of this responsibility by a protective order of the tribunal;

(e) not subpoena a lawyer in a grand jury proceeding, criminal proceeding, or civil proceeding related to a criminal matter to present evidence about a past or present client unless the prosecutor reasonably believes:

- (1) the information sought is not protected from disclosure by any applicable privilege or the work product doctrine;
- (2) the evidence sought is reasonably necessary to the successful completion of an ongoing investigation or prosecution; and
- (3) there is no other reasonable alternative to obtain the information;

(f) exercise reasonable care to prevent persons under the supervision or direction of the prosecutor, including investigators, law enforcement personnel, employees or other persons assisting or associated with the prosecutor in a criminal case from making an extrajudicial statement that the prosecutor would be prohibited from making under Rule 3.6.

(g) When a prosecutor knows of new, credible and material evidence creating a reasonable likelihood that a convicted defendant did not commit an offense of which the defendant was convicted, the prosecutor shall:

- (1) promptly disclose that evidence to an appropriate court or authority, and
- (2) if the conviction was obtained in the prosecutor's jurisdiction,

- (i) promptly disclose that evidence to the defendant unless a court authorizes delay, and
 - (ii) undertake further investigation, or make reasonable efforts to cause an investigation, to determine whether the defendant was convicted of an offense that the defendant did not commit.
- (h) When a prosecutor knows of clear and convincing evidence establishing that a defendant in the prosecutor's jurisdiction was convicted of an offense that the defendant did not commit, the prosecutor shall seek to remedy the conviction.

Comment

- [1] A prosecutor has the responsibility of a minister of justice and not simply that of an advocate. This responsibility carries with it specific obligations to see that the defendant is accorded procedural justice, that guilt is decided upon the basis of sufficient evidence, and that special precautions are taken to prevent and to rectify the conviction of innocent persons. Competent representation of the sovereign may require a prosecutor to undertake some procedural and remedial measures as a matter of obligation. Applicable law may require other measures by the prosecutor. Knowing disregard of those obligations, or a systematic abuse of prosecutorial discretion, could constitute a violation of Rule 8.4.
- [1A] The term "prosecutor" in this Rule includes the office of the prosecutor and all lawyers affiliated with the prosecutor's office who are responsible for the prosecution function.
- [1B] Paragraph (b) does not change the obligations imposed on prosecutors by applicable law. Paragraph (b) does not apply where there is no right to counsel. "Reasonable efforts" include determining, where appropriate, whether an accused has been advised of the right to, and the procedure for obtaining, counsel and taking appropriate measures if this has not been done.

- [2] A defendant may waive a preliminary hearing and thereby lose a valuable opportunity to challenge probable cause. Accordingly, prosecutors should not seek to obtain waivers of preliminary hearings or other important pretrial rights from unrepresented accused persons. Paragraph (c), however, does not forbid the lawful questioning of an uncharged suspect who has knowingly waived the right to counsel and the right to remain silent. Paragraph (c) also does not forbid prosecutors from seeking from an unrepresented accused a reasonable waiver of time for initial appearance or preliminary hearing as a means of facilitating the accused's voluntary cooperation in an ongoing law enforcement investigation.
- [2A] The obligations in paragraph (d) apply only with respect to controlling case law existing at the time of the obligation and not with respect to subsequent case law that is determined to apply retroactively. The disclosure obligations in paragraph (d) apply even if the defendant is acquitted or is able to avoid prejudice on grounds unrelated to the prosecutor's failure to disclose the evidence or information to the defense.
- [3] The exception in paragraph (d) recognizes that a prosecutor may seek an appropriate protective order from the tribunal if disclosure of information to the defense could result in substantial harm to an individual or to the public interest.
- [4] Paragraph (e) is intended to limit the issuance of lawyer subpoenas in grand jury and other criminal proceedings to those situations in which there is a genuine need to intrude into the lawyer-client or other privileged relationship.

- [5] Paragraph (f) supplements Rule 3.6, which prohibits extrajudicial statements that have a substantial likelihood of prejudicing an adjudicatory proceeding. This comment is not intended to restrict the statements which a prosecutor may make that comply with Rule 3.6(b) or 3.6(c).
- [6] Prosecutors are subject to Rules 5.1 and 5.3. Ordinarily, the reasonable care standard will be satisfied if the prosecutor issues the appropriate cautions to law-enforcement personnel and other relevant individuals.
- [6A] Like other lawyers, prosecutors are also subject to Rule 3.3, which requires a lawyer to take reasonable remedial measures to correct material evidence that the lawyer has offered when that lawyer comes to know of its falsity. See Rule 3.3, Comment [12].
- [7] When a prosecutor knows of new, credible and material evidence creating a reasonable likelihood that a person was convicted of a crime that the person did not commit, and the conviction was obtained outside the prosecutor's jurisdiction, paragraph (g)(1) requires prompt disclosure to the court or other appropriate authority, such as the chief prosecutor of the jurisdiction where the conviction occurred. If the conviction was obtained in the prosecutor's jurisdiction, paragraph (g)(2) requires the prosecutor to examine the evidence and undertake further investigation to determine whether the defendant is in fact innocent. The scope of an inquiry under paragraph (g)(2) will depend on the circumstances. In some cases, the prosecutor may recognize the need to reinvestigate the underlying case; in others, it may be appropriate to await development of the record in collateral proceedings initiated by the defendant. The nature of a paragraph

(g)(2) inquiry or investigation must be such as to provide a "reasonable belief," as defined in Rule 1.0.1(i), that the conviction should or should not be set aside. Alternatively, the prosecutor is required under paragraph (g)(2) to make reasonable efforts to cause another appropriate authority to undertake the necessary investigation, and to promptly disclose the evidence to the court and, absent court-authorized delay, to the defendant. Consistent with the objectives of Rules 4.2 and 4.3, disclosure to a represented defendant must be made through the defendant's counsel, and, in the case of an unrepresented defendant, would ordinarily be accompanied by a request to a court for the appointment of counsel to assist the defendant in taking such legal measures as may be appropriate. The post-conviction disclosure duty applies to new, credible and material evidence of innocence regardless of whether it could previously have been discovered by the defense.

- [8] Under paragraph (h), once the prosecutor knows of clear and convincing evidence that the defendant was convicted of an offense that the defendant did not commit, the prosecutor must seek to remedy the conviction. Necessary steps may include disclosure of the evidence to the defendant, requesting that the court appoint counsel for an unrepresented indigent defendant and, where appropriate, or notifying the court that the prosecutor has knowledge that the defendant did not commit the offense of which the defendant was convicted.
- [9] A prosecutor's independent judgment, made in good faith, that the new evidence is not of such nature as to trigger the obligations of sections (g) and (h), does not constitute a violation of this Rule even if the judgment is subsequently determined to have been erroneous. For purposes of this rule, a judgment is made in good faith if the prosecutor reasonably believes that the new evidence does not create a reasonable likelihood that a convicted defendant did not commit an offense of which the defendant was convicted.

[10] A current or former prosecutor, and any lawyer associated with such person in a law firm, is prohibited from advising, aiding or promoting the defense in any criminal matter or proceeding in which the prosecutor has acted or participated. See Business and Professions Code section 6131. See also Rule 1.7, Comment [16]

Rule 3.8 Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

A prosecutor in a criminal case shall:

- (a) refrain from commencing or prosecuting a charge that the prosecutor knows is not supported by probable cause;
- (b) make reasonable efforts to assure that the accused has been advised of the right to, and the procedure for obtaining, counsel and has been given reasonable opportunity to obtain counsel;
- (c) not seek to obtain from an unrepresented accused a waiver of important pretrial rights, such as the right to a preliminary hearing, unless the tribunal has approved the appearance of the accused in propria persona;
- (d) comply with all constitutional obligations, as defined by relevant case law, regarding the timely disclosure to the defense of all evidence or information known to the prosecutor that tends to negate the guilt of the accused or mitigates the offense, and, in connection with sentencing, disclose to the defense and to the tribunal all unprivileged mitigating information known to the prosecutor, except when the prosecutor is relieved of this responsibility by a protective order of the tribunal;
- (e) not subpoena a lawyer in a grand jury proceeding, criminal proceeding, or civil proceeding related to a criminal matter to present evidence about a past or present client unless the prosecutor reasonably believes:
 - (1) the information sought is not protected from disclosure by any applicable privilege or the work product doctrine;
 - (2) the evidence sought is reasonably necessary to the successful completion of an ongoing investigation or prosecution; and
 - (3) there is no other reasonable alternative to obtain the information;
- (f) exercise reasonable care to prevent persons under the supervision or direction of the prosecutor, including investigators, law enforcement personnel, employees or other persons assisting or associated with the prosecutor in a criminal case from making an extrajudicial statement that the prosecutor would be prohibited from making under Rule 3.6.
- (g) When a prosecutor knows of new, credible and material evidence creating a reasonable likelihood that a convicted defendant did not commit an offense of which the defendant was convicted, the prosecutor shall:
 - (1) promptly disclose that evidence to an appropriate court or authority, and
 - (2) if the conviction was obtained in the prosecutor's jurisdiction,
 - (i) promptly disclose that evidence to the defendant unless a court authorizes delay, and
 - (ii) undertake further investigation, or make reasonable efforts to cause an investigation, to determine whether the defendant was convicted of an offense that the defendant did not commit.
- (h) When a prosecutor knows of clear and convincing evidence establishing that a defendant in the prosecutor's jurisdiction was convicted of an offense that the defendant did not commit, the prosecutor shall seek to remedy the conviction.

Comment

- [1] A prosecutor has the responsibility of a minister of justice and not simply that of an advocate. This responsibility carries with it specific obligations to see that the defendant is accorded procedural justice, that guilt is decided upon the basis of sufficient evidence, and that special precautions are taken to prevent and to rectify the conviction of innocent persons. Competent representation of the sovereign may require a prosecutor to undertake some procedural and remedial measures as a matter of obligation. Applicable law may require other measures by the prosecutor. Knowing disregard of those obligations, or a systematic abuse of prosecutorial discretion, could constitute a violation of Rule 8.4.
- [1A] The term “prosecutor” in this Rule includes the office of the prosecutor and all lawyers affiliated with the prosecutor’s office who are responsible for the prosecution function.
- [1B] Paragraph (b) does not change the obligations imposed on prosecutors by applicable law. Paragraph (b) does not apply where there is no right to counsel. “Reasonable efforts” include determining, where appropriate, whether an accused has been advised of the right to, and the procedure for obtaining, counsel and taking appropriate measures if this has not been done.
- [2] A defendant may waive a preliminary hearing and thereby lose a valuable opportunity to challenge probable cause. Accordingly, prosecutors should not seek to obtain waivers of preliminary hearings or other important pretrial rights from unrepresented accused persons. Paragraph (c), however, does not forbid the lawful questioning of an uncharged suspect who has knowingly waived the right to counsel and the right to remain silent. Paragraph (c) also does not forbid prosecutors from seeking from an unrepresented accused a reasonable waiver of time for initial appearance or preliminary hearing as a means of facilitating the accused’s voluntary cooperation in an ongoing law enforcement investigation.
- [2A] The obligations in paragraph (d) apply only with respect to controlling case law existing at the time of the obligation and not with respect to subsequent case law that is determined to apply retroactively. The disclosure obligations in paragraph (d) apply even if the defendant is acquitted or is able to avoid prejudice on grounds unrelated to the prosecutor’s failure to disclose the evidence or information to the defense.
- [3] The exception in paragraph (d) recognizes that a prosecutor may seek an appropriate protective order from the tribunal if disclosure of information to the defense could result in substantial harm to an individual or to the public interest.
- [4] Paragraph (e) is intended to limit the issuance of lawyer subpoenas in grand jury and other criminal proceedings to those situations in which there is a genuine need to intrude into the lawyer-client or other privileged relationship.
- [5] Paragraph (f) supplements Rule 3.6, which prohibits extrajudicial statements that have a substantial likelihood of prejudicing an adjudicatory proceeding. This comment is not intended to restrict the statements which a prosecutor may make that comply with Rule 3.6(b) or 3.6(c).
- [6] Prosecutors are subject to Rules 5.1 and 5.3. Ordinarily, the reasonable care standard will be satisfied if the prosecutor issues the appropriate cautions to law-enforcement personnel and other relevant individuals.
- [6A] Like other lawyers, prosecutors are also subject to Rule 3.3, which requires a lawyer to take reasonable remedial measures to correct material evidence that the lawyer has offered when that lawyer comes to know of its falsity. See Rule 3.3, Comment [12].

- [7] When a prosecutor knows of new, credible and material evidence creating a reasonable likelihood that a person was convicted of a crime that the person did not commit, and the conviction was obtained outside the prosecutor's jurisdiction, paragraph (g)(1) requires prompt disclosure to the court or other appropriate authority, such as the chief prosecutor of the jurisdiction where the conviction occurred. If the conviction was obtained in the prosecutor's jurisdiction, paragraph (g)(2) requires the prosecutor to examine the evidence and undertake further investigation to determine whether the defendant is in fact innocent. The scope of an inquiry under paragraph (g)(2) will depend on the circumstances. In some cases, the prosecutor may recognize the need to reinvestigate the underlying case; in others, it may be appropriate to await development of the record in collateral proceedings initiated by the defendant. The nature of a paragraph (g)(2) inquiry or investigation must be such as to provide a "reasonable belief," as defined in Rule 1.0.1(i), that the conviction should or should not be set aside. Alternatively, the prosecutor is required under paragraph (g)(2) to make reasonable efforts to cause another appropriate authority to undertake the necessary investigation, and to promptly disclose the evidence to the court and, absent court-authorized delay, to the defendant. Consistent with the objectives of Rules 4.2 and 4.3, disclosure to a represented defendant must be made through the defendant's counsel, and, in the case of an unrepresented defendant, would ordinarily be accompanied by a request to a court for the appointment of counsel to assist the defendant in taking such legal measures as may be appropriate. The post-conviction disclosure duty applies to new, credible and material evidence of innocence regardless of whether it could previously have been discovered by the defense.
- [8] Under paragraph (h), once the prosecutor knows of clear and convincing evidence that the defendant was convicted of an offense that the defendant did not commit, the prosecutor must seek to remedy the conviction. Necessary steps may include disclosure of the evidence to the defendant, requesting that the court appoint counsel for an unrepresented indigent defendant and, where appropriate, notifying the court that the prosecutor has knowledge that the defendant did not commit the offense of which the defendant was convicted.
- [9] A prosecutor's independent judgment, made in good faith, that the new evidence is not of such nature as to trigger the obligations of sections (g) and (h), does not constitute a violation of this Rule even if the judgment is subsequently determined to have been erroneous. For purposes of this rule, a judgment is made in good faith if the prosecutor reasonably believes that the new evidence does not create a reasonable likelihood that a convicted defendant did not commit an offense of which the defendant was convicted.
- [10] A current or former prosecutor, and any lawyer associated with such person in a law firm, is prohibited from advising, aiding or promoting the defense in any criminal matter or proceeding in which the prosecutor has acted or participated. See Business and Professions Code section 6131. See also Rule 1.7, Comment [16]

Rule 3.8 Responsibilities of a Prosecutor.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 7 Agree = 1
Disagree = 1
Modify = 4
NI = 1

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
2	County of Ventura, Office of the District Attorney	D	No	3.8(b)	This rule is unnecessary. The court has the duty to advise the defendant of the right to counsel. There is no reason to shift this responsibility to prosecutors, or to discipline the prosecutor if the court has failed to comply with its statutory duty. Comment [1B] states that paragraph (b) is not intended to expand the obligations imposed on prosecutors by applicable law. But neither federal nor California law place upon prosecutors the duties laid out in paragraph (b), i.e. to make efforts to assure that the accused is advised of the right to, and procedure for obtaining counsel, and is given reasonable opportunity to obtain counsel. 3.8(b) should be deleted.	Proposed Rule 3.8(b), which is identical to the ABA Model Rule, only requires the prosecutor to make reasonable efforts to assure that the accused has been advised of the right to counsel etc.; it does not require the prosecutor himself or herself to advise the defendant of those rights, nor support discipline of the attorney if the court has failed to comply with its statutory duty. In addition, the Commission has added a clarifying statement in Comment [1B] indicating that paragraph (b) does not apply in circumstances where there is no right to counsel.
				3.8(c)	This rule prohibits a prosecutor from seeking to obtain from an unrepresented accused a waiver of important pretrial rights such as the right to a preliminary hearing, unless the tribunal has approved the appearance of the accused in propria persona . California law already prohibits an unrepresented	The commenter's discussion of various forms of, and requirements for, waiver by an unrepresented defendant do not persuade the Commission that the prohibition against certain affirmative conduct by the prosecutor is inappropriate. In addition, while a defendant's right to self-representation is both a constitutional right and a matter of choice by the

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 3.8 Responsibilities of a Prosecutor.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 7 Agree = 1
Disagree = 1
Modify = 4
NI = 1

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					defendant from waiving preliminary hearing. (Pen. Code section 860; In re Van Brunt (1966) 24 Cal.App.2d 96, 104, overruled on other grounds in In re Smiley (1967).) If a case is going to be resolved by way of guilty plea rather than by trial, the defendant must waive the rights to jury trial, to confront and cross-examine witnesses, and the privilege against self-incrimination. (Boykin v. Alabama (1969) 395 U.S. 238; In re Tahl (1969) 1 Cal.3d 122.) The standard guilty plea forms include these waivers, and the court must satisfy itself that the waivers are free and voluntary before they are accepted. A defendant has the constitutional right to self-representation. This is a choice by the defendant, not by the prosecution, and not by the court. The court does not really “approve” a defendant’s exercise of this right. The application of the Proposed Rule to infractions is problematic. The defendant has no right to appointed counsel, and most represent themselves. The Proposed Rule would apparently prohibit a discussion between the prosecutor and the defendant regarding waiving trial and pleading guilty, until the court makes a ruling “approving” self-representation. We appreciate the	defendant, it remains subject to a judicial finding that, e.g., the defendant is capable of properly exercising that right. The Commission observes that the limited context of this rule is the role of a “prosecutor in a criminal matter” which is substantially similar to the Model Rule counterpart that refers to a “prosecutor in a criminal case.” The Commission is not aware of any experience in Model Rule jurisdictions with regard to this rule and infractions.

Rule 3.8 Responsibilities of a Prosecutor.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 7 Agree = 1
Disagree = 1
Modify = 4
NI = 1

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				3.8(f)	concern in protecting the rights of unrepresented defendants, however, the Proposed Rule is overbroad and unnecessary. This rule should not be adopted because it could be read as requiring the prosecutor, in every case, to issue directives to police, victims, witnesses, and other persons over which prosecutors have no supervisory authority. This would include statements by independent elected officials such as police chiefs. Comment [6] explains that this duty applies “even when such persons are not under the direct supervision of the prosecutor.” Proposed Rule 5.1 and 5.3, which are cited in Comment [6], make attorneys responsible only for persons over whom they have managerial authority or direct supervisory authority. The State Bar should not mandate prosecutors to issue directives to persons in other agencies over whom they have no supervisory or managerial authority.	The language of Proposed Rule 3.8(f) makes clear that the prosecutor’s responsibility to exercise reasonable care to prevent others from making prohibited extrajudicial statements extends only to “persons under the supervision or direction of the prosecutor.” The commenter correctly notes that public comment version of Comment [6], which followed the ABA Model Rule, stated that the duty applies “even when such persons are not under the direct supervision of the prosecutor.” This is inconsistent with the revised language of Proposed Rule 3.8(f) and, for that reason, Comment [6] has been revised to read: “Prosecutors are subject to Rules 5.1 and 5.3. Ordinarily, the reasonable care standard will be satisfied if the prosecutor issues the appropriate cautions to law-enforcement personnel and other relevant individuals.”

Rule 3.8 Responsibilities of a Prosecutor.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 7 Agree = 1
Disagree = 1
Modify = 4
NI = 1

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
3	Public Defender of Los Angeles County	M	Yes	3.8(e) and Comment [4]	Rule 3.8(e) concerning the special rules for prosecutors, states that a prosecutor shall not subpoena a lawyer to present evidence about a past or present client unless the prosecutor reasonably believes the information sought is not protected from disclosure by any applicable privilege or the work product doctrine. Comment [4] however adds an exception that is not covered in the Proposed Rule, saying it is intended to limit the issuances of lawyer subpoenas to those situations in which there is a genuine need to intrude into the lawyer-client or other privileged relationship. There is no "genuine need" exception written into the Proposed Rule and it should not swallow up the Proposed Rule's protections.	The "genuine need" language in Comment [4] is not intended to identify an additional exception to the prohibition against issuing a subpoena etc. that is contained in the body of Proposed Rule 3.8(e). Rather, Comment [4] is intended to explain the rationale for permitting an exception to the prohibition where the listed conditions (1), (2) and (3) are present.
4	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	M	Yes	3.8(a) 3.8(b)	OCTC thanks the Commission for its changes in subparagraph (a), which is preferable to the original proposal, and its inclusion of a reference to section 6131 in Comment [10]. OCTC is, however, concerned about subparagraph (b)'s requirement that a prosecutor make reasonable efforts to assure that the accused has been advised of the right to and the procedure for obtaining counsel and has been given a reasonable opportunity to obtain counsel. This section fails to address that in most situations the	No response required. Proposed Rule 3.8(b), which is identical to the ABA Model Rule, only requires the prosecutor to make reasonable efforts to assure that the accused has been advised of the right to counsel etc.; it does not require the prosecutor himself or herself to advise the defendant of those rights, nor support discipline of the attorney if the police have failed to comply with their duty to advise etc.

Rule 3.8 Responsibilities of a Prosecutor.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 7 Agree = 1
Disagree = 1
Modify = 4
NI = 1

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				3.8(c)	police, not the prosecutor, control this. The police, at least in California, are usually independent of the criminal prosecutor. (See e.g. People v. Jacinto (2010) __ Cal.App.4th __, WL 2105069 [finding that the Sheriff's deportation of witness not attributed to prosecutor].) Further, to what extent is this impinging on certain investigative tools and the role of the prosecutor in them? The same concern seems to apply to subparagraph (c) which prohibits a prosecutor from obtaining from an unrepresented accused a waiver of important pretrial rights, such as a preliminary hearing, unless the tribunal has approved of the appearance of the accused in propria persona.	As the manner of approval by the tribunal is not mandated by the rule, there is room to accommodate existing procedures. Paragraph (c) should be construed as a rule of reason rather than rigidly applied. As a less restrictive deviation from the Model Rule counterpart language, the Commission's approach is intended to recognize that waivers can be properly obtained from an unrepresented accused.
				3.8(f)	Likewise, OCTC is concerned with subparagraph (f)'s requirement that the prosecutor use reasonable care to prevent investigators, law enforcement personnel, employees or other persons assisting or associated with the prosecutor from making extrajudicial statements that the prosecutor would be prohibited from making under Proposed Rule 3.6. While in principle	The language of Proposed Rule 3.8(f) makes clear that the prosecutor's responsibility to exercise reasonable care to prevent others from making prohibited extrajudicial statements extends only to "persons under the supervision or direction of the prosecutor."

Rule 3.8 Responsibilities of a Prosecutor. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 7 Agree = 1 Disagree = 1 Modify = 4 NI = 1
No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				3.8(e)	laudable, this requirement seems to have the same problem of not addressing the thorny issue of when law enforcement, such as the police, is independent of the prosecutor. This is particularly difficult when the Chief Law Enforcement officer is an elected position. OCTC is concerned that paragraph (e) does not discuss how the prosecutor is to deal with a waiver of the privilege or the work product doctrine.	The Commission's addition of "the work product doctrine" language recognizes, in part, that other jurisdictions may encompass work product protection under the concept of a "privilege."
				3.8(g)	OCTC agrees with the majority of the Commission regarding paragraph (g) and supports this paragraph. There are too many Comments, many are too long, and they cover subjects and discussions best left to treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	No response required.
				Comment [1A]	Comment [1A] defining prosecutor to include the office of the prosecutor and all lawyers affiliated with the prosecutor's office should be in the Proposed Rule itself, not a Comment.	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations. As a general rule, definitions of terms contained in the Proposed Rules are contained either in Proposed Rule 1.0.1 or in a Comment to a particular Proposed Rule.

Rule 3.8 Responsibilities of a Prosecutor.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 7 Agree = 1
Disagree = 1
Modify = 4
NI = 1

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
5	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee		Yes		The Proposed Rule is acceptable except (1) the omission of the ABA language on pretrial publicity (review SDCBA's letter for an example) and (2) objection was voiced with respect to subparagraphs (d) and (f).	The Commission's approach to pretrial publicity is taken from the ABA Model Rule counterpart, except that the reference to the prosecutor's ability to make statements that serve a legitimate law enforcement purpose, etc. subject to the duty to refrain from making extrajudicial comments with a substantial likelihood of heightening public condemnation of the accused has been deleted as an unnecessary and imprecise re-formulation of the more detailed Model Rule paragraphs 3.6(a) and (b).
				3.8(d)	Proposed subsection (d) adds the requirement that a prosecutor "comply with all constitutional obligations as defined by relevant case law regarding the" timely disclosure of [discovery]. I believe that a requirement that a prosecutor have knowledge of "all relevant case law" regarding discovery would be unduly burdensome; I am not sure any lawyer could ever find enough hours in the day to comply with that additional requirement, particularly given on how quickly the law changes in this area.	Proposed subsection (d) requires compliance with "all constitutional obligations, as defined by relevant case law, regarding the timely disclosure etc." Thus, the reference to relevant case law is not to all case law regarding discovery, but specifically to case law that clarifies and defines the prosecutor's constitutional obligations.
				3.8(f)	Subsection (f) is another section that could be hard to enforce. While working with law enforcement agencies often involved	Unlike the ABA Model Rule, proposed subsection (f) requires the prosecutor to exercise reasoning care to prevent improper extrajudicial statements only by

Rule 3.8 Responsibilities of a Prosecutor.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 7_ Agree = 1_
Disagree = 1_
Modify = 4_
NI = 1_

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					cooperation, different agencies handle cases very differently. Prosecutors do not have supervisory responsibilities over the employees of other agencies, and it may be unfair to require prosecutors to exercise control they don't have. While prosecutors can provide training regarding the law, ultimately the employees of other agencies will answer to their own chain of command.	"persons under the supervision or direction of the prosecutor." The rule does not make the prosecutor responsible for statements made by employees of other agencies whom the prosecutor does not supervise or direct.
7	Santa Clara County Bar Association	M	Yes		We fully support a rule that addresses the special responsibilities of a prosecutor. The currently proposed version addresses several of the concerns previously articulated by the SCCBA. However, it still sets out too broad a framework for the responsibilities of a prosecutor. In particular, the SCCBA suggests that in subsection (f), the words "or direction" be deleted so that prosecutors are only held accountable for persons under their direct control as employees as opposed to those who may undertake action at their direction but who are not required to do so. Finally, the SCCBA would commend the RRC to once again seriously consider the input provided by the California District Attorneys Association in a letter to the RRC dated November 13, 2009.	Paragraph (g) and all of its subparagraphs are taken verbatim from the Model Rule. The ABA amended Model Rule 3.8 in February 2008 by adding paragraphs (g) and (h) to impose on prosecutors a duty to take certain steps when they know of "new, credible and material evidence" that indicates a convicted defendant was innocent of the crime for which the defendant was convicted. The Commission agrees with the policies underlying these paragraphs and recommend their adoption. In addition, to respond to concerns about the ABA language concerning supervision, the Commission has revised Comment [6] to read: "Prosecutors are subject to Rules 5.1 and 5.3. Ordinarily, the reasonable care standard will be satisfied if the prosecutor issues the appropriate cautions to law-enforcement personnel and other relevant individuals."

Rule 3.8 Responsibilities of a Prosecutor.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 7 Agree = 1
Disagree = 1
Modify = 4
NI = 1

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
6	US Attorney 's Office for Central, Southern, Northern, and Eastern District of California	M		3.8(g) & (h)	Few states have followed the ABA's lead in adopting Model Rule 3.8(g), (h). Based on the information we have, it appears that since the ABA promulgated Model Rule 3.8(g), (h), only two states have adopted new rules based on it: Wisconsin and Delaware. The New York Court of Appeals recently conclusively rejected a proposal to adopt a rule based on Model Rule 3.8(g), (h). Even more recently, on October 2, 2009, the North Carolina State Bar Ethics Subcommittee voted to recommend to the Ethics Committee that its proposed version of 3.8(g) be rejected entirely. ABA Model Rule 3.8(g), (h) is likely meeting with a lack of acceptance because state bar disciplinary authorities regard it as lacking precision, unnecessary, and addressing a subject matter more appropriately addressed by legislatures and courts handling criminal cases. There should not be a special rule for prosecutors that applies in cases to which the prosecutor is a complete stranger. There is no reason why the Rules of Professional Conduct should treat a prosecutor who is a stranger to a case any differently than any other member of the bar who is similarly a stranger to the case. The Commission has indicated that it believes the language of and comments to Proposed Rule 3.8(g) sufficiently addresses	The Commission discussed at length, and considered the views of numerous stakeholders in connection with, the adoption of Proposed Rules 3.8(g) and 3.8(h). A majority of the Commission believes that a "special rule" governing prosecutors is appropriate in light of the unique role and authority of the prosecutor in the criminal justice system. The restriction of the disclosure obligation to exculpatory evidence that is "new, credible and material" creates a higher standard for triggering a prosecutor's duty, and the lesser disclosure obligation in cases where the conviction was obtained outside the prosecutor's jurisdiction minimizes the burden of the duty triggered.

Rule 3.8 Responsibilities of a Prosecutor.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = _7_ Agree = _1_
Disagree = _1_
Modify = _4_
NI = _1_

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					this issue. We respectfully disagree. If a prosecutor in Jurisdiction A learns of evidence tending to show the innocence of a defendant previously convicted by a prosecutor's office in Jurisdiction B, in which the prosecutor in Jurisdiction A has never served, then the prosecutor in Jurisdiction A is in the same position as any other lawyer who learns such information. As with any other lawyer who is a stranger to the case, the prosecutor in Jurisdiction A will not know what evidence was presented at the trial in Jurisdiction B, what credibility issues were posed by the witnesses who testified at that trial, or what issues have already been ruled on by the court in Jurisdiction B. The prosecutor in Jurisdiction A, therefore, will have no more meaningful basis than any other lawyer for assessing whether the evidence is new, credible, material, and creates a reasonable likelihood that the defendant convicted in Jurisdiction B did not commit the offense of conviction. Yet, Proposed Rule 3.8(g) would impose the obligation of making this assessment only on this prosecutor, and not on any other member of the bar who came to learn of the same evidence.

Rule 3.8 Responsibilities of a Prosecutor.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 7 Agree = 1
Disagree = 1
Modify = 4
NI = 1

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				3.8(g)	Proposed Rule 3.8(g) encourages unnecessary disclosures that may cast unwarranted doubt on the actual guilt of correctly convicted defendants. Because prosecutors who are strangers to a case will not be in a position to make any meaningful assessment as to whether evidence is new, credible, and material, they will likely err on the side of disclosing all evidence other than that apparently frivolous on its face as a means of avoiding any potential for discipline that might arise from a failure to disclose. Proposed Rule 3.8(g) is unclear in many respects that affect the obligations set forth therein. First, the term “knows” is undefined in the Proposed Rule. Second, we are concerned by the use of the term “material” without a correlating definition. Third, we believe the Proposed Rule’s use of the term “promptly” is problematic because it may subject prosecutors, particularly those who have no previous familiarity with the case of conviction, to being second guessed about the amount of time they take to assess whether particular evidence of which they become aware triggers a disclosure obligation. Fourth, we are concerned with the mandate that a prosecutor “undertake further investigation” or “make reasonable efforts to cause an	The requirement that the new evidence be “credible, material . . . [and] creat[e] a reasonable likelihood that a convicted defendant did not commit an offense of which the defendant was convicted” sets a high standard to trigger the duty of disclosure. In addition, given the knowledge standard, it is likely that a prosecutor who is a stranger to a case will seldom have knowledge of such evidence. The Commission does not believe that the use of the terms “know,” “material,” and “promptly” in Proposed Rule 3.8(g) are in any way unusual or anomalous or that they call for specific definition in connection with this rule. In general, paragraph (g) and all of its subparagraphs are taken verbatim from the Model Rule. The ABA amended Model Rule 3.8 in February 2008 by adding paragraphs (g) and (h) to impose on prosecutors a duty to take certain steps when they know of “new, credible and material evidence” that indicates a convicted defendant was innocent of the crime for which the defendant was convicted. The Commission agrees with the policies underlying these paragraphs and recommend their adoption.

Rule 3.8 Responsibilities of a Prosecutor.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = _7_ Agree = _1_
Disagree = _1_
Modify = _4_
NI = _1_

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				3.8(h)	investigation.” Prosecutors do not have general investigative powers (such as the power to issue subpoenas post-trial) nor do they have the staff or monetary resources to investigate thousands of claims of “new, credible and material” evidence. Proposed Rule 3.8(h) is also unclear in many respects that affect the obligations set forth therein. First, similar concerns regarding the use of “knows” in Proposed Rule 3.8(g) apply to Proposed Rule 3.8(h). Second, and perhaps most troubling, is Proposed Rule 3.8(h)’s mandate that a prosecutor “shall seek to remedy the conviction.” This phrase is so vague that it utterly fails to give notice of what a prosecutor is required to do to protect his or her license. Proposed Comment [8] attempts to clarify this mandate but falls short. The use of the phrase “may include” render the effort at clarification useless, as it implies that a prosecutor faced with what that prosecutor believes to be clear and convincing evidence of a defendant’s innocence will in some circumstances be required to do more, with no guidance as to what this more is.	See Response to Comment re 3.8(g), above. The Commission believes that the illustrative examples in Comment [8] provide adequate guidance to a prosecutor and do not impose an unreasonable burden on a prosecutor in possession of such new and material exculpatory evidence.

Rule 3.8 Responsibilities of a Prosecutor.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 7 Agree = 1
Disagree = 1
Modify = 4
NI = 1

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				Comment [9]	Proposed Comment [9]'s "good faith" exception is troublesome. We appreciate the inclusion of a good faith exception, and we appreciate the modification to Proposed Comment [9] to attempt to define the standard under which this good faith exception will apply. But, we believe that application of this standard remains problematic given the ambiguities, discussed above, as to what it means to "know" of evidence triggering obligations under the Proposed Rule and whether any investigation is required before a prosecutor makes the determination that he or she does or does not "know" of such evidence. The duties imposed by Proposed Rule 3.8(g), (h) may also conflict with prosecutors' obligations under other rules and, for federal prosecutors, under other federal laws. Adopting Proposed Rule 3.8(g), (h) would likely cause a flood of complaints from prisoners with time on their hands and animosity toward prosecutors. The Board of Governors should carefully consider whether it wants to create such a mechanism for disgruntled prisoners to use the threat of attorney discipline to vent their frustrations and divert limited prosecutorial and law enforcement resources from the investigation and prosecution of ongoing criminal conduct to responding to a potential flood of frivolous claims.	The Comment's provision of a "good faith" exception goes beyond the corresponding ABA Model Rule in providing a definition of "good faith judgment" in terms of "reasonable belief." The Commission believes that this clarification provides sufficient guidance to the prosecutor who is evaluating whether disclosure is required in a given case.

Rule 3.8: Special Responsibilities of a Prosecutor

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California: Rule 5-110 provides as follows:

A member in government service shall not institute or cause to be instituted criminal charges when the member knows or should know that the charges are not supported by probable cause. If, after the institution of criminal charges, the member in government service having responsibility for prosecuting the charges becomes aware that those charges are not supported by probable cause, the member shall promptly so advise the court in which the criminal matter is pending.

In addition, Rule 5-220 provides that a lawyer “shall not suppress any evidence that the member or the member’s client has a legal obligation to reveal or to produce.”

Connecticut omits paragraphs (e) and (f).

District of Columbia: Every paragraph of Rule 3.8 differs from the Model Rule. The D.C. version of Rule 3.8 provides that the prosecutor in a criminal case shall not:

(a) In exercising discretion to investigate or to prosecute, improperly favor or invidiously discriminate against any person;

(b) File in court or maintain a charge that the prosecutor knows is not supported by probable cause;

(c) Prosecute to trial a charge that the prosecutor knows is not supported by evidence sufficient to establish a prima facie showing of guilt;

(d) Intentionally avoid pursuit of evidence or information because it may damage the prosecution’s case or aid the defense;

(e) Intentionally fail to disclose to the defense, upon request and at a time when use by the defense is reasonably feasible, any evidence or information that the prosecutor knows or reasonably should know tends to negate the guilt of the accused or to mitigate the offense, or in connection with sentencing, intentionally fail to disclose to the defense upon request any unprivileged mitigating information known to the prosecutor and not reasonably available to the defense, except when the prosecutor is relieved of this responsibility by a protective order of the tribunal;

(f) Except for statements which are necessary to inform the public of the nature and extent of the prosecutor's action and which serve a legitimate law enforcement purpose, make extrajudicial comments which serve to heighten condemnation of the accused; or

(g) In presenting a case to a grand jury, intentionally interfere with the independence of the grand jury, preempt a function of the grand jury, abuse the processes of the grand jury, or fail to bring to the attention of the grand jury material facts tending substantially to negate the existence of probable cause.

Florida omits paragraphs (b), (e), and (f) of ABA Model Rule 3.8.

Georgia: In place of Rule 3.8(b) and (c), Georgia substitutes the simple caution that a prosecutor shall "refrain from making any effort to prevent the accused from exercising a reasonable effort to obtain counsel." Georgia also shortens Rule 3.8(d) by eliminating the part that begins "in connection with sentencing." Georgia also limits the application of Rule 3.8(e) to statements the prosecutor would be prohibited from making only under Rule 3.6(g) (as opposed to the entire rule).

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2010, Rule 3.8 adds the following sentence: "The duty of a public prosecutor or other government lawyer is to seek justice, not merely to convict." Comment 1A elaborates on this sentence, quoting cases concerning a prosecutor's duties.

Massachusetts: Rule 3.8(c) prohibits prosecutors from seeking waivers of important pretrial rights from unrepresented defendants unless "a court has first obtained from the accused a knowing and intelligent written waiver of counsel." Massachusetts Rule 3.8(f) tracks ABA Model Rule 3.8(e), but adds that the prosecutor must obtain "prior judicial approval after an opportunity for an adversarial proceeding."

Massachusetts also adds paragraphs (h) and (i), which track DR 7-106(C)(3) and (4), and adds a new paragraph (j) providing that a prosecutor in a criminal case shall "not intentionally avoid pursuit of evidence because the prosecutor believes it will damage the prosecution's case or aid the accused."

The Massachusetts federal court version of Rule 3.8(e) — Local Rule 3.8(f) — was declared invalid in Stern v. United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, 16 F. Supp. 2d 88 (1st Cir.), reh'g and reh'g en banc denied, 214 F.3d 4 (1st Cir. 2000) (concluding that "the adoption of Local Rule 3.8(f) exceeded the district court's lawful authority to regulate both grand jury and trial subpoenas" in federal courts).

Michigan omits paragraphs (e) and (f).

New Jersey: Rule 3.8(c) prohibits a prosecutor from seeking to obtain from an unrepresented accused a waiver only of important “post-indictment” pretrial rights, and New Jersey Rule 3.8(d) requires timely disclosure to the defense only of all “evidence,” not “information.”

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 3.8 is substantially similar to DR 7-103(A) of the old Model Code. Rather than adopting Model Rule 3.8(g) and (h), New York endorses similar, but less strict, procedures in Comments 6A-6E.

North Carolina: Rule 3.8(e) adds that the prosecutor shall not “participate in the application for the issuance of a search warrant to a lawyer for the seizure of information of a past or present client in connection with an investigation of someone other than the lawyer,” unless the conditions stated in ABA Model Rule 3.8(e) are satisfied.

Ohio: Rule 3.8(a) provides that a prosecutor shall not “pursue or” prosecute a charge that the prosecutor knows is not supported by probable cause. (A note by the drafters says the rule is thus expanded to prohibit either the pursuit or prosecution of unsupported charges and thus is broad enough to include grand jury proceedings.) Ohio omits Rule 3.8(b) because (according to a Model Rules Comparison) ensuring that the defendant is advised about the right to counsel is a police and judicial function, and because Rule 4.3 already sets forth duties applicable to all lawyers in dealing with unrepresented persons. Ohio also omits Rule 3.8(c) because that rule has a potential adverse impact on defendants who seek continuances or seek to participate in diversion programs. Rule 3.8(d) deletes the words “and to the tribunal” in connection with sentencing disclosures. Ohio omits Rule 3.8(f) because prosecutors, like all lawyers, are already subject to Rule 3.6.

Pennsylvania deletes Rule 3.8(e) (governing subpoenas to lawyers) and instead adopts a separate rule, Pennsylvania Rule 3.10, which forbids a prosecutor or other governmental lawyer, absent judicial approval, to subpoena a lawyer before a grand jury or other tribunal investigating criminal conduct if the prosecutor seeks to compel evidence concerning a current or former client of the lawyer.

Texas: Rule 3.09(a) provides that a prosecutor shall refrain from prosecuting “or threatening to prosecute” a charge that the prosecutor knows is not supported by probable cause. Texas Rule 3.09(b) and (c) provides that a prosecutor shall:

(b) refrain from conducting or assisting in a custodial interrogation of an accused unless the prosecutor has made reasonable efforts to be assured that the accused has been advised of any right to, and the procedure for obtaining, counsel and has been given reasonable opportunity to obtain counsel;

(c) not initiate or encourage efforts to obtain from an unrepresented accused a waiver of important pre-trial, trial or post-trial rights.

Texas omits paragraph (e) and the first half of ABA Model Rule 3.8(f) but retains in Rule 3.07 the obligation to exercise reasonable care to prevent “persons employed or controlled by the prosecutor” in a criminal case from making an extrajudicial statement that the prosecutor would be prohibited from making.

Utah: Rule 3.8(d) eliminates the obligation to disclose unprivileged mitigating information “to the tribunal” in connection with sentencing; Utah omits ABA Model Rule 3.8(e) (regarding subpoenas to lawyers); and Utah’s equivalent to ABA Model Rule 3.8(f) deletes everything up to the phrase “exercise reasonable care.”

Virginia: Rule 3.8, which Virginia calls “Additional Responsibilities of a Prosecutor,” states that a prosecutor shall:

(b) not knowingly take advantage of an unrepresented defendant.

(c) not instruct or encourage a person to withhold information from the defense after a party has been charged with an offense.

(d) make timely disclosure to counsel for the defendant, or to the defendant if he has no counsel, of the existence of evidence which the prosecutor knows tends to negate the guilt of the accused, mitigate the degree of the offense, or reduce the punishment, except when disclosure is precluded or modified by order of a court; . . .

Virginia omits paragraph (e) and the first half of paragraph (f) of ABA Model Rule 3.8 and replaces the duty to “exercise reasonable care to prevent” in the second half of Rule 3.8(f) with a mandate that a prosecutor not “direct or encourage” others to make statements that Rule 3.6 would prohibit the prosecutor from making.

Wisconsin has adopted Model Rule 3.8(g) and (h) nearly verbatim effective July 1, 2009, becoming the first state to do so. The Wisconsin version of Rule 3.8(b), however, varies from the Model Rule in that it requires a prosecutor who is “communicating with an unrepresented person in the context of an investigation or proceeding” to “inform the person of the prosecutor’s role and interest in the matter.”

Proposed Rule 3.9 [N/A]

“Advocate In Nonadjudicative Proceedings”

(XDraft #3, (3/27/10))

Summary: This rule addresses a lawyer’s role as a client’s advocate before a legislative body or administrative agency in a nonadjudicative proceeding. It requires a lawyer to disclose that the lawyer’s appearance is in a representative capacity. The proposed Rule is derived primarily from N.Y. Rule 3.9.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule

Comment

- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☒ Existing California Law

Rules

Statutes

Case law

Government Code sections 11440.60, 82002(a),(b),(c)

- ☒ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

New York Rule 3.9

- ☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 6

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 5

Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Commission Minority Position, Known Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

Minority Position Included. (See Introduction): ☒ Yes ☐ No

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☒ Very Controversial – Explanation:

A minority of the Commission is concerned that limiting the scope of this Rule as recommended by the Commission, together with the definition of “tribunal” in proposed Rule 1.0.1 and the Commission’s rejection of Model Rule 4.1(a), will create a regulatory gap in the Rules and cause confusion among lawyers. See Minority Dissent.

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Rule 3.9 Advocate in Nonadjudicative Proceedings*

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 3.9 regulates a lawyer's conduct as a client advocate in a nonadjudicative proceeding, such as a proceeding before a legislative body or an administrative agency. The Rule, which is derived verbatim from New York Rule 3.9, requires a lawyer to disclose that his or her appearance is in a representative capacity, except when the lawyer is simply seeking from an agency information that is available to the public. The Commission recommends that the Model Rule's requirement that a lawyer comply with certain rule provisions (i.e., Rules 3.3, 3.4 and 3.5) that are applicable to conduct before a tribunal not be adopted. The Commission believes this departure from the Model Rule approach is necessary because the provisions referenced in the Model Rule include concepts that are meaningful in representations before adjudicative tribunals, such as the concept of "evidence," but these same concepts are confusing, or outright incorrect, for setting clear standards in a non-adjudicative proceeding. The Commission concluded that there are material differences between the functioning of law courts and of legislative and administrative bodies that reflect on a lawyer's role in representing clients in these different settings. Moreover, First Amendment protections apply in dealing with legislative and administrative bodies, involved in such things as writing statutes and administrative regulations and granting and denying governmental licenses and permits, but do not similarly apply to court proceedings. For these reasons, the Commission recommends that proposed Rule 3.9 be more limited in scope and application than the corresponding Model Rule.

Minority. A minority of the Commission dissents from (i) the Commission's rejection of the public comment version of the Rule and adoption of New York Rule 3.9, and (ii) the Commission's concomitant rejection of proposed Rule 4.1, which would have imposed a duty of honesty in circumstances governed by Rule 3.9. See full Minority Dissent, below.

Variations in Other Jurisdictions. Every state except for North Carolina and Virginia have adopted some version of Model Rule 3.9. Nearly every state that has adopted the Rule has adopted the Model Rule verbatim. Only New York substantively diverges from the Model Rule by limiting the lawyer's duties under the Rule to disclosing the fact of the lawyer's representative capacity.

* Proposed Rule 3.9, XDraft 3 (3/27/10).

Rule 3.9 Advocate in Nonadjudicative Proceedings
Dissent To Recommendation Not To Adopt Proposed Rule 3.9 and Rule 4.1

The public comment version of Rule 3.9 required lawyers to do two things: to announce in certain legislative and administrative circumstances that they are acting as advocates for others (because failing to do so would be dishonest), and to comply with Rule 4.1. The public comment version of Rule 4.1, in turn, generally required that lawyers may not make false statements to others (because doing so would be dishonest). The requirement of lawyer honesty is long-standing and currently is found in Bus. & Prof. C. section 6106. That section subjects a lawyer to discipline for any "... act involving moral turpitude, dishonesty or corruption"

The Commission finally decided to recommend against adoption of Rule 4.1 and to modify Rule 3.9 to eliminate the duty of honesty previously found in its cross-reference to Rule 4.1. A minority of the Commission dissents from both decisions. While the minority hopes that the lawyer's section 6106 duty of honesty remains in the circumstances described in Rules 3.9 and 4.1, the Commission's vote will make this unclear to many readers. The complete absence of any Rule 4.1 naturally will lead readers to think that the Commission intended to say that lawyers have no such duty of honesty. If that duty does remain, it will be hidden in the Business & Professions Code, outside the easier reference of the Rules and therefore less likely to be known to lawyers.

We want to note that the Commission's Rule 3.9 recommendation was to adopt the N.Y. version of Rule 3.9, but the Commission has substantively strayed from N.Y. Although N.Y. Rule 3.9 does not refer to Rule 4.1, N.Y. did adopt Model Rule 4.1(a) (the prohibition on making any false statement of material fact or law to others). Thus, the crucial duty of honesty is absent from the Commission's proposal but is found in N.Y. Rule 4.1, and N.Y. Rule 4.1 by its terms would cover the Rule 3.9 circumstances. While the Rule 3.9 minority differs as to how stringent its requirements should be, it is unanimous that it should at the very least expressly require compliance with the duty of honesty found in Model Rule 4.1(a).

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.9 Advocate in Nonadjudicative Proceedings	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.9 Advocate in Nonadjudicative Proceedings	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
A lawyer representing a client before a legislative body or administrative agency in a nonadjudicative proceeding shall disclose that the appearance is in a representative capacity and shall conform to the provisions of Rules 3.3(a) through (c), 3.4(a) through (c), and 3.5.	A lawyer ~~representing~~communicating in a ~~client~~beforerepresentative capacity with a legislative body or administrative agency in connection with a ~~nonadjudicative~~pending non-adjudicative matter or proceeding shall disclose that the appearance is in a representative capacity, except when the lawyer seeks information from an agency that is available to the public~~and shall conform to the provisions of Rules 3.3(a) through (c), 3.4(a) through (c), and 3.5.~~	Proposed Rule 3.9 is taken verbatim from New York Rule 3.9, which is a substantial revision of Model Rule 3.9. After the initial public comment period, the Commission voted against recommending the public comment version of proposed Rule 3.9, which more closely tracked Model Rule 3.9. The public comment version of the Rule had substituted a requirement that lawyers appearing as an advocate in non-adjudicative proceedings were required to conform their conduct to Rule 4.1 for the Model Rule's references to "Rules 3.3(a) through (c), and 3.5" because a standard requiring conformance to Rule 4.1 was more appropriate for conduct governed by the proposed Rule. With the Commission's recommendation not to adopt a rule counterpart to Model Rule 4.1, that reference is no longer accurate. Moreover, the Commission determined that the New York Rule more clearly stated when a lawyer is required to disclose that the lawyer's appearance is in a representative capacity.

* Proposed Rule 3.9, XDraft 3 (03/27/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.9 Advocate in Nonadjudicative Proceedings Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.9 Advocate in Nonadjudicative Proceedings Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] In representation before bodies such as legislatures, municipal councils, and executive and administrative agencies acting in a rule-making or policy-making capacity, lawyers present facts, formulate issues and advance argument in the matters under consideration. The decision-making body, like a court, should be able to rely on the integrity of the submissions made to it. A lawyer appearing before such a body must deal with it honestly and in conformity with applicable rules of procedure. See Rules 3.3(a) through (c), 3.4(a) through (c) and 3.5.	[1] In representation before non-judicial bodies such as legislatures, municipal~~city~~ councils, ~~and executive boards of supervisors, commissions,~~ and administrative agencies acting in a rule~~legislative, administrative or ministerial capacity (including without limitation a quasi-judicial proceeding, an administrative action, a rate-making or policy-making capacity proceeding, and a quasi-legislative proceeding, see Government Code sections 11440.60, 82002(a),(b),(c)).~~ lawyers present facts, formulate issues and advance ~~argument~~ in arguments regarding the matters under consideration. ~~The decision-making body, like a court, should be able to rely on the integrity of the submissions made to it. A lawyer appearing before such a body must deal with it honestly and in conformity with applicable rules of procedure. These~~ governmental bodies are entitled to know that the lawyer is appearing in a representative capacity. Ordinarily the client will consent to being identified, but if not, such as when the lawyer is appearing on behalf of an undisclosed principal, the governmental body at least knows that the lawyer is acting in a representative capacity as opposed to advancing the lawyer's personal opinion as a citizen. ~~See Rules 3.3(a) through (c), 3.4(a) through (c) and 3.5.~~	Proposed Comment [1] similarly is taken from New York Rule 3.9, cmt. [1], but is revised to provide better guidance on the kinds of proceedings to which the Rule is applicable in California, and the rationale underlying the Rule's disclosure requirement. The references in the Model Rule to Rules 3.3 and 3.5 have been deleted because those Rules are not applicable following the revisions to the black letter. See Explanation of Changes for the black letter of the rule, above.

* Proposed Rule 3.9, Draft 3 (03/27/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.9 Advocate in Nonadjudicative Proceedings Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.9 Advocate in Nonadjudicative Proceedings Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[1A] Rule 3.9 does not apply to adjudicative proceedings before a tribunal. Court rules and other law require a lawyer, in making an appearance before a tribunal in a representative capacity, to identify the client or clients and provide other information required for communication with the tribunal or other parties.	Comment [1A], which is also derived from New York Rule 3.9, has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It has been added to clarify that a lawyer's conduct will be governed by the specific rules of a tribunal when appearing before such a body.
[2] Lawyers have no exclusive right to appear before nonadjudicative bodies, as they do before a court. The requirements of this Rule therefore may subject lawyers to regulations inapplicable to advocates who are not lawyers. However, legislatures and administrative agencies have a right to expect lawyers to deal with them as they deal with courts.	~~[2] Lawyers have no exclusive right to appear before nonadjudicative bodies, as they do before a court. The requirements of this Rule therefore may subject lawyers to regulations inapplicable to advocates who are not lawyers. However, legislatures and administrative agencies have a right to expect lawyers to deal with them as they deal with courts.~~	The Commission recommends that Model Rule 3.9, cmt. [2], not be adopted because it neither explains nor clarifies the application of the Rule.
[3] This Rule only applies when a lawyer represents a client in connection with an official hearing or meeting of a governmental agency or a legislative body to which the lawyer or the lawyer's client is presenting evidence or argument. It does not apply to representation of a client in a negotiation or other bilateral transaction with a governmental agency or in connection with an application for a license or other privilege or the client's compliance with generally applicable reporting requirements, such as the filing of income-tax returns. Nor does it apply to the representation of a client in connection with an investigation or examination of the client's affairs	~~[3] This Rule only applies when a lawyer represents a client in connection with an official hearing or meeting of a governmental agency or a legislative body to which the lawyer or the lawyer's client is presenting evidence or argument. It does not apply to representation of a client in a negotiation or other bilateral transaction with a governmental agency or in connection with an application for a license or other privilege or the client's compliance with generally applicable reporting requirements, such as the filing of income-tax returns. Nor does it apply to the representation of a client in connection with an investigation or examination of the client's affairs~~	The Commission recommends that Model Rule 3.9, cmt. [3], not be adopted because it neither explains nor clarifies the application of the Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 3.9 Advocate in Nonadjudicative Proceedings Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.9 Advocate in Nonadjudicative Proceedings Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
conducted by government investigators or examiners. Representation in such matters is governed by Rules 4.1 through 4.4.	~~conducted by government investigators or examiners. Representation in such matters is governed by Rules 4.1 through 4.4.~~

Rule 3.9 Advocate in Nonadjudicative Proceedings (Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

A lawyer communicating in a representative capacity with a legislative body or administrative agency in connection with a pending non-adjudicative matter or proceeding shall disclose that the appearance is in a representative capacity, except when the lawyer seeks information from an agency that is available to the public.

COMMENT

- [1] In representation before non-judicial bodies such as legislatures, city councils, boards of supervisors, commissions, and administrative agencies acting in a legislative, administrative or ministerial capacity (including without limitation a quasi-judicial proceeding, an administrative action, a rate-making proceeding, and a quasi-legislative proceeding, see Government Code sections 11440.60, 82002(a),(b),(c)), lawyers present facts, formulate issues and advance arguments regarding the matters under consideration. These governmental bodies are entitled to know that the lawyer is appearing in a representative capacity. Ordinarily the client will consent to being identified, but if not, such as when the lawyer is appearing on behalf of an undisclosed principal, the governmental body at least knows that the lawyer is acting in a representative capacity as opposed to advancing the lawyer's personal opinion as a citizen.
- [1A] Rule 3.9 does not apply to adjudicative proceedings before a tribunal. Court rules and other law require a lawyer, in making an appearance before a tribunal in a representative capacity, to identify the client or clients and provide other information required for communication with the tribunal or other parties.

Rule 3.9 Non-adjudicative Proceedings
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
2	Hazard, Geoffrey, Deborah Rhode & Richard Zitrin (ethics law professors group)	M	Yes		"Inexplicably, however, the CRPC version of the rule does not require compliance with other rules relating to candor and honesty, 3.3, 3.4, and 3.5. Such compliance is required by ABA MR 3.9. We cannot explain the Commission's resistance to common statements about attorney honesty, such as this and those set forth above. Given the reputation of lawyers in today's marketplace, we believe that it is better for rules of conduct to make it abundantly clear that lawyers will act honestly and honorably. There is no excuse for not requiring compliance with other rules in situations not involving adjudicative proceedings."	See response to SDCBA, below.
3	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	M	Yes		OCTC is concerned with the Commission's departing from the language in ABA Rule 3.9, which requires the attorney to comply with rules 3.3(a) through (c), 3.4(a) through (c) and 3.5. The Commission states that they are deviating from the ABA's language because	See response to SDCBA, below.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 3.9 Non-adjudicative Proceedings [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 4 Agree = 2 Disagree = 0 Modify = 2 NI = 0
No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				Comments [1]-[2]	the rules referred to in the ABA rule involve adjudicative matters, but OCTC does not see the reasons for the difference. If a lawyer is representing a client it should not make a difference that it is in litigation or before a non-adjudicative proceeding. The rules eliminated by the Commission, like the rule added by the Commission, address truthfulness and fairness. There is no reason to depart from the ABA's rule. If the rule is changed to be like Model Rule 3.9, then the Comments will have to be changed or deleted. Comments [1]-[2] are too general and cover subjects and discussions best left to treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions. OCTC would also request a Comment that other rules may apply depending on the facts and circumstances.	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations. The Commission disagrees that such a comment is necessary.
4	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee	A	Yes		We approve the new rule in its entirety. A minority suggests the Rule should be omitted entirely (as it has in several states) because it would take lawyers out of the protections of	In light of the comments received in opposition to the proposed Rule, the Commission believes that a revised Rule based on the New York version of Model Rule 3.9 should be adopted. Given the

Rule 3.9 Non-adjudicative Proceedings [Sorted by Commenter]							TOTAL = 4 Agree = 2 Disagree = 0 Modify = 2 NI = 0
No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Civil Code section 47...However, given the proposed Rule's minimal requirements and the policy of seeking to bring California's rules in line with the ABA Model Rules...the Rule should be adopted as proposed.	empirical experience that lead to the enactment of the California SLAPP statute and the experience provided in other comments, there is a real risk that a Rule incorporating the requirements of Rule 4.1 could be misused to chill the speech of lawyers on behalf of clients. A Rule incorporating the requirements of Rule 4.1 would subject lawyers to unique risks that do not apply to anyone else who participates in nonadjudicative proceedings. As a result, such a Rule could chill lawyer speech on behalf of clients in nonadjudicative proceedings without resulting in any improvement to the honesty and integrity of such proceedings. The Commission believes that these risks outweigh adopting the Rule incorporating the requirements of Rule 4.1

Rule 3.9: Nonadjudicative Proceedings

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California has no direct counterpart to ABA Model Rule 3.9.

Colorado adds the following in lieu of the second sentence of ABA Model Rule 3.9:

Further, in such a representation, the lawyer:

(a) shall conform to the provisions of Rules 3.3(a)(1), 3.3(a)(3), 3.3(b), 3.3(c), and 3.4(a) and (b);

(b) shall not engage in conduct intended to disrupt such proceeding unless such conduct is protected by law; and

(c) may engage in ex parte communications, except as prohibited by law.

District of Columbia: Rule 3.9 applies to a lawyer representing a client before a “legislative or administrative body” (rather than “legislative body or administrative agency”).

Florida omits the reference to Rule 3.5.

New Jersey: Rule 3.9 tracks ABA Model Rule 3.9 essentially verbatim, but New Jersey’s cross-references to Rules 3.3, 3.4, and 3.5 differ slightly due to differences in New Jersey’s versions of those rules.

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 3.9 is reworded as follows: “A lawyer communicating in a representative capacity with a legislative body or administrative agency in connection with a pending non-adjudicative matter or proceeding shall disclose that the appearance is in a representative capacity, except when the lawyer seeks information from an agency that is available to the public.” Comment 1A emphasizes that “Rule 3.9 does not apply to adjudicative proceedings before a tribunal.”

North Carolina omits Rule 3.9.

Virginia omits Rule 3.9.

Proposed Rule 3.10 [5-100]
“Threatening Criminal, Administrative, or Disciplinary Charges”
(XDraft #4, 8/12/08)

Summary: This Rule will repeat the substance of existing California Rule of Professional Conduct 5-100. There is no model rule counterpart. The Rule prohibits a lawyer from threatening to present criminal, administrative, or disciplinary charges to obtain an advantage in a civil dispute. It reflects California disciplinary decisions that preceded the adoption of the 1975 Rules of Professional Conduct and has also been applied in civil cases. See Introduction.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart
Rule	Comment
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☒ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☒ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 5-100

Statute

Case law

See, e.g., Lindenbaum v. State Bar (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 565; Libarian v. State Bar (1952) 3 Cal. 2d 328; and Arden v. State Bar (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 310; Bluestein v. State Bar (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 162; Kinnamon v. Staitmen & Snyder (1977) 66 Cal. App. 893; Crane v. State Bar (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 117; In the Matter of Rodriguez (Rev. Dept. 1993) 2 State Bar Ct. Rptr. 480.

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☒ Other Primary Factor(s)

Threats to present criminal, administrative, or disciplinary complaints in order to gain an advantage in a civil dispute have long been prohibited by decisional law in this State. A Rule of Professional Conduct should memorialize the substance of those decisions so that lawyers have clear notice that such conduct is prohibited. Repealing the existing rule would incorrectly suggest that such conduct would be permissible in the future.

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 10

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 2

Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☒ Yes ☐ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 3.10* Threatening Criminal, Administrative, or Disciplinary Charges*

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 3.10 is based on current California Rule 5-100, which makes a lawyer subject to discipline and civil liability for threatening to present criminal, administrative, or disciplinary charges to obtain an advantage in a civil dispute. That rule is based on 1975 California Rule of Professional Conduct 7-104. That, in turn, was based on American Bar Association Disciplinary Rule 5-105(a). Both the current and proposed Rule reflect California disciplinary decisions that preceded the adoption of the 1975 Rules of Professional Conduct. See, e.g., Lindenbaum v. State Bar (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 565; Libarian v. State Bar (1952) 3 Cal. 2d 328; Arden v. State Bar (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 310. The current rule and predecessors have also been applied in civil cases. See, e.g., Kinnamon v. Staitmen & Snyder (1977) 66 Cal. App. 893. The current American Bar Association Model Rules contain no counterpart to this rule. The Commission decided to retain the substance of the existing California Rule and to expand the Comment to describe its scope.

The current California Rule applies regardless of whether there is a civil action pending. A threat made before a formal civil action has been commenced also comes within the rule.

The Commission published for public comment a proposed expansion of Comment [2] that would have outlined the application of the Rule to proposed release-dismissal agreements in which prosecutors might agree to drop criminal charges in exchange for a defendant's agreement not to pursue a civil complaint against arresting officers or a government entity. The comments and criticisms regarding that proposed expansion were to the effect that it would give too much authority to prosecutors. The Commission rescinded most of that proposal in light of the comments.

* Proposed Rule 3.10, XDraft 4 (8/12/08).

INTRODUCTION (Continued):

The Commission's conclusion was that the applicability of the rule to that process should play out on a case by case basis in light of the facts. As a result of the deletion of most of the proposed language, the only expansion of proposed Comment [2] exempts from the rule an offer of a civil compromise in accordance with a statute such as Penal Code sections 1377-78, and the comments on this subject became moot.

Variation in Other Jurisdictions. Most states do not have a rule similar to existing California Rule 5-100. Colorado, South Carolina, Virginia, the District of Columbia, Louisiana, and Maine have similar rules. Hawaii, Idaho, Connecticut, Georgia, New Jersey, and Tennessee limit their rules to threats of criminal charges and do not include threats of criminal or disciplinary charges.

Minority. A minority of the Commission recommends against adoption of proposed Rule 3.10 for the reasons the ABA omitted such a rule from the Model Rules in 1983. The drafters of the Model Rules viewed a similar prohibition in former ABA Model Code DR 7-105(A) (1969), on which California Rule 5-100 is based, as overly broad and unnecessary. Threats of criminal prosecution or administrative charges that amount to extortionate conduct under the law are adequately covered under proposed Rule 8.4(b) which expands on Model Rule 8.4(b). Proposed Rule 3.10 is considerably broader than the rule in the few states that retain the earlier ABA Model Code rule which is limited to threats of criminal prosecution. What constitutes a "threat" under the proposed rule is incapable of adequate definition to inform lawyers in advance what conduct is prohibited. As drafted, the proposed Rule would unreasonably impede legitimate negotiation tactics in criminal and civil matters. There is no showing of a need to depart from the Model Rules by having a separate rule that prohibits extortionate conduct in addition to proposed Rule 8.4, which regulates lawyer misconduct.

California Rule 5-100 No Comparable ABA Model Rule	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.10 Threatening Criminal, Administrative, or Disciplinary Charges	Explanation of Changes to Current California Rule 5-100
(A) A member shall not threaten to present criminal, administrative, or disciplinary charges to obtain an advantage in a civil dispute.	(Aa) A ~~member~~lawyer shall not threaten to present criminal, administrative, or disciplinary charges to obtain an advantage in a civil dispute.	Because there is no Model Rule similar to existing California Rule of Professional Conduct 5-100, the comparisons in this table are to the existing California rule. The Commission changed “member” to “lawyer” to track the Model Rule’s convention of referring to lawyers rather than to members.
(B) As used in paragraph (A) of this rule, the term “administrative charges” means the filing or lodging of a complaint with a federal, state, or local governmental entity which may order or recommend the loss or suspension of a license, or may impose or recommend the imposition of a fine, pecuniary sanction, or other sanction of a quasi-criminal nature but does not include filing charges with an administrative entity required by law as a condition precedent to maintaining a civil action.	(Bb) As used in paragraph (Aa) of this ~~rule~~Rule, the term “administrative charges” means the filing or lodging of a complaint with a federal, state, or local governmental entity which may order or recommend the loss or suspension of a license, or may impose or recommend the imposition of a fine, pecuniary sanction, or other sanction of a quasi-criminal nature but does not include filing charges with an administrative entity required by law as a condition precedent to maintaining a civil action.	Proposed paragraph (b) is identical to current rule 5-100(B), except that the reference to paragraph (a) is now lower case, and the word “rule” has been capitalized.

* Proposed Rule 3.10, XDraft 4 (8/12/08). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the current California Rule (no ABA Model Rule counterpart)

California Rule 5-100 No Comparable ABA Model Rule	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 3.10 Threatening Criminal, Administrative, or Disciplinary Charges	Explanation of Changes to Current California Rule 5-100
(C) As used in paragraph (A) of this rule, the term "civil dispute" means a controversy or potential controversy over the rights and duties of two or more parties under civil law, whether or not an action has been commenced, and includes an administrative proceeding of a quasi-civil nature pending before a federal, state, or local governmental entity.	(C) As used in ~~paragraph (A) of this rule~~Rule, the term "civil dispute" means a controversy or potential controversy over the rights and duties of two or more parties under civil law, whether or not an action has been commenced, and includes an administrative proceeding of a quasi-civil nature pending before a federal, state, or local governmental entity.	Proposed paragraph (c) is substantially the same as existing California Rule 5-100(C). The definition of "civil dispute" will now apply to all parts of the proposed new Rule.

ABA Model Rule No Comparable ABA Model Rule Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.10 Threatening Criminal, Administrative, or Disciplinary Charges Comment	Explanation of Changes to the California Rule 1-710
	[1] This Rule prohibits a lawyer from threatening to present criminal, administrative, or disciplinary charges to obtain an advantage in a civil dispute and does not apply to a threat to bring a civil action. It also does not prohibit actually presenting criminal, administrative, or disciplinary charges, even if doing so creates an advantage in a civil dispute. Whether a lawyer's statement violates this Rule depends on the specific facts. (See, e.g., Crane v. State Bar (1981) 30 Cal.3d 117 [177 Cal.Rptr 670].) A statement that the lawyer will pursue "all available legal remedies," or words of similar import, by itself does not violate this Rule.	Comment [1] is new and does not appear in current California rule 5-100. The Commission added this comment in order to describe the scope of the proposed Rule and to make clear that whether a lawyer's statement violates the Rule depends on the facts and circumstances in which the statement is made. The limitations on the scope of the Rule stated in the proposed Comment are consistent with existing California law. For example, current California rule 5-100 only prohibits threatening criminal or similar charges to gain an advantage in a civil dispute. Actually filing such charges is not prohibited, even if doing so is for the purpose of gaining an advantage in a civil dispute. See, e.g., Los Angeles County Bar Association Formal Opinion 469 (1993).

ABA Model Rule No Comparable ABA Model Rule Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 3.10 Threatening Criminal, Administrative, or Disciplinary Charges Comment	Explanation of Changes to the California Rule 1-710
Rule 5-100 is not intended to apply to a member's threatening to initiate contempt proceedings against a party for a failure to comply with a court order.	[2] This Rule 5-100 is does not intended to apply to (i) a member's threatening threat to initiate contempt proceedings against a party for a failure to comply with a court order; or (ii) the offer of a civil compromise in accordance with a statute such as Penal Code sections 1377-78.	This Comment, which is based on the first Discussion paragraph to current rule 5-100, has been reworded to make it active voice and to clarify that the Rule do not apply in two situations. The first exception is substantially the same as in current rule 5-100. The second exception is to make clear that, if a person has been injured by an act constituting a misdemeanor, and that person has a remedy by a civil action, a prosecutor may offer to compromise the misdemeanor action in accordance with Penal Code sections 1377-78 without fear of violating this Rule. The version of this Rule circulated for public comment contained a more lengthy description of circumstances in which release-dismissal agreements in criminal cases might or might not violate this Rule. However, the Commission deleted most of those sentences in light of adverse public comment.
Paragraph (B) is intended to exempt the threat of filing an administrative charge which is a prerequisite to filing a civil complaint on the same transaction or occurrence.	[3] Paragraph (B) ~~is intended to exempt~~ exempts the threat of filing an administrative charge which is a prerequisite to filing a civil complaint on the same transaction or occurrence.	Comment [3] is substantially the same as the second paragraph of the Discussion in current rule 5-100. The Comment now affirmatively states the exemption instead of couching it in terms of the intent of the drafters.
For purposes of paragraph (C), the definition of "civil dispute" makes clear that the rule is applicable prior to the formal filing of a civil action.	~~For purposes of paragraph (C), the definition of "civil dispute" makes clear that the rule is applicable prior to the formal filing of a civil action.~~	The Commission recommends deleting the last Discussion paragraph of current rule 5-100 as unnecessary. Proposed paragraph (c) of the Rule expressly refers to a "potential controversy," thereby obviating this paragraph.

Rule 3.10 Threatening Criminal, Administrative, or Disciplinary Charges
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) A lawyer shall not threaten to present criminal, administrative, or disciplinary charges to obtain an advantage in a civil dispute.
 - (b) As used in paragraph (a) of this Rule, the term “administrative charges” means the filing or lodging of a complaint with a federal, state, or local governmental entity which may order or recommend the loss or suspension of a license, or may impose or recommend the imposition of a fine, pecuniary sanction, or other sanction of a quasi-criminal nature but does not include filing charges with an administrative entity required by law as a condition precedent to maintaining a civil action.
 - (c) As used in this Rule, the term “civil dispute” means a controversy or potential controversy over the rights and duties of two or more parties under civil law, whether or not an action has been commenced, and includes an administrative proceeding of a quasi-civil nature pending before a federal, state, or local governmental entity.
- [2] This Rule does not apply to (i) a threat to initiate contempt proceedings for a failure to comply with a court order; or (ii) the offer of a civil compromise in accordance with a statute such as Penal Code sections 1377-78.
 - [3] Paragraph (b) exempts the threat of filing an administrative charge which is a prerequisite to filing a civil complaint on the same transaction or occurrence.

Comment

- [1] This Rule prohibits a lawyer from threatening to present criminal, administrative, or disciplinary charges to obtain an advantage in a civil dispute and does not apply to a threat to bring a civil action. It also does not prohibit actually presenting criminal, administrative, or disciplinary charges, even if doing so creates an advantage in a civil dispute. Whether a lawyer's statement violates this Rule depends on the specific facts. See, e.g., Crane v. State Bar (1981) 30 Cal.3d 117 [177 Cal.Rptr 670]. A statement that the lawyer will pursue “all available legal remedies,” or words of similar import, by itself does not violate this Rule.

Rule 3.10 Threatening Criminal, Administrative, or Disciplinary Charges.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	San Diego County Bar Association	M	Yes	Comment [2]	Comment [2]: replace “good faith” standard with a “probable cause” standard.	In response to comments by this bar association and others, the Commission previously deleted the language that was the basis of the commenter’s concern.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	A	Yes		OCTC supports this rule but believes that there are too many Comments, many are too long and cover subjects and discussions best left to treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.
3	COPRAC	A	Yes		COPRAC supports the adoption of Proposed Rule 3.10 and the Comments to the Rule.	No response required.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

STATE VARIATIONS – CA RULE, NO ABA COUNTERPART

California Rule 5-100 Threatening Criminal, Administrative, or Disciplinary Charges

Jurisdictions with provisions similar to California:

Colorado

Rule 4.5\(a\) A lawyer shall not threaten criminal, administrative or disciplinary charges to obtain an advantage in a civil matter nor shall a lawyer present or participate in presenting criminal, administrative or disciplinary charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.

South Carolina

Rule 4.5 A lawyer shall not present, participate in presenting, or threaten to present criminal or professional disciplinary charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.

Virginia

Rule 3.4\(i\) [A lawyer shall not] Present or threaten to present criminal or disciplinary charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.

District of Columbia

Rule 8.4\(g\) [It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to] Seek or threaten to seek criminal charges or disciplinary charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.

Louisiana

Rule of Professional Conduct 8.4(g) [It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to] Threaten to present criminal or disciplinary charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.

Maine*

Rule 3. Code of Professional Responsibility. 3.6 Conduct During Representation. (C) Threatening Prosecution. A lawyer shall not present, or threaten to present, criminal, administrative, or disciplinary charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.

*This rule is no longer effective. The Maine Rules of Professional Conduct (which follow the ABA numbering system and do not include a specific provision on threatening to present charges) became effective on 8/1/2009.

Jurisdictions with provisions relating only to threats of criminal charges:

Hawaii – Rule 3.4\(i\)

Idaho - Rule 4.4\(a\)\(4\)

Connecticut – Rule 3.4\(7\)

Georgia – Rule 3.4\(h\)

New Jersey – Rule 3.4\(g\)

Tennessee – Rule 4.4\(b\)

Other Resources:

ABA Article, Making Threats, (October 2008), discussing history of prohibition against threats and state bar rules and ethics opinions on the subject. Note: some rule citations no longer effective and/or amended.

ABA Formal Opinion 92-363 Use of Threats of Prosecution in Connection with a Civil Matter (1992).

Proposed Rule 4.2 [2-100]
“Communication with a Represented Person”
(XDraft 19.1, 06/30/10)

Summary: Proposed Rule 4.2(a), which regulates a lawyer’s communications with persons – regardless of whether they are parties or witnesses in a matter, tracks the language of Model Rule 4.2 which is the standard in nearly every jurisdiction. However, similar to current rule 2-100, it provides detailed guidance as to how the rule is intended to apply in certain contexts. It should be noted that representatives from the California Attorney General, Public Defenders and District Attorneys have criticized the Commission’s recommendation to follow the Model Rule in applying the Rule to a lawyer’s communications with “persons,” not just “parties.” See Introduction and Public Comment Chart.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rule	RPC 2-100.
Statute
Case law	Matter of Dale (Rev. Dept. 2005) 4 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 798.

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 7

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 4

Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Dissenting Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☐ Yes ☒ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☐ No Known Stakeholders

☒ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

California Attorney General, California Public Defenders Assoc., CA Attorneys for Criminal Justice, Los Angeles Co. Pub. Defender, Orange Co. Pub. Defender, Nat. Assoc. of Criminal Defense Lawyers, SD Criminal Defense Bar Assoc., and various District Attorney offices in California. See Public Comment Chart for complete list.

☒ Very Controversial – Explanation:

Prosecutors and defense attorneys complain that the change from “party” to “person” will inhibit ability to investigate cases and contact witnesses. Others complain that the prohibition against contacting public officials is too broad.

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 4.2* – “Communication with a Represented Person”

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 4.2(a) follows the basic “no-contact” rule in Model Rule 4.2, except that the proposed Rule makes clear that a lawyer is prohibited from communicating indirectly as well as directly with a person known to be represented in the matter. In addition, the proposed Rule goes beyond its Model Rule counterpart by providing more detailed guidance as to how the Rule is intended to apply in certain contexts. For example, while the Model Rule expresses the general prohibition against communications with persons represented by counsel, it does not attempt to resolve the difficult challenges that the Rule has engendered historically and in practice. Unlike the Model Rule, the proposed Rule defines which individuals within an organization qualify as a “person” when the communication is with an agent or employee of the organizational entity. The Rule also sets forth exceptions for communications with public officials, and government boards and committees, as well as communications from a person involved in the matter who is seeking independent legal advice. In keeping with California’s traditional policy of protecting a client’s confidential information and the attorney-client relationship, the proposed Rule also provides that even where a communication is permitted under the Rule, a lawyer may not seek to obtain privileged or confidential information. Additionally, the Rule provides that a lawyer representing an organizational client may not falsely represent that he or she represents all employees or constituents of the organization.

Public Comment: “Person”. Notwithstanding the fact that the overwhelming majority of jurisdictions have adopted rules governing communications with a represented “person” rather than a represented “party,” and the fact that lawyers who practice in the lawyer discipline area in California have interpreted “party” in current rule 2-100 to encompass any represented person in a matter, the Commission received a significant amount of input from the public on using “person” in the proposed Rule. Input was received during both the initial and subsequent public comment periods, as well as during the Commission’s open session meetings. In response to the initial public comment distribution of the rule, representatives of the California Attorney General; Public Defender and District Attorney offices in California, and their representative organizations; and representative organizations of the California criminal defense bar raised concerns over the substitution of “person” in the proposed Rule for “party” in current rule 2-100. The Commission carefully considered the concerns that these commenters expressed at meetings and in writing, but ultimately retained “person” in the Rule. The Commission drafted several comments to accommodate these concerns, but the interested parties ultimately rejected them. Nevertheless, the Commission believes that the comments it drafted are a reasonable compromise between protecting attorney-client relationships of all persons involved in a matter and permitting law enforcement agencies and the criminal defense bar to conduct their investigations. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (c)(3) and Comments [18]-[21]. In response to the subsequent public comment distribution of the rule, there were less comments received but among them was a comment from the San Bernardino County Public Defender that similarly objected to the change from “party” to “person” and emphasized an anticipated detrimental impact on the ability of defense counsel to investigate cases and to conduct interviews of witnesses. To address this concern, the Commission added a new sentence to Comment [20] clarifying that the change from “party” to “person” is not intended to preclude legitimate communications by or on behalf of lawyers representing persons accused of crimes that might be authorized under the Sixth Amendment or other constitutional right.

* Proposed Rule 4.2, XDraft 19.1 (06/30/10).

INTRODUCTION (Continued):

Public Comment: “Public Official”. During the Commission’s deliberations, the Commission received a substantial amount of input from representatives of County and City Attorneys in California, as well as from several law firms with extensive land use practices, concerning the exception for communications with a “public official” stated in paragraph (c)(1). The Commission carefully considered the concerns that these commenters expressed at meetings and in writing. The Commission believes that the rule provision and comment it drafted are a reasonable compromise between the interests of the government and lawyers representing persons who are petitioning the government. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (c)(1) and Comment [16].

Variations in Other Jurisdictions. Every other jurisdiction has adopted a rule that governs communications with a represented “person” rather than a represented “party.” The Commission is aware of only four jurisdictions that still retain “party” in the black letter of its Model Rule 4.2 counterpart: Alabama, Arizona, Connecticut and Mississippi. In each instance, however, the jurisdictions use “Person” in the title of the rule and include a comment that provides: “This Rule also covers any person, whether or not a party to a formal proceeding, who is represented by counsel concerning the matter in question.” Within the last year and a half, both Illinois, Kentucky, Maine and West Virginia have each rejected rules that formerly prohibited contact only with a “party” in favor of a more expansive rule that prohibits communications with a “person known by the lawyer to be represented.” Other states have rules similar to proposed California Rule 4.2 and current rule 2-100 that expressly address communications with members or constituents of organizations (e.g., District of Columbia, Louisiana, Maryland, New Jersey, New Mexico, and Texas). Also similar to the proposed California Rule, several states also address communications with the government (e.g., District of Columbia, Maryland, and North Carolina). Two other states, Maine and Utah, have rules that expressly address the conduct of prosecutors under the Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.2 Communication With Person Represented By Counsel	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 4.2 Communication with a Represented Person	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
In representing a client, a lawyer shall not communicate about the subject of the representation with a person the lawyer knows to be represented by another lawyer in the matter, unless the lawyer has the consent of the other lawyer or is authorized to do so by law or a court order.	(a) In representing a client, a lawyer shall not communicate directly or indirectly about the subject of the representation with a person the lawyer knows to be represented by another lawyer in the matter, unless the lawyer has the consent of the other lawyer ~~or is authorized to do so by law or a court order.~~	Paragraph (a) tracks the language of the single paragraph Model Rule 4.2, but adds the words “directly or indirectly” to make clear that the Rule applies to communications through an intermediary such as an investigator. The exception for communications authorized by law or court order have been moved to paragraph (c).
	(b) For purposes of this Rule, a “person” includes: (1) A current officer, director, partner, or managing agent of a corporation, partnership, association, or other represented organization; or	The Model Rule does not define “person” in an organizational or corporate setting. Therefore, the Commission recommends paragraph (b), which describes the types of organization constituents who fall within the proscription of the Rule. The Model Rule by contrast makes no attempt to define which constituents of a corporation or other association are subject to the protections afforded by the Rule. As result, the proposed changes provide greater guidance to lawyers seeking to communicate with a represented organization.

* Proposed Rule 4.2, XDraft 19.1 (06/30/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.2 Communication With Person Represented By Counsel	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 4.2 Communication with a Represented Person	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(2) A current employee, member, agent or other constituent of a represented organization if the subject matter of the communication is any act or omission of the employee, member, agent or other constituent in connection with the matter, which may be binding upon or imputed to the organization for purposes of civil or criminal liability, or if the statement of such person may constitute an admission on the part of the organization.	Paragraph (b)(2) clarifies that the proposed Rule applies to certain other constituents of an organization not within the organization's "control group," and provides greater guidance and specificity than the Model Rule.
	(c) This Rule shall not prohibit: (1) Communications with a public official, board, committee or body; or	Subparagraph (c)(1) expresses an exception to the Rule that communications with public officers, board committees, and other similarly situated government employees and entities are permitted under the First Amendment and the right to petition government. This concept is found in a comment to the Model Rule. Paragraph (c) places the exception in the black letter of the Rule for greater clarity.
	(2) Communications initiated by a person seeking advice or representation from an independent lawyer of the person's choice; or	Subparagraph (c)(2) carries forward an exception found in current Rule 2-100.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.2 Communication With Person Represented By Counsel	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 4.2 Communication with a Represented Person	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(3) Communications authorized by law or a court order.	This exception stated in subparagraph (c)(3) is identical to the exception found in the Model Rule. It has been placed with the other express exceptions to the proposed Rule for clarity.
	(d) When communicating on behalf of a client with any person as permitted by this Rule, a lawyer shall not state or imply that the lawyer is disinterested. When the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the person misunderstands the lawyer's role in the matter, the lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to correct the misunderstanding.	Paragraph (d) adds an important public protection not found in the Model Rule. It is designed to prevent misleading a person with whom communication is permitted.
	(e) In any communication permitted by this Rule, a lawyer shall not seek to obtain privileged or other confidential information the lawyer knows or reasonably should know the person may not reveal without violating a duty to another or which the lawyer is not otherwise entitled to receive.	Paragraph (e) adds protections not found in the Model Rule against unwarranted intrusions into the attorney-client or other privilege. Thus, even where a communication is permitted by the Rule, the lawyer may not seek to obtain privileged or confidential information that the lawyer is not entitled to receive.
	(f) A lawyer for a corporation, partnership, association or other organization shall not represent that he or she represents all employees, members, agents or other constituents of the organization unless such representation is true.	Paragraph (f) is intended to prevent an attorney for an organization from thwarting legitimate inquiries and investigations by falsely representing that he or she represents all of the employees or other constituents of the organization. As such, it adds more public protection by preventing misuse of the Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.2 Communication With Person Represented By Counsel	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 4.2 Communication with a Represented Person	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(g) As used in this Rule, "public official" means a public officer of the United States government, or of a state, or of a county, township, city, political subdivision, or other governmental organization, with the equivalent authority and responsibilities as the non-public organizational constituents described in paragraph (b)(1).	Paragraph (g) defines the term "public official" as used in paragraph (c)(1). The Model Rule recognizes that lawyers are authorized by law to communicate with government on behalf of clients who are exercising their constitutional rights. However, this exception is found in a comment to the Model Rule, whereas the proposed Rule includes the exception in the black letter for greater clarity, specificity, and guidance.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.2 Communication With Person Represented By Counsel Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 4.2 Communication with a Represented Person Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] This Rule contributes to the proper functioning of the legal system by protecting a person who has chosen to be represented by a lawyer in a matter against possible overreaching by other lawyers who are participating in the matter, interference by those lawyers with the client-lawyer relationship and the uncounselled disclosure of information relating to the representation.	Overview and Purpose [1] This Rule contributes to the proper functioning of the legal system by protecting a person who has chosen to be represented by a lawyer in a matter against possible overreaching by other lawyers who are participating in the matter, interference by those lawyers with the client-lawyer relationship, and the ~~uncounselled~~uncounseled disclosure of information relating to the representation.	Comment [1] is identical to Model Rule 4.2, cmt. [1], except for the spelling of “uncounseled.”
[2] This Rule applies to communications with any person who is represented by counsel concerning the matter to which the communication relates.	[2] This Rule applies to communications with any person who is represented by counsel concerning the matter to which the communication relates.	Comment [2] is identical to Model Rule 4.2, cmt. [2].
[3] The Rule applies even though the represented person initiates or consents to the communication. A lawyer must immediately terminate communication with a person if, after commencing communication, the lawyer learns that the person is one with whom communication is not permitted by this Rule.	[3] ~~The~~This Rule applies even though the represented person initiates or consents to the communication. A lawyer must immediately terminate communication with a person if, after commencing communication, the lawyer learns that the person is one with whom communication is not permitted by this Rule.	Comment [3] is identical to Model Rule 4.2, cmt. [3], except for the substitution of “This” for “The”.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.2 Communication With Person Represented By Counsel Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 4.2 Communication with a Represented Person Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[4] As used in paragraph (a), "the subject of the representation," "matter," and "person" are not limited to a litigation context. This Rule applies to communications with any person, whether or not a party to a formal adjudicative proceeding, contract or negotiation, who is represented by counsel concerning the matter to which the communication relates.	Comment [4] explains use of the terms "person" and "matter" as used in the Rule. The proposed Rule uses the term "person" rather than "party" as in present Rule 2-100 to clarify that the Rule is not limited to litigation contexts and does not refer only to parties to litigation. (Cf. Matter of Dale (Rev.Dept. 2005) 4 Cal. State Bar Ct.Rptr. 798, 804-807.)
	[5] The prohibition against "indirect" communication with a person represented by counsel in paragraph (a) is intended to address situations where a lawyer seeks to communicate with a represented person through an intermediary such as an agent or investigator.	Comment [5] clarifies the use of the words "directly or indirectly" in Paragraph (a).
[4] This Rule does not prohibit communication with a represented person, or an employee or agent of such a person, concerning matters outside the representation. For example, the existence of a controversy between a government agency and a private party, or between two organizations, does not prohibit a lawyer for either from communicating with nonlawyer representatives of the other regarding a separate matter. Nor does this Rule preclude communication with a represented person who is seeking advice from a lawyer who is not otherwise representing a client in the matter. A lawyer may not make a communication prohibited by this Rule	~~[4]~~ This Rule does not prohibit ~~communication~~ communications with a represented person, or an employee ~~or~~ member, agent, or other constituent of ~~such~~ a person represented organization, concerning matters outside the representation. For example, the existence of a controversy, investigation or other matter between ~~at the government agency~~ and a private ~~party~~ person, or between two organizations, does not prohibit a lawyer for either from communicating with the other, or with nonlawyer representatives of the other, regarding a separate matter. ~~Nor does this Rule preclude communication with a represented person~~	Comment [6] is based on Model Rule 4.2, cmt. [4], which has been modified to conform to the terminology used in paragraph (b). That paragraph defines "person" in an organizational context. The revisions also clarify the language of the Model Rule comment. The last four sentences of the comment have not been adopted because they do not materially add to an understanding of the Rule, are covered by other comments or are self-evident from a reading of the black letter of the Rule itself. The point stated in the stricken sentence--that parties to a matter may communicate directly with each other -- is addressed in Comment [7] below.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.2 Communication With Person Represented By Counsel Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 4.2 Communication with a Represented Person Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
through the acts of another. See Rule 8.4(a). Parties to a matter may communicate directly with each other, and a lawyer is not prohibited from advising a client concerning a communication that the client is legally entitled to make. Also, a lawyer having independent justification or legal authorization for communicating with a represented person is permitted to do so.	~~who is seeking advice from a lawyer who is not otherwise representing a client in the matter. A lawyer may not make a communication prohibited by this Rule through the acts of another. See Rule 8.4(a). Parties to a matter may communicate directly with each other, and a lawyer is not prohibited from advising a client concerning a communication that the client is legally entitled to make. Also, a lawyer having independent justification or legal authorization for communicating with a represented person is permitted to do so.~~
[5] Communications authorized by law may include communications by a lawyer on behalf of a client who is exercising a constitutional or other legal right to communicate with the government. Communications authorized by law may also include investigative activities of lawyers representing governmental entities, directly or through investigative agents, prior to the commencement of criminal or civil enforcement proceedings. When communicating with the accused in a criminal matter, a government lawyer must comply with this Rule in addition to honoring the constitutional rights of the accused. The fact that a communication does not violate a state or federal constitutional right is insufficient to establish that the communication is permissible under this Rule.	Communications Between Represented Persons ~~[5] Communications authorized by law may include communications by a lawyer on behalf of a client who is exercising a constitutional or other legal right to communicate with the government. Communications authorized by law may also include investigative activities of lawyers representing governmental entities, directly or through investigative agents, prior to the commencement of criminal or civil enforcement proceedings. When communicating with the accused in a criminal matter, a government lawyer must comply with this Rule in addition to honoring the constitutional rights of the accused. The fact that a communication does not violate a state or federal constitutional right is insufficient to establish that the communication is permissible under this Rule.~~	The concepts contained in Model Rule 4.2, cmt. [5] are covered in more detail in Comments [16] and [19], and so the Model Rule comment has been stricken.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.2 Communication With Person Represented By Counsel Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 4.2 Communication with a Represented Person Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[7] This Rule does not prohibit represented persons from communicating directly with one another, and a lawyer is not prohibited from advising the lawyer's client that such communication may be made. A lawyer may advise a client about what to say or not to say to a represented person and may draft or edit the client's communications with a represented person, subject to paragraph (e).	The gist of Comment [4] – that represented persons may communicate with each other – is found in Model Rule, cmt. [4]. The second sentence of this comment, which states that a lawyer may advise a client on what to say or not to say to the represented person. is designed to address the issue of whether giving a client instructions or directions on what to say to the represented person amounts to an “indirect communication” with the represented person. (Cf. COPRAC Opn. 1993-131.) This comment thus seeks to clarify that a lawyer can advise or edit a client's communications with the represented party without the communication being deemed an indirect communication. The Model Rule does not address the concept of indirect communications with represented persons; hence the need to add this comment.
	[8] This Rule does not prevent a lawyer who is a party to a matter from communicating directly or indirectly with a person who is represented in the matter. To avoid possible abuse in such situations, the lawyer for the represented person may advise his or her client (1) about the risks and benefits of communications with a lawyer-party, and (2) not to accept or engage in communications with the lawyer-party.	Comment [8] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. As noted in Comment [7], represented persons in a matter may communicate directly with each other. Comment [8] clarifies that the Rule does not preclude a lawyer who is a party from communicating with the represented person. The second sentence provides cautionary advice on how a represented person may avoid abuses.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.2 Communication With Person Represented By Counsel Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 4.2 Communication with a Represented Person Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	Knowledge of Representation and Limited Scope Representation [9] This Rule applies where the lawyer has actual knowledge that the person to be contacted is represented by another lawyer in the matter. However, knowledge may be inferred from the circumstances. (See Rule 1.0.1(f).)	The substance of Comment [9] is in Model Rule 4.2, cmt. [8].
	[10]When a lawyer knows that a person is represented by another lawyer on a limited basis, the lawyer may communicate with that person with respect to matters outside the scope of the limited representation. (See Comment [6].) In addition, this Rule does not prevent a lawyer from communicating with a person who is represented by another lawyer on a limited basis where the lawyer who seeks to communicate does not know about the other lawyer's limited representation because that representation has not been disclosed. In either event, a lawyer seeking to communicate with such person must comply with paragraphs (d) and (e) or with Rule 4.3.	Comment [10] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. California authorizes limited scope representation in civil cases and family law cases. (California Rules of Court, Rules 3.35-3.37; 5.70 & 5.71) Limited scope representation occurs where a lawyer may be hired to represent a person only for limited tasks, which renders the person to be contacted, at the same time, both represented and unrepresented. Model Rule 1.2 recognizes that a lawyer may limited the scope of representation, but neither that Rule nor Model Rule 4.2 provide guidance on how to handle communications with partially represented persons. Comment [10] is intended to fill this void.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.2 Communication With Person Represented By Counsel Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 4.2 Communication with a Represented Person Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	Represented Organizations and Constituents of Organizations [11]"Represented organization" as used in paragraph (b) includes all forms of governmental and private organizations, such as cities, counties, corporations, partnerships, limited liability companies, and unincorporated associations.	Comments [11] to [15] explain paragraph (b), a provision not found in Model Rule 4.2. Model Rule 4.2 proscribes communications with a represented "person," but does not attempt to define in an organizational context which agents or employees of the organization may be contacted when the organization is represented by counsel.
	[12]As used in paragraph (b)(1) "managing agent" means an employee, member, agent or other constituent of a represented organization with general powers to exercise discretion and judgment with respect to the matter on behalf of the organization. A constituent's official title or rank within an organization is not necessarily determinative of his or her authority.	See Explanation of Changes for Comment [11].
	[13]Paragraph (b)(2) applies to current employees, members, agents, and constituents of the organization, who, whether because of their rank or implicit or explicit conferred authority, are authorized to speak on behalf of the organization in connection with the subject matter of the representation, with the result that their statements may constitute an admission on the part of the organization under the applicable California laws of agency or evidence. (See Evidence Code section 1222.)	See Explanation of Changes for Comment [11].

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.2 Communication With Person Represented By Counsel Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 4.2 Communication with a Represented Person Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[14]If an employee, member, agent, or other constituent of an organization is represented in the matter by his or her own counsel, the consent by that counsel is sufficient for purposes of this Rule.	See Explanation of Changes for Comment [11].
	[15]This Rule generally does not apply to communications with an organization's in-house lawyer who is acting as a legal representative of the organization where the organization is also represented by outside legal counsel in the matter that is the subject of the communication. However, this Rule does apply when the in-house lawyer is a "person" under paragraph (b)(2) with whom communications are prohibited by the Rule.	See Explanation of Changes for Comment [11].
	Represented Governmental Organizations [16]Paragraph (c)(1) recognizes that when a lawyer communicates on behalf of a client with a governmental organization special considerations exist as a result of the rights conferred under the First Amendment of the United States Constitution and Article I, section 3 of the California Constitution. A "public official" as defined in paragraph (g) means government officials with the equivalent authority and responsibilities as the non-public organizational constituents described in paragraph (b)(1). Therefore, a lawyer seeking to communicate on behalf of a client with a governmental organization	Comment [16] explains paragraph (c)(1), which has no counterpart in the Model Rule. (See discussion above regarding Paragraph (c)(1).) This Comment also provides parameters on permissible communications.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.2 Communication With Person Represented By Counsel Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 4.2 Communication with a Represented Person Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	constituent who is not a public official must comply with paragraph (b)(2) when the lawyer knows the governmental organization is represented in the matter. In addition, the lawyer must also comply with paragraphs (d) and (e) when the lawyer knows the governmental organization is represented in the matter that is the subject of the communication, and otherwise must comply with Rule 4.3.
	Represented Person Seeking Second Opinion [17] Paragraph (c)(2) permits a lawyer who is not already representing another person in the matter to communicate with a person seeking to hire new counsel or to obtain a second opinion where the communication is initiated by that person. A lawyer contacted by such a person continues to be bound by other Rules of Professional Conduct. See, e.g., Rules 1.7 and 7.3.	Comment [17] explains paragraph (c)(2), which has no counterpart in the Model Rule.
	Communications Authorized by Law or Court Order [18] This Rule is intended to control communications between a lawyer and persons the lawyer knows to be represented by counsel unless a statutory scheme, court rule, case law, or court order overrides the Rule. There are a number of express statutory schemes which authorize communications that would otherwise be subject to this Rule. These	This comment explains what is meant by the “authorized by law exception.” It expands on Comment [5] of the Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.2 Communication With Person Represented By Counsel Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 4.2 Communication with a Represented Person Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule statutes protect a variety of other rights such as the right of employees to organize and to engage in collective bargaining, employee health and safety, or equal employment opportunity.
	[19] Paragraph (c)(3) recognizes that prosecutors or other lawyers representing governmental entities in civil, criminal, or administrative law enforcement investigations, or in juvenile delinquency proceedings, as authorized by relevant federal and state, constitutional, decisional and statutory law, may engage in legitimate investigative activities, either directly or through investigative agents and informants. Although the "authorized by law" exception in these circumstances may run counter to the broader policy that underlies this Rule, nevertheless, the exception in this context is in the public interest and is necessary to promote legitimate law enforcement functions that would otherwise be impeded. Communications under paragraph (c)(3) implicate other rights and policy considerations, including a person's right to counsel under the 5th and 6th Amendments of the U.S. Constitution, and parallel provisions of the California Constitution (Cal. Const., Art. I, §15), that are beyond the scope of this Comment. In addition, certain investigative activities might be improper on grounds extraneous to this Rule or in circumstances where a government lawyer engages in misconduct or unlawful conduct.	Comment [19] recognizes that law enforcement agencies, as permitted by the "authorized by law" exception in Paragraph c(3), may engage in investigative activities which involve communications with persons represented by counsel and which are necessary to promote legitimate law enforcement functions. The comment provides additional guidance not found in Model Rule 4.2, cmt. [5].

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.2 Communication With Person Represented By Counsel Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 4.2 Communication with a Represented Person Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[20] Former Rule 2-100 prohibited communications with a "party" represented by another lawyer, while paragraph (a) of this Rule prohibits communications with a "person" represented by another lawyer. This change is not intended to preclude legitimate communications by or on behalf of prosecutors, or other lawyers representing governmental entities in civil, criminal, or administrative law enforcement investigations, that were recognized by the former Rule as authorized by law, or to expand or limit existing law that permits or prohibits communications under paragraph (c)(3). This change also is not intended to preclude the development of the law with respect to which criminal and civil law enforcement communications are authorized by law. Nor is this change intended to preclude legitimate communications by or on behalf of lawyers representing persons accused of crimes that might be authorized under the Sixth Amendment or other constitutional right.	Comment [20] explains that the change from "party" in current Rule 2-100 to "person" in the proposed Rule is not intended to alter existing investigative communication exceptions that were recognized under current rule 2-100. The comment has no Model Rule counterpart since ABA Rule 4.2 does not use the word "party." Input from public defenders indicated that the rule's proposed change from "party" to "person" would impair an accused's constitutional rights. To respond to this concern the Commission added a new sentence at the end of Comment [20] clarifying that the rule is not intended to preclude legitimate communications by or on behalf of lawyers representing persons accused of crimes that might be authorized under the Sixth Amendment or other constitutional right.
[6] A lawyer who is uncertain whether a communication with a represented person is permissible may seek a court order. A lawyer may also seek a court order in exceptional circumstances to authorize a communication that would otherwise be prohibited by this Rule, for example, where communication with a person represented by counsel is necessary to avoid reasonably certain injury.	[621] A lawyer who is uncertain whether a communication with a represented person is permissible ~~may~~ might be able to seek a court order. A lawyer ~~may~~ also might be able to seek a court order in exceptional circumstances to authorize a communication that would otherwise be prohibited by this Rule, for example, where communication with a person represented by counsel is necessary to avoid reasonably certain injury.	Comment [21] addresses the "authorized by court order" exception in paragraph (c)(3). Except for minor changes, this comment is identical to Comment [6] to the Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.2 Communication With Person Represented By Counsel Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 4.2 Communication with a Represented Person Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[7] In the case of a represented organization, this Rule prohibits communications with a constituent of the organization who supervises, directs or regularly consults with the organization's lawyer concerning the matter or has authority to obligate the organization with respect to the matter or whose act or omission in connection with the matter may be imputed to the organization for purposes of civil or criminal liability. Consent of the organization's lawyer is not required for communication with a former constituent. If a constituent of the organization is represented in the matter by his or her own counsel, the consent by that counsel to a communication will be sufficient for purposes of this Rule. Compare Rule 3.4(f). In communicating with a current or former constituent of an organization, a lawyer must not use methods of obtaining evidence that violate the legal rights of the organization. See Rule 4.4.	~~[7] In the case of a represented organization, this Rule prohibits communications with a constituent of the organization who supervises, directs or regularly consults with the organization's lawyer concerning the matter or has authority to obligate the organization with respect to the matter or whose act or omission in connection with the matter may be imputed to the organization for purposes of civil or criminal liability. Consent of the organization's lawyer is not required for communication with a former constituent. If a constituent of the organization is represented in the matter by his or her own counsel, the consent by that counsel to a communication will be sufficient for purposes of this Rule. Compare Rule 3.4(f). In communicating with a current or former constituent of an organization, a lawyer must not use methods of obtaining evidence that violate the legal rights of the organization. See Rule 4.4.~~	The subject matter of Model Rule 4.2, cmt. [7], is addressed more fully in paragraph (b) and Comments [11] to [15] of the proposed Rule. See Explanation of Changes, above.
[8] The prohibition on communications with a represented person only applies in circumstances where the lawyer knows that the person is in fact represented in the matter to be discussed. This means that the lawyer has actual knowledge of the fact of the representation; but such actual knowledge may be inferred from the circumstances. See Rule 1.0(f). Thus, the lawyer cannot evade the requirement of obtaining the consent of counsel by closing eyes to the obvious.	Prohibited Objectives of Communications Permitted Under This Rule ~~[8] The prohibition on communications with a represented person only applies in circumstances where the lawyer knows that the person is in fact represented in the matter to be discussed. This means that the lawyer has actual knowledge of the fact of the representation; but such actual knowledge may be inferred from the circumstances. See Rule 1.0(f). Thus, the lawyer cannot evade the requirement of obtaining the consent of counsel by closing eyes to the obvious.~~	Model Rule 4.2, cmt. [8], although stricken, is found in the black letter and in Comment [9] of the proposed Rule (see above).

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.2 Communication With Person Represented By Counsel Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 4.2 Communication with a Represented Person Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[22] A lawyer who is permitted to communicate with a represented person under this Rule must comply with paragraphs (d) and (e).	Comment [22] serves as a reminder that even if a communication is permitted by this Rule, a lawyer must not abuse the privilege by disregarding the lawyer's obligations under paragraphs (d) and (e). There is no counterpart to paragraphs (d) and (e) in the ABA Rule.
	[23] In communicating with a current employee, member, agent, or other constituent of an organization as permitted under paragraph (b)(2), including a public official or employee of a governmental organization, a lawyer must comply with paragraphs (d) and (e). A lawyer must not seek to obtain information that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is subject to an evidentiary or other privilege of the organization. Obtaining information from a current or former employee, member, agent, or other constituent of an organization that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is legally protected from disclosure may also violate Rules 8.4(c) and 8.4(d).	Comment [23] clarifies the scope and application of paragraphs (d) and (e), which are not found in the ABA rule. References to Rule 4.4 are in brackets pending the Commission's final consideration of that Rule.
[9] In the event the person with whom the lawyer communicates is not known to be represented by counsel in the matter, the lawyer's communications are subject to Rule 4.3.	[924] ~~In the event the person~~ When a lawyer's communications with ~~whom~~ a person are not subject to this Rule because the lawyer ~~communicates~~ does not know the person is represented by counsel in the matter, or because the lawyer knows the person is not ~~known to be~~ represented by counsel in the matter, the lawyer's communications are subject to Rule 4.3.	Comment [24] is based on Model Rule 4.2, cmt. [9], but corrects an error in it. Rule 4.3 applies when a lawyer is communicating with a person the lawyer knows to be unrepresented by counsel, and it also applies when the lawyer doesn't know if the person is unrepresented. Both Model Rule 4.2 and proposed Rule 4.2 apply when the lawyer is communicating with a person the lawyer knows to be represented by counsel.

Rule 4.2: Communication with a Represented Person

(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to Public Comment Draft)

- (a) In representing a client, a lawyer shall not communicate directly or indirectly about the subject of the representation with a person the lawyer knows to be represented by another lawyer in the matter, unless the lawyer has the consent of the other lawyer.
- (b) For purposes of this Rule, a “person” includes:
 - (1) A current officer, director, partner, or managing agent of a corporation, partnership, association, or other represented organization; or
 - (2) A current employee, member, agent or other constituent of a represented organization if the subject matter of the communication is any act or omission of the employee, member, agent or other constituent in connection with the matter, which may be binding upon or imputed to the organization for purposes of civil or criminal liability, or if the statement of such person may constitute an admission on the part of the organization.
- (c) This Rule shall not prohibit:
 - (1) Communications with a public official, board, committee or body; or
 - (2) Communications initiated by a person seeking advice or representation from an independent lawyer of the person’s choice; or
 - (3) Communications authorized by law or a court order.
- (d) When communicating on behalf of a client with any person as permitted by this Rule, a lawyer shall not state or imply that the lawyer is disinterested. When the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the person misunderstands the lawyer’s role in the matter, the lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to correct the misunderstanding.
- (e) In any communication permitted by this Rule, a lawyer shall not seek to obtain privileged or other confidential information the lawyer knows or reasonably should know the person may not reveal without violating a duty to another or which the lawyer is not otherwise entitled to receive.
- (f) A lawyer for a corporation, partnership, association or other organization shall not represent that he or she represents all employees, members, agents or other constituents of the organization unless such representation is true.
- (g) As used in this Rule, “public official” means a public officer of the United States government, or of a state, or of a county, township, city, political subdivision, or other governmental organization, with the equivalent authority and responsibilities as the non-public organizational constituents described in paragraph (b)(1).

COMMENT

Overview and Purpose

- [1] This Rule contributes to the proper functioning of the legal system by protecting a person who has chosen to be represented by a lawyer in a matter against possible overreaching by other lawyers who are participating in the matter, interference by those lawyers with the client-lawyer relationship, and the uncounseled disclosure of information relating to the representation.
- [2] This Rule applies to communications with any person who is represented by counsel concerning the matter to which the communication relates.
- [3] This Rule applies even though the represented person initiates or consents to the communication. A lawyer must immediately terminate communication with a person if, after commencing communication, the lawyer learns that the person is one with whom communication is not permitted by this Rule.
- [4] As used in paragraph (a), “the subject of the representation,” “matter,” and “person” are not limited to a litigation context. This Rule applies to communications with any person, whether or not a party to a formal adjudicative proceeding, contract or negotiation, who is represented by counsel concerning the matter to which the communication relates.
- [5] The prohibition against “indirect” communication with a person represented by counsel in paragraph (a) is intended to address situations where a lawyer seeks to communicate with a represented person through an intermediary such as an agent or investigator.

- [6] This Rule does not prohibit communications with a represented person, or an employee, member, agent, or other constituent of a represented organization, concerning matters outside the representation. For example, the existence of a controversy, investigation or other matter between the government and a private person, or between two organizations, does not prohibit a lawyer for either from communicating with the other, or with nonlawyer representatives of the other, regarding a separate matter.

Communications Between Represented Persons

- [7] This Rule does not prohibit represented persons from communicating directly with one another, and a lawyer is not prohibited from advising the lawyer’s client that such communication may be made. A lawyer may advise a client about what to say or not to say to a represented person and may draft or edit the client’s communications with a represented person, subject to paragraph (e).
- [8] This Rule does not prevent a lawyer who is a party to a matter from communicating directly or indirectly with a person who is represented in the matter. To avoid possible abuse in such situations, the lawyer for the represented person may advise his or her client (1) about the risks and benefits of communications with a lawyer-party, and (2) not to accept or engage in communications with the lawyer-party.

Knowledge of Representation and Limited Scope Representation

- [9] This Rule applies where the lawyer has actual knowledge that the person to be contacted is represented by another lawyer in the matter. However, knowledge may be inferred from the circumstances. ~~See~~ Rule 1.0.1(f).➔

- [10] When a lawyer knows that a person is represented by another lawyer on a limited basis, the lawyer may communicate with that person with respect to matters outside the scope of the limited representation. (See Comment [6].) In addition, this Rule does not prevent a lawyer from communicating with a person who is represented by another lawyer on a limited basis where the lawyer who seeks to communicate does not know about the other lawyer's limited representation because that representation has not been disclosed. In either event, a lawyer seeking to communicate with such person must comply with paragraphs (d) and (e) or with Rule 4.3.

Represented Organizations and Constituents of Organizations

- [11] "Represented organization" as used in paragraph (b) includes all forms of governmental and private organizations, such as cities, counties, corporations, partnerships, limited liability companies, and unincorporated associations.
- [12] As used in paragraph (b)(1) "managing agent" means an employee, member, agent or other constituent of a represented organization with general powers to exercise discretion and judgment with respect to the matter on behalf of the organization. A constituent's official title or rank within an organization is not necessarily determinative of his or her authority.
- [13] Paragraph (b)(2) applies to current employees, members, agents, and constituents of the organization, who, whether because of their rank or implicit or explicit conferred authority, are authorized to speak on behalf of the organization in connection with the subject matter of the representation, with the result that their statements may constitute an admission on the part of the organization under the applicable California laws of agency or evidence. (See Evidence Code section 1222.)

- [14] If an employee, member, agent, or other constituent of an organization is represented in the matter by his or her own counsel, the consent by that counsel is sufficient for purposes of this Rule.
- [15] This Rule generally does not apply to communications with an organization's in-house lawyer who is acting as a legal representative of the organization where the organization is also represented by outside legal counsel in the matter that is the subject of the communication. However, this Rule does apply when the in-house lawyer is a "person" under paragraph (b)(2) with whom communications are prohibited by the Rule.

Represented Governmental Organizations

- [16] Paragraph (c)(1) recognizes that when a lawyer communicates on behalf of a client with a governmental organization special considerations exist as a result of the rights conferred under the First Amendment of the United States Constitution and Article I, section 3 of the California Constitution. A "public official" as defined in paragraph (g) means government officials with the equivalent authority and responsibilities as the non-public organizational constituents described in paragraph (b)(1). Therefore, a lawyer seeking to communicate on behalf of a client with a governmental organization constituent who is not a public official must comply with paragraph (b)(2) when the lawyer knows the governmental organization is represented in the matter. In addition, the lawyer must also comply with paragraphs (d) and (e) when the lawyer knows the governmental organization is represented in the matter that is the subject of the communication, and otherwise must comply with Rule 4.3.

Represented Person Seeking Second Opinion

- [17] Paragraph (c)(2) permits a lawyer who is not already representing another person in the matter to communicate with a person seeking to hire new counsel or to obtain a second opinion where the communication is initiated by that person. A lawyer contacted by such a person continues to be bound by other Rules of Professional Conduct. (See, e.g., Rules ~~7-3~~1.7 and ~~7.3~~1.7.)

Communications Authorized by Law or Court Order

- [18] This Rule controls communications between a lawyer and persons the lawyer knows to be represented by counsel unless a statutory scheme, court rule, case law, or court order overrides the Rule. There are a number of express statutory schemes which authorize communications that would otherwise be subject to this Rule. These statutes protect a variety of other rights such as the right of employees to organize and to engage in collective bargaining, employee health and safety, or equal employment opportunity.
- [19] Paragraph (c)(3) recognizes that prosecutors or other lawyers representing governmental entities in civil, criminal, or administrative law enforcement investigations, or in juvenile delinquency proceedings, as authorized by relevant federal and state, constitutional, decisional and statutory law, may engage in legitimate investigative activities, either directly or through investigative agents and informants. Although the “authorized by law” exception in these circumstances may run counter to the broader policy that underlies this Rule, nevertheless, the exception in this context is in the public interest and is necessary to promote legitimate law enforcement functions that would otherwise be impeded. Communications under paragraph (c)(3) implicate other rights and policy considerations, including a person's right to counsel under the 5th and 6th Amendments of the U.S. Constitution, and parallel provisions of the California Constitution (Cal. Const., Art. I, §15), that are beyond the scope of this Comment. In addition, certain investigative activities might be improper on grounds extraneous to this Rule or in circumstances where a government lawyer engages in misconduct or unlawful conduct.

- [20] Former Rule 2-100 prohibited communications with a “party” represented by another lawyer, while paragraph (a) of this Rule prohibits communications with a “person” represented by another lawyer. This change is not intended to preclude legitimate communications by or on behalf of prosecutors, or other lawyers representing governmental entities in civil, criminal, or administrative law enforcement investigations, that were recognized by the former Rule as authorized by law, or to expand or limit existing law that permits or prohibits communications under paragraph (c)(3). This change also is not intended to preclude the development of the law with respect to which criminal and civil law enforcement communications are authorized by law. Nor is this change intended to preclude legitimate communications by or on behalf of lawyers representing persons accused of crimes that might be authorized under the Sixth Amendment or other constitutional right.
- [21] A lawyer who is uncertain whether a communication with a represented person is permissible might be able to seek a court order. A lawyer also might be able to seek a court order in exceptional circumstances to authorize a communication that would otherwise be prohibited by this Rule, for example, where communication with a person represented by counsel is necessary to avoid reasonably certain injury.

Prohibited Objectives of Communications Permitted Under This Rule

- [22] A lawyer who is permitted to communicate with a represented person under this Rule must comply with paragraphs (d) and (e).
- [23] In communicating with a current employee, member, agent, or other constituent of an organization as permitted under paragraph (b)(2), including a public official or employee of a governmental organization, a lawyer must comply with paragraphs (d) and (e). A lawyer must not seek to obtain information that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is subject to an evidentiary or other privilege of the organization. ~~(See [Rule 4.4].)~~ Obtaining information from a current or former employee, member, agent, or other constituent of an organization that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is legally protected from disclosure may also violate Rules ~~[4.4]~~, 8.4(c) and 8.4(d).
- [24] When a lawyer's communications with a person are not subject to this Rule because the lawyer does not know the person is represented by counsel in the matter, or because the lawyer knows the person is not represented by counsel in the matter, the lawyer's communications are subject to Rule 4.3.

Rule ~~2-100~~4.2 Communication With a Person Represented ~~Party~~By Counsel

(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

- (a) ~~(A) While~~In representing a client, a ~~member~~lawyer shall not communicate directly or indirectly about the subject of the representation with a ~~party~~person the ~~member~~lawyer knows to be represented by another lawyer in the matter, unless the ~~member~~lawyer has the consent of the other lawyer.
- (b) ~~(B)~~For purposes of this ~~rule~~Rule, a "~~party~~person" includes:
- (1) ~~An A current~~ officer, director, partner, or managing agent of a corporation ~~or partnership~~, association, ~~and a partner or managing agent of a partnership~~other represented organization; or
 - (2) ~~An association member or an A current~~ employee ~~of an association, corporation, member, agent or partnership, other constituent of a represented organization~~ if the subject matter of the communication is any act or omission of ~~such person~~the employee, member, agent or other constituent in connection with the matter, which may be binding upon or imputed to the organization for purposes of civil or criminal liability, or ~~whose~~self the statement of such person may constitute an admission on the part of the organization.
- (c) ~~(C)~~This ~~rule~~Rule shall not prohibit:
- (1) Communications with a public ~~officer~~official, board, committee, or body; or
 - (2) Communications initiated by a ~~party~~person seeking advice or representation from an independent lawyer of the ~~party's~~person's choice; or
 - (3) Communications ~~otherwise~~authorized by law or a court order.
- (d) When communicating on behalf of a client with any person as permitted by this Rule, a lawyer shall not state or imply that the lawyer is disinterested. When the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the person misunderstands the lawyer's role in the matter, the lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to correct the misunderstanding.
- (e) In any communication permitted by this Rule, a lawyer shall not seek to obtain privileged or other confidential information the lawyer knows or reasonably should know the person may not reveal without violating a duty to another or which the lawyer is not otherwise entitled to receive.
- (f) A lawyer for a corporation, partnership, association or other organization shall not represent that he or she represents all employees, members, agents or other constituents of the organization unless such representation is true.
- (g) As used in this Rule, "public official" means a public officer of the United States government, or of a state, or of a county, township, city, political subdivision, or other governmental organization, with the equivalent authority and responsibilities as the non-public organizational constituents described in paragraph (b)(1).

Discussion:-

~~Rule 2-100 is intended to control communications between a member and persons the member knows to be represented by counsel unless a statutory scheme or case law will override the rule. There are a number of express statutory schemes which authorize communications between a member and person who would otherwise be subject to this rule. These statutes protect a variety of other rights such as the right of employees to organize and to engage in collective bargaining, employee health and safety, or equal employment opportunity. Other applicable law also includes the authority of government prosecutors and investigators to conduct criminal investigations, as limited by the relevant decisional law.~~

~~Rule 2-100 is not intended to prevent the parties themselves from communicating with respect to the subject matter of the representation, and nothing in the rule prevents a member from advising the client that such communication can be made. Moreover, the rule does not prohibit a member who is also a party to a legal matter from directly or indirectly communicating on his or her own behalf with a represented party. Such a member has independent rights as a party which should not be abrogated because of his or her professional status. To prevent any possible abuse in such situations, the counsel for the opposing party may advise that party (1) about the risks and benefits of communications with a lawyer party, and (2) not to accept or engage in communications with the lawyer party.~~

~~Rule 2-100 also addresses the situation in which member A is contacted by an opposing party who is represented and, because of dissatisfaction with that party's counsel, seeks A's independent advice. Since A is employed by the opposition, the member cannot give independent advice.~~

~~As used in paragraph (A), "the subject of the representation," "matter," and "party" are not limited to a litigation context.~~

~~Paragraph (B) is intended to apply only to persons employed at the time of the communication. (See Triple A Machine Shop, Inc. v. State of California (1989) 213 Cal.App.3d 131 [261 Cal.Rptr. 493].)~~

~~Subparagraph (C)(2) is intended to permit a member to communicate with a party seeking to hire new counsel or to obtain a second opinion. A member contacted by such a party continues to be bound by other Rules of Professional Conduct. (See, e.g., rules 1-400 and 3-310.) (Amended by order of Supreme Court, operative September 14, 1992.)~~

COMMENT

Overview and Purpose

[1] This Rule contributes to the proper functioning of the legal system by protecting a person who has chosen to be represented by a lawyer in a matter against possible overreaching by other lawyers who are participating in the matter, interference by those lawyers with the client-lawyer relationship, and the uncounseled disclosure of information relating to the representation.

[2] This Rule applies to communications with any person who is represented by counsel concerning the matter to which the communication relates.

[3] This Rule applies even though the represented person initiates or consents to the communication. A lawyer must immediately terminate communication with a person if, after commencing communication, the lawyer learns that the person is one with whom communication is not permitted by this Rule.

[4] As used in paragraph (a), "the subject of the representation," "matter," and "person" are not limited to a litigation context. This Rule applies to communications with any person, whether or not a party to a formal adjudicative proceeding, contract or negotiation, who is represented by counsel concerning the matter to which the communication relates.

[5] The prohibition against "indirect" communication with a person represented by counsel in paragraph (a) is intended to address situations where a lawyer seeks to communicate with a represented person through an intermediary such as an agent or investigator.

[6] This Rule does not prohibit communications with a represented person, or an employee, member, agent, or other constituent of a represented organization, concerning matters outside the representation. For example, the existence of a controversy, investigation or other matter between the government and a private person, or between two organizations, does not prohibit a lawyer for either from communicating with the other, or with nonlawyer representatives of the other, regarding a separate matter.

Communications Between Represented Persons

[7] This Rule does not prohibit represented persons from communicating directly with one another, and a lawyer is not prohibited from advising the lawyer's client that such communication may be made. A lawyer may advise a client about what to say or not to say to a represented person and may draft or edit the client's communications with a represented person, subject to paragraph (e).

[8] This Rule does not prevent a lawyer who is a party to a matter from communicating directly or indirectly with a person who is represented in the matter. To avoid possible abuse in such situations, the lawyer for the represented person may advise his or her client (1) about the risks and benefits of communications with a lawyer-party, and (2) not to accept or engage in communications with the lawyer-party.

Knowledge of Representation and Limited Scope Representation

[9] This Rule applies where the lawyer has actual knowledge that the person to be contacted is represented by another lawyer in the matter. However, knowledge may be inferred from the circumstances. See Rule 1.0.1(f).

[10] When a lawyer knows that a person is represented by another lawyer on a limited basis, the lawyer may communicate with that person with respect to matters outside the scope of the limited representation. See Comment [6]. In addition, this Rule does not prevent a lawyer from communicating with a person who is represented by another lawyer on a limited basis where the lawyer who seeks to communicate does not know about the other lawyer's limited representation because that representation has not been disclosed. In either event, a lawyer seeking to communicate with such person must comply with paragraphs (d) and (e) or with Rule 4.3.

Represented Organizations and Constituents of Organizations

[11] "Represented organization" as used in paragraph (b) includes all forms of governmental and private organizations, such as cities, counties, corporations, partnerships, limited liability companies, and unincorporated associations.

[12] As used in paragraph (b)(1) “managing agent” means an employee, member, agent or other constituent of a represented organization with general powers to exercise discretion and judgment with respect to the matter on behalf of the organization. A constituent's official title or rank within an organization is not necessarily determinative of his or her authority.

[13] Paragraph (b)(2) applies to current employees, members, agents, and constituents of the organization, who, whether because of their rank or implicit or explicit conferred authority, are authorized to speak on behalf of the organization in connection with the subject matter of the representation, with the result that their statements may constitute an admission on the part of the organization under the applicable California laws of agency or evidence. See Evidence Code section 1222.

[14] If an employee, member, agent, or other constituent of an organization is represented in the matter by his or her own counsel, the consent by that counsel is sufficient for purposes of this Rule.

[15] This Rule generally does not apply to communications with an organization's in-house lawyer who is acting as a legal representative of the organization where the organization is also represented by outside legal counsel in the matter that is the subject of the communication. However, this Rule does apply when the in-house lawyer is a “person” under paragraph (b)(2) with whom communications are prohibited by the Rule.

Represented Governmental Organizations

[16] Paragraph (c)(1) recognizes that when a lawyer communicates on behalf of a client with a governmental organization special considerations exist as a result of the rights conferred under the First Amendment of the United States Constitution and Article I, section 3 of the California

Constitution. A “public official” as defined in paragraph (g) means government officials with the equivalent authority and responsibilities as the non-public organizational constituents described in paragraph (b)(1). Therefore, a lawyer seeking to communicate on behalf of a client with a governmental organization constituent who is not a public official must comply with paragraph (b)(2) when the lawyer knows the governmental organization is represented in the matter. In addition, the lawyer must also comply with paragraphs (d) and (e) when the lawyer knows the governmental organization is represented in the matter that is the subject of the communication, and otherwise must comply with Rule 4.3.

Represented Person Seeking Second Opinion

[17] Paragraph (c)(2) permits a lawyer who is not already representing another person in the matter to communicate with a person seeking to hire new counsel or to obtain a second opinion where the communication is initiated by that person. A lawyer contacted by such a person continues to be bound by other Rules of Professional Conduct. See, e.g., Rules 1.7 and 7.3.

Communications Authorized by Law or Court Order

[18] This Rule controls communications between a lawyer and persons the lawyer knows to be represented by counsel unless a statutory scheme, court rule, case law, or court order overrides the Rule. There are a number of express statutory schemes which authorize communications that would otherwise be subject to this Rule. These statutes protect a variety of other rights such as the right of employees to organize and to engage in collective bargaining, employee health and safety, or equal employment opportunity.

[19] Paragraph (c)(3) recognizes that prosecutors or other lawyers representing governmental entities in civil, criminal, or administrative law enforcement investigations, or in juvenile delinquency proceedings, as authorized by relevant federal and state, constitutional, decisional and statutory law, may engage in legitimate investigative activities, either directly or through investigative agents and informants. Although the “authorized by law” exception in these circumstances may run counter to the broader policy that underlies this Rule, nevertheless, the exception in this context is in the public interest and is necessary to promote legitimate law enforcement functions that would otherwise be impeded. Communications under paragraph (c)(3) implicate other rights and policy considerations, including a person’s right to counsel under the 5th and 6th Amendments of the U.S. Constitution, and parallel provisions of the California Constitution (Cal. Const., Art. I, §15), that are beyond the scope of this Comment. In addition, certain investigative activities might be improper on grounds extraneous to this Rule or in circumstances where a government lawyer engages in misconduct or unlawful conduct.

[20] Former Rule 2-100 prohibited communications with a “party” represented by another lawyer, while paragraph (a) of this Rule prohibits communications with a “person” represented by another lawyer. This change is not intended to preclude legitimate communications by or on behalf of prosecutors, or other lawyers representing governmental entities in civil, criminal, or administrative law enforcement investigations, that were recognized by the former Rule as authorized by law, or to expand or limit existing law that permits or prohibits communications under paragraph (c)(3). This change also is not intended to preclude the development of the law with respect to which criminal and civil law enforcement communications are authorized by law. Nor is this change intended to preclude legitimate communications by or on behalf of lawyers representing persons accused of crimes that might be authorized under the Sixth Amendment or other constitutional right.

[21] A lawyer who is uncertain whether a communication with a represented person is permissible might be able to seek a court order. A lawyer also might be able to seek a court order in exceptional circumstances to authorize a communication that would otherwise be prohibited by this Rule, for example, where communication with a person represented by counsel is necessary to avoid reasonably certain injury.

Prohibited Objectives of Communications Permitted Under This Rule

[22] A lawyer who is permitted to communicate with a represented person under this Rule must comply with paragraphs (d) and (e).

[23] In communicating with a current employee, member, agent, or other constituent of an organization as permitted under paragraph (b)(2), including a public official or employee of a governmental organization, a lawyer must comply with paragraphs (d) and (e). A lawyer must not seek to obtain information that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is subject to an evidentiary or other privilege of the organization. Obtaining information from a current or former employee, member, agent, or other constituent of an organization that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is legally protected from disclosure may also violate Rules 8.4(c) and 8.4(d).

[24] When a lawyer’s communications with a person are not subject to this Rule because the lawyer does not know the person is represented by counsel in the matter, or because the lawyer knows the person is not represented by counsel in the matter, the lawyer’s communications are subject to Rule 4.3.

Rule 4.2: Communication with a Represented Person
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) In representing a client, a lawyer shall not communicate directly or indirectly about the subject of the representation with a person the lawyer knows to be represented by another lawyer in the matter, unless the lawyer has the consent of the other lawyer.
- (b) For purposes of this Rule, a "person" includes:
 - (1) A current officer, director, partner, or managing agent of a corporation, partnership, association, or other represented organization; or
 - (2) A current employee, member, agent or other constituent of a represented organization if the subject matter of the communication is any act or omission of the employee, member, agent or other constituent in connection with the matter, which may be binding upon or imputed to the organization for purposes of civil or criminal liability, or if the statement of such person may constitute an admission on the part of the organization.
- (c) This Rule shall not prohibit:
 - (1) Communications with a public official, board, committee or body; or
 - (2) Communications initiated by a person seeking advice or representation from an independent lawyer of the person's choice; or
 - (3) Communications authorized by law or a court order.
- (d) When communicating on behalf of a client with any person as permitted by this Rule, a lawyer shall not state or imply that the lawyer is disinterested. When the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the person misunderstands the lawyer's role in the matter, the lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to correct the misunderstanding.
- (e) In any communication permitted by this Rule, a lawyer shall not seek to obtain privileged or other confidential information the lawyer knows or reasonably should know the person may not reveal without violating a duty to another or which the lawyer is not otherwise entitled to receive.
- (f) A lawyer for a corporation, partnership, association or other organization shall not represent that he or she represents all employees, members, agents or other constituents of the organization unless such representation is true.
- (g) As used in this Rule, "public official" means a public officer of the United States government, or of a state, or of a county, township, city, political subdivision, or other governmental organization, with the equivalent authority and responsibilities as the non-public organizational constituents described in paragraph (b)(1).

COMMENT

Overview and Purpose

- [1] This Rule contributes to the proper functioning of the legal system by protecting a person who has chosen to be represented by a lawyer in a matter against possible overreaching by other lawyers who are participating in the matter, interference by those lawyers with the client-lawyer relationship, and the uncounseled disclosure of information relating to the representation.
- [2] This Rule applies to communications with any person who is represented by counsel concerning the matter to which the communication relates.
- [3] This Rule applies even though the represented person initiates or consents to the communication. A lawyer must immediately terminate communication with a person if, after commencing communication, the lawyer learns that the person is one with whom communication is not permitted by this Rule.
- [4] As used in paragraph (a), “the subject of the representation,” “matter,” and “person” are not limited to a litigation context. This Rule applies to communications with any person, whether or not a party to a formal adjudicative proceeding, contract or negotiation, who is represented by counsel concerning the matter to which the communication relates.
- [5] The prohibition against “indirect” communication with a person represented by counsel in paragraph (a) is intended to address situations where a lawyer seeks to communicate with a represented person through an intermediary such as an agent or investigator.

- [6] This Rule does not prohibit communications with a represented person, or an employee, member, agent, or other constituent of a represented organization, concerning matters outside the representation. For example, the existence of a controversy, investigation or other matter between the government and a private person, or between two organizations, does not prohibit a lawyer for either from communicating with the other, or with nonlawyer representatives of the other, regarding a separate matter.

Communications Between Represented Persons

- [7] This Rule does not prohibit represented persons from communicating directly with one another, and a lawyer is not prohibited from advising the lawyer’s client that such communication may be made. A lawyer may advise a client about what to say or not to say to a represented person and may draft or edit the client’s communications with a represented person, subject to paragraph (e).
- [8] This Rule does not prevent a lawyer who is a party to a matter from communicating directly or indirectly with a person who is represented in the matter. To avoid possible abuse in such situations, the lawyer for the represented person may advise his or her client (1) about the risks and benefits of communications with a lawyer-party, and (2) not to accept or engage in communications with the lawyer-party.

Knowledge of Representation and Limited Scope Representation

- [9] This Rule applies where the lawyer has actual knowledge that the person to be contacted is represented by another lawyer in the matter. However, knowledge may be inferred from the circumstances. See Rule 1.0.1(f).

- [10] When a lawyer knows that a person is represented by another lawyer on a limited basis, the lawyer may communicate with that person with respect to matters outside the scope of the limited representation. See Comment [6]. In addition, this Rule does not prevent a lawyer from communicating with a person who is represented by another lawyer on a limited basis where the lawyer who seeks to communicate does not know about the other lawyer's limited representation because that representation has not been disclosed. In either event, a lawyer seeking to communicate with such person must comply with paragraphs (d) and (e) or with Rule 4.3.

Represented Organizations and Constituents of Organizations

- [11] "Represented organization" as used in paragraph (b) includes all forms of governmental and private organizations, such as cities, counties, corporations, partnerships, limited liability companies, and unincorporated associations.
- [12] As used in paragraph (b)(1) "managing agent" means an employee, member, agent or other constituent of a represented organization with general powers to exercise discretion and judgment with respect to the matter on behalf of the organization. A constituent's official title or rank within an organization is not necessarily determinative of his or her authority.
- [13] Paragraph (b)(2) applies to current employees, members, agents, and constituents of the organization, who, whether because of their rank or implicit or explicit conferred authority, are authorized to speak on behalf of the organization in connection with the subject matter of the representation, with the result that their statements may constitute an admission on the part of the organization under the applicable California laws of agency or evidence. See Evidence Code section 1222.

- [14] If an employee, member, agent, or other constituent of an organization is represented in the matter by his or her own counsel, the consent by that counsel is sufficient for purposes of this Rule.
- [15] This Rule generally does not apply to communications with an organization's in-house lawyer who is acting as a legal representative of the organization where the organization is also represented by outside legal counsel in the matter that is the subject of the communication. However, this Rule does apply when the in-house lawyer is a "person" under paragraph (b)(2) with whom communications are prohibited by the Rule.

Represented Governmental Organizations

- [16] Paragraph (c)(1) recognizes that when a lawyer communicates on behalf of a client with a governmental organization special considerations exist as a result of the rights conferred under the First Amendment of the United States Constitution and Article I, section 3 of the California Constitution. A "public official" as defined in paragraph (g) means government officials with the equivalent authority and responsibilities as the non-public organizational constituents described in paragraph (b)(1). Therefore, a lawyer seeking to communicate on behalf of a client with a governmental organization constituent who is not a public official must comply with paragraph (b)(2) when the lawyer knows the governmental organization is represented in the matter. In addition, the lawyer must also comply with paragraphs (d) and (e) when the lawyer knows the governmental organization is represented in the matter that is the subject of the communication, and otherwise must comply with Rule 4.3.

Represented Person Seeking Second Opinion

- [17] Paragraph (c)(2) permits a lawyer who is not already representing another person in the matter to communicate with a person seeking to hire new counsel or to obtain a second opinion where the communication is initiated by that person. A lawyer contacted by such a person continues to be bound by other Rules of Professional Conduct. See, e.g., Rules 1.7 and 7.3.

Communications Authorized by Law or Court Order

- [18] This Rule controls communications between a lawyer and persons the lawyer knows to be represented by counsel unless a statutory scheme, court rule, case law, or court order overrides the Rule. There are a number of express statutory schemes which authorize communications that would otherwise be subject to this Rule. These statutes protect a variety of other rights such as the right of employees to organize and to engage in collective bargaining, employee health and safety, or equal employment opportunity.
- [19] Paragraph (c)(3) recognizes that prosecutors or other lawyers representing governmental entities in civil, criminal, or administrative law enforcement investigations, or in juvenile delinquency proceedings, as authorized by relevant federal and state, constitutional, decisional and statutory law, may engage in legitimate investigative activities, either directly or through investigative agents and informants. Although the “authorized by law” exception in these circumstances may run counter to the broader policy that underlies this Rule, nevertheless, the exception in this context is in the public interest and is necessary to promote legitimate law enforcement functions that would otherwise be impeded. Communications under paragraph (c)(3) implicate other rights and policy considerations, including a person’s right to counsel under the 5th and 6th Amendments of the U.S. Constitution, and parallel provisions of the California Constitution (Cal. Const., Art. I, §15), that are beyond the scope of this Comment. In addition, certain investigative activities might be improper on grounds extraneous to this Rule or in circumstances where a government lawyer engages in misconduct or unlawful conduct.

- [20] Former Rule 2-100 prohibited communications with a “party” represented by another lawyer, while paragraph (a) of this Rule prohibits communications with a “person” represented by another lawyer. This change is not intended to preclude legitimate communications by or on behalf of prosecutors, or other lawyers representing governmental entities in civil, criminal, or administrative law enforcement investigations, that were recognized by the former Rule as authorized by law, or to expand or limit existing law that permits or prohibits communications under paragraph (c)(3). This change also is not intended to preclude the development of the law with respect to which criminal and civil law enforcement communications are authorized by law. Nor is this change intended to preclude legitimate communications by or on behalf of lawyers representing persons accused of crimes that might be authorized under the Sixth Amendment or other constitutional right.
- [21] A lawyer who is uncertain whether a communication with a represented person is permissible might be able to seek a court order. A lawyer also might be able to seek a court order in exceptional circumstances to authorize a communication that would otherwise be prohibited by this Rule, for example, where communication with a person represented by counsel is necessary to avoid reasonably certain injury.

Prohibited Objectives of Communications Permitted Under This Rule

- [22] A lawyer who is permitted to communicate with a represented person under this Rule must comply with paragraphs (d) and (e).
- [23] In communicating with a current employee, member, agent, or other constituent of an organization as permitted under paragraph (b)(2), including a public official or employee of a governmental organization, a lawyer must comply with paragraphs (d) and (e). A lawyer must not seek to obtain information that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is subject to an evidentiary or other privilege of the organization. Obtaining information from a current or former employee, member, agent, or other constituent of an organization that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is legally protected from disclosure may also violate Rules 8.4(c) and 8.4(d).
- [24] When a lawyer's communications with a person are not subject to this Rule because the lawyer does not know the person is represented by counsel in the matter, or because the lawyer knows the person is not represented by counsel in the matter, the lawyer's communications are subject to Rule 4.3.

Rule 4.2 Communication with a Person Represented by Counsel.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6 Agree = 0
Disagree = 4
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Alex, Glenn C.	M	No		The Proposed Rule should clarify which public employees may be contacted by an outside attorney without permission of agency counsel. The Proposed Rule is more clear than the existing rule that it applies to non-litigation situations as well as to litigation situations, and that not all non-attorney governmental employees may be contacted by an outside lawyer without permission. However, the Rule is still not adequately clear as to which governmental employees an outside lawyer may contact directly without violating the Rule. "Officer" and "director" are reasonably clear. But "partner" and "managing agent" are not clear in the context of a governmental agency. A better approach would be to define "public official" in subdivision (g) with more detail, and independent of the cross-reference to business entities in subdivision (b). Outside lawyers should need to obtain permission of agency counsel before discussing most legal matters with non-attorney public agency staff.	The Commission disagrees that "public official" should be defined independent of the cross-reference to business entities in subparagraph (b). In defining "public official" the intent was not to bring in all agency employees within that rubric of "public official," but only those with managerial authority comparable to the authority conferred on officers, directors, partners, or managing agents of non-public organizations. While it may in some cases be difficult to draw the line between categories of public officials, these concerns are found in both the private and public sectors. For example, whether a constituent is a partner or managing agent may have to be determined on a case by case basis since an all-encompassing delineation of permissible versus impermissible contacts is not possible.
2	Dalton, John W.	D	No		The Proposed Rule will severely prejudice plaintiffs in employment cases and be tremendously helpful to the defense in such cases. All the defense would have to do is	The Commission disagrees. The commenter has overlooked Paragraph (f) of the Rule which provides: "[a] lawyer for a corporation, partnership, association or other organization shall not represent

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 4.2 Communication with a Person Represented by Counsel.
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					send a letter to plaintiff's counsel indicating that all employees of the company are "represented" for the sole purpose of litigation and plaintiffs will be prohibited from interviewing percipient witnesses. Such a rule has no impact on "attorney misconduct" by an attorney, it would merely allow the defense in employment cases to "hide the ball" from plaintiff's counsel who are conducting good faith investigations into, what are often, very serious allegations of work place misconduct. The Proposed Rule places plaintiffs at a huge disadvantage and strongly favors the defense in employment cases.	that he or she represents all employees, members, agents or other constituents of the organization unless such representation is true."
3	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	M	Yes		OCTC is concerned that this rule may still not address the issues raised in In the Matter of Dale . In Dale , the Review Department failed to find an attorney culpable of violating Current Rule 2-100 for his communications with an incarcerated arsonist without the consent of the arsonist's criminal attorney because the arsonist was represented only in the criminal matter and not the civil matter Dale was handling. (The arsonist was not a party to the civil lawsuit, which was between the tenants and their landlord regarding the fire that the arsonist set.) Dale engaged in this communication despite the objection of the arsonist's attorney. OCTC believes that California law should cover the Dale type of	The Commission does not believe any additional clarification is necessary. The change from "party" to "person" is intended to make clear that whether a communication is prohibited under the Rule does not depend on whether the person contacted is a party to a criminal, civil or other judicial proceeding. The Rule errs on the side of protecting the attorney-client relationship regardless whether the person contacted is a party to any proceeding.

Rule 4.2 Communication with a Person Represented by Counsel.
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					situation. Even the court in Dale appeared to encourage that. While the rule now states “person” and not “party” so that the conduct in Dale would seem to be covered, it is not clear and unambiguous. OCTC would, therefore, request that either the rule be made clearer or, at least, a Comment should be added to clarify that the Dale type of situation is covered by this rule. There are way too many Comments, many are too long, and they cover subjects and discussions best left to treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.
				Comments [7] & [12]	Comments [7] and [12] should be in the Proposed Rule, not a Comment.	The Commission believes that the points addressed in these comments belong in the comments and not in the rule. They are explanatory of the essential standard that is in the rule.
4	Oliver, Jason L.	D	No		I am writing to voice my strong opposition to the Proposed Rule which would prohibit contacting a “person” represented by counsel, as opposed to the current rule which prohibits contact with a “party” represented by counsel. Currently, a plaintiff’s lawyer may contact “persons” (who are not managing	The Commission disagrees. The commenter has overlooked Paragraph (f) of the Rule which provides: “[a] lawyer for a corporation, partnership, association or other organization shall not represent that he or she represents all employees, members, agents or other constituents of the organization unless such representation is true.”

Rule 4.2 Communication with a Person Represented by Counsel.
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					agent/control group types) as long as that person is not a “party” in the case. Under the current system, a defense lawyer or employer defendant may not “convert” a rank and file employee, whether represented or not, into a “party,” just by sending a letter or by having the employer include a provision in an employee handbook about representation. Under the new rule, this would be possible. Based on what I see every day, I would say such abuse will not just be possible, but likely, as defendants fight these cases tooth and nail and seek every advantage they can get. In civil rights and employment cases, our pre-filing and post-filing investigations are of paramount importance to vindicating the important rights of our clients. If the Proposed Rule is adopted, defendant employers will be handed a huge advantage over plaintiffs with meritorious cases, since there will likely be wholesale restrictions on who we can speak to in our investigations.
5	San Bernardino County Public Defender	D	Yes		Proposed Rule 4.2 will impermissibly infringe on a criminally accused's right to effective assistance of counsel by limiting defense counsel's ability to fulfill his/her duty to investigate. Proposed Rule 4.2 restricts defense counsel's ability to investigate, will overburden scant judicial resources, and cause unnecessary costs, delay and backlog.	The Commission disagrees. Whether a defense attorney has a reciprocal right under the Sixth Amendment to communicate with a person represented by counsel depends on whether such a communication is “authorized by law” pursuant to Paragraph (c) (3). Whether such contacts are authorized by law is beyond the scope of the Rule. Comment [20] explains that the change from “party”

Rule 4.2 Communication with a Person Represented by Counsel.
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Recognizing the inevitable confusion of this Proposed Rule, Comment [21] suggests a lawyer may seek a court order in order to communicate with a represented person. This suggestion will bring possibly thousands of otherwise unnecessary proposed orders to the courts, thereby wasting judicial resources, slowing case processing, and increasing case backlog in our already overburdened justice system. Proposed Rule 4.2 will deprive the criminally accused the right to equal protection of the law. Both the government and the defendant are entities similarly situated as both deserving due process in a criminal proceeding. However, Proposed Rule 4.2 violates the equal protection clause because prosecutors will have an overwhelming advantage prosecuting cases because they can contact any "person" while the defense cannot. To correct this problem, allow the exemption to apply to prosecutors and the defense bar. That will level the playing field and the Proposed Rule 4.2 will accurately articulate the Commission's intent.	to "person" is not intended to preclude legitimate communications by or behalf of prosecutors, or other lawyers representing governmental entities in civil, criminal, or administrative law enforcement investigations. However, because Comment [20] may be read to suggest that an "authorized by law" exception in this area applies only to prosecutors and that a reciprocal right does not exist in favor of defense lawyers or investigators, the Commission has amended Comment [20] to allow for that possibility. The penultimate sentence has been added as follows: "Nor is this change intended to preclude legitimate communications by or on behalf of lawyers representing persons accused of crimes that might be authorized under the Sixth Amendment or other constitutional right.
6	San Diego County Bar Association	D	Yes		Change from "party" to "person" is not a clarifying change as Commission has asserted. (Dale, 4 Cal. State. Bar. Rptr. 798)	The discussion section to current Rule 2-100, in part, states that "matter" and "party" are "not limited to a litigation context" and the Commission believes that many lawyers have construed the rule's use of "party" as a term of art.

Rule 4.2 Communication with a Person Represented by Counsel.
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Proposed rule would expand a lawyer's duties to non-clients, increase risk of discipline, and distract the lawyer from their overarching duty to their client for reasons not compelled by the lawyer's broader duty as an officer of the court. Keep existing rule 2-100 but modify to add a new subsection (C)(4) for communications with an investigative officer in civil or criminal case.	Substituting "person" for "party" adopts the Model Rule language and brings California in line with the overwhelming majority of jurisdictions. Commenters opposed to the adoption of the Model Rule's use "person" have been unable to demonstrate that the use of that term has caused any significant problem elsewhere, and the Commission is not aware of any. Other additions codify case law and other developments in this area of lawyer conduct (see, i.e., paragraph (e)). The Commission believes that the decision in the Dale case requires that the existing rule be modified.

Rule 4.2: Communication with Person Represented by Counsel

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Arizona: Rule 4.2 restricts communication with a “party” rather than a “person” and omits the phrase “or a court order.”

California: Rule 2-100 (Communication with a Represented Party), provides as follows:

(A) While representing a client, a member shall not communicate directly or indirectly about the subject of the representation with a party the member knows to be represented by another lawyer in the matter, unless the member has the consent of the other lawyer.

(B) For purposes of this rule, a “party” includes:

(1) An officer, director, or managing agent of a corporation or association, and a partner or managing agent of a partnership; or

(2) An association member or an employee of an association, corporation, or partnership, if the subject of the communication is any act or omission of such person in connection with the matter which may be binding upon or imputed to the organization for purposes of civil or criminal liability or whose statement may constitute an admission on the part of the organization.

(C) This rule shall not prohibit:

(1) Communications with a public officer, board, committee, or body; or

(2) Communications initiated by a party seeking advice or representation from an independent lawyer of the party's choice; or

(3) Communications otherwise authorized by law.

Colorado: Rule 1.2(c) permits “limited representation of a pro se party” as provided by specified Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure. Rule 5 of the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure provides that such limited representation of a pro se party “shall not constitute an entry of appearance by the attorney . . . and does not authorize or require the service of papers upon the attorney.”

District of Columbia adds the following three paragraphs to Rule 4.2:

(b) During the course of representing a client, a lawyer may communicate about the subject of the representation with a nonparty employee of an organization without obtaining the consent of that organization's lawyer. If the organization is an adverse party, however, prior to communicating with any such nonparty employee, a lawyer must disclose to such employee both the lawyer's identity and the fact that the lawyer represents a party that is adverse to the employee's employer.

(c) For purposes of this rule, the term "party" or "person" includes any person or organization, including an employee of an organization, who has the authority to bind an organization as to the representation to which the communication relates.

(d) This rule does not prohibit communication by a lawyer with government officials who have the authority to redress the grievances of the lawyer's client, whether or not those grievances or the lawyer's communications relate to matters that are the subject of the representation, provided that in the event of such communications the disclosures specified in (b) are made to the government official to whom the communication is made.

Florida: Rule 4.2 deletes the phrase "or is authorized to do so by law or a court order" and substitutes the following new language:

[A]n attorney may, without such prior consent, communicate with another's client in order to meet the requirements of any statute, court rule, or contract requiring notice or service of process directly on an adverse party, in which event the communication shall be strictly restricted to that required by the court rule, statute or contract, and a copy shall be provided to the adverse party's attorney.

In addition, Florida adds a new paragraph (b) stating as follows:

(b) An otherwise unrepresented person to whom limited representation is being provided or has been provided in accordance with Rule Regulating the Florida Bar 4-1.2 is considered to be unrepresented for purposes of this rule unless the opposing lawyer knows of, or has been provided with, a written notice of appearance under which, or a written notice of time period during which, the opposing lawyer is to communicate with the limited representation lawyer as to the subject matter within the limited scope of the representation.

(Florida's version of Rule 1.2(c) provides, in part, that "a lawyer and client may agree to limit the objectives or scope of the representation if the limitation is reasonable under the circumstances and the client consents in writing after consultation.")

Georgia replaces the phrase "authorized to do so by law" with the phrase "authorized to do so by constitutional law or statute.” Georgia also adds a new paragraph (b) that provides: “Attorneys for the State and Federal Government shall be subject to this Rule in the same manner as other attorneys in this State.”

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2010, Illinois adopts ABA Model Rule 4.2.

Louisiana adds a new paragraph (b) that prohibits communication with:

a person the lawyer knows is presently a director, officer, employee, member, shareholder, or other constituent of a represented organization and

(1) Who supervises, directs or regularly consults with the organization’s lawyer concerning the matter;

(2) Who has the authority to obligate the organization with respect to the matter; or

(3) Whose act or omission in connection with the matter may be imputed to the organization for purpose of civil or criminal liability.

Maryland adds the following paragraphs to Rule 4.2 and limits the reach of paragraph (a), which is the same as ABA Model Rule 4.2, by reference to paragraph (c):

(b) If the person represented by another lawyer is an organization, the prohibition extends to each of the organization’s (1) current officers, directors, and managing agents and (2) current agents or employees who supervise, direct, or regularly communicate with the organization’s lawyers concerning the matter or whose acts or omissions in the matter may bind the organization for civil or criminal liability. The lawyer may not communicate with a current agent or employee of the organization unless the lawyer first has made inquiry to ensure that the agent or employee is not an individual with whom communication is prohibited by this paragraph and has disclosed to the individual the lawyer’s identity and the fact that the lawyer represents a client who has an interest adverse to the organization.

(c) A lawyer may communicate with a government official about matters that are the subject of the representation if the government official has the authority to redress the grievances of the lawyer’s client and the lawyer first makes the disclosures specified in paragraph (b).

Michigan currently retains the pre-2002 version of ABA Model Rule 4.2 (which lacks an express “court order” exception).

New Jersey: Rule 4.2 provides as follows:

In representing a client, a lawyer shall not communicate about the subject of the representation with a person the lawyer knows, or by the exercise of reasonable diligence should know, to be represented by another lawyer in the matter, including members of an organization’s litigation control group as defined by RPC 1.13, unless the lawyer has the consent of the other lawyer, or is authorized by law or court order to do so, or unless the sole purpose of the communication is to ascertain whether the person is in fact represented. Reasonable diligence shall include, but not be limited to, a specific inquiry of the person as to whether that person is represented by counsel. Nothing in this rule shall, however, preclude a lawyer from counseling or representing a member or former member of an organization's litigation control group who seeks independent legal advice.

Rule 4.2 must be read in conjunction with New Jersey's Rule 1.13, which defines the phrase "litigation control group" as follows:

For the purposes of RPC 4.2 and 4.3 . . . the organization's lawyer shall be deemed to represent not only the organizational entity but also the members of its litigation control group. Members of the litigation control group shall be deemed to include current agents and employees responsible for, or significantly involved in, the determination of the organization's legal position in the matter whether or not in litigation, provided, however, that "significant involvement" requires involvement greater, and other than, the supplying of factual information or data respecting the matter. Former agents and employees who were members of the litigation control group shall presumptively be deemed to be represented in the matter by the organization's lawyer but may at any time disavow said representation.

New Mexico adds the following sentence to Rule 4.2: "Except for persons having a managerial responsibility on behalf of the organization, an attorney is not prohibited from communicating directly with employees of a corporation, partnership or other entity about the subject matter of the representation even though the corporation, partnership or entity itself is represented by counsel."

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, New York Rule 4.2(a) is the same as Model Rule 4.2 except that New York substitutes "party" for "person," adds "or cause another to communicate" before "about," and deletes "or a court order." New York adds Rule 4.2(b) as follows, which uses "person," not "party."

Notwithstanding the prohibitions of paragraph (a), and unless otherwise prohibited by law, a lawyer may cause a client to communicate with a represented person unless the represented person is not legally competent, and may counsel the client with respect to those communications, provided the lawyer gives reasonable advance notice to the represented person's counsel that such communications will be taking place.

North Carolina: Rule 4.2(a) adds: "It is not a violation of this rule for a lawyer to encourage his or her client to discuss the subject of the representation with the opposing party in a good-faith attempt to resolve the controversy." North Carolina also adds a new Rule 4.2(b) that provides as follows:

(b) Notwithstanding section (a) above, in representing a client who has a dispute with a government agency or body, a lawyer may communicate about the subject of the representation with the elected officials who have authority over such government agency or body, even if the lawyer knows that the government agency or body is represented by another lawyer in the matter, but such communications may only occur under the following circumstances:

(1) in writing, if a copy of the writing is promptly delivered to opposing counsel;

(2) orally, upon adequate notice to opposing counsel; or

(3) in the course of official proceedings.

Oregon: Rule 4.2 provides as follows:

In representing a client or the lawyer's own interests, a lawyer shall not communicate or cause another to communicate on the subject of the representation with a person the lawyer knows to be represented by a lawyer on that subject unless:

(a) the lawyer has the prior consent of a lawyer representing such other person;

(b) the lawyer is authorized by law or by court order to do so; or

(c) a written agreement requires a written notice or demand to be sent to such other person, in which case a copy of such notice or demand shall also be sent to such other person's lawyer.

Texas: Rule 4.02 provides:

(a) In representing a client, a lawyer shall not communicate or cause or encourage another to communicate about the subject of the representation with a person, organization or entity of government the lawyer knows to be represented by another lawyer regarding that subject, unless the lawyer has the consent of the other lawyer or is authorized by law to do so.

(b) In representing a client a lawyer shall not communicate or cause another to communicate about the subject of representation with a person or organization a lawyer knows to be employed or retained for the purpose of conferring with or advising another lawyer about the subject of the representation, unless the lawyer has the consent of the other lawyer or is authorized by law to do so.

(c) For the purpose of this rule, "organization or entity of government" includes: (1) those persons presently having a managerial responsibility with an organization or entity of government that relates to the subject of the representation, or (2) those persons presently employed by such organization or entity and whose act or omission in connection with the subject of representation may make the organization or entity of government vicariously liable for such act or omission.

(d) When a person, organization, or entity of government that is represented by a lawyer in a matter seeks advice regarding that matter from another lawyer, the second lawyer is not prohibited by paragraph (a) from giving such advice without notifying or seeking consent of the first lawyer.

Utah: Rule 4.2 contains 17 separate paragraphs and subparagraphs. Rule 4.2(a) begins by tracking ABA Model Rule 4.2, but omits “or is authorized to do so by law or court order” and adds that an attorney may, without prior consent, communicate with another lawyer’s client “if authorized to do so by any law, rule, or court order . . . or as authorized by paragraphs (b), (c), (d) or (e) of this Rule.” Paragraphs (b) and (d) cover “Rules Relating to Unbundling of Legal Services” and “Organizations as Represented Persons.” Paragraph (c), which is highly unusual, provides as follows:

(c) Rules Relating to Government Lawyers Engaged in Civil or Criminal Law Enforcement. A government lawyer engaged in a criminal or civil law enforcement matter, or a person acting under the lawyer’s direction in the matter, may communicate with a person known to be represented by a lawyer if:

(1) the communication is in the course of, and limited to, an investigation of a different matter unrelated to the representation or any ongoing, unlawful conduct; or

(2) the communication is made to protect against an imminent risk of death or serious bodily harm or substantial property damage that the government lawyer reasonably believes may occur and the communication is limited to those matters necessary to protect against the imminent risk; or

(3) the communication is made at the time of the arrest of the represented person and after that person is advised of the right to remain silent and the right to counsel and voluntarily and knowingly waives these rights; or

(4) the communication is initiated by the represented person, directly or through an intermediary, if prior to the communication the represented person has given a written or recorded voluntary and informed waiver of counsel, including the right to have substitute counsel, for that communication.

Paragraph (e), which covers “Limitations on Communications,” provides that when communicating with a represented person pursuant to this Rule, no lawyer may:

(e)(1) inquire about privileged communications between the person and counsel or about information regarding litigation strategy or legal arguments of counsel or seek to induce the person to forgo representation or disregard the advice of the person's counsel; or

(2) engage in negotiations of a plea agreement, settlement, statutory or non-statutory immunity agreement or other disposition of actual or potential criminal charges or civil enforcement claims or sentences or penalties with respect to the matter in which the person is represented by counsel unless such negotiations are permitted by law, rule or court order.

Wyoming: Wyoming makes clear that Rule 4.2 applies to communications with a person "or entity" represented by another lawyer.

Proposed Rule 4.3 [n/a]

“Dealing with Unrepresented Person”

(XDraft #5.1, 10/15/08)

Summary: Proposed Rule 4.3(a) substantially follows Model Rule 4.3 by placing restrictions on a lawyer's communications with an unrepresented person and seeking to ensure that unrepresented persons are not misled when dealing with a lawyer who is acting on a client's behalf. A new paragraph (b) has been added to prohibit a lawyer from seeking to obtain privileged or other confidential information from an unrepresented person when the lawyer knows or reasonably should know the person may not reveal the information without violating a duty to another or which the lawyer is not otherwise entitled to receive.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart
Rule	Comment
☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 3-600(D).

Statute

Case law

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 8

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 4

Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☒ Yes ☐ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

San Diego County Bar Association believes common law provides sufficient protection against lawyers' abuses toward the unrepresented without adding a disciplinary rule.

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 4.3* Dealing with Unrepresented Person

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 4.3 is similar to Model Rule 4.3 in placing restrictions on a lawyer's communications with an unrepresented person. Restrictions on a lawyer's communications with a represented person are governed by proposed rule 4.2. Rule 4.3 is intended to ensure that unrepresented persons are not misled when dealing with a lawyer who is acting on a client's behalf and provides protection against overreaching by the lawyer. Paragraph (a) is a variation of Model Rule 4.3 in addressing the same three requirements as the Model Rule. First, a lawyer must not mislead the unrepresented person about the lawyer's role. Second, when the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the person incorrectly believes the lawyer is disinterested, the lawyer must take reasonable steps to correct the misunderstanding. Third, when the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that interests of the unrepresented non-client are in conflict with the interests of the lawyer's client, the lawyer shall not give legal advice to the unrepresented person except that the lawyer may advise the person to secure counsel.

Paragraph (b) is new and provides that in communicating with an unrepresented person, a lawyer shall not seek to obtain information that should not be disclosed by the unrepresented person because the information is privileged or is subject to another legally recognized confidentiality obligation. Paragraph (b) is intended to further the lawyer's obligations under Model Rule 4.4(a) in the context of communicating with an unrepresented person.

* Proposed Rule 4.3, Draft 5.1 (10/15/08).

INTRODUCTION (Continued):

Minority. A minority of the Commission objects to paragraph (a) because it creates a situation in which lawyers act at their peril in dealing with an unrepresented person on behalf of a client, which, in turn, compromises the lawyer's ability to represent a client. The term "disinterested" does not have a clear meaning. The prohibition on "implying" that the lawyer is "disinterested" furthers the ambiguity, so that lawyers dealing with unrepresented persons on behalf of a client do not have a clear statement of what the Rule prohibits. The minority of the Commission also objects to the last sentence in paragraph (a), which prevents giving legal advice to unrepresented persons. When a lawyer communicates with an unrepresented person on behalf of a client, communication of information about the law and how it relates to the unrepresented person's dispute with the client is inevitable. While Comment [3] allows lawyers "merely" to state a client's legal position to an unrepresented person, the Comment does not explain what distinguishes a mere statement of a client's legal position from advice that would subject the lawyer to discipline. California law historically has avoided imposing duties on lawyer's to non-clients in order to avoid conflicts of interest that could compromise the lawyer's representation of the client. Paragraph (a) would create such a conflict.

A minority of the Commission objects to paragraph (b) because it also compromises a lawyer's ability to represent a client with respect to an unrepresented person. There are many seemingly innocent inquiries that may result in the revelation of privileged or confidential information. The knows or reasonably should know standard exposes a lawyer to being second guessed in the disciplinary process, which would chill communications with an unrepresented person on behalf of a client. In addition, paragraph (b) does not distinguish situations where the revelation of privileged or confidential information may be appropriate or necessary, such as when the interests of the unrepresented person and the lawyer's client are aligned. The lawyer would be able to obtain such information from a lawyer representing the person, but would be subject to discipline under paragraph (b) if the same information comes from a person who chooses not to be represented. The minority believes that paragraph (b) would do more harm than good.

Current California Law and Variations in Other Jurisdictions. Although there is no counterpart to Model Rule 4.3 which imposes duties on a lawyer in dealing with unrepresented persons, current California rule 3-600(D) imposes similar duties on lawyers representing an organization as to constituents of an organization. Approximately 12 states have adopted variations of Model Rule 4.3. Kansas, Maryland and Michigan, for example, retain the pre-2002 version of the rule which does not include the third requirement against giving legal advice to an unrepresented person. Several states, including New Jersey, have added a provision dealing with communications with persons who are officers, directors or other constituents of an organization represented by the lawyer. Florida's rule provides that a lawyer shall not give legal advice to any unrepresented person other than advice to secure counsel. Florida's rule also has a separate paragraph on communicating with a person to whom limited representation is being provided. Georgia's rule includes a 30 day cooling off period prior to any contact with a potentially adverse party in a matter involving an accident or disaster involving that person or a relative of that person. Utah has added a provision on who qualifies as a represented and unrepresented person for purposes of rules 4.2 and 4.3. Washington adds a comment on communications by government lawyers that do not violate the rule. Several other jurisdictions, including the District of Columbia, North Carolina and Pennsylvania track the substance of the Model Rule but reorder the language and divide the rule into subparagraphs.

INTRODUCTION (Continued):

Rule 4.3 Dealing With Unrepresented Person Rules Revision Commission – Minority Dissent

This Rule should not be adopted. The Rule creates a special burden on lawyers in communicating with unrepresented person that does not exist when communicating with other lawyers. In so doing, the Rule creates a situation in which lawyers act at their peril in dealing with an unrepresented person on behalf of a client, which, in turn, compromises the lawyer's ability to represent a client.

The proposed Rule has three significant flaws. The term "disinterested" is ambiguous. Because of its ambiguity, lawyers dealing with unrepresented persons on behalf of a client do not have a clear statement of what the Rule prohibits. The last sentence in paragraph (a), which prevents giving legal advice to unrepresented persons, and related Comment [3] are unclear and do not clarify the difference between merely stating a client's legal position and advice that would subject a lawyer to discipline. Paragraph (b) is overbroad and would chill communications with unrepresented persons on behalf of a client.

California law historically has avoided imposing duties on lawyers to non-clients in order to avoid conflicts of interest that could compromise the lawyer's representation of the client. Paragraph (a) would create such conflicts. It will permit discipline of lawyers for saying things that are not improper, are not misleading, might be in the best interests of lawyers' clients, and might be in the best interests of unrepresented persons. This rule contains oversimplifications that do not apply in the day to day practice of law and will be wrong as disciplinary standards.

The Disinterested Standard in Paragraph (a) Is Ambiguous

We would have no objection if the Rule stated that, in communicating with an unrepresented person, a lawyer shall not represent that the lawyer is not communicating on behalf of a client, when that is not the case. Lawyers cannot engage in a fraud when dealing with other lawyers or an unrepresented person. However, this proposed rule does not say that. Instead, it creates a special prohibition with respect to an unrepresented person that would discipline a lawyer for implying that he or she is "disinterested."

The word "disinterested" is ambiguous because it has no established meaning. It can have multiple meanings to different people on different occasions. For example, it might mean impartiality, or it might mean that the lawyer does not own an interest in the matter at hand. The rule increases the ambiguity of the word "disinterested" by coupling that word with the word "imply." The rule does not prohibit a lawyer from telling an unrepresented party that the lawyer has no client. Instead, it forbids a lawyer from "implying" that the lawyer is "disinterested."

As a result, the rule creates a situation where a lawyer acts at his or her peril in communicating with an unrepresented person on behalf of a client. No one can tell from the rule what statement is sufficient to “imply” that he or she is “disinterested” and lead to disciplinary proceedings. A totally innocent statement can be interpreted to “imply” that a lawyer is “disinterested.” Consequently, a legitimate statement may lead to a disciplinary complaint.

For example, an attorney for an employee may tell his client’s employer that he represents the employee, that the employer is subject to the Fair Employment and Housing Act, and that racial discrimination is prohibited under FEHA. That comment may be totally correct and not misleading; it may even be in the best interests of the lawyer’s client. But if the employer thinks the lawyer is being objective, that innocent statement is prohibited because it “implies” that the lawyer is disinterested.

Conversely, the lawyer may tell the employer that the lawyer does not have a stake in the dispute between the employee and the employer. That statement may literally be true because the lawyer does not have a contingent fee. However, the statement can be argued to “imply” that the lawyer is “disinterested.” Therefore, it would be a violation of this ambiguous rule.

Comment [1] furthers the problem with the Rule by suggesting that a lawyer may be disciplined for implying that he or she “is a disinterested authority on the law.” Suppose a lawyer is recognized as an expert in employment law. She truthfully states that “I lecture to employers, law schools, and business schools on wage and hours laws. In my opinion, you have violated those laws, but I want to try to reach an agreement with you to head off a lawsuit that you and my client should want to avoid.” It violates both proposed rule 4.3(a) and its Comment [1]. It is a violation, even if it is the literal truth, even if the employer knows who the lawyer’s client is, even though the employer knows the lawyer is not representing the employer, and even if both the client employee and the unrepresented employer would both be benefitted by a settlement instead of litigation. The rule prohibits a lawyer from expressing objectivity.

All of this impacts the representation of clients. In ways that would be detrimental to the client, it impedes the role of lawyers who communicate with unrepresented persons on behalf of clients. Proposed Rule 3.4(a) would make totally truthful statements, that cause no harm, disciplinable offenses.

The Prohibition on Giving Legal Advice Is Ambiguous and Improper

Paragraph (a)’s prohibition on giving legal advice also is problematic. When a lawyer communicates with an unrepresented person on behalf of a client, communication of information about the law and how it relates to the unrepresented person’s dispute with the client is inevitable. The Rule does not define what constitutes giving legal advice. While Comment [3] allows lawyers “merely” to state a client’s legal position to an unrepresented person, the Comment does not explain what distinguishes a “mere” statement of a client’s legal position from advice that would subject the lawyer to discipline.

The lack of clarity in this Rule creates a conflict between a lawyer's duty to represent a client's interests and a new duty to an unrepresented adverse party, which inevitably will impact the representation of clients. The Rule creates this conflict by creating a situation in which a lawyer communicates with an unrepresented person at his or her peril.

For example, assume a lawyer is communicating with an unrepresented person who is trespassing on a client's property. We presume that writing a letter to an unrepresented person saying you are trespassing is merely stating the client's legal position. But does the Rule apply if the lawyer goes on to say, "your actions are a violation of the Penal Code and may subject you to arrest and prosecution." How about if the lawyer goes on to say, "if you continue, my client will sue you and you could be liable for damages in excess of $$$." That arguably exceeds "merely" stating the client's legal position. How about if the lawyer says, "If you want to avoid incurring any further liability, we advise you to take the following steps." Does using the word "advise" subject the lawyer to discipline? Would the result be different if the lawyer says, "My client is willing to drop this matter if you take the following steps." How is a lawyer, who is not steeped in these rules and who will have no precedent as guidance for interpreting them, going to understand the differences?

Another example would be settling a matter with an unrepresented person. Assume the settlement requires the unrepresented person to take certain legal steps to effectuate the settlement. Suppose the lawyer needs to explain how to perform those legal steps to the unrepresented person in order to assure that the client's interests in an effective settlement are achieved. Is that giving legal advice? Is that just a "mere" statement of a client's legal position? What distinguishes "merely stating a client's legal position" from non-mere statements of a client's legal position that get the lawyer disciplined?

Furthermore, there often are situations where lawyers should give legal advice to unrepresented persons, even if they do not represent that person. Such advice often benefits both the lawyer's client and the unrepresented person.

For example, if the client and the other person have conflicts of interest, but the client might be vicariously liable for the acts of the unrepresented person, this rule would forbid the lawyer from telling the unrepresented person that she should file an answer to the complaint a third person filed against both the client and the unrepresented person. Even if the client is not vicariously liable for the conduct of the unrepresented person, if they are both defendants in the same case, there is nothing improper about a lawyer warning the unrepresented defendant that she "should file an answer to the complaint." However, that innocent advice would violate both the first sentence of paragraph (a) [because the defendant can interpret the statement as "implying" that the lawyer is disinterested because it hints that the lawyer is impartial], and it also violates the last sentence of paragraph (a), because it is legal advice given when the lawyer knows there is a conflict of interest.

Even if the lawyer knows the unrepresented person has no money with which to hire a lawyer, all the lawyer will be permitted to say is the unhelpful statement, “Hire a lawyer.” If a lawyer helps a pro se party avoid a default, and that advice does not harm the lawyer’s client, why should the lawyer be disciplined for doing so?

Many states have declined to adopt the second sentence in paragraph (a) to the Model Rule. California would be well served to join those states. The last sentence in paragraph (a) is not necessary and should be deleted along with the related discussion in Comment [3].

Paragraph (b) Would Interfere with Proper Representation of Clients

Paragraph (b) of this rule is also wrong. It prohibits a lawyer from asking for information that might help the lawyer’s client and, if interpreted literally, prohibits asking questions that should be permissible.

There are many seemingly innocent inquiries that may result in the revelation of privileged or confidential information. The “knows or reasonably should know” standard exposes a lawyer to being second guessed in the disciplinary process, which would chill communications with an unrepresented person on behalf of a client. In addition, paragraph (b) does not provide any exception for situations where the revelation of privileged or confidential information may be appropriate or necessary, such as when the interests of the unrepresented person and the lawyer’s client are aligned. The lawyer would be able to obtain such information from a lawyer representing the person, but would be subject to discipline under paragraph (b) if the same information comes from a person who chooses not to be represented.

For example, suppose an opposing party has fired his lawyer. In conversation with that party, the lawyer asks whether the unrepresented party was ever told about the wage and hours laws. The unrepresented party has a choice: answer or refuse to answer. The question is permissible. The pro se litigant knows that the lawyer is not representing him. Not hiring a lawyer inherently places the unrepresented party in the position of having to decide for himself whether to answer questions asked by an opposing lawyer. The lawyer who asks the question is not doing anything improper, is not deceiving the unrepresented party, and is properly representing his client. However, the lawyer will have violated paragraph (b) because she has asked the other party a question that might elicit privileged information. That should not be a disciplinable offense. Yet it could be under the proposed Rule.

Suppose a lawyer represents a shareholder, interviews a corporation’s unrepresented former employee, and asks her why options were backdated. She might reply that they were backdated “. . . because our lawyer told me and the chief financial officer that we could and should do so.” The lawyer asked a legitimate question but has violated paragraph (b) of the proposed rule because the question asks that person to reveal information that arguably violates a duty to the former employer.

Suppose a lawyer doing tax or estate planning for an adult child asks a parent questions that elicit information that the parent could be privileged not to disclose, such as tax return information, but which is relevant estate planning for the child (such as whether gift tax returns were filed and, if so, the value used for an asset in the return, or whether the parent has depreciated an asset, and, if so, what depreciation has been claimed on the parent's income tax return). The lawyer is asking an unrepresented party for information that is privileged because the tax or gift tax returns are confidential. Those innocent questions would be disciplinable under paragraph (b) of this rule.

These examples show that paragraph (b) would do more harm than good. Paragraph (b) is not in the Model Rule. The new requirement in paragraph (b) is overbroad and would produce results that are unwarranted.

Conclusion

As shown by the examples above, this rule would apply in infinite numbers of situations in which it should not apply. It is overbroad, poorly worded, inconsistent with lawyers' duties to their clients in many circumstances, and forbids lawyers from saying words that might benefit both their own clients and unrepresented persons.

This proposed Rule will impose special duties on lawyers to unrepresented persons that will conflict with the lawyer's duties to their clients. Its ambiguities will cause lawyers to communicate with unrepresented persons at their peril and at the cost of effective client representation. It should not be adopted.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.3 Dealing With Unrepresented Person	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 4.3 Dealing With Unrepresented Person	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
In dealing on behalf of a client with a person who is not represented by counsel, a lawyer shall not state or imply that the lawyer is disinterested. When the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the unrepresented person misunderstands the lawyer's role in the matter, the lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to correct the misunderstanding. The lawyer shall not give legal advice to an unrepresented person, other than the advice to secure counsel, if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the interests of such a person are or have a reasonable possibility of being in conflict with the interests of the client.	(a) In dealing on behalf of a client with a person who is not represented by counsel, a lawyer shall not state or imply that the lawyer is disinterested. When the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the unrepresented person ~~misunderstands~~ incorrectly believes the ~~lawyer's role~~ lawyer is disinterested in the matter, the lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to correct the misunderstanding. ~~The lawyer shall not give legal advice to an unrepresented person, other than the advice to secure counsel, if~~ the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the interests of such an unrepresented person are or have a reasonable possibility of being in conflict with the interests of the client, the lawyer shall not give legal advice to that person, except that the lawyer may, but is not required to, advise the person to secure counsel.	The first sentence in paragraph (a) follows Model Rule 4.3. The second sentence is revised to make it clearer that the lawyer's duty to correct the unrepresented person's misunderstanding arises when the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the person "incorrectly believes the lawyer is disinterested" rather than "misunderstands the lawyer's role" in the matter. No substantive change is intended. The third sentence is rewritten to make the lawyer's obligation more definite by removing the phrase "or have a reasonable possibility of being in conflict" and reversing the order of the sentence. The sentence is also changed to provide that advising the person to secure counsel is discretionary depending on the circumstances and not a requirement.

* Proposed Rule 4.3, Draft 5.1 (10/15/08). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.3 Dealing With Unrepresented Person	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 4.3 Dealing With Unrepresented Person	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(b) In communicating with a person who is not represented by counsel, a lawyer shall not seek to obtain privileged or other confidential information the lawyer knows or reasonably should know the person may not reveal without violating a duty to another or which the lawyer is not otherwise entitled to receive.	Paragraph (b) does not have a counter-part in Model Rule 4.3 although there is a similar concept in Model Rule 4.4(a) that prohibits a lawyer from using methods of obtaining evidence that violates the legal rights of a third person. The Commission believes that including a requirement in this Rule that prohibits a lawyer from seeking to obtain privileged or other confidential information that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know the person may not reveal without violating a duty to another, or which the lawyer is not otherwise entitled to receive, is important to protect the attorney-client privilege and legal rights of third persons with whom the lawyer interacts.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.3 Dealing With Unrepresented Person Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 4.3 Dealing With Unrepresented Person Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] An unrepresented person, particularly one not experienced in dealing with legal matters, might assume that a lawyer is disinterested in loyalties or is a disinterested authority on the law even when the lawyer represents a client. In order to avoid a misunderstanding, a lawyer will typically need to identify the lawyer's client and, where necessary, explain that the client has interests opposed to those of the unrepresented person. For misunderstandings that sometimes arise when a lawyer for an organization deals with an unrepresented constituent, see Rule 1.13(d).	[1] An unrepresented person, particularly one not experienced in dealing with legal matters, might assume that a lawyer is disinterested in loyalties or is a disinterested authority on the law even when the lawyer represents a client. In ~~order acting to avoid~~correct a misunderstanding about the lawyer's role, a lawyer ~~will typically need to identify~~may disclose the client's identity if it is not confidential. ~~Whether the lawyer identifies~~ the lawyer's client~~and, the lawyer shall explain,~~ where necessary, ~~explain~~ that the client has interests opposed to those of the unrepresented person. For ~~misunderstandings that sometimes arise~~guidance when a lawyer for an organization deals with an unrepresented constituent, see Rule 1.13(~~df~~).	Comment [1] explains the purpose of the Rule and is a modified version of Comment [1] to Model Rule 4.3. The second sentence has been changed to point out that the client's identity may be disclosed if it is not confidential and that the lawyer must explain if necessary that the client has interests opposed to those of the unrepresented person whether the client's identity is disclosed. The third sentence has been shortened and the cross reference changed to the relevant paragraph of proposed Rule 1.13 dealing with the Organization as Client
	[2] Paragraph (a) requires that a lawyer not mislead the person concerning the lawyer's role in the matter, or the identity or interest of the person whom the lawyer represents. For example, a lawyer may not falsely state or create the impression that the lawyer represents no one, or that the lawyer is acting impartially or that the lawyer will protect the interest of both the client and the unrepresented non-client. Paragraph (a) also requires that the lawyer not take advantage of the unrepresented person's misunderstanding.	Comment [2] is new and is intended to provide guidance by identifying erroneous assumptions and other misunderstandings that an unrepresented person might have when dealing with a lawyer.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.3 Dealing With Unrepresented Person Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 4.3 Dealing With Unrepresented Person Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[2] The Rule distinguishes between situations involving unrepresented persons whose interests may be adverse to those of the lawyer's client and those in which the person's interests are not in conflict with the client's. In the former situation, the possibility that the lawyer will compromise the unrepresented person's interests is so great that the Rule prohibits the giving of any advice, apart from the advice to obtain counsel. Whether a lawyer is giving impermissible advice may depend on the experience and sophistication of the unrepresented person, as well as the setting in which the behavior and comments occur. This Rule does not prohibit a lawyer from negotiating the terms of a transaction or settling a dispute with an unrepresented person. So long as the lawyer has explained that the lawyer represents an adverse party and is not representing the person, the lawyer may inform the person of the terms on which the lawyer's client will enter into an agreement or settle a matter, prepare documents that require the person's signature and explain the lawyer's own view of the meaning of the document or the lawyer's view of the underlying legal obligations.	[23] ~~The Rule~~ Paragraph (a) distinguishes between ~~situations involving~~ the situation in which a lawyer knows or reasonably should know that an unrepresented person has interests ~~may be that are~~ adverse to those of the lawyer's client and ~~those~~ the situation in which the ~~person's interests are~~ lawyer does not in conflict with the client's have that actual or presumed knowledge. In the former situation, the possibility that the lawyer will compromise the unrepresented person's interests is so great that the Rule prohibits the giving of any advice, apart from the advice to obtain counsel. Whether a lawyer is giving impermissible advice may depend on the experience and sophistication of the unrepresented person, as well as the setting in which the behavior and comments occur. ~~This Rule A lawyer~~ A lawyer does not ~~prohibit~~ give legal advice merely by stating a legal position on behalf of the lawyer's client. A lawyer from also does not give legal advice merely by negotiating the terms of a transaction or settling a dispute with an unrepresented person. So long as the lawyer has explained that the lawyer represents an adverse party and is not representing the person, the lawyer may state a legal position on behalf of the lawyer's client, inform the person of the terms on which the lawyer's client will enter into an agreement or settle a matter, prepare documents that require the person's signature and explain the lawyer's own view of the meaning of the document or the lawyer's view of the underlying legal obligations.	Comment [3] is a modified version of Model Rule 4.3, cmt. [2]. The first sentence is revised to be more precise and to conform to the wording of the Rule without changing its meaning. The third sentence clarifies that simply stating the client's legal position is not giving legal advice under the rule. The fourth sentence has been changed to make to same point.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.3 Dealing With Unrepresented Person Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 4.3 Dealing With Unrepresented Person Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[4] Paragraph (b) prohibits a lawyer, in communicating with a person who is not represented by counsel, from seeking to obtain information that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is subject to an evidentiary or other privilege, or is otherwise protected from disclosure by a legally cognizable duty owed by the unrepresented person. A lawyer who obtains information from an unrepresented person that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is legally protected from disclosure might also violate Rules [4.4], 8.4(c) and 8.4(d).	Comment [4] is new and explains the prohibition in paragraph (b) against seeking to obtain information that should not be disclosed by an unrepresented person due to its privileged nature or some other legally-cognizable confidentiality obligation. A cross reference has been added to other rules that might also be violated if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the information obtained is legally protected from disclosure. Brackets have been placed around "4.4" pending the Commission final consideration of that Rule.
	[5] Paragraph (b) does not prohibit a lawyer from seeking to obtain information from an unrepresented person through the use of discovery in litigation or interrogation at trial.	Comment [5] is new and explains that paragraph (b) does not prohibit seeking information from third persons through the use of discovery in litigation or at trial.
	[6] Paragraph (a) does not apply to lawful covert criminal or civil investigations by government or private lawyers.	Comment [6] is new and points out that paragraph (a) does not apply to lawful government or private covert criminal and civil investigations.

Rule 4.3 Dealing with Unrepresented Person (Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) In dealing on behalf of a client with a person who is not represented by counsel, a lawyer shall not state or imply that the lawyer is disinterested. When the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the unrepresented person incorrectly believes the lawyer is disinterested in the matter, the lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to correct the misunderstanding. If the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the interests of an unrepresented person are in conflict with the interests of the client, the lawyer shall not give legal advice to that person, except that the lawyer may, but is not required to, advise the person to secure counsel.
- (b) In communicating with a person who is not represented by counsel, a lawyer shall not seek to obtain privileged or other confidential information the lawyer knows or reasonably should know the person may not reveal without violating a duty to another or which the lawyer is not otherwise entitled to receive.

COMMENT

- [1] An unrepresented person, particularly one not experienced in dealing with legal matters, might assume that a lawyer is disinterested in loyalties or is a disinterested authority on the law even when the lawyer represents a client. In acting to correct a misunderstanding about the lawyer's role, a lawyer may disclose the client's identity if it is not confidential. Whether the lawyer identifies the lawyer's client, the lawyer shall explain, where necessary, that the client has interests opposed to those of the unrepresented person. For guidance when a lawyer for an organization deals with an unrepresented constituent, see Rule 1.13(f).

- [2] Paragraph (a) requires that a lawyer not mislead the person concerning the lawyer's role in the matter, or the identity or interest of the person whom the lawyer represents. For example, a lawyer may not falsely state or create the impression that the lawyer represents no one, or that the lawyer is acting impartially or that the lawyer will protect the interest of both the client and the unrepresented non-client. Paragraph (a) also requires that the lawyer not take advantage of the unrepresented person's misunderstanding.

- [3] Paragraph (a) distinguishes between the situation in which a lawyer knows or reasonably should know that an unrepresented person has interests that are adverse to those of the lawyer's client and the situation in which the lawyer does not have that actual or presumed knowledge. In the former situation, the possibility that the lawyer will compromise the unrepresented person's interests is so great that the Rule prohibits the giving of any advice, apart from the advice to obtain counsel. Whether a lawyer is giving impermissible advice may depend on the experience and sophistication of the unrepresented person, as well as the setting in which the behavior and comments occur. A lawyer does not give legal advice merely by stating a legal position on behalf of the lawyer's client. A lawyer also does not give legal advice merely by negotiating the terms of a transaction or settling a dispute with an unrepresented person. So long as the lawyer has explained that the lawyer represents an adverse party and is not representing the person, the lawyer may state a legal position on behalf of the lawyer's client, inform the person of the terms on which the lawyer's client will enter into an agreement or settle a matter, prepare documents that require the person's signature and explain the lawyer's own view of the meaning of the document or the lawyer's view of the underlying legal obligations.

- [4] Paragraph (b) prohibits a lawyer, in communicating with a person who is not represented by counsel, from seeking to obtain information that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is subject to an evidentiary or other privilege, or is otherwise protected from disclosure by a legally cognizable duty owed by the unrepresented person. A lawyer who obtains information from an unrepresented person that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is legally protected from disclosure might also violate Rules 4.4, 8.4(c) and 8.4(d).
- [5] Paragraph (b) does not prohibit a lawyer from seeking to obtain information from an unrepresented person through the use of discovery in litigation or interrogation at trial.
- [6] Paragraph (a) does not apply to lawful covert criminal or civil investigations by government or private lawyers.

Rule 4.3 Dealing with Unrepresented Person.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 1
Disagree = 2
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		COPRAC supports the adoption of Proposed rule 4.3 and the Comments to the Rule.	No response required.
2	Long, Patricia J.	D	No		In Family Law cases, divorcing spouses have a duty to give full financial disclosure. As a Family Law practitioner, I worry I would be accused of a violation of this rule by seeking to get this private financial information under Family Law Code. Examples are needed to describe what constitutes misleading the opposing, unrepresented spouse. Family Law lawyers often must deal with issues of mental illness, substance abuse, and/or cultural differences which can affect a person's perception of being misled. Prior experience with rule violations by opposing counsel being overlooked by the State Bar questions enforcement of proposed rules.	No change in the Rule is necessary. Paragraph (a) and Comment [1] clearly provides that in seeking information on behalf of a client from an unrepresented person, the lawyer may not mislead the person concerning the lawyer's role in the matter, or the identity or interest of the person whom the lawyer represents." If the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the unrepresented person incorrectly believes that the lawyer is disinterested, the lawyer must make reasonable efforts to correct the misunderstanding. "Reasonably" and "reasonable should know" are defined terms for purposes of the rules. See proposed Rule 1.0. Paragraph (a) is based primarily on Model Rule 4.3. a rule that is followed in most jurisdictions and is consistent with case law.
3	Office of Chief Trial Counsel ("OCTC")	M	Yes		OCTC supports this rule, but finds most of the Comments more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 4.3 Dealing with Unrepresented Person.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 1
Disagree = 2
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
4	San Diego County Bar Association	D	Yes		Common law provides sufficient protection against the abuses of lawyers toward the unrepresented without adding a rule of discipline. Comment [4] and [5] state exceptions not found in the Rule itself. Unclear what “reasonable possibility of being in conflict” means and whether it is limited to the present or foreseeable future.	Commission disagreed, in part, because the longstanding Model Rule counterpart and existing California ethics opinions and case law that address this area of public protection favor the guidance that is afforded by having a rule of professional conduct. The Commission made no change because it disagrees. Comment [4] states no exception to paragraph (b), and Comment [5] explains “not otherwise entitled to receive” in paragraph (b). The questioned language comes directly from the Model Rule. The Commission is not aware that it has caused any difficulty and, because the application of the rule necessarily will be fact specific, it does not believe that any meaningful refinement of the language is possible.

Rule 4.3: Dealing with Unrepresented Person

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California has no comparable provision.

District of Columbia: Rule 4.3 contains the same words as ABA Model Rule 4.3, but D.C. divides the rule into paragraphs and subparagraphs.

Florida: The last sentence of Rule 4.3 provides only that a lawyer “shall not give legal advice to an unrepresented person, other than the advice to secure counsel.” Florida also adds a new Rule 4.3(b) that provides as follows:

(b) An otherwise unrepresented person to whom limited representation is being provided or has been provided in accordance with Rule Regulating the Florida Bar 4-1.2 is considered to be unrepresented for purposes of this rule unless the opposing lawyer knows of, or has been provided with, a written notice of appearance under which, or a written notice of time period during which, the opposing lawyer is to communicate with the limited representation lawyer as to the subject matter within the limited scope of the representation.

(Florida’s version of Rule 1.2(c) provides, in part, that “a lawyer and client may agree to limit the objectives or scope of the representation if the limitation is reasonable under the circumstances and the client consents in writing after consultation.”)

Georgia adds that a lawyer shall not:

(c) initiate any contact with a potentially adverse party in a matter concerning personal injury or wrongful death or otherwise related to an accident or disaster involving the person to whom the contact is addressed or a relative of that person, unless the accident or disaster occurred more than 30 days prior to the contact.

Kansas, Maryland, and Michigan retain the pre-2002 version of Rule 4.3.

New Jersey: Rule 4.3 deletes the last sentence of ABA Model Rule 4.3 and adds the following new sentence:

If the person is a director, officer, employee, member, shareholder or other constituent of an organization concerned with the subject of the lawyer's representation but not a person defined by RPC 1.13(a), the lawyer shall also ascertain by reasonable diligence whether the person is actually represented by the organization's attorney pursuant to RPC 1.13(e) or who has a right to such representation on request, and, if the person is not so represented or entitled to representation, the lawyer shall make known to the person that insofar as the lawyer understands, the person is not being represented by the organization's attorney.

New Jersey Rule 4.3 must be read in conjunction with New Jersey Rule 1.13(a), which provides that, for purposes of Rules 4.2 and 4.3, a lawyer employed or retained to represent an organization represents not only the organization but also the members of its "litigation control group," which includes "current agents and employees responsible for, or significantly involved in, the determination of the organization's legal position in the matter. . . ." Former employees who were members of the litigation control group "shall presumptively be deemed to be represented in the matter by the organization's lawyer but may at any time disavow said representation."

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 4.3 tracks the ABA Model Rule except that it substitutes "communicating" for "dealing" as the second word of the rule.

North Carolina and Pennsylvania: Rule 4.3 tracks the substance of ABA Model Rule 4.3, but reorders the language and divides the rule into subparagraphs.

Utah adds Rule 4.3(b), which provides that if a person's counsel does not represent the person in all aspects of a particular matter, a lawyer may consider the person to be entirely "unrepresented" for purposes of this Rule and Rule 4.2, "unless that person's counsel has provided written notice to the lawyer of those aspects of the matter or the time limitation for which the person is represented. Only as to such aspects and time is the person considered to be represented by counsel."

Washington: Washington adds the following new Comment to Rule 4.3: "Government lawyers are frequently called upon by unrepresented persons, and in some instances by the courts, to provide general information on laws and procedures relating to claims against the government. The provision of such general information by government lawyers is not a violation of this Rule."

Wisconsin: The first sentence of Rule 4.3 provides that in dealings on behalf of a client with a person who is not represented by counsel, "a lawyer shall inform such person of the lawyer's role in the matter."

Proposed Rule 4.4 [n/a]

“Respect for Rights of Third Persons”

Rule Is Not Recommended For Adoption

Summary: The Commission recommends against adoption of paragraph (a) of Model Rule 4.4 because of concerns regarding the vagueness and overbreadth of the terms “embarrass, delay, or burden a third party,” and the resulting chilling effect this part of the Rule would have on legitimate litigation activities. Following consideration of subsequent public comment, the Commission also recommends against adoption of paragraph (b) of Model Rule 4.4, in part, because a lawyer’s duties concerning inadvertently transmitted writings often are fact bound inquiries and therefore difficult to specify in rule that will have disciplinary consequences.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☒ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☒ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rule	Rule 3-200.
Statute	Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6128(b); 6068(f).
Case law	Rico v. Mitsubishi Motors Corp. (2007) 42 Cal.4th 807 [68 Cal.Rptr.3d 758]

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption of (Rule 4.4(b)) 5

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption (Rule 4.4(b)) 6

Abstain (Rule 4.4(b)) 0

Favor Recommendation that Rule Not be Adopted (Rule 4.4(a)) 11

Opposed Recommendation that Rule Not be Adopted (Rule 4.4(a)) 0

Abstain (Rule 4.4(a)) 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Commission Minority Position, Known Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

Minority Position Included. (See Introduction, & Rule/Comment Comparison Chart): ☒ Yes ☐ No

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

The Commission is now recommending that no aspect of Model Rule 4.4 should be adopted. Some public commenters including, including the San Diego Bar Association Ethics Committee and the ethics law professor group urged that Model Rule 4.4(a) be adopted.

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 4.4* Respect for Rights of Third Persons

July 2010

(Following the June 15, 2010 public comment deadline, a rule is not recommended for adoption.)

INTRODUCTION:

Model Rule 4.4(a) seeks to regulate lawyer conduct that embarrasses, delays, or burdens a third person. It also prohibits a lawyer from obtaining evidence through means that violate the rights of a third person. The Commission recommends against adoption of Model Rule 4.4(a) because of concerns regarding the vagueness and overbreadth of the terms “embarrass, delay, or burden a third party,” and the resulting chilling effect this part of the Rule would have on legitimate litigation activities.

Model Rule 4.4(b) provides that a lawyer who receives a document relating to the lawyer’s representation of a client and “knows or reasonably should know” that the document was inadvertently sent shall promptly notify the sender. The Commission also recommends against adoption of paragraph (b) of Model Rule 4.4, in part, because a lawyer’s duties concerning inadvertently transmitted writings often are fact bound inquiries and therefore difficult to specify in rule that will have disciplinary consequences. In addition, case law may continue to evolve in this area of lawyer conduct in response to variations in factual situations.

Minority position: A minority of the Commission agrees with OCTC, and with the group of 29 ethics law professors and other commenters that Rule 4.4(a) provides important protection regarding the rights of third persons and should be adopted. Paragraph (a) has been the rule in most states for more than a quarter century without a showing that the rule has been misapplied or that it improperly chills legitimate advocacy. The majority's concern not only lacks empirical evidence but speaks only to the first part of paragraph (a). The majority does not address the second provision that prohibits the use of methods of obtaining evidence that violate the legal rights of third persons. Both paragraph (a) and (b) are consistent with existing California law. Many rules entail "fact bound inquiries" and paragraph (b) provides a clear and consistent standard of what is expected of lawyers in the case of an inadvertently transmitted document. The recommendation not to adopt this rule will signal to lawyers and the public that the legal rights of third persons are not entitled to the same protection in California as they are in other jurisdictions.

* No Rule is recommended for adoption.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) In representing a client, a lawyer shall not use means that have no substantial purpose other than to embarrass, delay, or burden a third person, or use methods of obtaining evidence that violate the legal rights of such a person.	~~(a) In representing a client, a lawyer shall not use means that have no substantial purpose other than to embarrass, delay, or burden a third person, or use methods of obtaining evidence that violate the legal rights of such a person.~~	The Commission recommends against adopting paragraph (a) because of a concern over the chilling effect it would have on legitimate advocacy since many proper litigation tactics may result in embarrassing opposing parties or delaying litigation. Where the lawyer engages in extreme delay of the client's case for personal gain, see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6128(b). Minority position: The explanation for rejecting paragraph (a) only speaks to the first part of the paragraph and does not address the prohibition against using methods of obtaining evidence that violates the legal rights of third persons. There is no legal or factual support for concluding that either part of paragraph (a) would chill legitimate advocacy. Model Rule 4.4(a) has been in effect in most jurisdictions for more than 25 years without proof that the rule has not been properly applied. A rule protecting the rights of third persons provides important public protection and has been endorsed by OCTC, the group of 29 ethics law professors and the San Diego Bar Ass'n' Ethics Committee.
(b) A lawyer who receives a document relating to the representation of the lawyer's client and knows or reasonably should know that the document was inadvertently sent shall promptly notify the sender.	~~(b) A lawyer who receives a document relating to the representation of the lawyer's client and knows or reasonably should know that the document was inadvertently sent shall promptly notify the sender.~~	Following consideration of subsequent public comment, the Commission also recommends against adoption of paragraph (b) of Model Rule 4.4, in part, because a lawyer's duties concerning inadvertently transmitted writings often are fact bound inquiries and therefore difficult to specify in rule that will have disciplinary consequences. Minority position: paragraph (b) is consistent with California case law and should be recommended for adoption. The application of

* No Rule is recommended for adoption. Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		many rules of profession conduct depend on the particular facts. This rule articulates a clear and well established standard that lawyer are required to satisfy under existing case law.

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] Responsibility to a client requires a lawyer to subordinate the interests of others to those of the client, but that responsibility does not imply that a lawyer may disregard the rights of third persons. It is impractical to catalogue all such rights, but they include legal restrictions on methods of obtaining evidence from third persons and unwarranted intrusions into privileged relationships, such as the client-lawyer relationship.	~~[1] Responsibility to a client requires a lawyer to subordinate the interests of others to those of the client, but that responsibility does not imply that a lawyer may disregard the rights of third persons. It is impractical to catalogue all such rights, but they include legal restrictions on methods of obtaining evidence from third persons and unwarranted intrusions into privileged relationships, such as the client-lawyer relationship.~~	See explanation of paragraphs (a) and (b).
[2] Paragraph (b) recognizes that lawyers sometimes receive documents that were mistakenly sent or produced by opposing parties or their lawyers. If a lawyer knows or reasonably should know that such a document was sent inadvertently, then this Rule requires the lawyer to promptly notify the sender in order to permit that person to take protective measures. Whether the lawyer is required to take additional steps, such as returning the original document, is a matter of law beyond the scope of these Rules, as is the question of whether the privileged status of a document has been waived. Similarly, this Rule does not address the legal duties of a lawyer who receives a document that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know may have been wrongfully obtained by the sending person. For purposes of this Rule, "document" includes e-mail or	~~[2] Paragraph (b) recognizes that lawyers sometimes receive documents that were mistakenly sent or produced by opposing parties or their lawyers. If a lawyer knows or reasonably should know that such a document was sent inadvertently, then this Rule requires the lawyer to promptly notify the sender in order to permit that person to take protective measures. Whether the lawyer is required to take additional steps, such as returning the original document, is a matter of law beyond the scope of these Rules, as is the question of whether the privileged status of a document has been waived. Similarly, this Rule does not address the legal duties of a lawyer who receives a document that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know may have been wrongfully obtained by the sending person. For purposes of this Rule, "document" includes e-mail or~~	See explanation of paragraphs (a) and (b).

ABA Model Rule Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
other electronic modes of transmission subject to being read or put into readable form.	~~other electronic modes of transmission subject to being read or put into readable form.~~
[3] Some lawyers may choose to return a document unread, for example, when the lawyer learns before receiving the document that it was inadvertently sent to the wrong address. Where a lawyer is not required by applicable law to do so, the decision to voluntarily return such a document is a matter of professional judgment ordinarily reserved to the lawyer. See Rules 1.2 and 1.4.	~~[3] Some lawyers may choose to return a document unread, for example, when the lawyer learns before receiving the document that it was inadvertently sent to the wrong address. Where a lawyer is not required by applicable law to do so, the decision to voluntarily return such a document is a matter of professional judgment ordinarily reserved to the lawyer. See Rules 1.2 and 1.4.~~	See explanation of paragraphs (a) and (b).

Rule 4.4: Duties Concerning Inadvertently Transmitted Writings

(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to the Public Comment Draft)

~~A lawyer who receives a writing that obviously appears to be privileged or confidential or subject to the work product doctrine, and where it is reasonably apparent that the writing was inadvertently sent or produced, shall promptly notify the sender.~~

~~professional judgment ordinarily reserved to the lawyer. See Rules 1.2 and 1.4.~~

COMMENT

~~[1]—The purpose of this Rule is to prevent unwarranted intrusions into privileged or confidential relationships.~~

~~[2]—Paragraph (b) recognizes that lawyers sometimes receive documents that are obviously privileged or confidential and were inadvertently sent or produced by opposing parties or their lawyers. If a lawyer knows or where it is reasonably apparent that such a document was sent inadvertently, then this Rule requires the lawyer to promptly notify the sender in order to permit that person to take protective measures. Whether the lawyer is required to take additional steps, such as returning the original document, is a matter of law beyond the scope of these Rules, as is the question of whether the privileged status of a document has been waived. See Rico v. Mitsubishi Motors Corp. (2007) 42 Cal.4th 807, 818 [68 Cal.Rptr.3d 758]. Similarly, this Rule does not address the legal duties of a lawyer who receives a document that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know may have been wrongfully obtained by the sending person.~~

~~[3]—A lawyer may choose to return a document unread, for example, when the lawyer learns before receiving the document that it was inadvertently sent to the wrong address. Where a lawyer is not required by applicable law to do so, the decision to voluntarily return such a document is a matter of~~

Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal to adopt only para.(b) of the Model Rule Counterpart)

Rule 4.4(a)

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal stating a recommendation that para.(a) not be adopted.)

[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6 Agree = 1
Disagree = 3
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	Following consideration of the public comments received, the Commission determined to not recommend adoption of any aspect of ABA Model Rule 4.4. (See Introduction to the Model Rule Comparison Explanation chart.)
2	Hazard, Geoffrey, Deborah Rhode & Richard Zitrin (ethics law professors group)	M	Yes	(a)	The Commission is concerned that such a rule might have "a chilling effect on legitimate advocacy." However, no such chilling effect has been shown to exist in the vast number of states that have approved Rule 4.4(a). Perhaps this is because the rule does not simply prevent actions that embarrass, delay and burden. Rather it limits a lawyer where s/he uses "means that have no substantial purpose other than" these impermissible goals. Emphasis added.	Following consideration of the public comments received, the Commission determined to not recommend adoption of any aspect of ABA Model Rule 4.4. (See Introduction to the Model Rule Comparison Explanation chart.)
6	Law Practice Management & Technology Section, State Bar of California	D	Yes		LPMT's comment on Proposed Rule 4.4 concerns what was originally paragraph (b) but now constitutes the entire rule. We recommend that Proposed Rule 4.4 be removed from the Commission's proposed	Following consideration of the public comments received, the Commission determined to not recommend adoption of any aspect of ABA Model Rule 4.4. (See Introduction to the Model Rule Comparison Explanation chart.)

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal to adopt only para.(b) of the Model Rule Counterpart)

Rule 4.4(a)

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal stating a recommendation that para.(a) not be adopted.)

[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6 Agree = 1
Disagree = 3
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					revisions. ABA Model Rule 4.4(b) is as Unsusceptible as 4.4(a) to Migration to the California RPC Rule 4.4 of the ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct (MPRC) – from which Proposed Rule 4.4 is drawn – has always been a bit odd. With the title “Respect for Rights of Third Persons”, MPRC 4.4 paragraph (b) would appear tacked on for lack of a better home. Paragraph (a) is the only part that refers to third persons. The Commission has correctly decided not to keep paragraph (a). It should do the same for paragraph (b). We assume the Commission considered 4.4 because it was already part of the MRPC. Once the Commission decided to consider and revise rules of the MPRC for application to California, Rule 4.4 came up for review. Otherwise we doubt that the Commission would find a need for what has become Proposed Rule 4.4. It has no precedent in the CRPC, and its significance relates primarily to discovery, a topic generally omitted from the CRPC and the current

Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal to adopt only para.(b) of the Model Rule Counterpart)

Rule 4.4(a)

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal stating a recommendation that para.(a) not be adopted.)

[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6 Agree = 1
Disagree = 3
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response proposed rule revisions. Even those in favor of MRPC 4.4(b) [now the entire Proposed Rule 4.4], recognized the anomaly. See, e.g., Orange County Bar Association, Comments at Rule 4.4 Discussion Draft (April 24, 2010) at 24 (“we respectfully raise for consideration whether this provision belongs as part of Rule 4.4 or may be better positioned somewhere else, given that it applies equally to parties and to third persons and does not address merely the rights of third parties.”). Indeed, the Commission decided to split off MRPC 4.4(b), keeping only it, and the narrowing it further. Although the latest version bears the date of April 24, 2010, the Commission’s decision to include MRPC 4.4(b) [in the Public Comment version] presumably occurred before the enactment of the Electronic Discovery Act (“EDA”) (signed by the Governor on June 29, 2009) regarding electronic discovery. In any event, it appears unlikely the Commission took the EDA into account

Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal to adopt only para.(b) of the Model Rule Counterpart)

Rule 4.4(a)

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal stating a recommendation that para.(a) not be adopted.)

[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6 Agree = 1
Disagree = 3
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					because it does not cite the EDA in its listing of Existing California Law section 2031.285 of the California Code of Civil Procedure ("C.C.P."), which regulates inadvertently produced electronically stored information ("ESI") in discovery. In addition, it appears unlikely the Commission took into account the Judicial Council's subsequent related amendments to California Rules of Court, Rule 3.724. Duty to meet and confer. We should hesitate to select from the many California Supreme Court and Court of Appeal decisions regarding what parties and their attorneys must do and create a disciplinary rule where none existed before. In support of Proposed Rule 4.4, the Commission cites Rico v. Mitsubishi Motors Corp. (2007) 42 Cal.4th 807 [68 Cal.Rptr.3d 758]. Rico provides a California rationale for Rule 4.4(b), but it is doubtful that proposed rule 4.4(a) would have made it onto the Commission's plate if there had been no MRPC on the subject. Existing law already gives lawyers the same guidance, if not more.

Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal to adopt only para.(b) of the Model Rule Counterpart)

Rule 4.4(a)

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal stating a recommendation that para.(a) not be adopted.)

[Sorted by Commenter]TOTAL = 6 Agree = 1
Disagree = 3
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Where a statute and a rule of court address a lawyer's conduct in a particular circumstance, we believe the State Bar need not add a separate injunction. Among other reasons, the judicial interpretation of the concepts underlying a particular statute and a rule of court should retain primacy, especially where the application of a disciplinary rule by the State Bar may in time diverge from such judicial interpretation. A particular feature of American jurisprudence is that courts do not give advisory opinions. Rather American case law develops in response to disputes regarding the application of law to specific facts. Even when a senior appellate body, such as the California makes a broad pronouncement, it is left to the lower court to develop the contours of the law as applied, the nuances, and, for example here, such terms as "obviously appears", "reasonably apparent", and, particularly, "inadvertently." It is misguided to focus on the recipient-attorney instead of the producing/sending attorney.

Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal to adopt only para.(b) of the Model Rule Counterpart)

Rule 4.4(a)

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal stating a recommendation that para.(a) not be adopted.)

[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6	Agree = 1
	Disagree = 3
	Modify = 2
	NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Upon reviewing the rule, LPMT Executive Committee members reacted first – when noticing the title of Duties Concerning Inadvertently Transmitted Writings – that the emphasis in any rules governing a lawyer's conduct regarding transmitted writings should be on the duties of the sending or producing lawyer. That is not to say the Commission need add more to rule 4.4 – after all, California Business and Professions Code §6068(e)(1) already deals with a lawyer's disclosure of her or his client's confidential information. In addition the law and practice regarding the inadvertent sending and producing of confidential information is evolving. Rather, the proposed discipline by the State Bar of the receiving attorney for a lack of action is inapt. The State Bar should save its powder and devote its resources to helping lawyers develop procedures to reduce the risk of inadvertently sending a client's confidential information to another. As the Commission has stressed, “the State Bar disciplinary process has limited

Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal to adopt only para.(b) of the Model Rule Counterpart)

Rule 4.4(a)

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal stating a recommendation that para.(a) not be adopted.)

[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6	Agree = 1
	Disagree = 3
	Modify = 2
	NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response resources to investigate and prosecute all alleged unprofessional conduct and that a State Bar disciplinary process should not be the initial or primary remedy . . . when the law provides other . . . remedies.” Proposed Rule 8.4.1 [2-400] Prohibited Discrimination in Law Practice Management and Operation, Explanation of Changes to the California Rule 2-400, at 7. Inadvertent disclosure is a nuanced area, due to differences between litigation-related and transactional exchanges of information. As with the two salient California Supreme Court cases on the issue of inadvertent disclosure, the issue usually arises in the context of litigation. Indeed, the Commission recognizes as much when it inserts “or produced” into the equivalent text of the MRPC: “where it is reasonably apparent that the writing was inadvertently sent or produced, [the receiving lawyer] shall promptly notify the sender.” The Rico court’s agreement with amicus curiae The Product Liability Advisory Council, Inc. refers to the burden’s of responding to “a

Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons (Comments received in response to public comment proposal to adopt only para.(b) of the Model Rule Counterpart) Rule 4.4(a) (Comments received in response to public comment proposal stating a recommendation that para.(a) not be adopted.) [Sorted by Commenter]
TOTAL = 6 Agree = 1 Disagree = 3 Modify = 2 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					request for mass production.” Rico at *5. Hence, the tribunal before which an instance of inadvertent disclosure arises has sufficient authority to sanction attorneys – including referral to the State Bar – if warranted. Metadata’s complexity and still-developing ethical principles warrant that the Commission decline to adopt Proposed Rule 4.4. LPMT has a further concern, particularly as the use of technology by lawyers is right in LPMT’s wheelhouse. Complex issues regarding the receipt of confidential material lie just under the surface of what appears to be a straightforward rule. An important example is that of the propriety of a receiving lawyer’s accessing or viewing metadata in the received item. Metadata is the hidden or embedded data in writing in an electronic medium. For such a writing, The Electronic Discovery Act uses the term “electronically stored information” (ESI). “‘Electronically stored information’ means information that is stored in an electronic

Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal to adopt only para.(b) of the Model Rule Counterpart)

Rule 4.4(a)

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal stating a recommendation that para.(a) not be adopted.)

[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6	Agree = 1
	Disagree = 3
	Modify = 2
	NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					medium.” C.C.P. § 2016.020(e). Examples of metadata include the “properties” in a Microsoft Word file (document), for example, when it was created and last modified. Formulas and comments in a spreadsheet, usually not visible in a printed copy, provide another example. An attorney may be unaware, however, of metadata’s presence or significance because: • Metadata is often hidden. • Metadata is often created automatically by the user’s computer. • As a piece of computer mumbo-jumbo, attorneys may be unaware of what metadata is or that it even exists. • Even those attorneys who know about metadata may be unaware of its special characteristics or what special care must be taken regarding it. • Metadata may be revealed by certain applications’ features such as MS Word’s Track Changes, of which many people are

Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal to adopt only para.(b) of the Model Rule Counterpart)

Rule 4.4(a)

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal stating a recommendation that para.(a) not be adopted.)

[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6 Agree = 1
Disagree = 3
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response unaware. (See full text of comment for more examples) Regarding metadata received from opposing counsel, even outside the context of litigation, several state ethics opinions prohibit the receiving party's viewing of any metadata. This prohibition may even apply to metadata that ordinarily would not be considered confidential – for example, the “full header”⁶ (a.k.a. “Internet header”) of a non-confidential email. Many states' ethics opinions decry such viewing of received metadata as unethical⁸ and worse. The heart of the matter is that such state ethics opinions presume that metadata is per se confidential to its author. Thus, even if the on its face the document is not confidential, these ethics opinions presume that the associated metadata is. There is a broad debate among attorneys who focus on technology and rules of professional conduct regarding those states' ethics opinions. Many criticize them as not

Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal to adopt only para.(b) of the Model Rule Counterpart)

Rule 4.4(a)

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal stating a recommendation that para.(a) not be adopted.)

[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6 Agree = 1
Disagree = 3
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					comprehending the nuances of metadata. It should be noted that several jurisdictions have not adopted – or have specifically rejected – the proscriptions describe above. [See infra LPMT's comments on Proposed Rule 8.5 regarding the difficulties that would arise if a rule such as Proposed Rule 4.4 were part of the CRPC's extraterritorial scope.] California should follow the law as it evolves and not begin to discipline lawyers as prescribed by Proposed Rule 4.4. The rule is unnecessary in light of existing statute and case law. In addition, it is premature and likely unwise considering the many related but unacknowledged issues re e-discovery, including the appropriateness of accessing metadata in a document received from another party or its attorney. For the foregoing reasons, we recommend that Proposed Rule 4.4 be removed from the Commission's proposed revisions.
	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	M	Yes		OCTC is concerned that this Proposed Rule deviates substantially from the ABA Rule by eliminating the ABA's subparagraph (a), which prohibits an attorney from using means that have no substantial purpose other than to	Following consideration of the public comments received, the Commission determined to not recommend adoption of any aspect of ABA Model Rule 4.4. (See Introduction to the Model Rule Comparison Explanation chart.)

Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal to adopt only para.(b) of the Model Rule Counterpart)

Rule 4.4(a)

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal stating a recommendation that para.(a) not be adopted.)

[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6	Agree = 1
	Disagree = 3
	Modify = 2
	NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response embarrass, delay, or burden a third person or use methods of obtaining evidence that violates the legal rights of such a person. The Commission noted that they are concerned regarding the vagueness and over breadth of such terms as embarrass, delay, or burden a third person in the ABA rule and the resulting chilling effect the ABA's rule would have on legitimate litigation activities. OCTC finds this concern unwarranted; and when balanced against the need to prevent litigation abuse, OCTC believes the ABA has it correct. Further, the State Bar Act already prohibits counseling or maintaining actions, proceedings, or defenses only as appear to him or her legal or just (section 6068(c); advancing no fact prejudicial to the honor or reputation of a party or witness (section 6068(f)); and not to encourage either the commencement or the continuance of an action or proceeding from any corrupt motive of passion or interest (section 6068(g)). The current Rules of Professional Conduct already prohibit an attorney from bringing an action, conducting a defense, asserting a position in litigation, or taking an appeal without probable cause and for the purpose of harassing or

Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal to adopt only para.(b) of the Model Rule Counterpart)

Rule 4.4(a)

(Comments received in response to public comment proposal stating a recommendation that para.(a) not be adopted.)

[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 6	Agree = 1
	Disagree = 3
	Modify = 2
	NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response maliciously injuring any person (rule 3-200(A).) The Ninth Circuit has held that a rule prohibiting attorneys from conduct unbecoming a member of the bar is not unconstitutionally vague. (United States v. Hearst (9th Cir. 1981) 638 F2d 1190, 1197.) In fact, subparagraph (a) of the Model Rules would prohibit some of the type of clear misconduct that former section 6068(f) [offensive personality] was attempting to reach. It would do so without the constitutional problems that the Ninth Circuit had with the term “offensive personality.” While some of this misconduct can be handled under other rules, not all of it can or should be and this would give better guidance to the attorneys in this state. OCTC believes that California should follow the rest of the country and that ABA’s paragraph (a) should be adopted. OCTC believes both the Commission’s language in paragraph (b) and the ABA’s language are equally adequate and are consistent with the California Supreme Court’s decision in Rico v. Mitsubishi. We find either acceptable.

Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons (Comments received in response to public comment proposal to adopt only para.(b) of the Model Rule Counterpart) Rule 4.4(a) (Comments received in response to public comment proposal stating a recommendation that para.(a) not be adopted.) [Sorted by Commenter]
TOTAL = 6 Agree = 1 Disagree = 3 Modify = 2 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				Comments [1] and [3]	Comments [1] and [3] seem more appropriate for a treatise, law review article, or ethics opinion.
				Comment [2]	Comment [2] is too long and covers at least two distinct concepts. It could be two Comments.
4	San Diego County Bar Legal Ethics Committee (re adoption of Rule 4.4)	D	Yes	(b)	Draft rule 4.4(b) restricts itself to in, documents that "obviously appears to be privileged or confidential" consistent with Rico v. Mitsubishi. It should be adopted as drafted by the Commission.	Following consideration of the public comments received, the Commission determined to not recommend adoption of any aspect of ABA Model Rule 4.4. (See Introduction to the Model Rule Comparison Explanation chart.)
5	San Diego County Bar Legal Ethics Committee (re recommendation that Rule 4.4(a) not be adopted)	D	Yes	(a)	The Commissions arguments against adopting the current ABA Model Rule 4.4(a) are not persuasive. A prohibition against "means that have no substantial purpose other than to embarrass, delay, or burden a third person, or use methods of obtaining evidence that violate the legal rights of such a person "would not chill legitimate litigation tactics. ABA Model Rule 4.4(a) should be adopted verbatim.	Following consideration of the public comments received, the Commission determined to not recommend adoption of any aspect of ABA Model Rule 4.4. (See Introduction to the Model Rule Comparison Explanation chart.)

Rule 4.4 Respect for Rights of Third Persons (Comments received in response to public comment proposal to adopt only para.(b) of the Model Rule Counterpart) Rule 4.4(a) (Comments received in response to public comment proposal stating a recommendation that para.(a) not be adopted.) [Sorted by Commenter] TOTAL = 6 Agree = 1 Disagree = 3 Modify = 2 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response

Rule 4.4: Respect for Rights of 3rd Persons

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Alabama: Effective June 23, 2008, Alabama Rule 4.4(b) to be subject to the attorney-client privilege or otherwise confidential, and who knows or reasonably should provides:

(b) A lawyer who receives a document that on its face appears know that the document was inadvertently sent, should promptly notify the sender and

(1) abide by the reasonable instructions of the sender regarding the disposition of the document; or

(2) submit the issue to an appropriate tribunal for a determination of the disposition of the document.

Arizona has adopted ABA Model Rule 4.4(b) but, in addition to requiring the lawyer who receives an inadvertently transmitted document to notify the sender, Arizona Rule 4.4(b) requires the lawyer to “preserve the status quo for a reasonable period of time in order to permit the sender to take protective measures.”

California: Rule 3-200(A) provides that a member “shall not seek, accept, or continue employment if the member knows or should know that the objective of such employment is: (A) To bring an action, conduct a defense, assert a position in litigation, or take an appeal, without probable cause and for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring any person.” Rule 5-100 provides:

(A) A member shall not threaten to present criminal, administrative, or disciplinary charges to obtain an advantage in a civil dispute.

(B) As used in paragraph (A) of this rule, the term “administrative charges” means the filing or lodging of a complaint with a federal, state, or local governmental entity which may order or recommend the loss or suspension of a license, or may impose or recommend the imposition of a fine, pecuniary sanction, or other sanction of a quasi-criminal nature but does not include filing charges with an administrative entity required by law as a condition precedent to maintaining a civil action.

(C) As used in paragraph (A) of this rule, the term “civil dispute” means a controversy or potential controversy over the rights and duties of two or more parties under civil law, whether or not an action has been commenced, and includes an administrative proceeding of a quasi-civil nature pending before a federal, state, or local governmental entity.

California Business & Professions Code §§6068(c), 6068(f), and 6068(g) provide that it is the “duty” of an attorney to do all of the following:

(c) To counsel or maintain those actions, proceedings, or defenses only as appear to him or her legal or just, except the defense of a person charged with a public offense. . . .

(f) To advance no fact prejudicial to the honor or reputation of a party or witness, unless required by the justice of the cause with which he or she is charged.

(g) Not to encourage either the commencement or the continuance of an action or proceeding from any corrupt motive of passion or interest.

Section 6128(b) provides that an attorney is guilty of a misdemeanor who “[w]illfully delays his client’s suit with a view to his own gain.”

Colorado adds the following additional paragraph to Rule 4.4:

(c) Unless otherwise permitted by court order, a lawyer who receives a document relating to the representation of the lawyer’s client and who, before reviewing the document, receives notice from the sender that the document was inadvertently sent, shall not examine the document and shall abide by the sender’s instructions as to its disposition.

Colorado has also adopted the following Rule 4.5:

(a) A lawyer shall not threaten criminal, administrative or disciplinary charges to obtain an advantage in a civil matter nor shall a lawyer present or participate in presenting criminal, administrative or disciplinary charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.

(b) It shall not be a violation of Rule 4.5 for a lawyer to notify another person in a civil matter that the lawyer reasonably believes that the other’s conduct may violate criminal, administrative or disciplinary rules or statutes.

(A version of Rule 4.5(a) is in the ABA Code of Professional Responsibility as DR 7-105 but is limited to criminal conduct.)

District of Columbia: Rule 4.4(b) provides that a lawyer who receives a “writing” relating to the representation of a client and “knows, before examining the writing, that it has been inadvertently sent, shall not examine the writing, but shall notify the sending party and abide by the instructions of the sending party regarding the return or destruction of the writing.”

Florida: Rule 4.4(a) provides that a lawyer shall not “knowingly” use methods of obtaining evidence that violate the legal rights of a third person. Florida has adopted ABA Model Rule 4.4(b) verbatim.

Idaho: Rule 4.4 provides that a lawyer, in representing a client, shall not use means that have no substantial purpose other than to embarrass, delay, or burden a third person, “including conduct intended to appeal to or engender bias against a person on account of that person's gender, race, religion, national origin, or sexual preference, whether that bias is directed to other counsel, court personnel, witnesses, parties, jurors, judges, judicial officers, or any other participants." In subparagraphs (a)(3) and (a)(4), Idaho retains the substance of DR 7-105 of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility. Idaho Rule 4.4(b) deletes the phrase "relating to the representation of the lawyer's client."

Kansas and Michigan omit Rule 4.4(b).

Kentucky: In the rules effective July 15, 2009, Kentucky Rule 4.4(b) provides as follows:

(b) A lawyer who receives a document relating to the representation of the lawyer's client and knows or reasonably should know that the document was inadvertently sent shall:

- (1) refrain from reading the document,
- (2) promptly notify the sender, and
- (3) abide by the instructions of the sender regarding its disposition.

Louisiana adopts ABA Model Rule 4.4(a) verbatim but modifies Rule 4.4(b) to provide as follows:

(b) A lawyer who receives a writing that, on its face, appears to be subject to the attorney-client privilege or otherwise confidential, under circumstances where it is clear that the writing was not intended for the receiving lawyer, shall refrain from examining the writing, promptly notify the sending lawyer, and return the writing.

Maryland adds the following paragraph (b) to Rule 4.1(a):

(b) In communicating with third persons, a lawyer representing a client in a matter shall not seek information relating to the matter that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is protected from disclosure by statute or by an established evidentiary privilege, unless the protection has been waived. The lawyer who receives information that is protected from disclosure shall (1) terminate the communication immediately and (2) give notice of the disclosure to any tribunal in which the matter is pending and to the person entitled to enforce the protection against disclosure.

New Jersey adopts ABA Model Rule 4.4(a) verbatim but modifies Rule 4.4(b) to provide as follows:

(b) A lawyer who receives a document and has reasonable cause to believe that the document was inadvertently sent shall not read the document or, if he or she has begun to do so, shall stop reading the document, promptly notify the sender, and return the document to the sender.

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 4.4(a) substitutes "embarrass or harm" for "embarrass, delay, or burden" a third person. Rule 4.4(b) is the same as the Model Rule.

North Carolina: Rule 4.4(b) replaces the ABA phrase “document relating to the representation of the lawyer’s client” with the single word “writing.”

North Dakota adds a new Rule 4.5(a) that is identical to ABA Model Rule 4.4(b), and adds a new Rule 4.5(b) providing that a lawyer who receives a document under the circumstances specified in Rule 4.5(a) “does not violate Rule 1.2 or Rule 1.4 by not communicating to or consulting with the client regarding the receipt or the return of the document.”

Ohio: Rule 4.4(a) adds the word “harass” to the list of forbidden purposes.

South Carolina adds a new Rule 4.5, which says a lawyer “shall not present, participate in presenting, or threaten to present criminal or professional disciplinary charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.”

Texas: Rule 4.04(b) forbids lawyers to present or threaten disciplinary or criminal charges “solely to gain an advantage in a civil matter” or civil, criminal, or disciplinary charges “solely” to prevent participation by a complainant or witness in a disciplinary matter.

Virginia: Rule 4.4(a) deletes the word “substantial” before the word “purpose.” Virginia has not adopted Rule 4.4(b).

Wyoming adds Rule 4.4(c), which provides that a lawyer “shall not present, participate in presenting, or threaten to present criminal charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.”

Proposed Rule 5.1 [RPC N/A]

“Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers”

(XDraft #10, 9/13/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 5.1 imposes a duty on partners, lawyers with comparable managerial authority and lawyers who directly supervise other lawyers to oversee the conduct of lawyers within a law firm or other organization, including corporate and government legal departments, and legal services organizations. The Rule does not impose vicarious liability, i.e., the doctrine of respondeat superior is not applicable. Rather, a supervising lawyer is subject to discipline only if the lawyer fails to make reasonable efforts to ensure compliance with the Rules by firm lawyers, orders or ratifies the misconduct of another lawyer, or has knowledge of the other lawyer's misconduct and fails to take steps to prevent or mitigate the consequences.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart
Rule	Comment
☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 3-110, Discussion

Statute

Case law

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(14 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 14 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 10
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 2
Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Dissenting Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart ☒ Yes ☐ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☐ No Known Stakeholders

☒ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

The California Public Defenders Association, California Council of Chief Defenders and several District Attorney and Public Defender offices in California. See Public Comment Chart for a complete list of commenters.

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

The California Public Defenders Association and several District Attorney and Public Defender offices in California expressed concerns that adoption of proposed Rule 5.1 could result in the imposition of vicarious responsibility on experienced lawyers in the office who informally take on the mentoring of recent hires. They also argue that adoption of the Rule would discourage such mentoring, which is critical in the training of new lawyers. See Public Comment Chart for Commission responses to their expressed concerns.

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 5.1* Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 5.1, which substantially tracks Model Rule 5.1, imposes a duty on partners, lawyers with comparable managerial authority, and lawyers who directly supervise other lawyers, to oversee the conduct of lawyers within a law firm or other organization, including corporate and government legal departments, and legal services organizations. The Rule does not impose vicarious liability, i.e., the doctrine of respondeat superior is not applicable. Rather, a supervising lawyer is subject to discipline only if the lawyer fails to make reasonable efforts to ensure compliance with the Rules by firm lawyers, orders or ratifies the misconduct of another lawyer, or has knowledge of the other lawyer's misconduct and fails to take steps to prevent or mitigate the consequences.

Paragraph (a) of the rule imposes a duty on a lawyer who is a partner or who, individually or with other lawyers, possesses comparable managerial authority to make reasonable efforts to establish measures to ensure compliance with the rules of professional conduct. Paragraph (b) imposes a duty on a lawyer, whether or not a partner or a manager, who has direct supervisory responsibility over another lawyer to make reasonable efforts to ensure the other lawyer complies with the rules. Under paragraph (c)(1) any lawyer may be held responsible in discipline for another lawyer's ethical violation if the lawyer orders or ratifies the misconduct. Under paragraph (c)(2), a lawyer who is a partner, manager or direct supervisor of the offending lawyer, may be subject to discipline for the other lawyer's misconduct if the lawyer has knowledge of it at a time when its consequences can be avoided or mitigated and fails to take reasonable remedial action.

* Proposed Rule, XDraft 10 (9/13/09).

INTRODUCTION (Continued):

Current California Law and Variations in Other Jurisdictions. Model Rule 5.1 is the rule in nearly every jurisdiction, with only minor variations. For example, both Illinois and New Hampshire impose Rule 5.1's duties on "each" managing partner, in effect preventing such managerial partners from delegating responsibility to a single managing partner. New York and New Jersey both provide for discipline of a law firm, in addition to the individual lawyers in the firm, under Rule 5.1. All jurisdictions have adopted some version of Model Rule 5.1(c). California does not have a counterpart to Rule 5.1. However, the Discussion to current rule 3-110 provides that the duties set forth in the rule include the duty to supervise the work of subordinate lawyers and non-lawyer employees and agents. Proposed Rule 5.1 establishes in a separate rule the principle of supervisory responsibility and is consistent with existing California case law.

Minority. A minority of the Commission views proposed Rule 5.1 as an overly ambitious rule that represents a serious departure from the traditional notion of viewing compliance with ethical rules as the personal responsibility of individual lawyers, instead effectively imposing a strict liability standard on lawyers who did not engage in misconduct. The minority takes the position that the Rule unfairly imposes collective guilt on innocent lawyers in a firm for violations of the Rules of Professional Conduct by other lawyers, without adequately describing in advance what conduct will fall within its proscriptions and without clearly delineating which management or supervisory lawyers will be subject to the Rule. Specifically, the minority opposes the Rule because the Rule: (1) imposes discipline for negligent conduct contrary to the Supreme Court's admonition that the disciplinary system should not be used to punish acts of negligence; (2) fails to articulate specific, definable or consistent standards for enforcement, and as result, is unconstitutionally vague; and (3) fails to give notice as to which lawyers in a law firm are subject to its requirements because the phrase "comparable managerial authority" is vague and undefined.

A detailed statement of the minority's position, with citation to authority, is provided in these materials after the Comment Comparison Chart, below. See Minority Dissent.

Proposed Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers and Supervisory Lawyers Rules Revision Commission – Minority Dissent

1. Rule 5.1 Unfairly Imposes Disciplinary Liability On Innocent Lawyers For The Misdeeds And Culpable Misconduct Of Other Lawyers.

Rule 5.1 represents a serious departure from the traditional notion of viewing compliance with ethical rules as the personal responsibility of individual lawyers and unfairly imposes collective guilt on innocent lawyers in a firm for violations of the Rules of Professional Conduct of other lawyers without describing in advance what conduct will fall within its proscriptions and without clearly delineating which management or supervisory lawyers will be subject to the Rule.

In general, the Rule blurs the lines between the entity and its individual constituents. Partnerships and corporations are created precisely so as to create a separate entity from its constituents. But the Rule for all practical purposes potentially imputes the conduct of an individual culpable lawyer to the entity, and then effectively imputes the wrongdoing lawyer's conduct to its innocent constituents. This has been done because the Rules were not designed to impose discipline on law firms.

However, regulating law firms through their constituent lawyers is the wrong approach.

Paragraph (a) requires that partners in a law firm, which is defined to include lawyers with “comparable managerial authority” in corporate law departments and public agencies, “make reasonable efforts to ensure that the firm has in effect measures giving reasonable assurance that all lawyers in the firm comply with the Rules of Professional Conduct.” Paragraph (b) provides that a “lawyer having direct supervisory authority over another lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the other lawyer complies with the Rules of Professional Conduct.”

Paragraphs (a) and (b) are in stark contrast to accepted notions of derivative liability found in tort law where liability is only imposed on a person for the tortious conduct of another if the person (a) knows the other's conduct constitutes a breach of duty and gives substantial assistance or encouragement or (b) gives substantial assistance in accomplishing a tortious result and the person's own conduct, separately considered, constitutes a breach of duty to the third person. Saunders v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal.App.4th 832, 846, citing, Rest.2d Torts, § 876. See also Casey v. United States Bank Nat. Assn. (2005) 127 Cal.App.4th 1138, 1146 (“a defendant can only aid and abet another's tort if the defendant knows what that tort is”).

Similarly, under criminal law a person who aids and abets the commission of a crime must have (1) knowledge of the unlawful purpose of the perpetrator and (2) act with the intent of committing, encouraging, or facilitating the commission of the offense. People v. Beeman (1984) 35 Cal.3d 547, 554-555.

In contrast, Paragraphs (a) and (b) contain no knowledge or scienter requirement, and as explained below, operate to impose discipline ex post facto.

2. Rule 5.1 Imposes Discipline For Negligent Conduct Contrary To The Supreme Court's Admonition That The Disciplinary System Should Not Be Used To Punish Acts Of Negligence.

The Rule as a whole is structured so that innocent lawyers in a law firm will be disciplined for negligence. Rather than imposing discipline for intentional or knowing conduct, Rule 5.1 imposes discipline on lawyers for negligence by embracing what are essentially tort standards--"reasonable efforts" and "reasonable assurance" that another lawyer will comply with the Rules of Professional Conduct. However, the Supreme Court has rejected the concept that lawyers should be disciplined for negligence or mistakes in judgment. As the Supreme Court has noted: "This court has long recognized the problems inherent in using disciplinary proceedings to punish attorneys for negligence, mistakes in judgment, or lack of experience or legal knowledge." Lewis v. State Bar (1981) 23 Cal.3d 683, 688.

Worse yet, the Rule imposes discipline on lawyers merely for their perceived managerial authority because of their status as partners. The Rule approaches strict liability by bringing within its scope not only lawyers with actual managerial authority, but also lawyers who "individually or together with other lawyers" possess what the Rule characterizes as "comparable managerial authority."

3. The Rule Fails To Articulate Specific, Definable Or Consistent Standards For Enforcement, And As Result, Is Unconstitutionally Vague.

Paragraphs (a) and (b) do not tell lawyers before the fact what measures or firm policies will run afoul of the Rule or what policies should be implemented to prevent violations of other rules. Paragraph (a) provides no standards to guide lawyers as to what "reasonable efforts" should be taken, or what "measures" should be in place that would "give reasonable assurance" that other lawyers comply with an endless number of Rules and ways in which the Rules may be violated. Once there is an underlying violation of a Rule, innocent lawyers in a firm will be blamed for failing to implement measures that would have prevented the violation by the culpable lawyer. The Rule is inherently hindsight-driven.

Similarly, paragraph (b) offers no guidance to supervisory lawyers as to what "reasonable efforts" are sufficient to ensure that a supervised lawyer complies with the Rules of Professional Conduct.

Paragraphs (a) and (b) purport to tell lawyers to abide by a standard of care, without defining what that standard is. Paragraphs (a) and (b), by imposing "reasonable efforts" or "reasonable assurances," effectively require proof of breach of an unstated standard of care—which must be proved by expert testimony, essentially converting a State Bar proceeding into a claim for legal malpractice. Proof of a violation will turn on a “swearing contest” between experts testifying on questions of law practice management—i.e., as to whether a violation of a given Rule by a given lawyer could have been prevented by supposed “reasonable efforts” of other individual lawyers in firm—all with the benefit of hindsight.

Because proof of a violation will turn on undefined and unarticulated standards of care, rather than articulated and objective standards, the Rule will invite State Bar prosecutors to engage in post hoc second-guessing of firm policies and procedures to establish the causation element that paragraphs (a) and (b) necessarily implicates. In looking for violations, a State Bar prosecutor can “audit” the firm’s practices to find areas where the firm did not have appropriate preventive measures and file charges against individual lawyers for what are perceived to be the “bad practices” of the firm.

In fact, a violation can be charged under paragraphs (a) and (b) of Rule 5.1 even where there has been no underlying misconduct or violation of any Rule by a subordinate or other lawyer. By analogy, the Supreme Court has rejected attempts to impose liability for abstract negligence where there has been no proof of a causal nexus between the conduct and the injury—i.e., “abstract negligence” or “negligence in the air.” Saelzler v. Advanced Group 400 (2001) 25 Cal.4th 763, 773 (“abstract negligence,” without proof of a causal connection between the defendant’s breach and the plaintiff’s injury, is insufficient); Noble v. Los Angeles Dodgers, Inc. (1985) 168 Cal.App.3d 912 (classic example of abstract negligence where property owner’s security did not comport with plaintiffs’ expert’s notion of “adequacy,” but whether there was no proof of any causal connection between that negligence and the injury.) Similarly, paragraphs (a) and (b) allow the State Bar to bring disciplinary charges against lawyers for abstract negligence where there has been no underlying predicate violation of another Rule by a subordinate or other lawyer.

By failing to articulate specifically tailored regulatory standards, paragraphs (a) and (b) are unconstitutionally vague. To avoid a vagueness challenge a statute or regulation must be sufficiently clear so as to give a fair warning of the conduct prohibited, and to provide a standard against which conduct can be uniformly judged by courts. Morrison v. State Board of Education (1969) 1 Cal.3d 214, 231. “A vague law impermissibly delegates basic policy matters to policemen, judges, and juries for resolution on an ad hoc and subjective basis, with the attendant dangers of arbitrary and discriminatory application.” Grayned v. City of Rockford (1972) 408 U.S. 104, 108-109. To pass constitutional muster, a rule or statute must be sufficiently definite to provide adequate notice of the conduct proscribed and must provide sufficiently definite guidelines to prevent arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement. Tobe v. City of Santa Ana (1995) 9 Cal.4th 1069, 1106-1107.

4. The Rule Also Fails To Give Notice As To Which Lawyers In A Law Firm Are Subject To Its Requirements Since The Phrase "Comparable Managerial Authority" Is Vague And Undefined.

Rule 5.1 is aimed at partners in a law firm, and lawyers who possess "comparable managerial authority" in a law firm, as that term is used in paragraphs (a) and (c)(2). However, this term is inherently vague and over broad.

First, because the definition of "law firm" in Rule 1.0.1 broadly includes not only private law partnerships and law corporations, but also government entities and corporate legal departments, the attempt to analogize law partnerships to government lawyers and corporate legal departments is misplaced. Government offices and corporate legal departments are not operated like partnerships. Transmuting a "partnership model" to government agencies makes no sense. This is especially true with respect to government agencies in which managerial authority may be vested in an elected official. As an elected official, the head of a public office may have greater obligations to the public at large that override the objectives of Rule 5.1. For example, if caseloads of public defenders or deputy district attorneys are excessively high due to budget cuts such that those attorneys cannot adequately perform their professional responsibilities to clients, the Rule would mandate that lawyer supervisors, including heads of public defenders' offices and elected district attorneys, monitor the workload of the supervised lawyers to ensure that the workloads do not exceed a level that may be competently handled. (See ABA Formal Opinion 06-441.) It is questionable, given the separation of powers doctrine, whether the State Bar and the Supreme Court can dictate to public officials facing severe budget cuts that they must reduce work loads by hiring more attorneys, while ignoring the corresponding costs to the public and taxpayers. (Comment [6] attempts to address the issue, but raises more questions than it answers.)

Second, even as applied to private law firms, the term "comparable management authority" is hopelessly vague and reaches partners who have no management authority. The reality today is that even lawyers who have the title of "partner" frequently have no management role in the firm and are more like employees than owners of the firm. Smith v. Diner (7th Cir. 2006) 453 F.3d 971 ("Someone can be called a 'partner,' for example, yet in fact lack any authority to make decisions for the firm; he might be just as much at the mercy of those who really run the firm as a clerk would be."); EEOC v. Sidley Austin Brown & Wood (7th Cir. 2002) 315 F.3d 696 (partners may be deemed "employees" where they lack any meaningful control over the firm's affairs).

Comment [5] attempts to address this problem by suggesting that lawyers with "intermediate managerial responsibilities" "may not" be required to implement particular measures under paragraph (a) if the law firm has a designated managing lawyer or a management committee. However, by stating that the Rule "may not" apply to certain lawyers, Comment [5] fails to resolve the underlying uncertainty and only serves to highlight the fact that the term "comparable managerial authority" is vague and undefined. In fact, Comments [5] and [7] are inconsistent in that the latter states (as an exception not found in the Rule itself) that "Paragraph (a) does not apply to lawyers who have intermediate managerial responsibilities in public sector legal agencies and law departments."

Paragraph (b) is similarly unclear as to which lawyers have "direct supervisory authority." In theory, all partners in a law firm have "direct supervisory authority" over all subordinate lawyers in the firm. The Rule fails to limit its scope to the supervision by a specific partner over a specific subordinate lawyer concerning a specific case.

Paragraph (b) is thus overly broad in its potential to reach innocent lawyers.

Finally, the inherent problems with this overly ambitious Rule are illustrated by the large number of comments that accompany it (15 comments, twice the number in the ABA Model Rule). Rather than adding clarity to the Rule, the comments merely expose its flaws.

In conclusion, the deficiencies in the Rule unfairly operate to impose disciplinary liability on innocent lawyers by invoking what amounts to a strict liability standard. It is an overly broad, shotgun approach to regulation.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) A partner in a law firm, and a lawyer who individually or together with other lawyers possesses comparable managerial authority in a law firm, shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the firm has in effect measures giving reasonable assurance that all lawyers in the firm conform to the Rules of Professional Conduct.	(a) A partner in a law firm, and a lawyer who individually or together with other lawyers possesses comparable managerial authority in a law firm, shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the firm has in effect measures giving reasonable assurance that all lawyers in the firm ~~conform to~~ comply with the these Rules of Professional Conduct and the State Bar Act.	Paragraph (a) is identical to Model Rule 5.1(a) except for replacing "conform to" with "complies with" for to clarify that the provision is mandatory. No change in meaning is intended. In addition, "these Rules" has been substituted for "the Rules of Professional Conduct" because the former is the standard term used throughout the Rules.
(b) A lawyer having direct supervisory authority over another lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the other lawyer conforms to the Rules of Professional Conduct.	(b) A lawyer having direct supervisory authority over another lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the other lawyer ~~conforms to~~ complies with the these Rules of Professional Conduct and the State Bar Act.	Paragraph (b) is identical to Model Rule 5.1(b) with the exception of the same change as in paragraph (a). Again, no change in meaning is intended.
(c) A lawyer shall be responsible for another lawyer's violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct if:	(c) A lawyer shall be responsible for another lawyer's violation of ~~the these Rules of Professional Conduct~~ and the State Bar Act if:	Paragraph (c). The introductory clause to paragraph (c) is identical to Model Rule 5.1(c).
(1) the lawyer orders or, with [knowledge] of the specific conduct, ratifies the conduct involved; or	(1) the lawyer orders or, with knowledge of the specific conduct, ratifies the conduct involved; or	Subparagraph (c)(1) is identical to Model Rule 5.1(c)(1).

* Proposed Rule, XDraft 10 (9/13/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(2) the lawyer is a partner or has comparable managerial authority in the law firm in which the other lawyer practices, or has direct supervisory authority over the other lawyer, and knows of the conduct at a time when its consequences can be avoided or mitigated but fails to take reasonable remedial action.	(2) the lawyer is a partner, or individually or together with other lawyers has comparable managerial authority, in the law firm in which the other lawyer practices, or has direct supervisory authority over the other lawyer, and knows of the conduct at a time when its consequences can be avoided or mitigated but fails to take reasonable remedial action.	Subparagraph (c)(2) is identical to Model Rule (c)(2) except it has been changed to conform the wording with the language in paragraph (a). This additional language clarifies that the responsibility to take reasonable remedial action under this paragraph applies when the lawyer is a partner or, individually or together with other lawyers, has comparable managerial authority.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] Paragraph (a) applies to lawyers who have managerial authority over the professional work of a firm. See Rule 1.0(c). This includes members of a partnership, the shareholders in a law firm organized as a professional corporation, and members of other associations authorized to practice law; lawyers having comparable managerial authority in a legal services organization or a law department of an enterprise or government agency; and lawyers who have intermediate managerial responsibilities in a firm. Paragraph (b) applies to lawyers who have supervisory authority over the work of other lawyers in a firm.	Paragraph (a) – Duties Of Partners and Managers To Reasonably Assure Compliance with the Rules. [1] Paragraph (a) applies to lawyers who have managerial authority over the professional work of a law firm. See Rule 1.0.1 (Law Firm definition).	Headings have been added to separate the comments pertaining to the three paragraphs under the rule. The second sentence in Model Rule Comment [1] has been deleted because not all partners in law firms today are equity partners exercising managerial or supervisory authority over lawyers, particularly those lawyers with whom they do not regularly collaborate. The first sentence and the reference to the definition of law firm in rule 1.0.1 sufficiently identifies lawyers with managerial authority under the rule.
[2] Paragraph (a) requires lawyers with managerial authority within a firm to make reasonable efforts to establish internal policies and procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance that all lawyers in the firm will conform to the Rules of Professional Conduct. Such policies and procedures include those designed to detect and resolve conflicts of interest, identify dates by which actions must be taken in pending matters, account for client funds and property and ensure that inexperienced lawyers are properly supervised.	[2] Paragraph (a) requires lawyers with managerial authority within a law firm to make reasonable efforts to establish internal policies and procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance that all lawyers in the law firm will comply with these Rules and the State Bar Act. Such policies and procedures include those designed to detect and resolve conflicts of interest, identify dates by which actions must be taken in pending matters, account for client funds and property, and ensure that inexperienced lawyers are properly supervised.	Comment [2] is based on Model Rule 5.1, Cmt. [2]. The Commission recommends several changes to conform to non-substantive language changes in paragraph (a). The word “law” has been added as a modifier of “firm” because “law firm” is a defined term in these Rules.

* Proposed Rule, XDraft 10 (9/13/2009). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[3] Paragraph (a) is also intended to apply to internal policies and procedures of a law firm that involve compensation and career development of lawyers in the law firm that may induce a violation of these Rules and the State Bar Act. See Rule 2.1 and Rule 8.4(a).	Comment [3] is has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It clarifies that the duty of lawyers with managerial authority to make reasonable efforts to have measures in place to ensure conformity with the rules applies to internal policies and procedures affecting lawyer compensation and career development that might induce a violation of the rules.
[3] Other measures that may be required to fulfill the responsibility prescribed in paragraph (a) can depend on the firm's structure and the nature of its practice. In a small firm of experienced lawyers, informal supervision and periodic review of compliance with the required systems ordinarily will suffice. In a large firm, or in practice situations in which difficult ethical problems frequently arise, more elaborate measures may be necessary. Some firms, for example, have a procedure whereby junior lawyers can make confidential referral of ethical problems directly to a designated senior partner or special committee. See Rule 5.2. Firms, whether large or small, may also rely on continuing legal education in professional ethics. In any event, the ethical atmosphere of a firm can influence the conduct of all its members and the partners may not assume that all lawyers associated with the firm will inevitably conform to the Rules.	[4] Whether particular measures or efforts satisfy the requirements of paragraph (a) may depend upon the law firm's structure and the nature of its practice, including the size of the law firm, whether it has more than one office location or practices in more than one jurisdiction, or whether the firm or its partners engage in any ancillary business.	Comment [4] is a revised and more succinct version of Model Rule 5.1, Cmt. [3]. No change in meaning is intended.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[5] A partner, shareholder or other lawyer in a law firm who has intermediate managerial responsibilities, including lawyers with intermediate managerial responsibilities in a legal services organization, a law department of an enterprise or a governmental agency, may not be required to implement particular measures under paragraph (a) if the law firm has a designated managing lawyer charged with that responsibility, or a management committee or other body that has appropriate managerial authority and is charged with that responsibility. However, such a lawyer remains responsible to take corrective steps if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the delegated body or person is not providing or implementing measures as required by this Rule.	Comment [5] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It is included to clarify that paragraph(a) does not apply to every lawyer with intermediate managerial responsibilities where the organization has a designated managing lawyer or committee or other body with appropriate managerial authority and is charged with the responsibilities under paragraph (a). Comment [5] was added to address concerns raised by lawyers practicing in public offices that adopting the Model Rule without further clarification would deter mid-level managers in such offices from engaging in the kind of informal mentoring that is critical to a subordinate lawyer's development in that environment. The comment further clarifies that a lawyer with intermediate responsibilities continues to be responsible to take corrective measures if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the person or body with managerial authority is not complying with the requirements of the rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[6] Paragraph (a) also requires managers, including lawyers who are in charge of a public sector legal agency or the head of a legal department, to make reasonable efforts to assure that other lawyers in the agency or department comply with these Rules and the State Bar Act. The creation and implementation of reasonable guidelines relating to the assignment of cases and the distribution of workload among lawyers in the agency or department are examples of the kind of measures contemplated by the Rule. See, e.g., State Bar of California, GUIDELINES ON INDIGENT DEFENSE SERVICES DELIVERY SYSTEMS (2006).	Comment [6] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It clarifies that the duties under paragraph (a) apply to lawyers in charge of public sector legal agencies, such as a public defender, and head of corporate legal departments. Similar to Comment [5], Comment [6] was added to address concerns raised by public defenders that adoption of the Model Rule language without clarification would undermine the ability of managing lawyers in those organizations to make effective use of available resources. Of particular concern to these managing lawyers was a recently-issued ABA Ethics Opinion that conflicts with the principles set forth in the State Bar's Guidelines, cited in Comment [6]. See ABA Formal Ethics Op. 06-441 (5/13/06) ("Ethical Obligations of Lawyers Who Represent Indigent Criminal Defendants When Excessive Caseloads Interfere With Competent and Diligent Representation"). The second sentence of Comment [6] has been added to make it clear that reasonable guidelines relating to case assignments and distribution of work among lawyers in the organization will satisfy the requirements of the rule.
	[7] Paragraph (a) does not apply to lawyers who have intermediate managerial responsibilities in public sector legal agencies and law departments. See comments [5] and [8].	Comment [7] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It clarifies that the conduct of a lawyer with intermediate managerial responsibilities in a public sector legal agency or law department is governed by paragraph (b) and not paragraph (a) of the rule. See also Explanation of Changes for proposed Comments [5] and [6].

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	Paragraph (b) – Duties of Lawyer as Supervisor [8] Paragraph (b) applies to lawyers who have direct supervisory authority over the work of other lawyers whether or not the subordinate lawyers are members or employees of the law firm. Paragraph (b) applies to all supervisory lawyers including lawyers who are not partners in a partnership or shareholders in a professional law corporation. Paragraph (b) also applies to lawyers who have intermediate managerial responsibilities in public sector legal agencies and law departments.	Comment [8] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It is intended to distinguish between those lawyers in a law firm who have responsibilities as direct supervisors under paragraph (b) of the rule from those with managerial responsibilities under paragraph (a). The Comment also points out that paragraph (b) applies to supervising attorneys who are inside as well as outside of the law firm. The Model Rule does not have a separate comment on the duties of a lawyer under paragraph (b) of the rule.
	[9] A lawyer with supervisory responsibility over another lawyer has an obligation to make reasonable efforts to insure that the other lawyer complies with these Rules and the State Bar Act. Adequate supervision is particularly important when dealing with inexperienced lawyers.	Comment [9] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It expands on the last sentence in Model Rule 5.1, Cmt. [2].
	[10] Whether a lawyer has direct supervisory authority over another lawyer in particular circumstances is a question of fact. A lawyer in charge of a particular client matter has direct supervisory authority over the work of other lawyers engaged in the matter.	Comment [10] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It is intended to provide further guidance on when a lawyer has direct supervisory responsibilities under paragraph (b) of the rule. The first sentence is the second sentence from Model Rule 5.1, Cmt. [5], and is included in this comment because it pertains to paragraph (b).

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[4] Paragraph (c) expresses a general principle of personal responsibility for acts of another. See also Rule 8.4(a).	Paragraph (c) – Responsibility for Another's Lawyer's Violation	Model Rule 5.1, Cmt. [4] has been replaced with the heading to the comments regarding paragraph (c) of the rule. See also proposed Comment [14].
	[11] Paragraph (c)(1) applies to any lawyer who orders or knowingly ratifies another lawyer's conduct that violates these Rules and the State Bar Act.	Comment [11] is new and is intended to explain the scope of paragraph (c)(1). The Model Rule does not have a separate comment regarding paragraph (c)(1) of the rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[5] Paragraph (c)(2) defines the duty of a partner or other lawyer having comparable managerial authority in a law firm, as well as a lawyer who has direct supervisory authority over performance of specific legal work by another lawyer. Whether a lawyer has supervisory authority in particular circumstances is a question of fact. Partners and lawyers with comparable authority have at least indirect responsibility for all work being done by the firm, while a partner or manager in charge of a particular matter ordinarily also has supervisory responsibility for the work of other firm lawyers engaged in the matter. Appropriate remedial action by a partner or managing lawyer would depend on the immediacy of that lawyer's involvement and the seriousness of the misconduct. A supervisor is required to intervene to prevent avoidable consequences of misconduct if the supervisor knows that the misconduct occurred. Thus, if a supervising lawyer knows that a subordinate misrepresented a matter to an opposing party in negotiation, the supervisor as well as the subordinate has a duty to correct the resulting misapprehension.	[12] Under paragraph (c)(2) a partner or other lawyer having comparable managerial authority in a law firm, and a lawyer who has direct supervisory authority over performance of specific legal work by another lawyer, may be responsible for the conduct of the other lawyer, whether or not the other lawyer is a member or employee of the law firm. Appropriate remedial action by a partner or managing lawyer would depend on the immediacy of that lawyer's involvement and the seriousness of the misconduct. A supervisor is required to intervene to prevent avoidable consequences of misconduct if the supervisor knows that the misconduct occurred. Thus, if a supervising lawyer knows that a subordinate misrepresented a matter to an opposing party in negotiation, the supervisor as well as the subordinate has a duty to correct the resulting misapprehension consistent with the lawyers' duty not to disclose confidential information under Business and Professions Code section 6068, subdivision (e)(1).	Comment [12] is based on Model Rule 5.1, Cmt. [5] and is intended to capture the concept that paragraph (c)(2) applies to both partners and other lawyers with managerial authority in a law firm and lawyers who have direct supervisory authority. The comment also clarifies that the rule applies whether or not the lawyer is a member or employee of the firm. Grammatical changes have been made for clarity without changing the substance of the comment. The final sentence has been added as a reminder that corrective action required by the rule should be consistent with the lawyer's duties under Business and Professions Code section 6068(e).

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[6] Professional misconduct by a lawyer under supervision could reveal a violation of paragraph (b) on the part of the supervisory lawyer even though it does not entail a violation of paragraph (c) because there was no direction, ratification or knowledge of the violation.	[13] A supervisory lawyer may violate paragraph (b) by failing to make the efforts required under that paragraph, even if the lawyer does not violate paragraph (c) by knowingly directing or ratifying the conduct, or where feasible, failing to take reasonable remedial action.	Comment [13] is based on Model Rule 5.1, Cmt. [6]. However, it has been rewritten so that its concept is more clearly stated, i.e., even if a lawyer does not violate paragraph (c) because the lawyer neither ordered or ratified a subordinate lawyer's conduct, or failed to avoid or mitigate the known consequences of the conduct, the lawyer acting as direct supervisor may nevertheless violate paragraph (b).
[7] Apart from this Rule and Rule 8.4(a), a lawyer does not have disciplinary liability for the conduct of a partner, associate or subordinate. Whether a lawyer may be liable civilly or criminally for another lawyer's conduct is a question of law beyond the scope of these Rules.	[14] Paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) create independent bases for discipline. This Rule does not impose vicarious responsibility on a lawyer for the acts of another lawyer who is in or outside the law firm. Apart from paragraph (c) of this Rule and Rule 8.4(a), a lawyer does not have disciplinary liability for the conduct of a partner, associate, or subordinate. Whether a lawyer may be liable civilly or criminally for another lawyer's conduct is a question of law beyond the scope of these Rules.	Comment [14] is based on Model Rule 5.1, Cmt. [7]. The Model Rule comment has been expanded to make it clear that the obligations under paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of the Rule provide independent bases for discipline and do not impose vicarious responsibility for the acts of another attorney.
[8] The duties imposed by this Rule on managing and supervising lawyers do not alter the personal duty of each lawyer in a firm to abide by the Rules of Professional Conduct. See Rule 5.2(a).	~~[15]~~ This Rule does not alter the personal duty of each lawyer in a law firm to comply with the Rules of Professional Conduct. See Rule 5.2(a).	Comment [15] is based on Model Rule 5.1, Cmt. [8]. No change in meaning is intended by the clarifying revisions.

Rule ~~5.1~~ 3-110 Failing to Act Competently Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers

(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

- (a) A partner in a law firm, and a lawyer who individually or together with other lawyers possesses comparable managerial authority in a law firm, shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the firm has in effect measures giving reasonable assurance that all lawyers in the firm comply with these Rules and the State Bar Act.
- (b) A lawyer having direct supervisory authority over another lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the other lawyer complies with these Rules and the State Bar Act.
- (c) A lawyer shall be responsible for another lawyer's violation of these Rules and the State Bar Act if:
- (1) the lawyer orders or, with knowledge of the specific conduct, ratifies the conduct involved; or
 - (2) the lawyer is a partner, or individually or together with other lawyers has comparable managerial authority, in the law firm in which the other lawyer practices, or has direct supervisory authority over the other lawyer, and knows of the conduct at a time when its consequences can be avoided or mitigated but fails to take reasonable remedial action.

~~(A) A member shall not intentionally, recklessly, or repeatedly fail to perform legal services with competence.~~

~~(B) For purposes of this rule, "competence" in any legal service shall mean to apply the 1) diligence, 2) learning and skill, and 3) mental, emotional, and physical ability reasonably necessary for the performance of such service.~~

~~(C) If a member does not have sufficient learning and skill when the legal service is undertaken, the member may nonetheless perform such services competently by 1) associating with or, where appropriate, professionally consulting another lawyer reasonably believed to be competent, or 2) by acquiring sufficient learning and skill before performance is required.~~

Discussion:

~~The duties set forth in rule 3-110 include the duty to supervise the work of subordinate attorney and non-attorney employees or agents. (See, e.g., Waysman v. State Bar (1986) 41 Cal.3d 452; Trousil v. State Bar (1985) 38 Cal.3d 337, 342 [211 Cal.Rptr. 525]; Palomo v. State Bar (1984) 36 Cal.3d 785 [205 Cal.Rptr. 834]; Crane v. State Bar (1981) 30 Cal.3d 117, 122; Black v. State Bar (1972) 7 Cal.3d 676, 692 [103 Cal.Rptr. 288; 499 P.2d 968]; Vaughn v. State Bar (1972) 6 Cal.3d 847, 857-858 [100 Cal.Rptr. 713; 494 P.2d 1257]; Moore v. State Bar (1964) 62 Cal.2d 74, 81 [41 Cal.Rptr. 161; 396 P.2d 577].)~~

~~In an emergency a lawyer may give advice or assistance in a matter in which the lawyer does not have the skill ordinarily required where referral to or consultation with another lawyer would be impractical. Even in an emergency, however, assistance should be limited to that reasonably necessary in the circumstances. (Amended by order of Supreme Court, operative September 14, 1992.)~~

COMMENT

Paragraph (a) - Duties Of Partners and Managers To Reasonably Assure Compliance with the Rules.

- [1] Paragraph (a) applies to lawyers who have managerial authority over the professional work of a law firm. See Rule 1.0.1 (Law Firm definition).
- [2] Paragraph (a) requires lawyers with managerial authority within a law firm to make reasonable efforts to establish internal policies and procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance that all lawyers in the law firm will comply with these Rules and the State Bar Act. Such policies and procedures include those designed to detect and resolve conflicts of interest, identify dates by which actions must be taken in pending matters, account for client funds and property, and ensure that inexperienced lawyers are properly supervised.
- [3] Paragraph (a) is also intended to apply to internal policies and procedures of a law firm that involve compensation and career development of lawyers in the law firm that may induce a violation of these Rules and the State Bar Act. See Rule 2.1 and Rule 8.4(a).
- [4] Whether particular measures or efforts satisfy the requirements of paragraph (a) may depend upon the law firm's structure and the nature of its practice , including the size of the law firm, whether it has more than one office location or practices in more than one jurisdiction, or whether the firm or its partners engage in any ancillary business.
- [5] A partner, shareholder or other lawyer in a law firm who has intermediate managerial responsibilities, including lawyers with intermediate managerial responsibilities in a legal services organization, a law department of an enterprise or a governmental agency, may not be required to implement particular measures under paragraph (a) if the law firm has a designated managing lawyer charged with that responsibility, or a management committee or other body that has appropriate managerial authority and is charged with that responsibility. However, such a lawyer remains responsible to take corrective steps if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the delegated body or person is not providing or implementing measures as required by this Rule.

- [6] Paragraph (a) also requires managers, including lawyers who are in charge of a public sector legal agency or the head of a legal department, to make reasonable efforts to assure that other lawyers in the agency or department comply with these Rules and the State Bar Act. The creation and implementation of reasonable guidelines relating to the assignment of cases and the distribution of workload among lawyers in the agency or department are examples of the kind of measures contemplated by the Rule. See, e.g., State Bar of California, GUIDELINES ON INDIGENT DEFENSE SERVICES DELIVERY SYSTEMS (2006).
- [7] Paragraph (a) does not apply to lawyers who have intermediate managerial responsibilities in public sector legal agencies and law departments. See comments [5] and [8].

Paragraph (b) - Duties of Lawyer as Supervisor

- [8] Paragraph (b) applies to lawyers who have direct supervisory authority over the work of other lawyers whether or not the subordinate lawyers are members or employees of the law firm. Paragraph (b) applies to all supervisory lawyers including lawyers who are not partners in a partnership or shareholders in a professional law corporation. Paragraph (b) also applies to lawyers who have intermediate managerial responsibilities in public sector legal agencies and law departments.

- [9] A lawyer with supervisory responsibility over another lawyer has an obligation to make reasonable efforts to insure that the other lawyer complies with these Rules and the State Bar Act. Adequate supervision is particularly important when dealing with inexperienced lawyers.
- [10] Whether a lawyer has direct supervisory authority over another lawyer in particular circumstances is a question of fact. A lawyer in charge of a particular client matter has direct supervisory authority over the work of other lawyers engaged in the matter.

Paragraph (c) - Responsibility for Another's Lawyer's Violation

- [11] Paragraph (c)(1) applies to any lawyer who orders or knowingly ratifies another lawyer's conduct that violates these Rules and the State Bar Act.
- [12] Under paragraph (c)(2) a partner or other lawyer having comparable managerial authority in a law firm, and a lawyer who has direct supervisory authority over performance of specific legal work by another lawyer, may be responsible for the conduct of the other lawyer, whether or not the other lawyer is a member or employee of the law firm. Appropriate remedial action by a partner or managing lawyer would depend on the immediacy of that lawyer's involvement and the seriousness of the misconduct. A supervisor is required to intervene to prevent avoidable consequences of misconduct if the supervisor knows that the misconduct occurred. Thus, if a supervising lawyer knows that a subordinate misrepresented a matter to an opposing party in negotiation, the supervisor as well as the subordinate has a duty to correct the resulting misapprehension consistent with the lawyers' duty not to disclose confidential information under Business and Professions Code section 6068, subdivision (e)(1).

- [13] A supervisory lawyer may violate paragraph (b) by failing to make the efforts required under that paragraph, even if the lawyer does not violate paragraph (c) by knowingly directing or ratifying the conduct, or where feasible, failing to take reasonable remedial action.
- [14] Paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) create independent bases for discipline. This Rule does not impose vicarious responsibility on a lawyer for the acts of another lawyer who is in or outside the law firm. Apart from paragraph (c) of this Rule and Rule 8.4(a), a lawyer does not have disciplinary liability for the conduct of a partner, associate, or subordinate. Whether a lawyer may be liable civilly or criminally for another lawyer's conduct is a question of law beyond the scope of these Rules.
- [15] This Rule does not alter the personal duty of each lawyer in a law firm to comply with the Rules of Professional Conduct. See Rule 5.2(a).

Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers

(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) A partner in a law firm, and a lawyer who individually or together with other lawyers possesses comparable managerial authority in a law firm, shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the firm has in effect measures giving reasonable assurance that all lawyers in the firm comply with these Rules and the State Bar Act.
- (b) A lawyer having direct supervisory authority over another lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the other lawyer complies with these Rules and the State Bar Act.
- (c) A lawyer shall be responsible for another lawyer's violation of these Rules and the State Bar Act if:
 - (1) the lawyer orders or, with knowledge of the specific conduct, ratifies the conduct involved; or
 - (2) the lawyer is a partner, or individually or together with other lawyers has comparable managerial authority, in the law firm in which the other lawyer practices, or has direct supervisory authority over the other lawyer, and knows of the conduct at a time when its consequences can be avoided or mitigated but fails to take reasonable remedial action.

COMMENT

Paragraph (a) – Duties Of Partners and Managers To Reasonably Assure Compliance with the Rules.

- [1] Paragraph (a) applies to lawyers who have managerial authority over the professional work of a law firm. See Rule 1.0.1 (Law Firm definition).
- [2] Paragraph (a) requires lawyers with managerial authority within a law firm to make reasonable efforts to establish internal policies and procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance that all lawyers in the law firm will comply with these Rules and the State Bar Act. Such policies and procedures include those designed to detect and resolve conflicts of interest, identify dates by which actions must be taken in pending matters, account for client funds and property, and ensure that inexperienced lawyers are properly supervised.
- [3] Paragraph (a) is also applies to internal policies and procedures of a law firm that involve compensation and career development of lawyers in the law firm that may induce a violation of these Rules and the State Bar Act. See Rule 2.1 and Rule 8.4(a).
- [4] Whether particular measures or efforts satisfy the requirements of paragraph (a) may depend upon the law firm's structure and the nature of its practice , including the size of the law firm, whether it has more than one office location or practices in more than one jurisdiction, or whether the firm or its partners engage in any ancillary business.

- [5] A partner, shareholder or other lawyer in a law firm who has intermediate managerial responsibilities, including lawyers with intermediate managerial responsibilities in a legal services organization, a law department of an enterprise or a governmental agency, may not be required to implement particular measures under paragraph (a) if the law firm has a designated managing lawyer charged with that responsibility, or a management committee or other body that has appropriate managerial authority and is charged with that responsibility. However, such a lawyer remains responsible to take corrective steps if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the delegated body or person is not providing or implementing measures as required by this Rule.
- [6] Paragraph (a) also requires managers, including lawyers who are in charge of a public sector legal agency or the head of a legal department, to make reasonable efforts to assure that other lawyers in the agency or department comply with these Rules and the State Bar Act. The creation and implementation of reasonable guidelines relating to the assignment of cases and the distribution of workload among lawyers in the agency or department are examples of the kind of measures contemplated by the Rule. See, e.g., State Bar of California, GUIDELINES ON INDIGENT DEFENSE SERVICES DELIVERY SYSTEMS (2006).
- [7] Paragraph (a) does not apply to lawyers who have intermediate managerial responsibilities in public sector legal agencies and law departments. See comments [5] and [8].

Paragraph (b) – Duties of Lawyer as Supervisor

- [8] Paragraph (b) applies to lawyers who have direct supervisory authority over the work of other lawyers whether or not the subordinate lawyers are members or employees of the law firm. Paragraph (b) applies to all supervisory lawyers including lawyers who are not partners in a partnership or shareholders in a professional law corporation. Paragraph (b) also applies to lawyers who have intermediate managerial responsibilities in public sector legal agencies and law departments.
- [9] A lawyer with supervisory responsibility over another lawyer has an obligation to make reasonable efforts to insure that the other lawyer complies with these Rules and the State Bar Act. Adequate supervision is particularly important when dealing with inexperienced lawyers.
- [10] Whether a lawyer has direct supervisory authority over another lawyer in particular circumstances is a question of fact. A lawyer in charge of a particular client matter has direct supervisory authority over the work of other lawyers engaged in the matter.

Paragraph (c) – Responsibility for Another's Lawyer's Violation

- [11] Paragraph (c)(1) applies to any lawyer who orders or knowingly ratifies another lawyer's conduct that violates these Rules and the State Bar Act.
- [12] Under paragraph (c)(2) a partner or other lawyer having comparable managerial authority in a law firm, and a lawyer who has direct supervisory authority over performance of specific legal work by another lawyer, may be responsible for the conduct of the other lawyer, whether or not the other lawyer is a member or employee of the law firm. Appropriate remedial action by a partner or managing lawyer would depend on the immediacy of that lawyer's involvement and the seriousness of the misconduct. A supervisor is required to intervene to prevent avoidable consequences of misconduct if the supervisor knows that the misconduct occurred. Thus, if a supervising lawyer knows that a subordinate misrepresented a matter to an opposing party in negotiation, the supervisor as well as the subordinate has a duty to correct the resulting misapprehension consistent with the lawyers' duty not to disclose confidential information under Business and Professions Code section 6068, subdivision (e)(1).

- [13] A supervisory lawyer may violate paragraph (b) by failing to make the efforts required under that paragraph, even if the lawyer does not violate paragraph (c) by knowingly directing or ratifying the conduct, or where feasible, failing to take reasonable remedial action.
- [14] Paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) create independent bases for discipline. This Rule does not impose vicarious responsibility on a lawyer for the acts of another lawyer who is in or outside the law firm. Apart from paragraph (c) of this Rule and Rule 8.4(a), a lawyer does not have disciplinary liability for the conduct of a partner, associate, or subordinate. Whether a lawyer may be liable civilly or criminally for another lawyer's conduct is a question of law beyond the scope of these Rules.
- [15] This Rule does not alter the personal duty of each lawyer in a law firm to comply with the Rules of Professional Conduct. See Rule 5.2(a).

Rule 5.1 Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	A	Yes		OCTC supports the Proposed Rule as it is simply a codification of existing California law. There are too many Comments, many are too long and cover subjects and discussions best left to treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions. OCTC supports Comments [7], [13], [14] and [15].	No response required. As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations. No response required.
2	San Diego County Bar Association	M	Yes		In Comment [4], there is a redundant phrase that may be deleted.	Commission implemented suggested revision.
3	State Bar Law Practice Management & Technology Section (LPMT)	A	Yes		LPMT supports Proposed Rule 5.1 and its core principle that a subordinate lawyer cannot be used as a scapegoat by a law firm. The dissent is misguided in its suggestion that only the “guilty” lawyer should be responsible for negligence.	No response required.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 5.1: Responsibilities of Partners, Managers, and Supervisory Lawyers

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California has no counterpart to Rule 5.1.

District of Columbia: Rule 5.1 substantially tracks the Model Rule.

Illinois provides that “[e]ach” partner or lawyer shall make the reasonable efforts specified in Rule 5.1(a) and (b).

New Hampshire Rules 5.1(a) and (b) impose duties on “each” partner in a firm, “each” lawyer with comparable managerial authority, and “each” lawyer with direct supervisory authority. A New Hampshire Comment explains that the change “is intended to emphasize that the obligations created by the rule are shared by all of the managers of a law firm and cannot be delegated to one manager by the others.”

New Jersey begins Rule 5.1(a) with: “Every law firm and organization authorized by the Court Rules to practice law in this jurisdiction . . .” instead of “A partner in a law firm.” Rule 5.1(c)(2) applies only to lawyers having “direct supervisory authority”; it deletes “is a partner or has comparable managerial authority in the law firm in which the other lawyer practices.”

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 5.1 provides:

(a) A law firm shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that all lawyers in the firm conform to these Rules.

(b)(1) A lawyer with management responsibility in a law firm shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that other lawyers in the law firm conform to these Rules.

(2) A lawyer with direct supervisory authority over another lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the supervised lawyer conforms to these Rules.

(c) A law firm shall ensure that the work of partners and associates is adequately supervised, as appropriate. A lawyer with direct supervisory authority over another lawyer shall adequately supervise the work of the other lawyer, as appropriate. In either case, the degree of supervision required is that which is reasonable under the circumstances, taking into account factors such as the experience of the person whose work is being supervised, the amount of work involved in a particular matter, and the likelihood that ethical problems might arise in the course of working on the matter.

(d) A lawyer shall be responsible for a violation of these Rules by another lawyer if:

(1) the lawyer orders or directs the specific conduct or, with knowledge of the specific conduct, ratifies

it; or

(2) the lawyer is a partner in a law firm or is a lawyer who individually or together with other lawyers possesses comparable managerial responsibility in a law firm in which the other lawyer practices or is a lawyer who has supervisory authority over the other lawyer; and

(i) knows of such conduct at a time when it could be prevented or its consequences avoided or mitigated but fails to take reasonable remedial action; or

(ii) in the exercise of reasonable management or supervisory authority should have known of the conduct so that reasonable remedial action could have been taken at a time when the consequences of the conduct could have been avoided or mitigated.

Oregon: Rule 5.1 deletes the language of ABA Model Rules 5.1(a) and (b), but adopts ABA Model Rule 5.1(c) verbatim.

Texas: The text of Texas Rule 5.01 has no equivalent to ABA Model Rules 5.1(a) and (b), but Comment 6 to Texas Rule 5.01 provides:

Wholly aside from the dictates of these rules for discipline, a lawyer in a position of authority in a firm or government agency or over another lawyer should feel a moral compunction to make reasonable efforts to ensure that the office, firm, or agency has in effect appropriate procedural measures giving reasonable assurance that all lawyers in the office conform to these rules. This moral obligation, although not required by these rules, should fall also upon lawyers who have intermediate managerial responsibilities in the law department of an organization or government agency.

Texas Rule 5.01(b), which is similar to ABA Model Rule 5.1(c)(2), also applies to “the general counsel of a government agency’s legal department.”

Proposed Rule 5.2 [n/a]
“Responsibilities of a Subordinate Lawyer”
(XDraft #6, 9/17/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 5.2 confirms that a subordinate lawyer must comply with the Rules of Professional Conduct and State Bar Act notwithstanding that the subordinate is acting under the direction of a supervisory lawyer and provides guidance to subordinates in those situations.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☐ Existing California Law

Rule

Statute

Case law

- ☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

- ☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(14 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 14 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 11

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 1

Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Dissenting Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart ☐ Yes ☒ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☐ No Known Stakeholders

☒ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

Representatives from the California Public Defenders Association and various Public Defender offices in California. See Public Comment Chart for a complete list of commenters.

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

Representatives from the California Public Defenders Association and various Public Defender offices in California expressed concerns that adoption of proposed Rule 5.2 could result in subordinate lawyers not following the direction of supervisory lawyers, even in situations where the supervisor's decision is a reasonable resolution of an arguable question of professional duty. Please see Public Comment Chart for Commission response to their concerns.

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 5.2* Responsibilities of a Subordinate Lawyer

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 5.2 addresses the responsibilities of a subordinate lawyer and is intended to work in conjunction with Rules 5.1 and 5.3. Paragraph (a) substantially follows Model Rule 5.2(a) in requiring that a subordinate lawyer comply with the rules of professional conduct and the State Bar Act when the lawyer acts under the supervision or direction of another lawyer or other person. Paragraph (b) tracks Model Rule 5.2(b) by providing that a subordinate lawyer who abides by a supervisory lawyer's reasonable resolution of an arguable question of professional responsibility does not violate the Rules or the State Bar Act.

The comments to the Rule have been modified to conform to California rule drafting style, (See, e.g., Bryan A. Garner, GUIDELINES FOR DRAFTING AND EDITING COURT RULES (1996)), and to more clearly explain a subordinate lawyer's responsibilities when a supervisor has instructed the subordinate to follow a particular course of action.

Although California does not have a comparable rule, the provisions of Rule 5.2 are consistent with existing California law.

Variations in Other Jurisdictions. Rule 5.2 has been adopted in most jurisdictions with the exception of Virginia. Connecticut has deleted paragraph (b) from its rule. New York and Ohio have made minor revisions to the rule.

* Proposed Rule 5.2, XDraft 6 (9/17/09).

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.2 Responsibilities of a Subordinate Lawyer	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.2 Responsibilities of a Subordinate Lawyer	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) A lawyer is bound by the Rules of Professional Conduct notwithstanding that the lawyer acted at the direction of another person.	(a) A lawyer ~~is bound by the~~ shall comply with these Rules ~~of Professional Conduct~~ and the State Bar Act notwithstanding that the lawyer ~~acted~~ acts at the direction of another lawyer or other person.	Paragraph (a) tracks the Model Rule but replaces the less mandatory phrase "is bound by the" to "shall comply with these" to underscore the affirmative obligation lawyers have to comply with the rules. The rule adds the obligation of California lawyers to also comply with the State Bar Act. The paragraph has been modified to be in the active voice in accordance with California rule drafting style and to make clear that the Rule applies whether the lawyers acts at the direction of another lawyer or other person.
(b) A subordinate lawyer does not violate the Rules of Professional Conduct if that lawyer acts in accordance with a supervisory lawyer's reasonable resolution of an arguable question of professional duty.	(b) A subordinate lawyer does not violate ~~the~~ these Rules ~~of Professional Conduct~~ or the State Bar Act if that lawyer acts in accordance with a supervisory lawyer's reasonable resolution of an arguable question of professional duty.	Paragraph (b) tracks the Model Rule, but the phrase "the Rules of Professional Conduct" has been replaced with "these Rules and the State Bar Act" to conform to the wording in other rules.

* Rule 5.2, XDraft 6 (9/17/09); Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.2 Responsibilities a Subordinate Lawyer Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 5.2 Responsibilities of a Subordinate Lawyer Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] Although a lawyer is not relieved of responsibility for a violation by the fact that the lawyer acted at the direction of a supervisor, that fact may be relevant in determining whether a lawyer had the knowledge required to render conduct a violation of the Rules. For example, if a subordinate filed a frivolous pleading at the direction of a supervisor, the subordinate would not be guilty of a professional violation unless the subordinate knew of the document's frivolous character.	[1] The fact that a lawyer is under the supervisory authority of another lawyer does not excuse the subordinate lawyer from the obligation to comply with these Rules or the State Bar Act. Although a lawyer is not relieved of responsibility for a violation by the fact that the lawyer ~~acted~~acts at the direction of a supervisor, that fact may be relevant in determining whether ~~a lawyer had~~ the ~~knowledge required to render conduct a violation of~~lawyer has violated the Rules or the Act. See Rule 8.4(a). For example, if a subordinate ~~filed~~signs a frivolous pleading at the direction of a supervisor, the subordinate would not ~~be guilty of a professional violation~~violate the Rules or the Act unless the subordinate ~~knew~~knows of the document's frivolous character.	Comment [1] is based on Model Rule 5.2, cmt. [1]. A new first sentence has been added to make clear that the fact a lawyer acts under the supervision of another lawyer does not excuse the subordinate lawyer's failure to comply with the Rules or the State Bar Act. No substantive change is intended. The second sentence tracks the first sentence in the Model Rule comment, except that it has been changed to the active voice in accordance with California rule drafting style. In addition, the sentence has been modified to point out more clearly that the fact that a lawyer acts at the direction of a supervisor may be relevant in determining if the lawyer has violated the rules or the State Bar Act, rather than "whether the lawyer had the knowledge required to render conduct a violation of the Rules." A cross reference to proposed Rule 8.4(a), which provides it is professional misconduct to "knowingly assist in, solicit, or induce any violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act" has been added. The third sentence has been revised to more clearly state the example in the active voice in accordance with California rule drafting style.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.2 Responsibilities a Subordinate Lawyer Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 5.2 Responsibilities of a Subordinate Lawyer Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[2] When lawyers in a supervisor-subordinate relationship encounter a matter involving professional judgment as to ethical duty, the supervisor may assume responsibility for making the judgment. Otherwise a consistent course of action or position could not be taken. If the question can reasonably be answered only one way, the duty of both lawyers is clear and they are equally responsible for fulfilling it. However, if the question is reasonably arguable, someone has to decide upon the course of action. That authority ordinarily reposes in the supervisor, and a subordinate may be guided accordingly. For example, if a question arises whether the interests of two clients conflict under Rule 1.7, the supervisor's reasonable resolution of the question should protect the subordinate professionally if the resolution is subsequently challenged.	[2] When lawyers in a supervisor-subordinate relationship encounter a matter involving professional judgment as to ~~ethical duty~~, the ~~supervisor may assume responsibility for making the judgment. Otherwise a consistent course of action~~ lawyers' responsibilities under these Rules or position could not be taken. If the State Bar Act and the question can reasonably be answered only one way, the duty of both lawyers is clear and they are equally responsible for fulfilling it. ~~However~~ Accordingly, if the subordinate lawyer must comply with his or her obligations under paragraph (a). If the question ~~is reasonably arguable~~ can be answered more than one way, someone has to decide upon the ~~course~~ supervisory lawyer may assume responsibility for determining which of ~~action. That authority ordinarily reposes in the supervisor~~ reasonable alternatives to select, and ~~a~~ the subordinate may be guided accordingly. ~~For example, if a question arises whether~~ If the interests of two clients conflict under Rule 1.7, subordinate lawyer believes that the supervisor's ~~reasonable~~ proposed resolution of the ~~arguable~~ question should protect of professional duty would ~~result in a violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act~~, the subordinate ~~professionally if the resolution is subsequently challenged~~ obligated to communicate his or her professional judgment regarding the matter to the supervisory lawyer.	The first three sentences in the Model Rule comment have been combined into a single sentence to more cogently state that the responsibilities of both the supervisor and the subordinate lawyer under the rule and the State Bar Act are clear and are the same when the issue can reasonably be answered only one way. A new second sentence has been added to affirmatively state that in that situation, the lawyer must comply with the requirements of paragraph (a). The third sentence is a revision of the last three sentences in the Model Rule Comment to more clearly state that where the issue can reasonably be answered in more than one way, the supervisory lawyer may assume responsibility to determine which of the reasonable alternatives to select. The sentence adds a further requirement that if the subordinate attorney believes that the resolution of the issue would result in a violation of the Rules or the State Bar Act, the subordinate must communicate that position to the supervisory lawyer.

Rule 5.2 Responsibilities of a Subordinate Lawyer

(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) A lawyer shall comply with these Rules and the State Bar Act notwithstanding that the lawyer acts at the direction of another lawyer or other person.
- (b) A subordinate lawyer does not violate these Rules or the State Bar Act if that lawyer acts in accordance with a supervisory lawyer's reasonable resolution of an arguable question of professional duty.

select, and the subordinate may be guided accordingly. If the subordinate lawyer believes that the supervisor's proposed resolution of the arguable question of professional duty would result in a violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act, the subordinate is obligated to communicate his or her professional judgment regarding the matter to the supervisory lawyer.

COMMENT

- [1] The fact that a lawyer is under the supervisory authority of another lawyer does not excuse the subordinate lawyer from the obligation to comply with these Rules or the State Bar Act. Although a lawyer is not relieved of responsibility for a violation by the fact that the lawyer acts at the direction of a supervisor, that fact may be relevant in determining whether the lawyer has violated the Rules or the Act. See Rule 8.4(a). For example, if a subordinate signs a frivolous pleading at the direction of a supervisor, the subordinate would not violate the Rules or the Act unless the subordinate knows of the document's frivolous character.
- [2] When lawyers in a supervisor-subordinate relationship encounter a matter involving professional judgment as to the lawyers' responsibilities under these Rules or the State Bar Act and the question can reasonably be answered only one way, the duty of both lawyers is clear and they are equally responsible for fulfilling it. Accordingly, the subordinate lawyer must comply with his or her obligations under paragraph (a). If the question reasonably can be answered more than one way, the supervisory lawyer may assume responsibility for determining which of the reasonable alternatives to

Rule 5.2 Responsibilities of a Subordinate Lawyer.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 3
Disagree = 0
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	A	Yes		OCTC is concerned that the Comments are too long, and cover subjects and discussions best left to treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions. OCTC is especially concerned with the last sentence of Comment [1], which states that if a subordinate signs a frivolous pleading at the direction of a supervisor, the subordinate would not violate the Rules of Professional Conduct unless the subordinate knows the document's frivolous character. This Comment is inconsistent with CCP section 128.7 and FRCP rule 11 (and the cases interpreting those rules), which hold that by signing a pleading an attorney is certifying that to the best of the signing attorney's knowledge, information, and belief, formed after an inquiry reasonable under the circumstances, that the matter is not being presented for an improper purpose, that the claims, defenses and other legal contentions	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations. The Commission has eliminated the last sentence in Comment [1] to avoid confusion between the application of this rule and rules of civil procedure

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 5.2 Responsibilities of a Subordinate Lawyer.
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response are warranted under existing law or by nonfrivolous arguments for extension, modification, or reversal of existing law, and the allegations and other factual conclusions have evidentiary support or are likely to have evidentiary support. Gross negligence would support a violation for such conduct.
3	San Diego County Bar Association	A	Yes		Support as drafted	No response required.

Rule 5.2: Responsibilities of a Subordinate Lawyer

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California has no provision comparable to ABA Model Rule 5.2.

Connecticut deletes ABA Model Rule 5.2(b).

District of Columbia has adopted ABA Model Rule 5.2.

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 5.2 is the same as the ABA Model Rule.

Ohio: Rule 5.2(b) omits the word “arguable” before “question of professional duty.”

Virginia omits Rule 5.2.

Proposed Rule 5.3 [RPC 1-300]

“Responsibilities Regarding Nonlawyer Assistants”

(XDraft #10, 10/18/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 5.3 is closely based on Model Rule 5.3 and sets forth the responsibilities of managerial and supervising lawyers in their oversight of nonlawyer assistants. The Rule is consistent with current California law. See California rule 3-110, Discussion.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule

Comment

☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted

☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected

☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule

☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule

☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted

☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected

☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule

☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule

☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rule

RPC 3-110, Discussion.

Statute

Case law

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(14 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 14 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 8

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 4

Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Dissenting Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart ☐ Yes ☒ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 5.3* Responsibilities Regarding Nonlawyer Assistants

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 5.3, which substantially tracks Model Rule 5.3, imposes a duty on partners, lawyers with comparable managerial authority, and lawyers who directly supervise other lawyers, to oversee the conduct of nonlawyers within a law firm or other organization, including corporate and government legal departments, and legal services organizations. The Rule does not impose vicarious liability, i.e., the doctrine of respondeat superior is not applicable. Rather, a supervising lawyer is subject to discipline only if the lawyer fails to make reasonable efforts to ensure compliance with the Rules by nonlawyers under the lawyer's supervision, orders or ratifies the misconduct of a nonlawyer, or has knowledge of the nonlawyer's misconduct and fails to take steps to prevent or mitigate the consequences. The Comment to the proposed Rule largely tracks the Model Rule comment.

Current California Law and Variations in Other Jurisdictions. Model Rule 5.3 is the rule in nearly every jurisdiction, with only minor variations. For example, both Illinois and New Hampshire impose Rule 5.3's duties on "each" managing partner, in effect preventing such managerial partners from delegating responsibility to a single managing partner. New York and New Jersey both provide for discipline of a law firm, in addition to the individual lawyers in the firm, under Rule 5.3. All jurisdictions have adopted some version of Model Rule 5.3(c). California does not have a counterpart to Rule 5.3. However, the Discussion to current rule 3-110 provides that the duties set forth in the rule include the duty to supervise the work of subordinate lawyers and non-lawyer employees and agents. Proposed Rule 5.3 establishes in a separate rule the principle of supervisory responsibility and is consistent with existing California case law.

* Proposed Rule 5.3, XDraft 10 (10/18/09)

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.3 Responsibilities Regarding Nonlawyer Assistants	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.3 Responsibilities Regarding Nonlawyer Assistants	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
With respect to a nonlawyer employed or retained by or associated with a lawyer: (a) a partner, and a lawyer who individually or together with other lawyers possesses comparable managerial authority in a law firm shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the firm has in effect measures giving reasonable assurance that the person's conduct is compatible with the professional obligations of the lawyer;	With respect to a nonlawyer employed or retained by or associated with a lawyer: (a) a partner in a law firm, and a lawyer who individually or together with other lawyers possesses comparable managerial authority in a law firm, shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the firm has in effect measures giving reasonable assurance that the ~~person's~~nonlawyer's conduct is compatible with the professional obligations of the lawyer;	The Introductory paragraph to proposed Rule 5.3 is identical to Model Rule 5.3. Paragraph (a) largely tracks Model Rule 5.3(a), except for two clarifying changes: (1) the phrase "in a law firm" has been added after the words, "a partner," to create a parallel construction with the clause that follows and also to conform to the syntax used in the related Rule 5.1; and (2) "nonlawyer" has been substituted for "person" to refer back to the word "nonlawyer" that is used in the introductory clause.
(b) a lawyer having direct supervisory authority over the nonlawyer shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the person's conduct is compatible with the professional obligations of the lawyer; and	(b) a lawyer having direct supervisory authority over the nonlawyer shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the person's conduct is compatible with the professional obligations of the lawyer; and	Paragraph (b) is identical to Model Rule 5.3(b).
(c) a lawyer shall be responsible for conduct of such a person that would be a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct if engaged in by a lawyer if: (1) the lawyer orders or, with the knowledge of the specific conduct, ratifies the conduct involved; or	(c) a lawyer shall be responsible for conduct of such a person that would be a violation of ~~the~~these Rules ~~of Professional Conduct~~or the State Bar Act if engaged in by a lawyer if: (1) the lawyer orders or, with ~~the~~ knowledge of the specific conduct, ratifies the conduct involved; or	Paragraph (c) largely tracks Model Rule 5.3(c), except that the clause, "individually or together with other lawyers" has been added to subparagraph (c)(2) to parallel the language used in paragraph (a). The deletion of this language is an apparent oversight by the Model Rule drafters. The phrase, "these Rules or the State Bar Act" is a term the Commission has been using throughout the Rules in place of the Model Rules' "the Rules of Professional Conduct."

* Proposed Rule 5.3, XDraft 10 (10/18/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.3 Responsibilities Regarding Nonlawyer Assistants	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.3 Responsibilities Regarding Nonlawyer Assistants	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(2) the lawyer is a partner or has comparable managerial authority in the law firm in which the person is employed, or has direct supervisory authority over the person, and knows of the conduct at a time when its consequences can be avoided or mitigated but fails to take reasonable remedial action.	(2) the lawyer is a partner, or individually or together with other lawyers has comparable managerial authority in the law firm in which the person is employed, or has direct supervisory authority over the person, and knows of the conduct at a time when its consequences can be avoided or mitigated but fails to take reasonable remedial action.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.3 Responsibilities Regarding Nonlawyer Assistants Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 5.3 Responsibilities Regarding Nonlawyer Assistants Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] Lawyers generally employ assistants in their practice, including secretaries, investigators, law student interns, and paraprofessionals. Such assistants, whether employees or independent contractors, act for the lawyer in rendition of the lawyer's professional services. A lawyer must give such assistants appropriate instruction and supervision concerning the ethical aspects of their employment, particularly regarding the obligation not to disclose information relating to representation of the client, and should be responsible for their work product. The measures employed in supervising nonlawyers should take account of the fact that they do not have legal training and are not subject to professional discipline.	[1] Lawyers generally employ assistants in their practice, including secretaries, investigators, law student interns, and paraprofessionals. Such assistants, whether employees or independent contractors, act for the lawyer in rendition of the lawyer's professional services. A lawyer must give such assistants appropriate instruction and supervision concerning the ethical aspects of their employment, particularly regarding the obligation not to disclose confidential information relating to representation of the client, and should be responsible for their work product. (See, e.g., Waysman v. State Bar (1986) 41 Cal.3d 452 [224 Cal.Rptr. 101]; Trousil v. State Bar (1985) 38 Cal.3d 337, 342 [211 Cal.Rptr. 525]; Palomo v. State Bar (1984) 36 Cal.3d 785 [205 Cal.Rptr. 834]; Crane v. State Bar (1981) 30 Cal.3d 117, 122 [177 Cal.Rptr. 670]; Black v. State Bar (1972) 7 Cal.3d 676, 692 [103 Cal.Rptr. 288]; Vaughn v. State Bar (1972) 6 Cal.3d 847, 857-858 [100 Cal.Rptr. 713]; Moore v. State Bar (1964) 62 Cal.2d 74, 81 [41 Cal.Rptr. 161].) The measures employed in instructing and supervising nonlawyers should take account of the fact that they ~~do may~~ not have legal training ~~and are not subject to professional discipline~~.	Comment [1] largely tracks Model Rule 5.3, cmt. [1]. The word “confidential” has been added to the phrase, “information relating to the representation of the client,” because that term (“confidential information relating to the representation of the client”) is a defined term in these Rules. See proposed Rule 1.6, cmts. [3] et seq. Citations to several cases have been added for guidance. These citations are largely carried over from the Discussion to current rule 3-110 (“Competence”). The word “instructing” has been added to the last sentence of Comment [1] because instruction of nonlawyers of their responsibilities as employees of the law firm is an important component of providing assurance nonlawyers’ conduct is compatible with the lawyer’s professional obligations. The word “may” has been substituted for “do” because some nonlawyers will have had legal training. Finally, the last clause of the last sentence of Comment [1] has been deleted because whether a nonlawyer employee is personally subject to discipline is irrelevant to the care a lawyer should take in that person’s instruction and supervision.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.3 Responsibilities Regarding Nonlawyer Assistants Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 5.3 Responsibilities Regarding Nonlawyer Assistants Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[2] Paragraph (a) requires lawyers with managerial authority within a law firm to make reasonable efforts to establish internal policies and procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance that nonlawyers in the firm will act in a way compatible with the Rules of Professional Conduct. See Comment [1] to Rule 5.1. Paragraph (c) specifies the circumstances in which a lawyer is responsible for conduct of a nonlawyer that would be a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct if engaged in by a lawyer.	[2] Paragraph (a) requires lawyers with managerial authority within a law firm to make reasonable efforts to establish internal policies and procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance that nonlawyers in the firm will act in a way compatible with ~~the~~these Rules ~~of Professional Conduct~~and the State Bar Act. See Comment [~~1~~2] to Rule 5.1. ~~Paragraph (b) applies to lawyers who have supervisory authority over the work of a nonlawyer.~~ Paragraph (a) applies to lawyers with managerial authority in corporate and government legal departments and legal service organizations as well as to partners and other managing lawyers in ~~by a lawyer~~private law firms. [3] Paragraph (c) specifies the circumstances in which a lawyer is responsible for conduct of a nonlawyer that would be a violation of ~~the~~these Rules ~~of Professional Conduct or the State Bar Act~~ if engaged in by a lawyer.	The next to last sentence of Model Rule 5.3, cmt. [2] has been deleted because it simply restates paragraph (b). In its place, a sentence has been added to clarify that the obligations set forth in Rule 5.3 apply equally to lawyers with managerial authority in corporate and government legal departments and legal service organizations. The phrase, “these Rules or the State Bar Act” is a term the Commission has been using throughout the Rules in place of the Model Rules’ “the Rules of Professional Conduct.” Comment [3] is identical to the last sentence of Model Rule 5.3, cmt. [2]. The sentence, which addresses a different part of the rule than the remainder of Comment [2], has been moved to its own comment for clarification.

Rule 5.3 Responsibilities Regarding Nonlawyer Assistants

(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

With respect to a nonlawyer employed or retained by or associated with a lawyer:

- (a) a partner in a law firm, and a lawyer who individually or together with other lawyers possesses comparable managerial authority in a law firm, shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the firm has in effect measures giving reasonable assurance that the nonlawyer's conduct is compatible with the professional obligations of the lawyer;
- (b) a lawyer having direct supervisory authority over the nonlawyer shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the person's conduct is compatible with the professional obligations of the lawyer; and
- (c) a lawyer shall be responsible for conduct of such a person that would be a violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act if engaged in by a lawyer if:
 - (1) the lawyer orders or, with knowledge of the specific conduct, ratifies the conduct involved; or
 - (2) the lawyer is a partner, or individually or together with other lawyers has comparable managerial authority in the law firm in which the person is employed, or has direct supervisory authority over the person, and [knows] of the conduct at a time when its consequences can be avoided or mitigated but fails to take reasonable remedial action.

COMMENT

- [1] Lawyers generally employ assistants in their practice, including secretaries, investigators, law student interns, and paraprofessionals.

Such assistants, whether employees or independent contractors, act for the lawyer in rendition of the lawyer's professional services. A lawyer must give such assistants appropriate instruction and supervision concerning the ethical aspects of their employment, particularly regarding the obligation not to disclose confidential information relating to representation of the client, and should be responsible for their work product. See, e.g., Waysman v. State Bar (1986) 41 Cal.3d 452 [224 Cal.Rptr. 101]; Trousil v. State Bar (1985) 38 Cal.3d 337, 342 [211 Cal.Rptr. 525]; Palomo v. State Bar (1984) 36 Cal.3d 785 [205 Cal.Rptr. 834]; Crane v. State Bar (1981) 30 Cal.3d 117, 122 [177 Cal.Rptr. 670]; Black v. State Bar (1972) 7 Cal.3d 676, 692 [103 Cal.Rptr. 288]; Vaughn v. State Bar (1972) 6 Cal.3d 847, 857-858 [100 Cal.Rptr. 713]; Moore v. State Bar (1964) 62 Cal.2d 74, 81 [41 Cal.Rptr. 161]. The measures employed in instructing and supervising nonlawyers should take account of the fact that they may not have legal training.

- [2] Paragraph (a) requires lawyers with managerial authority within a law firm to make reasonable efforts to establish internal policies and procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance that nonlawyers in the firm will act in a way compatible with these Rules and the State Bar Act. See Comment [2] to Rule 5.1. Paragraph (a) applies to lawyers with managerial authority in corporate and government legal departments and legal service organizations as well as to partners and other managing lawyers in private law firms.
- [3] Paragraph (c) specifies the circumstances in which a lawyer is responsible for conduct of a nonlawyer that would be a violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act if engaged in by a lawyer.

Rule 5.3 Responsibilities Regarding Nonlawyer Assistants. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 3 Agree = 3 Disagree = 0 Modify = 0 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	A	Yes		OCTC supports this rule as it is a codification of existing California law. However, Comment [3] should be stricken.	No response required. The Commission disagrees and believes the comment provides appropriate guidance in applying the rule.
3	San Diego County Bar Association	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 5.3: Responsibilities Regarding Nonlawyer Assistants

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California has no provision comparable to ABA Model Rule 5.3.

Georgia adds a new Rule 5.3(d) that indirectly restricts the activities of suspended or disbarred lawyers who work in a law office.

Illinois: Rule 5.3(a) applies to “[t]he lawyer, and, in a law firm, each partner,” and refers to the professional obligations of the lawyer “and the firm.” Illinois Rule 5.3(b) applies to “each” lawyer having direct supervisory authority.

New Hampshire: Rules 5.3(a) and (b) impose duties on “each” partner in a firm, “each” lawyer with comparable managerial authority, and “each” lawyer with direct supervisory authority. Separately, New Hampshire Supreme Court Rule 35 (Guidelines for the Utilization by Lawyers of the Services of Legal Assistants under the New Hampshire Rules of Professional Conduct) contains nine rules for using the services of legal assistants in compliance with Rule 5.3. For example, Rule 1 provides:

It is the responsibility of the lawyer to take all steps reasonably necessary to ensure that a legal assistant for whose work the lawyer is responsible does not provide legal advice or otherwise engage in the unauthorized practice of law; provided, however, that with adequate lawyer supervision the legal assistant may provide information concerning legal matters and otherwise act as permitted under these rules.

New Jersey: Rule 5.3(a) provides that “every lawyer or organization authorized by the Court Rules to practice law in this jurisdiction shall adopt and maintain reasonable efforts to ensure that the conduct of nonlawyers retained or employed by the lawyer, law firm or organization is compatible with the professional obligations of the lawyer.” In addition, New Jersey has added Rule 5.3(c)(3), which provides that a lawyer is responsible for the conduct of a nonlawyer employee if “the lawyer has failed to make reasonable investigation of circumstances that would disclose past instances of conduct by the nonlawyer incompatible with the professional obligations of a lawyer, which evidence a propensity for such conduct.”

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 5.3 provides:

(a) A law firm shall ensure that the work of nonlawyers who work for the firm is adequately supervised, as appropriate. A lawyer with direct supervisory authority over a nonlawyer shall adequately supervise the work of the nonlawyer, as appropriate. In either case, the degree of supervision required is that which is reasonable under the circumstances, taking into account factors such as the experience of the person whose work is being supervised, the amount of work involved in a particular matter and the likelihood that ethical problems might arise in the course of working on the matter.

(b) A lawyer shall be responsible for conduct of a nonlawyer employed or retained by or associated with the lawyer that would be a violation of these Rules if engaged in by a lawyer, if:

(1) the lawyer orders or directs the specific conduct or, with knowledge of the specific conduct, ratifies it; or

(2) the lawyer is a partner in a law firm or is a lawyer who individually or together with other lawyers possesses comparable managerial responsibility in a law firm in which the nonlawyer is employed or is a lawyer who has supervisory authority over the nonlawyer; and

(i) knows of such conduct at a time when it could be prevented or its consequences avoided or mitigated but fails to take reasonable remedial action; or

(ii) in the exercise of reasonable management or supervisory authority should have known of the conduct so that reasonable remedial action could have been taken at a time when the consequences of the conduct could have been avoided or mitigated.

Oregon: Rule 5.3(b) begins: “except as provided by Rule 8.4(b). . . .” Under Oregon Rule 8.4(b), it is generally not professional misconduct for a lawyer to give advice about or to supervise “lawful covert activity in the investigation of violations of civil or criminal law or constitutional rights” provided the lawyer otherwise abides by the Rules of Professional Conduct.

Rhode Island: Immediately after the Comment to Rule 5.3, Rhode Island includes a lengthy set of “Guidelines” for the use of legal assistants. These Guidelines are a heavily modified version of the ABA Model Guidelines for the Utilization of Paralegal Services (see Related Materials below). For example, Rhode Island’s Guideline 3, which is closely related to Rule 5.3, provides as follows:

3. A lawyer shall direct a legal assistant to avoid any conduct which if engaged in by a lawyer would violate the Rules of Professional Conduct. In particular, the lawyer shall instruct the legal assistant regarding the confidential nature of the attorney/client relationship, and shall direct the legal assistant to refrain from disclosing any confidential information obtained from a client or in connection with representation of a client.

Texas relegates ABA Model Rule 5.3(a) to Comment 2 after Texas Rule 5.03. The Comment applies to “[e]ach lawyer in a position of authority in a law firm or in a government agency,” including lawyers having supervisory authority or “intermediate managerial responsibilities in the law department of any enterprise or government agency.” Texas Rule 5.03(b), which is equivalent to ABA Model Rule 5.3(c), subjects a lawyer to discipline for a nonlawyer’s misconduct if (1) the lawyer orders, “encourages, or permits” the conduct involved; or (2) the lawyer:

(i) is a partner in the law firm in which the person is employed, retained by, or associated with; or is the general counsel of a government agency’s legal department in which the person is employed, retained by or associated with; or has direct supervisory authority over such person; and

(ii) with knowledge of such misconduct by the nonlawyer knowingly fails to take reasonable remedial action to avoid or mitigate the consequences of that person’s misconduct.

Virginia: Rule 5.3(c)(2) applies if a lawyer knows “or should have known” of the conduct in question.

Proposed Rule 5.3.1

“Employment of Disbarred, Suspended, Resigned, or Involuntarily Inactive Member”

(XDraft #5, 10/18/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 5.3.1 places restrictions on the employment of disbarred, suspended, resigned or involuntarily resigned members of the State Bar. There is no ABA counterpart to this Rule. It carries forward current California rule 1-311, with changes that for the most part are not substantive and reflect adherence to the Model Rule format.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart
Rule	Comment
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☒ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☒ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 3-111

Statute

Case law

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total– votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 7
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 5
Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart ☒ Yes ☐ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

A Commission minority opposed adoption of the rule as unduly onerous and as restricting the possible rehabilitation of disciplined lawyers.

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 5.3.1* Employment of Disbarred, Suspended, Resigned, or Involuntarily Inactive Member

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

There is no ABA Model Rule counterpart to proposed Rule 5.3.1. Proposed Rule 5.3.1 amends current California Rule 1-311 and continues the restrictions on a lawyer's employment of a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member.

The Commission determined not to make substantive changes to the disciplinary standards in the existing rule because there is no ABA counterpart and the rule was adopted by the Board of Governors and approved by the Supreme Court relatively recently notwithstanding considerable opposition – the current rule was approved by the Supreme Court in 1996 and amended in 2008. The 2008 amendments were non-substantive changes that updated cross-references to several rules of court.

Proposed Rule 5.3.1 retains current rule 1-311 largely intact. The changes are not substantive and reflect adherence to ABA format. The only substantive change is to paragraph (d), providing that the notice served on the State Bar (whenever a lawyer employs a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member) “may” be made available to the public.

Both the current rule and the proposed Rule are intended to foster client protection by preventing a licensed lawyer from acting as a screen behind which a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive lawyer effectively could continue practicing law. To the extent the Rule permits a disbarred, etc., lawyer to work in a law firm, it also fosters client control over the engagement by requiring the employing lawyer to notify the client of the disbarred, etc., lawyer's role.

* Proposed Rule, XDraft 5 (10/18/09).

INTRODUCTION (continued):

Minority: A minority of the Commission takes the position that this Rule inhibits legitimate efforts to rehabilitate disbarred or suspended lawyers who have to demonstrate an ability to practice. The minority further notes that the Rule does not distinguish between lawyers who have been disciplined for conduct that suggests that they are a threat to the public and those who are not, for example, a lawyer who has forgotten to pay bar dues.

The minority notes that lawyers may employ others who are not subject to the proscriptions of this Rule. For example, a lawyer may employ without restriction a convicted felon who has never been admitted to practice law. That felon may be hired as a secretary, paralegal, or law clerk, with no notice to the bar. So long as the lawyer and the former lawyer do not deceive clients, the public, or others about the status of the former lawyer, the bar should not so burden the former lawyer that he or she finds it difficult or impossible to obtain legitimate employment that permits rehabilitation.

The minority contends this Rule is not needed to prevent a former, disciplined lawyer from practicing law, from forming a partnership with a lawyer, or from being hired to perform legal services by new or former clients. Those acts are prohibited by other rules and by the State Bar Act. Former lawyers should not be treated as pariahs, who cannot perform tasks that any other nonlawyer may lawfully perform, except under restrictions that make such employment burdensome and unlikely.

No Comparable ABA Model Rule (Text provided is current California Rule 1-311)	Commission's Proposed Rule* (Redline/strikeout showing changes to the current California Rule 1-311)	Explanation of Changes to California Rule 1-311
(A) For purposes of this rule: (1) "Employ" means to engage the services of another, including employees, agents, independent contractors and consultants, regardless of whether any compensation is paid; (2) "Involuntarily inactive member" means a member who is ineligible to practice law as a result of action taken pursuant to Business and Professions Code sections 6007, 6203(c), or California Rule of Court 958(d); and (3) "Resigned member" means a member who has resigned from the State Bar while disciplinary charges are pending.	Rule ~~5.3.1-311.~~ Employment of Disbarred, Suspended, Resigned, or Involuntarily Inactive Member. (Aa) For ~~the~~ purposes of this ~~rule~~Rule: (1) "Employ" means to engage the services of another, including employees, agents, independent contractors and consultants, regardless of whether any compensation is paid; (2) "Member" means a member of the State Bar of California. ~~(2)~~(3) "Involuntarily inactive member" means a member who is ineligible to practice law as a result of action taken pursuant to Business and ~~professions~~Professions Code sections 6007, 6203(~~ed~~)(1), or California Rule of Court 958(d); and ~~(3)~~(4) "Resigned member" means a member who has resigned from the State Bar while disciplinary charges are pending.	See Introduction for a general note on the changes in the proposed Rule. As noted in the Introduction, the changes for the most part are not substantive and merely reflect adherence to ABA format or correction of typographical errors in the current rule. The substitution of "6203(d)(1)" for "6203(c)" in subparagraph (a)(3) corrects a citation error in the current rule. The added language in paragraph (d) that the "State Bar may make such information available to the public" is a substantive change and is intended to obviate a possible restriction on disclosure in the interests of protecting the public. Note on the use of "lawyer" vs. "member". In keeping with the style of the ABA Model Rules, the Commission has, throughout its proposed rules, substituted "lawyer" for the term "member [of the State Bar]". Nevertheless, "member" and "resigned member" remain defined terms in proposed Rule 5.3.1 as those terms are applied to the former lawyer employee. As with current rule 1-311, the proposed Rule is limited to the employment of disciplined former members of the State Bar of California.

* Proposed Rule 5.3.1, XDraft 5 (10/18/09). Redline comparisons are to current rule 1-311.

No Comparable ABA Model Rule (Text provided is current California Rule 1-311)	Commission's Proposed Rule* (Redline/strikeout showing changes to the current California Rule 1-311)	Explanation of Changes to California Rule 1-311
(B) A member shall not employ, associate professionally with, or aid a person the member knows or reasonably should know is a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member to perform the following on behalf of the member's client: (1) Render legal consultation or advice to the client; (2) Appear on behalf of a client in any hearing or proceeding or before any judicial officer, arbitrator, mediator, court, public agency, referee, magistrate, commissioner, or hearing officer; (3) Appear as a representative of the client at a deposition or other discovery matter; (4) Negotiate or transact any matter for or on behalf of the client with third parties;	(B) A ~~member~~lawyer shall not employ, associate professionally with, or aid a person the ~~member~~lawyer knows or reasonably should know is a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member to perform the following on behalf of the ~~member's~~lawyer's client: (1) Render legal consultation or advice to the client; (2) Appear on behalf of a client in any hearing or proceeding or before any judicial officer, arbitrator, mediator, court, public agency, referee, magistrate, commissioner, or hearing officer; (3) Appear as a representative of the client at a deposition or other discovery matter; (4) Negotiate or transact any matter for or on behalf of the client with third parties;	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a).

No Comparable ABA Model Rule (Text provided is current California Rule 1-311)	Commission's Proposed Rule* (Redline/strikeout showing changes to the current California Rule 1-311)	Explanation of Changes to California Rule 1-311
(5) Receive, disburse or otherwise handle the client's funds; or (6) Engage in activities which constitute the practice of law.	(5) Receive, disburse or otherwise handle the client's funds; or (6) Engage in activities which constitute the practice of law.
(C) A member may employ, associate professionally with, or aid a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member to perform research, drafting or clerical activities, including but not limited to: (1) Legal work of a preparatory nature, such as legal research, the assemblage of data and other necessary information, drafting of pleadings, briefs, and other similar documents; (2) Direct communication with the client or third parties regarding matters such as scheduling, billing, updates, confirmation of receipt or sending of correspondence and messages; or (3) Accompanying an active member in attending a deposition or other discovery matter for the limited purpose of providing clerical assistance to the active member who will appear	(C) A ~~member~~ lawyer may employ, associate professionally with, or aid a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member to perform research, drafting or clerical activities, including but not limited to: (1) Legal work of a preparatory nature, such as legal research, the assemblage of data and other necessary information, drafting of pleadings, briefs, and other similar documents; (2) Direct communication with the client or third parties regarding matters such as scheduling, billing, updates, confirmation of receipt or sending of correspondence and messages; or (3) Accompanying an active member in good standing of the bar of a United States state in attending a deposition or other discovery matter for the limited purpose of providing clerical assistance	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a).

No Comparable ABA Model Rule (Text provided is current California Rule 1-311)	Commission's Proposed Rule* (Redline/strikeout showing changes to the current California Rule 1-311)	Explanation of Changes to California Rule 1-311 as the representative of the client.	to the ~~active member~~lawyer who will appear as the representative of the client.
(D) Prior to or at the time of employing a person the member knows or reasonably should know is a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member, the member shall serve upon the State Bar written notice of the employment, including a full description of such person's current bar status. The written notice shall also list the activities prohibited in paragraph (B) and state that the disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member will not perform such activities. The member shall serve similar written notice upon each client on whose specific matter such person will work, prior to or at the time of employing such person to work on the client's specific matter. The member shall obtain proof of service of the client's written notice and shall retain such proof and a true and correct copy of the client's written notice for two years following termination of the member's employment with the client.	~~(D)~~(d) Prior to or at the time of employing a person the ~~member~~lawyer knows or reasonably should know is a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member, the ~~member~~lawyer shall serve upon the State Bar written notice of the employment, including a full description of such person's current bar status. The written notice shall also list the activities prohibited in paragraph ~~(B)~~(b) and state that the disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member will not perform such activities. The ~~member~~State Bar may make such information available to the public. The lawyer shall serve similar written notice upon each client on whose specific matter such person will work, prior to or at the time of employing such person to work on the client's specific matter. The ~~member~~lawyer shall obtain proof of service of the client's written notice and shall retain such proof and a true and correct copy of the client's written notice for two years following termination of the ~~member's~~lawyer's employment ~~with~~by the client.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a).

No Comparable ABA Model Rule (Text provided is current California Rule 1-311)	Commission's Proposed Rule* (Redline/strikeout showing changes to the current California Rule 1-311)	Explanation of Changes to California Rule 1-311
(E) A member may, without client or State Bar notification, employ a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member whose sole function is to perform office physical plant or equipment maintenance, courier or delivery services, catering, reception, typing or transcription, or other similar support activities.	(~~E~~e) A ~~member~~lawyer may, without client or State Bar notification, employ a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member whose sole function is to perform office physical plant or equipment maintenance, courier or delivery services, catering, reception, typing or transcription, or other similar support activities.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a).
(F) Upon termination of the disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member, the member shall promptly serve upon the State Bar written notice of the termination.	(~~F~~f) Upon termination of the employment of a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member, the ~~member~~lawyer shall promptly serve upon the State Bar written notice of the termination.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a).
Discussion: For discussion of the activities that constitute the practice of law, see Farnham v. State Bar (1976) 17 Cal.3d 605 [131 Cal.Rptr. 611]; Bluestein v. State Bar (1974) 13 Cal.3d 162 [118 Cal.Rptr. 175]; Baron v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 535 [86 Cal.Rptr. 673]; Crawford v. State Bar (1960) 54 Cal.2d 659 [7 Cal.Rptr. 746]; People v. Merchants Protective Corporation (1922) 189 Cal. 531, 535 [209 P. 363]; People v. Landlords Professional Services (1989) 215 Cal.App.3d 1599 [264 Cal.Rptr. 548]; and People v. Sipper (1943) 61 Cal.App.2d Supp. 844 [142 P.2d 960].)	~~Discussion:~~Comment ~~For discussion of the activities that constitute the practice of law, see Farnham v. State Bar (1976) 17 Cal.3d 605 [131 Cal.Rptr. 611]; Bluestein v. State Bar (1974) 13 Cal.3d 162 [118 Cal.Rptr. 175]; Baron v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 535 [86 Cal.Rptr. 673]; Crawford v. State Bar (1960) 54 Cal.2d 659 [7 Cal.Rptr. 746]; People v. Merchants Protective Corporation (1922) 189 Cal. 531, 535 [209 p. 363]; People v. Landlords Professional Services (1989) 215 Cal.App.3d 1599 [264 Cal.Rptr. 548]; and People v. Sipper (1943) 61 Cal.App.2d Supp. 844 [142 p.2d 960].)~~	The Commission recommends the deletion of Discussion paragraph 1 to current rule 1-311 as the issue of what constitutes “practice of law” is beyond the scope of these Rules of Professional Conduct.

No Comparable ABA Model Rule (Text provided is current California Rule 1-311)	Commission's Proposed Rule* (Redline/strikeout showing changes to the current California Rule 1-311)	Explanation of Changes to California Rule 1-311
Paragraph (D) is not intended to prevent or discourage a member from fully discussing with the client the activities that will be performed by the disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member on the client's matter. If a member's client is an organization, then the written notice required by paragraph (D) shall be served upon the highest authorized officer, employee, or constituent overseeing the particular engagement. (See rule 3-600.)	[1] Paragraph (~~D~~) is not intended to prevent or discourage a ~~member~~lawyer from fully discussing with the client the activities that will be performed by the disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member on the client's matter. If a ~~member's lawyer's~~ client is an organization, then the written notice required by paragraph (~~D~~) shall be served upon the ~~highest~~duly authorized officer, employee, or constituent overseeing the particular engagement. (See ~~rule 3-600~~Rule 1.13.)	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a). The substitution of "rule 1.13" for "rule 3-600" conforms the citation to the rule number assigned to current rule 3-600 under the new rules numbering system that tracks the Model Rules. The substitution of "duly" for "highest" conforms this Rule to the language used in proposed Rule 1.13.
Nothing in rule 1-311 shall be deemed to limit or preclude any activity engaged in pursuant to rules 983, 983.1, 983.2, and 988 of the California Rules of Court, or any local rule of a federal district court concerning admission pro hac vice.	[2] Nothing in ~~rule 1-311~~this Rule shall be deemed to limit or preclude any activity engaged in pursuant to ~~rules 983, 983.1, 983.2, and 988~~Rules 9.45 [registered legal services attorneys], 9.46 [registered in-house counsel] 9.47 [attorneys practicing law temporarily in California as part of litigation], 9.48 [non-litigating attorneys temporarily in California to provide legal services], 9.40 [counsel pro hac vice], 9.41 [appearances by military counsel], 9.42 [certified law students], 9.43 [out-of-state attorney arbitration counsel program] and 9.44 [registered foreign legal consultant] of the California Rules of Court, or any local rule of a federal district court concerning admission pro hac vice.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a). The cross-references have been revised to reflect the Judicial Council's recent reorganization and renumbering of the California Rules of Court, to add references to multijurisdictional practice rules, and to provide parenthetical descriptions of the scope of the referenced rules.

Rule 5.3.1 Employment of Disbarred, Suspended, Resigned, or Involuntarily Inactive Member
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) For the purposes of this Rule:
 - (1) "Employ" means to engage the services of another, including employees, agents, independent contractors and consultants, regardless of whether any compensation is paid;
 - (2) "Member" means a member of the State Bar of California.
 - (3) "Involuntarily inactive member" means a member who is ineligible to practice law as a result of action taken pursuant to Business and Professions Code sections 6007, 6203(d)(1), or California Rule of Court 958(d); and
 - (4) "Resigned member" means a member who has resigned from the State Bar while disciplinary charges are pending.
- (b) A lawyer shall not employ, associate professionally with, or aid a person the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member to perform the following on behalf of the lawyer's client:
 - (1) Render legal consultation or advice to the client;
 - (2) Appear on behalf of a client in any hearing or proceeding or before any judicial officer, arbitrator, mediator, court, public agency, referee, magistrate, commissioner, or hearing officer;
 - (3) Appear as a representative of the client at a deposition or other discovery matter;
 - (4) Negotiate or transact any matter for or on behalf of the client with third parties;
 - (5) Receive, disburse or otherwise handle the client's funds; or
 - (6) Engage in activities which constitute the practice of law.
- (c) A lawyer may employ, associate professionally with, or aid a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member to perform research, drafting or clerical activities, including but not limited to:
 - (1) Legal work of a preparatory nature, such as legal research, the assemblage of data and other necessary information, drafting of pleadings, briefs, and other similar documents;
 - (2) Direct communication with the client or third parties regarding matters such as scheduling, billing, updates, confirmation of receipt or sending of correspondence and messages; or
 - (3) Accompanying an active member in good standing of the bar of a United States state in attending a deposition or other discovery matter for the limited purpose of providing clerical assistance to the lawyer who will appear as the representative of the client.
- (d) Prior to or at the time of employing a person the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member, the lawyer shall serve upon the State Bar written notice of the employment, including a full description of such person's current bar status. The written notice shall also list the activities prohibited in paragraph (b) and state that the disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member will not perform such activities. The State Bar may make such information available to the public. The lawyer shall serve similar written notice upon each client on whose specific matter such person will work, prior to or at the time of employing such person to work on the client's specific matter. The lawyer shall obtain proof of service of the client's written notice and shall retain such proof and a true and correct copy of the client's written notice for two years following termination of the lawyer's employment by the client.

- (e) A lawyer may, without client or State Bar notification, employ a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member whose sole function is to perform office physical plant or equipment maintenance, courier or delivery services, catering, reception, typing or transcription, or other similar support activities.
- (f) Upon termination of the employment of a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member, the lawyer shall promptly serve upon the State Bar written notice of the termination.

COMMENT

- [1] Paragraph (d) is not intended to prevent or discourage a lawyer from fully discussing with the client the activities that will be performed by the disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member on the client's matter. If a lawyer's client is an organization, then the written notice required by paragraph (d) shall be served upon the duly authorized officer, employee, or constituent overseeing the particular engagement. See Rule 1.13.

- [2] Nothing in this Rule shall be deemed to limit or preclude any activity engaged in pursuant to Rules 9.45 [registered legal services attorneys], 9.46 [registered in-house counsel] 9.47 [attorneys practicing law temporarily in California as part of litigation], 9.48 [non-litigating attorneys temporarily in California to provide legal services], 9.40 [counsel pro hac vice], 9.41 [appearances by military counsel], 9.42 [certified law students], 9.43 [out-of-state attorney arbitration counsel program] and 9.44 [registered foreign legal consultant] of the California Rules of Court, or any local rule of a federal district court concerning admission pro hac vice.

Rule 5.3.1 Employment of Disbarred, Suspended, Resigned, or Involuntary Inactive Member.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 3
Disagree = 0
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	A	Yes	5.3.1(d)	OCTC generally supports this rule. However, OCTC recommends splitting subparagraph (d) into two parts, (d)(1) and (d)(2), to make it easier to read and understand. A Comment should also refer lawyers to section 6132 regarding the responsibilities of any lawyer or law firm that employs a suspended or disbarred attorney.	No response required. The Commission decided not to revise subparagraph (d) as suggested. An attempt was made to revise the Rule along the lines suggested. However, because the two notice requirements have different time references, the Commission concluded that it was better to keep subparagraph (d) as one paragraph. The Commission declined to make this change. The statute and the Rule are dealing with different situations. The Rule deals with employing a suspended, disbarred or resigned lawyer, while the statute deals with a lawyer who is in a firm at the time of disbarment or resignation. While the Rule could apply to a lawyer who is employed by a firm at the time of suspension or disbarment, it is not the primary focus of the Rule. Citation to the statute in the Comment would be an unnecessary tangent.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 5.3.1 Employment of Disbarred, Suspended, Resigned, or Involuntary Inactive Member.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 3
Disagree = 0
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
3	Orange County Bar Association	M	Yes	5.3.1(b)	In paragraph 5.3.1(b), the OCBA is concerned that “reasonably should know” in these circumstances requires further explanation by the Commission. The OCBA suggests that it should be presumed that a lawyer “reasonably should know” that another lawyer has been disbarred, suspended, etc., if such information appears on the State Bar website, and that it should be presumed that a lawyer should not reasonably know if such information does not appear on the State Bar website. The OCBA urges the Commission to clarify the standard in this manner.	The Commission did make the requested change. While the Commission agrees that today information on the State Bar website is available to lawyers to determine a lawyer’s status, over time technology may evolve and change the relevance of consulting the website. The Commission believes that Comments should not include concepts that would need to be updated over time as information and technology evolve.
				Paragraph (b)	Paragraphs (b)(1) and (b)(3) through (b)(5) refer to “ the client,” indicating that it means the particular client on whose behalf the suspended or disbarred lawyer is hired. Paragraph (b)(2), however, refers to “a client.” It is not clear if this is merely a typographical error, and that the Commission intended it to say “the client,” or whether the Commission intends to expand the scope of paragraph (b)(2) beyond that of the other subsections to paragraph (b). The OCBA seeks clarification.	The Commission believes that the reference to “a client” in paragraph (b)(2) is correct. The intent is to assure that the suspended, disbarred or resigned lawyer is not appearing in court for any client. The rest of (b)(2) supports the breadth of the subpart.
				Comment [1]	Comment [1] refers back to paragraph (d), and states that “Paragraph (d) is not intended to prevent or discourage a lawyer from fully	The Commission declined to make the requested change. The Comment’s purpose is to make sure that lawyers are aware that they can talk to their

Rule 5.3.1 Employment of Disbarred, Suspended, Resigned, or Involuntary Inactive Member.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 3
Disagree = 0
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					discussing with the client the activities that will be performed by the disbarred . . . member on the client's matter." This Comment implies that paragraph (d) otherwise could be read as preventing or limiting a lawyer's ability to discuss with his client the status of the disbarred, etc., lawyer. Paragraph (d), however, expressly requires a lawyer to provide written notice to his client of the status of the disbarred, etc, lawyer. Thus, as written, Comment [1] is confusing. We recommend that the first sentence of Comment [1] be modified to read as follows: "Paragraph (d) is not intended to provide an exhaustive description of the information to be conveyed to the client or to otherwise limit the scope of any discussions between the lawyer and the client, but rather is intended to provide a minimum description of information that must be conveyed upon the employment of a disbarred, suspended, resigned, or involuntarily inactive member."	client about the ineligible lawyer's status and role. The Commission believes the Comment is clear and does not need to be changed. The Commission does not agree that the proposed revision offered by the commenter is an accurate statement of the application of the Rule.
4	San Diego County Bar Association	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.

STATE VARIATIONS – CA RULE, NO ABA COUNTERPART

California Rule 1-311 Threatening Criminal, Administrative, or Disciplinary Charges

SELECTED STATES THAT HAVE RULES SIMILAR TO CALIFORNIA RULE 1-311

Minnesota

RULE 5.8: EMPLOYMENT OF DISBARRED, SUSPENDED, OR INVOLUNTARILY INACTIVE LAWYERS

(a) For purposes of this rule “employ” means to engage the services of another, including employees, agents, independent contractors, and consultants, regardless of whether any compensation is paid.

(b) A lawyer shall not employ, associate professionally with, or aid a person the lawyer knows or reasonably should know has been disbarred, suspended, or placed on disability inactive status by order of the court to do any of the following on behalf of the lawyer's client:

(1) render legal consultation or advice to the client;

(2) appear on behalf of the client in any hearing or proceeding or before any judicial officer, arbitrator, mediator, court, public agency, referee, magistrate, commissioner, or hearing officer, unless the rules of the tribunal involved permit representation by nonlawyers and the client has been informed of the lawyer's suspension, disbarment, or disability inactive status;

(3) appear as a representative of the client at a deposition or other discovery matter;

(4) negotiate or transact any matter for or on behalf of the client with third parties;

(5) receive, disburse, or otherwise handle the client's funds; or

(6) engage in activities that constitute the practice of law.

(c) A lawyer may employ, associate professionally with, or aid a disbarred, suspended, or disability inactive lawyer to perform research, drafting, clerical, or similar activities, including but not limited to:

(1) performing legal work of a preparatory nature for the active lawyer's review, such as legal research, gathering information, and drafting pleadings, briefs, and other similar documents;

(2) directly communicating with the client or third parties regarding matters such as scheduling, billing, updates, information gathering, and confirmation of receipt or sending of correspondence and messages; or

(3) accompanying an active lawyer to a deposition or other discovery matter for the limited purpose of providing clerical assistance to the active lawyer who will appear as the representative of the client.

(d) Prior to or at the time of employing a person the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is a disbarred, suspended, or disability inactive lawyer, the lawyer shall serve upon the Office of Lawyers Professional Responsibility written notice of the employment, including a full description of such person's current license status. The notice shall state that the suspended, disbarred, or disability inactive lawyer shall not be employed to perform any of the activities prohibited by paragraph (b).

(e) Upon terminating the employment of the disbarred, suspended, or disability inactive lawyer, the employing lawyer shall promptly serve upon the Office of Lawyers Professional Responsibility written notice of the termination.

Louisiana

RULE 5.5 UNAUTHORIZED PRACTICE OF LAW; MULTIJURISDICTIONAL PRACTICE OF LAW (EXCERPT)

* * * * *

(e)(1) A lawyer shall not:

(i) employ, contract with as a consultant, engage as an independent contractor, or otherwise join in any other capacity, in connection with the practice of law, any person the attorney knows or reasonably should know is a disbarred attorney, during the period of disbarment, or any person the attorney knows or reasonably should know is an attorney who has permanently resigned from the practice of law in lieu of discipline; or

(ii) employ, contract with as a consultant, engage as an independent contractor, or otherwise join in any other capacity, in connection with the practice of law, any person the attorney knows or reasonably should know is a suspended attorney, during the period of suspension, unless first preceded by the submission of a fully executed employment registration statement to the Office of Disciplinary Counsel, on a registration form provided by the Louisiana Attorney Disciplinary Board, and approved by the Louisiana Supreme Court.

SELECTED STATE ETHICS OPINIONS

Washington

Formal Opinion 184 (1990)

<http://www.wsba.org/lawyers/ethics/formalopinions/184.htm>

Massachusetts

Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court Rule 4:01, Section 17(7)

<http://www.mass.gov/obcbbbo/rule401.htm#Actions>

Mississippi

Opinion No. 96 (1984)

http://www.msbar.org/ethic_opinions.php?id=353

South Carolina

Ethics Advisory Opinion 92-20

Q: Can a S.C. law firm/attorney hire a non-S.C. Bar member, who was formerly an attorney in another state and was disbarred from practice in that state, to do legal research and other paralegal work? [A: NO]

http://www.scbar.org/member_resources/ethics_advisory_opinions/&id=333

Ethics Advisory Opinion 82-14

A suspended lawyer may be paid a legal fee for work done in a case prior to the suspension but may not receive any compensation for work done on the case following the suspension; and cannot assist the lawyer who takes over the case on a non-paid basis.

http://www.scbar.org/member_resources/ethics_advisory_opinions/&id=86

Proposed Rule 5.4 [1-310][1-320][1-600] “Financial and Similar Arrangements With Nonlawyers”

(XDraft 10.1, 6/30/10)

Summary: Proposed Rule 5.4, which is based on Model Rule 5.4, gathers together in a single rule, concepts which are intended to promote the independence of a lawyer’s professional judgment, but which are currently found in three separate California Rules of Professional Conduct: rules 1-310, 1-320, and 1-600.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart
Rule	Comment
☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☐ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 1-310, 1-320, 1-600

Statute

Business & Professions Code § 6155.

Case law

Frye v. Tenderloin Housing Clinic, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal.4th 23

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 9

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 0

Abstain 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart ☒ Yes ☐ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 5.4* Financial And Similar Arrangements With Nonlawyers

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 5.4 closely follows the black letter rule of Model Rule 5.4, which is intended to protect the independence of a lawyer's professional judgment. However, the Commission recommends revisions and additions to the black letter, as well as addition of commentary, to afford greater client protection by providing (i) broader prohibitions on a lawyer's conduct and on relationships into which the lawyer might enter that would pose a threat to the lawyer's exercise of independent professional judgment, and (ii) better guidance on the exceptions to these prohibitions that are permitted under the Rule. These revisions include: (1) a prohibition on sharing legal fees either "directly or indirectly" with a nonlawyer (see Explanation for paragraph (a)); (2) extending that prohibition to sharing legal fees with an organization not authorized to practice law (id.); (3) extending the prohibition on practicing law with nonlawyers in a "partnership" to practicing law with nonlawyers in any kind of "organization" (see Explanation for paragraph (b)); (4) cautioning that a lawyer must avoid interference not only with the lawyer's independence of judgment but also with the lawyer-client relationship (see Explanation for paragraph (c)); (5) carrying forward explicitly the implied prohibition in current rule 1-320(A)(4) on a lawyer accepting referrals from a lawyer referral service that does not comply with the Board of Governors Minimum Standards on lawyer referral services; and (6) adding an express provision that clarifies the concerns the Supreme Court expressed in Frye v. Tenderloin Housing Clinic, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal.4th 23, about lawyers practicing with nonprofit organizations that permits third parties to interfere with a lawyer's independence of judgment. (see Explanation for paragraph (f)).

* Proposed Rule 5.4, XDraft 10.1 (6/30/10).

INTRODUCTION (Continued):

Minority. A minority of the Commission takes the position that proposed Rule 5.4 expands the monopoly granted lawyers contrary to Cianci v. Superior Court (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 903, 919. The minority contends that the Rule prevents large organizations such as Target from providing low-cost legal services in the same manner as they provide other professional services.

Public Comment. Following the initial public comment period, the Commission revised the Rule extensively to provide better guidance to lawyers not only as to what conduct and relationships are prohibited under the Rule, but also as to the kinds of conduct and relationships that are expressly allowed. After the subsequent public comment period, the Commission agreed with legal services stakeholders who objected to the complete deletion of Model Rule 5.4(a)(4). See explanation of paragraph (a)(5) and Comment [8].

Current California Law and Variations in Other Jurisdictions. Proposed Rule 5.4 gathers together in a single rule concepts which are intended to promote the independence of a lawyer's professional judgment, but which are currently found in three separate California Rules of Professional Conduct: rules 1-310, 1-320, and 1-600.

Every jurisdiction has adopted some version of Model Rule 5.4. Model Rule 5.4(a)(4) (sharing of court-awarded legal fees with a nonprofit organization), has been rejected or modified in numerous jurisdictions. For example, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, and New York have rejected the provision. Minnesota and Rhode Island require court approval for such arrangements. Florida adds that such fees can also be shared with a "pro bono legal services organization." The District of Columbia and New Hampshire permit such sharing, whether or not court-awarded. The District of Columbia, perhaps because of the extensive government lobbying engaged in by law firms in that jurisdiction, is unique in broadly permitting a lawyer to practice in a partnership or organization with nonlawyers. See "Selected State Variations," below.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.4 Professional Independence Of A Lawyer	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.4 Financial and Similar Arrangements With Nonlawyers	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) A lawyer or law firm shall not share legal fees with a nonlawyer, except that:	(a) A lawyer or law firm shall not share legal fees directly or indirectly with a ~~nonlawyer, except~~ person who is not a lawyer or with an organization that is not authorized to practice law. This paragraph does not prohibit:	The introductory paragraph to paragraph (a) is based on Model Rule 5.4(a), but has been modified in two important respects. First, the Rule carries forward the prohibition in current California rule 1-320 against sharing fees with a nonlawyer either directly or indirectly. The inclusion of the adverbs “directly or indirectly” was originally included in rule 1-320 to preclude lawyers from avoiding application of this client-protective rule by creatively structuring relationships with nonlawyers who send them clients. Proposed Comments [1A] and [1B] elaborate on the application of that term to lawyer’s payment of nonlawyer employees and contractors. Second, paragraph (a) has been modified to add a prohibition against sharing legal fees with an organization not authorized to practice law. This same prohibition is found in current California rule 1-600, which regulates legal services programs. See also State Bar of California Minimum Standards for Lawyer Referral Services.
(1) an agreement by a lawyer with the lawyer’s firm, partner, or associate may provide for the payment of money, over a reasonable period of time after the lawyer’s death, to the lawyer’s estate or to one or more specified persons;	(1) an agreement by a lawyer with the lawyer’s firm, partner, or associate ~~may to~~ provide for the payment of money, or other consideration at once or over a reasonable period of time after the lawyer’s death, to the lawyer’s estate or to one or more specified persons;	Subparagraph (a)(1) is based on Model Rule 5.4(a)(1), but with a change to clarify that the payment permitted under the provision need not be made over a period of time but can be made at once, and that consideration other than money may be paid.

* Proposed Rule 5.4, XDraft 10.1 (6/30/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.4 Professional Independence Of A Lawyer	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.4 Financial and Similar Arrangements With Nonlawyers	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(2) a lawyer who purchases the practice of a deceased, disabled, or disappeared lawyer may, pursuant to the provisions of Rule 1.17, pay to the estate or other representative of that lawyer the agreed-upon purchase price;	(2) ~~a lawyer who purchases the practice of a deceased, disabled, or disappeared lawyer may, pursuant to the provisions of Rule 1.17, pay to the estate or other representative of that lawyer the agreed-upon purchase price;~~ any payment authorized by Rule 1.17;	Model Rule 5.4(a)(2) has been simplified by including a reference to proposed Rule 1.17.
(3) a lawyer or law firm may include nonlawyer employees in a compensation or retirement plan, even though the plan is based in whole or in part on a profit-sharing arrangement; and	(3) a lawyer or law firm ~~may include~~ including nonlawyer employees in a compensation or retirement plan, even though the plan is based in whole or in part on a profit-sharing arrangement; ~~and, provided the plan does not otherwise violate these Rules or the State Bar Act; or~~	The word “including” has been substituted for “may include” to conform to the Commission's recommended syntax for the introductory clause to this Rule (“does not prohibit”). The proviso clause has been carried forward from current California rule 1-320(A)(3).
	(4) the payment of a prescribed registration, referral, or other fee by a lawyer to a lawyer referral service established, sponsored and operated in accordance with the State Bar of California's minimum standards for a lawyer referral service in California.	Paragraph (a)(4) carries forward current California rule 1-320(A)(4). It is intended to provide an exception for lawyer's paying certain fees to lawyer referral services that are in compliance with the cited minimum standards.
(4) a lawyer may share court-awarded legal fees with a nonprofit organization that employed, retained or recommended employment of the lawyer in the matter.	~~(4)~~ ~~a lawyer may share~~ lawyer's or law firm's payment of court-awarded legal fees ~~with~~ to a nonprofit organization that employed, retained or recommended employment of the lawyer or law firm in the matter.	The public comment version of the proposed rule deleted Model Rule 5.4(a)(4) due to concerns about potential abuse by lawyers who form issue-specific nonprofit organizations primarily to generate legal fees. However, input was received from legal services organizations indicating that the complete deletion of this language would detrimentally impact common practices that are consistent with existing law. In response, the Commission added, as new paragraph (a)(5), a slightly modified version of the Model

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.4 Professional Independence Of A Lawyer	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.4 Financial and Similar Arrangements With Nonlawyers	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		Rule language. In addition, Comment [8] was revised to state: "Paragraph (a)(5) makes clear that a lawyer is permitted to pay court-awarded legal fees to non-profit legal aid, mutual benefit, and advocacy groups that are not engaged in the unauthorized practice of law. See Frye v. Tenderloin Housing Clinic, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal.4th 23 [40 Cal.Rptr.3d 221]. See also Rule 6.3. Regarding a lawyer's contribution of legal fees to a legal services organization, see Rule 6.1 Comment [4]."
(b) A lawyer shall not form a partnership with a nonlawyer if any of the activities of the partnership consist of the practice of law.	(b) A lawyer shall not form a partnership or other organization with a ~~nonlawyer~~person who is not a lawyer if any of the activities of the partnership or other organization consist of the practice of law.	Paragraph (b) is based on Model Rule 5.4(b). The phrase "or other organization" has been added so a lawyer cannot avoid application of the Rule by entering into a non-partnership arrangement with a person who is not a lawyer. The phrase "person who is not a lawyer" has been substituted for "nonlawyer."
(c) A lawyer shall not permit a person who recommends, employs, or pays the lawyer to render legal services for another to direct or regulate the lawyer's professional judgment in rendering such legal services.	(c) A lawyer shall not permit a person who recommends, employs, or pays the lawyer to render legal services for another to direct or regulate the lawyer's provision of legal services, or otherwise to interfere with the lawyer's independence of professional judgment, or with the lawyer-client relationship, in rendering such legal services.	Paragraph (c) is based on Model Rule 5.4(c). The Model Rule provision has been revised to clarify that it is generally interference with a lawyer's decisions concerning the legal services that are being provided that interfere with the lawyer's professional judgment. In addition, to enhance client protection, a prohibition on permitting interference with the lawyer-client relationship has been added.
(d) A lawyer shall not practice with or in the form of a professional corporation or association authorized to practice law for a profit, if:	(d) A lawyer shall not practice with or in the form of a professional corporation or ~~association~~organization authorized to practice law for a profit; if:	The introductory clause to paragraph (d) is based on Model Rule 5.4(d). The term "organization" has been substituted for "association" because the former term is broader in scope.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.4 Professional Independence Of A Lawyer	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.4 Financial and Similar Arrangements With Nonlawyers	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(1) a nonlawyer owns any interest therein, except that a fiduciary representative of the estate of a lawyer may hold the stock or interest of the lawyer for a reasonable time during administration;	(1) a ~~nonlawyer~~person who is not a lawyer owns any interest therein, except that a fiduciary representative of the estate of a lawyer may hold the stock or interest of the lawyer for a reasonable time during administration;	Subparagraph (d)(1) is identical to Model Rule 5.4(d)(1), except that "person who is not a lawyer" has been substituted for "nonlawyer."
(2) a nonlawyer is a corporate director or officer thereof or occupies the position of similar responsibility in any form of association other than a corporation ; or	(2) a ~~nonlawyer~~person who is not a lawyer is a corporate director or officer thereof or occupies ~~the~~a position of similar responsibility in any form of ~~association~~organization other than a corporation; or	Subparagraph (d)(2) is identical to Model Rule 5.4(d)(1), except that "person who is not a lawyer" has been substituted for "nonlawyer" and "organization" for "association." See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (d). The word "a" has been substituted for "the" because it refers back to the non-specific "director or officer."
(3) a nonlawyer has the right to direct or control the professional judgment of a lawyer.	(3) a ~~nonlawyer~~person who is not a lawyer has the right or authority to direct, influence or control the professional judgment of a lawyer.	Subparagraph (d)(1) is identical to Model Rule 5.4(d)(1), except that "person who is not a lawyer" has been substituted for "nonlawyer". The word "influence" has been added to reach those situations where a nonlawyer might, by indirect means, seek to "influence" a lawyer's exercise of professional judgment.
	(e) A lawyer shall not accept a referral from, or otherwise participate in, a lawyer referral service unless it complies with the Rules and Regulations Pertaining to Lawyer Referral Services as adopted by the Board of Governors of the State Bar.	Paragraph (e) has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It carries forward the implied prohibition current found in California rule 1-320(A)(4).

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.4 Professional Independence Of A Lawyer	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.4 Financial and Similar Arrangements With Nonlawyers	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(f) A lawyer shall not practice with or in the form of a non-profit legal aid, mutual benefit or advocacy group if the nonprofit organization allows any third person or organization to interfere with the lawyer's independence of professional judgment, or with the lawyer-client relationship, or allows or aids any person, organization or group that is not a lawyer or not otherwise authorized to practice law, to practice law unlawfully.	Paragraph (f) has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It has been added to address the concerns raised by the California Supreme Court in Frye v. Tenderloin Housing Clinic, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal.4th 23 [40 Cal.Rptr.3d 221].

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.4 Professional Independence Of A Lawyer Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 5.4 Duty to Avoid Interference with a Lawyer's Professional Independence Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] The provisions of this Rule express traditional limitations on sharing fees. These limitations are to protect the lawyer's professional independence of judgment. Where someone other than the client pays the lawyer's fee or salary, or recommends employment of the lawyer, that arrangement does not modify the lawyer's obligation to the client. As stated in paragraph (c), such arrangements should not interfere with the lawyer's professional judgment.	[1] A lawyer is required to maintain independence of professional judgment in rendering legal services. The provisions of this Rule ~~express traditional limitations on sharing fees. These limitations are to~~ protect the lawyer's ~~professional~~ independence of professional judgment. ~~Where someone other than~~ by restricting the ~~client pays the lawyer's fee or salary, or recommends employment~~ sharing of the lawyer, ~~that arrangement does not modify the lawyer's obligation to the client. As stated in paragraph (c), such arrangements should not interfere~~ fees with a person or organization that is not authorized to practice law and by prohibiting a nonlawyer from directing or controlling the lawyer's professional judgment when rendering legal services to another.	Comment [1] is based on Model Rule 5.4, cmt. [1]. It has been modified to focus on the policy that underlies the Rule – protecting the lawyer's independence of professional judgment.
[2] This Rule also expresses traditional limitations on permitting a third party to direct or regulate the lawyer's professional judgment in rendering legal services to another. See also Rule 1.8(f) (lawyer may accept compensation from a third party as long as there is no interference with the lawyer's independent professional judgment and the client gives informed consent).	~~[2] This Rule also expresses traditional limitations on permitting a third party to direct or regulate the lawyer's professional judgment in rendering legal services to another. See also Rule 1.8(f) (lawyer may accept compensation from a third party as long as there is no interference with the lawyer's independent professional judgment and the client gives informed consent).~~	The Commission recommends that Model Rule 5.4, cmt. [2], not be adopted. The Model Rule simply restates language from the black letter rule that is self-explanatory. The cross-reference to Rule 1.8(f) in the second sentence appears in Comment [4] as a reference to proposed Rule 1.8.6, the counterpart of Model Rule 1.8(f), together with references to other proposed Rules concerned with protection a lawyer's exercise of judgment. See also Explanation of Changes for Comment [4], below.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.4 Professional Independence Of A Lawyer Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 5.4 Duty to Avoid Interference with a Lawyer's Professional Independence Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[2] The prohibition against sharing fees "directly or indirectly" in paragraph (a) does not prohibit a lawyer or law firm from paying a bonus to or otherwise compensating a nonlawyer employee from general revenues received for legal services, provided the arrangement does not interfere with the independence of professional judgment of the lawyer or lawyers in the firm and does not violate any other rule of professional conduct. However, a nonlawyer employee's bonus or other form of compensation may not be based on a percentage or share of fees in specific cases or legal matters.	Comment [2] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It was added following public comment to address concerns that the phrase "directly or indirectly" was too broad and might sweep within it legitimate nonlawyer employee compensation methods and plans that do not pose a threat a lawyer's independence of judgment.
	[3] Paragraph (a) also does not prohibit the payment to a third party who is not a lawyer for goods and services to a lawyer or law firm even if the compensation for such goods and services is paid from the lawyer's or law firm's general revenues. However, the compensation to a nonlawyer third party may not be determined as a percentage or share of the lawyer's or law firm's overall revenues or tied to fees in particular cases or legal matters. A lawyer may pay to a nonlawyer third party, such as a collection agency, a percentage of past due or delinquent fees in matters that have been concluded that the third party collects on the lawyer's behalf.	Comment [3] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It was added following public comment to address concerns that the phrase "directly or indirectly" was too broad and might sweep within it legitimate nonlawyer consultant and contractor compensation methods and plans that do not pose a threat a lawyer's independence of judgment.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.4 Professional Independence Of A Lawyer Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 5.4 Duty to Avoid Interference with a Lawyer's Professional Independence Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[4] Other rules also protect the lawyer's independence of professional judgment. (See, e.g., Rule 1.5.1, Rule 1.8.6, and Rule 5.1.)	Similar to Model Rule 5.4, cmt. [2], proposed Comment [4] provides a cross-reference to Rule 1.8.6, as well as other Rules that operate to safeguard a lawyer's independence of professional judgment.
	[5] A lawyer's shares of stock in a professional law corporation may be held by the lawyer as a trustee of a revocable living trust for estate planning purposes during the lawyer's life, provided that the corporation does not permit any nonlawyer trustee to direct or control the activities of the professional law corporation.	Comment [5] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It has been added to provide important guidance to lawyers in dealing with a situation involving firm ownership that often arises in estate planning.
	[6] The distribution of legal fees pursuant to a referral agreement between lawyers who are not associated in the same law firm is governed by Rule 1.5.1 and not this Rule.	Comment [6] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It has been added to provide a cross-reference to the Rule that governs fee divisions among lawyers.
	[7] A lawyer's participation in a lawyer referral service established, sponsored, supervised, and operated in conformity with the Minimum Standards for a Lawyer Referral Service in California is encouraged and is not, of itself, a violation of this Rule. See also Business and Professions Code section 6155.	Comment [7] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It has been added to clarify that a lawyer is not only permitted to participate in a lawyer referral service that complies with California law, but is also encouraged to do so, as such services contribute to increase access to justice.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.4 Professional Independence Of A Lawyer Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 5.4 Duty to Avoid Interference with a Lawyer's Professional Independence Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[8] Paragraph (a)(5) makes clear that a lawyer is permitted to pay court-awarded legal fees to non-profit legal aid, mutual benefit, and advocacy groups that are not engaged in the unauthorized practice of law. See Frye v. Tenderloin Housing Clinic, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal.4th 23 [40 Cal.Rptr.3d 221]. See also Rule 6.3. Regarding a lawyer's contribution of legal fees to a legal services organization, see Rule 6.1 Comment [4].	Comment [8] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. Comment [8] and [9] have been added to clarify that this rule is intended to work in concert with the regulatory standards expressed by the Supreme Court in Frye v. Tenderloin Housing Clinic, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal.4th 23 [40 Cal.Rptr.3d 221]. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a)(5).
	[9] This Rule applies to group, prepaid, and voluntary legal service programs, activities and organizations and to non-profit legal aid, mutual benefit and advocacy groups. However, nothing in this Rule shall be deemed to authorize the practice of law by any such program, organization or group.	See Explanation of Changes for Comment [9].
	[10] This Rule is not intended to abrogate case law regarding the relationship between insurers and lawyers providing legal services to insureds. (See Gafcon, Inc. v. Ponsor Associates (2002) 98 Cal.App.4th 1388 [120 Cal.Rptr.2d 392].)	Comment [10] has no counterpart in the Model Rule. It has been carried over from the Discussion to current California rule 1-600. It is an important clarification that the Rule does not override common arrangements between lawyers and insurers in providing legal services to insureds.

Rule 5.4—~~Duty to Avoid Interference with a Lawyer's Professional Independence;~~
Financial and Similar Arrangements With Nonlawyers
(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to the Public Comment Draft)

- (a) A lawyer or law firm shall not share legal fees directly or indirectly with a person who is not a lawyer or with an organization that is not authorized to practice law. This paragraph does not prohibit:
 - (1) an agreement by a lawyer with the lawyer's firm, partner, or associate to provide for the payment of money or other consideration at once or over a reasonable period of time after the lawyer's death, to the lawyer's estate or to one or more specified persons;
 - (2) any payment authorized by Rule 1.17;
 - (3) a lawyer or law firm including nonlawyer employees in a compensation or retirement plan, even though the plan is based in whole or in part on a profit-sharing arrangement, provided the plan does not otherwise violate these Rules or the State Bar Act; or
 - (4) the payment of a prescribed registration, referral, or other fee by a lawyer to a lawyer referral service established, sponsored and operated in accordance with the State Bar of California's minimum standards for a lawyer referral service in California; or
 - (5) a lawyer's or law firm's payment of court-awarded legal fees to a nonprofit organization that employed, retained or recommended employment of the lawyer or law firm in the matter.
- (b) A lawyer shall not form a partnership or other organization with a ~~nonlawyer~~ person who is not a lawyer if any of the activities of the partnership or other organization consist of the practice of law.
- (c) A lawyer shall not permit a person who recommends, employs, or pays the lawyer to render legal services for another to direct or regulate the lawyer's provision of legal services, or otherwise to interfere with the lawyer's independence of professional judgment, or with the lawyer-client relationship, in rendering such legal services.
- (d) A lawyer shall not practice with or in the form of a professional corporation or organization authorized to practice law for a profit if:
 - (1) a person who is not a lawyer owns any interest therein, except that a fiduciary representative of the estate of a lawyer may hold the stock or interest of the lawyer for a reasonable time during administration;
 - (2) a person who is not a lawyer is a corporate director or officer thereof or occupies a position of similar responsibility in any form of organization other than a corporation; or
 - (3) a person who is not a lawyer has the right or authority to direct, influence or control the professional judgment of a lawyer.
- (e) A lawyer shall not accept a referral from, or otherwise participate in, a lawyer referral service unless it complies with the Rules and Regulations Pertaining to Lawyer Referral Services as adopted by the Board of Governors of the State Bar.

- (f) A lawyer shall not practice with or in the form of a non-profit legal aid, mutual benefit or advocacy group if the nonprofit organization allows any third person or organization to interfere with the lawyer's independence of professional judgment, or with the lawyer-client relationship, or allows or aids any person, organization or group that is not a lawyer or not otherwise authorized to practice law, to practice law unlawfully.

COMMENT

- [1] A lawyer is required to maintain independence of professional judgment in rendering legal services. The provisions of this Rule protect the lawyer's independence of professional judgment by restricting the sharing of fees with a person or organization that is not authorized to practice law and by prohibiting a nonlawyer from directing or controlling the lawyer's professional judgment when rendering legal services to another.
- [2] The prohibition against sharing fees "directly or indirectly" in paragraph (a) does not prohibit a lawyer or law firm from paying a bonus to or otherwise compensating a nonlawyer employee from general revenues received for legal services, provided the arrangement does not interfere with the independence of professional judgment of the lawyer or lawyers in the firm and does not violate any other rule of professional conduct. However, a nonlawyer employee's bonus or other form of compensation may not be based on a percentage or share of fees in specific cases or legal matters.

- [3] Paragraph (a) also does not prohibit the payment to a nonlawyer third party for goods and services to a lawyer or law firm even if the compensation for such goods and services is paid from the lawyer's or law firm's general revenues. However, the compensation to a nonlawyer third party may not be determined as a percentage or share of the lawyer's or law firm's overall revenues or tied to fees in particular cases or legal matters. A lawyer may pay to a nonlawyer third party, such as a collection agency, a percentage of past due or delinquent fees in matters that have been concluded that the third party collects on the lawyer's behalf.
- [4] Other rules also protect the lawyer's independence of professional judgment. See, e.g., Rule 1.5.1, Rule 1.8.6, and Rule 5.1.
- [5] A lawyer's shares of stock in a professional law corporation may be held by the lawyer as a trustee of a revocable living trust for estate planning purposes during the lawyer's life, provided that the corporation does not permit any nonlawyer trustee to direct or control the activities of the professional law corporation.
- [6] The distribution of legal fees pursuant to a referral agreement between lawyers who are not associated in the same law firm is governed by Rule 1.5.1 and not this Rule.
- [7] A lawyer's participation in a lawyer referral service established, sponsored, supervised, and operated in conformity with the Minimum Standards for a Lawyer Referral Service in California is encouraged and is not, of itself, a violation of this Rule. See also Business and Professions Code section 6155.

- [8] ~~Paragraphs (a) and (b5) do not prohibit the payment of~~ Paragraph (a) makes clear that a lawyer is permitted to pay court-awarded legal fees to non-profit legal aid, mutual benefit, and advocacy groups that are not engaged in the unauthorized practice of law. ~~(See Frye v. Tenderloin Housing Clinic, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal.4th 23 [40 Cal.Rptr.3d 221], see also Rule 6.3.)~~ Regarding a lawyer's contribution of legal fees to a legal services organization, see Rule 6.1 Comment [4].
- [9] This Rule applies to group, prepaid, and voluntary legal service programs, activities and organizations and to non-profit legal aid, mutual benefit and advocacy groups. However, nothing in this Rule shall be deemed to authorize the practice of law by any such program, organization or group.
- [10] This Rule is not intended to abrogate case law regarding the relationship between insurers and lawyers providing legal services to insureds. ~~(See Gafcon, Inc. v. Ponsor Associates (2002) 98 Cal.App.4th 1388 [120 Cal.Rptr.2d 392].)~~

Rule ~~1-320~~5.4: Financial and Similar Arrangements With ~~Non-Lawyers~~Nonlawyers

(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

(Aa) ~~Neither a member nor a~~A lawyer or law firm shall ~~directly or indirectly~~not share legal fees directly or indirectly with a person who is not a lawyer, ~~except or with an organization that is not authorized to practice law.~~ This paragraph does not prohibit:

(1) ~~An~~An agreement ~~between by a member and a law~~by a member and a law lawyer with the lawyer's firm, partner, or associate ~~may to~~ provide for the payment of money ~~after the member's death to the member's estate or to one~~after the lawyer's death, to the lawyer's estate or to one or more specified persons over a reasonable period of time; ~~after the lawyer's death, to the lawyer's estate or to one or more specified persons;~~

(2) ~~A member or law firm undertaking to complete unfinished legal business of a deceased member may pay to the estate of the deceased member or other person legally entitled thereto that proportion of the total compensation which fairly represents the services rendered by the deceased member; or~~

(2) any payment authorized by Rule 1.17;

(3) ~~A member~~A lawyer or law firm ~~may include non-member~~may include nonlawyer employees in a compensation, profit-sharing, or retirement plan, even though the plan is based in whole or in part on a profit-sharing arrangement, ~~if such~~provided the plan does not ~~circumvent~~otherwise violate these ~~rules~~Rules or ~~Business and Professions Code section 6000 et seq.~~the State Bar Act; or

(4) ~~A member may pay~~the payment of a prescribed registration, referral, or ~~participation~~other fee by a lawyer to a lawyer referral service established, sponsored, and operated in accordance with the State Bar of California's ~~Minimum Standards~~minimum standards for a ~~Lawyer Referral Service~~lawyer referral service in California; or

(5) a lawyer's or law firm's payment of court-awarded legal fees to a nonprofit organization that employed, retained or recommended employment of the lawyer or law firm in the matter.

(B) ~~A member shall not compensate, give, or promise anything of value to any person or entity for the purpose of recommending or securing employment of the member or the member's law firm by a client, or as a reward for having made a recommendation resulting in employment of the member or the member's law firm by a client. A member's offering of or giving a gift or gratuity to any person or entity having made a recommendation resulting in the employment of the member or the member's law firm shall not of itself violate this rule, provided that the gift or gratuity was not offered or given in consideration of any promise, agreement, or understanding that such a gift or gratuity would be forthcoming or that referrals would be made or encouraged in the future.~~

(C) ~~A member shall not compensate, give, or promise anything of value to any representative of the press, radio, television, or other communication medium in anticipation of or in return for publicity of the member, the law firm, or any other member as such in a news item, but the incidental provision of food or beverage shall not of itself violate this rule.~~

Discussion:-

~~Rule 1-320(C) is not intended to preclude compensation to the communications media in exchange for advertising the member's or law firm's availability for professional employment.~~

Rule 1-310 Forming a Partnership With a Non-Lawyer

- (b) A ~~member~~ lawyer shall not form a partnership or other organization with a person who is not a lawyer if any of the activities of ~~that~~ the partnership or other organization consist of the practice of law.
- (c) A lawyer shall not permit a person who recommends, employs, or pays the lawyer to render legal services for another to direct or regulate the lawyer's provision of legal services, or otherwise to interfere with the lawyer's independence of professional judgment, or with the lawyer-client relationship, in rendering such legal services.

Discussion:-

~~Rule 1-310 is not intended to govern members' activities which cannot be considered to constitute the practice of law. It is intended solely to preclude a member from being involved in the practice of law with a person who is not a lawyer.~~

- (d) A lawyer shall not practice with or in the form of a professional corporation or organization authorized to practice law for a profit if:
- (1) a person who is not a lawyer owns any interest therein, except that a fiduciary representative of the estate of a lawyer may hold the stock or interest of the lawyer for a reasonable time during administration;

- (2) a person who is not a lawyer is a corporate director or officer thereof or occupies a position of similar responsibility in any form of organization other than a corporation; or
- (3) a person who is not a lawyer has the right or authority to direct, influence or control the professional judgment of a lawyer.

- (e) A lawyer shall not accept a referral from, or otherwise participate in, a lawyer referral service unless it complies with the Rules and Regulations Pertaining to Lawyer Referral Services as adopted by the Board of Governors of the State Bar.

Rule 1-600 Legal Service Programs

- (A) ~~f) A member~~ lawyer shall not ~~participate in a nongovernmental program, activity, practice with or organization furnishing, recommending, or paying for in the form of a non-profit legal services aid, which~~ mutual benefit or advocacy group if the nonprofit organization allows any third person or organization to interfere with the ~~member's~~ lawyer's independence of professional judgment, or with the ~~client-lawyer-client~~ relationship, or allows ~~unlicensed persons or aids any person, organization or group that is not a lawyer or not otherwise authorized to practice law, or allows any third person or organization to receive directly or indirectly any part of the consideration paid to the member except as permitted by these rules, or otherwise violates the State Bar Act or these rules~~ practice law unlawfully.

~~(B) The Board of Governors of the State Bar shall formulate and adopt Minimum Standards for Lawyer Referral Services, which, as from time to time amended, shall be binding on members.~~

Discussion: COMMENT

- [1] A lawyer is required to maintain independence of professional judgment in rendering legal services. The provisions of this Rule protect the lawyer's independence of professional judgment by restricting the sharing of fees with a person or organization that is not authorized to practice law and by prohibiting a nonlawyer from directing or controlling the lawyer's professional judgment when rendering legal services to another.
- [2] The prohibition against sharing fees "directly or indirectly" in paragraph (a) does not prohibit a lawyer or law firm from paying a bonus to or otherwise compensating a nonlawyer employee from general revenues received for legal services, provided the arrangement does not interfere with the independence of professional judgment of the lawyer or lawyers in the firm and does not violate any other rule of professional conduct. However, a nonlawyer employee's bonus or other form of compensation may not be based on a percentage or share of fees in specific cases or legal matters.
- [3] Paragraph (a) also does not prohibit the payment to a nonlawyer third party for goods and services to a lawyer or law firm even if the compensation for such goods and services is paid from the lawyer's or law firm's general revenues. However, the compensation to a nonlawyer third party may not be determined as a percentage or share of the lawyer's or law firm's overall revenues or tied to fees in particular cases or legal matters. A lawyer may pay to a nonlawyer third party, such as a collection agency, a percentage of past due or delinquent fees in matters that have been concluded that the third party collects on the lawyer's behalf.

- [4] Other rules also protect the lawyer's independence of professional judgment. See, e.g., Rules 1.5.1, 1.8.6, and 5.1.
- [5] A lawyer's shares of stock in a professional law corporation may be held by the lawyer as a trustee of a revocable living trust for estate planning purposes during the lawyer's life, provided that the corporation does not permit any nonlawyer trustee to direct or control the activities of the professional law corporation.
- [6] The distribution of legal fees pursuant to a referral agreement between lawyers who are not associated in the same law firm is governed by Rule 1.5.1 and not this Rule.
- [7] ~~The~~A lawyer's participation ~~of a member~~ in a lawyer referral service established, sponsored, supervised, and operated in conformity with the Minimum Standards for a Lawyer Referral Service in California is encouraged and is not, of itself, a violation of ~~these rules~~this Rule. See also Business and Professions Code section 6155.

~~Rule 1-600 is not intended to override any contractual agreement or relationship between insurers and insureds regarding the provision of legal services.~~

~~Rule 1-600 is not intended to apply to the activities of a public agency responsible for providing legal services to a government or to the public.~~

~~For purposes of paragraph (A), "a nongovernmental program, activity, or organization" includes, but is not limited to group, prepaid, and voluntary legal service programs, activities, or organizations.~~

[8] Paragraph (a)(5) makes clear that a lawyer is permitted to pay court-awarded legal fees to non-profit legal aid, mutual benefit, and advocacy groups that are not engaged in the unauthorized practice of law. See Frye v. Tenderloin Housing Clinic, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal.4th 23 [40 Cal.Rptr.3d 221]. See also Rule 6.3. Regarding a lawyer's contribution of legal fees to a legal services organization, see Rule 6.1 Comment [4].

[9] This Rule applies ~~to group, prepaid, and voluntary legal service programs, activities and organizations~~ and to non-profit legal aid, mutual benefit and advocacy groups. However, nothing in this Rule shall be deemed to authorize the practice of law by any such program, organization or group.

[10] This Rule is not intended to abrogate case law regarding the relationship between insurers and lawyers providing legal services to insureds. See Gafcon, Inc. v. Ponsor Associates (2002) 98 Cal.App.4th 1388 [120 Cal.Rptr.2d 392].

Rule 5.4: Financial and Similar Arrangements With Nonlawyers
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) A lawyer or law firm shall not share legal fees directly or indirectly with a person who is not a lawyer or with an organization that is not authorized to practice law. This paragraph does not prohibit:
 - (1) an agreement by a lawyer with the lawyer's firm, partner, or associate to provide for the payment of money or other consideration at once or over a reasonable period of time after the lawyer's death, to the lawyer's estate or to one or more specified persons;
 - (2) any payment authorized by Rule 1.17;
 - (3) a lawyer or law firm including nonlawyer employees in a compensation or retirement plan, even though the plan is based in whole or in part on a profit-sharing arrangement, provided the plan does not otherwise violate these Rules or the State Bar Act; or
 - (4) the payment of a prescribed registration, referral, or other fee by a lawyer to a lawyer referral service established, sponsored and operated in accordance with the State Bar of California's minimum standards for a lawyer referral service in California; or
 - (5) a lawyer's or law firm's payment of court-awarded legal fees to a nonprofit organization that employed, retained or recommended employment of the lawyer or law firm in the matter.
- (b) A lawyer shall not form a partnership or other organization with a person who is not a lawyer if any of the activities of the partnership or other organization consist of the practice of law.
- (c) A lawyer shall not permit a person who recommends, employs, or pays the lawyer to render legal services for another to direct or regulate the lawyer's provision of legal services, or otherwise to interfere with the lawyer's independence of professional judgment, or with the lawyer-client relationship, in rendering such legal services.
- (d) A lawyer shall not practice with or in the form of a professional corporation or organization authorized to practice law for a profit if:
 - (1) a person who is not a lawyer owns any interest therein, except that a fiduciary representative of the estate of a lawyer may hold the stock or interest of the lawyer for a reasonable time during administration;
 - (2) a person who is not a lawyer is a corporate director or officer thereof or occupies a position of similar responsibility in any form of organization other than a corporation; or
 - (3) a person who is not a lawyer has the right or authority to direct, influence or control the professional judgment of a lawyer.
- (e) A lawyer shall not accept a referral from, or otherwise participate in, a lawyer referral service unless it complies with the Rules and Regulations Pertaining to Lawyer Referral Services as adopted by the Board of Governors of the State Bar.
- (f) A lawyer shall not practice with or in the form of a non-profit legal aid, mutual benefit or advocacy group if the nonprofit organization allows any third person or organization to interfere with the lawyer's independence of professional judgment, or with the lawyer-client relationship, or allows or aids any person, organization or group that is not a lawyer or not otherwise authorized to practice law, to practice law unlawfully.

COMMENT

- [1] A lawyer is required to maintain independence of professional judgment in rendering legal services. The provisions of this Rule protect the lawyer's independence of professional judgment by restricting the sharing of fees with a person or organization that is not authorized to practice law and by prohibiting a nonlawyer from directing or controlling the lawyer's professional judgment when rendering legal services to another.
- [2] The prohibition against sharing fees "directly or indirectly" in paragraph (a) does not prohibit a lawyer or law firm from paying a bonus to or otherwise compensating a nonlawyer employee from general revenues received for legal services, provided the arrangement does not interfere with the independence of professional judgment of the lawyer or lawyers in the firm and does not violate any other rule of professional conduct. However, a nonlawyer employee's bonus or other form of compensation may not be based on a percentage or share of fees in specific cases or legal matters.
- [3] Paragraph (a) also does not prohibit the payment to a nonlawyer third party for goods and services to a lawyer or law firm even if the compensation for such goods and services is paid from the lawyer's or law firm's general revenues. However, the compensation to a nonlawyer third party may not be determined as a percentage or share of the lawyer's or law firm's overall revenues or tied to fees in particular cases or legal matters. A lawyer may pay to a nonlawyer third party, such as a collection agency, a percentage of past due or delinquent fees in matters that have been concluded that the third party collects on the lawyer's behalf.

- [4] Other rules also protect the lawyer's independence of professional judgment. See, e.g., Rules 1.5.1, 1.8.6, and 5.1.
- [5] A lawyer's shares of stock in a professional law corporation may be held by the lawyer as a trustee of a revocable living trust for estate planning purposes during the lawyer's life, provided that the corporation does not permit any nonlawyer trustee to direct or control the activities of the professional law corporation.
- [6] The distribution of legal fees pursuant to a referral agreement between lawyers who are not associated in the same law firm is governed by Rule 1.5.1 and not this Rule.
- [7] A lawyer's participation in a lawyer referral service established, sponsored, supervised, and operated in conformity with the Minimum Standards for a Lawyer Referral Service in California is encouraged and is not, of itself, a violation of this Rule. See also Business and Professions Code section 6155.
- [8] Paragraph (a)(5) makes clear that a lawyer is permitted to pay court-awarded legal fees to non-profit legal aid, mutual benefit, and advocacy groups that are not engaged in the unauthorized practice of law. See Frye v. Tenderloin Housing Clinic, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal.4th 23 [40 Cal.Rptr.3d 221]. See also Rule 6.3. Regarding a lawyer's contribution of legal fees to a legal services organization, see Rule 6.1 Comment [4].

- [9] This Rule applies to group, prepaid, and voluntary legal service programs, activities and organizations and to non-profit legal aid, mutual benefit and advocacy groups. However, nothing in this Rule shall be deemed to authorize the practice of law by any such program, organization or group.
- [10] This Rule is not intended to abrogate case law regarding the relationship between insurers and lawyers providing legal services to insureds. See Gafcon, Inc. v. Ponsor Associates (2002) 98 Cal.App.4th 1388 [120 Cal.Rptr.2d 392].

Rule 5.4 Financial and Similar Arrangements With Nonlawyers
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 5 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct ("COPRAC")	A	Yes		COPRAC supports the adoption of Proposed Rule 5.4 and the Comments to the Rule.	No response required.
2	Legal Aid foundation of Los Angeles (also Access to Justice Commission)	M	Yes		Model Rule 5.4(a)(4) is an important legal services exception and it should not be deleted as its omission would detrimentally impact common practices that are consistent with existing law.	The Commission agrees that the complete deletion of Model Rule 5.4(a)(4) is unnecessary to adapt the concept of this legal services exception to the general prohibition against fee sharing. Accordingly, the Commission added, as new paragraph (a)(5), a slightly modified version of the Model Rule language. In addition, Comment [8] was revised to state: "Paragraph (a)(5) makes clear that a lawyer is permitted to pay court-awarded legal fees to non-profit legal aid, mutual benefit, and advocacy groups that are not engaged in the unauthorized practice of law. See Frye v. Tenderloin Housing Clinic, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal.4th 23 [40 Cal.Rptr.3d 221]. See also Rule 6.3. Regarding a lawyer's contribution of legal fees to a legal services organization, see Rule 6.1 Comment [4]."
3	Office of Chief Trial Counsel ("OCTC")	M	Yes		Comment [1] more appropriately belongs in a treatise, law review article, or ethics opinion.	The Commission disagrees with the commenter. Comment [1], which is based on Model Rule 5.4, cmt. [1], has been modified to focus on the policy that underlies the Rule – protecting the lawyer's independence of professional judgment – and thus provides guidance in applying the Rule.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 5.4 Financial and Similar Arrangements With Nonlawyers
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 5 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
4	San Diego County Bar Association (Heather L. Rosing)	A	Yes		Adopt rule in interest of uniformity	No response required.
5	Santa Clara County Bar Association	M	Yes	5.4(a)(4) & Comment [4]	We recommend adding to Comment [4] language to alert attorneys about the existence of numerous internet based "internet referral" services as well as internet sites that are only marketing sites. The Comment should point out that this rule may apply to internet based "lawyer referral" services to which a lawyer may be paying a fee for referrals. The Comment should delineate between an internet based site that simply requires the attorney to pay a fee to post a "marketing" profile where the client searches the site and chooses the attorney based on the information posted by the attorney (a marketing/advertising site) as opposed to an internet service that requires the attorney to pay a fee to the internet service which does the screening of clients and where the client contacts the service directly, not the attorney (a referral service).	The Commission did not make the requested addition to Comment [4], in part, because the determination of whether an internet based service falls under the statutory regulations of a lawyer referral service is beyond the scope of the comments to this rule. Such determination is dependent on the facts of a particular situation and involves the application of Business & Professions Code §6155.
				5.4(e)	The SCCBA recommends that this subsection be deleted. This subsection is confusing in that attorneys are not subject to the State Bar Rules and Regulations Pertaining to Lawyer Referral Services; lawyer referral services are subject to the Rules and Regulations. This	The Commission did not make the requested deletion of paragraph (e). Paragraph (e) carries forward the implied prohibition current found in California rule 1-320(A)(4). Paragraph (e) also is derived from Business & Professions Code §6155(a) which, in part, provides that no lawyer

Rule 5.4 Financial and Similar Arrangements With Nonlawyers [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 5 Agree = 2 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					subsection would seem to suggest that all lawyers are subject to the rules.	shall accept a referral of a potential client unless the requirements of the statutory scheme are met.

Rule 5.4: Professional Independence of a Lawyer

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California: Rule 1-310 forbids lawyers to form partnerships with nonlawyers if “any of the activities of that partnership consist of the practice of law.” Rule 1-320 forbids sharing legal fees with nonlawyers with exceptions, including those described in Rules 5.4(1) and (3).

Colorado: Colorado restores language from the 1983 version of ABA Model Rule 5.4 providing that “a lawyer who undertakes to complete unfinished legal business of a deceased lawyer may pay to the estate of the deceased lawyer that proportion of the total compensation which fairly represents the services rendered by the deceased lawyer.” Colorado Rule 5.4(d) provides that a lawyer shall not practice with or in the form of a professional corporation, association, or limited liability company, authorized to practice law for a profit, “except in accordance with C.R.C.P. 265 and any successor rule or action adopted by the Colorado Supreme Court.”

Connecticut: Connecticut omits ABA Model Rule 5.4(a)(4) (relating to fee sharing with nonprofit organizations).

District of Columbia: D.C. Rules 5.4(a)(4) and (b), which are unique in the United States, permit fee sharing between lawyers and nonlawyers “in a partnership or other form of organization which meets the requirements of paragraph (b).” Paragraph (b) provides:

(b) A lawyer may practice law in a partnership or other form of organization in which a financial interest is held or managerial authority is exercised by an individual nonlawyer who performs professional services which assist the organization in providing legal services to clients, but only if:

(1) The partnership or organization has as its sole purpose providing legal services to clients;

(2) All persons having such managerial authority or holding a financial interest undertake to abide by these Rules of Professional Conduct;

(3) The lawyers who have a financial interest or managerial authority in the partnership or organization undertake to be responsible for the nonlawyer participants to the same extent as if nonlawyer participants were lawyers under Rule 5.1;

(4) The foregoing conditions are set forth in writing.

In addition, D.C. Rule 5.4(a)(5) permits a lawyer to “share legal fees, whether awarded by a tribunal or received in settlement of a matter, with a nonprofit organization that employed, retained, or recommended employment of the lawyer in the matter and that qualifies under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code.”

Florida: In place of ABA Model Rule 5.4(a)(2), Florida retains the language from the 1983 Model Rule providing that “a lawyer who undertakes to complete unfinished legal business of a deceased lawyer may pay to the estate of the deceased lawyer that proportion of the total compensation which fairly represents the services rendered by the deceased lawyer.”

Florida Rule 4-8.6 describes the business entities through which lawyers may practice law and forbids practice other than through “officers, directors, partners, agents, or employees who are qualified to render legal services in this state.” Further, only persons who are so qualified may serve as “a partner, manager, director, or executive officer” of such an entity. Florida has substantially adopted Rule 5.4(a)(4).

Georgia adopts the pre-2002 version of ABA Model Rule 5.4 verbatim, but also restores language from the 1983 Model Rule permitting a lawyer who completes the unfinished business of a deceased lawyer to pay the deceased lawyer’s estate “that proportion of the total compensation which fairly represents the services rendered by the deceased lawyer.”

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2009, Illinois tracks the Model Rule. Illinois Rule 5.4(d)(2) permits a nonlawyer to serve as secretary for a professional corporation or for-profit association authorized to practice law “if such secretary performs only ministerial duties.”

Indiana deletes ABA Model Rule 5.4(a)(4).

Iowa deletes ABA Model Rule 5.4(a)(4).

Kansas: Kansas replaces ABA Model Rule 5.4(a)(2) with language from the 1983 version of ABA Model Rule 5.4 providing that “a lawyer who undertakes to complete unfinished legal business of a deceased lawyer may pay to the estate of the deceased lawyer that proportion of the total compensation which fairly represents the services rendered by the deceased lawyer.” Kansas makes no reference to the purchase of a law practice or to Rule 1.17, which Kansas has not adopted.

Maryland restores language from the 1983 version of ABA Model Rule 5.4 providing that “a lawyer who undertakes to complete unfinished legal business of a deceased, retired, disabled, or suspended lawyer may pay to that lawyer or that lawyer’s estate the proportion of the total compensation which fairly represents the services rendered by the former lawyer.”

Massachusetts: Rule 5.4(a) allows a lawyer or law firm to share “a statutory or tribunal-approved” legal fee with “a qualified legal assistance organization that referred the matter to the lawyer or law firm“ if the organization is not for profit and tax-exempt, the fee is made in connection with a proceeding to advance the organization’s purposes, and the client consents. The Comment to this rule explains that the “financial needs of these organizations, which serve important public ends, justify a limited exception to the prohibition against fee-sharing with nonlawyers.” The Comment also explains that the exception does not extend to fees generated in connection with proceedings unrelated to the organization’s tax-exempt purpose, “such as generating business income for the organization.” Massachusetts Rule 5.4(b) prohibits a lawyer from forming a partnership “or other business entity“ with a nonlawyer if any of the activities of the “entity“ consist of the practice of law.

Minnesota: Rule 5.4(a)(4) permits a lawyer to share court-awarded fees with a nonprofit organization only “subject to full disclosure and court approval,” and Rule 5.4(a)(5) restores language from the 1983 version of ABA Model Rule 5.4 providing that “a lawyer who undertakes to complete unfinished legal business of a deceased lawyer may pay to the estate of the deceased lawyer the proportion of the total compensation that fairly represents the services rendered by the deceased lawyer.”

Missouri: Missouri restores language from the 1983 version of ABA Model Rule 5.4(a) permitting a lawyer who completes unfinished legal business of a deceased lawyer to pay the deceased lawyer’s estate “that proportion of the total compensation that fairly represents the services rendered by the deceased lawyer.”

New Hampshire: Rule 5.4(a)(4) permits a lawyer to “share legal fees with a nonprofit organization that employed, retained or recommended employment of the lawyer in the matter,” whether or not the fees are “court-awarded.”

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 5.4 is substantially the same as the Model Rule except New York omits Rule 5.4(a)(4).

North Carolina omits ABA Model Rule 5.4(d)(2) and adds Rule 5.4(a)(3), which permits a lawyer who undertakes to complete unfinished legal business of a deceased lawyer “or a disbarred lawyer“ may pay to the estate of the deceased lawyer “or to the disbarred lawyer“ that proportion of the total compensation which fairly represents the services rendered by the deceased lawyer “or the disbarred lawyer.”

Ohio: Rule 5.4 permits a lawyer to “share legal fees with a non-profit organization that recommended employment of the lawyer in the matter,” whether or not the fees are court-awarded, provided that the nonprofit organization complies with Ohio’s Supreme Court Rules governing lawyer referral and information services.

Oklahoma: Rule 5.4(2A) adds language from the 1983 version of ABA Model Rule 5.4 providing that “a lawyer who undertakes to complete unfinished legal business of a deceased lawyer may pay to the estate of the deceased lawyer that proportion of the total compensation which fairly represents the services rendered by the deceased lawyer.” Oklahoma Rule 5.4(d) says, in brackets: “The concept of this subsection of the ABA Model Rule is addressed in the Comment.” Oklahoma’s Comment says that Rule 5.4(a) “does not prohibit a lawyer from voluntarily sharing court-awarded legal fees with a nonprofit organization that employed, retained or recommended employment of the lawyer in the matter. This shall not be deemed a sharing of attorneys fees.” (Emphasis added.)

Oregon adds a new Rule 5.4(e) providing that a lawyer “shall not refer a client to a nonlawyer with the understanding that the lawyer will receive a fee, commission or anything of value in exchange for the referral, but a lawyer may accept gifts in the ordinary course of social or business hospitality.”

Pennsylvania adds Rule 5.4(d)(4), which provides that “in the case of any form of association other than a professional corporation, the organic law governing the internal affairs of the association provides the equity owners of the association with greater liability protection than is available to the shareholders of a professional corporation.” Rule 5.4(d) concludes by stating that subparagraphs (d)(1)-(3) “shall not apply to a lawyer employed in the legal department of a corporation or other organization.”

Rhode Island: After some uncertainty over whether Rhode Island would subscribe to the position in Rule 5.4(a)(4), as described in Selected State Variations for our 2008 edition, Rhode Island has adopted the following version of ABA Model Rule 5.4(a)(4):

(4) a lawyer or law firm may agree to share a statutory or tribunal-approved fee award, or a settlement in a matter eligible for such an award, with an organization that referred the matter to the lawyer or law firm if: (i) the organization is one that is not for profit; (ii) the organization is tax-exempt under federal law; (iii) the fee award or settlement is made in connection with a proceeding to advance one or more of the purposes by virtue of which the organization is tax-exempt; and (iv) the tribunal approves the fee-sharing arrangement.

Texas: Under Texas Rule 5.04(a)(1), either a lawyer’s agreement or a lawful court order may provide for the payment of money over time to the lawyer’s estate “to or for the benefit of the lawyer’s heirs or personal representatives, beneficiaries, or former spouse, after the lawyer’s death or as otherwise provided by law or court order.”

Proposed Rule 5.5 [RPC 1-300]
“Unauthorized Practice of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice of Law”
(XDraft #8.1, 9/17/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 5.5 amends current Rule of Professional Conduct 1-300. In substance, it continues the prohibitions in Rule 1-300 against aiding any person or entity in the unauthorized practice of law and against a member of the California bar practicing law in another jurisdiction in violation of the regulations of that other jurisdiction. However, the proposed rule adds from the ABA Model Rule prohibitions against a lawyer who is not admitted to practice in California maintaining an office or systematic presence in California and from holding out that he or she is admitted to practice law in California.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ ☐ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 1-300; Rules 9.40-9.41, 9.43, 9.45-9.48, California Rules of Court

Statute

Bus. & Prof. Code, sec. 6125-6126.

Case law

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total -- votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 8

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 2

Abstain 2

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Dissenting Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart ☐ Yes ☒ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 5.5* Unauthorized Practice of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice of Law

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 5.5 amends current Rule of Professional Conduct 1-300. In substance, it continues the prohibitions in Rule 1-300 against aiding any person or entity in the unauthorized practice of law and against a member of the California bar practicing law in another jurisdiction in violation of the regulations of that other jurisdiction. However, the proposed rule adds from the ABA Model Rule prohibitions against a lawyer who is not admitted to practice in California maintaining an office or systematic presence in California and from holding out that he or she is admitted to practice law in California.

The proposed Rule does not adopt either paragraph (c) or (d) to Model Rule 5.5, or most of the comment to MR 5.5 because the subject matter of those Model Rule provisions are governed by decisional law and by California Rules of Court 9.47 and 9.48, both of which were promulgated by the California Supreme Court's Multijurisdictional Practice Task Force. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (c). The Commission did not include in Rule 5.5 other temporary practice rules that are found in the California Rules of Court (e.g., Rules 9.41 – 9.44), but did include a cross-reference to them in the Comment. See Comment [2]. Finally, the Commission did not consider several Model Rules of Court that were proposed by the ABA Multijurisdictional Practice Commission that address issues such as temporary practice by foreign nationals.

* Proposed Rule, XDraft 8.1 (9/17/09).

BA Model Rule Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(a) A lawyer admitted to practice law in California shall not:	Proposed paragraph (a) is an introductory paragraph to subparagraphs (1) and (2). This provision deals with two different scenarios. The first [covered by paragraph (a)] is misconduct by a lawyer admitted to practice law in California. The second [proposed paragraph (b)] is misconduct by a lawyer who is not admitted to practice in this State. Because proposed paragraph (a) deals with two different offenses, it was given an introductory paragraph for the two different offenses that are described in the subparagraphs (1) and (2).
(a) A lawyer shall not practice law in a jurisdiction in violation of the regulation of the legal profession in that jurisdiction, or assist another in doing so.	(a1) ~~A lawyer shall not~~ practice law in a jurisdiction in violation of the regulation of the legal profession in that jurisdiction; or ~~assist another in doing so.~~	Proposed subparagraph (a)(1) is substantially the same as the first clause of ABA Model Rule 5.5(a). By drafting an introductory paragraph (a) in the proposed rule, in subparagraph (1) we were able to combine the two complementary concepts of current Rule of Professional Conduct 1-300 in one part of the proposed rule applicable to California lawyers and made the proposed rule briefer by deleting the first four words of the Model Rule. The second clause of Model Rule 5.5(a) is covered by subparagraph (a)(2). See explanation for paragraph (a)(2).
	(2) knowingly assist a person or organization in the performance of activity that constitutes the unauthorized practice of law.	Current California Rule of Professional Conduct 1-300(A) is an important public protection rule. It subjects a lawyer who is admitted in California to discipline if he or she aids another person or entity in the unauthorized practice of law. Absent such a rule, a lawyer who commits that offense would not likely be subject to discipline in the State Bar Court. However, the Model Rule is not as explicit as the current California rule, and the second clause of

* Proposed Rule 5.5, XDraft 8.1 (9/17/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

BA Model Rule Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		Model Rule 5.5(a) is only a subset of the broader proscription contained in the current California rule. Therefore, the proposed rule adds current Rule 1-300(A) to Model Rule 5.5(a). Subparagraph (a)(2) is necessary to preserve the greater consumer and client protection that California residents have under current Rule 1-300(A). The California Rules of Court and the Legislature have greatly expanded what areas of the practice of law are "authorized" even though performed by a non- member of the State Bar of California. Notwithstanding these changes in the law, there are still individuals who will not comply with these new laws and thereby harm California residents. While unauthorized practice of law statutes may be enforced to regulate this unlawful behavior, they do not normally reach lawyers who aid and abet unauthorized practice. Regulation by the State Bar of California of lawyers who aid and abet such unlawful behavior is a necessary adjunct of such enforcement. Subparagraph (a)(2) adds the mens rea requirement of "knowingly" assisting another in the unlicensed practice of law. A lawyer should not be subject to discipline for assisting another whom the lawyer, in good faith, believes to be an active member of the State Bar or otherwise authorized to practice by statute or court rule. Model Rule 5.5 does not have a mens rea requirement. Model Rule 8.4(a), which prohibits assisting or inducing another to commit a violation of the Rules, does have such a requirement. In this respect, they are inconsistent. We have been unable to discover any reason for that inconsistency. Adding "knowingly" to proposed Rule 5.5 makes it consistent with both Model Rule 8.4 and the Commission's proposed Rule 8.4. However, the addition of a mens rea requirement causes proposed Rule 5.5 to diverge from both Model Rule 5.5 and current rule 1-300.

BA Model Rule Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(b) A lawyer who is not admitted to practice in this jurisdiction shall not:	(b) A lawyer who is not admitted to practice law in ~~this jurisdiction~~California shall not:	Proposed paragraph (b) is substantially the same as ABA Model Rule 5.5(b). The word "law" has been added to the proposed rule to make the subject matter of the lawyer's admission explicit, and the word "California" has been substituted for the phrase "this jurisdiction" for brevity, because that is the convention used in the California Rules of Court regulating multijurisdictional practice, and because the phrase "this jurisdiction" is ambiguous in that it could refer to jurisdictions or venues within the State, when the intention is to refer to admission to practice in the State of California.
(1) except as authorized by these Rules or other law, establish an office or other systematic and continuous presence in this jurisdiction for the practice of law; or	(1) except as authorized by these Rules or other law, establish ~~an~~ or maintain a resident office or other systematic ~~and~~ or continuous presence in ~~this jurisdiction~~ California for the practice of law; or	The practice of law in California by attorneys not admitted to practice in this State but who are temporarily in this State as part of litigation is governed by California Rule of Court 9.47. The phrase "an office" in Model Rule 5.5 has been changed in the proposed rule to the phrase "or maintain a resident office" to conform to the wording of California Rule of Court 9.47(d)(2). The phrase "this jurisdiction" has been changed to "California" for the reasons stated in the preceding paragraph.
(2) hold out to the public or otherwise represent that the lawyer is admitted to practice law in this jurisdiction.	(2) hold out to the public or otherwise represent that the lawyer is admitted to practice law in ~~this jurisdiction~~ California.	The phrase "this jurisdiction" has been changed to "California" for the reasons stated two paragraphs above.
(c) A lawyer admitted in another United States jurisdiction, and not disbarred or suspended from practice in any jurisdiction, may provide legal services on a temporary basis in this	~~(c) A lawyer admitted in another United States jurisdiction, and not disbarred or suspended from practice in any jurisdiction, may provide legal services on a temporary basis in this~~	Proposed Rule 5.5 deletes paragraphs (c) and (d) of ABA Model Rule 5.5 because their subject matter is already governed by California Rules of Court 9.47 and 9.48.

BA Model Rule Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
jurisdiction that: (1) are undertaken in association with a lawyer who is admitted to practice in this jurisdiction and who actively participates in the matter; (2) are in or reasonably related to a pending or potential proceeding before a tribunal in this or another jurisdiction, if the lawyer, or a person the lawyer is assisting, is authorized by law or order to appear in such proceeding or reasonably expects to be so authorized; (3) are in or reasonably related to a pending or potential arbitration, mediation, or other alternative dispute resolution proceeding in this or another jurisdiction, if the services arise out of or are reasonably related to the lawyer's practice in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted to practice and are not services for which the forum requires pro hac vice admission; or (4) are not within paragraphs (c)(2) or (c)(3) and arise out of or are reasonably related to the lawyer's practice in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted to practice.	~~jurisdiction that:~~ ~~(1) are undertaken in association with a lawyer who is admitted to practice in this jurisdiction and who actively participates in the matter;~~ ~~(2) are in or reasonably related to a pending or potential proceeding before a tribunal in this or another jurisdiction, if the lawyer, or a person the lawyer is assisting, is authorized by law or order to appear in such proceeding or reasonably expects to be so authorized;~~ ~~(3) are in or reasonably related to a pending or potential arbitration, mediation, or other alternative dispute resolution proceeding in this or another jurisdiction, if the services arise out of or are reasonably related to the lawyer's practice in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted to practice and are not services for which the forum requires pro hac vice admission; or~~ ~~(4) are not within paragraphs (c)(2) or (c)(3) and arise out of or are reasonably related to the lawyer's practice in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted to practice.~~	Model Rule 5.5(c) speaks to the subject of when a lawyer not admitted in the jurisdiction adopting the Model Rule, but who is admitted to practice law in another United States jurisdiction, may temporarily provide legal services in the adoptingc jurisdiction. That subject is not addressed by the current Rules of Professional Conduct or by the State Bar Act. However, it is addressed by California Rules of Court 9.47 and 9.48. Because those subjects are governed by Rules of Court, it is not necessary for the Rules of Professional Conduct to do so. In addition to the Rules of Court, judicial decisions and federal law also govern this subject. Accordingly, Model Rule 5.5(c) and (d) are not needed, and may conflict with Rules of Court, statutes, or applicable decisional law. They have therefore been deleted. However, proposed Comment [2], infra, refers attorneys to the relevant statutes, Rules of Court, and some federal judicial decisions. Because the California Rules of Court were amended after the first batch of proposed rules were circulated for public comment, the references in proposed Comment [2] will have to be updated. The Commission concluded that attempting to restate in a Rule of Professional Conduct all of the nuances of the statutes, Rules of Court, and judicial decisions in California and in federal courts would make the proposed rule unwieldy and unnecessarily long, and, because judicial decisions on the subject of unauthorized practice of law are constantly evolving, the proposed rule could not possibly be complete, even if it attempted to do so. Therefore, the brief references in proposed Comment [2] are offered for succinct guidance.

BA Model Rule Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(d) A lawyer admitted in another United States jurisdiction, and not disbarred or suspended from practice in any jurisdiction, may provide legal services in this jurisdiction that: (1) are provided to the lawyer's employer or its organizational affiliates and are not services for which the forum requires pro hac vice admission; or (2) are services that the lawyer is authorized to provide by federal law or other law of this jurisdiction.	~~(d) A lawyer admitted in another United States jurisdiction, and not disbarred or suspended from practice in any jurisdiction, may provide legal services in this jurisdiction that:~~ ~~(1) are provided to the lawyer's employer or its organizational affiliates and are not services for which the forum requires pro hac vice admission; or~~ ~~(2) are services that the lawyer is authorized to provide by federal law or other law of this jurisdiction.~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (c), above.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice ~~Of~~ Law; Multijurisdictional Practice ~~Of~~ Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule Comments
[1] A lawyer may practice law only in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is authorized to practice. A lawyer may be admitted to practice law in a jurisdiction on a regular basis or may be authorized by court rule or order or by law to practice for a limited purpose or on a restricted basis. Paragraph (a) applies to unauthorized practice of law by a lawyer, whether through the lawyer's direct action or by the lawyer assisting another person.	[1] A lawyer may practice law only in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is authorized to practice. ~~A lawyer may be admitted to practice law in a jurisdiction on a regular basis or may be authorized by court rule or order or by law to practice for a limited purpose or on a restricted basis.~~ Paragraph (a) ~~applies to~~ prohibits the unauthorized practice of law by a lawyer, whether through the lawyer's direct action or by the lawyer assisting another person in the performance of activities that constitute the unauthorized practice of law.	Comment [1] is substantially the same as ABA Model Rule Comment [1]. The second sentence is deleted from the proposed Comment because it is an inaccurate and incomplete statement of when a lawyer may practice law in the State of California under applicable statutes, Rules of Court, and decisional law. In the third sentence of the Comment to the Model Rule, the word "applies to" is not an accurate description of paragraph (a) of the rule. Therefore, in the proposed rule, the phrase "applies to" has been changed to the phrase "prohibits the." The phrase ". . . in the performance of activities that constitute the unauthorized practice of law" has been added to the last sentence of the Comment because it makes the last sentence of the Comment a more accurate and complete summary of the provisions of paragraph (a).
~~[2] The definition of the practice of law is established by law and varies from one jurisdiction to another. Whatever the definition, limiting the practice of law to members of the bar protects the public against rendition of legal services by unqualified persons. This Rule does not prohibit a lawyer from employing the services of paraprofessionals and delegating functions to them, so long as the lawyer supervises the delegated work and retains responsibility for their work. See Rule 5.3~~	~~[2] The definition of the practice of law is established by law and varies from one jurisdiction to another. Whatever the definition, limiting the practice of law to members of the bar protects the public against rendition of legal services by unqualified persons. This Rule does not prohibit a lawyer from employing the services of paraprofessionals and delegating functions to them, so long as the lawyer supervises the delegated work and retains responsibility for their work. See Rule 5.3.~~	Comment [2] of ABA Model Rule 5.5 has been deleted because its first two sentences are only a generalized comment about admission to practice law throughout the United States and are irrelevant to the California Rules. The third sentence has been deleted because that subject will be covered by proposed new Rule 5.3 (addressing a lawyer's supervision of non-lawyer assistants).

* Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice ~~Of~~^{of} Law; Multijurisdictional Practice ~~Of~~^{of} Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule Comments
	[2] Paragraph (b) prohibits lawyers from practicing law in California unless admitted to practice in this state or otherwise entitled to practice law in this state by court rule or other law. (See, e.g., California Business and Professions Code, sections 6125 and 6126. See also California Rules of Court, rules 9.45 [registered legal services attorneys], 9.46 [registered in-house counsel], 9.47 [attorneys practicing law temporarily in California as part of litigation], 9.48 [non-litigating attorneys temporarily in California to provide legal services], 9.40 [counsel pro hac vice], rule 9.41 [appearance by military counsel], 9.42 [certified law students], rule 9.43 [out-of-state attorney arbitration counsel program] and rule 9.44 [registered foreign legal consultant].) A lawyer does not violate paragraph (b) to the extent the lawyer is engaged in activities authorized by any other applicable exception. (See, e.g., 28 U.S.C. sections 515-519, 530C(c)(1); 35 U.S.C. section 32(b)(2)(D) and Sperry v. Florida ex rel. Florida Bar (1963) 373 U.S. 379 [83 S.Ct. 1322]; Augustine v. Dept. of Veteran Affairs (Fed. Cir. 2005) 429 F.3d 1334.)	In place of ABA Comment [2], the proposed rule substitutes a new Comment [2] that refers the public, courts, and lawyers to relevant statutes, rules of court, and federal decisions. See explanation of changes regarding paragraph (c), supra. The Commission endeavored to draft a definition of the practice of law in this State but does not recommend that such a definition be included in these rules. It would lengthen the Comment by at least six pages and would still not be a complete definition of what constitutes the practice of law in this State, for judicial decisions are constantly re-interpreting that concept in light of the facts of specific cases.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice ~~Of~~ Law; Multijurisdictional Practice ~~Of~~ Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule Comments
[3] A lawyer may provide professional advice and instruction to nonlawyers whose employment requires knowledge of the law; for example, claims adjusters, employees of financial or commercial institutions, social workers, accountants and persons employed in government agencies. Lawyers also may assist independent nonlawyers, such as paraprofessionals, who are authorized by the law of a jurisdiction to provide particular law-related services. In addition, a lawyer may counsel nonlawyers who wish to proceed pro se. [4] Other than as authorized by law or this Rule, a lawyer who is not admitted to practice generally in this jurisdiction violates paragraph (b) if the lawyer establishes an office or other systematic and continuous presence in this jurisdiction for the practice of law. Presence may be systematic and continuous even if the lawyer is not physically present here. Such a lawyer must not hold out to the public or otherwise represent that the lawyer is admitted to practice law in this jurisdiction. See also Rules 7.1(a) and 7.5(b).	~~[3] A lawyer may provide professional advice and instruction to nonlawyers whose employment requires knowledge of the law; for example, claims adjusters, employees of financial or commercial institutions, social workers, accountants and persons employed in government agencies. Lawyers also may assist independent nonlawyers, such as paraprofessionals, who are authorized by the law of a jurisdiction to provide particular law-related services. In addition, a lawyer may counsel nonlawyers who wish to proceed pro se.~~ ~~[4] Other than as authorized by law or this Rule, a lawyer who is not admitted to practice generally in this jurisdiction violates paragraph (b) if the lawyer establishes an office or other systematic and continuous presence in this jurisdiction for the practice of law. Presence may be systematic and continuous even if the lawyer is not physically present here. Such a lawyer must not hold out to the public or otherwise represent that the lawyer is admitted to practice law in this jurisdiction. See also Rules 7.1(a) and 7.5(b).~~	ABA Comment [3] is deleted from the proposed rule because it is an incomplete and inaccurate statement of the law in California regarding lawful practice by non-lawyers. See, for example, Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6400, et seq., dealing with Legal Document Assistants and Unlawful Detainer Assistants. This subject is best addressed in Rule 5.3. Comment [4] has been deleted from the proposed rule because it is an incomplete and inaccurate restatement of part of paragraph (b) of the proposed rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice ~~Of~~of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice ~~Of~~of Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule Comments
[5] There are occasions in which a lawyer admitted to practice in another United States jurisdiction, and not disbarred or suspended from practice in any jurisdiction, may provide legal services on a temporary basis in this jurisdiction under circumstances that do not create an unreasonable risk to the interests of their clients, the public or the courts. Paragraph (c) identifies four such circumstances. The fact that conduct is not so identified does not imply that the conduct is or is not authorized. With the exception of paragraphs (d)(1) and (d)(2), this Rule does not authorize a lawyer to establish an office or other systematic and continuous presence in this jurisdiction without being admitted to practice generally here.	~~[5] There are occasions in which a lawyer admitted to practice in another United States jurisdiction, and not disbarred or suspended from practice in any jurisdiction, may provide legal services on a temporary basis in this jurisdiction under circumstances that do not create an unreasonable risk to the interests of their clients, the public or the courts. Paragraph (c) identifies four such circumstances. The fact that conduct is not so identified does not imply that the conduct is or is not authorized. With the exception of paragraphs (d)(1) and (d)(2), this Rule does not authorize a lawyer to establish an office or other systematic and continuous presence in this jurisdiction without being admitted to practice generally here.~~	Comments [5] through [21] have been deleted because they discuss paragraphs (c) and (d), both of which have been deleted from the proposed Rule because the subject matter is already governed by Rules of Court, Rules 9.47 and 9.48, and decisional law.
[6] There is no single test to determine whether a lawyer's services are provided on a "temporary basis" in this jurisdiction, and may therefore be permissible under paragraph (c). Services may be "temporary" even though the lawyer provides services in this jurisdiction on a recurring basis, or for an extended period of time, as when the lawyer is representing a client in a single lengthy negotiation or litigation.	~~[6] There is no single test to determine whether a lawyer's services are provided on a "temporary basis" in this jurisdiction, and may therefore be permissible under paragraph (c). Services may be "temporary" even though the lawyer provides services in this jurisdiction on a recurring basis, or for an extended period of time, as when the lawyer is representing a client in a single lengthy negotiation or litigation.~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (c) and (d) and Comment [5].

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice ~~Of~~^{of} Law; Multijurisdictional Practice ~~Of~~^{of} Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule Comments
[7] Paragraphs (c) and (d) apply to lawyers who are admitted to practice law in any United States jurisdiction, which includes the District of Columbia and any state, territory or commonwealth of the United States. The word "admitted" in paragraph (c) contemplates that the lawyer is authorized to practice in the jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted and excludes a lawyer who while technically admitted is not authorized to practice, because, for example, the lawyer is on inactive status.	~~[7] Paragraphs (c) and (d) apply to lawyers who are admitted to practice law in any United States jurisdiction, which includes the District of Columbia and any state, territory or commonwealth of the United States. The word "admitted" in paragraph (c) contemplates that the lawyer is authorized to practice in the jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted and excludes a lawyer who while technically admitted is not authorized to practice, because, for example, the lawyer is on inactive status.~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (c) and (d) and Comment [5].
[8] Paragraph (c)(1) recognizes that the interests of clients and the public are protected if a lawyer admitted only in another jurisdiction associates with a lawyer licensed to practice in this jurisdiction. For this paragraph to apply, however, the lawyer admitted to practice in this jurisdiction must actively participate in and share responsibility for the representation of the client.	~~[8] Paragraph (c)(1) recognizes that the interests of clients and the public are protected if a lawyer admitted only in another jurisdiction associates with a lawyer licensed to practice in this jurisdiction. For this paragraph to apply, however, the lawyer admitted to practice in this jurisdiction must actively participate in and share responsibility for the representation of the client.~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (c) and (d) and Comment [5].

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice ~~Of~~of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice ~~Of~~of Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule Comments
[9] Lawyers not admitted to practice generally in a jurisdiction may be authorized by law or order of a tribunal or an administrative agency to appear before the tribunal or agency. This authority may be granted pursuant to formal rules governing admission pro hac vice or pursuant to informal practice of the tribunal or agency. Under paragraph (c)(2), a lawyer does not violate this Rule when the lawyer appears before a tribunal or agency pursuant to such authority. To the extent that a court rule or other law of this jurisdiction requires a lawyer who is not admitted to practice in this jurisdiction to obtain admission pro hac vice before appearing before a tribunal or administrative agency, this Rule requires the lawyer to obtain that authority.	~~[9] Lawyers not admitted to practice generally in a jurisdiction may be authorized by law or order of a tribunal or an administrative agency to appear before the tribunal or agency. This authority may be granted pursuant to formal rules governing admission pro hac vice or pursuant to informal practice of the tribunal or agency. Under paragraph (c)(2), a lawyer does not violate this Rule when the lawyer appears before a tribunal or agency pursuant to such authority. To the extent that a court rule or other law of this jurisdiction requires a lawyer who is not admitted to practice in this jurisdiction to obtain admission pro hac vice before appearing before a tribunal or administrative agency, this Rule requires the lawyer to obtain that authority.~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (c) and (d) and Comment [5].
[10] Paragraph (c)(2) also provides that a lawyer rendering services in this jurisdiction on a temporary basis does not violate this Rule when the lawyer engages in conduct in anticipation of a proceeding or hearing in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is authorized to practice law or in which the lawyer reasonably expects to be admitted pro hac vice. Examples of such conduct include meetings with the client, interviews of potential witnesses, and the review of documents. Similarly, a lawyer admitted only in another jurisdiction may engage in conduct temporarily in this jurisdiction in connection with pending litigation in another jurisdiction in which the lawyer is or reasonably expects to be authorized to appear,	~~[10] Paragraph (c)(2) also provides that a lawyer rendering services in this jurisdiction on a temporary basis does not violate this Rule when the lawyer engages in conduct in anticipation of a proceeding or hearing in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is authorized to practice law or in which the lawyer reasonably expects to be admitted pro hac vice. Examples of such conduct include meetings with the client, interviews of potential witnesses, and the review of documents. Similarly, a lawyer admitted only in another jurisdiction may engage in conduct temporarily in this jurisdiction in connection with pending litigation in another jurisdiction in which the lawyer is or reasonably expects to be authorized to appear,~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (c) and (d) and Comment [5].

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice ~~Of~~^{of} Law; Multijurisdictional Practice ~~Of~~^{of} Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule Comments
including taking depositions in this jurisdiction.	~~including taking depositions in this jurisdiction.~~
[11] When a lawyer has been or reasonably expects to be admitted to appear before a court or administrative agency, paragraph (c)(2) also permits conduct by lawyers who are associated with that lawyer in the matter, but who do not expect to appear before the court or administrative agency. For example, subordinate lawyers may conduct research, review documents, and attend meetings with witnesses in support of the lawyer responsible for the litigation.	~~[11] When a lawyer has been or reasonably expects to be admitted to appear before a court or administrative agency, paragraph (c)(2) also permits conduct by lawyers who are associated with that lawyer in the matter, but who do not expect to appear before the court or administrative agency. For example, subordinate lawyers may conduct research, review documents, and attend meetings with witnesses in support of the lawyer responsible for the litigation.~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (c) and (d) and Comment [5].
[12] Paragraph (c)(3) permits a lawyer admitted to practice law in another jurisdiction to perform services on a temporary basis in this jurisdiction if those services are in or reasonably related to a pending or potential arbitration, mediation, or other alternative dispute resolution proceeding in this or another jurisdiction, if the services arise out of or are reasonably related to the lawyer's practice in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted to practice. The lawyer, however, must obtain admission pro hac vice in the case of a court-annexed arbitration or mediation or otherwise if court	~~[12] Paragraph (c)(3) permits a lawyer admitted to practice law in another jurisdiction to perform services on a temporary basis in this jurisdiction if those services are in or reasonably related to a pending or potential arbitration, mediation, or other alternative dispute resolution proceeding in this or another jurisdiction, if the services arise out of or are reasonably related to the lawyer's practice in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted to practice. The lawyer, however, must obtain admission pro hac vice in the case of a court-annexed arbitration or mediation or otherwise if court~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (c) and (d) and Comment [5].

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice ~~Of~~^{of} Law; Multijurisdictional Practice ~~Of~~^{of} Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule Comments
rules or law so require.	~~rules or law so require.~~
[13] Paragraph (c)(4) permits a lawyer admitted in another jurisdiction to provide certain legal services on a temporary basis in this jurisdiction that arise out of or are reasonably related to the lawyer's practice in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted but are not within paragraphs (c)(2) or (c)(3). These services include both legal services and services that nonlawyers may perform but that are considered the practice of law when performed by lawyers.	~~[13] Paragraph (c)(4) permits a lawyer admitted in another jurisdiction to provide certain legal services on a temporary basis in this jurisdiction that arise out of or are reasonably related to the lawyer's practice in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted but are not within paragraphs (c)(2) or (c)(3). These services include both legal services and services that nonlawyers may perform but that are considered the practice of law when performed by lawyers.~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (c) and (d) and Comment [5].
[14] Paragraphs (c)(3) and (c)(4) require that the services arise out of or be reasonably related to the lawyer's practice in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted. A variety of factors evidence such a relationship. The lawyer's client may have been previously represented by the lawyer, or may be resident in or have substantial contacts with the jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted. The matter, although involving other jurisdictions, may have a significant connection with that jurisdiction. In other cases, significant aspects of the lawyer's work might be conducted in that jurisdiction or a significant aspect of the matter may involve the law of that	~~[14] Paragraphs (c)(3) and (c)(4) require that the services arise out of or be reasonably related to the lawyer's practice in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted. A variety of factors evidence such a relationship. The lawyer's client may have been previously represented by the lawyer, or may be resident in or have substantial contacts with the jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted. The matter, although involving other jurisdictions, may have a significant connection with that jurisdiction. In other cases, significant aspects of the lawyer's work might be conducted in that jurisdiction or a significant aspect of the matter may involve the law of that~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (c) and (d) and Comment [5].

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice ~~Of~~ Law; Multijurisdictional Practice ~~Of~~ Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule Comments
jurisdiction. The necessary relationship might arise when the client's activities or the legal issues involve multiple jurisdictions, such as when the officers of a multinational corporation survey potential business sites and seek the services of their lawyer in assessing the relative merits of each. In addition, the services may draw on the lawyer's recognized expertise developed through the regular practice of law on behalf of clients in matters involving a particular body of federal, nationally-uniform, foreign, or international law. Lawyers desiring to provide pro bono legal services on a temporary basis in a jurisdiction that has been affected by a major disaster, but in which they are not otherwise authorized to practice law, as well as lawyers from the affected jurisdiction who seek to practice law temporarily in another jurisdiction, but in which they are not otherwise authorized to practice law, should consult the [Model Court Rule on Provision of Legal Services Following Determination of Major Disaster].	~~jurisdiction. The necessary relationship might arise when the client's activities or the legal issues involve multiple jurisdictions, such as when the officers of a multinational corporation survey potential business sites and seek the services of their lawyer in assessing the relative merits of each. In addition, the services may draw on the lawyer's recognized expertise developed through the regular practice of law on behalf of clients in matters involving a particular body of federal, nationally-uniform, foreign, or international law. Lawyers desiring to provide pro bono legal services on a temporary basis in a jurisdiction that has been affected by a major disaster, but in which they are not otherwise authorized to practice law, as well as lawyers from the affected jurisdiction who seek to practice law temporarily in another jurisdiction, but in which they are not otherwise authorized to practice law, should consult the [Model Court Rule on Provision of Legal Services Following Determination of Major Disaster].~~
[15] Paragraph (d) identifies two circumstances in which a lawyer who is admitted to practice in another United States jurisdiction, and is not disbarred or suspended from practice in any jurisdiction, may establish an office or other systematic and continuous presence in this jurisdiction for the practice of law as well as provide legal services on a temporary basis. Except as provided in paragraphs (d)(1) and (d)(2), a lawyer who is admitted to	~~[15] Paragraph (d) identifies two circumstances in which a lawyer who is admitted to practice in another United States jurisdiction, and is not disbarred or suspended from practice in any jurisdiction, may establish an office or other systematic and continuous presence in this jurisdiction for the practice of law as well as provide legal services on a temporary basis. Except as provided in paragraphs (d)(1) and (d)(2), a lawyer who is admitted to~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (c) and (d) and Comment [5].

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice ~~Of~~^{of} Law; Multijurisdictional Practice ~~Of~~^{of} Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule Comments practice law in another jurisdiction and who establishes an office or other systematic or continuous presence in this jurisdiction must become admitted to practice law generally in this jurisdiction.	~~practice law in another jurisdiction and who establishes an office or other systematic or continuous presence in this jurisdiction must become admitted to practice law generally in this jurisdiction.~~
[16] Paragraph (d)(1) applies to a lawyer who is employed by a client to provide legal services to the client or its organizational affiliates, i.e., entities that control, are controlled by, or are under common control with the employer. This paragraph does not authorize the provision of personal legal services to the employer's officers or employees. The paragraph applies to in-house corporate lawyers, government lawyers and others who are employed to render legal services to the employer. The lawyer's ability to represent the employer outside the jurisdiction in which the lawyer is licensed generally serves the interests of the employer and does not create an unreasonable risk to the client and others because the employer is well situated to assess the lawyer's qualifications and the quality of the lawyer's work.	~~[16] Paragraph (d)(1) applies to a lawyer who is employed by a client to provide legal services to the client or its organizational affiliates, i.e., entities that control, are controlled by, or are under common control with the employer. This paragraph does not authorize the provision of personal legal services to the employer's officers or employees. The paragraph applies to in-house corporate lawyers, government lawyers and others who are employed to render legal services to the employer. The lawyer's ability to represent the employer outside the jurisdiction in which the lawyer is licensed generally serves the interests of the employer and does not create an unreasonable risk to the client and others because the employer is well situated to assess the lawyer's qualifications and the quality of the lawyer's work.~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (c) and (d) and Comment [5].

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice ~~Of~~^{of} Law; Multijurisdictional Practice ~~Of~~^{of} Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule Comments
[17] If an employed lawyer establishes an office or other systematic presence in this jurisdiction for the purpose of rendering legal services to the employer, the lawyer may be subject to registration or other requirements, including assessments for client protection funds and mandatory continuing legal education.	~~[17] If an employed lawyer establishes an office or other systematic presence in this jurisdiction for the purpose of rendering legal services to the employer, the lawyer may be subject to registration or other requirements, including assessments for client protection funds and mandatory continuing legal education.~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (c) and (d) and Comment [5].
[18] Paragraph (d)(2) recognizes that a lawyer may provide legal services in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is not licensed when authorized to do so by federal or other law, which includes statute, court rule, executive regulation or judicial precedent.	~~[18] Paragraph (d)(2) recognizes that a lawyer may provide legal services in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is not licensed when authorized to do so by federal or other law, which includes statute, court rule, executive regulation or judicial precedent.~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (c) and (d) and Comment [5].
[19] A lawyer who practices law in this jurisdiction pursuant to paragraphs (c) or (d) or otherwise is subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction. See Rule 8.5(a).	~~[19] A lawyer who practices law in this jurisdiction pursuant to paragraphs (c) or (d) or otherwise is subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction. See Rule 8.5(a).~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (c) and (d) and Comment [5].

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice ~~Of~~^{of} Law; Multijurisdictional Practice ~~Of~~^{of} Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule Comments
[20] In some circumstances, a lawyer who practices law in this jurisdiction pursuant to paragraphs (c) or (d) may have to inform the client that the lawyer is not licensed to practice law in this jurisdiction. For example, that may be required when the representation occurs primarily in this jurisdiction and requires knowledge of the law of this jurisdiction. See Rule 1.4(b).	~~[20] In some circumstances, a lawyer who practices law in this jurisdiction pursuant to paragraphs (c) or (d) may have to inform the client that the lawyer is not licensed to practice law in this jurisdiction. For example, that may be required when the representation occurs primarily in this jurisdiction and requires knowledge of the law of this jurisdiction. See Rule 1.4(b).~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (c) and (d) and Comment [5].
[21] Paragraphs (c) and (d) do not authorize communications advertising legal services to prospective clients in this jurisdiction by lawyers who are admitted to practice in other jurisdictions. Whether and how lawyers may communicate the availability of their services to prospective clients in this jurisdiction is governed by Rules 7.1 to 7.5.	~~[21] Paragraphs (c) and (d) do not authorize communications advertising legal services to prospective clients in this jurisdiction by lawyers who are admitted to practice in other jurisdictions. Whether and how lawyers may communicate the availability of their services to prospective clients in this jurisdiction is governed by Rules 7.1 to 7.5.~~	See Explanation of Changes for paragraphs (c) and (d) and Comment [5].

Rule ~~1-300~~5.5 Unauthorized Practice of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice of Law

(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

~~(a)(A)~~ A ~~member~~lawyer admitted to practice law in California shall not ~~aid~~
~~any person or entity in the unauthorized practice of law.~~

~~(1) — (B) A member shall not~~ practice law in a jurisdiction ~~where to~~ ~~do so would be~~ in violation of ~~regulations~~the regulation of the legal profession in that jurisdiction~~;~~ or ~~(2)~~ knowingly assist a person or organization in the performance of activity that constitutes the unauthorized practice of law.

~~(b)~~ A lawyer who is not admitted to practice law in California shall not:

~~(1)~~ except as authorized by these Rules or other law, establish or maintain a resident office or other systematic or continuous presence in California for the practice of law; or ~~(2)~~ hold out to the public or otherwise represent that the lawyer is admitted to practice law in California.

[2] Paragraph (b) prohibits lawyers from practicing law in California unless admitted to practice in this state or otherwise entitled to practice law in this state by court rule or other law. (See, e.g., California Business and Professions Code, sections 6125 and 6126. See also California Rules of Court, rules 9.45 [registered legal services attorneys], 9.46 [registered in-house counsel], 9.47 [attorneys practicing law temporarily in California as part of litigation], 9.48 [non-litigating attorneys temporarily in California to provide legal services], 9.40
[counsel pro hac vice], rule 9.41 [appearance by military counsel], 9.42 [certified law students], rule 9.43 [out-of-state attorney arbitration counsel program] and rule 9.44 [registered foreign legal consultant].)
A lawyer does not violate paragraph (b) to the extent the lawyer is engaged in activities authorized by any other applicable exception.
(See, e.g., 28 U.S.C. sections 515-519, 530C(c)(1); 35 U.S.C. section 32(b)(2)(D) and Sperry v. Florida ex rel. Florida Bar (1963) 373 U.S.
379 [83 S.Ct. 1322]; Augustine v. Dept. of Veteran Affairs (Fed. Cir.
2005) 429 F.3d 1334.)

COMMENT

[1] A lawyer may practice law only in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is authorized to practice. Paragraph (a) prohibits the unauthorized practice of law by a lawyer, whether through the lawyer's direct action or by the lawyer assisting another person in the performance of activities that constitute the unauthorized practice of law.

Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice of Law
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) A lawyer admitted to practice law in California shall not:
 - (1) practice law in a jurisdiction in violation of the regulation of the legal profession in that jurisdiction; or
 - (2) knowingly assist a person or organization in the performance of activity that constitutes the unauthorized practice of law.
- (b) A lawyer who is not admitted to practice law in California shall not:
 - (1) except as authorized by these Rules or other law, establish or maintain a resident office or other systematic or continuous presence in California for the practice of law; or
 - (2) hold out to the public or otherwise represent that the lawyer is admitted to practice law in California.

of Court, rules 9.45 [registered legal services attorneys], 9.46 [registered in-house counsel], 9.47 [attorneys practicing law temporarily in California as part of litigation], 9.48 [non-litigating attorneys temporarily in California to provide legal services], 9.40 [counsel pro hac vice], rule 9.41 [appearance by military counsel], 9.42 [certified law students], rule 9.43 [out-of-state attorney arbitration counsel program] and rule 9.44 [registered foreign legal consultant]. A lawyer does not violate paragraph (b) to the extent the lawyer is engaged in activities authorized by any other applicable exception. See, e.g., 28 U.S.C. sections 515-519, 530C(c)(1); 35 U.S.C. section 32(b)(2)(D) and Sperry v. Florida ex rel. Florida Bar (1963) 373 U.S. 379 [83 S.Ct. 1322]; Augustine v. Dept. of Veteran Affairs (Fed. Cir. 2005) 429 F.3d 1334.

COMMENT

- [1] A lawyer may practice law only in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is authorized to practice. Paragraph (a) prohibits the unauthorized practice of law by a lawyer, whether through the lawyer's direct action or by the lawyer assisting another person in the performance of activities that constitute the unauthorized practice of law.
- [2] Paragraph (b) prohibits lawyers from practicing law in California unless admitted to practice in this state or otherwise entitled to practice law in this state by court rule or other law. See, e.g., California Business and Professions Code, sections 6125 and 6126. See also California Rules

Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice of Law; Multi-jurisdictional Practice of Law.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Cohen, Norman R.	M	No		I am a retired attorney and an inactive member of the California Bar. As I understand it, the Rules now consider an attorney who does FINRA arbitrations (among others) as being engaged in the practice of law which effectively prohibits retired lawyers like myself who do not want to retain active status from sitting as an arbitrator even as being simply a "public" member of any arbitration panel. For years, the Rules were interpreted so as to permit lawyers to sit on such panels without construing it as being engaged in the practice of law but that was reversed a few years ago and organizations such as FINRA (with whose representatives I have discussed the issue at length) feel that they are helpless to fight a State Bar Rule. I ask that the current interpretation be reversed or that a new Rule be promulgated which permits inactive bar members to sit on these panels without their participation being considered as practicing law.	The Commission did not make the requested change because this rule does not expressly govern active vs. inactive membership status. Whether an arbitrator should be enrolled as an active member, in interpreting laws and rules concerning the unauthorized practice of law is a matter of policy for the Board of Governors and is not within the scope of these rules. The Commission did not make the requested addition to the rule which would define whether certain lawyer conduct by an inactive member constitutes the practice of law in California. In the Commission's initial version of proposed Rule 5.5, comments were included to give guidance on conduct that constitutes the practice of law in California. That guidance was criticized when that version of the rule was issued for public comment. Essentially, the guidance was criticized as being both over and under-inclusive and therefore more misleading than helpful. The Commission has reconsidered whether to restore comments that might give guidance on the definition of the practice of law and has reaffirmed its earlier decision, based on the earlier public comments received, to not include such guidance.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice of Law; Multi-jurisdictional Practice of Law.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
2	COPRAC	A	Yes		COPRAC supports the adoption of Proposed Rule 5.5 and the Comments to the Rule.	No response required.
3	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	A	Yes		OCTC supports this rule as it is a codification of existing law. Comment [1] more appropriately belongs in a treatise, law review article, or ethics opinion.	No response required. As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.
4	San Diego County Bar Association	M	Yes		The addition of "knowing" in 5.5(a)(2) is a good change. Rule 5.5(b) is flawed due to the practical problem of disciplining lawyers admitted outside of California, also this paragraph falls short of stating a clear prohibition that bars non California lawyers from practicing in this state and could be improved if revised to address the ambiguity of the continuous and systematic presence standard Comment [7] interpreting 5.5(a)(2) should be reworded or deleted	No response required. Commission disagreed, in part, because State Bar staff informed the Commission that the State Bar Court is able to conduct a disciplinary proceeding, such as a default proceeding, involving a lawyer licensed outside of California and that the disciplinary order resulting from such a proceeding is forwarded to the lawyer's home bar association for consideration and action. The Commission deleted Comment [7].

Rule 5.5: Unauthorized Practice of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice of Law

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Alabama: Alabama Rule 5.5(b) is similar to ABA Model Rule 5.5(b), but Alabama limits the activities of out-of-state lawyers to mediation services, services under authority of federal law, serving as in-house counsel in nonlitigation situations, or engaging in “transactional, counseling, or other nonlitigation services” unless they are admitted to Alabama courts pro hac vice.

Arizona augments ABA Model Rule 5.5 by adding these paragraphs:

(e) Any attorney who engages in the authorized multijurisdictional practice of law in the State of Arizona under this rule must advise the lawyer’s client that the lawyer is not admitted to practice in Arizona, and must obtain the client’s informed consent to such representation.

(f) Attorneys not admitted to practice in the State of Arizona, who are admitted to practice law in any other jurisdiction in the United States and who appear in any court of record or before any administrative hearing officer in the State of Arizona, must also comply with Rules of the Supreme Court of Arizona governing pro hac vice admission.

(g) Any attorney who engages in the multijurisdictional practice of law in the State of Arizona, whether authorized in accordance with these Rules or not, shall be subject to the Rules of Professional Conduct and the Rules of the Supreme Court regarding attorney discipline in the State of Arizona.

In addition, Arizona’s lead-in language to Rule 5.5(d) requires the lawyer who relies on that paragraph to have “registered pursuant to Rule 38(i) of these rules.” That rule recognizes limited admission status for “an attorney who is employed within the State of Arizona as in-house counsel or a related position for a for-profit or a non-profit corporation, association, or other organizational entity, which can include its parents, subsidiaries and/or affiliates, the business of which is lawful and is other than the practice of law or the provision of legal services.”

California: California Supreme Court Rules 9.45, 9.46, 9.47, and 9.48 give lawyers admitted in other American jurisdictions limited authority to provide legal services in California. The four rules deal with in-house counsel, legal services lawyers, lawyers involved in dispute resolution, and lawyers providing other legal services in California. The California rules are less expansive than ABA Model Rule 5.5(c). In addition, two other rules — 9.43 and 9.44 — provide authority for lawyers who enter California to participate in arbitrations and for lawyers admitted in foreign countries to register as foreign legal consultants.

Colorado: Rule 5.5(a)(1) provides that a lawyer shall not “practice law in this jurisdiction without a license to practice law issued by the Colorado Supreme Court unless specifically authorized by C.R.C.P. 220, C.R.C.P. 221, C.R.C.P. 221.1, C.R.C.P. 222 or federal or tribal law. . . .”

Colorado Rule of Civil Procedure 220, entitled “Out-of-State Attorney-Conditions of Practice,” permits an out-of-state attorney who is not domiciled in Colorado and has not established a place for the regular practice of law in Colorado to “practice law in the state of Colorado except that an out-of-state attorney who wishes to appear in any state court of record must comply with [rules] concerning pro hac vice admission.” Unlike ABA Model Rule 5.5, Colorado’s Rule 220 does not restrict out-of-state lawyers to “temporary” law practice. However, Rule 220 permits an out-of-state lawyer to practice in Colorado only if the lawyer “has not established domicile in Colorado” and “has not established a place for the regular practice of law in Colorado from which such attorney holds himself or herself out to the public as practicing Colorado law or solicits or accepts Colorado clients.”

Connecticut adopts most of ABA Model Rule 5.5 verbatim, with some additions and modifications. Rule 5.5(a) adds that the “practice of law” in Connecticut “is defined in Practice Book Section 2-44A,” a lengthy and detailed court rule. Rule 5.5(a) also adds that conduct described in Rules 5.5(c) and (d) in another jurisdiction “shall not be deemed the unauthorized practice of law for purposes of this paragraph (a).”

Most significantly, Connecticut Rule 5.5(c) extends temporary practice privileges only to a lawyer admitted in another United States jurisdiction “which accords similar privileges to Connecticut lawyers in its jurisdiction.” Connecticut Rule 5.5(d)(1) applies only if the lawyer “is an authorized house counsel as provided in Practice Book Section 2-15A.” Section 2-15A(c)(1) authorizes an in-house lawyer to engage in the following activities in Connecticut:

- (A) the giving of legal advice to the directors, officers, employees, and agents of the organization with respect to its business and affairs;

- (B) negotiating and documenting all matters for the organization; and

- (C) representation of the organization in its dealings with any administrative agency, tribunal or commission having jurisdiction; provided, however, authorized house counsel shall not be permitted to make appearances as counsel before any state or municipal administrative tribunal, agency, or commission, and shall not be permitted to make appearances in any court of this state, unless the attorney is specially admitted to appear in a case before such tribunal, agency, commission or court.

However, §2-15(A)(c)(4) provides that an authorized house counsel “shall not express or render a legal judgment or opinion to be relied upon by any third person or party other than legal opinions rendered in connection with commercial, financial or other business transactions to which the authorized house counsel's employer organization is a party and in which the legal opinions have been requested from the authorized house counsel by another party to the transaction."

A lawyer licensed in a "foreign jurisdiction" may qualify as an authorized house counsel.

Drawing on ABA Model Rule 8.5(a), Connecticut adds a new Rule 5.5(e), which provides: "A lawyer not admitted to practice in this jurisdiction and authorized by the provisions of this Rule to engage in providing legal services on a temporary basis in this jurisdiction is thereby subject to the disciplinary rules of this jurisdiction with respect to the activities in this jurisdiction." Finally, Connecticut adds an unusual new Rule 5.5(f), which provides:

A lawyer desirous of obtaining the privileges set forth in subparagraphs (c)(3) or (4), (1) shall notify the Statewide Bar Counsel as to each separate matter prior to any such representation in Connecticut, (2) shall notify the Statewide Bar Counsel upon termination of each such representation in Connecticut, and (3) shall pay such fees as may be prescribed by the Judicial Branch.

Delaware has adopted Rule 5.5 and adds lawyers "admitted . . . in a foreign jurisdiction" to the authority granted in Rule 5.5(c) and 5.5(d). Delaware Supreme Court Rule 5.55 implements the authority of Rule 5.5(d)(1).

District of Columbia retains the pre-2002 version of ABA Model Rule 5.5. In addition, D.C. has developed one of the most detailed unauthorized practice rules in the country (D.C. Rule 49). The rule contains many exceptions to the general prohibition against unauthorized practice. These include exceptions for lawyers providing legal services to the United States while employed by the United States; lawyers appearing before a "special court, department or agency of the United States" where authorized by statute; employees of the District of Columbia and lawyers practicing before "a department or agency of the District of Columbia" pursuant to statutory authorization; employed lawyers where the employer "does not reasonably expect that it is receiving advice from a person" admitted in the District; lawyers who have moved to the District for a period of 360 days while applying for admission in the District and so long as they are under "the direct supervision of an enrolled, active member" of the D.C. Bar; up to five appearances per year for lawyers coming into the district for an ADR proceeding; up to five pro hac vice applications per year; and lawyers providing pro bono services under limited circumstances. Foreign lawyers are also exempt from the UPL prohibition for "incidental and temporary" work in the District.

Florida: Rule 5.5 is based on ABA Model Rule 5.5 but has many significant differences. For example, Florida Rule 5.5(c) permits temporary practice only by lawyers who have neither been disbarred from practice in any jurisdiction "nor disciplined or held in contempt in Florida by reason of misconduct committed while engaged in the practice of law permitted pursuant to this rule." Rule 5.5(b) add a provision forbidding an outside lawyer to "(3) appear in court, before an administrative agency, or before any other tribunal unless authorized to do so by the court, administrative agency, or tribunal pursuant to the applicable rules of the court, administrative agency, or tribunal.” Florida Rule 5.5(c)(3) adds that a lawyer may provide temporary legal services related to an alternative dispute resolution proceeding or non-litigation services “if the services are performed for a client who resides in or has an office in the lawyer’s home state” or the services arise out of or are reasonably related to the lawyer’s [home state] practice.” Florida also adds a subparagraph entitled “Authorized Temporary Practice by Lawyer Admitted in a Non-United States Jurisdiction,” which largely parallels the portions of Rule 5.5 governing temporary practice by lawyers admitted in other U.S. jurisdictions.

Georgia: Rule 5.5 generally tracks ABA Model Rule 5.5, but Georgia distinguishes between a “Domestic Lawyer” (defined in Georgia’s Terminology section as, essentially, a lawyer admitted elsewhere in the United States or its territories but not in Georgia) and a “Foreign Lawyer” (defined as “a person authorized to practice law by the duly constituted and authorized governmental body of any foreign nation” but not by Georgia). Georgia adds Rule 5.5(e) to permit temporary practice in Georgia by Foreign Lawyers on terms roughly equivalent to those that govern Domestic Lawyers, provided the foreign lawyer is “a member in good standing of a recognized legal profession in a foreign jurisdiction, the members of which are admitted to practice as lawyers or counselors at law or the equivalent and subject to effective regulation and discipline by a duly constituted professional body or a public authority.”

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2010, Illinois Rule 5.5 tracks ABA Model Rule 5.5. In addition, Supreme Court Rule 716, entitled “Limited Admission of House Counsel,” permits an out-of-state lawyer to receive a limited license to perform legal services in Illinois when the lawyer is “employed in Illinois as house counsel exclusively for a single . . . legal entity (as well as any parent, subsidiary or affiliate thereof). . . .” The legal services must be limited to (a) advising the directors, officers, employees and agents of the employer regarding its business and affairs, and (b) negotiating, documenting and consummating transactions to which the employer is a party. An in-house lawyer may not appear as counsel before any court, administrative tribunal, agency or commission in Illinois unless (a) that body’s rules authorize the appearance or (b) the body specially admits the lawyer for the particular matter. Lawyers licensed under the house counsel rule “shall not offer legal services or advice to the public or in any manner hold themselves out to be so engaged or authorized.”

Illinois Supreme Court Rule 717, entitled “Limited Admission of Legal Service Program Lawyers,” permits an out-of-state lawyer to receive a limited license to practice law in Illinois, for a maximum of 18 months, when the lawyer is “employed in Illinois for an organized legal service, public defender or law school clinical program providing legal assistance to indigent persons.” A lawyer holding this limited license may perform legal services “solely on behalf of such employer and the indigent clients represented by such employer,” and in felony cases the lawyer may participate in the proceedings only as “an assistant of a supervising member of the bar who shall be present and responsible for the conduct of the proceedings.”

Kansas: Kansas retains the original 1983 version of ABA Model Rule 5.5 verbatim.

Louisiana adopts Model Rule 5.5(a)-(d) with minor modifications.

Maine: In the rules effective August 1, 2009, Maine adopts Model Rule 5.5.

Minnesota: Rule 5.5(a) adds an “immunity clause” for Minnesota lawyers by providing that a Minnesota lawyer “does not violate this rule by conduct in another jurisdiction” that an out-of-state lawyer may do in Minnesota pursuant to Rules 5.5(c) and (d). Minnesota also deletes Rule 5.5(d)(1) (which governs legal services provided to a lawyer’s employer).

Missouri rennumbers paragraph (c)(4) as (c)(5) and adds as Rule 5.5(c)(4) permission for temporary legal services that “are provided to the lawyer’s employer or its organizational affiliates and are not services for which the forum requires pro hac vice admission.” In addition, Missouri Rule 5.5(d) omits paragraph (d)(2) and substantially adopts paragraph (d)(1) but requires that the lawyer have “obtained a limited license pursuant to Rule 8.105” (quoted below). Finally, Missouri adds a new Rule 5.5(e), which prohibits the practice of law by a lawyer who has been reported to the authorities for failure to comply with Missouri’s Continuing Legal Education requirements.

Missouri Supreme Court Rule 8.105 provides:

A lawyer admitted to the practice of law in another state or territory of the United States may receive a limited license to practice law in this state if the lawyer:

(1) Is employed in Missouri as a lawyer exclusively for: a corporation, its subsidiaries or affiliates; an association; a business; or a governmental entity and the employer’s lawful business consists of activities other than the practice of law or the provision of legal services;

(2) Was conferred a professional degree in law (J.D. or L.L.B) by a law school that at the time of the lawyer’s graduation was approved by the American Bar Association;

(3) Has filed such application forms as prescribed by the board and paid the prescribed fee, which is non-refundable; and

(4) Receives the approval of the board.

New Jersey: Rule 5.5(b) permits an out-of-state lawyer to practice in New Jersey only if (among other conditions):

(2) the lawyer is an in-house counsel and complies with R. 1:27-2 [excerpted below]; or

(3) under any of the following circumstances:

(i) the lawyer engages in the negotiation of the terms of a transaction in furtherance of the lawyer’s representation on behalf of an existing client in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted to practice and the transaction originates in or is otherwise related to a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted to practice;

(ii) the lawyer engages in representation of a party to a dispute by participating in arbitration, mediation or other alternate or complementary dispute resolution program, the representation is on behalf of an existing client in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted to practice, and the dispute originates in or is otherwise related to a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted to practice;

(iii) the lawyer investigates, engages in discovery, interviews witnesses or deposes witnesses in this jurisdiction for a proceeding pending or anticipated to be instituted in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted to practice; or

(iv) the lawyer practices under circumstances other than (i) through (iii) above, with respect to a matter where the practice activity arises directly out of the lawyer's representation on behalf of an existing client in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted to practice, provided that such practice in this jurisdiction is occasional and is undertaken only when the lawyer's disengagement would result in substantial inefficiency, impracticality or detriment to the client.

(c) A lawyer admitted to practice in another jurisdiction who acts in this jurisdiction pursuant to sub-paragraph (b) above shall:

(1) be licensed and in good standing in all jurisdictions of admission and not be the subject of any pending disciplinary proceedings, nor a current or pending license suspension or disbarment;

(2) be subject to the Rules of Professional Conduct and the disciplinary authority of the Supreme Court of this jurisdiction;

(3) consent to the appointment of the Clerk of the Supreme Court as agent upon whom service of process may be made for all actions against the lawyer or the lawyer's firm that may arise out of the lawyer's participation in legal matters in this jurisdiction; and

(4) not hold himself or herself out as being admitted to practice in this jurisdiction. . . .

New Jersey Rule 1:27-2(a) defines in-house counsel for purposes of its Rule 5.5(b)(2) as follows:

In-House Counsel is a lawyer who is employed in New Jersey for a corporation, a partnership, association, or other legal entity (taken together with its respective parents, subsidiaries, and affiliates) authorized to transact business in this State that is not itself engaged in the practice of law or the rendering of legal services outside such organization, whether for a fee or otherwise, and does not charge or collect a fee for the representation or advice other than to entities comprising such organization.

New Jersey Rule 1:27-2(b)(iii) permits the in-house lawyer to provide legal services "solely for the identified employer and its constituents (employees, directors, officers, members, partners, shareholders) in respect of the same proceeding or claim as the employer, provided that the performance of such services is consistent with RPC 1.13 and RPC 1.7."

New Jersey Rule 1:21-1(e) provides:

(e) Legal Services Organizations. Nonprofit organizations incorporated in this or any other state for the purpose of providing legal services to the poor or functioning as a public interest law firm, and other federally tax exempt legal services organizations or trusts . . . which provide legal services to a defined and limited class of clients, may practice law in their own names through staff attorneys who are members of the bar of the State of New Jersey, provided that: (1) the legal work serves the intended beneficiaries of the organizational purpose, (2) the staff attorney responsible for the matter signs all papers prepared by the organization, and (3) the relationship between staff attorney and client meets the attorney's professional responsibilities to the client and is not subject to interference, control, or direction by the organization's board or employees except for a supervising attorney who is a member of the New Jersey bar.

New Jersey Rule 1:21-1(a) requires that every attorney practicing law in New Jersey maintain "a bona fide office for the practice of law" in any United States jurisdiction, not necessarily New Jersey. The rule continues as follows:

For the purpose of this section, a bona fide office is a place where clients are met, files are kept, the telephone is answered, mail is received and the attorney or a responsible person acting on the attorney's behalf can be reached in person and by telephone during normal business hours to answer questions posed by the courts, clients or adversaries and to ensure that competent advice from the attorney can be obtained within a reasonable period of time.

New Jersey Rule 1-21-10 substantially adopts the ABA's rule permitting temporary practice of out-of-state lawyers in the event of a "major disaster" ("the Katrina Rule").

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, New York Rule 5.5 adopts the language of former DR 3-101 with minor variations.

North Carolina: Rule 5.5 does not use the word "temporary" as it appears in ABA Model Rule 5.5(c), but Rule 5.5(b)(1) forbids a "systematic and continuous presence" in the jurisdiction for the practice of law. North Carolina Rule 5.5(c)(2)(E) adds an additional category that permits a lawyer admitted in another jurisdiction to practice in North Carolina if "the lawyer is providing services limited to federal law, international law, the law of a foreign jurisdiction, or the law of the jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted to practice."

Ohio: Rule 5.5(c)(4) permits a lawyer to "provide legal services on a temporary basis" in Ohio if "the lawyer engages in negotiations, investigations, or other nonlitigation activities that arise out of or are reasonably related to the lawyer's practice in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted to practice." Otherwise, the Ohio rule is substantially the same as the Model Rule.

Oregon moves Rule 5.5(d)(1) (which permits temporary legal services that are provided to the lawyer's employer or its affiliates) to Rule 5.5(c)(5), meaning that these services may be performed only on a "temporary" basis.

Pennsylvania changes the lead-in language to Rule 5.5(c) to apply to a lawyer admitted in another United States jurisdiction “or in a foreign jurisdiction.” Pennsylvania Rule 5.5(b)(2) provides that a lawyer shall not hold out “or advertise” to the public that the lawyer is admitted to practice in Pennsylvania.

Utah: The Utah Supreme Court has amended subparagraph (c)(3) of Utah State Bar Rule 14-0802 (Authorized Practice of Law) to make clear that, whether or not it constitutes the practice of law, a nonlawyer who is not claiming to be a lawyer may provide “clerical assistance to another to complete a form provided by a municipal, state, or federal court located in the State of Utah when no fee is charged to do so.”

Washington: Rule 5.5(e) permits lawyers practicing in the state under the equivalent to Rule 5.5(d)(1) also to provide pro bono services to clients through a “qualified legal services provider.”

Wisconsin: Effective January 1, 2009, Wisconsin adopts ABA Rule 5.5 but adds a clause to the effect that the Clerk of the Wisconsin Supreme Court may accept service of process “for all actions against the lawyer or the lawyer’s firm that may arise out of the lawyer’s participation in legal matters in this jurisdiction.”

Rule 5.6 [RPC 1-500]

“Restriction on a Lawyer’s Right to Practice”

(XDraft #5, 08/07/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 5.6 adopts verbatim the language of ABA Model Rule 5.6 prohibiting certain agreements restricting the right of a lawyer to practice law with the exception of an agreement concerning benefits upon retirement. The Comments to Proposed Rule 5.6 adopt verbatim the language of the Comments to ABA Model Rule 5.6, except that a sentence has been added to the end of Comment [1] noting an exception to paragraph (a) under the California Supreme Court’s decision in Howard v. Babcock (1993) 6 Cal.4th 409, 425. See Introduction.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart
Rule	Comment
☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rule

RPC 1-500

Statute

Business and Professions Code sections 6092.5(i), 6093

Case law

Howard v. Babcock (1993) 6 Cal.4th 409

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 11
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 1
Abstain/ 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Dissenting Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☐ Yes ☒ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 5.6* Restrictions on a Lawyer's Right To Practice

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 5.6 adopts verbatim the language of ABA Model Rule 5.6, as amended in February 2002.

In addition, Comments [1]-[3] to Proposed Rule 5.6 are identical to the comments to ABA Model Rule 5.6 with one addition: the Commission voted to add to Comment [1] a reference to an exception to paragraph (a) articulated by the California Supreme Court in Howard v. Babcock (1993) 6 Cal.4th 409, 425. The Court in Howard held that an agreement requiring a departing partner to forego certain benefits otherwise due, if the departing partner competes in specified geographical regions following withdrawal, is permissible and is not inconsistent with Rule 1-500 of the California Rules of Professional Conduct, if the agreement complies with Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16600 et seq. The Commission considered the policy decision made by the Supreme Court in Howard and determined that this policy continues to be the appropriate policy for California and, as such, it should be explicit in the rule comments. As the Supreme Court reasoned, permitting such an exception “strikes a balance between the interests of clients in having the attorney of choice, and the interest of law firms in a stable business environment.”

* Proposed Rule 5.6, XDraft 5 (8/7/09).

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.6 Restrictions On Right To Practice	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 5.6 Restrictions on a Lawyer's Right to Practice	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
A lawyer shall not participate in offering or making: (a) a partnership, shareholders, operating, employment, or other similar type of agreement that restricts the right of a lawyer to practice after termination of the relationship, except an agreement concerning benefits upon retirement; or	A lawyer shall not participate in offering or making: (a) a partnership, shareholders, operating, employment, or other similar type of agreement that restricts the right of a lawyer to practice after termination of the relationship, except an agreement concerning benefits upon retirement; or	The introductory clause and paragraph (a) are identical to the Model Rule.
(b) an agreement in which a restriction on the lawyer's right to practice is part of the settlement of a client controversy	(b) an agreement in which a restriction on the lawyer's right to practice is part of the settlement of a client controversy.	Paragraph (b) is identical to the Model Rule.

* Proposed Rule 5.6, Draft 5 (8/7/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 5.6 Restrictions On Right To Practice Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 5.6 Restrictions on a Lawyer's Right to Practice Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] An agreement restricting the right of lawyers to practice after leaving a firm not only limits their professional autonomy but also limits the freedom of clients to choose a lawyer. Paragraph (a) prohibits such agreements except for restrictions incident to provisions concerning retirement benefits for service with the firm.	[1] An agreement restricting the right of lawyers to practice after leaving a firm not only limits their professional autonomy but also limits the freedom of clients to choose a lawyer. Paragraph (a) prohibits such agreements except for ~~restrictions incident to provisions concerning retirement benefits for service with the firm~~ an agreement among partners imposing a reasonable cost on departing partners who compete with the law firm in a limited geographical area as such an agreement strikes a balance between the interests of clients in having the attorney of choice, and the interest of law firms in a stable business environment. See Howard v. Babcock (1993) 6 Cal.4th 409, 425.	Comment [1] is based on Model Rule 5.6, cmt. [1], except that the second sentence has been revised to include language and a citation to the California Supreme Court decision in Howard v. Babcock. The stated rationale for permitting such an exception, that it “strikes a balance between the interests of clients in having the attorney of choice, and the interest of law firms in a stable business environment,” is language taken directly from the decision. See Introduction.
[2] Paragraph (b) prohibits a lawyer from agreeing not to represent other persons in connection with settling a claim on behalf of a client.	[2] Paragraph (b) prohibits a lawyer from agreeing not to represent other persons in connection with settling a claim on behalf of a client.	Comment [2] is identical to the Model Rule.
[3] This Rule does not apply to prohibit restrictions that may be included in the terms of the sale of a law practice pursuant to Rule 1.17.	[3] This Rule does not apply to prohibit restrictions that may be included in the terms of the sale of a law practice pursuant to Rule 1.17.	Comment [3] is identical to the Model Rule.

Rule ~~1-500~~ ~~Agreements Restricting~~ 5.6 Restrictions on a Member's Lawyer's Right to Practice
(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

A lawyer shall not participate in offering or making:

- (a) ~~(A) A member shall not be a party to or participate in offering or making an agreement, whether in connection with the settlement of a lawsuit~~partnership, shareholders, operating, employment, or otherwise, if the other similar type of agreement that restricts the right of a member lawyer to practice law after termination of the relationship, except that this rule shall not prohibit such an agreement which concerning benefits upon retirement; or
- (b) an agreement in which a restriction on the lawyer's right to practice is part of the settlement of a client controversy
- ~~(1) Is a part of an employment, shareholders', or partnership agreement among members provided the restrictive agreement does not survive the termination of the employment, shareholder, or partnership relationship; or~~
- ~~(2) Requires payments to a member upon the member's retirement from the practice of law; or~~
- ~~(3) Is authorized by Business and Professions Code sections 6092.5 subdivision (i), or 6093.~~
- ~~(B) A member shall not be a party to or participate in offering or making an agreement which precludes the reporting of a violation of these rules.~~

COMMENT

- [1] An agreement restricting the right of lawyers to practice after leaving a firm not only limits their professional autonomy but also limits the freedom of clients to choose a lawyer. Paragraph (a) prohibits such agreements except for an agreement among partners imposing a reasonable cost on departing partners who compete with the law firm in a limited geographical area as such an agreement strikes a balance between the interests of clients in having the attorney of choice, and the interest of law firms in a stable business environment. See Howard v. Babcock (1993) 6 Cal.4th 409, 425.

- [2] Paragraph (b) prohibits a lawyer from agreeing not to represent other persons in connection with settling a claim on behalf of a client.
- [3] This Rule does not apply to prohibit restrictions that may be included in the terms of the sale of a law practice pursuant to Rule 1.17.

Discussion:-

~~Paragraph (A) makes it clear that the practice, in connection with settlement agreements, of proposing that a member refrain from representing other clients in similar litigation, is prohibited. Neither counsel may demand or suggest such provisions nor may opposing counsel accede or agree to such provisions.~~

~~Paragraph (A) permits a restrictive covenant in a law corporation, partnership, or employment agreement. The law corporation shareholder, partner, or associate may agree not to have a separate practice during the existence of the relationship; however, upon termination of the relationship (whether voluntary or involuntary), the member is free to practice law without any contractual restriction except in the case of retirement from the active practice of law. (Amended by order of Supreme Court, operative September 14, 1992.)~~

Rule 5.6 Restrictions on a Lawyer's Right to Practice

(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

A lawyer shall not participate in offering or making:

- (a) a partnership, shareholders, operating, employment, or other similar type of agreement that restricts the right of a lawyer to practice after termination of the relationship, except an agreement concerning benefits upon retirement; or
- (b) an agreement in which a restriction on the lawyer's right to practice is part of the settlement of a client controversy

COMMENT

- [1] An agreement restricting the right of lawyers to practice after leaving a firm not only limits their professional autonomy but also limits the freedom of clients to choose a lawyer. Paragraph (a) prohibits such agreements except for an agreement among partners imposing a reasonable cost on departing partners who compete with the law firm in a limited geographical area as such an agreement strikes a balance between the interests of clients in having the attorney of choice, and the interest of law firms in a stable business environment. See Howard v. Babcock (1993) 6 Cal.4th 409, 425.
- [2] Paragraph (b) prohibits a lawyer from agreeing not to represent other persons in connection with settling a claim on behalf of a client.
- [3] This Rule does not apply to prohibit restrictions that may be included in the terms of the sale of a law practice pursuant to Rule 1.17.

Rule 5.6 Restrictions on a Lawyer's Right to Practice.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	A	Yes		OCTC supports this rule, but believes Comment [1] more appropriately belongs in a treatise, law review article, or ethics opinion.	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations. The Commission has determined that the reference to the California Supreme Court's decision in Howard v. Babcock provides a rationale for the exception to the rule that is not stated in the Comment to ABA Model Rule 5.6.
3	San Diego County Bar Association	M	Yes		Approve of new rule, except that the apparent complete deletion of RPC 1 500 (B) should be reconsidered. One committee member dissented on the basis that ethical rules should not govern internal law firm agreements relating to compensation. 5.6(b) in its current form can be used to prevent lawyers from serving clients in a specialized field once they leave a firm. "My fear is that the law firms may use the state bar mechanism to achieve their private ends rather than protecting the public from unscrupulous lawyers."	Commission agreed; however the standard in paragraph (B) of RPC 1 500 is included in proposed Rule 8.3 and not in rule 5.6. The Commission made no change. See response to Los Angeles County Bar Association.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 5.6: Restrictions on Right to Practice

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Arkansas: Rule 5.6(a) deletes references to a shareholder, operating, or other similar type of agreement, but adds a reference to “an agreement pursuant to the provisions of Rule 1.17” (which governs the sale of a law practice).

California: Rule 1-500 is essentially the same as Rule 5.6, but adds references to certain statutory exceptions.

Florida: In 1997, without amending the text of Rule 5.6, Florida added the following new paragraph to the Comment to its version of Rule 5.6:

This rule is not a per se prohibition against severance agreements between lawyers and law firms. Severance agreements containing reasonable and fair compensation provisions designed to avoid disputes required by time-consuming quantum meruit analysis are not prohibited by this rule. Severance agreements, on the other hand, that contain punitive clauses, the effect of which are to restrict competition or encroach upon a client's inherent right to select counsel, are prohibited. . . .

In addition, a new Florida Rule 4-5.8 prohibits a lawyer who is leaving a law firm from unilaterally notifying clients of the anticipated departure, or soliciting representation of the firm's clients, unless bona fide negotiations between the lawyer and the law firm to draft a joint communication have failed. Similarly, a lawyer in a law firm undergoing dissolution must not unilaterally contact the firm's clients unless bona fide negotiations among authorized members of the firm have failed to produce an agreement on a method for notifying clients of the dissolution.

Georgia has adopted the pre-2002 version of ABA Model Rule 5.6 and its Comment essentially verbatim. (Georgia's previous DR 2-108(B) permitted a lawyer to agree in a settlement not to “accept any other representation arising out of a transaction or event embraced in the subject matter of the controversy or suit thus settled.”)

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, New York follows Model Rule 5.6 except New York adds that the rule “does not prohibit restrictions that may be included in the terms of the sale of a law practice pursuant to Rule 1.17.”

Oregon: Rule 5.6(b) applies to a “direct or indirect” restriction on a lawyer's right to practice.

Pennsylvania: Rule 5.6(a) permits an agreement that restricts the rights of a lawyer to practice as part of “an agreement for the sale of a law practice consistent with Rule 1.17.”

Texas: Rule 5.06(b) adds that “as part of the settlement of a disciplinary proceeding against a lawyer an agreement may be made placing restrictions on the right of that lawyer to practice.”

Virginia: Rule 5.6(b) forbids an agreement in which a restriction of the lawyer’s right to practice is part of the settlement of a controversy, “except where such a restriction is approved by a tribunal or a governmental entity.”

Proposed Rule 6.1 [n/a]

“Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service”

(XDraft #6, 6/29/10)

Summary: Proposed Rule 6.1, which encourages lawyers to provide pro bono publico services to persons of limited means, largely tracks Model Rule 6.1, except that it incorporates some language from the Board of Governors Pro Bono Resolution (2002) and includes specific references to California statutory law. At the May 15, 2010 meeting, the Board tentatively determined not to recommend adoption Rule 6.1. This tentative decision was included in the subsequent public comment distribution and in response over forty public comments were received urging reconsideration and adoption of the rule. The majority of these public comments were received from legal services organizations. The Commission unanimously agrees with the commenters’ recommendation to adopt the rule.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☒ Existing California Law

Rule

Statute

Bus. & Prof. Code §6068(h) and §6073.

Case law

- ☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

- ☒ Other Primary Factor(s)

State Bar of California Board of Governors Pro Bono Resolution (2002);
Definition of “pro bono” by the Pro Bono Institute (“PBI”).

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 10

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 0

Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Commission Minority Position, Known Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

Minority Position Included. (See Introduction): ☐ Yes ☐ No

☐ No Known Stakeholders

☒ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

California Commission on Access to Justice (“CCAJ”); Public Interest Clearinghouse (“PIC”); State Bar Standing Committee on Access to Justice (“SCDLS”); and other legal services organizations. See public commenter chart.

☒ Very Controversial – Explanation:

At the May 15, 2010 meeting, the Board tentatively determined to not recommend adoption of a rule; however, a large number of legal services stakeholders are now urging reconsideration of that decision. These stakeholders assert that adoption of a rule is critical for recruitment of lawyers to provide pro bono legal services.

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 6.1* Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 6.1, which encourages lawyers to provide or enable the direct delivery of pro bono publico services to persons of limited means, tracks Model Rule 6.1, except that it incorporates some language from the Board of Governors Pro Bono Resolution (2002) (“Board Resolution”) and includes specific references to California statutory law.

At the May 15, 2010 meeting, the Board tentatively determined not to recommend adoption Rule 6.1. This tentative decision was included in the subsequent public comment distribution and in response over forty public comments were received urging reconsideration and adoption of the rule. The majority of these public comments were received from legal services organizations. The Commission unanimously agrees with the recommendation of the commenters also asks that the Board consider adoption of the rule.

In follow-up to some of the discussion at the Board Committee meeting, the Commission revised the second sentence of paragraph (a) to include the Model Rule phrase “aspire to” which emphasizes the hortatory standard of the rule.

* Proposed Rule 6.1, XDraft #6 (6/29/10).

The only other change to the rule language that was previously submitted to the Board is a revision to Comment [4]. In the prior version of the rule, Comment [4] omitted the last sentence in the Model Rule counterpart comment, which permits sharing of “court-awarded legal fees with a nonprofit organization that employed, retained or recommended employment of the lawyer.” However, public comment has been received from legal services organizations urging that the sentence be included because lawyer contributions are critical to organization funding. The Commission agrees and has restored that Model Rule sentence. In addition, for guidance, a new sentence has been added at the very end of Comment [4] that cross references Rule 5.4(a)(5) which addresses the issue of a lawyer’s agreement to pay awarded fees to a legal services organization. The comments to Rule 5.4 make clear that the Supreme Court’s decision in Frye v. Tenderloin Housing Clinic, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal.4th 23 [40 Cal.Rptr.3d 221] should be consulted in such situations.

Variations in other jurisdictions. Nearly every jurisdiction has adopted some version of Model Rule 6.1. Illinois, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon and Texas are notable exceptions, though all but North Carolina either mandate or encourage that lawyers report their pro bono activities to the bar. Of the remaining jurisdictions, there is a wide range of variation in their adoption of Model Rule 6.1, with some retaining the 1983 version, some adopting the 2002 version, and others implementing unique provisions, ranging from D.C.’s relatively short rule to Florida’s rule, which establishes an elaborate pro bono framework.

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Every lawyer has a professional responsibility to provide legal services to those unable to pay. A lawyer should aspire to render at least (50) hours of pro bono publico legal services per year. In fulfilling this responsibility, the lawyer should:	Every lawyer ~~has~~, as a matter of professional responsibility ~~to~~, should provide legal services to those unable to pay. A lawyer should aspire to ~~render~~provide or enable the direct delivery of at least ~~(50)~~ hours of pro bono publico legal services per year. In fulfilling this responsibility, the lawyer should:	The first sentence of proposed Rule 6.1 is based on its Model Rule counterpart and emphasizes that the proposed Rule is hortatory, and not mandatory. The second sentence has been revised to track the language of the Board of Governors Pro Bono Resolution (2002) ("Board Resolution"). However, this sentence also includes the Model Rule phrase "aspire to" which signals again the hortatory standard of the rule. The next lead-in clause is identical to the Model Rule counterpart.
(a) provide a substantial majority of the (50) hours of legal services without fee or expectation of fee to:	(a) provide a substantial majority of the 50 hours of legal services without ~~fee or~~ expectation of ~~fee~~compensation other than reimbursement of expenses to:	Paragraph (a) is based Model Rule 6.1(a). It has been revised to track language in the Board Resolution.
(1) persons of limited means or	(1) persons of limited means or	Subparagraph (a)(1) is identical to Model Rule 6.1(a)(1). Although paragraph (1) of the Board Resolution refers to "indigent persons," it appears that "persons of limited means" and "indigent persons" mean the same thing, see Comment [3], so the Model Rule language is used.
(2) charitable, religious, civic, community, governmental and educational organizations in matters that are designed primarily to address the needs of persons of limited means; and	(2) charitable, religious, civic, community, governmental and educational organizations in matters that are designed primarily to address the needs of persons of limited means; and	Subparagraph (a)(2) is identical to Model Rule 6.1(a)(2). This subparagraph incorporates the concept of Board Resolution, paragraph (1), which urges lawyers "[to provide or enable the direct delivery of legal services] to not for profit organizations with a primary purpose of providing services to the poor or on behalf of the poor or disadvantaged."

* Proposed Rule 6.1, XDraft 6 (6/29/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(b) provide any additional services through: (1) delivery of legal services at no fee or substantially reduced fee to individuals, groups or organizations seeking to secure or protect civil rights, civil liberties or public rights, or charitable, religious, civic, community, governmental and educational organizations in matters in furtherance of their organizational purposes, where the payment of standard legal fees would significantly deplete the organization's economic resources or would be otherwise inappropriate;	(b) provide any additional services through: (1) delivery of legal services at no fee or substantially reduced fee to individuals, groups or organizations seeking to secure or protect civil rights, civil liberties or public rights, or charitable, religious, civic, community, governmental and educational organizations in matters in furtherance of their organizational purposes, where the payment of standard legal fees would significantly deplete the organization's economic resources or would be otherwise inappropriate;	Subparagraph (b)(1) is identical to Model Rule 6.1(b)(1).
(2) delivery of legal services at a substantially reduced fee to persons of limited means; or	(2) delivery of legal services at a substantially reduced fee to persons of limited means; or	Subparagraph (b)(2) is identical to Model Rule 6.1(b)(2).
(3) participation in activities for improving the law, the legal system or the legal profession.	(3) participation in activities for improving the law, the legal system or the legal profession. particularly with the goal of increasing access to justice.	Subparagraph (b)(3) is identical to Model Rule 6.1(b)(3). The additional language at the end of the subparagraph is a modification of the Board Resolution's reference to access to justice in paragraph (1) of the Resolution. See also Explanation of Changes for Comment [8], below. The modification was made, at the suggestion of a representative of the legal services community and member of the Access to Justice Commission, to emphasize this important goal of the Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
In addition, a lawyer should voluntarily contribute financial support to organizations that provide legal services to persons of limited means.	In addition, a lawyer should voluntarily contribute financial support to organizations that provide legal services to persons of limited means.	The last clause of the Rule is identical to its Model Rule counterpart. A similar concept is found in paragraph (4) of the Board Resolution.

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] Every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional work load, has a responsibility to provide legal services to those unable to pay, and personal involvement in the problems of the disadvantaged can be one of the most rewarding experiences in the life of a lawyer. The American Bar Association urges all lawyers to provide a minimum of 50 hours of pro bono services annually. States, however, may decide to choose a higher or lower number of hours of annual service (which may be expressed as a percentage of a lawyer's professional time) depending upon local needs and local conditions. It is recognized that in some years a lawyer may render greater or fewer hours than the annual standard specified, but during the course of his or her legal career, each lawyer should render on average per year, the number of hours set forth in this Rule. Services can be performed in civil matters or in criminal or quasi-criminal matters for which there is no government obligation to provide funds for legal representation, such as post-conviction death penalty appeal cases.	[1] Every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional work load, has a responsibility to provide legal services to those unable to pay, and personal involvement in the problems of the disadvantaged can be one of the most rewarding experiences in the life of a lawyer. ~~The American Bar Association urges all lawyers to provide a minimum of 50 hours of pro bono services annually. States, however, may decide to choose a higher or lower number of hours of annual service (which may be expressed as a percentage of a lawyer's professional time) depending upon local needs and local conditions.~~ It is recognized that in ln some years a lawyer may render greater or fewer hours than the annual standard specified, but during the course of his or her legal career, each lawyer should render on average per year, the number of hours set forth in this Rule. Services can be performed in civil matters or in criminal or quasi-criminal matters for which there is no government obligation to provide funds for legal representation, such as post-conviction death penalty appeal cases.	Comment [1] is identical to Model Rule 6.1, cmt. [1], except that the second and third sentences have been deleted as unnecessary exposition that does not add to an understanding of the Rule.
[2] Paragraphs (a)(1) and (2) recognize the critical need for legal services that exists among persons of limited means by providing that a substantial majority of the legal services rendered annually to the	[2] Paragraphs (a)(1) and (2) recognize the critical need for legal services that exists among persons of limited means by providing that a substantial majority of the legal services rendered annually to the	Comment [2] is identical to Model Rule 6.1, cmt. [2].

* Proposed Rule 4.1, Draft 1 (XX/XX/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
disadvantaged be furnished without fee or expectation of fee. Legal services under these paragraphs consist of a full range of activities, including individual and class representation, the provision of legal advice, legislative lobbying, administrative rule making and the provision of free training or mentoring to those who represent persons of limited means. The variety of these activities should facilitate participation by government lawyers, even when restrictions exist on their engaging in the outside practice of law.	disadvantaged be furnished without fee or expectation of fee. Legal services under these paragraphs consist of a full range of activities, including individual and class representation, the provision of legal advice, legislative lobbying, administrative rule making and the provision of free training or mentoring to those who represent persons of limited means. The variety of these activities should facilitate participation by government lawyers, even when restrictions exist on their engaging in the outside practice of law.
[3] Persons eligible for legal services under paragraphs (a)(1) and (2) are those who qualify for participation in programs funded by the Legal Services Corporation and those whose incomes and financial resources are slightly above the guidelines utilized by such programs but nevertheless, cannot afford counsel. Legal services can be rendered to individuals or to organizations such as homeless shelters, battered women's centers and food pantries that serve those of limited means. The term "governmental organizations" includes, but is not limited to, public protection programs and sections of governmental or public sector agencies.	[3] Persons eligible for legal services under paragraphs (a)(1) and (2) are those who qualify for participation in ~~programs funded by the Legal Services Corporation~~ a qualified legal services program under Business and Professions Code section 6213 and those whose incomes and financial resources are slightly above the guidelines utilized by such programs but nevertheless, cannot afford counsel. Legal services can be rendered to individuals under paragraph (a)(1) or to organizations such as homeless shelters, battered women's centers and food pantries that serve those of limited means under paragraph (a)(2). The term "governmental organizations" includes, but is not limited to, public protection programs and sections of governmental or public sector agencies.	Comment [3] is based on Model Rule 6.1, cmt. [3]. Rather than use the generalized Model Rule definition of individuals the Rule is intended to benefit, a more precise definition based on California law has been substituted. Language has been added to the second sentence of the Comment to clarify the scope of conduct addressed in each of the subparagraphs of paragraph (a).

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[4] Because service must be provided without fee or expectation of fee, the intent of the lawyer to render free legal services is essential for the work performed to fall within the meaning of paragraphs (a)(1) and (2). Accordingly, services rendered cannot be considered pro bono if an anticipated fee is uncollected, but the award of statutory attorneys' fees in a case originally accepted as pro bono would not disqualify such services from inclusion under this section. Lawyers who do receive fees in such cases are encouraged to contribute an appropriate portion of such fees to organizations or projects that benefit persons of limited means.	[4] Because service must be provided without ~~fee or expectation of fee~~compensation, the intent of the lawyer to render free legal services is essential for the work performed to fall within the meaning of paragraphs (a)(1) and (2). Accordingly, services rendered cannot be considered pro bono if an anticipated fee is uncollected, but the award of statutory attorneys' fees in a case originally accepted as pro bono would not disqualify such services from inclusion under this section. Lawyers who do receive fees in such cases are encouraged to contribute an appropriate portion of such fees to organizations or projects that benefit persons of limited means. In addition, see Rule 5.4(a)(5) regarding a lawyer's agreement to pay court awarded fees to a legal services organization.	Comment [4] is based on Model Rule 6.1, cmt. [4]. The word "compensation" has been substituted for "fee or expectation of fee" to conform to the proposed language of the introductory clause. See Explanation of Changes for the introductory clause. In the public comment version of the rule, the last sentence of the Model Rule language, which permits sharing of "court-awarded legal fees with a nonprofit organization that employed, retained or recommended employment of the lawyer," was deleted. However, public comment was received from legal services organizations urging that the sentence be included because lawyer contributions are critical to organization funding. The Commission agreed and restored that Model Rule sentence. In addition, for guidance, a new sentence has been added that cross references Rule 5.4(a)(5) which addresses the issue of a lawyer's agreement to pay awarded fees to a legal services organization. The comments to Rule 5.4 make clear that the Supreme Court's decision in Frye v. Tenderloin Housing Clinic, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal.4th 23 [40 Cal.Rptr.3d 221] should be consulted in such situations.
[5] While it is possible for a lawyer to fulfill the annual responsibility to perform pro bono services exclusively through activities described in paragraphs (a)(1) and (2), to the extent that any hours of service remained unfulfilled, the remaining commitment can be met in a variety of ways as set forth in paragraph (b). Constitutional, statutory or regulatory restrictions may prohibit or impede government and public sector lawyers and judges from performing the pro bono services outlined in	[5] While it is ~~possible for~~preferable that a lawyer ~~to fulfill the~~his or her annual responsibility to perform pro bono services ~~exclusively~~ through activities described in paragraphs (a)(1) and (2), ~~to the extent that any hours of service remained unfulfilled, the remaining~~lawyer's commitment can be met in a variety of ways as set forth in paragraph (b). Constitutional, statutory or regulatory restrictions may prohibit or impede government and public sector lawyers ~~and judges~~ from performing the pro	Comment [5] is based on Model Rule 6.1, cmt. [5], which explains that the activities describe in paragraph (b) are an alternative to providing direct legal services. The word "preferable" has been substituted for "possible" to emphasize the preference, in conformance with the Board Resolution, that a lawyer devote most of his or her 50 hours to the direct delivery of legal services. The references to judges have been stricken because judges in California are not subject to this Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
paragraphs (a)(1) and (2). Accordingly, where those restrictions apply, government and public sector lawyers and judges may fulfill their pro bono responsibility by performing services outlined in paragraph (b).	bono services outlined in paragraphs (a)(1) and (2). Accordingly, where those restrictions apply, government and public sector lawyers ~~and judges~~ may fulfill their pro bono responsibility by performing services outlined in paragraph (b).
[6] Paragraph (b)(1) includes the provision of certain types of legal services to those whose incomes and financial resources place them above limited means. It also permits the pro bono lawyer to accept a substantially reduced fee for services. Examples of the types of issues that may be addressed under this paragraph include First Amendment claims, Title VII claims and environmental protection claims. Additionally, a wide range of organizations may be represented, including social service, medical research, cultural and religious groups.	[6] Paragraph (b)(1) includes the provision of certain types of legal services to those whose incomes and financial resources place them above limited means. It also permits the pro bono lawyer to accept a substantially reduced fee for services. Examples of the types of issues that may be addressed under this paragraph include First Amendment claims, Title VII claims, claims under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act, and environmental protection claims. Additionally, a wide range of organizations may be represented, including social service, medical research, cultural and religious groups.	Comment [6] is based on Model Rule 6.1, cmt. [6]. A reference to claims brought under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act has been added to avoid suggesting that the services described in the Comment are limited to those arising under the U.S. Constitution or federal statutes.
[7] Paragraph (b)(2) covers instances in which lawyers agree to and receive a modest fee for furnishing legal services to persons of limited means. Participation in judicare programs and acceptance of court appointments in which the fee is substantially below a lawyer's usual rate are encouraged under this section.	[7] Paragraph (b)(2) covers instances in which lawyers agree to and receive a modest fee for furnishing legal services to persons of limited means. ~~Participation in judicare programs and acceptance~~ Acceptance of court appointments in which the fee is substantially below a lawyer's usual rate are encouraged under this section.	Comment [7] is based on Model Rule 6.1, cmt. [7]. The reference to "judicare programs" has been deleted because there are few such programs in California.

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[8] Paragraph (b)(3) recognizes the value of lawyers engaging in activities that improve the law, the legal system or the legal profession. Serving on bar association committees, serving on boards of pro bono or legal services programs, taking part in Law Day activities, acting as a continuing legal education instructor, a mediator or an arbitrator and engaging in legislative lobbying to improve the law, the legal system or the profession are a few examples of the many activities that fall within this paragraph.	[8] Paragraph (b)(3) recognizes the value of lawyers engaging in activities that improve the law, the legal system or the legal profession, particularly those designed to increase access to justice. Serving on bar association committees, serving on boards of pro bono or legal services programs, taking part in Law Day activities, acting as a continuing legal education instructor, a mediator or an arbitrator and engaging in legislative lobbying to improve the law, the legal system or the profession, particularly with the goal of increasing access to justice are a few examples of the many activities that fall within this paragraph.	Comment [8] is based on Model Rule 6.1, cmt. [8]. The emphasis on programs designed to increase access to justice has been added because of the California's well-documented needs in this area. See also Explanation of Changes for paragraph (b)(3).
[9] Because the provision of pro bono services is a professional responsibility, it is the individual ethical commitment of each lawyer. Nevertheless, there may be times when it is not feasible for a lawyer to engage in pro bono services. At such times a lawyer may discharge the pro bono responsibility by providing financial support to organizations providing free legal services to persons of limited means. Such financial support should be reasonably equivalent to the value of the hours of service that would have otherwise been provided. In addition, at times it may be more feasible to satisfy the pro bono responsibility collectively, as by a firm's aggregate pro bono activities.	[9] Because the provision of pro bono services is a professional responsibility, it is the individual ethical commitment of each lawyer. Nevertheless, there may be times when it is not feasible for a lawyer to engage in pro bono services. At such times a lawyer may discharge the pro bono responsibility by providing financial support to organizations providing free legal services to persons of limited means. Such financial support should be reasonably equivalent to the value of the hours of service that would have otherwise been provided. In addition, at times it may be more feasible to satisfy the pro bono responsibility collectively, as by a firm's aggregate pro bono activities.	Comment [9] is identical to Model Rule 6.1, cmt. [9].

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[10]Because the efforts of individual lawyers are not enough to meet the need for free legal services that exists among persons of limited means, the government and the profession have instituted additional programs to provide those services. Every lawyer should financially support such programs, in addition to either providing direct pro bono services or making financial contributions when pro bono service is not feasible.	[10]Because the efforts of individual lawyers are not enough to meet the need for free legal services that exists among persons of limited means, the government and the profession have instituted additional programs to provide those services. Every lawyer should financially support such programs, in addition to either providing direct pro bono services or making financial contributions when pro bono service is not feasible.	Comment [10] is identical to Model Rule 6.1, cmt. [10].
[11]Law firms should act reasonably to enable and encourage all lawyers in the firm to provide the pro bono legal services called for by this Rule.	[11]Law firms should act reasonably to enable and encourage all lawyers in the firm to provide the pro bono legal services called for by this Rule.	Comment [11] is identical to Model Rule 6.1, cmt. [11].
[12]The responsibility set forth in this Rule is not intended to be enforced through disciplinary process.	[12]The responsibility set forth in this Rule is not ~~intended to be enforced~~enforceable through disciplinary process.	Comment [12] is based on Model Rule 6.1, cmt. [12]. The word “enforceable” has been substituted for “intended to be enforced” to emphasize that a lawyer’s failure to achieve the number of hours of service suggested by the Rule is not a basis for discipline.

Rule 6.1: Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service
(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to the Batch 6 Public Comment Draft)

Every lawyer, as a matter of professional responsibility, should provide legal services to those unable to pay. A lawyer should aspire to provide or enable the direct delivery of at least 50 hours of pro bono publico legal services per year. In fulfilling this responsibility, the lawyer should:

- (a) provide a substantial majority of the 50 hours of legal services without expectation of compensation other than reimbursement of expenses to:
 - (1) persons of limited means or
 - (2) charitable, religious, civic, community, governmental and educational organizations in matters that are designed primarily to address the needs of persons of limited means; and
- (b) provide any additional services through:
 - (1) delivery of legal services at no fee or substantially reduced fee to individuals, groups or organizations seeking to secure or protect civil rights, civil liberties or public rights, or charitable, religious, civic, community, governmental and educational organizations in matters in furtherance of their organizational purposes, where the payment of standard legal fees would significantly deplete the organization's economic resources or would be otherwise inappropriate;
 - (2) delivery of legal services at a substantially reduced fee to persons of limited means; or

- (3) participation in activities for improving the law, the legal system or the legal profession, particularly with the goal of increasing access to justice.

In addition, a lawyer should voluntarily contribute financial support to organizations that provide legal services to persons of limited means.

COMMENT

- [1] Every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional work load, has a responsibility to provide legal services to those unable to pay, and personal involvement in the problems of the disadvantaged can be one of the most rewarding experiences in the life of a lawyer. In some years a lawyer may render greater or fewer hours than the annual standard specified, but during the course of his or her legal career, each lawyer should render on average per year, the number of hours set forth in this Rule. Services can be performed in civil matters or in criminal or quasi-criminal matters for which there is no government obligation to provide funds for legal representation, such as post-conviction death penalty appeal cases.
- [2] Paragraphs (a)(1) and (2) recognize the critical need for legal services that exists among persons of limited means by providing that a substantial majority of the legal services rendered annually to the disadvantaged be furnished without fee or expectation of fee. Legal services under these paragraphs consist of a full range of activities, including individual and class representation, the provision of legal advice, legislative lobbying, administrative rule making and the provision of free training or mentoring to those who represent persons of limited means. The variety of these activities should facilitate participation by government lawyers, even when restrictions exist on their engaging in the outside practice of law.

- [3] Persons eligible for legal services under paragraphs (a)(1) and (2) are those who qualify for participation in a qualified legal services program under Business and Professions Code section 6213 and those whose incomes and financial resources are slightly above the guidelines utilized by such programs but nevertheless, cannot afford counsel. Legal services can be rendered to individuals under paragraph (a)(1) or to organizations such as homeless shelters, battered women's centers and food pantries that serve those of limited means under paragraph (a)(2). The term "governmental organizations" includes, but is not limited to, public protection programs and sections of governmental or public sector agencies.
- [4] Because service must be provided without compensation, the intent of the lawyer to render free legal services is essential for the work performed to fall within the meaning of paragraphs (a)(1) and (2). Accordingly, services rendered cannot be considered pro bono if an anticipated fee is uncollected, but the award of statutory attorneys' fees in a case originally accepted as pro bono would not disqualify such services from inclusion under this section. Lawyers who do receive fees in such cases are encouraged to contribute an appropriate portion of such fees to organizations or projects that benefit persons of limited means. In addition, see Rule 5.4\(a\)\(5\) regarding a lawyer's agreement to pay court awarded fees to a legal services organization.

- [5] While it is preferable that a lawyer fulfill his or her annual responsibility to perform pro bono services through activities described in paragraphs (a)(1) and (2), the lawyer's commitment can be met in a variety of ways as set forth in paragraph (b). Constitutional, statutory or regulatory restrictions may prohibit or impede government and public sector lawyers from performing the pro bono services outlined in paragraphs (a)(1) and (2). Accordingly, where those restrictions apply, government and public sector lawyers may fulfill their pro bono responsibility by performing services outlined in paragraph (b).
- [6] Paragraph (b)(1) includes the provision of certain types of legal services to those whose incomes and financial resources place them above limited means. It also permits the pro bono lawyer to accept a substantially reduced fee for services. Examples of the types of issues that may be addressed under this paragraph include First Amendment claims, Title VII claims, claims under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act, and environmental protection claims. Additionally, a wide range of organizations may be represented, including social service, medical research, cultural and religious groups.
- [7] Paragraph (b)(2) covers instances in which lawyers agree to and receive a modest fee for furnishing legal services to persons of limited means. Acceptance of court appointments in which the fee is substantially below a lawyer's usual rate are encouraged under this section.
- [8] Paragraph (b)(3) recognizes the value of lawyers engaging in activities that improve the law, the legal system or the legal profession, particularly those designed to increase access to justice. Serving on bar association committees, serving on boards of pro bono or legal services programs, taking part in Law Day activities, acting as a continuing legal education instructor, a mediator or an arbitrator and engaging in legislative lobbying to improve the law, the legal system or the profession, particularly with the goal of increasing access to justice, are a few examples of the many activities that fall within this paragraph.

- [9] Because the provision of pro bono services is a professional responsibility, it is the individual ethical commitment of each lawyer. Nevertheless, there may be times when it is not feasible for a lawyer to engage in pro bono services. At such times a lawyer may discharge the pro bono responsibility by providing financial support to organizations providing free legal services to persons of limited means. Such financial support should be reasonably equivalent to the value of the hours of service that would have otherwise been provided. In addition, at times it may be more feasible to satisfy the pro bono responsibility collectively, as by a firm's aggregate pro bono activities.
- [10] Because the efforts of individual lawyers are not enough to meet the need for free legal services that exists among persons of limited means, the government and the profession have instituted additional programs to provide those services. Every lawyer should financially support such programs, in addition to either providing direct pro bono services or making financial contributions when pro bono service is not feasible.
- [11] Law firms should act reasonably to enable and encourage all lawyers in the firm to provide the pro bono legal services called for by this Rule.
- [12] The responsibility set forth in this Rule is not enforceable through disciplinary process.

Rule 6.1: Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service

(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

Every lawyer, as a matter of professional responsibility, should provide legal services to those unable to pay. A lawyer should aspire to provide or enable the direct delivery of at least 50 hours of pro bono publico legal services per year. In fulfilling this responsibility, the lawyer should:

- (a) provide a substantial majority of the 50 hours of legal services without expectation of compensation other than reimbursement of expenses to:
 - (1) persons of limited means or
 - (2) charitable, religious, civic, community, governmental and educational organizations in matters that are designed primarily to address the needs of persons of limited means; and
- (b) provide any additional services through:
 - (1) delivery of legal services at no fee or substantially reduced fee to individuals, groups or organizations seeking to secure or protect civil rights, civil liberties or public rights, or charitable, religious, civic, community, governmental and educational organizations in matters in furtherance of their organizational purposes, where the payment of standard legal fees would significantly deplete the organization's economic resources or would be otherwise inappropriate;
 - (2) delivery of legal services at a substantially reduced fee to persons of limited means; or

- (3) participation in activities for improving the law, the legal system or the legal profession, particularly with the goal of increasing access to justice.

In addition, a lawyer should voluntarily contribute financial support to organizations that provide legal services to persons of limited means.

COMMENT

- [1] Every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional work load, has a responsibility to provide legal services to those unable to pay, and personal involvement in the problems of the disadvantaged can be one of the most rewarding experiences in the life of a lawyer. In some years a lawyer may render greater or fewer hours than the annual standard specified, but during the course of his or her legal career, each lawyer should render on average per year, the number of hours set forth in this Rule. Services can be performed in civil matters or in criminal or quasi-criminal matters for which there is no government obligation to provide funds for legal representation, such as post-conviction death penalty appeal cases.
- [2] Paragraphs (a)(1) and (2) recognize the critical need for legal services that exists among persons of limited means by providing that a substantial majority of the legal services rendered annually to the disadvantaged be furnished without fee or expectation of fee. Legal services under these paragraphs consist of a full range of activities, including individual and class representation, the provision of legal advice, legislative lobbying, administrative rule making and the provision of free training or mentoring to those who represent persons of limited means. The variety of these activities should facilitate participation by government lawyers, even when restrictions exist on their engaging in the outside practice of law.

- [3] Persons eligible for legal services under paragraphs (a)(1) and (2) are those who qualify for participation in a qualified legal services program under Business and Professions Code section 6213 and those whose incomes and financial resources are slightly above the guidelines utilized by such programs but nevertheless, cannot afford counsel. Legal services can be rendered to individuals under paragraph (a)(1) or to organizations such as homeless shelters, battered women's centers and food pantries that serve those of limited means under paragraph (a)(2). The term "governmental organizations" includes, but is not limited to, public protection programs and sections of governmental or public sector agencies.
- [4] Because service must be provided without compensation, the intent of the lawyer to render free legal services is essential for the work performed to fall within the meaning of paragraphs (a)(1) and (2). Accordingly, services rendered cannot be considered pro bono if an anticipated fee is uncollected, but the award of statutory attorneys' fees in a case originally accepted as pro bono would not disqualify such services from inclusion under this section. Lawyers who do receive fees in such cases are encouraged to contribute an appropriate portion of such fees to organizations or projects that benefit persons of limited means. In addition, see Rule 5.4(a)(5) regarding a lawyer's agreement to pay court awarded fees to a legal services organization,
- [5] While it is preferable that a lawyer fulfill his or her annual responsibility to perform pro bono services through activities described in paragraphs (a)(1) and (2), the lawyer's commitment can be met in a variety of ways as set forth in paragraph (b). Constitutional, statutory or regulatory restrictions may prohibit or impede government and public sector lawyers from performing the pro bono services outlined in paragraphs (a)(1) and (2). Accordingly, where those restrictions apply, government and public sector lawyers may fulfill their pro bono responsibility by performing services outlined in paragraph (b).

- [6] Paragraph (b)(1) includes the provision of certain types of legal services to those whose incomes and financial resources place them above limited means. It also permits the pro bono lawyer to accept a substantially reduced fee for services. Examples of the types of issues that may be addressed under this paragraph include First Amendment claims, Title VII claims, claims under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act, and environmental protection claims. Additionally, a wide range of organizations may be represented, including social service, medical research, cultural and religious groups.
- [7] Paragraph (b)(2) covers instances in which lawyers agree to and receive a modest fee for furnishing legal services to persons of limited means. Acceptance of court appointments in which the fee is substantially below a lawyer's usual rate are encouraged under this section.
- [8] Paragraph (b)(3) recognizes the value of lawyers engaging in activities that improve the law, the legal system or the legal profession, particularly those designed to increase access to justice. Serving on bar association committees, serving on boards of pro bono or legal services programs, taking part in Law Day activities, acting as a continuing legal education instructor, a mediator or an arbitrator and engaging in legislative lobbying to improve the law, the legal system or the profession, particularly with the goal of increasing access to justice, are a few examples of the many activities that fall within this paragraph.

- [9] Because the provision of pro bono services is a professional responsibility, it is the individual ethical commitment of each lawyer. Nevertheless, there may be times when it is not feasible for a lawyer to engage in pro bono services. At such times a lawyer may discharge the pro bono responsibility by providing financial support to organizations providing free legal services to persons of limited means. Such financial support should be reasonably equivalent to the value of the hours of service that would have otherwise been provided. In addition, at times it may be more feasible to satisfy the pro bono responsibility collectively, as by a firm's aggregate pro bono activities.
- [10] Because the efforts of individual lawyers are not enough to meet the need for free legal services that exists among persons of limited means, the government and the profession have instituted additional programs to provide those services. Every lawyer should financially support such programs, in addition to either providing direct pro bono services or making financial contributions when pro bono service is not feasible.
- [11] Law firms should act reasonably to enable and encourage all lawyers in the firm to provide the pro bono legal services called for by this Rule.
- [12] The responsibility set forth in this Rule is not enforceable through disciplinary process.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1 Disagree = 43 Modify = 0 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Alameda County Bar Association	D	Yes		It is important to have a rule, in addition to a Board resolution and statutory language, because legal education and law practice focus on the Rules of Professional Conduct and pro bono is too important to leave out of the rules. The need for pro bono services is critical. All efforts to increase pro bono service and access to justice are welcome.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.
2	Alex, Glenn C.	A	No		While attorneys should be encouraged to provide pro bono legal services, Rule 6.1 should not be included in the Rules of Professional Conduct. The Bar should conclude, as it has in other contexts within the Rules that this subject is beyond the scope of the Rules. Instead of including Rule 6.1, the Bar should periodically send emails to all attorneys recommending pro bono work and listing numerous possibilities with contact information.	Although the commenter agrees with the Board of Governor's decision not to adopt proposed Rule 6.1, the Commission disagrees with that position and has requested that the Board reconsider its decision. In recommending the adoption of this Rule, the Commission recognized the overwhelming need to increase access to justice in California, and that proposed Rule 6.1 provides a direct means of accomplishing that goal. Although there is a Board of Governors' Resolution which expresses this policy, many members of the bar are unaware of its existence. This Rule will be a stronger policy statement if it is approved by the Supreme Court. Given the repeated statements by Chief Justice George regarding access to justice issues, and the findings of the Commission on

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
						Access to Justice, it is likely that the Supreme Court would look favorably upon such a rule. While e-mails to attorneys might be a way of reminding attorneys to perform pro bono work, an aspirational rule is a far more effective means to advise law students and lawyers that all attorneys should perform this important function.
3	Anaebere, Ugochi	D	Yes		I have been a lawyer for 6 years, 3 of which have been devoted to public interest law. It was through a public interest law clinic with the Legal Aid Association of Los Angeles where the reasons why I attended law school became crystallized: service to others to ensure that equal access under the law is something that is achieved for all, regardless of income. I serve as Pro Bono Coordinator for a legal aid Organization in the Central Valley, and have been shocked at what I have seen, in terms of access to legal services. While we are fortunate to have small firm attorneys and solo practitioners who generously provide pro bono legal services, the good work of this relatively small group of attorneys does not translate to a strong, widespread pro bono culture needed to begin to meet the demand of services that I knew while living in my	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response hometown. Further, unlike urban areas where legal aid programs can recruit volunteer interns from numerous law schools, there is only one law school in our service area, and a significant number of the students hold full time positions as they pursue their legal studies. Moreover, there are very few large firms in our service area that can easily provide significant amounts of pro bono services. When I heard that the State Bar was considering amending the Rules of Professional Conduct by strongly encouraging that attorneys volunteer at least 50 hours of pro bono services to a local legal aid agency, I thought to myself- finally, a real push towards encouraging lawyers (who are in a service profession) to give back to others. There are 1200 lawyers in the city where I practice, and the hours of service these individuals could provide to our clients completely doable- as they boil down to about 1 hour a week. The time spent with an individual who is unable to afford legal services, no matter how small, is invaluable, and is greatly appreciated. For many of our clients, they are looking for finality with their legal issues. They are looking for an avenue, a resource, a guide. As lawyers who have

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					been trained and have legal knowledge, it is our responsibility to give to the least among us. For to whom much is given, much is required. Passing this amendment will do much to ease our state's huge justice gap. I urge the State Bar to pass this amendment.
4	Asian Pacific Legal Center [Karin Wang]	D	Yes		On behalf of the Asian Pacific American Legal Center (APALC), I am writing to urge the Board of Governors to adopt the rule. We believe that strong encouragement from the State Bar through the State Bars rules sends a strong message about the importance of pro bono. The proposed Rule 6.1 is similar to ABA Model Rule 6.1, and encourages attorneys to provide or enable the direct delivery of pro bono services to persons of limited means, and, in essence, to improve the access to justice in the State of California. There is a great need for legal services that is not now being filled, despite the existing pro bono resolution, the statute, and judicial support for pro bono. At least 44 other states have included a similar provision in their rules. According to the report of the Rules Revision Commission, nearly every jurisdiction has adopted some version of Model Rule 6.1.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					It is important to have a pro bono rule, in addition to a Board resolution and statutory language, because legal education and law practice routinely focus on the Rules of Professional Conduct, and pro bono is too important a value within the legal profession to be left out of the rules. Since the rules are ultimately approved by the Supreme Court, it may seem like a glaring omission for the Bar to recommend that we mostly adopt the ABA Model Rules, but leave out the rule on one of the topics the Chief Justice most strongly supports. Last, but not least, the proposed rule is not mandatory, and language can be added to emphasize that this rule is only aspirational, to avoid any misperception that this rule would require attorneys to do pro bono. For all the aforementioned reasons, I urge its adoption by the Board of Governors.
5	Austin, Steven – California Commission on Access to Justice (Public Hearing)	D	Yes		We strongly urge the State Bar to recommend a pro bono Rule as part of the Rule revision process. At least 45 other states have included a similar provision in their ethics rules. According to the report of this Rules and Revision commission, nearly every jurisdiction has adopted some version of Model Rule 6.1.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
6	Bet Tzedek Legal Services & Legal Aid Association of California [Mitchell A. Kamin] (Public Hearing)	D	Yes		I echo and adopt the comments of Toby Rothschild from LAFLA concerning the value of Rule 6.1 to our ongoing ability to recruit pro bono support. The importance of 6.1 extends beyond our individual programs in Los Angeles and other parts of the state. In so many ways, California is a leader on Access to Justice Issues: the Access Commission; AB 590; a Chief Justice profoundly committed to access in general and pro bono in particular. At the same time, low-income Californians face a daunting Justice Gap, with approximately 2/3 of eligible legal aid clients being denied services due to lack of resources. The adoption of Rule 6.1 will maintain California's status as an access leader. Moreover, it will help organizations – including those in rural parts of the state – recruit help to close the Justice Gap. At Bet Tzedek, we reduced our budget by 15% while calls for assistance increased by 40%. Access to pro bono support is vital to help our organizations manage through these rough times – Indeed, we are concerned that not approving 6.1 could send exactly the wrong message – that pro bono is not a key	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					aspect of all lawyers' professional responsibility – precisely when our organizations, and clients, need pro bono the most. Adoption of 6.1 will help small and rural programs reinforce their message that pro bono matters. Many programs lack resources to get this word out, and having it come from the bar lends great credibility. Rule 6.1 is not a step toward mandatory pro bono and that I would oppose a mandatory pro bono requirement in California. We are fortunate to have firms and companies with a well founded commitment to pro bono and making it mandatory would be contradictory and counterproductive. But having 6.1 as a Rule of Professional Conduct will send a very positive message and reinforce our efforts to involve more and more private attorneys in making California a leader in access to justice for all.
7	California Commission on Access to Justice ("CCAJ") [Hon. Ronald B. Robie]	D	Yes		On May 19th , 2010, the Access to Justice Commission voted unanimously to urge the State Bar Board of Governors to recommend a pro bono rule as part of the Rule Revision process. This is an issue of utmost concern to the	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Commission. It is imperative that our revised Rules of Professional Conduct include a rule addressing the important role of pro bono, and we urge the Rules Revision Commission. Because we understand that there were concerns that the rule was not clearly aspirational in nature, we recommend that the first paragraph be amended to include the words “aspire to”, from the ABA’s Model Rule. There were several reasons for the Commission’s unwavering support for this rule. • We understand that the failure of the Board Committee to recommend Rule 6.1 does not reflect a lack of support for pro bono among board committee members. However, we fear that failure to include a pro bono rule in the final vote of the Board of Governors will be perceived as a lack of support for pro bono. • It is important to have a pro bono rule, in addition to a Board resolution and statutory language, because legal education and law practice routinely focus on the Rules of Professional Conduct, and pro bono is too important a value within the legal profession to leave it out of the rules. The Bar’s ethics manual, “Pub 250”, does include the board

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					resolution -- but it is on page 387 of a 387-page publication. • At least 44 other states have included a similar provision in their ethics rules. • Other proposed rules are similar in nature – at least four other rules do not involve disciplinary consequences, but they permit or encourage certain behavior. • We appreciate the effort the Rules Revision Commission put into its modification of ABA Model Rule 6.1, which it recommended unanimously. We particularly appreciated the language that strengthened the emphasis on activities that promoted access to justice. With the amendment recommended above, we hope that their proposed language is ultimately adopted. • Some believe that the language describing pro bono work is too broad. However, the vast majority of work done pursuant to Rule 6.1 in other states is legal services for the poor, despite the language allowing other kinds of pro bono activity. And even if some work would be called “pro bono” that we would not consider true pro bono, that is not a reason to have NO ethics rule on the subject.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					• Because the rules are ultimately approved by the Supreme Court, it may seem like a glaring omission for the Bar to recommend that we mostly adopt the ABA Model Rules, but leave out the rule on one of the topics the Chief Justice most strongly supports. In fact, last August, the Judicial Council, under the leadership of the Chief Justice, approved a special pro bono toolkit for judges to use to encourage lawyers to do pro bono. The toolkit can be found through the following link: http://www.courtinfo.ca.gov/programs/equalaccess/probonotoolkit.htm • The Access Commission worked hard to establish the new pilot representation project that is being launched next year, and pro bono is a key part of the delivery system anticipated for those pilot projects. This new legislation is getting national attention, and to fail to adopt a pro bono rule at this point would be perceived as a giant step backward in our efforts to implement this new legislation and otherwise to improve access to justice. The actual provisions are less important than our belief that we need to have a pro bono rule adopted. It can be the ABA's Model Rule, it can be the rule as modified by this Rules

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Revision Commission, or it can be some combination. The critical point is that we believe a pro bono rule MUST be adopted, and Commission representatives are available to work with any and all parties to make sure that this Rule is ultimately adopted and recommended to the Supreme Court.
8	Carr, Martin D.	D	No		I am writing to convey a small comment in regard to Proposed Rule 6.1. The Commission for the Revision of the Rules of Professional Conduct's April 2010 Draft Following Consideration of Public Comment on the proposed rule states, "Although the Board of Governors' Resolution expresses this policy [encouraging pro bono work], many members of the bar are unaware of its existence." In my experience, this could not be more true. I have been a director of Legal Services of Northern California for 2 years and have been involved in pro bono efforts in my community since becoming an attorney nearly ten years ago. Nonetheless, I had no idea that the State Bar had any interest in encouraging pro bono service until I recently received a copy of Mary Lavery Flynn's May 25th Memorandum to the Access to Justice Commission concerning Proposed Rule 6.1. I had never	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					before heard of the Board of Governors' Resolution, and I would be amazed if many other attorneys have. On the other hand, I am very familiar with the Rules of Professional Conduct. I think most California attorneys know precisely where to find the link to the Rules on the front page of the State Bar's website. Including a statement about pro bono service in the Rules would be a meaningful statement to the members of our State Bar. The little-known Board of Governors' Resolution is not. Our Rules of Professional Conduct should reflect our values as a legal community. If we care about pro bono services, the Rules should say so.
9	Carson, Peter H.	D	No		I am writing to urge the Board of Governors reconsider its recent decision not to recommend proposed Rule 6.1, and instead include the amended version of ABA Model Rule 6.1 with respect to voluntary pro bono legal service in its proposed revisions to the California Rules of Professional Conduct. This is an issue that directly impacts: the hugely underserved client communities of low income and disadvantaged people.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					This also is an issue in which I have a deep personal interest, as I have provided substantial direct pro bono services in a great many matters throughout this state and country. I believe that it is imperative that California, long a leader in providing pro bona legal services, encourage the provision of pro bono legal services in California by making very clear through its Rules of Professional Conduct that its lawyers are expected to make a serious pro bono commitment. I understand that the failure of the Committee on Regulation and Admissions to recommend Rule 6.1 does not reflect a lack of support for pro Bono among board committee members. Nonetheless, an affirmative failure to include a pro bono rule in the final vote of the Board of Governors will invariably be perceived as a lack of support for pro bono by the State Bar of California, which would be unfortunate and a significant step backwards, and would contrast sharply with the at least forty-four other states that have adopted ABA Model Rule 6.1 or a close variant thereof as their own home ethical rule. Why should California purposefully leave itself behind?

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Pro bono simply is too important a value within the legal profession to leave it out of California's ethical rules. Please include Rule 6.1 in the proposed Rules of Professional Conduct to encourage the provision of pro bono services in California and underscore the core value of pro bono of the legal profession in California.
10	Central California Legal Services [Chris A. Schneider]	D	Yes		I write in support of the Commission's Proposed Rule 6.1. You are no doubt aware of the tremendous "Justice Gap" (the difference between the need for legal services and the amount of services available) throughout California. The Justice Gap is particularly pronounced in areas outside of the large urban centers. The reasons for the urban/rural disparities are numerous and beyond the scope of this letter. However, the disparities very real and our staff members and client communities see them on a daily basis. Throughout California there are numerous efforts to promote pro-bono. Still, it is safe to say that a spirit of probono services does not permeate the entire legal community. There cannot be a better time to work to promote a state-wide culture of pro-bono. As the economic crisis drags on, more and more	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					applicants with meritorious cases find themselves being turned away from legal aid offices because there are insufficient resources. A true spirit of pro-bono could go a long way in alleviating this crisis. California Chief Justice Ronald M. George constantly reminds the legal community of the great need to increase access to justice and to encourage pro-bono work The State Bar has also worked to promote pro-bona and passed resolutions to encourage pro-bono work by all attorneys. Despite these efforts, there still remains large numbers of attorneys who still do not take advantage of pro-bono opportunities that are available to them. The State Bar needs to underscore the resolutions it has passed in support of pro-bono by incorporating this aspirational rule. All attorneys, and attorney applicants, refer to the Rules. The same cannot be said about resolutions passed by the State Bar, no matter how lofty those resolutions may be. By incorporating Rule 6.1 into its Rules, the State Bar would be not only be joining in with the vast majority of other state bars which have adopted similar rules but would be sending a clear message that pro-bono service should be the norm, not the exception.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					I urge adoption of Rule 6.1.
11	Chalmers, Tiela (Public Hearing)	D	No		I would like to urge you and the Board of Governors to adopt some version of 6.1. I go to a lot of national conferences on pro bono, and California is viewed as being a leader in pro bono. I think it would be embarrassing, frankly, for California to have rejected a Rule urging people to do pro bono. 44 or 45 states in the country have such a Rule.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.
12	Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct ("COPRAC")	D	Yes		COPRAC has reviewed the provisions of proposed Rule 6.1 – Voluntary Pro Bono Service. COPRAC understands that the Board intends to reconsider its decision to reject proposed Rule 6.1. We urge the Board to reconsider and to adopt the proposed rule. COPRAC previously reviewed the provisions of proposed Rule 6.1 and offered comments to the Commission for the Revision of the Rules of Professional Conduct. Attached hereto are the comments we offered in support of the proposed Rule. As we commented to the Commission, COPRAC believes that the importance of our professional obligation to improve access to justice, as embodied in this rule, outweighs the objection that the rule is aspirational, and thus different from other rules that mandate or prohibit certain conduct.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					COPRAC has suggested some minor language changes that would address some of the concerns that have been raised with proposed Rule 6.1. We ask that the Board consider those suggestions, found in the attached letter, when it reconsiders the proposed Rule. The need for legal assistance for persons of limited means is enormous and well documented. COPRAC asks the Board to reconsider proposed Rule 6.1 which, if adopted, will imbed in our Rules the importance of our duty as attorneys to work to meet this need.
13	Disability Rights Legal Center ("DRLC") [Paula Pearlman]	D	Yes		The Disability Rights Legal Center respectfully requests that proposed Rule 6.1 be submitted to the full State Bar Board of Governors for approval and adoption. Much of DRLC's work is accomplished through partnering with pro bono lawyers. Proposed Rule 6.1 would not require that lawyers do pro bono work. Nonetheless, DRLC makes this request for the following reasons: 1. At least 44 other states have included a similar provision in their rules. According to the report of the Rules Revision Commission, nearly every jurisdiction has adopted some	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					version of Model Rule 6.1. 2. It is important to have a pro bono rule, in addition to a Board resolution and statutory language, because legal education and law practice routinely focus on the Rules of Professional Conduct, and pro bono is too important a value within the legal profession to leave out of the rules. 3. Because the rules are ultimately approved by the Supreme Court, it may seem like a glaring omission for the Bar to recommend that we mostly adopt the ABA Model Rules, but leave out the rule on one of the topics the Chief Justice most strongly supports. 4. There is a great need for legal services that is not now being filled, despite the existing pro bono resolution, the statute, and judicial support for pro bono. Proposed Rule 6.1 would encourage California lawyers to do more.
14	Fadenrecht, Anne	D	No		Agree with proposed Rule 6.1 to encourage pro bono work... Support comments of Central California Legal Services as submitted by its Director.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.
15	Golden State University School of Law [Dean Drucilla Stender Ramey]	D	Yes		We request that the Board of Governors reconsider its recent decision not to recommend proposed Rule 6.1.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					This issue is of the highest importance to pro bono supporters across the state, and, given California's historic leadership on public service and pro bono legal services, across the nation. Golden Gate believes it is vital that the revised California Rules of Professional Conduct include a rule addressing the integral role of pro bono. Because we understand that there were concerns that the rule was not clearly aspirational in nature, we recommend that the words "aspire to" from the ABA's Model Rule, be added to the first paragraph, which would then read, "...A lawyer should aspire to provide or enable the direct delivery of at least 50 hours of pro bono public legal services per year-" We recognize that the decision of the Board Committee not to recommend Rule 6.1 does not reflect a lack of support for pro bono among board committee members. However, we fear that failure to include a pro bono rule in the final vote of the Board of Governors will be perceived as a lack of support for pro bono by the members of the California State Bar. To have the maximum impact on the lawyers in our community, it is crucial to have a pro

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					bono rule, in addition to a Board resolution and statutory language. Pro bono is too essential a value within the legal profession to leave it out of the rules. At least 44 other states have included a similar provision in their ethics rules. While the exact wording of the new rule is important, it is even more important that a meaningful rule in this area be passed in the first instance. Whether you choose the ABA's Model Rule, or the rule as modified by the Rules Revision Commission, or a modification of either that achieves our shared goal, we in the progressive law school community believe that adoption of a rule promoting pro bono work is absolutely critical to our efforts to ensure access to justice for all,
16	Goodman, Karen M.	D	No		I am writing to urge the Board of Governors to reconsider the recent action of the Committee of Regulations and Admissions not to recommend to the Supreme Court the adoption of the Rules Revision Commission's Proposed Rule 6.1 pertaining to pro bono service. Rule 6.1 promotes access to justice for all California citizens by explicitly making pro bono services a commitment for all California lawyers.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					In enacting Rule 6.1, California will join 45 other states in expressly encompassing a commitment to pro bono services in its ethical rules. ABA Model Rule 6.1 is an essential foundation to a lawyer's commitment to the public. A lawyer's commitment to pro bono service is too important to leave out of the rules. Providing pro Bono services is a fundamental component of providing a fair and accessible justice system. Adopting 6.1 which expressly make a commitment to pro bono services an ethical requirement is a step in the right direction. I urge the Board of Governors to reconsider its Committee's recommendation and approve 6.1.
17	Hathaway, Christina Skaf	D	No		I agree with the comments made on behalf of CCLS to support recommendation for adoption of RULE 6.1 for PRO BONO work. On a personal level, I also urge the recommendation for adoption of RULE 6.1. The need for Pro Bono work is immense and will continue to grow. The adoption of RULE 6.1 will give greater opportunities for those in need to receive legal assistance. By coming together, the legal community can make a difference in their communities. RULE 6.1 furthers this goal. I urge adoption of RULE	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					6.1.
18	Herr, Leonard	D	No		For the most part, the legal profession is highly regarded by the public as a whole. The practice of law is very time consuming and it is easy to lose sight of the importance of providing pro bono assistance to the public. Encouraging members of our profession to provide pro bono assistance to the public is helpful to our members and a positive image of lawyers.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.
19	HIV & AIDS Legal Services Alliance [Margaret Brewer]	D	Yes		Almost 88% of other states have adopted a similar provision in their Rules of Professional Conduct, and it seems a glaring omission for California to leave out this important value from the rules.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.
20	Hurley, Russ	D	No		I join in the comments submitted on behalf of Central California Legal Services.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.
21	Kim, Linda – Public Interest Clearinghouse (Public Hearing)	D	Yes		The Public Interest Clearinghouse strongly supports the inclusion of an aspirational rule on pro bono in the Rules of Professional Conduct. We believe that even an aspirational rule not intended to be the basis for discipline would be valuable, because it would provide formal recognition in California that all lawyers have a professional responsibility to do pro bono work.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					It is unthinkable that a leadership state like California would not have an aspirational rule, and we urge the State Bar Board of Governors to adopt Proposed Rule 6.1.
22	Legal Aid of Marin [Paul S. Cohen]	D	Yes		Our agency is the beneficiary of over $1.5 million each year in pro bono or in kind services. Our volunteer attorneys make the difference between clients receiving services or going without. Many of our volunteers serve each year with distinction and receive the Wiley M. Manuel Award. A rule encouraging a favorable pro bono commitment should be the mandate of the State Bar of California and I urge its full consideration and adoption. It is long overdue.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.
23	Legal Services for Prisoners with Children ("LSPC") [Carol Strickman]	D	Yes		LSPC urges the adoption of Model Rule 6.1. We are acutely aware of the lack of legal representation for low income people in our society. In particular, we hear every day from prisoners who have received inadequate medical care, who have been sexually harrassed by correctional officers, or have other actionable claims. We are contacted by prisoners and formerly incarcerated people who need legal assistance in establishing visitation rights with their children. Federally funded legal aid programs are prohibited by law from representing incarcerated people.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Yet these people retain certain civil and constitutional rights. California has over 170,000 people incarcerated in state prison, and many more in our county jails. This is a significant underserved population. Our courts and our laws offer the possibility of justice, but without legal representation, this possibility is slim. Model Rule 6.1 would encourage attorneys to perform pro bono legal services to individuals such as them. For these reasons, we urge the adoption of this rule.
24	Legal Services of Northern California [W.H. Whitaker]	D	Yes		I request the Board of Governors to reconsider the recent action of the Committee of Regulations and Admissions not to recommend the adoption of Rule 6.1. The Rural Task Force of the Access To Justice Commission contains a thorough discussion of this issue in its report, Improving Civil Justice in Rural California, and recommends that California lawyers, including urban lawyers, consider ways to provide pro bono services to under-served rural Californians. The report includes the following language among its core recommendations: "Because rural areas have fewer lawyers, law schools, and economic resources, urban bar associations and lawyers should consider partnering with rural	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response organizations, of course being mindful that impoverished urban Californians are also underrepresented and need pro bono help as well. Attorneys who are precluded by ethics rules from representing some individuals should be made aware of all of the options for meeting the recommendation, such as devoting time or money to legal aid programs or otherwise furthering access to justice. " The Proposed Rule 6.1 fits perfectly with the Rural Task Force recommendations. It would be an essential tool for judges, law schools, court self-help centers, local bar associations and referral services, legal services programs, and many others in their pro bongQ recruitment efforts.
25	Los Angeles Center for Law and Justice [Hellen Hong]	D	Yes		As a free legal services provider to low income residents of Los Angeles County, we see the importance of having a model rule to encourage pro bono service in our legal community. There is a great need for legal services that is not now being filled, despite the existing pro bono resolution, the statute, and judicial support for pro bono. It is important to have a pro bono rule, in addition to a Board resolution and statutory language, because legal education and law	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response practice routinely focus on the Rules of Professional Conduct, and pro bono is too important a value within the legal profession to leave out of the rules. Because the rules are ultimately approved by the Supreme Court, it may seem like a glaring omission for the Bar to recommend that we mostly adopt the ABA Model Rules, but leave out the rule on one of the topics the Chief Justice most strongly supports. In fact, at least 44 other states have included a similar provision in their rules. According to the report of the Rules Revision Commission, nearly every jurisdiction has adopted some version of Model Rule 6.1. A message from the Board of Governors to make a statement to encourage attorneys to provide pro bono is a powerful statement of the importance of pro bono in our profession. Language can be added to emphasize that this rule is only aspirational, to avoid any misperception that this rule would require attorneys to do pro bono. Therefore we ask the subcommittee to reconsider proposed Rule 6.1 and urge the Board of Governors to adopt Model Rule 6.1.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
26	Los Angeles County Bar Association Access to Justice Committee [Toby Rothschild]	D	Yes		The Access to Justice Committee (AJC) of the Los Angeles County Bar (LACBA) greatly appreciates the work of the Rule Revision Commission in recommending the adoption of Rule 6.1. We are extremely disappointed that the Board of Governors failed to send the rule out for comment. For California to be one of only a handful of states not to include Rule 6.1 in its Rules of Professional Responsibility would diminish the status of California as a leader in the efforts to provide access for those unable to afford it. While Rule 6.1 is not enforceable by discipline, it will be a compelling tool in the ability of pro bono programs to increase the number of volunteers willing to provide such services, and to expand the numbers and types of cases for which help is provided. Business and Professions Code section 6068 (h) requires lawyers: "Never to reject, for any consideration personal to himself or herself, the cause of the defenseless or the oppressed." Rule 6.1 gives content to that requirement by encouraging the provision of pro bono services to people who otherwise would be defenseless.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					The President of the State Bar and the Chief Justice of California are both very strong advocates of lawyers providing pro bono services. The Board of Governors should not send to the Supreme Court a revision of the Rules of Professional Conduct that does not include this provision.
27	Mental Health Advocacy Services, Inc. (Pamela Marx)	D	Yes		Mental Health Advocacy Services, Inc. (MHAS) writes to request reconsideration of the Board's decision not to adopt proposed Rule 6.1. MHAS is a nonprofit legal services agency serving adults and children with mental health disabilities in the greater Los Angeles area. Our clients are low-income individuals with disabilities; many of them survive on limited government benefits incomes. When they have legal problems, they must rely on legal services agencies and the pro bono resources those agencies are able to access. Rule 6.1 is an aspirational, not mandatory, rule concerning attorneys' annual provision of pro bono legal services. As an aspirational rule, which would be included within the rules of professional responsibility, it provides guidance to attorneys that the provision of pro bono services and the financial support of legal services organizations and programs is consistent with the obligations of those	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					licensed to practice law in California. Equal access to the law is a foundational concept in our constitutional society. Non-profit legal services providers meet only a fraction of the need for legal representation. Only with the provision of pro bono services by attorneys with expertise in much needed areas of representation such as litigation, real property transactions and family law can the legal profession hope to meet more of the need for services that exists. The "Pro Bono Opportunities" page of the State Bar website notes that, while California has made gains, our state's legal services programs are unable to provide even minimal legal assistance to as much as 67 percent of the legal needs of California's poor residents. The Brennan Center for Justice in a 2010 white paper supporting federal funding of legal services noted that the economic crisis has only increased the need for legal services for the poor. In light of the continuing and rising need for legal services for the poor, including those with disabilities, MHAS respectfully requests that the State Bar Board of Governors adopt Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
28	Mills, Michael N.	D	No		I am writing to urge the Board of Governors to reconsider the recent action of the Committee of Regulations and Admissions not to recommend the Supreme Court adoption of Proposed Rule 6.1. The Commission's proposal was the product of a long and thoughtful process which carefully reviewed the various issues. Rule 6.1 sets out the professional responsibility of lawyers to provide pro bono public^o services to those otherwise unable to obtain access to the legal system and the courts. For California to be one of only a handful of states not to include Rule 6.1 in its Rules of Professional Responsibility would diminish the status of California as a leader in the efforts to provide access for those unable to afford it. While Rule 6.1 is not enforceable by discipline, it will be a compelling tool in the ability of pro bono programs to increase the number of volunteers willing to provide such services, and to expand the numbers and types of cases for which help is provided. Business and Professions Code section 6068(h) requires lawyers: "Never to reject, for any consideration personal to himself or	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					herself, the cause of the defenseless or the oppressed." Rule 6.1 gives content to that laudable requirement by encouraging the provision of pro bono services to people who otherwise would have no legal voice. The President of the State Bar and the Chief Justice of California are both very strong advocates of lawyers providing pro bono services. The Board should not send the Supreme Court a revision of the Rules of Professional Conduct that does include this important provision.
29	Neighborhood Legal Services of Los Angeles County ("NLS-LA") [Derek Milosavljevic]	D	Yes		I encourage the Board of Governors to adopt the proposed Rule 6.1 in the Rules of Professional Conduct and ask that it be submitted to the Supreme Court. NLS-LA continues to have a great unmet need for private attorneys to provide pro bono services to those otherwise unable to obtain access to the legal system and the courts. While Rule 6.1 will not enforceable by discipline, it will be a compelling tool in the ability of our Private Attorney Involvement (PAI) programs to successfully recruit volunteers willing to provide such services. For California to be one of only a handful of states not to include Rule 6.1 in its Rules of	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Professional Responsibility diminishes the status of our state and our legal community as leaders in the efforts to provide access for those unable to afford it. Business and Professions Code section 6068(h) requires lawyers: "Never to reject, for any consideration personal to himself or herself, the cause of the defenseless or the oppressed." Rule 6.1 complements and reaffirms that requirement by encouraging the provision of pro bono services to people who otherwise would be defenseless. The President of the State Bar and the Chief Justice of California are both very strong advocates of lawyers providing pro bono services. The Board of Governors should not send to the Supreme Court a recommendation that we substantially adopt the ABA Model Rules, while omitting such an important rule on one of the topics the Chief Justice most ardently supports.
30	Neighborhood Legal Services of Los Angeles County ("NLS-LA") [Neal S. Dudovitz]	D	Yes		I am writing to express my strong support for including proposed Rule 6.1 in the Rules of Professional Conduct that will be recommended for adoption to the California Supreme Court. Neighborhood Legal Services has worked	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response tirelessly for more than 45 years to improve access to justice for low income communities in Los Angeles County. With a staff of 100+, including 45 lawyers and an annual operating budget of $12 million, NLS-LA provides legal assistance through offices in El Monte, Pacoima and Glendale, as well as 10 courthouse-based Self-Help Centers and 4 domestic violence clinics spread throughout Los Angeles County. In 2009, NLS-LA provided assistance on a variety of legal matters to more than 70,000 LA residents. Although Neighborhood Legal Services ("NLS-LA") is one of California's largest legal services programs, with well over 1 million people financially eligible for our assistance, there is little doubt that we can only meet a small fraction of the legal needs of the communities we serve. We need the full support and assistance of the private bar - law firms, partnerships and sole practioners. To that end, in 2009 the NLS-LA Board of Directors renewed its commitment to expand the availability of legal services to our clients through new and improved partnerships with the private bar. We are seeking additional help from private attorneys in Los Angeles on a broad array of new, innovative projects.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Undoubtedly, Rule 6.1 will play an important role in making our pro bono campaign a success by helping to develop a renewed culture of pro bono commitment within the legal community. If California continues to be one of only a handful of states without a directive encouraging pro bono assistance in its Rules of Professional Responsibility, it will diminish the status of California as a national leader in providing access to justice for low income communities. While Rule 6.1 is not enforceable by discipline, it will nevertheless be a compelling tool in the ability of legislative pro bono programs to increase the number of volunteers and to expand the numbers and types of cases for which help is provided. In sum, Rule 6.1 is essential for access to justice to become a reality for California's poor.
31	Odgers, Richard	D	No		I am writing to urge that the Board include the amended version of ABA Model Rule 6.1 with respect to voluntary pro Bono service in its proposed revisions to the Rules of Professional Conduct, The version I support is the one unanimously recommended by the Rules Revision Commission, with the addition	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response of the words "aspire to" in the first sentence of the Rule. The Rules Revision Commission unanimously recommended that an amended version of ABA Model Rule 6.1 be adopted in California as it has been in almost every other state. And my experience has taught me that in today's world, where the profession of law is in danger of becoming the business of law, it is vital that California, long a leader in providing pro bono legal services, make very clear that every one of its lawyers is expected to make a serious pro bona commitment. The current crisis in the provision of legal services to those who can't afford them cries out for California's State Bar to take a strong stand to make clear that all California lawyers are expected to do their part to provide and financially to support pro bono services. If my understanding is correct, one of the reasons that the Committee on Regulation and Admissions did not recommend inclusion of Proposed Rule 6.1 is that the rule is hortatory but would not carry disciplinary sanctions, whereas the other rules that aren't supported by sanctions are permissive. If I am correct, this is a very thin basis on which to

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					refuse strongly to encourage California lawyers to step up to what all acknowledge is a desperate need. We need to do whatever we can to encourage the provision of pro bona services in California, Please include Rule 6.1 in the proposed Rules of Professional Conduct.
32	Pastore, Claire	D	No		As a member of the faculty at USC and as the co-chair of the Right to Counsel Task Committee of the California Commission on Access to Justice and a former longtime legal services attorney, I am well aware of the growing and urgent need for pro bono counsel for litigants who cannot afford to hire attorneys. I urge you to reconsider your decision not to recommend adoption of proposed rule 6.1. According to the published materials explaining the decision, there appears to be no substantive opposition to the concept that providing pro bono services should be part of the professional duties of every lawyer in California and that the goal of providing 50 hours per year per attorney is a worthy one. Instead, the explanatory materials cite the opposition of one membership group (the California Young Lawyers Association) which felt that the proposed rule was duplicative of statements contained in statute and a Board	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response of Governor's Resolution, and that rules which are aspirational rather than mandatory should not be included in the Rules of Professional Conduct. Neither is a sufficient reason to reject Rule 6.1. First, the fact that proposed rule 6.1 reiterates an aspirational goal of 50 pro bono hours per year per attorney that is also contained in Business and Professions Code 6073 and a 1989 Resolution is a reason to include the rule, not to reject it. Just as statutes (like section 6073) can make important statements about the goals or values of our profession, so too can and should the Rules of Professional Conduct. Moreover, one need not look far to find Rules of Conduct which duplicate statutory measures. (See, for just one example, the rules implementing Business and Professions Code § 6068(e)'s exceptions to the duty of confidentiality). As a practical matter, including Rule 6.1 in the Rules of Professional Conduct will bring more attention to its concededly worthwhile goal. For example, I have never attended a training at which Resolutions were covered, but I regularly attend trainings which cover changes to the conduct rules. Including 6.1 will inevitably bring more attention to this important topic and elevate the importance of

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					the bar's commitment to pro bono services. Moreover, nearly every state has included some version of Rule 6.1 in its state rules of conduct. There is no reason for California to take a contrary position, which risks giving the impression that Rule 6.1 was unimportant to our bar leadership, or, worse yet, contrary to the ideals of the profession in this state. Finally, it is simply not the case that all rules of conduct serve a disciplinary function and that there is no place for aspirational or hortatory rules. The same argument could have been made for statutes such as section 6073, and yet the Legislature chose to include this measure expressing the commitment and values of the profession. The Bar should do the same.
33	Public Advocates, Inc. (Jamienne Studley)	D	Yes		Adoption of Rule 6.1 would be consistent with adoption in the great majority of states. The central professional responsibility of pro bono service and the value of giving as many people as possible the chance for legal representation in should be embedded formally in the core statement of values and rules, the California Rules of Professional Conduct. The legal profession needs every possible reinforcement of our profession's and state's commitment to filling the serious legal	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response services gap. This would be consistent with the Chief Justice's leadership on pro bono and legal services. While the statement would not create a specific requirement for any individual attorney, it would be completely appropriate to state the responsibility and aspiration in every appropriate setting.
34	Public Counsel (Elizabeth Bluestein)	D	Yes		Public Counsel supports the adoption of the Commission's proposed Rule 6.1, and urges the Board of Governors to reconsider the adoption of Rule 6.1. Public Counsel is the largest public interest law firm specializing in delivering pro bono legal services to low-income communities. Public Counsel is dedicated to advancing equal justice under law by delivering pro bono legal services to indigent and underrepresented children and adults, ensuring that communitybased organizations serving this population have legal support, mobilizing the volunteer resources of the private bar, and providing technical assistance to pro bono attorneys and projects throughout California. Public Counsel is also the public interest law office of the Los Angeles County and Beverly Hills Bar Associations and the Southern California affiliate of the Lawyers Committee for Civil	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Rights Under Law. It is very important for California to adopt an aspirational rule on pro bono to provide formal recognition that all attorneys should aspire to perform pro bono work. It is important to have a Rule that addresses pro bono, in addition to the existing Board resolution, because legal education and law practice routinely focus on the Rules of Professional Conduct. Pro bono is an important value within the legal profession, and should be included in the Rules. This is especially true because California is currently one of only six states that have not adopted some version of the ABA Model Rule on pro bono. Declining to do so sends the wrong message to the bar as well as to the general public. Pro bono participation by attorneys is needed now more than ever - the need for legal services for those with limited means continues to expand in these challenging economic times.
35	Public Interest Clearinghouse [Julia R. Wilson]	D	Yes		The Public Interest Clearinghouse (PIC) is a statewide nonprofit that increases access to legal help for underserved Californians by building infrastructure and partnerships in the legal community. PIC serves as the IOLTA-	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response funded support center on pro bono efforts throughout the state, and its Pro Bono Initiative incubates and supports statewide and local pro bono projects in California. PIC administers the statewide pro bono website - www.CAProBono.org - and supports the Southern California legal services community in running www.SoCalProBono.org. PIC's REAL (Rural Education & Access to the Law) Project works to expand the pro bono resources available in rural areas of the state, including through our Justice Bus(TM) service learning trips that involve law students, firms, and lawyers in urban areas in pro bono legal assistance clinics for rural residents. Tens of thousands of California attorneys volunteer each year to bring much-needed legal help to our most vulnerable residents. And yet, even with that level of commitment by our profession, there remains a terrible "justice gap" between the overwhelming need for legal assistance and the limited resources to meet that need. There will never be sufficient state, federal or private funding to provide a nonprofit legal services attorney for all the lowincome seniors, families and persons with disabilities who require legal help. Therefore, innovative partnerships between the private and nonprofit sectors are

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					the only viable way to build a bridge across the justice gap. Based on PIC's statewide expertise in working with both the nonprofit and for-profit segments of the legal profession, we strongly disagree with the recommendation to not adopt proposed Rule 6.1. A failure to adopt some version of an aspirational rule relating to pro bono would leave California on the outskirts of the national commitment in this area, exactly at the time when funding for legal services delivery is dropping dramatically. At least 44 other states have included a similar provision in their rules, and according to the report of the Rules Revision Commission, nearly every jurisdiction has adopted some version of Model Rule 6.1. In our opinion, it is essential to have a pro bono rule, in addition to a Board resolution and statutory language, because legal education and law practice routinely focus on the Rules of Professional Conduct, and pro bono is too important a value within the legal profession for our rules to be completely silent on the issue. We are also deeply concerned about the unintentional but possible message if the rules are ultimately approved by the Supreme Court include most of the ABA

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Model Rules, but leave out the rule on pro bono entirely. If necessary for adoption, PIC would support the idea of adding language to emphasize that the rule's aspirational nature. Based on the reasons above, the Public Interest Clearinghouse respectfully urges the recommendation that the Board of Governors adopt Proposed Rule 6.1.
36	Public Interest Law Project	D	Yes		At least 44 other states have included a similar provision in their rules. It is important to have a pro bono rule, in addition to a Board resolution and statutory language, because legal education and law practice routinely focus on the Rules of Professional Conduct, and pro bono is too important a value within the legal profession to leave out of the rules. Because the rules are ultimately approved by the Supreme Court, it may seem like a glaring omission for the Bar to recommend that we mostly adopt the ABA Model Rules, but leave out the rule on one of the topics the Chief Justice most strongly supports. There is a great need for legal services that is not now being filled, despite the existing pro bono resolution, the statute, and judicial support for pro bono.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
37	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee	D	Yes		We approve the new rule in its entirety.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.
38	State Bar's Standing Committee on the Delivery of Legal Services (SCDLS)	D	Yes		It is absolutely critical that CA adopt an aspirational rule on pro bono to provide formal recognition that all attorneys have a professional responsibility to perform pro bono work. As one of only 6 states not having a pro bono rule, declining to adopt one would send to wrong message to the bar as well as the general public. A pro bono rule will have more far-reaching and sustained attention than a Board resolution as Rules are studied and referred to by lawyers and law students. SCDLS voted unanimously to urge Board to reconsider adoption of rule and would also support insertion of the word "aspire to" in second sentence of introductory clause to emphasize the aspirational nature of the rule. Would also support adoption of ABA Model Rule 6.1 or combination of RRC proposal and ABA Model Rule.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Specific language is not as crucial as the adoption of a pro bono rule in some form.
39	Talia, M. Sue	D	No		The Rules Revision Commission got it right and unanimously recommended an aspirational rule. I travel all over the United States and Canada speaking to groups of lawyers on the subject of limited scope representation and know firsthand how behind some of our professional colleagues are on access issues. Please don't allow California to join them. I urge reconsideration of the failure to recommend this rule.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.
40	UC Hastings School of Law [Dean Shauna Marshall]	D	Yes		We write to request that the Board of Governors reconsider its recent decision not to recommend proposed Rule 6.1. This is an issue of utmost concern to pro bono supporters across the state and particularly to law schools who are uniquely situated to instill, foster and promote a commitment to pro bona in future lawyers. In order to ensure greater involvement in pro bona throughout the legal profession, it is imperative that the revised California Rules of Professional Conduct include a rule directly addressing the important role of pro bono. The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule. We understand that there were concerns that the rule was not clearly aspirational in nature, therefore, we recommend that the words "aspire to", from the ABA's Model Rule, be added to the first paragraph. We also understand that the failure of the Board Committee to recommend Rule 6.1 does not reflect a lack of support for pro bono among board committee members. However, we fear that failure to include an aspirational pro bono rule in the final vote of the Board of Governors undermines .the. efforts of the State Bar of California, County Bar Associations, the judiciary, law schools and others to engage all members of the legal profession in :pro bono. As legal educators, the inclusion of a formal pro bono rule communicates to students and the next generation of lawyers. Despite the current Board resolution and statutory language encouraging pro bono, the need for pro bono services continues to outpace the number of attorneys seeking to meet it. The addition of a formal rule would further state unequivocally that pro bono is

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					too important a value within the legal profession to leave it out of the rules. At least 44 other states have included a similar provision in their ethics rules; the absence of such a provision in California sends the wrong message to current and future Bar members. The actual language of the provision is less important than the fact that we need to have a pro bono rule adopted. It can be the ABA's Model Rule, it can be the rule as modified by the Rules Revision Commission, or it can be some combination. The critical point is that we believe a pro bono rule MUST be adopted.
41	UC-Irvine School of Law [Dean Erwin Chemerinsky]	D	Yes		I strongly recommend the approval of Proposed Rule 6.1. As the dean of a California law school, I think it is essential that the Rules of Professional Conduct clearly communicate the importance of lawyers doing pro bono work. The proposed Rule would not require pro bono work, but it would express the view that this is something all lawyers should aspire to do. Forty-four other states have adopted this Rule. Because of its aspirational nature, it has posed no problems.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					There is an urgent need for lawyers to do more pro bono work to help fulfill the great unmet needs for legal services. Proposed Rule 6.1 sends a message to law students and lawyers that this is every attorney's responsibility.
42	University of San Francisco School of Law [Dean Jeffrey S. Brand]	D	Yes		I request that the Board of Governors reconsider its recent decision not to recommend proposed Rule 6.1. This is an issue of utmost concern to pro bono supporters across the state. It is imperative that the revised California Rules of Professional Conduct include a rule addressing the important role of pro bono. Because we understand that there were concerns that the rule was not clearly aspirational in nature, we recommend that the words "aspire to", from the ABA's Model Rule, be added to the first paragraph. We understand that the failure of the Board Committee to recommend Rule 6.1 does not reflect a lack of support for pro bono among board committee members. However, we fear that failure to include a pro bono rule in the final vote of the Board of Governors will be perceived as a lack of support for pro bono by	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					the State Bar of California. It is important to have a pro bono rule, in addition to a Board resolution and statutory language, and pro bono is too important a value within the legal profession to leave it out of the rules. At least 44 other states have included a similar provision in their ethics rules. The actual provisions are less important than the fact that we need to have a pro bono rule adopted. It can be the ABA's Model Rule, it can be the rule as modified by the Rules Revision Commission, or it can be some combination. The critical point is that we believe a pro bono rule MUST be adopted, 43	University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law [Dean Elizabeth Rindskopf Parker]	D	Yes		I am writing to request that the Board of Governors reconsider its recent decision not to recommend proposed Rule 6.1. This is an issue of utmost concern to pro bono supporters across the state. We believe that it is imperative that the revised California Rules of Professional Conduct include a rule addressing the important role of pro bono, and we urge the Board of Governors to do everything in its power to ensure passage of this rule.	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Because we understand that there were concerns that the rule was not clearly aspirational in nature, we recommend that the words "aspire to", from the ABA's Model Rule, be added to the first paragraph. We understand that the failure of the Board Committee to recommend Rule 6.1 does not reflect a lack of support for pro bono among board committee members. However, we fear that failure to include a pro bono rule in the final vote of the Board of Governors will be perceived as a lack of support for pro bono by the State bar of California. It is important to have a pro bono rule, in addition to a Board resolution and statutory language, and pro bono is too important a value within the legal profession to leave it out of the rules. At least 44 other states have included a similar provision in their ethics rules. The actual provisions are less important than the fact that we need to have a pro bono rule adopted. It can be the ABA's Model Rule, it can be the rule as modified by the Rules Revision Commission, or it can be some

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1
Disagree = 43
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response combination. The critical point is that we believe a pro bono rule MUST be adopted.
44	Zeffer, Ophelia	D	No		I urge the Board of Governors to reconsider the recent action of the Committee of Regulation and Admissions not to recommend the Supreme Court adoption of the Rules Revision Commission's Proposed Rule 6.1 pertaining to pro bono service. The Commission's proposal was the product of a long and thoughtful process which carefully reviewed the various issues raised by the proposed rule. For California to be one of only a handful of states not to include Rule 6.1 in its Rules of Professional Responsibility would diminish the status of California as a leader in the efforts to provide access for those unable to afford it. While Rule 6.1 is not enforceable by discipline, it will be a compelling tool in the ability of pro bono programs to increase the number of volunteers willing to provide such services, and to expand the numbers and types of cases for which help is provided. Business and Professions Code section 6068(h) requires lawyers: "Never to reject, for any consideration personal to himself or herself, the cause of the defenseless or the	The Commission agrees in substance that there should be a Rule 6.1 and has requested that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision to reject the Rule.

Rule 6.1 Voluntary Pro Bono Service [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 44 Agree = 1 Disagree = 43 Modify = 0 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					oppressed." Rule 6.1 gives content to that laudable requirement by encouraging the provision of pro bono services to people who otherwise would have no legal voice. The President of the State Bar and the Chief Justice of California are both very strong advocates of lawyers providing pro bono services. The Board of Governors should not send the Supreme Court a revision of the Rules of Professional Conduct that does not include this extremely important provision.

Rule 6.1: Voluntary Pro Bono Publico Service

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Alabama: See the entry under Rule 6.5.

Arizona: Rule 6.1 contains the following key provisions:

(a) A lawyer should voluntarily render public interest legal service. A lawyer may discharge this responsibility by rendering a minimum of fifty hours of service per calendar year. . . .

(c) A law firm or other group of lawyers may satisfy their responsibility under this Rule, if they desire, collectively. For example, the designation of one or more lawyers to work on pro bono publico matters may be attributed to other lawyers within the firm or group who support the representation. . . .

(d) The efforts of individual lawyers are not enough to meet the needs of the poor. The profession and government have instituted programs to provide direct delivery of legal services to the poor. The direct support of such programs is an alternative expression of support to provide law in the public interest, and a lawyer is encouraged to provide financial support for organizations that provide legal services to persons of limited means or to the Arizona Bar Foundation for the direct delivery of legal services to the poor.

California: California has no rule of professional conduct comparable to ABA Model Rule 6.1, but California Business and Professions Code §6068(h) makes it the duty of a lawyer “[n]ever to reject, for any consideration personal to himself or herself, the cause of the defenseless or the oppressed.” In addition, the California State Bar’s Board of Governors has adopted a Pro Bono Resolution that echoes the substance of ABA Model Rule 6.1. It provides as follows:

(3) Urges all law schools to promote and encourage the participation of law students in pro bono activities, including requiring any law firm wishing to recruit on campus to provide a written statement of its policy, if any, concerning the involvement of its attorneys in public service and pro bono activities. . . .

Colorado: Colorado adds the following paragraph at the end of the rule:

Where constitutional, statutory or regulatory restrictions prohibit government and public sector lawyers or judges from performing the pro bono services outlined in paragraphs (a)(1) and (2), those individuals should fulfill their pro bono responsibility by performing services or participating in activities outlined in paragraph (b).

In 1999, the Colorado Supreme Court rejected a recommendation by the state's Judicial Advisory Council to institute mandatory pro bono reporting. The court said that mandatory reporting was a step toward mandatory pro bono, and "[s]ince we are unwilling to arrive at that destination, we are also unwilling to take the first step." However, the Colorado Supreme Court has adopted a detailed "recommended Model Pro Bono Policy" for law firms, which is reprinted in the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct immediately after Rule 6.1. Among other things, the Model Pro Bono Policy urges firms to include "a statement that the firm will value at least 50 hours of such pro bono service per year by each Colorado licensed attorney in the firm, for all purposes of attorney evaluation, advancement, and compensation in the firm as the firm values compensated client representation." In addition, the Colorado Supreme Court will annually recognize Colorado law firms that "voluntarily advise the Court . . . that their attorneys, on average, during the previous calendar year, performed 50 hours of pro bono legal service, primarily for persons of limited means or organizations serving persons of limited means. . . ."

Connecticut, Georgia, Indiana, Kansas, Michigan, Missouri, Pennsylvania, and South Carolina have retained the 1983 version of ABA Model Rule 6.1, which provides as follows:

A lawyer should render public interest service. A lawyer may discharge this responsibility by providing professional services at no fee or a reduced fee to persons of limited means or to public service or charitable groups or organizations, by service in activities for improving the law, the legal system or the legal profession, and by financial support for organizations that provide legal services to persons of limited means.

District of Columbia: D.C. Rule 6.1 provides as follows:

A lawyer should participate in serving those persons, or groups of persons, who are unable to pay all or a portion of reasonable attorneys' fees or who are otherwise unable to obtain counsel. A lawyer may discharge this responsibility by providing professional services at no fee, or at a substantially reduced fee, to persons and groups who are unable to afford or obtain counsel, or by active participation in the work of organizations that provide legal services to them. When personal representation is not feasible, a lawyer may discharge this responsibility by providing financial support for organizations that provide legal representation to those unable to obtain counsel.

Florida: In 1993, in a divided opinion, the Florida Supreme Court adopted an elaborate pro bono rule requiring lawyers to report their pro bono hours. See 630 So. 2d 501 (Fla. 1993). The Florida Bar subsequently sought to eliminate mandatory reporting, but the Florida Supreme Court refused to do so at 696 So. 2d 734 (1997). In Schwarz v. Kogan, 132 F.3d 1387 (11th Cir. 1998), the court upheld

Florida's mandatory reporting provisions against a federal constitutional challenge. The full rule provides as follows:

4-6.1 Pro Bono Public Service

(a) Professional Responsibility. Each member of The Florida Bar in good standing, as part of that member's professional responsibility, should (1) render pro bono legal services to the poor or (2) participate, to the extent possible, in other pro bono service activities that directly relate to the legal needs of the poor. This professional responsibility does not apply to members of the judiciary or their staffs or to government lawyers who are prohibited from performing legal services by constitutional, statutory, rule, or regulatory prohibitions. Neither does this professional responsibility apply to those members of The Bar who are retired, inactive, or suspended, or who have been placed on the inactive list for incapacity not related to discipline.

(b) Discharge of the Professional Responsibility to Provide Pro Bono Legal Service to the Poor. The professional responsibility to provide pro bono legal services as established under this rule is aspirational rather than mandatory in nature. The failure to fulfill one's professional responsibility under this rule will not subject a lawyer to discipline. The professional responsibility to provide pro bono legal service to the poor may be discharged by:

(1) annually providing at least 20 hours of pro bono legal service to the poor; or

(2) making an annual contribution of at least $350 to a legal aid organization.

(c) Collective Discharge of the Professional Responsibility to Provide Pro Bono Legal Service to the Poor. Each member of the bar should strive to individually satisfy the member's professional responsibility to provide pro bono legal service to the poor. Collective satisfaction of this professional responsibility is permitted by law firms only under a collective satisfaction plan that has been filed previously with the circuit pro bono committee and only when providing pro bono legal service to the poor:

(1) in a major case or matter involving a substantial expenditure of time and resources; or

(2) through a full-time community or public service staff; or

(3) in any other manner that has been approved by the circuit pro bono committee in the circuit in which the firm practices.

(d) Reporting Requirement. Each member of the bar shall annually report whether the member has satisfied the member's professional responsibility to provide pro bono legal services to the poor. Each member shall report this information through a simplified reporting form that is made a part of the member's annual dues statement. . . . The failure to report this information shall constitute a disciplinary offense under these rules. . . .

Florida also adds a lengthy Rule 6.5 (Voluntary Pro Bono Plan). Rule 6.5(c)(2) instructs every judicial circuit to “(a) prepare in written form a circuit pro bono plan after evaluating the needs of the circuit and making a determination of present available pro bono services; (b) implement the plan and monitor its results; [and] (c) submit an annual report to The Florida Bar standing committee. . . .” Rule 6.5(d) provides as follows:

The following are suggested pro bono service opportunities that should be included in each circuit plan:

- (1) representation of clients through case referral;
- (2) interviewing of prospective clients;
- (3) participation in pro se clinics and other clinics in which lawyers provide advice and counsel;
- (4) acting as co-counsel on cases or matters with legal assistance providers and other pro bono lawyers;
- (5) providing consultation services to legal assistance providers for case reviews and evaluations;
- (6) participation in policy advocacy;
- (7) providing training to the staff of legal assistance providers and other volunteer pro bono attorneys;
- (8) making presentations to groups of poor persons regarding their rights and obligations under the law;
- (9) providing legal research;

(10) providing guardian ad litem services;

(11) providing assistance in the formation and operation of legal entities for groups of poor persons; and

(12) serving as a mediator or arbitrator at no fee to the client-eligible party.

Georgia: Rule 6.1 tracks the pre-2002 version of ABA Model Rule 6.1, but Georgia adds the following: “No reporting rules or requirements may be imposed without specific permission of the Supreme Court granted through amendments to these Rules. There is no disciplinary penalty for a violation of this Rule.”

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2010, Illinois omits Rule 6.1. Comment 6B of the Preamble explains the omission as follows:

The absence from the Illinois Rules of a counterpart to ABA Model Rule 6.1 regarding pro bono and public service should not be interpreted as limiting the responsibility of lawyers to render uncompensated service in the public interest. Rather, the rationale is that this responsibility is not appropriate for disciplinary rules because it is not possible to articulate an appropriate disciplinary standard regarding pro bono and public service.

However, Illinois encourages pro bono obligations through court rules. The Preamble’s Comment 6A refers to Illinois Supreme Court Rule 756(f), which provides as follows:

(f) Disclosure of Voluntary Pro Bono Service. As part of registering under this rule, each lawyer shall report the approximate amount of his or her pro bono legal service and the amount of qualified monetary contributions made during the preceding 12 months. . . .

Rule 756(f) then defines the term “Pro bono legal service,” stating explicitly that legal services for which payment “was expected, but is uncollectible, do not qualify as pro bono legal service.” The rule also sets out the precise contents of the form for reporting such service on the annual registration statement. Information provided pursuant to Rule 756(f) is considered “confidential,” but the information may be reported “in the aggregate.” Rule 756(g) instructs the Bar’s Administrator to “remove from the master roll” any attorney who has failed to provide the information on voluntary pro bono service required by Rule 756(f). A person whose name is not on the master roll and who practices law in Illinois “is engaged in the unauthorized practice of law and may also be held in contempt of the court.”

Finally, Rule 756(j) permits retired and inactive attorneys, as well as in-house attorneys who have a more limited registration status, to provide pro bono legal services under certain circumstances that are described in the Rule.

Kentucky: Rule 6.1, entitled “Donated Legal Services,” encourages lawyers to render voluntary public interest legal service and permits lawyers to report donated legal services on the Bar’s annual dues statement. “Lawyers rendering a minimum of fifty (50) hours of donated legal service shall receive a recognition award for such service from the Kentucky Bar Association.”

Maryland adds that a lawyer “in part-time practice” should aspire to render at least “a pro rata number of hours.” Maryland also makes an exception for lawyers who are “prohibited by law” from rendering certain types of pro bono legal services. Maryland allows a substantial majority of pro bono services to be rendered to “individuals, groups, or organizations seeking to secure or protect civil rights, civil liberties, or public rights. . . .” Maryland Rule 6.1 concludes: “This Rule is aspirational, not mandatory. Noncompliance with this Rule shall not be grounds for disciplinary action or other sanctions.”

Massachusetts: Rule 6.1 states that a lawyer “should provide annually at least 25 hours of pro bono publico legal services for the benefit of persons of limited means.” Alternatively, the lawyer should “contribute from $250 to 1 percent of the lawyer’s annual taxable, professional income to one or more organizations that provide or support legal services to persons of limited means.”

Michigan essentially retains the 1983 version of ABA Model Rule 6.1.

New Jersey: Rule 6.1 tracks the original (1983) version of ABA Model Rule 6.1 except that the first sentence reads: “Every lawyer has a professional responsibility to render public interest legal service.”

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 6.1 provides as follows:

Lawyers are strongly encouraged to provide pro bono legal services to benefit poor persons.

(a) Every lawyer should aspire to: (1) provide at least 20 hours of pro bono legal services each year to poor persons; and (2) contribute financially to organizations that provide legal services to poor persons.

(b) Pro bono legal services that meet this goal are: (1) professional services rendered in civil matters, and in those criminal matters for which the government is not obliged to provide funds for legal representation, to persons who are financially unable to compensate counsel; (2) activities related to improving the administration of justice by simplifying the legal process for, or increasing the availability and quality of legal services to, poor persons; and (3) professional services to charitable, religious, civic and educational organizations in matters designed predominantly to address the needs of poor persons.

(c) Appropriate organizations for financial contributions are: (1) organizations primarily engaged in the provision of legal services to the poor; and (2) organizations substantially engaged in the provision of legal services to the poor, provided that the donated funds are to be used for the provision of such legal services.

(d) This Rule is not intended to be enforced through the disciplinary process, and the failure to fulfill the aspirational goals contained herein should be without legal consequence.

North Carolina omits Rule 6.1, but Paragraph 6 of North Carolina's Preamble states that "all lawyers should devote professional time and resources and use civic influence to ensure equal access to our system of justice for all those who because of economic or social barriers cannot afford or secure adequate legal counsel," and Paragraph 7 of the Preamble contains language almost identical to the 1983 version of ABA Model Rule 6.1.

Ohio omits ABA Model Rule 6.1. The Supreme Court of Ohio explains that it "deferred consideration of Model Rule 6.1 in light of recommendations contained in the final report of the Supreme Court Task Force on Pro Se & Indigent Representation and recommendations from the Ohio Legal Assistance Foundation." (The Task Force on Pro Se & Indigent Representation, which was appointed by the Supreme Court of Ohio in 2004, recommended in its April 2006 final report that Ohio attorneys be required to report their pro bono activities. The report is available at www.sconet.state.oh.us/publications/prose/report_april06.pdf.)

Texas omits Rule 6.1, but Paragraph 6 of the Texas Preamble addresses pro bono services by stating, among other things: "The provision of free legal services to those unable to pay reasonable fees is a moral obligation of each lawyer as well as the profession generally."

Virginia: Rule 6.1 says that a lawyer "should render at least 2 percent per year of the lawyer's professional time to pro bono publico legal services." The Rule also defines pro bono services and allows a law firm or group of lawyers to satisfy their responsibility under the Rule collectively. Further, "direct financial support of programs that provide direct delivery of legal services to meet the need described" in the Rule "is an alternative method for fulfilling a lawyer's responsibility."

Proposed Rule 6.2 [n/a]

“Accepting Appointments”

(XDraft #4, 3/31/10)

Summary: Proposed Rule 6.2 is based on Model Rule 6.2, which sets forth a lawyer’s duties when a tribunal seeks to appoint the lawyer to represent a person. The Rule closely tracks the Model Rule. Some changes have been made to conform language to California rule style and statutes and a comment added to address concerns of California public defenders. See Introduction and Explanation of Changes.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rule

Statute

Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(h); Cal. Gov. Code § 27706; Penal Code § 987.2(e).

Case law

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☒ Other Primary Factor(s)

State Bar of California Board of Governors Pro Bono Resolution (2002).

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 8
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 4
Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Commission Minority Position, Known Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

Minority Position Included. (See Introduction): ☒ Yes ☐ No

☐ No Known Stakeholders

☒ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

California Public Defenders Association; L.A. Public Defender; Riverside Public Defender

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 6.2* Accepting Appointments

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 6.2 is based on Model Rule 6.2, which sets forth a lawyer's duties when a tribunal seeks to appoint the lawyer to represent a person. The Rule closely tracks the Model Rule, except for some changes to conform language to California rule style and statutes, and also to conform comment language to the language of proposed Rule 6.1, which concerns the provision of pro bono services. A cross-reference to Business & Professions Code § 6068(h), which provides it is the duty of a lawyer, "Never to reject, for any consideration personal to himself or herself, the cause of the defenseless or the oppressed," has also been added. Model Rule 6.2, cmt. [2], has been stricken because it neither explains nor clarifies the application of the Rule. Finally, a new Comment [3] has been added to address concerns raised by public defenders. See Explanation of Changes for Comment [3].

Minority. A minority of the Commission declines to recommend the Rule because it would allow a lawyer to reject an appointment to represent a client the lawyer considers "repugnant" or who is unpopular. The minority notes that lawyers are traditionally obliged to represent people they consider "repugnant." A client accused of a crime, a philandering spouse, and a protester arrested in a mass demonstration are all entitled to representation, even if the lawyer considers them "repugnant" or unpopular because of their acts or for other reasons. The unpopularity of a client should not permit a lawyer to refuse appointment by a tribunal. An appointed lawyer does not espouse the client or the client's cause.

Variations in other jurisdictions. Nearly every jurisdiction has adopted some version of Model Rule 6.2, with little variation. New York and Oregon have declined to adopt the Rule, and Georgia has reduced the rule to a single sentence.

* Proposed Rule 6.2, XDraft #4 (3/31/10).

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.2 Accepting Appointments	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.2 Accepting Appointments	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
A lawyer shall not seek to avoid appointment by a tribunal to represent a person except for good cause, such as:	A lawyer shall not seek to avoid appointment by a tribunal to represent a person except for good cause, such as:	The introductory clause is identical to its Model Rule counterpart.
(a) representing the client is likely to result in violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law;	(a) representing the client is likely to result in violation of ~~the~~these Rules ~~of Professional Conduct,~~ the State Bar Act, or other law;	Paragraph (a) is identical to Model Rule 6.2(a), except that “these Rules” has been substituted for “the Rules of Professional Conduct” to conform with the Rules style, and “the State Bar Act” has been added consistent with other Rules.
(b) representing the client is likely to result in an unreasonable financial burden on the lawyer; or	(b) representing the client is likely to result in an unreasonable financial burden on the lawyer; or	Paragraph (b) is identical to Model Rule 6.2(b).
(c) the client or the cause is so repugnant to the lawyer as to be likely to impair the client-lawyer relationship or the lawyer's ability to represent the client.	(c) the client or the cause is so repugnant to the lawyer as to be likely to impair the ~~client-~~lawyer -client relationship or the lawyer's ability to represent the client.	Paragraph (c) is identical to Model Rule 6.2(c), except that “lawyer-client” has been substituted for “client-lawyer,” consistent with California rules and statute style.

* Proposed Rule 6.2, XDraft 4 (3/31/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.2 Accepting Appointments Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.2 Accepting Appointments Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] A lawyer ordinarily is not obliged to accept a client whose character or cause the lawyer regards as repugnant. The lawyer's freedom to select clients is, however, qualified. All lawyers have a responsibility to assist in providing pro bono publico service. See Rule 6.1. An individual lawyer fulfills this responsibility by accepting a fair share of unpopular matters or indigent or unpopular clients. A lawyer may also be subject to appointment by a court to serve unpopular clients or persons unable to afford legal services.	[1] A lawyer ordinarily is not obliged to accept a client whose character or cause the lawyer regards as repugnant. The lawyer's freedom to select clients is, however, qualified. See Business & Professions Code section 6068(h). All lawyers have Every lawyer, as a matter of professional responsibility ~~to~~, should assist in providing pro bono publico service. See Rule 6.1. An individual lawyer fulfills this responsibility by accepting a fair share of unpopular matters or indigent or unpopular clients without expectation of compensation other than reimbursement of expenses. A lawyer may also be subject to appointment by a ~~court~~ tribunal to serve unpopular clients or persons unable to afford legal services.	Comment [1] is based on Model Rule 6.2, cmt. [1], except: (i) a reference to Business & Professions Code § 6068(h), which provides it is the duty of a lawyer, "Never to reject, for any consideration personal to himself or herself, the cause of the defenseless or the oppressed," has been added; (ii) the second sentence has been modified to incorporate the actual language in proposed Rule 6.1; (iii) the clause "without expectation of compensation other than reimbursement of expenses," also from proposed Rule 6.1, has been added to clarify that a lawyer fulfills his or her responsibility under Rule 6.1 only if the representation is accepted without expectation of compensation; and (iv) "tribunal" has been substituted for "court" to conform to the black letter of the introductory clause.
Appointed Counsel [2] For good cause a lawyer may seek to decline an appointment to represent a person who cannot afford to retain counsel or whose cause is unpopular. Good cause exists if the lawyer could not handle the matter competently, see Rule 1.1, or if undertaking the representation would result in an improper conflict of interest, for example, when the client or the cause is so repugnant to the lawyer as to be likely to impair the client-lawyer relationship or the lawyer's ability to represent the client. A lawyer may	Appointed Counsel ~~[2] For good cause a lawyer may seek to decline an appointment to represent a person who cannot afford to retain counsel or whose cause is unpopular. Good cause exists if the lawyer could not handle the matter competently, see Rule 1.1, or if undertaking the representation would result in an improper conflict of interest, for example, when the client or the cause is so repugnant to the lawyer as to be likely to impair the client-lawyer relationship or the lawyer's ability to represent the client. A lawyer may~~	Model Rule 6.2, cmt. [2], has been deleted because it does not explain or clarify the application of the Rule.

* Proposed Rule 6.2, Draft 3 (3/31/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.2 Accepting Appointments Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.2 Accepting Appointments Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
also seek to decline an appointment if acceptance would be unreasonably burdensome, for example, when it would impose a financial sacrifice so great as to be unjust.	~~also seek to decline an appointment if acceptance would be unreasonably burdensome, for example, when it would impose a financial sacrifice so great as to be unjust.~~
[3] An appointed lawyer has the same obligations to the client as retained counsel, including the obligations of loyalty and confidentiality, and is subject to the same limitations on the client-lawyer relationship, such as the obligation to refrain from assisting the client in violation of the Rules.	~~[3]~~ [2] An appointed lawyer has the same obligations to the client as retained counsel, including the obligations of loyalty ~~and~~, confidentiality, and competence, and is subject to the same limitations on the ~~client-lawyer~~ client relationship, such as the obligation to refrain from assisting the client in violation of ~~the~~ these Rules or the State Bar Act. See Rule 1.2(d).	Comment [2] is based on Model Rule 6.2, cmt. [3], except that “competence” has been added to emphasize that an appointed lawyer owes the same duty of competence as is owed when retained. In addition, a reference to Rule 1.2(d), which prohibits a lawyer from assisting a client to engage in criminal or fraudulent conduct, has been added to provide further guidance on the limits of a representation.
	[3] Paragraph (c) does not apply to public defenders or federal public defenders or a subordinate lawyer in their offices where appointment is governed by statute. See Cal. Government Code section 27706; Penal Code section 987.2(e); 18 U.S.C. section 3006A(g); Fed. R. Crim. Proc. 44. See also Rule 5.1, Comment [6].	Comment [3] has no counterpart in Model Rule 6.2. It has been added to address concerns raised by the California Public Defender Association that paragraph (c) might interfere with the ability of institutional public defenders to effectively manage their case loads and supervise the subordinate lawyers in their offices.

Rule 6.2: Accepting Appointments

(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

A lawyer shall not seek to avoid appointment by a tribunal to represent a person except for good cause, such as:

- (a) representing the client is likely to result in violation of these Rules, the State Bar Act, or other law;
- (b) representing the client is likely to result in an unreasonable financial burden on the lawyer; or
- (c) the client or the cause is so repugnant to the lawyer as to be likely to impair the lawyer-client relationship or the lawyer's ability to represent the client.

Appointed Counsel

- [2] An appointed lawyer has the same obligations to the client as retained counsel, including the obligations of loyalty, confidentiality, and competence, and is subject to the same limitations on the lawyer-client relationship, such as the obligation to refrain from assisting the client in violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act. See Rule 1.2(d).
- [3] Paragraph (c) does not apply to public defenders or federal public defenders or a subordinate lawyer in their offices where appointment is governed by statute. See Cal. Government Code section 27706; Penal Code section 987.2(e); 18 U.S.C. section 3006A(g); Fed. R. Crim. Proc. 44. See also Rule 5.1, Comment [6].

COMMENT

- [1] A lawyer ordinarily is not obliged to accept a client whose character or cause the lawyer regards as repugnant. The lawyer's freedom to select clients is, however, qualified. See Business & Professions Code section 6068(h). Every lawyer, as a matter of professional responsibility, should assist in providing pro bono publico service. See Rule 6.1. An individual lawyer fulfills this responsibility by accepting a fair share of unpopular matters or indigent or unpopular clients without expectation of compensation other than reimbursement of expenses. A lawyer may also be subject to appointment by a tribunal to serve unpopular clients or persons unable to afford legal services.

Rule 6.2 Accepting Appointments [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 4 Agree = 2 Disagree = 0 Modify = 2 NI = 0
No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	M	Yes	Comments [1] & [2] Comment [1]	1. OCTC appreciates the intent of this rule, but is concerned that it is not enforceable. By allowing attorneys to avoid appointments by claiming that the representation or cause is repugnant to them it would appear to be impossible to enforce this rule. 2. OCTC finds Comments 1 and 2 more appropriately belongs in a treatise, law review article, or ethics opinion. Further, Comment 1 cites to proposed rule 6.1, which was deleted by the Board of Governors and is, thus, not currently part of the proposed rules.	1. The Commission disagrees. The repugnant standard is not a subjective one, but rather is objective and thus enforceable in that the claimed repugnancy must "be likely to impair the lawyer-client relationship or the lawyer's ability to represent the client." 2. As the Commission has noted with respect to other rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations. That is true of these comments as well. As to the commenter's observation concerning the reference to Rule 6.1, see response to OCBA, below.
3	Orange County Bar Association (OCBA)	M	Yes		OCBA notes that Comment [1] to Proposed Rule 6.2 contains reference to Rule 6.1, but we understand that Rule 6.1 has not been	The Commission appreciates the commenter's careful review of the Rule. Because representatives of numerous organizations and law firms that

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 6.2 Accepting Appointments [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 4 Agree = 2 Disagree = 0 Modify = 2 NI = 0
No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					adopted. We simply express the concern that the Commission should revisit this citation in Comment [1], to conform, when a final decision has been made regarding the adoption of Proposed Rule 6.1.	provide pro bono representation and promote access to justice have requested reconsideration of the Boar of Governor's decision not to adopt Rule 6.1, the Commission has not made the change. If the Board's rejection of the Rule stands, however, the cross-reference to Rule 6.1 in Comment [1] will be deleted.
4	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.

Rule 6.2: Accepting Appointments

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California has no comparable provision in its Rules of Professional Conduct.

Georgia shortens ABA Model Rule 6.2 to a single sentence: “For good cause a lawyer may seek to avoid appointment by a tribunal to represent a person.”

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, New York omits Rule 6.2.

North Carolina omits Rule 6.2.

Ohio substitutes the word “court” for “tribunal” in the first line of the rule to reflect the Ohio Supreme Court’s view that “the inherent authority to make appointments is limited to courts and does not extend to other bodies” included within the definition of “tribunal.” Ohio also omits ABA Model Rule 6.2(c) because “the substance . . . is addressed in Rule 1.1, which mandates that a lawyer shall provide competent representation to a client.”

Proposed Rule 6.3 [N/A]

“Membership in Legal Services Organization”

(XDraft #3, 6/8/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 6.3 is essentially unchanged from Model Rule 6.3. The Commission has added a reference to a lawyer’s duty of confidentiality in order to emphasize that a lawyer’s membership in a legal services organization is subject to both the lawyer’s duty to avoid conflicts of interest and the duty to protect confidential client information.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule

Comment

- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☐ Existing California Law

Rules

Statute

Case law

- ☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

- ☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 9

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 1

Abstain 2

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☒ Yes ☐ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☐ No Known Stakeholders

☒ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

Commission on Access to Justice

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 6.3* Membership in Legal Services Organization

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 6.3 is essentially unchanged from Model Rule 6.3. However, the Commission recommends adding to the Rule a reference to California's statutory duty of confidentiality in order to emphasize that a lawyer's membership in a legal services organization is subject both to the lawyer's duty to avoid conflicts of interest and the duty to protect confidential client information. The Commission does not recommend any further changes following public comment. See Public Comment Chart, below.

Minority. A minority of the Commission believes subparagraphs (a) and (b) of this Rule will create disciplinary risks for lawyers and thereby discourage them from participating in legal services organizations. Virtually every aspect of the normal duties of a director or officer of the organization may violate both subparagraphs. This Rule does not give guidance about what will or will not lead to discipline. See the minority statement, which is provided in these materials after the Comment Comparison Chart. A second minority believes that the subject of this Rule is not an appropriate topic for Rules of Professional Conduct. This minority notes that the main purpose of the Rule is motivational and, although the minority concurs in the noble motive which the Rule expresses, the minority believes that the Rule, like all aspirational principles, has no place in a disciplinary rule. Moreover, the minority considers the limitations on lawyers' social action expressed in proposed paragraphs (a) and (b) to be mistaken, and probably unconstitutional limitations on a lawyer's freedom of speech and political action. The minority takes the position that lawyers' duties to clients are comprehensive; but they should not and cannot limit the lawyer's freedom to advocate and support social actions and objectives that the lawyer wishes to support outside the scope of the engagement and on the lawyer's own time.

* Proposed Rule 6.3, XDraft 3 (6/8/09, MTY edit).

Rule 6.3: Membership in Legal Services Organization

Rules Revision Commission – Minority Dissent

The beginning of this rule is laudable. Lawyers should be encouraged to participate in legal services organizations. But subparagraphs (a) and (b) will create disciplinary risks for lawyers and thereby discourage them from doing so. Rule 6.3 will be a disciplinary rule, binding on all members of the State Bar. A breach may expose a lawyer to discipline. Bus. & Prof. Code § 6077. However, this rule does not tell lawyers what will be permitted or prohibited. For example, if the lawyer has a client whose interests are adverse to the interests of a client of the legal services organization, will the lawyer voting on the budget of the legal services organization violate paragraph (a) or not? If the lawyer participates in a decision whether to hire or fire an employee of the organization, will that violate paragraph (a) or not? Conversely, paragraph Rule 6.3 (b) will also expose lawyers to discipline for good faith participation in decisions of the legal services organization. Participating in discussions about or votes on a budget for, or to hire or fire an employee, “could have a material adverse effect on the representation of a client of the organization.” Virtually every aspect of the normal duties of a director or officer of the organization may violate both paragraphs (a) and (b). Under what circumstances will the lawyer have to obtain the informed written consent of the lawyer’s clients before participating in a decision affecting a legal services organization? Neither Rule 6.3 nor Rule 1.7 gives any guidance about what will or will not lead to discipline. A Rule of Professional Conduct ought to give clear indication of what conduct is or is not permissible under it. Rule 6.3 does not. If it is adopted, a lawyer who participates in a legal services organization that has a client adverse to the lawyer’s firm’s own client will do so at considerable risk. This will have a chilling effect on lawyers’ decisions whether to participate in a legal services organization. Neither the State Bar nor a Rule of Professional discipline should discourage lawyers from doing so. Therefore, this rule should not be adopted as proposed.

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.3 Membership in Legal Services Organization	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 6.3 Membership in Legal Services Organization	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
A lawyer may serve as a director, officer or member of a legal services organization, apart from the law firm in which the lawyer practices, notwithstanding that the organization serves persons having interests adverse to a client of the lawyer. The lawyer shall not knowingly participate in a decision or action of the organization:	A lawyer may serve as a director, officer or member of a legal services organization, apart from the law firm in which the lawyer practices, notwithstanding that the organization serves persons having interests adverse to a client of the lawyer. The lawyer shall not knowingly participate in a decision or action of the organization:	The introductory clause to proposed Rule 6.3 is identical to that of the Model Rule.
(a) if participating in the decision or action would be incompatible with the lawyer's obligations to a client under Rule 1.7; or	(a) if participating in the decision or action would be incompatible with the lawyer's obligations to a client under Rule 1.7 or Business and Professions Code § 6068(e)(1); or	The reference to B & P Code § 6068(e)(1) has been added to emphasize the importance of maintaining client confidences and secrets.
(b) where the decision or action could have a material adverse effect on the representation of a client of the organization whose interests are adverse to a client of the lawyer.	(b) where the decision or action could have a material adverse effect on the representation of a client of the organization whose interests are adverse to a client of the lawyer.	Paragraph (b) is identical to Model Rule 6.3(b).

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.3 Membership in Legal Services Organization Comment	Commissions Proposed Rule Rule 6.3 Membership in Legal Services Organization Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] Lawyers should be encouraged to support and participate in legal service organizations. A lawyer who is an officer or a member of such an organization does not thereby have a client-lawyer relationship with persons served by the organization. However, there is potential conflict between the interests of such persons and the interests of the lawyer's clients. If the possibility of such conflict disqualified a lawyer from serving on the board of a legal services organization, the profession's involvement in such organizations would be severely curtailed.	[1] Lawyers should be encouraged to support and participate in legal service organizations. A lawyer who is an officer or a member of such an organization does not thereby have a client-lawyer relationship with persons served by the organization. However, there is potential conflict between the interests of such persons and the interests of the lawyer's clients. If the possibility of such conflict disqualified a lawyer from serving on the board of a legal services organization, the profession's involvement in such organizations would be severely curtailed.	Comment [1] is identical to Model Rule 6.3, cmt. [1].
[2] It may be necessary in appropriate cases to reassure a client of the organization that the representation will not be affected by conflicting loyalties of a member of the board. Established, written policies in this respect can enhance the credibility of such assurances.	[2] It may be necessary in appropriate cases to reassure a client of the organization that the representation will not be affected by conflicting loyalties of a member of the board. Established, written policies in this respect can enhance the credibility of such assurances, including assurances that confidential client information will be protected.	Comment [2] is based on Model Rule 6.3, cmt. [2]. The added clause at the end of this Comment is intended to emphasize the importance of maintaining client confidences and secrets.

Rule 6.3: Membership in Legal Services Organization (Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

A lawyer may serve as a director, officer or member of a legal services organization, apart from the law firm in which the lawyer practices, notwithstanding that the organization serves persons having interests adverse to a client of the lawyer. The lawyer shall not knowingly participate in a decision or action of the organization:

- (a) if participating in the decision or action would be incompatible with the lawyer's obligations to a client under Rule 1.7 or Business and Professions Code section 6068(e)(1); or
- (b) where the decision or action could have a material adverse effect on the representation of a client of the organization whose interests are adverse to a client of the lawyer.

[2] It may be necessary in appropriate cases to reassure a client of the organization that the representation will not be affected by conflicting loyalties of a member of the board. Established, written policies in this respect can enhance the credibility of such assurances, including assurances that confidential client information will be protected.

COMMENT

[1] Lawyers should be encouraged to support and participate in legal service organizations. A lawyer who is an officer or a member of such an organization does not thereby have a client-lawyer relationship with persons served by the organization. However, there is potential conflict between the interests of such persons and the interests of the lawyer's clients. If the possibility of such conflict disqualified a lawyer from serving on the board of a legal services organization, the profession's involvement in such organizations would be severely curtailed.

Rule 6.3 Membership in Legal Services Organization.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		COPRAC supports the adoption of Proposed Rule 6.3 and the Comments to the Rule.	No response required.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel ("OCTC")	A	Yes		OCTC supports this rule, but the Comments are more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	Concerning the comment on the Rule itself, no response is required. As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.
3	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee ("SDCBA")	M	Yes		The proposed rule does not define "legal service organization(s)". Could not find a definition of that exact term anywhere in the proposed rules, the State Bar rules, the California Codes, the Federal Statutes, the Code of Federal Regulations, the ABA Rules, or the Model Rules. Also, the term is confusingly similar to other terms of art such as "legal service corporations" governed by federal law to provide legal services to the poor, qualified employer sponsored tax-exempt prepaid group legal plans under Internal Revenue Code sections 120 and 501(c) 20, and lawyer referral services, which are not intended to be included in the	The Commission disagrees. As the commenter noted, there is no readily available definition of "legal services organization." No other jurisdiction has seen the need to create such a definition. An attempt to define the term would run the risk of excluding from the Rule's permissive coverage activities that should be encouraged.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 6.3 Membership in Legal Services Organization.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response proposed rule. The proposed rule should be modified to include the intended definition of "legal service organization" by citing to the intended definition if one exists or defining the term in a new subsection (c) as follows: "(c) The term "legal service organization" means those defined in section(s) _____ of _____ [and/or the case of _____]." OR "(c) The term "legal service organization" means . . . "

Rule 6.3: Membership in Legal Services Organization

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California has no equivalent provision in its Rules of Professional Conduct.

Georgia adds that there is “no disciplinary penalty for a violation of this Rule.”

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2010, Rule 6.3 applies to a “not-for-profit” legal services organization.

Michigan: Rule 6.3 adds extensive rules governing lawyer participation in “not-for-profit referral service[s] that recommend legal services to the public.”

New Jersey: Rule 6.3 requires that the organization comply with Rule 5.4 and states the limitation in (b) to include adverse effect on the interest of “a client or class of clients of the organization or upon the independence of professional judgment of a lawyer representing such a client.”

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 6.3(a) extends the restriction to any conflict that would arise “under Rule 1.7 through Rule 1.13.”

Ohio omits ABA Model Rule 6.3 because the Supreme Court of Ohio believes the substance of Rule 6.3 is addressed by other rules governing conflicts of interest, including Rule 1.7(a).

Texas: Rule 1.13 (entitled “Conflicts: Public Interest Activities”) is similar to ABA Model Rule 6.3, but the Texas rule also governs a lawyer’s activities in a “civic, charitable or law reform organization.” Texas Rule 1.13 omits the clause “notwithstanding that the organization serves persons having interests adverse to a client of the lawyer.”

Proposed Rule 6.4 [N/A]

“Law Reform Activities Affecting Client Interests”

(Draft #4, 12/13/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 6.4, which concerns lawyers’ participation in law reform activities, is based on Model Rule 6.4. However, that part of the Rule that requires disclosures by lawyers participating in law reform activities has been deleted in response to public comment. See Introduction.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule

Comment

- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☐ Existing California Law

Rules

Statute

Case law

- ☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

- ☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 6

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 3

Abstain 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☒ Yes ☐ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☐ No Known Stakeholders

☒ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

Commission on Access to Justice. See also Public Comment Chart.

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

There were several negative comments urging that this Rule not be adopted, or if it were adopted, that it be amended by deleting the second sentence that imposes disclosure requirements. See Public Comment Chart for details. The Commission rejected the suggestions that the Rule not be adopted in the belief that its rejection would send a negative message relating to the encouragement of lawyers to participate in law reform activities. It should be noted, however, that the California Access to Justice Commission strongly supported the public comment version of the Rule.

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 6.4* Law Reform Activities Affecting Client Interests

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 6.4 is based on Model Rule 6.4. The Commission recommends the adoption of the first sentence of the Model Rule but not the second sentence. After consideration of several comments received during the public comment period, the Commission determined that including the second sentence would impose on lawyers who participate in law reform activities burdensome disclosure requirements to non-clients, thereby countering the positive effect of the first sentence, which is intended to encourage participation in such activities. See Public Comment Chart, below. In addition, the Commission also concluded that the requirements of disclosure are better left to internal disclosure rules and procedures of the organization that the lawyer serves as a director, officer or member. See Explanation of Changes to the Rule.

Minority. A minority of the Commission agrees with the California Commission on Access to Justice and the Legal Aid Association of California that Model Rule 6.4 is as an important addition to the California Rules as is Model Rule 6.3, which the majority has recommended be adopted without material modification. Deleting the requirement to disclose the fact that the lawyer knows that the interests of the lawyer's client may be materially affected by a decision in which the lawyer participates sends the wrong message to the public and to the profession. As Model Rule 6.4, Comment [1] correctly states, a lawyer is professionally obligated to protect the integrity of the program by making an appropriate disclosure. The minority also notes that there are no reported decisions of a lawyer being disciplined under the second sentence of Rule 6.4. See ANNOTATED MODEL RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT, RULE 6.4, at page 508 (6th Ed. 2008).

* Proposed Rule 6.4, Draft 4 (12/13/09).

A separate minority takes the position that, while the proposed Rule has laudable, aspirational goals, it has no place in a set of disciplinary rules. See full Dissent, below.

Variations in Other Jurisdictions. Nearly every state, including New York (effective 4/1/2009), has adopted Model Rule 6.4 verbatim or nearly verbatim. See Selected State Variations, below.

Proposed Rule 6.4 Law Reform Activities Affecting Client Interests

Minority Dissent

Proposed Rule 6.4 has lofty aspirational goals. All lawyers should be encouraged to serve their communities by serving on boards and commissions. Their legal education and training could be helpful in the deliberations of boards and commissions. They should, in all candor, disclose to such boards and commissions whenever they have a conflict, i.e., having a client who may be affected by any decision they make on such boards and commissions. However, the requirements should be part of law school education where students should learn what it means to be a lawyer and how lawyers should conduct themselves so as to promote the integrity of the profession. In no way should such service be the subject of discipline.

The Commission was not asked by the State Bar to write a practice guide, but to review and rewrite rules of discipline and conform, wherever possible, the California rules to the ABA rules. In these situations where the lawyer is not in a lawyer-client relationship and, therefore, owes no particular duty to a board or commission except ones created by, and agreed to by the board or commission.

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.4 Law Reform Activities Affecting Client Interests	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.4 Law Reform Activities Affecting Client Interests	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
A lawyer may serve as a director, officer or member of an organization involved in reform of the law or its administration notwithstanding that the reform may affect the interests of a client of the lawyer. When the lawyer knows that the interests of a client may be materially benefitted by a decision in which the lawyer participates, the lawyer shall disclose that fact but need not identify the client.	A lawyer may serve as a director, officer or member of an organization involved in reform of the law or its administration notwithstanding that the reform may affect the interests of a client of the lawyer. ~~When the lawyer knows that the interests of a client may be materially benefitted by a decision in which the lawyer participates, the lawyer shall disclose that fact but need not identify the client.~~	The Commission recommends the adoption of the first sentence of Model Rule 6.4. The Commission recommends that the second sentence of Model Rule 6.4 not be adopted. The Commission concluded that the requirements of disclosure are better left to internal disclosure rules and procedures of the organization that the lawyer serves as a director, officer or member. A minority of the Commission disagrees with this position. See Introduction.

* Proposed Rule 6.4, XDraft 4 (12/13/09). Strikeouts and underlines reflect changes to the Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.4 Law Reform Activities Affecting Client Interests Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 6.4 Law Reform Activities Affecting Client Interests Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] Lawyers involved in organizations seeking law reform generally do not have a client-lawyer relationship with the organization. Otherwise, it might follow that a lawyer could not be involved in a bar association law reform program that might indirectly affect a client. See also Rule 1.2(b). For example, a lawyer specializing in antitrust litigation might be regarded as disqualified from participating in drafting revisions of rules governing that subject. In determining the nature and scope of participation in such activities, a lawyer should be mindful of obligations to clients under other Rules, particularly Rule 1.7. A lawyer is professionally obligated to protect the integrity of the program by making an appropriate disclosure within the organization when the lawyer knows a private client might be materially benefitted.	[1] Lawyers involved in organizations seeking law reform generally do not have a client-lawyer relationship with the organization. Otherwise, it might follow that a lawyer could not be involved in a bar association law reform program that might indirectly affect a client. See also Rule 1.2(b).~~For example, a lawyer specializing in antitrust litigation might be regarded as disqualified from participating in drafting revisions of rules governing that subject. In determining the nature and scope of participation in such activities, a lawyer should be mindful of obligations to clients under other Rules, particularly Rule 1.7. A lawyer is professionally obligated to protect the integrity of the program by making an appropriate disclosure within the organization when the lawyer knows a private client might be materially benefitted.~~	The Commission recommends adoption of only the first two sentences of the Model Rule comment. The Commission determined that the third and fourth sentences are unnecessary exposition. The Commission also recommends that the last sentence not be adopted in light of its recommendation that the second sentence of the black letter not be adopted. See Explanation of Changes for Rule.

Rule 6.4 Law Reform Activities Affecting Client Interests

(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

A lawyer may serve as a director, officer or member of an organization involved in reform of the law or its administration notwithstanding that the reform may affect the interests of a client of the lawyer.

COMMENT

- [1] Lawyers involved in organizations seeking law reform generally do not have a lawyer-client relationship with the organization. Otherwise, it might follow that a lawyer could not be involved in a bar association law reform program that might indirectly affect a client. See also Rule 1.2(b).

Rule 6.4 Law Reform Activities Affecting Client Interests.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	A	Yes		OCTC supports encouraging law reform activities but is concerned that there is no requirement to advise the lawyer's clients when the reform may affect the interests of the clients.	Law reform activities would likely only indirectly affect a client thus not requiring advising clients of such indirectly adverse effects. If a significant development should arise, then the duty to communicate under the rules and the State Bar Act would control.
3	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee	M	Yes		It is foreseeable that a lawyer involved in law reform will not always be able to disclose that a client's interests may be materially benefitted or adversely affected without disclosing client confidences. The fact that a client need not be identified does not solve the problem. Hiding the client's identity does not permit the lawyer to reveal the client's confidences. For instance, a lawyer's record of representing certain clients may be enough in some instances for others to correctly infer the client whose interests would be materially benefitted or adversely affected. In such instances when the lawyer could not make the disclosure required by Proposed Rule 6.4 without disclosing client confidences,	The Commenter's concerns are all addressed by the deletion of the second sentence of the originally proposed Rule and the deletion of most of the originally proposed Comment.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 6.4 Law Reform Activities Affecting Client Interests.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					an option must be permitted. Proposed Rule 6.4 should explicitly provide that option, either in the text of the rule or in a comment, by stating that, if disclosure is not permitted by the lawyer's obligations to clients under other Rules and statutes, the lawyer should instead recuse himself or herself from participating in the decision that may materially benefit or adversely affect the client. Have the last two sentences of Rule 6.4 read: "When the lawyer knows that the interests of a client may be materially benefitted or adversely affected by a decision in which the lawyer participates, the lawyer shall disclose that fact, if not prohibited by the lawyer's obligations to clients under other Rules and statutes, but need not identify the client. If disclosure is prohibited, the lawyer shall not participate in any decision that may materially benefit or adversely affect the interests of his or her client." In the alternative, Proposed Rule 6.4 could remain worded as currently proposed but be accompanied by a second Comment worded as follows: "If disclosure is prohibited by the lawyer's obligations to any client under other Rules or

Rule 6.4 Law Reform Activities Affecting Client Interests.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					statutes, then a lawyer cannot provide the disclosure the disclosure required. If disclosure is prohibited, or if the lawyer chooses not to disclose in accordance with Rule 6.4 for any other reason, the lawyer shall not participate in any decision that the lawyer knows may materially benefit or adversely affect the interests of a client.” Concerned about the impact the rule will have on members who participate in organizations such as the California Conference of delegates. The addition of another Comment to address this issue is encouraged. It is hard to imagine that the drafters intended all the delegates to make such disclosures to the Conference but including “members” within the ambit or the proposed, rather than limiting it to officers and directors of the Conference leads to a questionable outcome.

Rule 6.4: Law Reform Activities Affecting Client Interests

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California has no comparable provision.

District of Columbia: Rule 6.4 adds the following paragraph (a): “A lawyer should assist in improving the administration of justice. A lawyer may discharge this requirement by rendering services in activities for improving the law, the legal system, or the legal profession.”

Florida replaces “materially benefited” with “materially affected” in the second sentence of Rule 6.4.

Georgia adds that “[t]here is no disciplinary penalty for a violation of this Rule.”

New Hampshire: New Hampshire substitutes the word “affected” for the word “benefitted” in the second sentence of Rule 6.4. A special New Hampshire Comment explains the reasoning: “Since situations may arise in which law reform activities may materially impinge on a client’s interest in an adverse, as well as beneficial manner, the change was made to reflect that possibility.”

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 6.4 imposes a disclosure obligation only when the lawyer

“actively” participates in the matter. The Rule also adds: “When the lawyer knows that the interests of a client may be adversely affected by a decision in which the lawyer actively participates, the lawyer shall disclose that fact to the client.”

Ohio omits ABA Model Rule 6.4 because the Supreme Court of Ohio believes that the “substance of Model Rule 6.4 is addressed by other provisions of the Ohio Rules of Professional Conduct that address conflicts of interest.”

Proposed Rule 6.5 [1-650]

“Limited Legal Services Programs”

(XDraft #5, 04/01/10)

Summary: Proposed Rule 6.5 is based upon recently approved rule 1-650, which in turn was based on Model Rule 6.5, and facilitates lawyer’s participation in limited legal services programs such as call-in hotlines. Most of the changes from rule 1-650 are non-substantive, and have been made to conform the language of the proposed Rule to that of the other proposed rules, e.g., changing “member” to “lawyer” and substituting proposed new rule numbers for existing rule numbers. See Introduction.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart
Rule	Comment
☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 1-650

Statute

Case law

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 7

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 2

Abstain 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Commission Minority Position, Known Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

Minority Position Included. (See Introduction): ☐ Yes ☒ No

☐ No Known Stakeholders

☒ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

California Commission on Access to Justice.

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 6.5* Limited Legal Services Programs

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 6.5 is based upon recently approved rule 1-650, which in turn was based on Model Rule 6.5. Most of the changes from rule 1-650 are non-substantive, and have been made to conform the language of the proposed Rule to that of the other proposed rules, e.g., changing “member” to “lawyer” and substituting proposed new rule numbers for existing rule numbers. Most of the rest of the changes are for purposes of clarifying the language of the proposed Rule. In addition, the Commission recommends two other language changes intended to conform the Rule to well-settled California law and to provide guidance to lawyers on protecting confidential information they might have acquired under the auspices of a program governed under the Rule. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a) and Comment [4], respectively.

Variations in other jurisdictions. Nearly every jurisdiction has adopted some version of Model Rule 6.5, with little variation.

* Proposed Rule 6.5, XDraft 5 (04/15/10).

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.5 Nonprofit And Court-Annexed Limited Legal Services Programs	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.5 Limited Legal Services Programs	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) A lawyer who, under the auspices of a program sponsored by a nonprofit organization or court, provides short-term limited legal services to a client without expectation by either the lawyer or the client that the lawyer will provide continuing representation in the matter:	(a) A lawyer who, under the auspices of a program sponsored by a court, government agency, bar association, law school, or nonprofit organization ~~or court~~, provides short-term limited legal services to a client without reasonable expectation by either the lawyer or the client that the lawyer will provide continuing representation in the matter:	The title of the Rule has been shortened because, unlike the Model Rule, proposed Rule 6.5 is not limited to programs sponsored by courts and nonprofit organizations. The changes to paragraph (a) were first made in rule 1-650 to expand the list of organizations covered by the Rule. The word "reasonable" has been added as a modifier of "expectation" to comport with current California law on the formation of a lawyer-client relationship. See, e.g., Zenith Insurance v. Cozen O'Connor (2009)148 Cal. App.4th 998, 1010; Cal. State Bar Formal Ethics Opn. 2003-161.
(1) is subject to Rules 1.7 and 1.9(a) only if the lawyer knows that the representation of the client involves a conflict of interest; and	(1) is subject to Rules 1.7 and 1.9(a) only if the lawyer knows that the representation of the client involves a conflict of interest; and	Subparagraph (a)(1) is identical to Model Rule 6.5(a)(1).
(2) is subject to Rule 1.10 only if the lawyer knows that another lawyer associated with the lawyer in a law firm is disqualified by Rule 1.7 or 1.9(a) with respect to the matter.	(2) ~~is subject to Rule 1.10~~has an imputed conflict of interest only if the lawyer knows that another lawyer associated with the lawyer in a law firm is ~~disqualified~~ prohibited from representation by Rule 1.7 or 1.9(a) with respect to the matter.	Subparagraph (a)(2) is based on Model Rule 6.5(a)(2). The phrase "has an imputed conflict of interest" has been substituted for a reference to Rule 1.10 as that rule is not recommended for adoption. The phrase "prohibited from representation" has been carried forward from current rule 1-650(A)(2); it is a more accurate statement than "disqualified" in the disciplinary rule context.

* Proposed Rule 6.5, XDraft 5 (04/01/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.5 Nonprofit And Court-Annexed Limited Legal Services Programs	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.5 Limited Legal Services Programs	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(b) Except as provided in paragraph (a)(2), Rule 1.10 is inapplicable to a representation governed by this Rule.	(b) Except as provided in paragraph (a)(2), ~~Rule 1.10 is inapplicable to a representation governed by this Rule~~conflict of interest that arises from a lawyer's participation in a program under paragraph (a) will not be imputed to the lawyer's law firm.	Paragraph (b) is based on Model Rule 6.5(b) but carries forward from current rule 1-650(B) the language originally adopted by the Board and approved by the Supreme Court.
	(c) The personal disqualification of a lawyer participating in the program will not be imputed to other lawyers participating in the program.	Paragraph (c) has no counterpart in Model Rule 6.5. The California Supreme Court added this paragraph to proposed rule 1-650, which the Board of Governors had adopted and sent to the Supreme Court. Paragraph (c), which is taken from the last sentence of Model Rule 6.5, cmt. [4], is identical to current rule 1-650(C).

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.5 Nonprofit And Court-Annexed Limited Legal Services Programs Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.5 ~~Nonprofit And Court-Annexed~~ Limited Legal Services Programs Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] Legal services organizations, courts and various nonprofit organizations have established programs through which lawyers provide short-term limited legal services — such as advice or the completion of legal forms - that will assist persons to address their legal problems without further representation by a lawyer. In these programs, such as legal-advice hotlines, advice-only clinics or pro se counseling programs, a client-lawyer relationship is established, but there is no expectation that the lawyer's representation of the client will continue beyond the limited consultation. Such programs are normally operated under circumstances in which it is not feasible for a lawyer to systematically screen for conflicts of interest as is generally required before undertaking a representation. See, e.g., Rules 1.7, 1.9 and 1.10.	[1] ~~Legal — services — organizations~~Courts, courts, government agencies, bar associations, law schools and various nonprofit organizations have established programs through which lawyers provide short-term limited legal services - such as advice or the completion of legal forms - that will assist persons ~~to address~~in addressing their legal problems without further representation by a lawyer. In these programs, such as legal-advice hotlines, advice-only clinics or pro se counseling programs, whenever a ~~client-lawyer-client~~ relationship is established, ~~but~~ there usually is no expectation that the lawyer's representation of the client will continue beyond ~~the~~that limited consultation. Such programs are normally operated under circumstances in which it is not feasible for a lawyer to systematically ~~screen~~check for conflicts of interest as is generally required before undertaking a representation. See, e.g., Rules 1.7, ~~1.9~~ and ~~1.10~~1.9.	Comment [1] is based on Model Rule 6.5, cmt. [1]. Changes were made in the first sentence to conform to the changes in paragraph (a). See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a) and carry forward revisions made by the Supreme Court in approving rule 1-650. This is the language approved by the Supreme Court in rule 1-650. There was some controversy concerning the issue of the formation of an attorney client relationship when lawyers assist others who have legal problems; it appears that the Court inserted “whenever” to avoid specifying that such a relationship is always formed. The word “check” has been substituted for “screen” to avoid confusion that an ethical screen is required when a lawyer participates in a program governed by this Rule. The reference to Rule 1.10 has been deleted as that rule is not recommended for adoption.

* Proposed Rule 4.1, Draft 1 (XX/XX/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.5 Nonprofit And Court-Annexed Limited Legal Services Programs Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.5 ~~Nonprofit And Court-Annexed~~ Limited Legal Services Programs Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[2] A lawyer who provides short-term limited legal services pursuant to this Rule must secure the client's informed consent to the limited scope of the representation. See Rule 1.2(c). If a short-term limited representation would not be reasonable under the circumstances, the lawyer may offer advice to the client but must also advise the client of the need for further assistance of counsel. Except as provided in this Rule, the Rules of Professional Conduct, including Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c), are applicable to the limited representation.	[2] A lawyer who provides short-term limited legal services pursuant to this Rule must secure the client's informed consent to the limited scope of the representation. See Rule 1.2(c). If a short-term limited representation would not be reasonable under the circumstances, the lawyer may offer advice to the client but must also advise the client of the need for further assistance of counsel. Except as provided in this Rule, ~~the~~these Rules of ~~Professional Conduct~~and the State Bar Act, including ~~Rules~~the lawyer's duty of confidentiality under Business and Professions Code section 6068(e)(1), Rule 1.6 and Rule 1.9(e), are applicable to the limited representation.	Comment [2] is based on Model Rule 6.5, cmt. [2]. References have been added to the State Bar Act, which also regulates lawyer conduct in California, and Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e)(1), which in California also governs a lawyer's duty of confidentiality. Finally, because the duty of confidentiality is also relevant in proposed Rule 1.9(a) and (b), the limitation of Rule 1.9's applicability to 1.9(c) has been stricken.
[3] Because a lawyer who is representing a client in the circumstances addressed by this Rule ordinarily is not able to check systematically for conflicts of interest, paragraph (a) requires compliance with Rules 1.7 or 1.9(a) only if the lawyer knows that the representation presents a conflict of interest for the lawyer, and with Rule 1.10 only if the lawyer knows that another lawyer in the lawyer's firm is disqualified by Rules 1.7 or 1.9(a) in the matter.	[3] ~~Because a~~A lawyer who is representing a client in the circumstances addressed by this Rule ordinarily is not able to check systematically for conflicts of interest. Therefore, paragraph (a)(~~1~~) requires compliance with Rules 1.7 ~~or~~and 1.9(a) only if the lawyer knows that the representation presents a conflict of interest for the lawyer. In addition, and with Rule 1.10 paragraph (a)(2) imputes conflicts of interest to the lawyer only if the lawyer knows that another lawyer in the lawyer's law firm is~~would be~~ disqualified by Rules 1.7 or 1.9(a) in the matter.	Comment [3] is based on Model Rule 6.5, cmt. [3]. Changes have been made to specifically clarify what is required by each subparagraph of paragraph (a) and to carry forward revisions the California Supreme Court made to rule 1-650.

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.5 Nonprofit And Court-Annexed Limited Legal Services Programs Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.5 ~~Nonprofit And Court-Annexed~~ Limited Legal Services Programs Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[4] Because the limited nature of the services significantly reduces the risk of conflicts of interest with other matters being handled by the lawyer's firm, paragraph (b) provides that Rule 1.10 is inapplicable to a representation governed by this Rule except as provided by paragraph (a)(2). Paragraph (a)(2) requires the participating lawyer to comply with Rule 1.10 when the lawyer knows that the lawyer's firm is disqualified by Rules 1.7 or 1.9(a). By virtue of paragraph (b), however, a lawyer's participation in a short-term limited legal services program will not preclude the lawyer's firm from undertaking or continuing the representation of a client with interests adverse to a client being represented under the program's auspices. Nor will the personal disqualification of a lawyer participating in the program be imputed to other lawyers participating in the program.	[4] Because the limited nature of the services significantly reduces the risk of conflicts of interest with other matters being handled by the lawyer's law firm, paragraph (b) provides that ~~Rule 1.10 is~~imputed conflicts of interest are inapplicable to a representation governed by this Rule except as provided by paragraph (a)(2). Paragraph (a)(2) requires the participating lawyer to comply with Rule 1.10 when the lawyer knows that any lawyer in the lawyer's firm is ~~disqualified~~prohibited from representation by Rules 1.7 or 1.9(a). By virtue of paragraph (b), ~~however~~moreover, a lawyer's participation in a short-term limited legal services program will not be imputed to the lawyer's law firm or preclude the lawyer's law firm from undertaking or continuing the representation of a client with interests adverse to a client being represented under the program's auspices. Nor will the personal disqualification of a lawyer participating in the program be imputed to other lawyers participating in the program. However, once the conflict is identified, the member should be screened from the member's firm's representation of a client with interests adverse to a client that the member previously represented under the program's auspices.	Comment [4] is based on Model Rule 6.5, cmt. [4]. Changes to the Comment carry forward changes the Supreme Court approved in rule 1-650. The last sentence of Comment [4] has been added at the suggestion of COPRAC to clarify the actions a law firm should take once a conflict has been identified.

ABA Model Rule Rule 6.5 Nonprofit And Court-Annexed Limited Legal Services Programs Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 6.5 ~~Nonprofit And Court-Annexed~~ Limited Legal Services Programs Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[5] If, after commencing a short-term limited representation in accordance with this Rule, a lawyer undertakes to represent the client in the matter on an ongoing basis, Rules 1.7, 1.9(a) and 1.10 become applicable.	[5] If, after commencing a short-term limited representation in accordance with this Rule, a lawyer undertakes to represent the client in the matter on an ongoing basis, Rules 1.7, and 1.9(a) ~~and 1.10~~ become applicable.	Comment [5] is nearly identical to Model Rule 6.5, cmt. [5]. The reference to Rule 1.10 has been deleted as that rule is not recommended for adoption.

Rule ~~1-650~~6.5: Limited Legal Services Programs

(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

~~(A)~~(a) A ~~member~~memberlawyer who, under the auspices of a program sponsored by a court, government agency, bar association, law school, or nonprofit organization, provides short-term limited legal services to a client without reasonable expectation by either the ~~member~~memberlawyer or the client that the ~~member~~memberlawyer will provide continuing representation in the matter:

- (1) is subject to ~~rule 3-310~~Rules 1.7 and 1.9(a) only if the ~~member~~memberlawyer knows that the representation of the client involves a conflict of interest; and
- (2) has an imputed conflict of interest only if the ~~member~~memberlawyer knows that another lawyer associated with the ~~member~~memberlawyer in a law firm ~~would have~~is prohibited from representation by Rule 1.7 or 1.9(a-conflict of interest under rule 3-310) with respect to the matter.

~~(B)~~(b) Except as provided in paragraph ~~(Aa)~~(a)(2), a conflict of interest that arises from a ~~member's~~memberlawyer's participation in a program under paragraph ~~(Aa)~~(a) will not be imputed to the ~~member's~~memberlawyer's law firm.

~~(C)~~(c) The personal disqualification of a lawyer participating in the program will not be imputed to other lawyers participating in the program.

Discussion: COMMENT

- [1] Courts, government agencies, bar associations, law schools and various nonprofit organizations have established programs through which lawyers provide short-term limited legal services - such as advice or the completion of legal forms - that will assist persons in addressing their legal problems without further representation by a lawyer. In these programs, such as legal-advice hotlines, advice-only clinics or pro se counseling programs, whenever a lawyer-client relationship is established, there usually is no expectation that the lawyer's representation of the client will continue beyond that limited consultation. Such programs are normally operated under circumstances in which it is not feasible for a lawyer to systematically ~~screen~~check for conflicts of interest as is generally required before undertaking a representation. See, e.g., Rules 1.7 and 1.9.

- [2] A ~~member~~memberlawyer who provides short-term limited legal services pursuant to ~~rule 1-650~~this Rule must secure the client's informed consent to the limited scope of the representation. See Rule 1.2(c). If a short-term limited representation would not be reasonable under the circumstances, the ~~member~~memberlawyer may offer advice to the client but must also advise the client of the need for further assistance of counsel. ~~See rule 3-110.~~ Except as provided in this ~~rule 1-650~~Rule, ~~the~~these ~~Rules of Professional Conduct~~ and the State Bar Act, including the ~~member's~~memberlawyer's duty of confidentiality under Business and Professions Code ~~§section~~ 6068(e)(1), Rule 1.6 and Rule 1.9, are applicable to the limited representation.

- [3] A ~~member~~memberlawyer who is representing a client in the circumstances addressed by ~~rule 1-650~~this Rule ordinarily is not able to check systematically for conflicts of interest. Therefore, paragraph ~~(Aa)~~(a)(1) requires compliance with ~~rule 3-310~~Rules 1.7 and 1.9(a) only if the ~~member~~memberlawyer knows that the representation presents a conflict of interest for the ~~member~~memberlawyer. In addition, paragraph ~~(Aa)~~(a)(2) imputes conflicts of interest to the ~~member~~lawyer only if the ~~member~~lawyer knows that another lawyer in the ~~member's~~lawyer's law firm would be disqualified ~~under rule 3-310~~by Rules 1.7 or 1.9(a) in the matter.

- [4] Because the limited nature of the services significantly reduces the risk of conflicts of interest with other matters being handled by the ~~member's~~lawyer's law firm, paragraph (Bb) provides that imputed conflicts of interest are inapplicable to a representation governed by this ~~rule~~Rule except as provided by paragraph (Aa)(2). Paragraph (Aa)(2) ~~imputes conflicts of interest to~~requires the participating ~~member~~lawyer to comply with Rule 1.10 when the ~~member~~lawyer knows that any lawyer in the ~~member's~~lawyer's firm ~~would be disqualified under rule 3-310~~is prohibited from representation by Rules 1.7 or 1.9(a). By virtue of paragraph (Bb), moreover, a ~~member's~~lawyer's participation in a short-term limited legal services program will not be imputed to the ~~member's~~lawyer's law firm or preclude the ~~member's~~lawyer's law firm from undertaking or continuing the representation of a client with interests adverse to a client being represented under the program's auspices. Nor will the personal disqualification of a lawyer participating in the program be imputed to other lawyers participating in the program. However, once the conflict is identified, the member should be screened from the member's firm's representation of a client with interests adverse to a client that the member previously represented under the program's auspices.
- [5] If, after commencing a short-term limited representation in accordance with ~~rule 1-650~~this Rule, a ~~member~~lawyer undertakes to represent the client in the matter on an ongoing basis, ~~rule 3-310~~Rules 1.7 and ~~all other rules~~1.9(a) become applicable. ~~(Added by order of the Supreme Court, operative August 28, 2009.)~~

Rule 6.5: Limited Legal Services Programs

(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) A lawyer who, under the auspices of a program sponsored by a court, government agency, bar association, law school, or nonprofit organization, provides short-term limited legal services to a client without reasonable expectation by either the lawyer or the client that the lawyer will provide continuing representation in the matter:
 - (1) is subject to Rules 1.7 and 1.9(a) only if the lawyer knows that the representation of the client involves a conflict of interest; and
 - (2) has an imputed conflict of interest only if the lawyer knows that another lawyer associated with the lawyer in a law firm is prohibited from representation by Rule 1.7 or 1.9(a) with respect to the matter.
- (b) Except as provided in paragraph (a)(2), a conflict of interest that arises from a lawyer's participation in a program under paragraph (a) will not be imputed to the lawyer's law firm.
- (c) The personal disqualification of a lawyer participating in the program will not be imputed to other lawyers participating in the program.

COMMENT

- [1] Courts, government agencies, bar associations, law schools and various nonprofit organizations have established programs through which lawyers provide short-term limited legal services – such as advice or the completion of legal forms – that will assist persons in addressing their legal problems without further representation by a lawyer. In these programs, such as legal-advice hotlines, advice-only clinics or pro se counseling programs, whenever a lawyer-client relationship is established, there usually is no expectation that the lawyer's representation of the client will continue beyond that limited consultation. Such programs are normally operated under circumstances in which it is not feasible for a lawyer to systematically check for conflicts of interest as is generally required before undertaking a representation. See, e.g., Rules 1.7 and 1.9.

- [2] A lawyer who provides short-term limited legal services pursuant to this Rule must secure the client's informed consent to the limited scope of the representation. See Rule 1.2(c). If a short-term limited representation would not be reasonable under the circumstances, the lawyer may offer advice to the client but must also advise the client of the need for further assistance of counsel. Except as provided in this Rule, these Rules and the State Bar Act, including the lawyer's duty of confidentiality under Business and Professions Code section 6068(e)(1), Rule 1.6 and Rule 1.9, are applicable to the limited representation.

- [3] A lawyer who is representing a client in the circumstances addressed by this Rule ordinarily is not able to check systematically for conflicts of interest. Therefore, paragraph (a)(1) requires compliance with Rules 1.7 and 1.9(a) only if the lawyer knows that the representation presents a conflict of interest for the lawyer. In addition, paragraph (a)(2) imputes conflicts of interest to the lawyer only if the lawyer knows that another lawyer in the lawyer's law firm would be disqualified by Rules 1.7 or 1.9(a) in the matter.

- [4] Because the limited nature of the services significantly reduces the risk of conflicts of interest with other matters being handled by the lawyer's law firm, paragraph (b) provides that imputed conflicts of interest are inapplicable to a representation governed by this Rule except as provided by paragraph (a)(2). Paragraph (a)(2) requires the participating lawyer to comply with Rule 1.10 when the lawyer knows that any lawyer in the lawyer's firm is prohibited from representation by Rules 1.7 or 1.9(a). By virtue of paragraph (b), moreover, a lawyer's participation in a short-term limited legal services program will not be imputed to the lawyer's law firm or preclude the lawyer's law firm from undertaking or continuing the representation of a client with interests adverse to a client being represented under the program's auspices. Nor will the personal disqualification of a lawyer participating in the program be imputed to other lawyers participating in the program. However, once the conflict is identified, the member should be screened from the member's firm's representation of a client with interests adverse to a client that the member previously represented under the program's auspices.
- [5] If, after commencing a short-term limited representation in accordance with this Rule, a lawyer undertakes to represent the client in the matter on an ongoing basis, Rules 1.7 and 1.9(a) become applicable.

Rule 6.5 Limited Legal Services Programs [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 3 Agree = 2 Disagree = 0 Modify = 1 NI = 0
No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Alex, Glenn C.	M	No		Subdivisions (a)(2) and (b), and Comments [1], [3], [4], and [5] refer to Rule 1.10, which does not seem to be included in the draft Rules.	Proposed Rule 1.10 was not approved by the Board of Governors, but that decision may be reconsidered. If Rule 1.10 is not adopted, the references will be deleted.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	A	Yes		OCTC finds Comments [1] – [4] more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions. It supports Comment [5].	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations. No response required.
3	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 6.5: Nonprofit and Court-Annexed Limited Legal Services Programs

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Alabama: Rule 6.5 is based on Model Rule 6.5, but in the rules effective December 10, 2008, Alabama adopted a Rule 6.6, which has no Model Rule equivalent. Rule 6.6 states that any inactive member of the Alabama State Bar may render pro bono services by paying special membership dues and becoming a special member of the Alabama State Bar for the year in which the pro bono services are rendered.

California Effective August 28, 2009, California has adopted a new Rule 1-650 that is substantially similar to Model Rule 6.5, but Rule 1-650(A) also refers to programs sponsored by a “government agency, bar association, [or] law school,” and California adds a new Rule 1-650(C) that states as follows: “The personal disqualification of a lawyer participating in the program will not be imputed to other lawyers participating in the program.”

Connecticut adds the following paragraph that is identical to Comment 2 to ABA Rule 6.5:

(b) A lawyer who provides short-term limited legal services pursuant to this Rule must secure the client’s informed consent to the limited scope of the representation. See Rule 1.2 (c). If a short-term limited representation would not be reasonable under the circumstances, the lawyer may offer advice to the client but must also advise the client of the need for further assistance of counsel. Except as provided in this Rule, the Rules of Professional Conduct, including Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c), are applicable to the limited representation.

New Hampshire: Rule 6.5(a) applies only to a “one time consultation with a client” instead of the ABA’s version “short-term limited legal services to a client.” Also, echoing ABA Comment 2 to Rule 6.5, New Hampshire’s Rule 6.5(c) provides that “Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c) are applicable to a representation governed by this Rule.” Finally, a special New Hampshire Comment states as follows:

Should a lawyer participating in a one-time consultation under this Rule later discover that the lawyer’s firm was representing or later undertook the representation of an adverse client, the prior participation of the attorney will not preclude the lawyer’s firm from continuing or undertaking representation of such adverse client. But the participating lawyer will be disqualified and must be screened from any involvement with the firm’s adverse client. See ABA Comment [4].

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 6.5(a) covers programs sponsored by government agencies and bar associations. The Rule also specifies that a conflict arises only if a lawyer “has actual knowledge [of the conflict] at the time of commencement of representation.” New York also adds Rule 6.5(c) -(e), which provides as follows:

(c) Short-term limited legal services are services providing legal advice or representation free of charge as part of a program described in paragraph (a) with no expectation that the assistance will continue beyond what is necessary to complete an initial consultation, representation or court appearance.

(d) The lawyer providing short-term limited legal services must secure the client’s informed consent to the limited scope of the representation, and such representation shall be subject to the provisions of Rule 1.6.

(e) This Rule shall not apply where the court before which the matter is pending determines that a conflict of interest exists or, if during the course of the representation, the lawyer providing the services becomes aware of the existence of a conflict of interest precluding continued representation.

Wisconsin: Rule 6.5(a) also applies to a program sponsored by “a bar association” or “an accredited law school.”

Proposed Rule 7.1 [RPC 1-400]
“Communications Concerning Availability of Legal Services”
(XDraft #8, 06/16/10)

Summary: Proposed Rule 7.1 sets out the general prohibition on a lawyer making false and misleading communications concerning the availability of legal services and largely carries forward the definition of “communication” in current rule 1-400(A). It also carries forward several Standards from rule 1-400 that create a presumption that the rules in the 7 series have been violated.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rule

RPC 1-400

Statute

Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6157 et seq.

Case law

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 7
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 2
Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Dissenting Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart ☐ Yes ☒ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed* Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning the Availability of Legal Services

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

1. The Commission has determined that the ability of California lawyers and lawyers from other states to analyze issues concerning legal advertising and solicitation in this state would be enhanced by restating what is currently a single rule, California Rule 1-400, as five separate rules, numbered 7.1 through 7.5, that follow the organization of their ABA Model Rule counterparts. Nationally, there is marked variation among the jurisdictions in this area of lawyer regulation. The Commission believes that advertising of legal services and the solicitation of prospective clients is an area of lawyer regulation where greater national uniformity would be helpful to the public, practicing lawyers, and the courts in light of the current widespread use of the Internet by lawyers and law firms to market their services and the trend in many states toward allowing some form of multijurisdictional practice. However, the Commission has recommended departures from the Model Rules, in part to address Constitutional concerns.
2. Rule 7.1 sets out the general prohibition on a lawyer making false and misleading communications concerning the availability of legal services. Rule 7.2 specifically addresses advertising, a subset of communication. Rule 7.3 is concerned with regulating various means by which a lawyer seeking to market his or her services might make direct contact with a prospective client. Rule 7.4 sets out basic rules governing the communication of a lawyer's fields of practice and claims to specialization. Rule 7.5 does the same as rule 7.4 for the use of firm names and letterheads. The Commission, however, declines at this time to recommend Model Rule 7.6, which is intended to regulate political contributions made by lawyers to obtain legal work with government entities or to achieve an appointment as a judge. The Commission is still studying the feasibility of a rule analogous to Model Rule 7.6.

* Proposed Rule, XDraft 8 (06/16/10)

INTRODUCTION (continued):

3. Proposed Rule 7.1 entails the basic concept addressed in Model Rule 7.1: the prohibition on a lawyer making false and misleading communications concerning the availability of legal services.
4. However, proposed Rule 7.1 diverges from the Model Rule in a number of ways, including:
 - (i) it retains a definition of “communication” from current rule 1-400, updated to recognize changes occasioned by Internet usage (see paragraph (a));
 - (ii) it expands on the Model Rule’s definition of “false and misleading” communication (see paragraph (c));
 - (iii) it prohibits “any” misrepresentation of fact or law, and not just material misrepresentations (see paragraph (c)(2));
 - (iv) it retains a provision authorizing the Board to formulate and adopt standards designating certain communications that will be presumed violations of the Rule, and retains some of the standards presently found in current rule 1-400 (see paragraph (d)). The Office of the Chief Trial Counsel requested retention of these standards, and the Commission agrees.
5. The Commission recommends retaining for the most part the Comment to Model Rule 7.1, revised to conform to proposed changes to the Rule.
6. Other Definitions. The Commission does not recommend carrying forward other definitions from current rule 1-400 (e.g., “solicitation”) or including definitions currently found in the Business & Professions Code (e.g., “advertisement,” found in § 6157(c)). The regulation of advertising is now relatively well-settled and these definitions, originally drafted in the early stages of the regulation of lawyer advertising and solicitation to provide guidance to lawyers on precisely what kinds of communication were regulated, are no longer necessary.

INTRODUCTION:

7. Retention of Marketing Materials. Both current rule 1-400(F) and previous versions of the Model Rules contain a requirement that a lawyer retain, for two years, a copy of any communication the lawyer had made in electronic or written media. The Commission agrees with the ABA Ethics 2000 Commission that the requirement “has become increasingly burdensome, and such records are seldom used for disciplinary purposes,” (ABA Ethics 2000 Reporters Explanation of Changes, Rule 7.2), and so recommends that the retention requirement not be retained. However, the Commission notes that if this recommendation is accepted, Bus. & Prof. Code § 6159.1, which requires the retention of advertisements for a period of one year, should be repealed. Because it is necessary for Rule 7.1 and Bus. & Prof. Code § 6159.1 to be consistent, the potential alternative to a change in the statute would be for Rule 7.1 to require a one-year period of retention, but the Commission does not favor that alternative.
8. Variations in Other Jurisdictions. There is a wide range of variation among jurisdictions in their approach to regulating lawyer advertising and solicitation. States that have diverged widely from the Model Rules include smaller jurisdictions such as the District of Columbia, Kentucky, Mississippi and Iowa, and larger states, such as Florida, New York, and Texas. Unlike these states that have either eliminated or added to marketing restrictions in the Model Rules, the Commission recommends keeping the same basic concepts found in the Model Rules, revised only to clarify or to address unique aspects of the California statutory and regulatory landscape, and to obviate potential constitutional infirmities.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning A Lawyer's Services	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning ~~A Lawyer's~~ the Availability of Legal Services	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(a) For purposes of Rules 7.1 through 7.5, "communication" means any message or offer made by or on behalf of a lawyer concerning the availability for professional employment of a lawyer or a lawyer's law firm directed to any former, present, or prospective client, including but not limited to the following: (1) Any use of firm name, trade name, fictitious name, or other professional designation of such lawyer or law firm; or (2) Any stationery, letterhead, business card, sign, brochure, domain name, Internet web page or web site, e-mail, other material sent or posted by electronic transmission, or other writing describing such lawyer or law firm; or (3) Any advertisement (regardless of medium) of such lawyer or law firm directed to the general public or any substantial portion thereof; or	Title of Rule. The substitution in the title of the phrase "the Availability of Legal Services" for "a Lawyer's Services" is intended to convey that proposed Rule 7.1 regulates only those instances when a lawyer or law firm communicates to prospective clients their availability to provide legal services. Paragraph (a). Paragraph (a) defines the term "communication," and imports paragraph (A) of current rule 1-400 into Rule 7.1, with some revisions. The Commission determined that a definition of communication, updated to address new forms of communication, is warranted in order to enhance client protection by reducing the risk of uncertainty as to what this Rule covers; the Model Rule has no such definition. The listing in subparagraphs (a)(1) – (4) of the kinds of communication covered by the Rule is not exclusive. Subparagraph (a)(1). Is identical to current rule 1-400(A)(1), except that "lawyer" is substituted for "member." Subparagraph (a)(2). The phrase, "domain name, Internet web page or web site, e-mail, other material sent or posted by electronic transmission," has been substituted for "or other comparable written material" in rule 1-400(A)(2) in order to provide guidance on the kinds of communication, including those commonly found on the Internet, that are regulated under Chapter 7 of the Proposed Rules. Subparagraph (a)(3) is identical to current rule 1-400(A)(3), except that "lawyer" is substituted for "member."

* Proposed Rule, XDraft 8 (06/16/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule
RRC_-_1-400_[7-1]_-_Compare_-_Rule_&_Comment_Explanaton_-_XDFT3_(7-1-10)KEM-LM-RD-ML

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning A Lawyer's Services	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning ~~A Lawyer's~~ the Availability of Legal Services	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(4) Any unsolicited correspondence, electronic transmission, or other writing from a lawyer or law firm directed to any person or entity.	Subparagraph (a)(4). The phrase “electronic transmission, or other writing” has been added to subparagraph (4) to conform its construction to revised subparagraph (2).
		Paragraphs (b) and (c) – Introduction. The two sentences that comprise Model Rule 7.1 have been divided into two separate paragraphs. Because the concepts contained in those two sentences are distinct, the Commission believes that readers of the Rule will more easily grasp their different meanings by placing them in different paragraphs: The first sentence contains the operative prohibition and states generally what kind of conduct is prohibited (making “a false or misleading communication”); the second sentence defines with specificity the prohibited conduct.
A lawyer shall not make a false or misleading communication about the lawyer or the lawyer's services.	(b) A lawyer shall not make a false or misleading communication ~~about the lawyer or the lawyer's services~~ as defined herein.	Paragraph (b). Paragraph (b) largely tracks the first sentence of Model Rule 7.1. However, the phrase “about a lawyer's or the lawyer's services” in Model Rule 7.1 has been replaced by the phrase “as defined herein,” as that limitation is now contained in paragraph (a), which defines the term “communication.”
A communication is false or misleading if it contains a material misrepresentation of fact or law, or omits a fact necessary to make the statement considered as a whole not materially misleading.	(c) A communication is false or misleading if it:	Paragraph (c). Paragraph (c) is largely derived from current rule 1-400(D) and identifies with greater specificity than the second sentence of Model Rule 7.1 when a communication is false or misleading.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning A Lawyer's Services	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning ~~A Lawyer's~~ the Availability of Legal Services	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(1) Contains any untrue statement; or	Subparagraphs (c)(1), (3) and (4) are identical to subparagraphs (1), (2) and (3) of current rule 1-400(D), respectively.¹ Subparagraphs (c)(1), (3) and (4) add clarity as to precisely what is prohibited by the operative language of proposed Rule 7.1(b).
	(2) Contains a material misrepresentation of fact or law; or	Subparagraph (c)(2) adopts verbatim part of the second sentence to Model Rule 7.1.
	(3) Contains any matter, or presents or arranges any matter in a manner or format that is false, deceptive, or that confuses, deceives, or misleads the public; or	Subparagraph (c)(3) is identical to current rule 1-400(D)(2).
	(4) Omits to state any a-fact necessary to make the statements made, considered as a whole in the light of circumstances under which they are made, not materially misleading.	Subparagraph (c)(4) is identical to current rule 1-400(D)(3). It is similar in concept to the second sentence of Model Rule 7.1.

¹ The concepts found in subsections (4), (5) and (6) of rule 1-400(D) have been moved to other rules in the Chapter 7 series of proposed Rules. The concepts now found in rule 1-400(D)(4) and (5) may now be found in proposed Rules 7.3(c) and 7.3(b)(2), respectively. See proposed Rule 7.3 for a further discussion of these concepts. The language formerly appearing in rule 1-400(D)(6) may now be found in proposed Rule 7.4(d).

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning A Lawyer's Services	Commission's Proposed Rule[*] Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning ~~A Lawyer's~~ the Availability of Legal Services	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(d) The Board of Governors of the State Bar may formulate and adopt standards as to communications that will be presumed to violate Rule 7.1, 7.2, 7.3, 7.4 or 7.5. The standards shall only be used as presumptions affecting the burden of proof in disciplinary proceedings involving alleged violations of these rules. "Presumption affecting the burden of proof" means that presumption defined in Evidence Code sections 605 and 606. Such standards formulated and adopted by the Board, as from time to time amended, shall be effective and binding on all lawyers.	Paragraph (d) retains, with minor revisions, current rule 1-400(E), which authorizes the Board of Governors of the State Bar of California to promulgate standards that may be used as presumptions affecting which party has the burden of proof in disciplinary proceedings. The word "shall" in current rule 1-400(E) has been changed to "may," as the Board's authority to promulgate any standards beyond those already extant is discretionary.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning A Lawyer's Services Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning the Availability of Legal Services Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] This Rule governs all communications about a lawyer's services, including advertising permitted by Rule 7.2. Whatever means are used to make known a lawyer's services, statements about them must be truthful.	[1] This Rule governs all communications about ~~a lawyer's~~the availability of legal services from lawyers and law firms, including advertising permitted by Rule 7.2. Whatever means are used to make known a lawyer's services, statements about them must be truthful. The requirement of truthfulness in a communication under this Rule includes representations about the law.	Comment [1] is based on Model Rule 7.1, cmt. [1]. Similar to the title, comment [1] emphasizes that proposed Rule 7.1 governs all communications "about the availability of legal services from lawyers and law firms." The Commission added the last sentence of the comment to stress that the Rule also governs representations about the law in covered communications. See Explanation of Changes, paragraph (c)(2).
[2] Truthful statements that are misleading are also prohibited by this Rule. A truthful statement is misleading if it omits a fact necessary to make the lawyer's communication considered as a whole not materially misleading. A truthful statement is also misleading if there is a substantial likelihood that it will lead a reasonable person to formulate a specific conclusion about the lawyer or the lawyer's services for which there is no reasonable factual foundation.	[2] ~~Truthful~~This Rule prohibits truthful statements that are misleading~~are also prohibited by this Rule.~~ A truthful statement is misleading if it omits a fact necessary to make the lawyer's communication considered as a whole not materially misleading. A truthful statement is also misleading if there is a substantial likelihood that it will lead a reasonable person to formulate a specific conclusion about the lawyer or the lawyer's services for which there is no reasonable factual foundation.	Comment [2] is based on Model Rule 7.1, cmt. [2]. The changes to the first sentence are made to conform to California Rule style. See, e.g., Bryan A. Garner, GUIDELINES FOR DRAFTING AND EDITING COURT RULES (1996). No change in substance is intended. The second and third sentences of comment [2] are identical to the second and third sentences of Model Rule 7.1, cmt. [2].
[3] An advertisement that truthfully reports a lawyer's achievements on behalf of clients or former clients may be misleading if presented so as to lead a reasonable person to form an unjustified expectation that the same results could be obtained for other clients in similar matters without reference	[3] An advertisement that truthfully reports a lawyer's achievements on behalf of clients or former clients may be misleading if presented so as to lead a reasonable person to form an unjustified expectation that the same results could be obtained for other clients in similar matters without reference	Comment [3] is nearly identical to Model Rule 7.1, cmt. [3]. The only change to the Model Rule comment entails revising the last sentence as follows: "The inclusion of an appropriate disclaimer or qualifying language may avoid creating unjustified expectations or otherwise misleading a prospective client." The foregoing revision is intended to address the concern that the language in

* Proposed Rule, Draft 7 (5/30/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning A Lawyer's Services Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning the Availability of Legal Services Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
to the specific factual and legal circumstances of each client's case. Similarly, an unsubstantiated comparison of the lawyer's services or fees with the services or fees of other lawyers may be misleading if presented with such specificity as would lead a reasonable person to conclude that the comparison can be substantiated. The inclusion of an appropriate disclaimer or qualifying language may preclude a finding that a statement is likely to create unjustified expectations or otherwise mislead a prospective client.	to the specific factual and legal circumstances of each client's case. Similarly, an unsubstantiated comparison of the lawyer's services or fees with the services or fees of other lawyers may be misleading if presented with such specificity as would lead a reasonable person to conclude that the comparison can be substantiated. The inclusion of an appropriate disclaimer or qualifying language may ~~preclude a finding that a statement is likely to create~~avoid creating unjustified expectations or otherwise ~~mislead~~misleading a prospective client.	comment [3] might be construed to suggest that a disclaimer is a panacea for any misstatement or misrepresentation, intended or otherwise.
	[3A] The list of communications under paragraphs (a)(1) through (a)(4) of this Rule is not exclusive. For example, a lawyer's misleading use of metatags to divert a prospective client to the web site of the lawyer or the lawyer's law firm would also be prohibited under this Rule.	Comment [5] has no counterpart in Model Rule 7.1. Comment [5] is intended to avoid the misapprehension that the list of communications in subparagraphs (a)(1) – (4) was intended to be exclusive, and gives an example of a type of communication not expressly listed (metatag) that nevertheless would be regulated under the Rule.
[4] See also Rule 8.4(e) for the prohibition against stating or implying an ability to influence improperly a government agency or official or to achieve results by means that violate the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law.	[4] See also Rule 8.4(e) for the prohibition against stating or implying an ability to influence improperly a government agency or official or to achieve results by means that violate ~~the~~these Rules ~~of Professional Conduct~~ or other law.	Comment [6] is identical to Model Rule 7.1, cmt. [4], which provides a cross-reference to Rule 8.4(e). Placing the prohibition against such statements in Rule 8.4(e) emphasizes that the prohibition is not limited to statements made in connection with the marketing of legal services. See ABA Ethics 2000 Reporter's Explanation of Changes.
	Standards Pursuant to paragraph (d), the Board of Governors has adopted the following standards related to paragraph (b) of this Rule:	Pursuant to proposed Rule 7.1(d), the Board of Governors has authority to “formulate and adopt standards as to communications that will be presumed to violate Rule 7.1, 7.2, 7.3, 7.4 or 7.5.” This provision is a carryover from current rule 1-400(E). The Commission recommends that current standards (1), (2), (13),

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning A Lawyer's Services Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning the Availability of Legal Services Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		(14), (15) and (16) be retained in paragraph (e) as standards (1), (2), (3), (4), (5) and (6), respectively. The Commission has made this recommendation on the advice of the Office of Chief Trial Counsel of the State Bar of California ("OCTC") that deleting these standards would make prosecution difficult were the conduct proscribed under those standards to occur. After reviewing these current standards, the Commission concluded that no such dilution of the effect of the Rule would be appropriate, and it therefore recommends their retention. In addition, on the recommendation of OCTC, several of the current standards have been deleted. They are current standards (3), (4), (7) and (9). OCTC's position is that they simply set forth conduct which is untruthful, deceptive or misleading in and of itself, and that a violation of the Rule can still be shown because the conduct violates proscriptions set out in Rule 7.1(b), 7.3(a) or 7.3(b). Further, the concepts in several of the current standards have been retained either as part of another rule or as part of the Discussion to another rule. They are: (i) current standard (5), which has been retained as proposed Rule 7.3(c), with modifications to conform it to the language of Model Rule 7.3(c); (ii) current standard (6), which has been retained, with modifications, as proposed Rule 7.5(a); (iii) current standard (8), which has been retained largely intact as proposed Rule 7.5(d) and the second sentence of proposed Rule 7.5, cmt. [2]; (iv) current standard (10), which has been retained, with slight modifications, as proposed Rule 7.2(b)(2); and (v) current standard (12), which has been retained as proposed Rule 7.2(c), with modifications to conform it to the language of Model Rule 7.2(c). Finally, note that standard (11) previously had been repealed, effective June 1, 1997. Its operative language was inserted as current rule 1-400(D)(6), and that language may now be found in proposed Rule 7.4(d).

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning A Lawyer's Services Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning the Availability of Legal Services Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(1) A "communication" that contains guarantees, warranties, or predictions regarding the result of the representation.	Current rule 1-400, Standard (1).
	(2) A "communication" that contains testimonials about or endorsements of a lawyer unless such communication also contains an express disclaimer such as "this testimonial or endorsement does not constitute a guarantee, warranty, or prediction regarding the outcome of your legal matter."	Current rule 1-400, Standard (2), with "lawyer" substituted for "member."
	(3) A "communication" that contains a dramatization unless such communication contains a disclaimer that states "this is a dramatization" or words of similar import.	Current rule 1-400, Standard (13).

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning A Lawyer's Services Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning the Availability of Legal Services Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	(4) A "communication" that states or implies "no fee without recovery" unless such communication also expressly discloses whether or not the client will be liable for costs.	Current rule 1-400, Standard (14).
	(5) A "communication" that states or implies that a lawyer is able to provide legal services in a language other than English unless the lawyer can actually provide legal services in such language or the communication also states in the language of the communication (a) the employment title of the person who speaks such language and (b) that the person is not a member of the State Bar of California, if that is the case.	Current rule 1-400, Standard (15), with "lawyer" substituted for "member."
	(6) An unsolicited "communication" transmitted to the general public or any substantial portion thereof primarily directed to seeking professional employment primarily for pecuniary gain that sets forth a specific fee or range of fees for a particular service where, in fact, the lawyer charges a greater fee than advertised in such communication within a period of 90 days following dissemination of such communication, unless such communication expressly specifies a shorter period of time regarding the advertised fee. Where the communication is published in the classified or "yellow pages" section of telephone, business or legal directories or in	Current rule 1-400, Standard (16).

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning A Lawyer's Services Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning the Availability of Legal Services Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule other media not published more frequently than once a year, the lawyer shall conform to the advertised fee for a period of one year from initial publication, unless such communication expressly specifies a shorter period of time regarding the advertised fee.

Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning the Availability of Legal Services

(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to the Public Comment Draft)

- (a) For purposes of Rules 7.1 through 7.5, “communication” means any message or offer made by or on behalf of a lawyer concerning the availability for professional employment of a lawyer or a lawyer’s law firm directed to any former, present, or prospective client, including but not limited to the following:
 - (1) Any use of firm name, trade name, fictitious name, or other professional designation of such lawyer or law firm; or
 - (2) Any stationery, letterhead, business card, sign, brochure, domain name, Internet web page or web site, e-mail, other material sent or posted by electronic transmission, or other writing describing such lawyer or law firm; or
 - (3) Any advertisement (regardless of medium) of such lawyer or law firm directed to the general public or any substantial portion thereof; or
 - (4) Any unsolicited correspondence, electronic transmission, or other writing from a lawyer or law firm directed to any person or entity.
- (b) A lawyer shall not make a false or misleading communication as defined herein.
- (c) A communication is false or misleading if it:
 - (1) Contains any untrue statement; or
 - (2) Contains a material misrepresentation of fact or law; or
 - (3) Contains any matter, or presents or arranges any matter in a manner or format that is false, deceptive, or that confuses, deceives, or misleads the public; or
 - (4) Omits to state any fact necessary to make the statements made, in the light of circumstances under which they are made, not materially misleading.
- (d) The Board of Governors of the State Bar may formulate and adopt standards as to communications that will be presumed to violate Rule 7.1, 7.2, 7.3, 7.4 or 7.5. The standards shall only be used as presumptions affecting the burden of proof in disciplinary proceedings involving alleged violations of these Rules. “Presumption affecting the burden of proof” means that presumption defined in Evidence Code sections 605 and 606. Such standards formulated and adopted by the Board, as from time to time amended, shall be effective and binding on all lawyers.

COMMENT

- [1] This Rule governs all communications about the availability of legal services from lawyers and law firms, including advertising permitted by Rule 7.2. Whatever means are used to make known a lawyer’s services, statements about them must be truthful. The requirement of truthfulness in a communication under this Rule includes representations about the law.

[2] This Rule prohibits truthful statements that are misleading. A truthful statement is misleading if it omits a fact necessary to make the lawyer's communication considered as a whole not materially misleading. A truthful statement is also misleading if there is a substantial likelihood that it will lead a reasonable person to formulate a specific conclusion about the lawyer or the lawyer's services for which there is no reasonable factual foundation.

[3] An advertisement that truthfully reports a lawyer's achievements on behalf of clients or former clients may be misleading if presented so as to lead a reasonable person to form an unjustified expectation that the same results could be obtained for other clients in similar matters without reference to the specific factual and legal circumstances of each client's case. Similarly, an unsubstantiated comparison of the lawyer's services or fees with the services or fees of other lawyers may be misleading if presented with such specificity as would lead a reasonable person to conclude that the comparison can be substantiated. The inclusion of an appropriate disclaimer or qualifying language may avoid creating unjustified expectations or otherwise misleading a prospective client.

~~[4] —As used in paragraph (a), "writing" means any writing as defined in the Evidence Code.~~

[53A] The list of communications under paragraphs (a)(1) through (a)(4) of this Rule is not exclusive. For example, a lawyer's intentionally misleading use of metatags to divert a prospective client to the web site of the lawyer or the lawyer's law firm would also be prohibited under this Rule.

[64] See also Rule 8.4(e) for the prohibition against stating or implying an ability to influence improperly a government agency or official or to achieve results by means that violate these Rules or other law.

Standards

Pursuant to paragraph (d), the Board of Governors has adopted the following standards related to paragraph (b) of this Rule:

- (1) A "communication" that contains guarantees, warranties, or predictions regarding the result of the representation.
- (2) A "communication" that contains testimonials about or endorsements of a lawyer unless such communication also contains an express disclaimer such as "this testimonial or endorsement does not constitute a guarantee, warranty, or prediction regarding the outcome of your legal matter."
- (3) A "communication" that contains a dramatization unless such communication contains a disclaimer that states "this is a dramatization" or words of similar import.
- (4) A "communication" that states or implies "no fee without recovery" unless such communication also expressly discloses whether or not the client will be liable for costs.
- (5) A "communication" that states or implies that a lawyer is able to provide legal services in a language other than English unless the lawyer can actually provide legal services in such language or the communication also states in the language of the communication (a) the employment title of the person who speaks such language and (b) that the person is not a member of the State Bar of California, if that is the case.

- (6) An unsolicited "communication" transmitted to the general public or any substantial portion thereof primarily directed to seeking professional employment primarily for pecuniary gain that sets forth a specific fee or range of fees for a particular service where, in fact, the lawyer charges a greater fee than advertised in such communication within a period of 90 days following dissemination of such communication, unless such communication expressly specifies a shorter period of time regarding the advertised fee. Where the communication is published in the classified or "yellow pages" section of telephone, business or legal directories or in other media not published more frequently than once a year, the lawyer shall conform to the advertised fee for a period of one year from initial publication, unless such communication expressly specifies a shorter period of time regarding the advertised fee.

Rule ~~1-400 Advertising and Solicitation~~ 7.1 Communications Concerning the Availability of Legal Services

(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

- (Aa) For purposes of ~~this rule~~ Rules 7.1 through 7.5, "communication" means any message or offer made by or on behalf of a ~~member~~ lawyer concerning the availability for professional employment of a ~~member~~ lawyer or a lawyer's law firm directed to any former, present, or prospective client, including but not limited to the following:
- (1) Any use of firm name, trade name, fictitious name, or other professional designation of such ~~member~~ lawyer or law firm; or
 - (2) Any stationery, letterhead, business card, sign, brochure, domain name, Internet web page or web site, e-mail, other material sent or posted by electronic transmission, or other ~~comparable written material~~ writing describing such ~~member, lawyer or~~ law firm, ~~or lawyers~~; or
 - (3) Any advertisement (regardless of medium) of such ~~member~~ lawyer or law firm directed to the general public or any substantial portion thereof; or
 - (4) Any unsolicited correspondence, electronic transmission, or other writing from a ~~member~~ lawyer or law firm directed to any person or entity.
- (Bb) ~~For purposes of this rule, A lawyer shall not make a "solicitation" means any false or misleading communication: as defined herein.~~
- (1) ~~Concerning the availability for professional employment of a member or a law firm in which a significant motive is pecuniary gain; and~~
- (2) Which is:
- (a) ~~delivered in person or by telephone, or~~
 - (b) ~~directed by any means to a person known to the sender to be represented by counsel in a matter which is a subject of the communication.~~
- (G) ~~A solicitation shall not be made by or on behalf of a member or law firm to a prospective client with whom the member or law firm has no family or prior professional relationship, unless the solicitation is protected from abridgment by the Constitution of the United States or by the Constitution of the State of California. A solicitation to a former or present client in the discharge of a member's or law firm's professional duties is not prohibited.~~
- (Dc) A communication is false or ~~a solicitation (as defined herein) shall not~~ misleading if it:
- (1) ~~Contain~~ Contains any untrue statement; or
 - (2) Contains a material misrepresentation of fact or law; or
- (23) ~~Contain~~ Contains any matter, or ~~present~~ presents or ~~arrange~~ arranges any matter in a manner or format ~~which~~ that is false, deceptive, or ~~which tends to confuse~~ that confuses, ~~deceive~~ deceives, or ~~mislead~~ misleads the public; or

~~(34)~~ ~~Omit~~Omits to state any fact necessary to make the statements made, in the light of circumstances under which they are made, not materially misleading ~~to the public; or.~~

~~(4)~~ ~~Fail to indicate clearly, expressly, or by context, that it is a communication or solicitation, as the case may be; or~~

~~(5)~~ ~~Be transmitted in any manner which involves intrusion, coercion, duress, compulsion, intimidation, threats, or vexatious or harassing conduct.~~

~~(6)~~ ~~State that a member is a "certified specialist" unless the member holds a current certificate as a specialist issued by the Board of Legal Specialization, or any other entity accredited by the State Bar to designate specialists pursuant to standards adopted by the Board of Governors, and states the complete name of the entity which granted certification.~~

~~(E)~~ (D) The Board of Governors of the State Bar ~~shall~~may formulate and adopt standards as to communications ~~which~~that will be presumed to violate ~~this rule 1-400~~Rule 7.1, 7.2, 7.3, 7.4 or 7.5. The standards shall only be used as presumptions affecting the burden of proof in disciplinary proceedings involving alleged violations of these ~~rules~~Rules. "Presumption affecting the burden of proof" means that presumption defined in Evidence Code sections 605 and 606. Such standards formulated and adopted by the Board, as from time to time amended, shall be effective and binding on all ~~members~~lawyers.

~~(F)~~ ~~A member shall retain for two years a true and correct copy or recording of any communication made by written or electronic media. Upon written request, the member shall make any such copy or~~

~~recording available to the State Bar, and, if requested, shall provide to the State Bar evidence to support any factual or objective claim contained in the communication.~~

COMMENT

[1] This Rule governs all communications about the availability of legal services from lawyers and law firms, including advertising permitted by Rule 7.2. Whatever means are used to make known a lawyer's services, statements about them must be truthful. The requirement of truthfulness in a communication under this Rule includes representations about the law.

[2] This Rule prohibits truthful statements that are misleading. A truthful statement is misleading if it omits a fact necessary to make the lawyer's communication considered as a whole not materially misleading. A truthful statement is also misleading if there is a substantial likelihood that it will lead a reasonable person to formulate a specific conclusion about the lawyer or the lawyer's services for which there is no reasonable factual foundation.

[3] An advertisement that truthfully reports a lawyer's achievements on behalf of clients or former clients may be misleading if presented so as to lead a reasonable person to form an unjustified expectation that the same results could be obtained for other clients in similar matters without reference to the specific factual and legal circumstances of each client's case. Similarly, an unsubstantiated comparison of the lawyer's services or fees with the services or fees of other lawyers may be misleading if presented with such specificity as would lead a reasonable person to conclude that the comparison can be substantiated. The inclusion of an appropriate disclaimer or qualifying language may avoid creating unjustified expectations or otherwise misleading a prospective client.

[3A] The list of communications under paragraphs (a)(1) through (a)(4) of this Rule is not exclusive. For example, a lawyer's misleading use of metatags to divert a prospective client to the web site of the lawyer or the lawyer's law firm would also be prohibited under this Rule.

[4] See also Rule 8.4(e) for the prohibition against stating or implying an ability to influence improperly a government agency or official or to achieve results by means that violate these Rules or other law.

Standards:

~~Pursuant to rule 1-400(E) the Board of Governors of the State Bar has adopted the following standards, effective May 27, 1989, unless noted otherwise, as forms of "communication" defined in rule 1-400(A) which are presumed to be in violation of rule 1-400:~~

Pursuant to paragraph (d), the Board of Governors has adopted the following standards related to paragraph (b) of this Rule:

- (1) A "communication" ~~which~~that contains guarantees, warranties, or predictions regarding the result of the representation.
- (2) A "communication" ~~which~~that contains testimonials about or endorsements of a ~~member~~lawyer unless such communication also contains an express disclaimer such as "this testimonial or endorsement does not constitute a guarantee, warranty, or prediction regarding the outcome of your legal matter."

~~(3) A "communication" which is delivered to a potential client whom the member knows or should reasonably know is in such a physical, emotional, or mental state that he or she would not be expected to exercise reasonable judgment as to the retention of counsel.~~

~~(4) A "communication" which is transmitted at the scene of an accident or at or en route to a hospital, emergency care center, or other health care facility.~~

~~(5) A "communication," except professional announcements, seeking professional employment for pecuniary gain, which is transmitted by mail or equivalent means which does not bear the word "Advertisement," "Newsletter" or words of similar import in 12 point print on the first page. If such communication, including firm brochures, newsletters, recent legal development advisories, and similar materials, is transmitted in an envelope, the envelope shall bear the word "Advertisement," "Newsletter" or words of similar import on the outside thereof.~~

~~(6) A "communication" in the form of a firm name, trade name, fictitious name, or other professional designation which states or implies a relationship between any member in private practice and a government agency or instrumentality or a public or non-profit legal services organization.~~

~~(7) A "communication" in the form of a firm name, trade name, fictitious name, or other professional designation which states or implies that a member has a relationship to any other lawyer or a law firm as a partner or associate, or officer or shareholder pursuant to Business and Professions Code sections 6160-6172 unless such relationship in fact exists.~~

- (8) ~~A "communication" which states or implies that a member or law firm is "of counsel" to another lawyer or a law firm unless the former has a relationship with the latter (other than as a partner or associate, or officer or shareholder pursuant to Business and Professions Code sections 6160-6172) which is close, personal, continuous, and regular.~~
- (9) ~~A "communication" in the form of a firm name, trade name, fictitious name, or other professional designation used by a member or law firm in private practice which differs materially from any other such designation used by such member or law firm at the same time in the same community.~~
- (10) ~~A "communication" which implies that the member or law firm is participating in a lawyer referral service which has been certified by the State Bar of California or as having satisfied the Minimum Standards for Lawyer Referral Services in California, when that is not the case.~~
- (11) ~~(Repealed. See rule 1-400(D)(6) for the operative language on this subject.)~~
- (12) ~~A "communication," except professional announcements, in the form of an advertisement primarily directed to seeking professional employment primarily for pecuniary gain transmitted to the general public or any substantial portion thereof by mail or equivalent means or by means of television, radio, newspaper, magazine or other form of commercial mass media which does not state the name of the member responsible for the communication. When the communication is made on behalf of a law firm, the communication shall state the name of at least one member responsible for it.~~
- (13) A "communication" ~~which~~that contains a dramatization unless such communication contains a disclaimer ~~which~~that states "this is a dramatization" or words of similar import.
- (14) A "communication" ~~which~~that states or implies "no fee without recovery" unless such communication also expressly discloses whether or not the client will be liable for costs.
- (15) A "communication" ~~which~~that states or implies that a ~~member~~lawyer is able to provide legal services in a language other than English unless the ~~member~~lawyer can actually provide legal services in such language or the communication also states in the language of the communication (a) the employment title of the person who speaks such language and (b) that the person is not a member of the State Bar of California, if that is the case.
- (16) An unsolicited "communication" transmitted to the general public or any substantial portion thereof primarily directed to seeking professional employment primarily for pecuniary gain ~~which~~that sets forth a specific fee or range of fees for a particular service where, in fact, the ~~member~~lawyer charges a greater fee than advertised in such communication within a period of 90 days following dissemination of such communication, unless such communication expressly specifies a shorter period of time regarding the advertised fee. Where the communication is published in the classified or "yellow pages" section of telephone, business or legal directories or in other media not published more frequently than once a year, the ~~member~~lawyer shall conform to the advertised fee for a period of one year from initial publication, unless such communication expressly specifies a shorter period of time regarding the advertised fee.

Rule 7.1 Communications Concerning the Availability of Legal Services

(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) For purposes of Rules 7.1 through 7.5, “communication” means any message or offer made by or on behalf of a lawyer concerning the availability for professional employment of a lawyer or a lawyer’s law firm directed to any former, present, or prospective client, including but not limited to the following:
 - (1) Any use of firm name, trade name, fictitious name, or other professional designation of such lawyer or law firm; or
 - (2) Any stationery, letterhead, business card, sign, brochure, domain name, Internet web page or web site, e-mail, other material sent or posted by electronic transmission, or other writing describing such lawyer or law firm; or
 - (3) Any advertisement (regardless of medium) of such lawyer or law firm directed to the general public or any substantial portion thereof; or
 - (4) Any unsolicited correspondence, electronic transmission, or other writing from a lawyer or law firm directed to any person or entity.
- (b) A lawyer shall not make a false or misleading communication as defined herein.
- (c) A communication is false or misleading if it:
 - (1) Contains any untrue statement; or
 - (2) Contains a material misrepresentation of fact or law; or

(3) Contains any matter, or presents or arranges any matter in a manner or format that is false, deceptive, or that confuses, deceives, or misleads the public; or

(4) Omits to state any fact necessary to make the statements made, in the light of circumstances under which they are made, not materially misleading.

- (d) The Board of Governors of the State Bar may formulate and adopt standards as to communications that will be presumed to violate Rule 7.1, 7.2, 7.3, 7.4 or 7.5. The standards shall only be used as presumptions affecting the burden of proof in disciplinary proceedings involving alleged violations of these Rules. “Presumption affecting the burden of proof” means that presumption defined in Evidence Code sections 605 and 606. Such standards formulated and adopted by the Board, as from time to time amended, shall be effective and binding on all lawyers.

COMMENT

[1] This Rule governs all communications about the availability of legal services from lawyers and law firms, including advertising permitted by Rule 7.2. Whatever means are used to make known a lawyer’s services, statements about them must be truthful. The requirement of truthfulness in a communication under this Rule includes representations about the law.

[2] This Rule prohibits truthful statements that are misleading. A truthful statement is misleading if it omits a fact necessary to make the lawyer’s communication considered as a whole not materially misleading. A truthful statement is also misleading if there is a substantial likelihood that it will lead a reasonable person to formulate a specific conclusion about the lawyer or the lawyer's services for which there is no reasonable factual foundation.

[3] An advertisement that truthfully reports a lawyer's achievements on behalf of clients or former clients may be misleading if presented so as to lead a reasonable person to form an unjustified expectation that the same results could be obtained for other clients in similar matters without reference to the specific factual and legal circumstances of each client's case. Similarly, an unsubstantiated comparison of the lawyer's services or fees with the services or fees of other lawyers may be misleading if presented with such specificity as would lead a reasonable person to conclude that the comparison can be substantiated. The inclusion of an appropriate disclaimer or qualifying language may avoid creating unjustified expectations or otherwise misleading a prospective client.

[3A] The list of communications under paragraphs (a)(1) through (a)(4) of this Rule is not exclusive. For example, a lawyer's misleading use of metatags to divert a prospective client to the web site of the lawyer or the lawyer's law firm would also be prohibited under this Rule.

[4] See also Rule 8.4(e) for the prohibition against stating or implying an ability to influence improperly a government agency or official or to achieve results by means that violate these Rules or other law.

Standards

Pursuant to paragraph (d), the Board of Governors has adopted the following standards related to paragraph (b) of this Rule:

(1) A "communication" that contains guarantees, warranties, or predictions regarding the result of the representation.

(2) A "communication" that contains testimonials about or endorsements of a lawyer unless such communication also contains an express disclaimer such as "this testimonial or endorsement does not constitute a guarantee, warranty, or prediction regarding the outcome of your legal matter."

(3) A "communication" that contains a dramatization unless such communication contains a disclaimer that states "this is a dramatization" or words of similar import.

(4) A "communication" that states or implies "no fee without recovery" unless such communication also expressly discloses whether or not the client will be liable for costs.

(5) A "communication" that states or implies that a lawyer is able to provide legal services in a language other than English unless the lawyer can actually provide legal services in such language or the communication also states in the language of the communication (a) the employment title of the person who speaks such language and (b) that the person is not a member of the State Bar of California, if that is the case.

(6) An unsolicited "communication" transmitted to the general public or any substantial portion thereof primarily directed to seeking professional employment primarily for pecuniary gain that sets forth a specific fee or range of fees for a particular service where, in fact, the lawyer charges a greater fee than advertised in such communication within a period of 90 days following dissemination of such communication, unless such communication expressly specifies a shorter period of time regarding the advertised fee. Where the communication is published in the classified or "yellow pages" section of telephone, business or legal directories or in other media not published more frequently than once a year, the lawyer shall conform to the advertised fee for a period of one year from initial publication, unless such communication expressly specifies a shorter period of time regarding the advertised fee.

Rule 7.1. Communications Concerning the Availability of Legal Services.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		COPRAC supports the adoption of Proposed Rule 7.1 and the Comments to the Rule.	No response required.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel ("OCTC")	M	Yes		OCTC supports this rule, but finds many of the Comments more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions. We support the first sentence of comment [2]. We believe Comment [4] should be in the rule. We would strike the second sentence of Comment [5]. OCTC supports the Standards attached to this rule.	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations. No response required. The Commission agrees in principle that the definition of "writing" should be in a rule, but it is found in proposed Rule 1.0.1(n). The Comment has been deleted. The Commission disagrees with the suggested deletion of the second sentence, which concerns the misleading use of metatag technology. The Commission believes that it provides an important example of the use of technology to mislead the public. No response required.
3	Orange County Bar Association ("OCBA")	M	Yes	Comments [2] and [3]	Comments [2] and [3] should be re-numbered to [2] and 2 in order to provide internal	The Commission disagrees with the suggested renumbering, which would diverge from the Model

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

Rule 7.1. Communications Concerning the Availability of Legal Services.
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					consistency, as Comment [3] is really an explanation of Comment [2]. The OCBA also recommends that more examples of truthful statements that are misleading be provided, as that term by its very nature is confusing. The portion of Comment [3] which states, “[t]he inclusion of an appropriate disclaimer or qualifying language may avoid creating unjustified expectations or otherwise misleading a prospective client” is vague and ambiguous and could be perceived as a safety net and permission to misstate all manner of things to a prospective client, provided the disclaimer is given. The OCBA believes the problem may be solved by changing the language to the following (or similar language): “The inclusion of an appropriate disclaimer or qualifying language may be used in an attempt to avoid creating unjustified expectations or otherwise misleading a prospective client, but such inclusion shall not be determinative on the issue of whether the Communication, as a whole, is misleading.” Comment [5] In Comment [5], the word “intentionally” should be removed as redundant, internally inconsistent, and confusing. It might be read as requiring an intent to mislead whereas the	Rule numbering. The Commission also does not agree that the concept of a “truthful statements that are misleading” is “confusing” or that more examples are necessary. The Commission does not agree that any further change to the identified sentence is necessary to convey the idea that the use of a disclaimer is not a panacea for a misstatement or misrepresentation, intended or otherwise. The Commission agrees with the commenter’s observation and has removed the word “intentionally.”

Rule 7.1. Communications Concerning the Availability of Legal Services. [Sorted by Commenter]
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					rules have been construed to require only that the act be intentional. The OCBA further recommends that the “Standards” be made part of the new rule itself so that the difficulty in navigating Rule 1-400 that now exists can and will be avoided. The reasons for including a separate “Standards” section in Rule 1-400 simply do not exist in this re-written rule.	The Commission disagrees that the Standards that have been retained in this Rule should be made a part of the Rule. The Commission has made its recommendation to retain the Standards on the advice of the Office of Chief Trial Counsel of the State Bar of California (“OCTC”) that deleting these standards would make prosecution difficult were the conduct proscribed under those standards to occur. After reviewing the current Standards, the Commission concluded that diluting the effect of the Standards would not be appropriate, and it therefore recommends their retention.
4	San Diego County Bar Association	M	Yes	(c)(3)	Revise (c)(3) as follows: “(3) Contains any matter, or presents or arranges any matter in a manner or format which is false, or deceptive, or which tends to confuses, deceives, or misleads the public.” Rationale: Would return (c)(3) to language in current rule 1-400(D)(2); removing “tends to” would “heighten the bar for prosecution, and correspondingly lower the public protection the rule is designed to provide.”	The Commission did not make the change. The phrase “tends to” is imprecise. Either the ad confuses, deceives or misleads the public or it does not. Retaining the proposed language creates an objective standard.

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

Rule 7.1: Communications Concerning a Lawyer's Services

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California: Rule 1-400 provides, in pertinent part, as follows:

(A) For purposes of this rule, "communication" means any message or offer made by or on behalf of a member concerning the availability for professional employment of a member or a law firm directed to any former, present, or prospective client, including but not limited to the following:

(1) Any use of firm name, trade name, fictitious name, or other professional designation of such member or law firm; or

(2) Any stationery, letterhead, business card, sign, brochure, or other comparable written material describing such member, law firm, or lawyers; or

(3) Any advertisement (regardless of medium) of such member or law firm directed to the general public or any substantial portion thereof; or

(4) Any unsolicited correspondence from a member or law firm directed to any person or entity. . . .

(C) A communication or a solicitation (as defined herein) shall not:

(1) Contain any untrue statement; or

(2) Contain any matter, or present or arrange any matter in a manner or format which is false, deceptive, or which tends to confuse, deceive, or mislead the public; or

(3) Omit to state any fact necessary to make the statements made, in the light of circumstances under which they are made, not misleading to the public; or

(4) Fail to indicate clearly, expressly, or by context, that it is a communication or solicitation, as the case may be; or

(5) Be transmitted in any manner which involves intrusion, coercion, duress, compulsion, intimidation, threats, or vexatious or harassing conduct. . . .

(E) The Board of Governors of the State Bar shall formulate and adopt standards as to communications which will be presumed to violate this rule 1-400. The standards shall only be used as presumptions affecting the burden of proof in disciplinary proceedings involving alleged violations of these rules. . . . Such standards . . . shall be effective and binding on all members.

The Standards adopted by the State Bar's Board of Governors pursuant to rule 1-400(E) are long and detailed. For example, Standards 1 and 2 provide that the following forms of communication "are presumed to be in violation of rule 1-400":

(1) A "communication" which contains guarantees, warranties, or predictions regarding the result of the representation.

(2) A "communication" which contains testimonials about or endorsements of a member unless such communication also contains an express disclaimer such as "this testimonial or endorsement does not constitute a guarantee, warranty, or prediction regarding the outcome of your legal matter."

See also Business & Professions Code §§6157-6159.2 (generally prohibiting "any false, misleading, or deceptive statement" in a lawyer advertisement; imposing detailed restrictions on advertisements containing dramatizations, impersonations, and spokespersons; and prohibiting various specific claims and techniques); California Labor Code §139.45 ("the Industrial Medical Council and the administrative director shall take particular care to preclude any advertisements with respect to industrial injuries or illnesses that are false or mislead the public with respect to workers' compensation. In promulgating rules with respect to advertising, the State Bar . . . shall also take particular care to achieve the same goal"); and California Labor Code §5432 (requiring every advertisement soliciting workers' compensation clients to state conspicuously: "Making a false or fraudulent workers' compensation claim is a felony subject to up to 5 years in prison or a fine of up to $50,000 or double the value of the fraud, whichever is greater, or by both imprisonment and fine").

Colorado: Colorado retains the pre-2002 version of ABA Model Rule 7.1(a) and adds the following paragraphs:

(b) No lawyer shall, directly or indirectly, pay all or a part of the cost of communications concerning a lawyer's services by a lawyer not in the same firm unless the communication discloses the name and address of the non-advertising lawyer, the relationship between the advertising lawyer and the non-advertising lawyer, and whether the advertising lawyer may refer any case received through the advertisement to the non-advertising lawyer.

(c) Unsolicited communications concerning a lawyer's services mailed to prospective clients shall be sent only by regular U.S. mail, not by registered mail or other forms of restricted delivery, and shall not resemble legal pleadings or other legal documents.

(d) Any communication that states or implies the client does not have to pay a fee if there is no recovery shall also disclose that the client may be liable for costs. This provision does not apply to communications that only state that contingent or percentage fee arrangements are available, or that only state the initial consultation is free.

District of Columbia: Rule 7.1(a) adds that a communication is false or misleading if it “[c]ontains an assertion about the lawyer or the lawyer’s services that cannot be substantiated.”

Florida: Florida’s lawyer advertising rules are more comprehensive and detailed than the ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct or those in any other American jurisdiction. They are often revised and defy easy summary or comparison with the ABA rules. They address in depth the content of advertisements, electronic and computer advertising, referral services, and filing requirements. Some of the more noteworthy Florida advertising and solicitation provisions appear in Selected State Variations under other rules in Article 7.

Georgia generally tracks the pre-2002 version of ABA Model Rule 7.1, but adds special subparagraphs requiring that all advertisements mentioning contingent fees or stating “no fee unless you win or collect” or any similar phrase must also conspicuously present a disclaimer stating: “Court costs and other additional expenses of legal action usually must be paid by the client. Contingent fees are not permitted in all types of cases.”

Iowa has many rules on lawyer advertising. Its version of Rule 7.1 adds the following:

(b) A lawyer shall not communicate with the public using statements that are unverifiable. In addition, advertising permitted under these rules shall not rely on emotional appeal or contain any statement or claim relating to the quality of the lawyer’s legal services.

Louisiana: In the rules effective October 1, 2009, Rule 7.1(a) identifies a non-exclusive list of advertising methods that lawyers may use. Among other variations, Rule 7.1(c) explicitly exempts from the rules any advertising that is not “motivated by pecuniary gain.”

Mississippi: Rule 7.5(a) requires that a copy or recording of any lawyer advertisement to be published must be submitted to the Office of the General Counsel of the Mississippi Bar “prior to its first dissemination” unless exempted under an extensive list in Rule 7.5(b). If a lawyer submits a proposed advertisement 45 days before its dissemination, the lawyer may request an “advisory opinion.” If the Office of the General Counsel does not respond within 45 days, the advertisement will be “deemed approved,” but if the Office of General Counsel determines within the 45-day period that there is “reasonable doubt” that the advertisement complies with the rules, it may extend the 45-day period.

Missouri: Rule 7.1 adds that a communication is false or misleading if it:

(b) is likely to create an unjustified expectation about results the lawyer can achieve;

(c) proclaims results obtained on behalf of clients, such as the amount of a damage award or the lawyer’s record in obtaining favorable verdicts or settlements, without stating that past results afford no guarantee of future results and that every case is different and must be judged on its own merits;

(d) states or implies that the lawyer can achieve results by means that violate the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law;

(e) compares the quality of a lawyer's or a law firm's services with other lawyers' services, unless the comparison can be factually substantiated;

(f) advertises for a specific type of case concerning which the lawyer has neither experience nor competence;

(g) indicates an area of practice in which the lawyer routinely refers matters to other lawyers, without conspicuous identification of such fact;

(h) contains any paid testimonial about or endorsement of the lawyer, without conspicuous identification of the fact that payment has been made for the testimonial or endorsement;

(i) contains any simulated portrayal of a lawyer, client, victim, scene, or event without conspicuous identification of the fact that it is a simulation. . . .

Nevada: Among many other variations, Rule 7.1(d) adds that a communication is false or misleading if it "contains a testimonial or endorsement which violates any portion of this Rule."

In addition, Rule 1.4(c) requires every lawyer or law firm to "have available" a "Lawyer's Biographical Data Form" that must "be provided upon request of the State Bar or a client or prospective client. . . ." Rule 1.4(c) also specifies information that must be included in the form and included with every written advertisement, and it specifies other detailed information that must be provided to a client or prospective client upon request (such as a "good faith estimate of the number of jury trials tried to a verdict by the lawyer to the present date, identifying the court or courts"). These requirements are also reinforced in Rule 1.18(g) (relating to prospective clients).

New Jersey: Rule 7.1 prohibits a lawyer from making a false or misleading communication about the lawyer, the lawyer's services, or "any matter in which the lawyer has or seeks professional involvement." A communication is false or misleading under New Jersey Rule 7.1(a) if (among other things) it "(2) is likely to create an unjustified expectation about results the lawyer can achieve," or "(3) compares the lawyer's service with other lawyers' services" or "(4) relates to legal fees other than" a specified list of permitted statements, including "the fee for an initial consultation," "fees for specifically described legal services, provided there is a reasonable disclosure of all relevant variables and considerations so that the statement would not be misunderstood or deceptive," and "specified hourly rates, provided the statement makes clear that the total charge will vary according to the number of hours devoted to the matter, and in relation to the varying hourly rates charged for the services of different individuals who may be assigned to the matter. . . ." Rule 7.1(b) makes it "unethical" for a lawyer to use an advertisement "known to have been disapproved by the Committee on Attorney Advertising, or one substantially the same as the one disapproved, until or unless modified or reversed by the Advertising Committee. . . ."

However, in In re Opinion 39 of the Committee on Attorney Advertising, 197 N.J. 66, 961 A.2d 722 (2008), the New Jersey Supreme Court vacated an opinion by its Committee on Attorney Advertising that had prohibited lawyers from using advertisements describing attorneys as “Super Lawyers,” “Best Lawyers in America,” or similar comparative titles, and the court referred the matter jointly to the Advisory Committee on Attorney Advertising, the Advisory Committee on Professional Ethics, and the Professional Responsibility Rules Committee for “expedited” review and modification of RPC 7.1(a)(2) and (3). When we went to press in September of 2009, the review was still in progress.

New York: New York adds the following definitions to Rule 1.0 (terminology):

(a) “Advertisement” means any public or private communication made by or on behalf of a lawyer or law firm about that lawyer or law firm’s services, the primary purpose of which is for the retention of the lawyer or law firm. It does not include communications to existing clients or other lawyers.

(c) “Computer-accessed communication” means any communication made by or on behalf of a lawyer or law firm that is disseminated through the use of a computer or related electronic device, including, but not limited to, web sites, weblogs, search engines, electronic mail, banner advertisements, pop-up and pop-under advertisements, chat rooms, list servers, instant messaging, or other internet presences, and any attachments or links related thereto.

Rule 7.1 varies considerably from the Model Rule and contains many unique prohibitions, requirements, and comments. For example, Rule 7.1(b) lists numerous items (e.g., “legal and nonlegal education,” “foreign language fluency,” “fees for initial consultation,” and “bona fide professional ratings”) that may be included in an advertisement. Rule 7.1(c) forbids endorsements by current clients; paid endorsements without indicating the fact of compensation; portrayal of a judge; use of a “fictitious” law firm or firm name; use of actors or depictions of fictionalized events without disclosure; “techniques to obtain attention that demonstrate a clear and intentional lack of relevance to the selection of counsel, including the portrayal of lawyers exhibiting characteristics clearly unrelated to legal competence”; advertisements “made to resemble legal documents”; and use of “a nickname, moniker, motto, or trade name that implies an ability to obtain results in a matter.” Rule 7.1(e) and (f) mandate various disclosures and disclaimers.

Several provisions of Rule 7.1(c) were held unconstitutional in Alexander v. Catalano, 2007 WL 2120024 (N.D.N.Y. 2007), and the district court enjoined the enforcement of those provisions. The district court’s decision was appealed to the Second Circuit, but the appeal was still pending when we went to press in September 2009. (Although New York adopted new rules of professional conduct after the district court’s ruling, the amendments did not alter the provisions that are the subject of the appeal.)

North Carolina retains the subparagraphs that were deleted from the pre-2002 version of ABA Model Rule 7.1. North Carolina also adds a Rule 7.1(b) providing that a “dramatization depicting a fictional situation is misleading unless it . . . contains a conspicuous written or oral statement at the beginning and end of the communication, explaining that the communication contains a dramatization and does not depict actual events or real persons.”

Ohio: Rule 7.1 also prohibits a lawyer from making or using a “nonverifiable” communication about the lawyer or the lawyer’s services.

Oregon: Rule 7.1(a) contains a list of 12 specific items that may not appear in advertisements or may only appear under particular circumstances. Actors may be used if the communication “clearly and conspicuously discloses” that status.

Pennsylvania: Rule 7.1 tracks ABA Model Rule 7.1 verbatim — but Pennsylvania Rule 7.2 contains numerous restrictions designed to prevent false or misleading communications. For example, Rule 7.2 prohibits endorsements by any celebrity or public figure; prohibits lawyers from stating or implying that they are associated together in a law firm if that is not the case; prohibits any portrayal of a client by a non-client; and prohibits the use of “pictures, or persons, which are not actual or authentic, without a disclosure that such depiction is a dramatization.” An unusual Rule 7.2(k) provides that “[i]f a lawyer or law firm advertises for a particular type of case that the lawyer or law firm ordinarily does not handle from intake through trial, that fact must be disclosed. A lawyer or law firm shall not advertise as a pretext to refer cases obtained from advertising to other lawyers.”

South Carolina: Rule 7.2(f) prohibits lawyer advertisements that are “merely self-laudatory” or that “describe or characterize the quality of the lawyer’s services;” but the provision does not apply to “information furnished to a prospective client at that person’s request or to information supplied to existing clients.”

Virginia has divided the substance of ABA Model Rule 7.1 into two separate rules. Rule 7.1 applies to all “public communication,” defined as “all communication other than ‘in-person’ communication,” while Rule 7.2 applies only to “advertising.” Rule 7.1 generally tracks the pre-2002 version of ABA Model Rule 7.1, but adds that a communication is improper if it “states or implies that the outcome of a particular legal matter was not or will not be related to its facts or merits.” Rule 7.2 governs various specific types and styles of lawyer advertising. For example, Rule 7.2(a) provides that an advertisement violates Rule 7.1 if it “(1) contains an endorsement by a celebrity or public figure who is not a client of the firm without disclosure (i) of the fact that the speaker is not a client of the lawyer or the firm, and (ii) whether the speaker is being paid for the appearance or endorsement,” or “(2) contains a portrayal of a client by a non-client without disclosure that the depiction is a dramatization,” or:

(3) advertises specific or cumulative case results, without a disclaimer that (i) puts the case results in a context that is not misleading; (ii) states that case results depend upon a variety of factors unique to each case; and (iii) further states that case results do not guarantee or predict a similar result in any future case undertaken by the lawyer. The disclaimer shall precede the communication of the case results. . . .

Proposed Rule 7.2 [RPC 1-400]

“Advertising”

(XDraft #8, 10/1/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 7.2 is the second of five proposed rules regulating lawyer marketing that track the Model Rule structure. Rule 7.2 specifically addresses advertising, a subset of communication, that typically involves communications directed at the general public.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rule

RPC 1-400.

Statute

Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6157 et seq.

Case law

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(14 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 14 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 9

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 0

Abstain 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Dissenting Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart ☐ Yes ☒ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☐ No Known Stakeholders

☒ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

Lawyers who advertise in various media and legal advertising consultants participated in the deliberations concerning this Rule.

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 7.2* Advertising

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

1. The Commission has determined that the ability of California lawyers and lawyers from other states to analyze issues concerning legal advertising and solicitation in this state would be enhanced by restating what is currently a single rule, California Rule 1-400, as five separate rules, numbered 7.1 through 7.5, that follow the organization of their ABA Model Rule counterparts. Nationally, there is marked variation among the jurisdictions in this area of lawyer regulation. The Commission believes that advertising of legal services and the solicitation of prospective clients is an area of lawyer regulation where greater national uniformity would be helpful to the public, practicing lawyers, and the courts in light of the current widespread use of the Internet by lawyers and law firms to market their services and the trend in many states toward allowing some form of multijurisdictional practice. However, the Commission has recommended departures from the Model Rules, in part to address Constitutional concerns.
2. Rule 7.1 sets out the general prohibition on a lawyer making false and misleading communications concerning the availability of legal services. Rule 7.2 specifically addresses advertising, a subset of communication, and typically involves communications directed at the general public. Rule 7.3 is concerned with regulating various means by which a lawyer seeking to market his or her services might make direct contact with a prospective client. Rule 7.4 sets out basic rules governing the communication of a lawyer's fields of practice and claims to specialization. Rule 7.5 does the same as rule 7.4 for the use of firm names and letterheads. The Commission, however, declines at this time to recommend Model Rule 7.6, which is intended to regulate political contributions made by lawyers to obtain legal work with government entities or to achieve an appointment as a judge. The Commission is still studying the feasibility of a rule analogous to Model Rule 7.6.

* Proposed Rule 7.2, XDraft 8 (10/1/09).

INTRODUCTION:

3. Proposed Rule 7.2 includes the basic concepts contained in Model Rule 7.2: a provision expressly sanctioning the use of advertising by lawyers, (see paragraph (a)); a provision identifying exceptions to the general prohibition on paying a person to recommend the lawyer's services, (see paragraph (b)); and a provision requiring identifying information in any legal advertisement to facilitate the Bar's enforcement of the rules, (see paragraph (c)).
4. Proposed Rule 7.2 diverges from the Model Rule by broadening the kinds of media in which advertising is permitted (paragraph (a)); addressing specifics of the California statutes or regulations (paragraph (b)(2)); and including provisions currently found in the California Rules (paragraph (b)(5)).
5. The Model Rule Comment has been revised to remove purely expository language, (e.g., Comment [2]) or to conform the comment to the revised Rule, (e.g., Comment [5]).
6. Variation in Other Jurisdictions. There is a wide range of variation among jurisdictions in their approach to regulating lawyer advertising and solicitation. States that have diverged widely from the Model Rules include smaller jurisdictions such as the District of Columbia, Kentucky, Mississippi and Iowa, and larger states, such as Florida, New York, and Texas. Unlike these states that have either eliminated or added to marketing restrictions in the Model Rules, the Commission recommends keeping the same basic concepts found in the Model Rules, revised only to clarify or to address unique aspects of the California statutory and regulatory landscape, and to obviate potential constitutional infirmities.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.2 Advertising	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.2 Advertising	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) Subject to the requirements of Rules 7.1 and 7.3, a lawyer may advertise services through written, recorded or electronic communication, including public media.	(a) Subject to the requirements of Rules 7.1 and 7.3, a lawyer may advertise services through any written, recorded or electronic ~~communication~~ media, including public media.	Paragraph (a) is based on Model Rule 7.2(a). Model Rule 7.2(a) was revised by the ABA Ethics 2000 Commission through the deletion of references to specific types of public media (e.g., telephone directory, newspaper) and the addition of a reference to "electronic communications". The Commission recommends substituting "media" for Model Rule word, "communication." The reference to "electronic" media has been added in recognition that much of modern advertising is accomplished through such means. Specific examples of the kinds of communications contemplated by paragraph (a), including types of electronic communications, have been added to Comment [2], with a cross-reference to the prohibition in Rule 7.3(a) of solicitation of clients through real-time electronic communications.
(b) A lawyer shall not give anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services except that a lawyer may	(b) A lawyer shall not give anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services except that a lawyer may	Paragraph (b) is based on Model Rule 7.2(b) and provides five (as opposed to the Model Rule's four) exceptions to the general prohibition against a lawyer giving anything of value to a person to recommend the lawyer's services. Paragraph (b) is intended to strike a balance between loyalty to the client, which could be adversely affected by the payment of referral fees, and a lawyer's need to pay for the legitimate costs of marketing the lawyer's legal services.

* Proposed Rule 7.2, XDraft 8 (10/1/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.2 Advertising	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.2 Advertising	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(1) pay the reasonable costs of advertisements or communications permitted by this Rule;	(1) pay the reasonable costs of advertisements or communications permitted by this Rule;	Subparagraph (b)(1) is identical to Model Rule 7.2(b)(1) and permits payment of the "reasonable costs" of advertisements. Comment [5] gives examples of kinds of costs that may be expended. A similar exception may be found in current rule 1-320, Discussion.
(2) pay the usual charges of a legal service plan or a not-for-profit or qualified lawyer referral service. A qualified lawyer referral service is a lawyer referral service that has been approved by an appropriate regulatory authority;	(2) pay the usual charges of a legal ~~service~~services plan or a ~~not-for-profit or~~ qualified lawyer referral service. A qualified lawyer referral service is a lawyer referral service ~~that has been approved by an appropriate regulatory authority~~established, sponsored and operated in accordance with the State Bar of California's minimum standards for a lawyer referral service in California;	Subparagraph (b)(2) is based on Model Rule 7.2(b)(2), with modifications to conform the Rule to the current regulatory landscape in California. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 6155 and associated regulations. The phrase "legal services" has been added to modify the word "plan" for clarity. The phrase "not-for-profit or" has been deleted because in California, a "qualified lawyer referral service" may be "not-for-profit" or "for-profit." The clause "established, sponsored and operated in accordance with the State Bar of California's minimum standards for a lawyer referral service in California" has been substituted to identify the specific regulatory mechanism in California.
(3) pay for a law practice in accordance with Rule 1.17; and	(3) pay for a law practice in accordance with Rule 1.17; and	Subparagraph (b)(3) is identical to Model Rule 7.2(b)(3).

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.2 Advertising	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.2 Advertising	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(4) refer clients to another lawyer or a nonlawyer professional pursuant to an agreement not otherwise prohibited under these Rules that provides for the other person to refer clients or customers to the lawyer, if (i) the reciprocal referral agreement is not exclusive, and (ii) the client is informed of the existence and nature of the agreement.	(4) refer clients to another lawyer or ~~a nonlawyer~~ ~~professional~~ non-lawyer pursuant to an agreement not otherwise prohibited under these Rules that provides for the other person to refer clients or customers to the lawyer, if (i) the reciprocal referral agreement is not exclusive, and (ii) the client is informed of the existence and nature of the agreement.	Subparagraph (b)(4) is nearly identical to Model Rule 7.2(b)(4), except that the word “professional” has been deleted, with the intention that subparagraph (b)(4)'s exception for reciprocal referral agreements should apply not only to other lawyers and non-lawyer “professionals,” but also to arrangements with any non-lawyer. The two qualifications to the exception in subparagraph (4)(i) and (ii) – that the reciprocal referral arrangement is non-exclusive and that the client is informed of the arrangement – remain the same as in the Model Rule.
	(5) offer or give a gift or gratuity to any person or entity having made a recommendation resulting in the employment of the lawyer or the lawyer's law firm, provided that the gift or gratuity was not offered or given in consideration of any promise, agreement, or understanding that such a gift or gratuity would be forthcoming or that referrals would be made or encouraged in the future.	Subparagraph (b)(5) has no counterpart in Model Rule 7.2. It is a carryover from the current California Rules and incorporates the concepts found in current rules 1-320(B) and 2-200(B). These latter rules address fee division or sharing with lawyers or non-lawyers. The Commission determined that this exception to the conditional prohibition on dividing fees with lawyers and the general prohibition on sharing fees with non-lawyers should be retained as a reasonable compromise between maintaining loyalty to the client and making a reasonable payment for marketing services provided the lawyer.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.2 Advertising	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.2 Advertising	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(c) Any communication made pursuant to this rule shall include the name and office address of at least one lawyer or law firm responsible for its content.	(c) Any communication made pursuant to this ~~rule~~Rule shall include the name and office address of at least one lawyer or law firm responsible for its content.	Paragraph (c) is identical to paragraph (c) of Model Rule 7.2. Model Rule 7.2(c) itself was revised by the ABA Ethics 2000 Commission through the addition of the phrase “law firm” and the requirement that the advertisement include the “office address” of the lawyer or law firm responsible for the advertisement. A lawyer’s name and office address should be sufficient to enable the State Bar disciplinary authorities to take action necessary to protect the public from false or misleading advertising. The requirement that the “office address” of the responsible lawyer or law firm be included in the advertisement was added because lawyers frequently use trade names and advertise in areas in which they do not maintain offices (e.g., providing an 800 number in local telephone directories throughout a state.) Notwithstanding the burden this requirement may place on lawyers or law firms that engage in cooperative advertising, it was believed that this information was necessary not only to enable the State Bar disciplinary authorities to track down those responsible for an advertisement, but also to provide prospective clients with information about where the lawyer or law firm is located, which may be an important factor in the prospective client’s decision to retain counsel. Comment [9], which has no counterpart in the Model Rule, specifically provides that paragraph (c) applies to lawyers who engage in group advertising. See Explanation of Changes, Comment [9].

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.2 Advertising Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.2 Advertising Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] To assist the public in obtaining legal services, lawyers should be allowed to make known their services not only through reputation but also through organized information campaigns in the form of advertising. Advertising involves an active quest for clients, contrary to the tradition that a lawyer should not seek clientele. However, the public's need to know about legal services can be fulfilled in part through advertising. This need is particularly acute in the case of persons of moderate means who have not made extensive use of legal services. The interest in expanding public information about legal services ought to prevail over considerations of tradition. Nevertheless, advertising by lawyers entails the risk of practices that are misleading or overreaching.	[1] To assist the public in obtaining legal services, lawyers should be allowed to make known their services not only through reputation but also through ~~organized information campaigns in the form of advertising. Advertising involves an active quest for clients, contrary to the tradition that a lawyer should not seek clientele. However, the~~ The public's need to know about legal services ~~can be fulfilled in part through advertising. This need~~ is particularly acute in the case of persons of moderate means who have not made extensive use of legal services. ~~The interest in expanding public information about legal services ought to prevail over considerations of tradition. Nevertheless~~ Lawyers must be aware, however, that advertising by ~~lawyers~~ them entails the risk of practices that are misleading or overreaching.	The Commission recommends that Model Rule 7.2, cmt. [1], be revised to remove the Model Rule's expository language, which provides no guidance beyond that provided by the language the Commission recommends.
[2] This Rule permits public dissemination of information concerning a lawyer's name or firm name, address and telephone number; the kinds of services the lawyer will undertake; the basis on which the lawyer's fees are determined, including prices for specific services and payment and credit arrangements; a lawyer's foreign language ability; names of references and, with their consent, names of clients regularly represented; and other information that might invite the attention of those seeking legal assistance.	[2] This Rule permits public dissemination of information concerning a lawyer's name or firm name, address and telephone number; the kinds of services the lawyer will undertake; the basis on which the lawyer's fees are determined, including prices for specific services and payment and credit arrangements; a lawyer's foreign language ability; names of references and, with their consent, names of clients regularly represented; and other information that might invite the attention of those seeking legal assistance.	Proposed Comment [1] is identical to Model Rule 7.2, cmt. [2].

* Proposed Rule 7.2, Draft 8 (10/1/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.2 Advertising Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.2 Advertising Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[3] Questions of effectiveness and taste in advertising are matters of speculation and subjective judgment. Some jurisdictions have had extensive prohibitions against television advertising, against advertising going beyond specified facts about a lawyer, or against "undignified" advertising. Television is now one of the most powerful media for getting information to the public, particularly persons of low and moderate income; prohibiting television advertising, therefore, would impede the flow of information about legal services to many sectors of the public. Limiting the information that may be advertised has a similar effect and assumes that the bar can accurately forecast the kind of information that the public would regard as relevant. Similarly, electronic media, such as the Internet, can be an important source of information about legal services, and lawful communication by electronic mail is permitted by this Rule. But see Rule 7.3(a) for the prohibition against the solicitation of a prospective client through a real-time electronic exchange that is not initiated by the prospective client.	~~[3] Questions of effectiveness and taste in advertising are matters of speculation and subjective judgment. Some jurisdictions have had extensive prohibitions against television advertising, against advertising going beyond specified facts about a lawyer, or against "undignified" advertising. Television is now one of the most powerful media for getting information to the public, particularly persons of low and moderate income; prohibiting television advertising, therefore, would impede the flow of information about legal services to many sectors of the public. Limiting the information that may be advertised has a similar effect and assumes that the bar can accurately forecast the kind of information that the public would regard as relevant. Similarly, electronic media, such as the Internet, can be an important source of information about legal services, and lawful communication by electronic mail is permitted by this Rule. But see Rule 7.3(a) for the prohibition against the solicitation of a prospective client through a real-time electronic exchange that is not initiated by the prospective client.~~ This Rule permits advertising by electronic media, including but not limited to television, radio and the Internet. But see Rule 7.3(a) concerning real-time electronic communications with prospective clients.	Comment [3], addresses the same general subject matter as Comment [3] to Model Rule 7.2, but has been significantly truncated to delete the purely expository language in the Model Rule. Proposed comment [2] is limited to providing specific examples of electronic communications that are permitted, including the Internet, with a cross-reference to the prohibition in Rule 7.3(a) of solicitation of clients through real-time electronic communications.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.2 Advertising Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.2 Advertising Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[4] Neither this Rule nor Rule 7.3 prohibits communications authorized by law, such as notice to members of a class in class action litigation.	[4] Neither this Rule nor Rule 7.3 prohibits communications authorized by law, such as ~~notice to members of a class in~~court-approved class action ~~litigation~~notices.	Comment [4] is identical to Model Rule 7.2, cmt. [4], except that the Model Rule's reference to class action notices has been revised to clarify that only court-approved notices fall outside this Rule.
Paying Others to Recommend a Lawyer [5] Lawyers are not permitted to pay others for channeling professional work. Paragraph (b)(1), however, allows a lawyer to pay for advertising and communications permitted by this Rule, including the costs of print directory listings, on-line directory listings, newspaper ads, television and radio airtime, domain-name registrations, sponsorship fees, banner ads, and group advertising. A lawyer may compensate employees, agents and vendors who are engaged to provide marketing or client-development services, such as publicists, public-relations personnel, business-development staff and website designers. See Rule 5.3 for the duties of lawyers and law firms with respect to the conduct of nonlawyers who prepare marketing materials for them.	Paying Others to Recommend a Lawyer [5] Lawyers are not permitted to pay others for channeling professional work. Paragraph (b)(1), however, allows a lawyer to pay for advertising and communications permitted by this Rule, including the costs of print directory listings, on-line directory listings, newspaper ads, television and radio airtime, domain-name registrations, sponsorship fees, banner ads, and group advertising. A lawyer may also compensate employees, agents and vendors who are engaged to provide marketing or client-development services, such as publicists, public-relations personnel, business-development staff and website designers. See Rule 5.3 for the duties of lawyers and law firms with respect to the conduct of nonlawyers who prepare marketing materials for them.	Comment [5] is based on Model Rule 7.2, cmt. [5], which provides examples of advertising and communications for which payment is permitted under subparagraph (b)(1). Comment [5] is nearly identical to the Model Rule comment except that the word "also" has been added to emphasize that not only may lawyers engage the services of advertisers, but may also retain intermediaries to help them obtain those services. The Commission recommends not carrying forward current rule 1-320(C), because the substance of that provision is already contained in paragraph (b) and this comment. Current rule 1-320(C) provides: (C) A member shall not compensate, give, or promise anything of value to any representative of the press, radio, television, or other communication medium in anticipation of or in return for publicity of the member, the law firm, or any other member as such in a news item, but the incidental provision of food or beverage shall not of itself violate this rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.2 Advertising Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.2 Advertising Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[6] A lawyer may pay the usual charges of a legal service plan or a not-for-profit or qualified lawyer referral service. A legal service plan is a prepaid or group legal service plan or a similar delivery system that assists prospective clients to secure legal representation. A lawyer referral service, on the other hand, is any organization that holds itself out to the public as a lawyer referral service. Such referral services are understood by laypersons to be consumer-oriented organizations that provide unbiased referrals to lawyers with appropriate experience in the subject matter of the representation and afford other client protections, such as complaint procedures or malpractice insurance requirements. Consequently, this Rule only permits a lawyer to pay the usual charges of a not-for-profit or qualified lawyer referral service. A qualified lawyer referral service is one that is approved by an appropriate regulatory authority as affording adequate protections for prospective clients. See, e.g., the American Bar Association's Model Supreme Court Rules Governing Lawyer Referral Services and Model Lawyer Referral and Information Service Quality Assurance Act (requiring that organizations that are identified as lawyer referral services (i) permit the participation of all lawyers who are licensed and eligible to practice in the jurisdiction and who meet reasonable objective eligibility requirements as may be established by the referral service for the protection of prospective	~~[6] A lawyer may pay the usual charges of a legal service plan or a not-for-profit or qualified lawyer referral service. A legal service plan is a prepaid or group legal service plan or a similar delivery system that assists prospective clients to secure legal representation. A lawyer referral service, on the other hand, is any organization that holds itself out to the public as a lawyer referral service. Such referral services are understood by laypersons to be consumer-oriented organizations that provide unbiased referrals to lawyers with appropriate experience in the subject matter of the representation and afford other client protections, such as complaint procedures or malpractice insurance requirements. Consequently, this Rule only permits a lawyer to pay the usual charges of a not-for-profit or qualified lawyer referral service. A qualified lawyer referral service is one that is approved by an appropriate regulatory authority as affording adequate protections for prospective clients. See, e.g., the American Bar Association's Model Supreme Court Rules Governing Lawyer Referral Services and Model Lawyer Referral and Information Service Quality Assurance Act (requiring that organizations that are identified as lawyer referral services (i) permit the participation of all lawyers who are licensed and eligible to practice in the jurisdiction and who meet reasonable objective eligibility requirements as may be established by the referral service for the protection of prospective~~	Comment [6] addresses the same substantive concepts as does Model Rule 7.2, cmt. [6], which elaborates on the exception contained in subparagraph (b)(2). However, the language of Model Rule 7.2, cmt. [6] has been replaced with a specific reference to the applicable California statutes that regulate lawyer referral services in this state.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.2 Advertising Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.2 Advertising Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule clients; (ii) require each participating lawyer to carry reasonably adequate malpractice insurance; (iii) act reasonably to assess client satisfaction and address client complaints; and (iv) do not refer prospective clients to lawyers who own, operate or are employed by the referral service.)	~~clients; (ii) require each participating lawyer to carry reasonably adequate malpractice insurance; (iii) act reasonably to assess client satisfaction and address client complaints; and (iv) do not refer prospective clients to lawyers who own, operate or are employed by the referral service.)~~ Paragraph (b)(2) permits a lawyer to pay the usual charges of a group or pre-paid legal service plan exempt from registration under Business & Professions Code section 6155(c). Paragraph (b)(2) permits a lawyer to pay the usual charges of a qualified lawyer referral service established, sponsored and operated in accordance with the State Bar of California's minimum standards for a lawyer referral service in California. See Business & Professions Code, section 6155, and rules and regulations pursuant thereto. See also Rule 5.4(a)(4).

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.2 Advertising Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.2 Advertising Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[7] A lawyer who accepts assignments or referrals from a legal service plan or referrals from a lawyer referral service must act reasonably to assure that the activities of the plan or service are compatible with the lawyer's professional obligations. See Rule 5.3. Legal service plans and lawyer referral services may communicate with prospective clients, but such communication must be in conformity with these Rules. Thus, advertising must not be false or misleading, as would be the case if the communications of a group advertising program or a group legal services plan would mislead prospective clients to think that it was a lawyer referral service sponsored by a state agency or bar association. Nor could the lawyer allow in-person, telephonic, or real-time contacts that would violate Rule 7.3.	[7] A lawyer who accepts assignments or referrals from a legal service plan or referrals from a lawyer referral service must act reasonably to assure that the activities of the plan or service are compatible with the lawyer's professional obligations. See ~~Rule~~Rules 5.3 and 5.4. Legal service plans and lawyer referral services may communicate with prospective clients, but such communication must be in conformity with these Rules. Thus, advertising must not be false or misleading, as would be the case if the communications of a group advertising program or a group legal services plan would mislead prospective clients to think that it was a lawyer referral service sponsored by a state agency or bar association. Nor could the lawyer allow in-person, telephonic, or real-time contacts that would violate Rule 7.3.	Comment [7] is identical to Model Rule 7.2, cmt. [7], except for the addition of a reference to proposed Rule 5.4. Among other things, Rule 5.4 prohibits a lawyer sharing fees or entering into partnerships with non-lawyers, concerns that are evident in the regulatory framework of lawyer referral services.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.2 Advertising Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.2 Advertising Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[8] A lawyer also may agree to refer clients to another lawyer or a nonlawyer professional, in return for the undertaking of that person to refer clients or customers to the lawyer. Such reciprocal referral arrangements must not interfere with the lawyer's professional judgment as to making referrals or as to providing substantive legal services. See Rules 2.1 and 5.4(c). Except as provided in Rule 1.5(e), a lawyer who receives referrals from a lawyer or nonlawyer professional must not pay anything solely for the referral, but the lawyer does not violate paragraph (b) of this Rule by agreeing to refer clients to the other lawyer or nonlawyer professional, so long as the reciprocal referral agreement is not exclusive and the client is informed of the referral agreement. Conflicts of interest created by such arrangements are governed by Rule 1.7. Reciprocal referral agreements should not be of indefinite duration and should be reviewed periodically to determine whether they comply with these Rules. This Rule does not restrict referrals or divisions of revenues or net income among lawyers within firms comprised of multiple entities.	[8] ~~A~~Paragraph (b)(4) permits a lawyer ~~also may agree to refer clients~~make referrals to another ~~lawyer or a nonlawyer professional~~, in return for the undertaking of that person to refer clients or customers to the lawyer. Such reciprocal referral arrangements must not interfere with the lawyer's professional judgment as to making referrals or as to providing substantive legal services. See ~~Rules 2.1 and Rule 5.4 (c). Except as provided in Rule 1.5(e), a lawyer who receives referrals from a lawyer or nonlawyer professional must not pay anything solely for the referral, but the A~~ lawyer does not violate paragraph (b)(4) of this Rule by agreeing to refer clients ~~to the other lawyer or nonlawyer professional~~customers to another, so long as the reciprocal referral agreement is not exclusive and the client is informed of the referral agreement. Conflicts of interest created by ~~such~~ arrangements made pursuant to paragraph (b)(4) are governed by Rule 1.7. Reciprocal referral agreements should not be of indefinite duration and should be reviewed periodically to determine whether they comply with these Rules. This Rule does not restrict referrals or divisions of revenues or net income among lawyers within ~~firms~~a law firm comprised of multiple entities. A division of fees between or among lawyers not in the same law firm is governed by Rule 1.5.1.	Comment [8] is based on Model Rule 7.2, cmt. [8]. It elaborates on the exception to payment for referrals in subparagraph (b)(4), which permits reciprocal referral arrangements with lawyers and non-lawyers so long as those arrangements are not exclusive and the client or customer is informed of the arrangement. A cross-reference to proposed Rule 5.4(c), which is the counterpart to Model Rule 5.4(c), has been included to emphasize that a lawyer may not permit the referring person to interfere with the lawyer's independent judgment.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.2 Advertising Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.2 Advertising Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	Required information in advertisements [9] Paragraph (c) also applies to a group of lawyers that engages in cooperative advertising. Any such communication made pursuant to this Rule shall include the name and office address of at least one member of the group responsible for its content. See also Business & Professions Code section 6155(h). See also Business & Professions Code section 6159.1, concerning the requirement to retain any advertisement for one year.	Comment [9] has no counterpart in Model Rule 7.2. The two sentences of Comment [8] emphasize that paragraph (c)'s requirement of including the name of a lawyer or law firm and the lawyer's or law firm's office address in any advertisement also applies to a group of lawyers that engages in cooperative advertising. Comment [8] includes a reference to California Business & Professions Code § 6155(h), which relates to lawyers jointly advertising their services. Comment [9] also includes a cross-reference to California Business & Professions Code § 6159.1, concerning the requirement to retain any advertisement for a period of one year. Notwithstanding the inclusion of this cross-reference, the Commission has followed the ABA in recommending the removal of the requirement to retain for a period of two years a copy of "any communication made by written or electronic media," currently found in CRPC 1-400(F). The Commission has also voted to recommend that the State Bar seek the repeal of section 6159.1 and, if the Legislature agrees, the cross-reference to section 6159.1 will be removed. See proposed Rule 7.1, Introduction.

Rule 7.2 Advertising
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) Subject to the requirements of Rules 7.1 and 7.3, a lawyer may advertise services through any written, recorded or electronic media, including public media.
- (b) A lawyer shall not give anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services except that a lawyer may
 - (1) pay the reasonable costs of advertisements or communications permitted by this Rule;
 - (2) pay the usual charges of a legal services plan or a qualified lawyer referral service. A qualified lawyer referral service is a lawyer referral service established, sponsored and operated in accordance with the State Bar of California's minimum standards for a lawyer referral service in California;
 - (3) pay for a law practice in accordance with Rule 1.17; and
 - (4) refer clients to another lawyer or non-lawyer pursuant to an agreement not otherwise prohibited under these Rules that provides for the other person to refer clients or customers to the lawyer, if
 - (i) the reciprocal referral agreement is not exclusive, and
 - (ii) the client is informed of the existence and nature of the agreement.
- (5) offer or give a gift or gratuity to any person or entity having made a recommendation resulting in the employment of the lawyer or the lawyer's law firm, provided that the gift or gratuity was not offered or given in consideration of any promise, agreement, or understanding that such a gift or gratuity would be forthcoming or that referrals would be made or encouraged in the future.
- (c) Any communication made pursuant to this Rule shall include the name and office address of at least one lawyer or law firm responsible for its content.

COMMENT

- [1] To assist the public in obtaining legal services, lawyers should be allowed to make known their services not only through reputation but also through advertising. The public's need to know about legal services is particularly acute in the case of persons of moderate means who have not made extensive use of legal services. Lawyers must be aware, however, that advertising by them entails the risk of practices that are misleading or overreaching.
- [2] This Rule permits public dissemination of information concerning a lawyer's name or firm name, address and telephone number; the kinds of services the lawyer will undertake; the basis on which the lawyer's fees are determined, including prices for specific services and payment and credit arrangements; a lawyer's foreign language ability; names of references and, with their consent, names of clients regularly represented; and other information that might invite the attention of those seeking legal assistance.

- [3] This Rule permits advertising by electronic media, including but not limited to television, radio and the Internet. But see Rule 7.3(a) concerning real-time electronic communications with prospective clients.
- [4] Neither this Rule nor Rule 7.3 prohibits communications authorized by law, such as court-approved class action notices.

Paying Others to Recommend a Lawyer

- [5] Lawyers are not permitted to pay others for channeling professional work. Paragraph (b)(1), however, allows a lawyer to pay for advertising and communications permitted by this Rule, including the costs of print directory listings, on-line directory listings, newspaper ads, television and radio airtime, domain-name registrations, sponsorship fees, banner ads, and group advertising. A lawyer may also compensate employees, agents and vendors who are engaged to provide marketing or client-development services, such as publicists, public-relations personnel, business-development staff and website designers. See Rule 5.3 for the duties of lawyers and law firms with respect to the conduct of nonlawyers who prepare marketing materials for them.
- [6] Paragraph (b)(2) permits a lawyer to pay the usual charges of a group or pre-paid legal service plan exempt from registration under Business and Professions Code section 6155(c). Paragraph (b)(2) permits a lawyer to pay the usual charges of a qualified lawyer referral service established, sponsored and operated in accordance with the State Bar of California's minimum standards for a lawyer referral service in California. See Business and Professions Code, section 6155, and rules and regulations pursuant thereto. See also Rule 5.4(a)(4).

- [7] A lawyer who accepts assignments or referrals from a legal service plan or referrals from a lawyer referral service must act reasonably to assure that the activities of the plan or service are compatible with the lawyer's professional obligations. See Rules 5.3 and 5.4. Legal service plans and lawyer referral services may communicate with prospective clients, but such communication must be in conformity with these Rules. Thus, advertising must not be false or misleading, as would be the case if the communications of a group advertising program or a group legal services plan would mislead prospective clients to think that it was a lawyer referral service sponsored by a state agency or bar association. Nor could the lawyer allow in-person, telephonic, or real-time contacts that would violate Rule 7.3.
- [8] Paragraph (b)(4) permits a lawyer to make referrals to another, in return for the undertaking of that person to refer clients or customers to the lawyer. Such reciprocal referral arrangements must not interfere with the lawyer's professional judgment as to making referrals or as to providing substantive legal services. See Rule 5.4(c). A lawyer does not violate paragraph (b)(4) of this Rule by agreeing to refer clients or customers to another, so long as the reciprocal referral agreement is not exclusive and the client is informed of the referral agreement. Conflicts of interest created by arrangements made pursuant to paragraph (b)(4) are governed by Rule 1.7. Reciprocal referral agreements should not be of indefinite duration and should be reviewed periodically to determine whether they comply with these Rules. This Rule does not restrict referrals or divisions of revenues or net income among lawyers within a law firm comprised of multiple entities. A division of fees between or among lawyers not in the same law firm is governed by Rule 1.5.1.

Required information in advertisements

- [9] Paragraph (c) also applies to a group of lawyers that engages in cooperative advertising. Any such communication made pursuant to this Rule shall include the name and office address of at least one member of the group responsible for its content. See also Business and Professions Code section 6155(h). See also Business and Professions Code section 6159.1, concerning the requirement to retain any advertisement for one year.

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

Rule 7.2. Advertising
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Berman, Myles L.	M	No	7.2(c)	I am opposed to the language that requires an office address. While it is extremely important for the responsible advertising attorney to be identified in any advertisement, this goal can be accomplished by requiring the naming of one lawyer or law firm with a telephone number instead of an address who is responsible for the ads content. Mass advertising in print media such as newspapers is read by millions of California consumers in hundreds of different cities and numerous counties. The same is true for radio and TV ads. Print advertising space and radio/TV ads are often times limited in space and time. In addition, many law practices have more than one location. Once a potential contacts an attorney, the client will then automatically know the exact office location of the attorney called. Clients often times are looking for good quality attorneys who advertise. Requiring an office address to be included in legal ads serves no legitimate consumer protection. I have not heard of any case where a client was harmed because the client did not know the address of the attorney or attorneys hired.	The suggested change was not made. The requirement that the "office address" of the responsible lawyer or law firm be included in the advertisement is a verbatim adoption of the Model Rule language. It was added because lawyers frequently use trade names and advertise in areas in which they do not maintain offices (e.g., providing an 800 number in local telephone directories throughout a state.) The Commission determined that this information was necessary not only to enable the State Bar disciplinary authorities to track down those responsible for an advertisement, but also to provide prospective clients with information about where the lawyer or law firm is located, which may be an important factor in the prospective client's decision to retain counsel. As noted in other jurisdictions, "[t]he absence of a street address in a widely disseminated advertisement could be misleading by suggesting a physical proximity to the recipient that does not in fact exist and by suggesting the ability to serve in jurisdictions in which the advertising firm or lawyer is not qualified to practice." See, e.g., N.Y. State Ethics Op. 756 (3/13/02), available at: http://www.nysba.org/AM/Template.cfm?Section=Ethics_Opinions&CONTENTID=18770&TEMPLATE=/CM/ContentDisplay.cfm [last visited 5/22/10]

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

Rule 7.2. Advertising
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
2	COPRAC	A	Yes		COPRAC supports the adoption of Proposed Rule 7.2 and the Comments to the Rule.	No response necessary.
3	Office of Chief Trial Counsel ("OCTC")	M	Yes		OCTC supports this rule, but many of the Comments are more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions. It supports Comments [6], [9], and the first two sentences of Comment [7] and the last sentence of Comment [7].	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.
4	San Diego Co. Bar Ass'n	M	Yes	Cmt. [6]	Requests that the ABA Model Rule definitions in Comment [6] for "legal services plan" and "lawyer referral service" be retained. The proposed retention would result in keeping the second, third and fourth sentences of Comment [6] to the ABA Model Rule 7.2.	The Commission did not make the change. Comment [6] was revised to reflect the specific regulatory framework governing lawyer referral services in California. The definitions are not accurate within the California framework. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 6155.

Rule 7.2: Advertising

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Arizona omits Rule 7.2(b)(4) (governing reciprocal referral agreements), and adds Rule 7.2(d), which sets forth detailed requirements for all advertisements containing information about legal fees. Arizona also adds Rule 7.2(e), which provides:

(e) . . . If a law firm advertises on electronic media and a person appears purporting to be a lawyer, such person shall in fact be a lawyer employed full-time at the advertising law firm. If a law firm advertises a particular legal service on electronic media, and a lawyer appears as the person purporting to render the service, the lawyer appearing shall be the lawyer who will actually perform the service advertised unless the advertisement discloses that the service may be performed by other lawyers in the firm.

Finally, Arizona adds Rule 7.2(f), which requires that certain information be “clear and conspicuous.”

Arkansas permits actors to be used in advertisements so long as they are identified by name and relationship to the advertising lawyer. Dramatizations are forbidden. Clients and former clients “shall not be used in any manner whatsoever in advertisements.”

California: Rule 1-320 provides, in pertinent part, as follows:

(A) Neither a member nor a law firm shall directly or indirectly share legal fees with a person who is not a lawyer, except that . . .

(4) A member may pay a prescribed registration, referral, or participation fee to a lawyer referral service established, sponsored, and operated in accordance with the State Bar of California’s Minimum Standards for a Lawyer Referral Service in California.

(B) A member shall not compensate, give, or promise anything of value to any person or entity for the purpose of recommending or securing employment of the member or the member’s law firm by a client, or as a reward for having made a recommendation resulting in employment of the member or the member’s law firm by a client. A member’s offering of or giving a gift or gratuity to any person or entity having made a recommendation resulting in the employment of the member or the member’s law firm shall not of itself violate this rule, provided that the gift or gratuity was not offered or given in consideration of any promise, agreement, or understanding that such a gift or gratuity would be forthcoming or that referrals would be made or encouraged in the future.

(C) A member shall not compensate, give, or promise anything of value to any representative of the press, radio, television, or other communication medium in anticipation of or in return for publicity of the member, the law firm, or any other member as such in a news item, but the incidental provision of food or beverage shall not of itself violate this rule.

Rule 1-400(F) provides:

(D) A member shall retain for two years a true and correct copy or recording of any communication made by written or electronic media. Upon written request, the member shall make any such copy or recording available to the State Bar, and, if requested, shall provide to the State Bar evidence to support any factual or objective claim contained in the communication.

The Standards adopted by the State Bar pursuant to Rule 1-400 provide that a communication is “presumed to be in violation of rule 1-400” if it “implies that the member or law firm is participating in a lawyer referral service which has been certified by the State Bar of California or as having satisfied the Minimum Standards for Lawyer Referral Services in California, when that is not the case.” Rule 1-600(B) provides that the State Bar’s Board of Governors “shall formulate and adopt Minimum Standards for Lawyer Referral Services, which . . . shall be binding on members.” Those standards are found after California Business & Professions Code §6155, which governs lawyer referral services.

Also relevant to ABA Model Rule 7.2 are Business & Professions Code §6129 (prohibiting lawyers from purchasing claims) and §§ 6157.1-6159.2 (governing lawyer advertising, especially in the electronic media).

Connecticut adds many paragraphs with no counterpart in ABA Model Rule 7.2 but omits ABA Model Rule 7.2(b)(4) (regarding reciprocal referral agreements).

District of Columbia omits ABA Model Rule 7.2, but D.C. Rule 7.1(c) provides that a lawyer “shall not knowingly assist an organization that furnishes or pays for legal services to others to promote the use of the lawyer’s services . . . as a private practitioner, if the promotional activity involves the use of coercion, duress, compulsion, intimidation, threats, or vexatious or harassing conduct.”

Florida: Rule 4-7.1 permits attorneys to advertise through “computer-accessed communications” and through “recorded messages the public may access by dialing a telephone number.” Rule 4-7.4(b)(2) provides that “[e]very written communication disseminated by a lawyer referral service shall be accompanied by a written statement detailing the background, training, and experience of each lawyer to whom the recipient may be referred.” Rule 4-7.10 sets forth elaborate requirements for lawyer referral services. In addition, Chapter 8 of the Rules Regulating the Florida Bar sets forth extensive requirements for the operation of lawyer referral services by local bar associations, and no local bar association may operate a referral service absent express approval from the state bar.

Georgia moves Rule 7.2(b) and its Comment to Georgia Rule 7.3(c), and modifies and expands the exceptions in ABA Model Rule 7.2(c) regarding lawyer referral services.

Iowa: Rule 7.2 does not govern communications between lawyers, but prohibits any “visual display” on television unless the same display would be “allowed in print”; prohibits “background sound” in electronic media; and expressly permits lawyers to communicate 14 items to the public provided if it is done “in a dignified style.” Rule 7.2 also imposes extensive limitations on advertising fee information; and requires any communication advising the institution of litigation to “disclose that the filing of a claim or suit solely to coerce a settlement or to harass another could be illegal and could render the person so filing liable for malicious prosecution or abuse of process.” In addition, borrowing from the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility, Iowa has a detailed rule (Rule 7.7) called “Recommendation of Professional Employment” and another (Rule 7.8) on “Suggestion of Need of Legal Services.”

Louisiana: In the rules effective October 1, 2009, Louisiana Rule 7.2 is considerably more detailed than Model Rule 7.2. Among other variations, 7.2(c) prohibits any advertising that could be “false, misleading or deceptive” and includes a lengthy list of advertising methods that would violate the rule. The rule also contains many other restrictions, such as provisions related to how long a lawyer must honor an advertised fee and an unusual provision concerning the use of dual language advertisements. Finally, subject to some exceptions in Rule 7.8, Rule 7.7 requires lawyers to file their advertising with the Louisiana State Bar Association, which is charged with ensuring that advertising complies with the advertising rules.

Maine: In the rules effective August 1, 2009, Maine Rule 7.2-A offers a variety of aspirational goals for lawyer advertising, including that lawyers use “dignified” advertisements and avoid “crass” marketing that “undermines the serious purpose of legal services and the judicial system.”

Maryland: Among other variations, Maryland adds Rule 7.2(e), which provides that “[a]n advertisement or communication indicating that no fee will be charged in the absence of a recovery shall also disclose whether the client will be liable for any expenses,” and Rule 7.2(f), which requires lawyers, including those participating in an advertising group or lawyer referral service, to be “personally responsible for compliance with the provisions of Rules 7.1, 7.2, 7.3, 7.4, and 7.5.”

Massachusetts: Rule 7.2(a) adds that lawyers may advertise in “an electronic or computer accessed directory.” Comment 3A provides, in part, as follows:

The advertising and solicitation rules can generally be applied to computer-accessed or other similar types of communications by analogizing the communication to its hard-copy form. Thus, because it is not a communication directed to a specific recipient, a web site or home page would generally be considered advertising subject to this rule, rather than solicitation subject to Rule 7.3. . . .

Michigan: Rule 6.3(b) permits a lawyer to “participate in and pay the usual charges of a not-for-profit lawyer referral service that recommends legal services to the public” only if the referral service meets detailed requirements, including that the service:

(3) is open to all lawyers licensed and eligible to practice in this state who maintain an office within the geographical area served, and who:

(i) meet reasonable and objective requirements of experience . . . ;

(ii) pay reasonable registration and membership fees not to exceed an amount established by the State Bar to encourage widespread lawyer participation; and

(iii) maintain a policy of errors and omissions insurance, or provide proof of financial responsibility, in an amount at least equal to the minimum established by the State Bar.

(4) ensures that the combined fees and expenses charged a prospective client by a qualified service and a lawyer to whom the client is referred not exceed the total charges the client would have incurred had no referral service been involved. . . .

Under Rule 6.3(d), the State Bar or “any aggrieved person” may seek an injunction against violations of Rule 6.3(b), and if the injunction is granted, the petitioner shall be entitled to reasonable costs and attorney fees.

Missouri: Rule 7.2(a) adds permission to advertise “through direct mail advertising distributed generally to persons not known to need legal services of the kind provided by the lawyer in a particular matter.” Missouri omits ABA Model Rule 7.2(b)(4). Rule 7.2(d) provides that a lawyer may not “pay all or a part of the cost of an advertisement in the public media unless such advertisement discloses the name and address of the financing lawyer, the relationship between the advertising lawyer and the financing lawyer, and whether the advertising lawyer is likely to refer cases received through the advertisement to the financing lawyer.” In addition, Rules 7.2(f) and (g) require all advertisements (except targeted letters and emails and advertisements limited to specified basic information such as name, address, and fields of practice) to state the following: “The choice of a lawyer is an important decision and should not be based solely upon advertisements.”

Nevada: Rule 7.2(b) provides, in part, as follows:

If a person appears as a lawyer in an advertisement for legal services . . . such person must be a member of the State Bar of Nevada . . . and must be the lawyer who will actually perform the service advertised or a lawyer associated with the law firm that is advertising. If a person appears in an advertisement as an employee of a lawyer or law firm, such person must be an actual employee of the lawyer or law firm whose services are advertised unless the advertisement discloses that such person is an actor. If an actor appears in any other role not prohibited by these Rules, the advertisement must disclose that such person is an actor.

Among other variations, Nevada Rule 7.2A requires lawyers to file all advertisements with the State Bar “within 15 days of first dissemination. . . .” Rule 7.2B(a) commands the State Bar to create “Standing Lawyer Advertising Advisory Committees . . . to review filings submitted under Rule 7.2A and to respond to written requests from an advertising lawyer or law firm voluntarily seeking an advance opinion regarding that lawyer’s compliance with the advertising rules.” Rule 7.2B(c) permits a lawyer or law firm to “file a written request with the state bar seeking an advance opinion on whether a proposed advertisement complies with these Rules.”

New Hampshire: Rule 7.2(b)(2) permits payment only to “an organization that is recognized by the Internal Revenue Service as exempt from taxation pursuant to Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code.” New Hampshire omits ABA Model Rule 7.2(b)(4) (governing reciprocal referral agreements).

New Jersey: Rule 7.3(c) adds that a lawyer in private practice “shall not knowingly assist an organization that furnishes or pays for legal services to others to promote the use of the lawyer’s services” if the organization’s promotional activity (1) uses false or misleading statements or claims, or (2) uses “coercion, duress, compulsion, intimidation, threats, unwarranted promises of benefits, over-reaching, or vexatious or harassing conduct.” New Jersey regulates lawyer referral services in a lengthy Rule 7.3(e). New Jersey omits ABA Model Rule 7.2(b)(4) (governing reciprocal referral agreements).

To regulate broadcast advertising, New Jersey Rule 7.2(a) incorporates the following language taken verbatim from the New Jersey Supreme Court’s opinion in Felmeister & Isaacs, 518 A.2d 188, 208 (1986):

. . . All advertisements shall be predominantly informational. No drawings, animations, dramatizations, music, or lyrics shall be used in connection with televised advertising. No advertisement shall rely in any way on techniques to obtain attention that depend upon absurdity and that demonstrate a clear and intentional lack of relevance to the selection of counsel; included in this category are all advertisements that contain any extreme portrayal of counsel exhibiting characteristics clearly unrelated to legal competence.

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 7.2(a) is substantially similar to DR 2-103(B) of the old Model Code, but it adds an exception that permits lawyers to refer clients to a nonlegal professional pursuant to a contractual agreement under New York Rule 5.8, which has no Model Rule equivalent. Rule 5.8 provides that a lawyer or law firm “may enter into and maintain a contractual relationship with a nonlegal professional or nonlegal professional service firm for the purpose of offering to the public, on a systematic and continuing basis, legal services performed by the lawyer or law firm as well as other nonlegal professional services, notwithstanding the provisions of Rule 1.7(a),” when certain requirements are satisfied.

New York Rule 7.2(b) is substantially similar to DR 2-103(D) of the old Model Code. Notably, rather than adopting ABA Model Rule 7.6 (prohibiting pay-to-play arrangements),

New York has added two new Comments to Rule 7.2 explaining the pay-to-play prohibition as a logical consequence of Rule 7.2(b) – see the New York entry in the Selected State Variations following Rule 7.6 below.

North Carolina omits ABA Model Rule 7.2(b)(4) and adds an unusual Rule 7.2(d) that permits a lawyer to participate in a lawyer referral service only if the lawyer and the referral service satisfy seven specific conditions.

Ohio: Rule 7.2(b) deletes the ABA reference to a “qualified lawyer referral service” and substitutes a reference to the Ohio Supreme Court Rules governing lawyer referral services. Ohio also deletes ABA Model Rule 7.2(b)(4), thus effectively prohibiting reciprocal referral agreements between two lawyers or between a lawyer and a nonlawyer professional. Ohio adds Rule 7.2(d), which prohibits a lawyer from soliciting employment if the lawyer does not intend to participate in the matter but instead will refer the matter to other counsel.

Pennsylvania: Rule 7.2 differs significantly from ABA Model Rule 7.2. For example, Pennsylvania omits ABA Model Rule 7.2(b)(4) (governing reciprocal referral agreements). Pennsylvania Rule 7.2(j) provides that a lawyer shall not pay “any part of the costs of an advertisement by a lawyer not in the same firm” unless the advertisement discloses the name and principal office address of each lawyer paying for the advertisement and, “if any lawyer or law firm will receive referrals from the advertisement, the circumstances under which referrals will be made and the basis and criteria on which the referral system operates.”

Pennsylvania also adds Rule 7.7, which forbids lawyers to accept referrals from a “lawyer referral service” (a defined term) “if the service engaged in communication with the public or direct contact with prospective clients in a manner that would violate the Rules of Professional Conduct if the communication or contact were made by the lawyer.”

Rhode Island: Among other variations, Rhode Island has adopted Rule 7.2(f), which provides as follows:

(f) Any lawyer or law firm who advertises that his or her practice includes or concentrates in particular fields of law and then refers the majority of cases in those fields of law or of that type to another lawyer, law firm or group of lawyers shall clearly state the following disclaimer:

(1) “Most cases of this type are not handled by this firm, but are referred to other attorneys,” or if applicable:

(2) “While this firm maintains joint responsibility, most cases of this type are referred to other attorneys for principal responsibility.”

Tennessee adds Rule 7.6 (Intermediary Organizations), which provides that a lawyer shall not seek or accept a referral of a client or compensation for representing a client from an “intermediary organization” (a defined term) if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the organization (i) is owned or controlled by the lawyer or by a lawyer or law firm with which the lawyer is associated; (ii) is engaged in the unauthorized practice of law; or (iii) engages in marketing activities that are false, misleading, or otherwise prohibited; or (iv) has failed to register with the Board of Professional Responsibility or comply with the Board's requirements. In addition, Supreme Court Rule 44, entitled "Regulation of Lawyer Intermediary Organizations," sets forth the requirements that lawyer intermediary organizations must meet in order to do business in Tennessee under Rule 7.6.

Texas: Rule 7.02 forbids "false or misleading communication about the qualifications or the services of any lawyer or firm." In addition, Texas has adopted guidelines for advertising on the Internet, including a requirement that "homepages" be submitted for review.

Virginia: Rule 7.2(d) requires targeted written or e-mail communications to display the statement "ADVERTISING MATERIAL" on the first page in a specified type size. Registered mail and other forms of restricted delivery are forbidden. Lawyers who advertise or solicit by e-mail must tell recipients how to "notify the sender that they wish not to receive such communications in the future." But Rule 7.2(d) does not apply to any communication that is "directed to be sent by a court or tribunal, or otherwise required by law."

Wisconsin: Rule 7.2(b)(4) permits referrals pursuant to a nonexclusive reciprocal referral agreement between a lawyer and another lawyer or nonlawyer professional if "(ii) the client gives informed consent; (iii) there is no interference with the lawyer's independence of professional judgment or with the client-lawyer relationship; and (iv) information relating to representation of a client is protected. . . ."

Proposed Rule 7.3 [RPC 1-400]
“Direct Contact with Prospective Clients”
(XDraft #8, 10/2/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 7.3 is the third of five proposed rules regulating lawyer marketing that track the Model Rule structure. Rule 7.3 is concerned with regulating various means by which a lawyer seeking to market his or her services might make direct contact with a prospective client, such as by live, telephonic or real-time electronic communication, or by targeted marketing.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rule

RPC 1-400.

Statute

Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6157 et seq.

Case law

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 8

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 3

Abstain 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Dissenting Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart ☒ Yes ☐ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

A number of legal professionals believe that the restrictions on direct marketing in Rule 7.3 run afoul of lawyers' First Amendment rights, citing to Supreme Court precedent. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a).

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 7.3* Direct Contact with Prospective Clients

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

1. The Commission has determined that the ability of California lawyers and lawyers from other states to analyze issues concerning legal advertising and solicitation in this state would be enhanced by restating what is currently a single rule, California Rule 1-400, as five separate rules, numbered 7.1 through 7.5, that follow the organization of their ABA Model Rule counterparts. Nationally, there is marked variation among the jurisdictions in this area of lawyer regulation. The Commission believes that advertising of legal services and the solicitation of prospective clients is an area of lawyer regulation where greater national uniformity would be helpful to the public, practicing lawyers, and the courts in light of the current widespread use of the Internet by lawyers and law firms to market their services and the trend in many states toward allowing some form of multijurisdictional practice. However, the Commission has recommended departures from the Model Rules, in part to address Constitutional concerns.
2. Rule 7.1 sets out the general prohibition on a lawyer making false and misleading communications concerning the availability of legal services. Rule 7.2 specifically addresses advertising, a subset of communication, and typically involves communications directed at the general public. Rule 7.3 is concerned with regulating various means by which a lawyer seeking to market his or her services might make direct contact with a prospective client. Rule 7.4 sets out basic rules governing the communication of a lawyer's fields of practice and claims to specialization. Rule 7.5 does the same as rule 7.4 for the use of firm names and letterheads. The Commission, however, declines at this time to recommend Model Rule 7.6, which is intended to regulate political contributions made by lawyers to obtain legal work with government entities or to achieve an appointment as a judge. The Commission is still studying the feasibility of a rule analogous to Model Rule 7.6.

* Proposed Rule 7.3, XDraft 8 (10/2/09)

INTRODUCTION (Continued):

3. Proposed Rule 7.3 includes the basic concepts contained in Model Rule 7.3: a prohibition on any form of real-time communication to solicit legal business unless the person being targeted is related to the lawyer or is also a lawyer (paragraph (a)); a prohibition on any kind of communication with prospective clients under certain circumstances (paragraph (b)); a provision imposing labeling requirements on written marketing materials to avoid confusing the recipient (paragraph (c)); and an exception permitting a lawyer to engage the services of a group legal services plan that does utilize real-time communication in its marketing (paragraph (d)).
4. Proposed Rule 7.3 diverges from the Model Rule by including a savings clause to avoid potential Constitutional problems, (paragraph (a)); prohibiting a broader range of overreaching conduct, (paragraph (b)(2)); and prohibiting the solicitation of a person known to be already represented, (paragraph (b)(3)).
5. The Model Rule comment has been revised to remove purely expository language, (e.g., Comments [3] and [6]) or to conform the comment to the revised Rule, (e.g., Comment [5]).
6. Definition. Commission considered whether to include a definition of “solicitation” in Rule 7.3, as found in current rule 1-400 (B). It determined that there was no need to for a separate definition as the subject of the prohibited conduct is sufficiently described in the Rule.
7. Cooling-off Period. A State Bar member suggested that the Commission consider a provision establishing a “cooling off” period after the occurrence of an event that gives rise to a need for legal services before a lawyer or a representative of the lawyer could communicate with a prospective client by targeted mail. See, e.g., Fla. Bar v. Went for It, Inc. (1995) 515 U.S. 618. The Commission does not believe such a provision is necessary because the concerns inherent in such a prohibition are adequately addressed in paragraph (b).
8. Variation in Other Jurisdictions. Despite the fact that advertising of legal services and the solicitation of prospective clients should be an area of lawyer regulation where national uniformity is warranted, there is a wide range of variation among jurisdictions in their approach to regulating lawyer advertising and solicitation. States that have diverged widely from the Model Rules include smaller jurisdictions such as the District of Columbia, Kentucky, Mississippi and Iowa, and larger states, such as Florida, New York, and Texas. Unlike these states that have either eliminated or added to marketing restrictions in the Model Rules, the Commission recommends keeping the same basic concepts found in the Model Rules, revised only to clarify or to address unique aspects of the California regulatory landscape.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) A lawyer shall not by in-person, live telephone or real-time electronic contact solicit professional employment from a prospective client when a significant motive for the lawyer's doing so is the lawyer's pecuniary gain, unless the person contacted:	(a) A lawyer shall not by in person, live telephone or real-time electronic contact solicit professional employment from a prospective client when a significant motive for ~~the lawyer's~~ doing so is the lawyer's pecuniary gain, unless the communication is protected from abridgment by the Constitution of the United States or by the Constitution of the State of California, or unless the person contacted:	Paragraph (a) tracks the language of paragraph (a) of Model Rule 7.3(a) in prohibiting in-person, live telephone or real-time electronic contact to solicit fee-paying employment from a prospective client. The phrase "real-time electronic contact" was added by the ABA Ethics 2000 Commission to extend the prohibition on solicitation to electronic communications with prospective clients in real time, for example, communications in Internet chat rooms or by instant messaging. The interactivity and immediacy of response in real-time electronic communication presents the same dangers as those involved in real-time telephone contact. Paragraph (a) also adds the savings clause, "unless the communication is protected from abridgment by the Constitution of the United States or by the Constitution of the State of California," language which is currently found in CRPC 1-400(C). It was suggested during Commission deliberations that the United States Supreme Court case, Edenfield v. Fane (1993) 507 U.S. 761, has arguably rendered prohibitions such as those found in Rule 7.3(a) constitutionally infirm and that the provision should be deleted. However, it was noted that this constitutional issue was one for the courts, not for the Commission, requiring a prediction of how a reviewing court might interpret the Rule. Nevertheless, it was determined that the constitutional issue would be adequately addressed and an "all or nothing" invalidation of the Rule avoided by extending and including the savings clause that now appears in current CRPC 1-400(C).

* Proposed Rule 7.3, XDraft 8 (10/2/09); redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		Minority. A minority of the Commission objects to paragraph (a) on the ground that a lawyer should be able to solicit sophisticated clients by a live, telephonic or real-time electronic communication as was sanctioned for accountants in Edenfield. The minority adds that unless the lawyer is willing to risk of discipline by appealing his or her case to the Supreme Court, the lawyer is prohibited from making such solicitations.
(1) is a lawyer; or (2) has a family, close personal, or prior professional relationship with the lawyer.	(1) is a lawyer; or (2) has a family, close personal, or prior professional relationship with the lawyer.	Subparagraphs (a)(1) and (a)(2) are identical to MR 7.1(a)(1), and recognize that the concerns with overreaching by lawyers and lack of time for reflection in real-time communications is not present when the person being contacted is another lawyer, or has a family, close personal or prior professional relationship with the soliciting lawyer. See also comment [4].
(b) A lawyer shall not solicit professional employment from a prospective client by written, recorded or electronic communication or by in-person, telephone or real-time electronic contact even when not otherwise prohibited by paragraph (a), if:	(b) A lawyer shall not solicit professional employment from a prospective client by written, recorded or electronic communication or by in person, telephone or real-time electronic contact even when not otherwise prohibited by paragraph (a), if:	Paragraph (b). Paragraph (b) is intended to prohibit otherwise permitted forms of solicitation which, under particular circumstances, offer an opportunity for abuse by a lawyer. The introductory paragraph of paragraph (b) is identical to that of Model Rule 7.3 and describes the kind of conduct that ordinarily is permitted under Rules 7.1, 7.2 or 7.3(a).
(1) the prospective client has made known to the lawyer a desire not to be solicited by the lawyer; or	(1) the prospective client has made known to the lawyer a desire not to be solicited by the lawyer; or	Subparagraph (b)(1) is identical to Model Rule 7.3(b)(1).

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(2) the solicitation involves coercion, duress or harassment.	(2) the solicitation is transmitted in any manner which involves intrusion, coercion, duress~~—or—harassment,~~ compulsion, intimidation, threats, or vexatious or harassing conduct; or	Subparagraph (b)(2) addresses the same concept as Model Rule 7.3(b)(2), i.e., overreaching by a lawyer in the manner in which the solicitation is made. Subparagraph (b)(2) uses language currently found in CRPC 1-400(D)(5). The Commission believes that by providing a broader range of conduct that is prohibited, the language provides better protection for susceptible persons in need of legal services and better notice to lawyers than does the Model Rule's language. Subparagraph (b)(2) adds the concept of "intrusion". A minority of the Commission was concerned that prohibiting "intrusion" might result in a prospective client losing rights after being contacted by a non-lawyer defense representative (e.g., an insurance adjuster). The majority, however, believes that the prohibition's protection of privacy rights outweighed that concern. The minority also suggests that any communication to a prospective client is an "intrusion," making the rule overbroad and requiring lawyers to risk discipline for even non-objectionable communications.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(c) Every written, recorded or electronic communication from a lawyer soliciting professional employment from a prospective client known to be in need of legal services in a particular matter shall include the words "Advertising Material" on the outside envelope, if any, and at the beginning and ending of any recorded or electronic communication, unless the recipient of the communication is a person specified in paragraphs (a)(1) or (a)(2).	(c) Every written, recorded or electronic communication from a lawyer soliciting professional employment from a prospective client known to be in need of legal services in a particular matter shall include the words "Advertising Material" or words of similar import on the outside envelope, if any, and at the beginning and ending of any recorded or electronic communication, unless the recipient of the communication is a person specified in paragraphs (a)(1) or (a)(2), or unless it is apparent from the context that the communication is an advertisement.	Paragraph (c) is based on Model Rule 7.3(c). The phrase "or words of similar import" has been added following "Advertising Material." That phrase is currently found in Standard (5) to CRPC 1-400. It provides lawyers with some flexibility in how they identify marketing materials they send to prospective clients. Regardless of the specific language used, the recipient must be made aware that the communication is an advertisement. Paragraph (c) also adds the clause: "or unless it is apparent from the context that the communication is an advertisement." That clause has been added in recognition that it is usually apparent from the communication itself that the communication is an advertisement.
(d) Notwithstanding the prohibitions in paragraph (a), a lawyer may participate with a prepaid or group legal service plan operated by an organization not owned or directed by the lawyer that uses in-person or telephone contact to solicit memberships or subscriptions for the plan from persons who are not known to need legal services in a particular matter covered by the plan.	(d) Notwithstanding the prohibitions in paragraph (a), a lawyer may participate with a prepaid or group legal service plan operated by an organization not owned or directed by the lawyer that uses in person or telephone contact to solicit memberships or subscriptions for the plan from persons who are not known to need legal services in a particular matter covered by the plan.	Paragraph (d) is identical to Model Rule 7.3(d). Paragraph (d) permits a lawyer to participate with an organization that uses personal contact to solicit members for its group or prepaid legal services plan, so long as paragraph (d)'s conditions are satisfied. See also comment [8].

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] There is a potential for abuse inherent in direct in person, live telephone or real-time electronic contact by a lawyer with a prospective client known to need legal services. These forms of contact between a lawyer and a prospective client subject the layperson to the private importuning of the trained advocate in a direct interpersonal encounter. The prospective client, who may already feel overwhelmed by the circumstances giving rise to the need for legal services, may find it difficult fully to evaluate all available alternatives with reasoned judgment and appropriate self interest in the face of the lawyer's presence and insistence upon being retained immediately. The situation is fraught with the possibility of undue influence, intimidation, and over reaching.	[1] There is a potential for abuse inherent in direct in person, live telephone or real-time electronic contact by a lawyer with a prospective client known to need legal services. These forms of contact between a lawyer and a prospective client subject the layperson to the private importuning of the trained advocate in a direct interpersonal encounter. The prospective client, who may already feel overwhelmed by the circumstances giving rise to the need for legal services, may find it difficult fully to evaluate all available alternatives with reasoned judgment and appropriate self interest in the face of the lawyer's presence and insistence upon being retained immediately. The situation is fraught with the possibility of undue influence, intimidation, and over reaching.	Comment [1] is identical to Model Rule 7.3, cmt. [1]. Comment [1] explains the rationale for prohibitions on solicitations made by lawyers in real-time.
[2] This potential for abuse inherent in direct in person, live telephone or real-time electronic solicitation of prospective clients justifies its prohibition, particularly since lawyer advertising and written and recorded communication permitted under Rule 7.2 offer alternative means of conveying necessary information to those who may be in need of legal services. Advertising and written and recorded communications which may be mailed or autodialed make it possible for a prospective client to be informed about the need for legal services, and about the qualifications of available	[2] This potential for abuse inherent in direct in person, live telephone or real-time electronic solicitation of prospective clients justifies its prohibition, particularly since lawyer advertising and written and recorded communication permitted under Rule 7.2 offer alternative means of conveying necessary information to those who may be in need of legal services. Advertising and written and recorded communications which may be mailed or autodialed make it possible for a prospective client to be informed about the need for legal services, and about the qualifications of available	Comment [2] is identical to Model Rule 7.3, cmt. [1]. Comment [2] explains the rationale for regulating "real-time" communications.

* Proposed Rule 7.3, Draft 8 (10/2/09).

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
lawyers and law firms, without subjecting the prospective client to direct in person, telephone or real-time electronic persuasion that may overwhelm the client's judgment.	lawyers and law firms, without subjecting the prospective client to direct in person, telephone or real-time electronic persuasion that may overwhelm the client's judgment.
[3] The use of general advertising and written, recorded or electronic communications to transmit information from lawyer to prospective client, rather than direct in-person, live telephone or real-time electronic contact, will help to assure that the information flows cleanly as well as freely. The contents of advertisements and communications permitted under Rule 7.2 can be permanently recorded so that they cannot be disputed and may be shared with others who know the lawyer. This potential for informal review is itself likely to help guard against statements and claims that might constitute false and misleading communications, in violation of Rule 7.1. The contents of direct in-person, live telephone or real-time electronic conversations between a lawyer and a prospective client can be disputed and may not be subject to third-party scrutiny. Consequently, they are much more likely to approach (and occasionally cross) the dividing line between accurate representations and those that are false and misleading.	[3] The use of general advertising and written, recorded or electronic communications to transmit information from a lawyer to prospective clients, rather than direct in person, live telephone or real-time electronic contact, will help to assure that the information flows cleanly as well as freely. The contents of advertisements and communications permitted under Rule 7.2 can be permanently recorded so that they cannot be disputed and may be shared with others who know the lawyer. This potential for informal review is itself likely to help guard against statements and claims that might constitute false and misleading communications, in violation of Rule 7.1. ~~The contents of direct in person, live telephone or real-time electronic conversations between a lawyer and a prospective client can be disputed and may not be subject to third party scrutiny. Consequently, they are much more likely to approach (and occasionally cross) the dividing line between accurate representations and those that are false and misleading.~~	Comment [3] is based on Model Rule 7.3, cmt. [3]. The last two sentences of Model Rule 7.3, cmt. [3], have been deleted as unnecessary exposition.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[4] There is far less likelihood that a lawyer would engage in abusive practices against an individual who is a former client, or with whom the lawyer has close personal or family relationship, or in situations in which the lawyer is motivated by considerations other than the lawyer's pecuniary gain. Nor is there a serious potential for abuse when the person contacted is a lawyer. Consequently, the general prohibition in Rule 7.3(a) and the requirements of Rule 7.3(c) are not applicable in those situations. Also, paragraph (a) is not intended to prohibit a lawyer from participating in constitutionally protected activities of public or charitable legal- service organizations or bona fide political, social, civic, fraternal, employee or trade organizations whose purposes include providing or recommending legal services to its members or beneficiaries.	[4] There is far less likelihood that a lawyer would engage in abusive practices against an individual who is a former client, or with whom the lawyer has a close personal or family relationship, or in situations in which the lawyer is motivated by considerations other than the lawyer's pecuniary gain. Nor is there ~~a~~ serious potential for abuse when the person contacted is a lawyer. Consequently, the general prohibition in ~~Rule 7.3~~paragraph (a) and the requirements of ~~Rule 7.3~~paragraph (c) are not applicable in those situations. Also, paragraph (a) is not intended to prohibit a lawyer from participating in constitutionally protected activities of bona fide public or charitable legal-service organizations, or bona fide political, social, civic, fraternal, employee or trade organizations whose purposes include providing or recommending legal services to its members or beneficiaries.	Comment [4] is identical to Model Rule 7.3, cmt. [4], except that changes have been made to conform the comment to California Rule style and also to insert an "a" that is missing in the Model Rule. Comment [4] clarifies subparagraphs (a)(1) and (a)(2), which recognize that the concerns with overreaching by lawyers and lack of time for reflection in real-time communications is not present when the person being contacted is another lawyer or has a family, close personal or prior professional relationship with the soliciting lawyer. The phrase "bona fide" has been added to "public or charitable legal-service organizations" to create a parallel construction with the following clause.
[5] But even permitted forms of solicitation can be abused. Thus, any solicitation which contains information which is false or misleading within the meaning of Rule 7.1, which involves coercion, duress or harassment within the meaning of Rule 7.3(b)(2), or which involves contact with a prospective client who has made known to the lawyer a desire not to be solicited by the lawyer within the meaning of Rule 7.3(b)(1) is prohibited. Moreover, if after sending a letter or other communication to a client as permitted by Rule 7.2	[5] ~~But even~~Even permitted forms of solicitation can be abused. Thus, any solicitation which (i) contains information which is false or misleading within the meaning of Rule 7.1, (ii) is transmitted in any manner which involves intrusion, coercion, duress, compulsion, intimidation, threats, or harassment~~vexatious or harassing conduct~~ within the meaning of ~~Rule 7.3~~paragraph (b)(2), or ~~which~~(iii) involves contact with a prospective client who has made known to the lawyer a desire not to be solicited by the lawyer within the meaning of ~~Rule~~	Comment [5] is based on Model Rule 7.3, cmt. [5]. Comment [5] clarifies subparagraphs (b)(1)-(2), which prohibit otherwise permitted forms of solicitation that, under the particular circumstances identified, present an opportunity for abuse by a lawyer. Changes from Model Rule 7.3, cmt. [5] are intended to conform the comment to the revised language in subparagraph (b)(2). See Explanation of Changes for subparagraph (b)(2). The last sentence of Model Rule 7.3, cmt. [5], has been deleted as unnecessary exposition.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
the lawyer receives no response, any further effort to communicate with the prospective client may violate the provisions of Rule 7.3(b)..	~~7.3 paragraph (b)(1) is prohibited. Moreover, if after sending a letter or other communication to a client as permitted by Rule 7.2 the lawyer receives no response, any further effort to communicate with the prospective client may violate the provisions of Rule 7.3(b).~~
[6] This Rule is not intended to prohibit a lawyer from contacting representatives of organizations or groups that may be interested in establishing a group or prepaid legal plan for their members, insureds, beneficiaries or other third parties for the purpose of informing such entities of the availability of and details concerning the plan or arrangement which the lawyer or lawyer's firm is willing to offer. This form of communication is not directed to a prospective client. Rather, it is usually addressed to an individual acting in a fiduciary capacity seeking a supplier of legal services for others who may, if they choose, become prospective clients of the lawyer. Under these circumstances, the activity which the lawyer undertakes in communicating with such representatives and the type of information transmitted to the individual are functionally similar to and serve the same purpose as advertising permitted under Rule 7.2.	[6] This Rule is not intended to prohibit a lawyer from contacting representatives of organizations or groups that may be interested in establishing a bona fide group or prepaid legal plan for their members, insureds, beneficiaries or other third parties for the purpose of informing such entities of the availability of and details concerning the plan or arrangement which the lawyer or lawyer's firm is willing to offer. ~~This form of communication is not directed to a prospective client. Rather, it is usually addressed to an individual acting in a fiduciary capacity seeking a supplier of legal services for others who may, if they choose, become prospective clients of the lawyer. Under these circumstances, the activity which the lawyer undertakes in communicating with such representatives and the type of information transmitted to the individual are functionally similar to and serve the same purpose as advertising permitted under Rule 7.2.~~	The first sentence of Comment [6] is identical to Model Rule 7.3, cmt. [6], except that the phrase "bona fide" has been included to modify "group or prepaid legal plan." The remainder of Model Rule 7.3, cmt. [6] has been deleted as unnecessary exposition.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[7] The requirement in Rule 7.3(c) that certain communications be marked "Advertising Material" does not apply to communications sent in response to requests of potential clients or their spokespersons or sponsors. General announcements by lawyers, including changes in personnel or office location, do not constitute communications soliciting professional employment from a client known to be in need of legal services within the meaning of this Rule.	[7] The requirement in ~~Rule 7.3(c)~~ this Rule that certain communications be marked "Advertising Material" or with words of similar import does not apply to communications sent in response to requests of potential clients or their ~~spokespersons or sponsors~~ representatives. Paragraph (c) does not apply to general announcements by lawyers, including but not limited to changes in personnel or office location, ~~do not constitute communications soliciting professional employment from a client known to be in need of legal services within the meaning of this Rule, nor does it apply where it is apparent from the context that the communication is an advertisement.~~	Comment [7] is based on Model Rule 7.3, cmt. [7]. The changes conform the Comment to the revisions made to paragraph (c). The word "representatives," a more general term, has been substituted for the phrase "spokespersons and sponsors." The last clause of the last sentence of the Model Rule comment has been deleted in favor of the more concise, "does not apply to."
[8] Paragraph (d) of this Rule permits a lawyer to participate with an organization which uses personal contact to solicit members for its group or prepaid legal service plan, provided that the personal contact is not undertaken by any lawyer who would be a provider of legal services through the plan. The organization must not be owned by or directed (whether as manager or otherwise) by any lawyer or law firm that participates in the plan. For example, paragraph (d) would not permit a lawyer to create an organization controlled directly or indirectly by the lawyer and use the organization for the in-person or telephone solicitation of legal employment of the lawyer through memberships in the plan or otherwise. The communication permitted by these	[8] Paragraph (d) of this Rule permits a lawyer to participate with an organization which uses personal contact to solicit members for its group or prepaid legal service plan, provided that the personal contact is not undertaken by any lawyer who would be a provider of legal services through the plan. The organization must not be owned by or directed (whether as manager or otherwise) by any lawyer or law firm that participates in the plan. For example, paragraph (d) would not permit a lawyer to create an organization controlled directly or indirectly by the lawyer and use the organization for the in person or telephone solicitation of legal employment of the lawyer through memberships in the plan or otherwise. The communication permitted by these	Comment [8] is identical to Model Rule 7.3, cmt. [8], except that it adds a cross-reference to Rule 5.4, which regulates lawyer's activities with non-lawyers.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
organizations also must not be directed to a person known to need legal services in a particular matter, but is to be designed to inform potential plan members generally of another means of affordable legal services. Lawyers who participate in a legal service plan must reasonably assure that the plan sponsors are in compliance with Rules 7.1, 7.2 and 7.3(b). See 8.4(a).	organizations also must not be directed to a person known to need legal services in a particular matter, but is to be designed to inform potential plan members generally of another means of affordable legal services. Lawyers who participate in a legal service plan must reasonably assure that the plan sponsors are in compliance with Rules 7.1, 7.2 and 7.3(b). See also Rules 5.4 and 8.4(a).

Rule 7.3 Direct Contact with Prospective Clients (Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) A lawyer shall not by in person, live telephone or real-time electronic contact solicit professional employment from a prospective client when a significant motive for doing so is the lawyer's pecuniary gain, unless the communication is protected from abridgment by the Constitution of the United States or by the Constitution of the State of California, or unless the person contacted:
 - (1) is a lawyer; or
 - (2) has a family, close personal, or prior professional relationship with the lawyer.
- (b) A lawyer shall not solicit professional employment from a prospective client by written, recorded or electronic communication or by in person, telephone or real-time electronic contact even when not otherwise prohibited by paragraph (a), if:
 - (1) the prospective client has made known to the lawyer a desire not to be solicited by the lawyer; or
 - (2) the solicitation is transmitted in any manner which involves intrusion, coercion, duress, compulsion, intimidation, threats, or vexatious or harassing conduct.
- (c) Every written, recorded or electronic communication from a lawyer soliciting professional employment from a prospective client known to be in need of legal services in a particular matter shall include the words "Advertising Material" or words of similar import on the outside envelope, if any, and at the beginning and ending of any recorded or electronic communication, unless the recipient of the communication is a person specified in paragraphs (a)(1) or (a)(2), or unless it is apparent from the context that the communication is an advertisement.

- (d) Notwithstanding the prohibitions in paragraph (a), a lawyer may participate with a prepaid or group legal service plan operated by an organization not owned or directed by the lawyer that uses in person or telephone contact to solicit memberships or subscriptions for the plan from persons who are not known to need legal services in a particular matter covered by the plan.

COMMENT

- [1] There is a potential for abuse inherent in direct in person, live telephone or real-time electronic contact by a lawyer with a prospective client known to need legal services. These forms of contact between a lawyer and a prospective client subject the layperson to the private importuning of the trained advocate in a direct interpersonal encounter. The prospective client, who may already feel overwhelmed by the circumstances giving rise to the need for legal services, may find it difficult fully to evaluate all available alternatives with reasoned judgment and appropriate self-interest in the face of the lawyer's presence and insistence upon being retained immediately. The situation is fraught with the possibility of undue influence, intimidation, and over reaching.
- [2] This potential for abuse inherent in direct in person, live telephone or real-time electronic solicitation of prospective clients justifies its prohibition, particularly since lawyer advertising and written and recorded communication permitted under Rule 7.2 offer alternative means of conveying necessary information to those who may be in need of legal services. Advertising and written and recorded communications which may be mailed or autodialed make it possible for a prospective client to be informed about the need for legal services, and about the qualifications of available lawyers and law firms, without subjecting the prospective client to direct in person, telephone or real-time electronic persuasion that may overwhelm the client's judgment.

- [3] The use of general advertising and written, recorded or electronic communications to transmit information from a lawyer to prospective clients, rather than direct in person, live telephone or real-time electronic contact, will help to assure that the information flows cleanly as well as freely. The contents of advertisements and communications permitted under Rule 7.2 can be permanently recorded so that they cannot be disputed and may be shared with others who know the lawyer. This potential for informal review is itself likely to help guard against statements and claims that might constitute false and misleading communications, in violation of Rule 7.1.
- [4] There is far less likelihood that a lawyer would engage in abusive practices against an individual who is a former client, or with whom the lawyer has a close personal or family relationship, or in situations in which the lawyer is motivated by considerations other than the lawyer's pecuniary gain. Nor is there serious potential for abuse when the person contacted is a lawyer. Consequently, the general prohibition in paragraph (a) and the requirements of paragraph (c) are not applicable in those situations. Also, paragraph (a) is not intended to prohibit a lawyer from participating in constitutionally protected activities of bona fide public or charitable legal-service organizations, or bona fide political, social, civic, fraternal, employee or trade organizations whose purposes include providing or recommending legal services to its members or beneficiaries.

- [5] Even permitted forms of solicitation can be abused. Thus, any solicitation which (i) contains information which is false or misleading within the meaning of Rule 7.1, (ii) is transmitted in any manner which involves intrusion, coercion, duress, compulsion, intimidation, threats, or vexatious or harassing conduct within the meaning of paragraph (b)(2), or (iii) involves contact with a prospective client who has made known to the lawyer a desire not to be solicited by the lawyer within the meaning of paragraph (b)(1).
- [6] This Rule does not prohibit a lawyer from contacting representatives of organizations or groups that may be interested in establishing a bona fide group or prepaid legal plan for their members, insureds, beneficiaries or other third parties for the purpose of informing such entities of the availability of and details concerning the plan or arrangement which the lawyer or lawyer's firm is willing to offer.
- [7] The requirement in paragraph (c) that certain communications be marked "Advertising Material" or with words of similar import does not apply to communications sent in response to requests of potential clients or their representatives. Paragraph (c) also does not apply to general announcements by lawyers, including but not limited to changes in personnel or office location, nor does it apply where it is apparent from the context that the communication is an advertisement.
- [8] Paragraph (d) of this Rule permits a lawyer to participate with an organization which uses personal contact to solicit members for its group or prepaid legal service plan, provided that the personal contact is not undertaken by any lawyer who would be a provider of legal services through the plan. The organization must not be owned by or directed (whether as manager or otherwise) by any lawyer or law firm that participates in the plan. For example, paragraph (d) would not permit a lawyer to create an organization controlled directly or indirectly by the lawyer and use the organization for the in person or telephone solicitation of legal employment of the lawyer through memberships in the plan or otherwise. The communication permitted by these organizations also must not be directed to a person known to need legal services in a particular matter, but is to be designed to inform potential plan members generally of another means of affordable legal services. Lawyers who participate in a legal service plan must reasonably assure that the plan sponsors are in compliance with Rules 7.1, 7.2 and 7.3(b). See also Rules 5.4 and 8.4(a).

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 0
Disagree = 0
Modify = 4
NI = 0

Rule 7.3. Direct Contact with Prospective Clients.
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Law Practice Management Section ("LPMT") [William E. Hoffman]	M	Yes		The Commenter believes that paragraph (a) indicates the State Bar "wants to muzzle lawyers from telling the truth directly to potential clients and from explaining how a lawyer's services might be of value to a particular member of the public." The commenter argues that the rule will have a chilling effect on First Amendment rights of lawyers and that Rule 7.3's savings clause "saves nothing." The commenter urges the State Bar to go beyond what is minimally required by the First Amendment. The Commenter also asserts that the provision overreaches and is "superfluous," using language that is hyperbolic and unnecessary. The Commenter proposes two alternative provisions: 1. Alternative #1 ("Preferred"): (a) A lawyer may by in person, live telephone or real time electronic contact solicit professional employment from a prospective client when a significant motive	The Commission declines to make either of the requested changes. The purported overreaching language the commenter complains of either closely tracks the language of the Model Rule or is carried forward from current rule 1-400. The Commission notes that this issue was squarely before the Commission during its deliberations. The Commission deliberated this issue extensively in e-mails and in a live meeting, and voted 7 to 2 (w/ one abstention) not to delete paragraph (a). The savings clause, "unless the communication is protected from abridgment by the Constitution of the United States or by the Constitution of the State of California," was added expressly to address the constitutional concerns. Finally, the Commission notes that the United States Supreme Court in Edenfield v. Fane, 507 U.S. 761, 113 S.Ct. 1792, 123 L.Ed.2d 543 (1993) stressed that lawyers, because of their special training and persuasive skills, cannot be compared to other professionals who are permitted to make in person solicitations of prospective clients. Absent further guidance from the Court, the Commission does not recommend diverging from the Model Rule standard.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 7.3. Direct Contact with Prospective Clients.
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response for doing so is the lawyer's pecuniary gain, unless the communication is dishonest or misleading, or it involves intrusion, coercion, duress, compulsion, intimidation, threats, or vexatious or harassing conduct. 2. Alternative #2 ("Much less desirable") (a) A lawyer shall not by in person, live telephone or real-time electronic contact solicit professional employment from a prospective client when a significant motive for doing so is the lawyer's pecuniary gain, unless the communication is protected from abridgment by the Constitution of the United States or by the Constitution of the State of California, or unless the person contacted: (1) is a lawyer; (2) has a family, close personal, or prior professional relationship with the lawyer; (3) has first contacted the lawyer; or (4) is an executive or senior manager of a prospective client.

Rule 7.3. Direct Contact with Prospective Clients.
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel ("OCTC")	M	Yes		OCTC supports this rule, but finds most of the Comments more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions. We support the last two sentences of Comment [8].	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations. No response required.
3	Orange County Bar Association	M	Yes	(b)(2)	Proposed Rule 7.3(b)(2) prohibits a lawyer from soliciting professional employment from a prospective client where the solicitation "is transmitted in any manner which involves intrusion , compulsion intimidation, threats, or vexatious or harassing conduct" (emphasis added). The OCBA concurs with the minority comments of the Commission that the word "intrusion," which is not included in the corresponding ABA Model Rule, should be stricken from the rule because arguably any manner in which a lawyer solicits professional employment from a prospective client may be perceived as intrusive, and thus unfairly may subject that lawyer to unnecessary and unwarranted discipline.	The Commission believes that the prohibition on intrusive conduct by a lawyer in soliciting legal business provides important protection of the solicited client's privacy rights. This protection outweighs the commenter's concerns.
4	San Diego County Bar Association	M	Yes	(c)	The commenter believes that the revisions to paragraph (c), i.e., adding the phrase "or words of similar import" and the clause, "or unless it is apparent from the context that the	The Commission did not make the requested change. Paragraph (c) is identical to Model Rule 7.3(c), except for the addition of the phrase, "or words of similar import," and the concluding clause:

Rule 7.3. Direct Contact with Prospective Clients.
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					communication is an advertisement,” and deleting CRPC 1-400, standard (5)’s reference to “12-point print” together “may promote misleading advertisements” because it no longer requires the word “Advertisement” or words of similar import to be on the first page of the document that is sent/communicated to the prospective client. The result may be that the recipient will be unable to distinguish between an official document and an advertisement. SDCBA is also concerned that this will leave open what is an “apparent” advertising communication. The commenter believes the changes in the Rule regarding streamlining and modernizing the standards will result in greater clarity.	“or unless it is apparent from the context that the communication is an advertisement.” The Commission believes the Model Rule language, as revised, provides sufficient public protection. The phrase “or words of similar import” is from Standard (5) to current rule 1-400 and the concluding clause simply recognizes that it is usually apparent from the communication itself that the communication is an advertisement. No response required.

Rule 7.3: Direct Contact with Prospective Clients

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Arizona adds a subparagraph (b)(3) prohibiting solicitation relating to a personal injury or wrongful death within 30 days after the occurrence, and Arizona adds detailed requirements regarding targeted mail.

California: Rule 1-400 provides, in pertinent part, as follows:

(B) For purposes of this rule, a “solicitation” means any communication:

(1) Concerning the availability for professional employment of a member or a law firm in which a significant motive is pecuniary gain; and

(2) Which is . . .

(b) delivered in person or by telephone, or

(c) directed by any means to a person known to the sender to be represented by counsel in a matter which is a subject of the communication.

(C) A solicitation shall not be made by or on behalf of a member or law firm to a prospective client with whom the member or law firm has no family or prior professional relationship, unless the solicitation is protected from abridgment by the Constitution of the United States or by the Constitution of the State of California. A solicitation to a former or present client in the discharge of a member’s or law firm’s professional duties is not prohibited. . . .

In addition, California Business & Professions Code §6152(a)(1) provides, in part, that it is unlawful for any person “to act as a runner or capper for any attorneys or to solicit any business for any attorneys in and about the state prisons, county jails, city jails, city prisons, or other places of detention of persons, city receiving hospitals, city and county receiving hospitals, county hospitals, superior courts, or in any public institution or in any public place or upon any public street or highway or in and about private hospitals, sanitariums or in and about any private institution or upon private property of any character whatsoever. . . .”

Colorado: Rule 7.3(c) imposes a waiting period of 30 days after an event causing personal injury or death before a lawyer may solicit professional employment in connection with the event unless the lawyer has “a family or prior professional relationship with the prospective client.” The rule also prohibits solicitation if the sending lawyer “knows or reasonably should know” that the recipient is represented by a lawyer in the matter, and requires the sending lawyer to say whether that lawyer will “actually handle the case or matter” or if it “will be referred to another lawyer or firm.” Rule 7.3(d) prohibits the envelope from revealing “the nature of the prospective client’s legal problem.”

Connecticut: Rule 7.3 differs significantly from ABA Model Rule 7.3. For example, Rule 7.3(a)(4) does not prohibit personal, live telephone, or real-time electronic contact with a prospective client that is “a business organization, a notfor-profit organization or governmental body and the lawyer seeks to provide services related to the organization.” Rule 7.3(b)(b) forbids a lawyer to “contact, or send, a written or electronic communication to, a prospective client” if:

(1) The lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the physical, emotional or mental state of the person makes it unlikely that the person would exercise reasonable judgment in employing a lawyer; . . .

(3) The communication involves coercion, duress, fraud, overreaching, harassment, intimidation or undue influence; [or]

(4) The written communication concerns a specific matter and the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the person to whom the communication is directed is represented by a lawyer in the matter. . . .

Connecticut Rule 7.3(b)(5) prohibits written solicitation in personal injury or wrongful death matters for 40 days after an accident or disaster. Rule 7.3(c) requires every written communication used by a lawyer “for the purpose of obtaining professional employment from a prospective client known to be in need of legal services in a particular matter” to say “Advertising Material” on the envelope and first page “in red ink.” Rule 7.3(d) requires the first sentence of a written communication about a specific matter to say: “If you have already retained a lawyer for this matter, please disregard this letter.”

District of Columbia omits Rule 7.3, but D.C. Rule 7.1(b) generally permits in-person solicitation by providing as follows:

(1) A lawyer shall not seek by in-person contact, employment (or employment of a partner or associate) by a nonlawyer who has not sought the lawyer’s advice regarding employment of a lawyer, if:

(A) The solicitation involves use of a statement or claim that is false or misleading . . . ;

(B) The solicitation involves the use of coercion, duress or harassment; or

(C) The potential client is apparently in a physical or mental condition which would make it unlikely that the potential client could exercise reasonable, considered judgment as to the selection of a lawyer.

(2) A lawyer shall not give anything of value to a person (other than the lawyer’s partner or employee) for recommending the lawyer’s services through in-person contact.

D.C. also has adopted an unusual Rule 7.1(e) that provides, in part, as follows:

Any lawyer . . . who solicits . . . any person incarcerated at the District of Columbia Jail . . . for the purpose of representing that person for a fee paid by or on behalf of that person . . . in any then-pending criminal case in which that person is represented, must provide timely and adequate notice to the person's then-current lawyer prior to accepting any fee from or on behalf of the incarcerated person.

Florida: Rule 4-7.4(a) defines the term “solicit” to include (among other things) contact by fax. Rule 4-7.4(b)(1), which is essentially the rule upheld in Florida Bar v. Went for It, Inc., 515 U.S. 618 (1995), prohibits a lawyer from soliciting prospective clients in writing if:

(A) the written communication concerns an action for personal injury or wrongful death or otherwise relates to an accident or disaster involving the person to whom the communication is addressed or a relative of that person, unless the accident or disaster occurred more than 30 days prior to the mailing of the communication;

(B) the written communication concerns a specific matter and the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the person to whom the communication is directed is represented by a lawyer in the matter. . . .

Rule 4-7.4(b)(2) imposes stringent, detailed requirements on all written communications to prospective clients, including that the first sentence of every written communication prompted by a specific occurrence must be: “If you have already retained a lawyer for this matter, please disregard this letter.”

Florida Rule 4-7.6, entitled “Computer-Accessed Communications,” provides that all web sites controlled or sponsored by a lawyer or law firm and that contain information concerning the lawyer’s or law firm’s services “(1) shall disclose all jurisdictions in which the lawyer or members of the law firm are licensed to practice law.” A lawyer shall not send an “unsolicited electronic mail communication directly or indirectly to a prospective client for the purpose of obtaining professional employment” unless it complies with a host of requirements, including that the subject line of the communication must state “legal advertisement.”

Georgia: Rule 7.3(a)(3) prohibits a written communication relating to an accident or disaster involving the person to whom the communication is sent for 30 days after the accident or disaster. Georgia omits ABA Model Rule 7.3(c), but adds Rule 7.3(e), which provides that a lawyer “shall not accept employment when the lawyer knows or it is obvious that the person who seeks to employ the lawyer does so as a result of conduct by any person or organization prohibited under” these rules. Georgia’s rule also adds detailed provisions regarding a lawyer’s participation in referral services.

Kentucky: In the rules effective July 15, 2009, an elaborate Rule 7.60 (Kentucky Disaster Response Plan) addresses problems that occur when lawyers and nonlawyers who are not subject to disciplinary jurisdiction in Kentucky “engage in the provision of legal services, legal advice, and outright solicitation of persons and their families affected by a disastrous event.” The policy of Rule 7.60 is to “[m]onitor the conduct of all attorneys, both members and non-members of the Kentucky Bar Association, and thereby deter violations of the rules of ethical conduct. . . .”

Kentucky has also enacted a criminal statute, Ky. Rev. Stat. §21A.300, providing that for 30 days after “the filing of a criminal or civil action, or claim for damages, or a traffic citation, injury, accident, or disaster,” an attorney “shall not directly solicit . . . a victim of the accident or disaster, or a relative of the victim, for the purpose of obtaining professional employment,” and “shall not knowingly accept a referral from an attorney referral service” if the referral service has violated that prohibition. Ky. Rev. Stat. §21A.310 makes violation of the 30-day blackout law a Class A misdemeanor, and may subject an attorney to professional discipline in addition to any criminal penalty. Kentucky Supreme Court Rule 3.130 provides:

If a lawyer illegally or unethically solicited a client for which compensation is paid or payable, all fees arising from such transaction shall be deemed waived and forfeited and shall be returned to the client. A civil action for recovery of such fees may be brought in a court of competent jurisdiction.

Louisiana: In the rules effective October 1, 2009, Louisiana deletes Rule 7.3 and addresses solicitation in Rule 7.4. Among other variations, Rule 7.4(b)(1)(A) contains a provision that prohibits any solicitation (including letters) that concern “an action for personal injury or wrongful death . . .

unless the accident or disaster occurred more than thirty days prior to the mailing of the communication.” Rule 7.4(b)(2) also requires lawyers to include a variety of information in letters to potential clients.

Maine: In the rules effective August 1, 2009, the restrictions on in-person solicitation apply only to “non-commercial” clients. Moreover, the Rule provides that a variety of factors are relevant when determining the permissibility of a solicitation, including “the prospective client’s sophistication regarding legal matters; the physical, emotional state of the prospective non-commercial client; and the circumstances in which the solicitation is made”

Massachusetts: Rule 7.3(b)(1) prohibits solicitation if “the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the physical, mental, or emotional state of the prospective client is such that there is a substantial potential that the person cannot exercise reasonable judgment in employing a lawyer,” unless the solicitation is “not for a fee.” Rule 7.3(d) prohibits solicitation in person “or by personal communication by telephone, electronic device, or otherwise,” but Rule 7.3(e) exempts: (1) communications with “members of the bar of any state or jurisdiction”; (2)(A) “grandparents of the lawyer or the lawyer’s spouse, (B) descendants of the grandparents of the lawyer or the lawyer’s spouse, or (C) the spouse of any of the foregoing persons”; (3) “prospective clients with whom the lawyer had a prior attorney-client relationship”; (4)(i) “non-profit and governmental entities” regarding their activities, and (ii) “persons engaged in trade or commerce” in connection with their trade or commerce.

Mississippi: Rule 7.2(a) defines an “advertisement” as “an active quest for clients involving a public or non-public communication.” Rule 7.5(a) requires a lawyer to submit a “copy or recording of any advertisement” to the Office of the General Counsel of the Mississippi Bar (OGCMB) “prior to its first dissemination,” but Rule 7.5(b) exempts 13 categories of advertisements from the filing requirement, such as telephone directory advertisements, business cards, web pages, and “scholarly writings.” Under Rule 7.5(d), a lawyer may request an “advisory opinion concerning the compliance of a contemplated advertisement or communication with these Rules in advance of disseminating the advertisement or communication,” provided the advertisement is submitted at least 45 days in advance. The OGCMB must “render its advisory opinion within forty-five days of receipt of a request unless the OGCMB determines that there is reasonable doubt that the advertisement or communication is in compliance with the Rules and that further examination is warranted but such evaluation cannot be completed within the forty-five day time period. . . .” In that event, “the OGCMB shall complete its review as promptly as the circumstances reasonably allow. If the OGCMB does not send any correspondence or notice to the lawyer within forty-five days, the advertisement or communication will be deemed approved.” Under Rule 7.5(d)(2), a “finding by the OGCMB of either compliance or non-compliance shall not be binding in disciplinary proceedings, but may be offered as evidence.”

Missouri: Rule 7.3(a) provides that a lawyer may not “initiate” in-person, telephone, or real-time electronic solicitation of legal business “under any circumstance, other than with an existing or former client, lawyer, close friend or relative.” Regarding written communications to “others,” Rules 7.3(b) and (c) provide as follows:

(b)(3) each written solicitation must include the following:

“Disregard this solicitation if you have already engaged a lawyer in connection with the legal matter referred to in this solicitation. You may wish to consult your lawyer or another lawyer instead of me (us). The exact nature of your legal situation will depend on many facts not known to me (us) at this time. You should understand that the advice and information in this solicitation is general and that your own situation may vary. This statement is required by rule of the Supreme Court of Missouri.” . . .

(8) if a lawyer knows that a lawyer other than the lawyer whose name or signature appears on the solicitation will actually handle the case or matter or that the case or matter will be referred to another lawyer or law firm, any written solicitation concerning a specific matter shall include a statement so advising the potential client; and

(9) a lawyer shall not send a written solicitation regarding a specific matter if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the person to whom the solicitation is directed is represented by a lawyer in the matter.

(c) A lawyer shall not send, nor knowingly permit to be sent . . . a written solicitation to any prospective client . . . if:

(4) the written solicitation concerns an action for personal injury or wrongful death or otherwise relates to an accident or disaster involving the person solicited or a relative of that person if the accident or disaster occurred less than 30 days prior to the solicitation . . . ; or

(5) the written solicitation vilifies, denounces or disparages any other potential party.

Montana: Rule 7.3(b)(4) prohibits a lawyer from contacting a prospective client if “the lawyer reasonably should know that the person is already represented by another lawyer.”

Nevada: Rule 7.3(d) provides, in part: “Written communication directed to a specific prospective client who may need legal services due to a particular transaction or occurrence is prohibited in Nevada within 45 days of the transaction or occurrence giving rise to the communication.”

New Hampshire: Rule 7.3(a) does not use the words “solicit” or “pecuniary gain” but provides that a lawyer “shall not initiate, by in-person, live voice, recorded or other real-time means, contact with a prospective client for the purpose of obtaining professional employment,” unless the person contacted fits the exemptions in ABA Model Rule 7.3(a)(1)-(2) or:

(3) is an employee, agent, or representative of a business, non-profit or governmental organization not known to be in need of legal services in a particular matter, and the lawyer seeks to provide services on behalf of the organization; or

(4) is an individual who regularly requires legal services in a commercial context and is not known to be in need of legal services in a particular matter.

New Hampshire Rule 7.3(d)(iii) exempts contact with “those the lawyer is permitted under applicable law to seek to join in litigation in the nature of a class action, if success in asserting rights or defenses of the litigation is dependent upon the joinder of others.”

New Jersey omits Rule 7.3(c) and Rule 7.3(d). In addition, to control solicitation after mass disasters, New Jersey adds Rule 7.3(b)(4), which provides that a lawyer shall not contact, or send a written communication to, a prospective client for the purpose of obtaining professional employment if “the communication involves unsolicited direct contact with a prospective client within thirty days after a specific mass-disaster event, when such contact concerns potential compensation arising from the event.” To prevent out-of-state attorneys from improperly soliciting New Jersey victims and their families after mass disasters, the Court’s Clerk has issued a statement saying that it “has jurisdiction over out-of-state attorneys who make such solicitations to prospective claimants in New Jersey.”

Regarding events other than mass disasters, New Jersey adds Rule 7.3(b)(5)(iii), which generally permits targeted mail if (among other things) it contains an additional notice that “the recipient may, if the letter is inaccurate or misleading, report same to the Committee on Attorney Advertising, Hughes Justice Complex, P.O. Box 037, Trenton, New Jersey 08625.”

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 7.3(b) defines “solicitation” to mean “any advertisement initiated by or on behalf of a lawyer or law firm that is directed to, or targeted at, a specific recipient or group of recipients, or their family members or legal representatives, the primary purpose of which is the retention of the lawyer or law firm, and a significant motive for which is pecuniary gain. It does not include a proposal or other writing prepared and delivered in response to a specific request of a prospective client.”

Rule 7.3(a) provides as follows: “A lawyer shall not engage in solicitation . . . by in-person or telephone contact, or by real-time or interactive computer-accessed communication unless the recipient is a close friend, relative, former client or existing client. . . .” Solicitation by any means is forbidden if (among other things) “the lawyer intends or expects, but does not disclose, that the legal services necessary to handle the matter competently will be performed primarily by another lawyer who is not affiliated with the soliciting lawyer as a partner, associate or of counsel.” Rule 7.3(c) imposes detailed filing requirements for most solicitations, including “a transcript of the audio portion of any radio or television solicitation” and “if the solicitation is in a language other than English, an accurate English-language translation.”

Rule 7.3(e) restricts solicitation in personal injury and wrongful death cases as follows: “No solicitation relating to a specific incident involving potential claims for personal injury or wrongful death shall be disseminated before the 30th day after the date of the incident, unless a filing must be made within 30 days of the incident as a legal prerequisite to the particular claim, in which case no unsolicited communication shall be made before the 15th day after the date of the incident.” New York addresses a similar issue in Rule 4.5, which has no Model Rule equivalent. That Rule restricts defense lawyers from engaging in unsolicited communications with prospective claimants in personal injury or wrongful death cases during the same time period described in Rule 7.3(e), unless the communication is with the claimant’s counsel.

Rule 7.3(i) provides that New York’s solicitation rules apply to lawyers from out of state who solicit clients in New York.

Also, under 22 NYCRR §130-1.1a, an attorney filing an “initiating pleading” must certify that “(i) the matter was not obtained through illegal conduct, or that if it was, the attorney or other persons responsible for the illegal conduct are not participating in the matter or sharing in any fee earned therefrom” and “(ii) the matter was not obtained in violation of [the rules of professional conduct].”

North Carolina: Rule 7.3(d)(1) defines the phrase “prepaid or group legal services plan,” and Rule 7.3(d)(2) sets forth detailed conditions that a lawyer must satisfy before participating in such a plan.

Ohio: Rule 7.3(c) requires targeted direct mail solicitation to: “(1) Disclose accurately and fully the manner in which the lawyer or law firm became aware of the identity and specific legal need of the addressee” and “(2) Disclaim or refrain from expressing any predetermined evaluation of the merits of the addressee’s case.” Rule 7.3(d) provides that before soliciting professional employment from a defendant in a civil action, a lawyer “shall verify that the party has been served with notice of the action filed against that party.” Service shall be verified by “consulting the docket of the court in which the action was filed. . . .”

Ohio Rule 7.3(e) provides that if a communication solicits professional employment in a potential claim for personal injury or wrongful death within 30 days of an accident or disaster, the communication must include a lengthy text headed “Understanding Your Rights,” which provides, in relevant part, as follows:

2. You do not have to sign anything — You may not want to give an interview or recorded statement without first consulting with an attorney, because the statement can be used against you. If you may be at fault or have been charged with a traffic or other offense, it may be advisable to consult an attorney right away. However, if you have insurance, your insurance policy probably requires you to cooperate with your insurance company and to provide a statement to the company. If you fail to cooperate with your insurance company, it may void your coverage.

3. Your interests versus interests of insurance company — Your interests and those of the other person’s insurance company are in conflict. Your interests may also be in conflict with your own insurance company. Even if you are not sure who is at fault, you should contact your own insurance company and advise the company of the incident to protect your insurance coverage. . . .

8. Check a lawyer’s qualifications — Before hiring any lawyer, you have the right to know the lawyer’s background, training, and experience in dealing with cases similar to yours.

9. How much will it cost? — In deciding whether to hire a particular lawyer, you should discuss, and the lawyer’s written fee agreement should reflect:

a. How is the lawyer to be paid? If you already have a settlement offer, how will that affect a contingent fee arrangement?

b. How are the expenses involved in your case, such as telephone calls, deposition costs, and fees for expert witnesses, to be paid? Will these costs be advanced by the lawyer or charged to you as they are incurred? Since you are obligated to pay all expenses even if you lose your case, how will payment be arranged?

c. Who will handle your case? If the case goes to trial, who will be the trial attorney?

Furthermore, a footnote to “Understanding Your Rights” says, in part: “THE SUPREME COURT OF OHIO . . . NEITHER PROMOTES NOR PROHIBITS THE DIRECT SOLICITATION OF PERSONAL INJURY VICTIMS.”

Pennsylvania omits Rules 7.3(c) and (d).

Rhode Island: Rule 7.3(a)(3) permits “in-person, live telephone or real-time electronic contact” solicitation for profit if the prospective client is “a business organization, a not-for-profit organization, or governmental body and the lawyer seeks to provide services related to the organization.”

South Carolina: Rule 7.3(d) provides:

(2) Each written or recorded solicitation must include the following statements:

(A) “You may wish to consult your lawyer or another lawyer instead of me (us). You may obtain information about other lawyers by consulting the Yellow Pages or by calling the South Carolina Bar Lawyer Referral Service at 799-7100 in Columbia or toll free at 1-800-868-2284. If you have already engaged a lawyer in connection with the legal matter referred to in this communication, you should direct any questions you have to that lawyer” and

(B) “The exact nature of your legal situation will depend on many facts not known to me (us) at this time. You should understand that the advice and information in this communication is general and that your own situation may vary.”

Where the solicitation is written, the above statements must be in a type no smaller than that used in the body of the communication.

(3) Each written or recorded solicitation must include the following statement:

“ANY COMPLAINTS ABOUT THIS LETTER (OR RECORDING) OR THE REPRESENTATIONS OF ANY LAWYER MAY BE DIRECTED TO THE COMMISSION

ON LAWYER CONDUCT, POST OFFICE BOX 12159, COLUMBIA, SOUTH CAROLINA 29211 TELEPHONE NUMBER 803-734-2038.” Where the solicitation is written, this statement must be printed in capital letters and in a size no smaller than that used in the body of the communication.

See more discussion of South Carolina Rule 418 in Selected State Variations under Rule 8.5.

Texas: Rule 7.06 provides that a lawyer “shall not accept or continue employment when the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the person who seeks the lawyer’s services does so as a result of conduct prohibited by these Rules.” In addition, under §38.12 of the Texas Penal Code it is a crime if a lawyer, “with intent to obtain an economic benefit . . . (2) solicits employment, either in person or by telephone, for himself or for another.” Section 38.01(11) of the Texas Penal Code defines the phrase “solicit employment” as follows:

(11) “Solicit employment” means to communicate in person or by telephone with a prospective client or a member of the prospective client’s family concerning professional employment . . . arising out of a particular occurrence or event, or series of occurrences or events, or concerning an existing problem of the prospective client . . . for the purpose of providing professional services to the prospective client, when neither the person receiving the communication nor anyone acting on that person’s behalf has requested the communication. The term does not include a communication initiated by a family member of the person receiving a communication. . . .

Virginia: Rule 7.3 prohibits “in-person” communications to a “non-lawyer” if the communication “has a substantial potential for or involves the use of coercion, duress, compulsion, intimidation, threats, unwarranted promises of benefits, overpersuasion, overreaching, or vexatious or harassing conduct, taking into account the sophistication regarding legal matters, the physical, emotional or mental state of the person to whom the communication is directed and the circumstances in which the communication is made.” Rule 7.3(c) prohibits a lawyer from assisting a “nonprofit organization” that engages in such communications, or in communications on the lawyer’s behalf that are “false, fraudulent, misleading, or deceptive,” and Rule 7.3(f) provides that in no event may a lawyer “initiate” in-person solicitation “for compensation in a personal injury or wrongful death claim of a prospective client with whom the lawyer has no family or prior professional relationship.”

Wisconsin: Rule 7.3(b)(1) adds that solicitation is prohibited if “(1) the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the physical, emotional or mental state of the person makes it unlikely that the person would exercise reasonable judgment in employing a lawyer.” Rule 7.3(e) (e) provides that ordinarily a lawyer “shall not draft legal documents, such as wills, trust instruments or contracts, which require or imply that the lawyer’s services be used in relation to that document.”

Proposed Rule 7.4 [RPC]

“Communication of Fields of Practice and Specialization”

(XDraft #7, 5/31/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 7.4 is the fourth of five proposed rules regulating lawyer marketing that track the Model Rule structure. Rule 7.4 sets out basic rules governing the communication of a lawyer's fields of practice and claims to specialization.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule

Comment

- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☒ Existing California Law

Rule

RPC 1-400.

Statute

Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6157 et seq.

Case law

- ☒ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

Montana Rule 7.4(a). See language added to proposed Rule 7.4(a).

- ☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 8
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 2
Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Dissenting Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart ☒ Yes ☐ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 7.4* Communication of Fields of Practice and Specialization

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

The Commission has determined that the ability of California lawyers and lawyers from other states to analyze issues concerning legal advertising and solicitation in this state would be enhanced by restating what is currently a single rule, California Rule 1-400, as five separate rules, numbered 7.1 through 7.5, that follow the organization of their ABA Model Rule counterparts. Nationally, there is marked variation among the jurisdictions in this area of lawyer regulation. The Commission believes that advertising of legal services and the solicitation of prospective clients is an area of lawyer regulation where greater national uniformity would be helpful to the public, practicing lawyers, and the courts in light of the current widespread use of the Internet by lawyers and law firms to market their services and the trend in many states toward allowing some form of multijurisdictional practice. However, the Commission has recommended departures from the Model Rules, in part to address Constitutional concerns.

Rule 7.1 sets out the general prohibition on a lawyer making false and misleading communications concerning the availability of legal services. Rule 7.2 specifically addresses advertising, a subset of communication, and typically involves communications directed at the general public. Rule 7.3 is concerned with regulating various means by which a lawyer seeking to market his or her services might make direct contact with a prospective client. Rule 7.4 sets out basic rules governing the communication of a lawyer's fields of practice and claims to specialization. Rule 7.5 does the same as rule 7.4 for the use of firm names and letterheads. The Commission, however, declines at this time to recommend Model Rule 7.6, which is intended to regulate political contributions made by lawyers to obtain legal work with government entities or to achieve an appointment as a judge. The Commission is still studying the feasibility of a rule analogous to Model Rule 7.6.

* Proposed Rule 7.4, XDraft 7 (5/31/09).

INTRODUCTION (Continued):

Proposed Rule 7.4 includes the basic concepts contained in Model Rule 7.4, with minor revisions: a provision permitting the communication of a lawyer's field of practice, (paragraph (a)); provisions permitting patent and admiralty lawyers to communicate the fact that they practice in those areas, (paragraphs (b) and (c)); and a provision limiting a claim of specialization, (paragraph (d)). The latter provision has been substantially revised to conform to the specifics of the California regulatory landscape.

The Commission does not recommend the adoption of the comments to Model Rule 7.4 because the provisions of proposed Rule 7.4 are self-explanatory and do not require comment to clarify them further.

Variation in Other Jurisdictions. There is a wide range of variation among jurisdictions in their approach to regulating lawyer advertising and solicitation. States that have diverged widely from the Model Rules include smaller jurisdictions such as the District of Columbia, Kentucky, Mississippi and Iowa, and larger states, such as Florida, New York, and Texas. Unlike these states that have either eliminated or added to marketing restrictions in the Model Rules, the Commission recommends keeping the same basic concepts found in the Model Rules, revised only to clarify or to address unique aspects of the California statutory and regulatory landscape.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.4 Communication of Fields of Practice and Specialization	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.4 Communication of Fields of Practice and Specialization	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) A lawyer may communicate the fact that the lawyer does or does not practice in particular fields of law.	(a) A lawyer may communicate the fact that the lawyer does or does not practice in particular fields of law. A lawyer may also communicate that his or her practice is limited to or concentrated in a particular field of law, subject to the requirements of Rule 7.1.	Paragraph (a) is based on Model Rule 7.4(a), which provides that a lawyer may communicate that the lawyer does or does not practice in particular fields of law. A sentence has been added that provides a lawyer may engage in a common practice among lawyers who market their availability – communicating that the lawyer's practice is limited to or concentrated in a particular field of law – so long as the communication does not imply an expertise in the field so as to be false or misleading under Rule 7.1.
(b) A lawyer admitted to engage in patent practice before the United States Patent and Trademark Office may use the designation "Patent Attorney" or a substantially similar designation.	(b) A lawyer ~~admitted~~registered to ~~engage in patent~~ practice patent law before the United States Patent and Trademark Office may use the designation "Patent Attorney" or a substantially similar designation.	Paragraph (b) is based on Model Rule 7.4(b). The language has been modified to reflect accurately that a lawyer who is authorized to practice patent law before the Patent and Trademark Office is "registered to practice patent law" there, and is not "admitted" to practice there.
(c) A lawyer engaged in Admiralty practice may use the designation "Admiralty," "Proctor in Admiralty" or a substantially similar designation.	(c) A lawyer engaged in Admiralty practice may use the designation "Admiralty," "Proctor in Admiralty" or a substantially similar designation.	Paragraph (c) is identical to Model Rule 7.4(c), which recognizes a long historical tradition of maritime law in federal courts and permits a lawyer to communicate that the lawyer is engaged in Admiralty practice.
(d) A lawyer shall not state or imply that a lawyer is certified as a specialist in a particular field of law, unless: (1) the lawyer has been certified as a specialist by an organization that has	(d) A lawyer shall not state or imply that ~~a~~the lawyer is certified as a specialist in a particular field of law, unless: (1) the lawyer ~~has been~~is certified as a specialist by ~~an organization that has~~	Paragraph (d) is based on Model Rule 7.4(c), but subparagraph (d)(1) has been revised to state the specific regulatory framework for specialization in California. Similar language may be found in current rule 1-400(D)(6). The language of the Model Rule was never intended as "model language" to be adopted by all jurisdictions, but simply as a template. The Model Rule language

* Proposed Rule, XDraft 7 (5/31/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.4 Communication of Fields of Practice and Specialization	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.4 Communication of Fields of Practice and Specialization	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
been approved by an appropriate state authority or that has been accredited by the American Bar Association; and (2) the name of the certifying organization is clearly identified in the communication.	~~been approved by an appropriate state authority~~the Board of Legal Specialization, or that has been any other entity accredited by the ~~American~~State Bar Associationto designate specialists pursuant to standards adopted by the Board of Governors; and (2) the name of the certifying organization is clearly identified in the communication.	recognizes that some jurisdictions' specialization "authority" resides with a state supreme court entity, while other jurisdictions' specialization "authority" is delegated to that jurisdiction's bar or an independent specialization body. The revision in the introductory paragraph of paragraph (d) – changing "a lawyer" to "the lawyer," – is intended to clarify that a lawyer may not state that he or she is certified as a specialist and is in keeping with rule drafting style. No change in substance is intended. Minority. A minority of the Commission disagrees with the substitution of language specific to the California regulatory framework in paragraph (d)(1), arguing that Proposed paragraph (d)(1) is unduly restrictive. The minority takes the position that a lawyer who truthfully states on his or her letterhead that he or she has been accredited as a specialist in another state, or by a bona fide accrediting organization that may not be designated as such by the State Bar, is not guilty of any deception. Such conduct should not be prohibited.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.4 ~~Direct~~ Communication of Fields of Practice and Specialization Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.4 ~~Direct~~ Communication of Fields of Practice and Specialization Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] Paragraph (a) of this Rule permits a lawyer to indicate areas of practice in communications about the lawyer's services. If a lawyer practices only in certain fields, or will not accept matters except in a specified field or fields, the lawyer is permitted to so indicate. A lawyer is generally permitted to state that the lawyer is a "specialist," practices a "specialty," or "specializes in" particular fields, but such communications are subject to the "false and misleading" standard applied in Rule 7.1 to communications concerning a lawyer's services.	~~[1] Paragraph (a) of this Rule permits a lawyer to indicate areas of practice in communications about the lawyer's services. If a lawyer practices only in certain fields, or will not accept matters except in a specified field or fields, the lawyer is permitted to so indicate. A lawyer is generally permitted to state that the lawyer is a "specialist," practices a "specialty," or "specializes in" particular fields, but such communications are subject to the "false and misleading" standard applied in Rule 7.1 to communications concerning a lawyer's services~~	The Commission determined that the provisions of Rule 7.4 are self-explanatory and do not require comment to clarify them further. Accordingly, the Commission does not recommend adoption of the comments to Model Rule 7.4.
[2] Paragraph (b) recognizes the long-established policy of the Patent and Trademark Office for the designation of lawyers practicing before the Office. Paragraph (c) recognizes that designation of Admiralty practice has a long historical tradition associated with maritime commerce and the federal courts.	~~[2] Paragraph (b) recognizes the long-established policy of the Patent and Trademark Office for the designation of lawyers practicing before the Office. Paragraph (c) recognizes that designation of Admiralty practice has a long historical tradition associated with maritime commerce and the federal courts.~~	See Explanation of Changes, Comment [1].

* Proposed Rule 7.4, Draft 7 (5/31/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.4 ~~Direct~~ Communication of Fields of Practice and Specialization Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.4 ~~Direct~~ Communication of Fields of Practice and Specialization Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[3] Paragraph (d) permits a lawyer to state that the lawyer is certified as a specialist in a field of law if such certification is granted by an organization approved by an appropriate state authority or accredited by the American Bar Association or another organization, such as a state bar association, that has been approved by the state authority to accredit organizations that certify lawyers as specialists. Certification signifies that an objective entity has recognized an advanced degree of knowledge and experience in the specialty area greater than is suggested by general licensure to practice law. Certifying organizations may be expected to apply standards of experience, knowledge and proficiency to insure that a lawyer's recognition as a specialist is meaningful and reliable. In order to insure that consumers can obtain access to useful information about an organization granting certification, the name of the certifying organization must be included in any communication regarding the certification.	~~[3] Paragraph (d) permits a lawyer to state that the lawyer is certified as a specialist in a field of law if such certification is granted by an organization approved by an appropriate state authority or accredited by the American Bar Association or another organization, such as a state bar association, that has been approved by the state authority to accredit organizations that certify lawyers as specialists. Certification signifies that an objective entity has recognized an advanced degree of knowledge and experience in the specialty area greater than is suggested by general licensure to practice law. Certifying organizations may be expected to apply standards of experience, knowledge and proficiency to insure that a lawyer's recognition as a specialist is meaningful and reliable. In order to insure that consumers can obtain access to useful information about an organization granting certification, the name of the certifying organization must be included in any communication regarding the certification.~~	See Explanation of Changes, Comment [1].

Rule 7.4 Communication of Fields of Practice and Specialization
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) A lawyer may communicate the fact that the lawyer does or does not practice in particular fields of law. A lawyer may also communicate that his or her practice is limited to or concentrated in a particular field of law, subject to the requirements of Rule 7.1.
- (b) A lawyer registered to practice patent law before the United States Patent and Trademark Office may use the designation "Patent Attorney" or a substantially similar designation;
- (c) A lawyer engaged in Admiralty practice may use the designation "Admiralty," "Proctor in Admiralty" or a substantially similar designation.
- (d) A lawyer shall not state or imply that the lawyer is certified as a specialist in a particular field of law, unless:
 - (1) the lawyer is certified as a specialist by the Board of Legal Specialization, or any other entity accredited by the State Bar to designate specialists pursuant to standards adopted by the Board of Governors; and
 - (2) the name of the certifying organization is clearly identified in the communication.

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 1
NI = 0

Rule 7.4. Communication of Fields of Practice and Specialization.
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		COPRAC supports the adoption of Proposed Rule 7.4 and the Comments to the Rule.	No response required.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel ("OCTC")	A	Yes		OCTC is not sure this rule is necessary but has no objection.	No response required.
3	San Diego County Bar Association ("SDCBA")	M	Yes	(a)	Recommends that the second sentence of rule 7.4(a) be revised to substitute "subject to the requirements of Rule 7.1" for "if such communication does not imply an unwarranted expertise in the field so as to be false or misleading under Rule 7.1."	The Commission agreed with, and made the change. It simplifies language with no effect on meaning.
				(d)(1)	Requests that the phrase in paragraph (d)(1), "a current certificate," be changed to "current certification" to clarify the rule is not referring to a piece of paper.	The Commission agreed with, and made the change for the reasons stated by the commenter.
				(e)	SDCBA proposes the addition of a new paragraph (e), which would provide: "(e) A lawyer who has not been certified as a specialist pursuant to rule 7.4(d) may not state or imply that he or she is a specialist in a particular field of law." SDCBA also recommends an alternative that would add the following clause: "unless he or she accompanies the statement or implication with an express statement to the effect that	The Commission did not make the change. The key concept is the word "certified." The prohibition is, and should be, on claiming one is certified when that in fact is not true. A person can specialize in a particular field even if he or she is not certified in that field. Proving a person has misstated a specialization or misled the consuming public might be difficult, but the micromanagement inherent in the commenter's proposal would cause more problems than it would correct.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 7.4. Communication of Fields of Practice and Specialization. [Sorted by Commenter]
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response lawyers can be certified as specialists by state-approved institutions and that he or she has not been so certified."

TOTAL = 3
Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 1
NI = 0

Rule 7.4: Communication of Fields of Practice and Specialization

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Arizona: The equivalent to Rule 7.4(d) permits lawyers to state or imply that they are specialists only if they are “certified by the Arizona Board of Legal Specialization” or by a “national entity” that the Board has recognized as having standards substantially the same as the Board’s standards.

California has no rule comparable to ABA Model Rule 7.4 in the California Rules of Professional Conduct, but California has developed an extensive program of specialty certification. To be eligible for certification, an attorney must be a member of the California State Bar in good standing and must (1) have spent at least 25 percent of his or her occupational time during the previous five years working in the area of law in which certification is sought, (2) pass a written exam tailored to the particular specialty field, (3) demonstrate a high level of experience in the specialty field by meeting specific task and experience requirements, (4) complete at least 45 hours of continuing legal education in the specialty field, and (5) be favorably evaluated by other attorneys and judges familiar with the attorney’s work. California offers specialty certification in eight areas of practice, including Appellate Law, Bankruptcy Law (both Personal and Small Business), Criminal Law, Estate Planning, Trust and Probate Law, Family Law, Immigration and Nationality Law, Taxation Law, and Workers’ Compensation Law. Each field has its own particular requirements. For more information, including links to the Rules Governing the State Bar of California Program for Certifying Legal Specialists (most recently amended effective November 1, 2003) and the requirements for each specialty field, visit the California State Bar’s web site at www.calbar.org and enter “Legal Specialization” in the site’s search box.

Connecticut: Rule 7.4A(d) describes in some detail 27 different fields of law in which lawyers may be certified as specialists. Rule 7.4B concerns the appointment, powers, and duties of a Legal Specialization Screening Committee that evaluates certifying entities, and Rule 7.4C concerns applications for approval as a certifying entity.

District of Columbia omits ABA Model Rule 7.4.

Florida: Rule 4-7.2(c)(6) divides the rules regulating claims and disclaimers for specialty certification into three categories, depending on whether a lawyer is certified as a specialist by (A) the Florida Bar, (B) another state bar, or (C) an entity not connected with any state bar.

Georgia tracks the first sentence of ABA Model Rule 7.4 verbatim, but eliminates the rest of the ABA rule and instead states the following: “A lawyer who is a specialist in a particular field of law by experience, specialized training or education, or is certified by a recognized and bona fide professional entity, may communicate such specialty or certification so long as the statement is not false or misleading.”

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2010, Rule 7.4(c) requires that if a lawyer's advertisement uses the terms “certified,” “specialist,” or “expert,” then the terms (1) must be “truthful and verifiable and may not be misleading,” and (2) must state that “the Supreme Court of Illinois does not recognize certifications of specialties in the practice of law and that the certificate, award or recognition is not a requirement to practice law in Illinois.”

Iowa: Rule 7.4 contains a list of 71 distinct fields of practice that a lawyer may identify or describe in communications.

Louisiana: In the rules effective October 1, 2009, Louisiana addresses this issue in Rule 7.2(c)(5) and specifies that lawyers generally cannot state or imply that they are specialists or experts unless they fit within certain narrow exceptions identified in the rule.

Massachusetts: Rule 7.4(a) permits lawyers to hold themselves out as “specialists” if the holding out does not include a false or misleading communication. The rule defines “holding out” to include “(1) a statement that the lawyer concentrates in, specializes in, is certified in, has expertise in, or limits practice to a particular service, field, or area of law, (2) directory listings, including electronic, computer-accessed or other similar types of directory listings, by particular service, field, or area of law, and (3) any other association of the lawyer's name with a particular service, field, or area of law.” Comment 3A to Rule 7.2 provides, in part, as follows:

Depending upon the topic or purpose of the newsgroup, bulletin board, or chat group, the posting might also constitute an association of the lawyer or law firm's name with a particular service, field, or area of law amounting to a claim of specialization under Rule 7.4 and would therefore be subject to the restrictions of that rule.

Michigan: Rule 7.4 stops after the first sentence of ABA Model Rule 7.4.

Missouri: Rule 7.4 provides that a lawyer other than an admiralty or patent attorney shall not state or imply that the lawyer is a specialist “unless the communication contains a disclaimer that neither the Supreme Court of Missouri nor The Missouri Bar reviews or approves certifying organizations or specialist designations.”

Nevada: Rule 7.4(d)(2)(iii) requires that any lawyer claiming to be a specialist “shall carry a minimum of $500,000 in professional liability insurance, with the exception of lawyers who practice exclusively in public law.” Nevada also adds a Rule 7.4A to establish procedures for the State Bar Board of Governors to approve organizations that certify lawyers as specialists.

New Jersey: Rule 7.4(d) permits a lawyer to communicate that the lawyer has been certified as a specialist only if the lawyer states (among other things) that “the certification has been granted by the Supreme Court of New Jersey or by an organization that has been approved by the American Bar Association.” If the certification has been granted by an organization that has not been approved, or has been denied approval, by either the Supreme Court of New Jersey or the American Bar Association, “the absence or denial of such approval shall be clearly identified in each such communication by the lawyer.”

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 7.4(c)(1) provides that a lawyer who is “certified as a specialist in a particular area of law or law practice by a private organization approved for that purpose by the American Bar Association” may advertise the certification only if the lawyer identifies the certifying organization and “prominently” makes the following disclaimer: “The [name of the private certifying organization] is not affiliated with any governmental authority. Certification is not a requirement for the practice of law in the State of New York and does not necessarily indicate greater competence than other attorneys experienced in this field of law.” If the lawyer is certified as a specialist by an “authority having jurisdiction over specialization under the laws of another state” (rather than by an ABA-approved private organization), Rule 7.4(c)(2) requires a slightly different disclaimer.

North Carolina relegates the substance of ABA Model Rule 7.4(b) (regarding patent and trademark practice) to a Comment and deletes Rule 7.4(c) (regarding admiralty practice).

Ohio: Rule 7.4(a) expressly adds that a lawyer may state that the lawyer “limits his or her practice to or concentrates in particular fields of law.” Rule 7.4(c) provides that a lawyer engaged in “trademark practice” may use the designation “Trademarks,” “Trademark Attorney,” or a substantially similar designation. “Ohio’s equivalent to ABA Model Rule 7.4(d)(1) applies if the lawyer has been certified as a specialist by an organization approved by the Supreme Court Commission on Certification of Attorneys as Specialists.”

Pennsylvania: Rule 7.4 permits lawyers to advertise that they are certified by organizations approved by the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court may approve an organization upon recommendation of the State Bar Association if the court finds that advertising certification by the organization “will provide meaningful information, which is not false, misleading or deceptive, for use of the public in selecting or retaining a lawyer.” Certification must be available to all lawyers “who meet objective and consistently applied standards relevant to practice in the area of law to which the certification relates.”

Texas: Rule 7.04(b)(2) permits lawyers to advertise that they have been certified as specialists by the Texas Board of Legal Specialization or by an organization that has been:

accredited by the Texas Board of Legal Specialization as a bona fide organization that admits to membership or grants certification only on the basis of objective, exacting, publicly available standards (including high standards of individual character, conduct, and reputation) that are reasonably relevant to the special training or special competence that is implied and that are in excess of the level of training and competence generally required for admission to the Bar. . . .

Virginia: Rule 7.4(d) permits a lawyer to communicate that the lawyer has been certified as a specialist by a particular organization if the communication “clearly states that there is no procedure in the Commonwealth of Virginia for approving certifying organizations.”

Proposed Rule 7.5 [RPC 1-400]

“Firm Names and Letterheads”

(XDraft #8, 6/16/10)

Summary: Proposed Rule 7.5 is the fifth of five proposed rules regulating lawyer marketing that track the Model Rule structure. Rule 7.5 sets out basic rules governing the use of firm names and letterheads.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rule

RPC 1-400.

Statute

Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6157 et seq.

Case law

People ex rel. Dept. of Corporations v. Speedee Oil Change Systems, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 1135, [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 816]

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 8

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 1

Abstain/ 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Dissenting Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart ☐ Yes ☒ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed* Rule 7.5 Firm Names and Letterheads

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

The Commission has determined that the ability of California lawyers and lawyers from other states to analyze issues concerning legal advertising and solicitation in this state would be enhanced by restating what is currently a single rule, California Rule 1-400, as five separate rules, numbered 7.1 through 7.5, that follow the organization of their ABA Model Rule counterparts. Nationally, there is marked variation among the jurisdictions in this area of lawyer regulation. The Commission believes that advertising of legal services and the solicitation of prospective clients is an area of lawyer regulation where greater national uniformity would be helpful to the public, practicing lawyers, and the courts in light of the current widespread use of the Internet by lawyers and law firms to market their services and the trend in many states toward allowing some form of multijurisdictional practice. However, the Commission has recommended departures from the Model Rules, in part to address Constitutional concerns.

Rule 7.1 sets out the general prohibition on a lawyer making false and misleading communications concerning the availability of legal services. Rule 7.2 specifically addresses advertising, a subset of communication, and typically involves communications directed at the general public. Rule 7.3 is concerned with regulating various means by which a lawyer seeking to market his or her services might make direct contact with a prospective client. Rule 7.4 sets out basic rules governing the communication of a lawyer's fields of practice and claims to specialization. Rule 7.5 does the same as rule 7.4 for the use of firm names and letterheads. The Commission, however, declines at this time to recommend Model Rule 7.6, which is intended to regulate political contributions made by lawyers to obtain legal work with government entities or to achieve an appointment as a judge. The Commission is still studying the feasibility of a rule analogous to Model Rule 7.6.

* Proposed Rule 7.3, XDraft 8 (6/16/10).

INTRODUCTION (Continued):

Proposed Rule 7.5 is identical to Model Rule 7.5 except that paragraph (d) has been revised to provide specific reference to the current regulatory framework in California.

The Model Rule comment has been revised to remove expository language and to add specific language the California Supreme Court has adopted in the Discussion to current rule 1-400.

Variation in Other Jurisdictions. There is a wide range of variation among jurisdictions in their approach to regulating lawyer advertising and solicitation. States that have diverged widely from the Model Rules include smaller jurisdictions such as the District of Columbia, Kentucky, Mississippi and Iowa, and larger states, such as Florida, New York, and Texas. Unlike these states that have either eliminated or added to marketing restrictions in the Model Rules, the Commission recommends keeping the same basic concepts found in the Model Rules, revised only to clarify or to address unique aspects of the California statutory and regulatory landscape.

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.5 Firm Names and Letterheads	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.5 Firm Names and Letterheads	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) A lawyer shall not use a firm name, letterhead or other professional designation that violates Rule 7.1. A trade name may be used by a lawyer in private practice if it does not imply a connection with a government agency or with a public or charitable legal services organization and is not otherwise in violation of Rule 7.1.	(a) A lawyer shall not use a firm name, letterhead or other professional designation that violates Rule 7.1. A trade name may be used by a lawyer in private practice if it does not imply a connection with a government agency or with a public or charitable legal services organization and is not otherwise in violation of Rule 7.1.	Paragraph (a) is identical to Model Rule 7.5(a). The closest counterpart to this provision in the current California Rules is Standard (6) to current rule 1-400, which provides that the following is a presumed violation of rule 1-400: "(6) A 'communication' in the form of a firm name, trade name, fictitious name, or other professional designation which states or implies a relationship between any member in private practice and a government agency or instrumentality or a public or non-profit legal services organization."
(b) A law firm with offices in more than one jurisdiction may use the same name or other professional designation in each jurisdiction, but identification of the lawyers in an office of the firm shall indicate the jurisdictional limitations on those not licensed to practice in the jurisdiction where the office is located.	(b) A law firm with offices in more than one jurisdiction may use the same name or other professional designation in each jurisdiction, but identification of the lawyers in an office of the firm shall indicate the jurisdictional limitations on those not licensed to practice in the jurisdiction where the office is located.	Paragraph (b) is identical to Model Rule 7.5(b). Currently, there is no similar provision in California.
(c) The name of a lawyer holding a public office shall not be used in the name of a law firm, or in communications on its behalf, during any substantial period in which the lawyer is not actively and regularly practicing with the firm.	(c) The name of a lawyer holding a public office shall not be used in the name of a law firm, or in communications on its behalf, during any substantial period in which the lawyer is not actively and regularly practicing with the firm.	Paragraph (c) is identical to Model Rule 7.5(c). Currently, there is no similar provision in California.

* Proposed Rule 7.5, XDraft 8 (6/16/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.5 Firm Names and Letterheads	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.5 Firm Names and Letterheads	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(d) Lawyers may state or imply that they practice in a partnership or other organization only when that is the fact.	(d) Lawyers may state or imply that they practice in a partnership or other organization only when that is the fact.	Paragraph (d) is identical to Model Rule 7.5(d).

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.5 Firm Names and Letterheads Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.5 Firm Names and Letterheads Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] A firm may be designated by the names of all or some of its members, by the names of deceased members where there has been a continuing succession in the firm's identity or by a trade name such as the "ABC Legal Clinic." A lawyer or law firm may also be designated by a distinctive website address or comparable professional designation. Although the United States Supreme Court has held that legislation may prohibit the use of trade names in professional practice, use of such names in law practice is acceptable so long as it is not misleading. If a private firm uses a trade name that includes a geographical name such as "Springfield Legal Clinic," an express disclaimer that it is a public legal aid agency may be required to avoid a misleading implication. It may be observed that any firm name including the name of a deceased partner is, strictly speaking, a trade name. The use of such names to designate law firms has proven a useful means of identification. However, it is misleading to use the name of a lawyer not associated with the firm or a predecessor of the firm, or the name of a nonlawyer.	[1] A firm may be designated by the names of all or some of its ~~members~~lawyers, by the names of deceased ~~members~~or retired lawyers where there has been a continuing succession in the firm's identity, by a distinctive website address, or by a trade name such as the "ABC Legal Clinic." ~~A lawyer or law firm may also be designated by a distinctive website address or comparable professional designation. Although the United States Supreme Court has held that legislation may prohibit the use of trade names in professional practice, use~~ Use of such names in law practice is acceptable so long as it is not misleading in violation of Rule 7.1. If a private firm uses a trade name that includes a geographical name such as "Springfield Legal Clinic," ~~an express disclaimer~~the firm may have to expressly disclaim that it is a public legal aid agency ~~may be required~~ to avoid a misleading implication. ~~It may be observed that any firm name including the name of a deceased partner is, strictly speaking, a trade name. The use of such names to designate law firms has proven a useful means of identification. However, it~~ is misleading to use the name of a lawyer not associated with the firm or a predecessor of the firm, or the name of a nonlawyer.	Comment [1] is based on Model Rule 7.5, cmt. [1]. Comment [1] elaborates upon the general prohibition in paragraph (a) of the Rule, and gives examples of firm names that violate or do not violate proposed Rule 7.1's proscription against false or misleading communications. The Model Rule language in what is now the next-to-last sentence was revised in response to public comment that the Model Rule syntax was confusing. See 12/1/2006 OCBA Memo to Commission. The two next-to-last sentences in Model Rule 7.5, cmt. [1], were deleted as unnecessary exposition.

* Proposed Rule 7.5, Draft 7 (5/31/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 7.5 Firm Names and Letterheads Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 7.5 Firm Names and Letterheads Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[2] With regard to paragraph (d), lawyers sharing office facilities, but who are not in fact associated with each other in a law firm, may not denominate themselves as, for example, "Smith and Jones," for that title suggests that they are practicing law together in a firm..	[2] With regard to paragraph (d), lawyers sharing office facilities, but who are not in fact associated with each other in a law firm, may not denominate themselves as, for example, "Smith and Jones," for that title suggests that they are practicing law together in a firm. A lawyer may state or imply that the lawyer or lawyer's law firm is "of counsel" to another lawyer or a law firm only if the former has a relationship with the latter (other than as a partner or associate, or officer or shareholder pursuant to Business and professions Code sections 6160-6172) which is close, personal, continuous, and regular.	The first sentence of comment [2] is identical to Model Rule 7.5, cmt. [2]. The second sentence of comment [2] has no counterpart in the Model Rule but is instead derived from Standard (8) to current rule 1-400. The "close, personal, continuous, and regular" standard has been adopted by the California Supreme Court in the conflicts of interest context. See, e.g., People ex rel. Department of Corporations v. Speedee Oil Change Systems, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 1135, 1139-40, 86 Cal.Rptr.2d 816.

Rule 7.5 Firm Names and Letterheads

(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to Public Comment Draft)

- (a) A lawyer shall not use a firm name, letterhead or other professional designation that violates Rule 7.1. A trade name may be used by a lawyer in private practice if it does not imply a connection with a government agency or with a public or charitable legal services organization and is not otherwise in violation of Rule 7.1.
- (b) A law firm with offices in more than one jurisdiction may use the same name or other professional designation in each jurisdiction, but identification of the lawyers in an office of the firm shall indicate the jurisdictional limitations on those not licensed to practice in the jurisdiction where the office is located.
- (c) The name of a lawyer holding a public office shall not be used in the name of a law firm, or in communications on its behalf, during any substantial period in which the lawyer is not actively and regularly practicing with the firm.
- (d) Lawyers may state or imply that they practice in a partnership or other organization only when that is the fact.

COMMENT

- [1] A firm may be designated by the names of all or some of its lawyers, by the names of deceased or retired lawyers where there has been a continuing succession in the firm's identity, by a distinctive website address, or by a trade name such as the "ABC Legal Clinic." Use of such names in law practice is acceptable so long as it is not misleading in violation of Rule 7.1. If a private firm uses a trade name that includes a geographical name such as "Springfield Legal Clinic," the firm may have to expressly disclaim that it is a public legal aid agency to avoid a misleading implication. It is misleading to use the name of a lawyer not associated with the firm or a predecessor of the firm, or the name of a nonlawyer. Lawyers associated with a lawyer who is disbarred or who resigns with charges pending must comply with Business and Professions Code section 6132.

- [2] With regard to paragraph (d), lawyers sharing office facilities, but who are not in fact associated with each other in a law firm, may not denominate themselves as, for example, "Smith and Jones," for that title suggests that they are practicing law together in a firm. A lawyer may state or imply that the lawyer or lawyer's law firm is "of counsel" to another lawyer or a law firm only if the former has a relationship with the latter (other than as a partner or associate, or officer or shareholder pursuant to Business and Professions Code sections 6160-6172) which is close, personal, continuous, and regular.

Rule 7.5 Firm Names and Letterheads
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) A lawyer shall not use a firm name, letterhead or other professional designation that violates Rule 7.1. A trade name may be used by a lawyer in private practice if it does not imply a connection with a government agency or with a public or charitable legal services organization and is not otherwise in violation of Rule 7.1.
- (b) A law firm with offices in more than one jurisdiction may use the same name or other professional designation in each jurisdiction, but identification of the lawyers in an office of the firm shall indicate the jurisdictional limitations on those not licensed to practice in the jurisdiction where the office is located.
- (c) The name of a lawyer holding a public office shall not be used in the name of a law firm, or in communications on its behalf, during any substantial period in which the lawyer is not actively and regularly practicing with the firm.
- (d) Lawyers may state or imply that they practice in a partnership or other organization only when that is the fact.

COMMENT

- [1] A firm may be designated by the names of all or some of its lawyers, by the names of deceased or retired lawyers where there has been a continuing succession in the firm's identity, by a distinctive website address, or by a trade name such as the "ABC Legal Clinic." Use of such names in law practice is acceptable so long as it is not misleading in violation of Rule 7.1. If a private firm uses a trade name that includes a geographical name such as "Springfield Legal Clinic," the firm may have to expressly disclaim that it is a public legal aid agency to avoid a misleading implication. It is misleading to use the name of a lawyer not associated with the firm or a predecessor of the firm, or the name of a nonlawyer. Lawyers associated with a lawyer who is disbarred or who resigns with charges pending must comply with Business and Professions Code section 6132.
- [2] With regard to paragraph (d), lawyers sharing office facilities, but who are not in fact associated with each other in a law firm, may not denominate themselves as, for example, "Smith and Jones," for that title suggests that they are practicing law together in a firm. A lawyer may state or imply that the lawyer or lawyer's law firm is "of counsel" to another lawyer or a law firm only if the former has a relationship with the latter (other than as a partner or associate, or officer or shareholder pursuant to Business and Professions Code sections 6160-6172) which is close, personal, continuous, and regular.

TOTAL = 5 Agree = 4
Disagree = 0
Modify = 1
NI = 0

Rule 7.5. Firm Names and Letterheads.
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Access to Justice Committee of L.A. County Bar Association [Toby Rothschild]	A	Yes		Commenter appreciates the proposed Rule and Comment [1]'s guidance re the prohibition on the use of trade names that include words such as "legal aid" that might mislead consumers to believe that a private law firm is associated with a government program intended to provide legal services to the poor.	No response required.
2	COPRAC	A	Yes		COPRAC supports the adoption of Proposed Rule 7.5 and the Comments to the Rule.	No response required.
3	Office of Chief Trial Counsel ("OCTC")	A	Yes		OCTC supports this rule. Comments 1 and 2 should be broken down into several comments so that the ideas do not get buried. Also, a Comment should refer attorneys to section 6132 of the Business and Profession Code regarding their duty to remove the names of disbarred and resigned attorneys from their law firms.	No response required. The Commission did not make the suggested change. It disagrees that the ideas are buried in the comments. The Commission has made the suggested change.
4	Orange County Bar Association ("OCBA")	M	Yes	Comment [1]	The words "all or some" in the second line of Comment [1] should be changed to "one or more." Some firms use the name of only one lawyer as the firm name.	The Commission declines to change the language of the Model Rule comment, which has been nearly universally adopted across the country. The Commission does not understand how the use of only one lawyer's name for the firm name would violate the Rule.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 7.5. Firm Names and Letterheads.
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				Comment [2]	An additional sentence should be added at the end of Comment [2] stating: "It is permissible to use the name of a lawyer who has a proper 'of counsel' relationship with a law firm in the name of the firm." Adding such a sentence eliminates any confusion on this question and would reconcile two ethics opinions that are currently inconsistent in this regard. LACBA Formal Op. No. 421 (1983), addressing then applicable Rule 2-101 (Rule 1-400's predecessor), determined that using an "of counsel" lawyer's name in a firm name was improper. California State Bar Form. Op. 1986-90, also addressing 2-101, implies that the use of a lawyer's name who is "of counsel" to the firm in a firm name is permissible if the lawyer's actual relationship and true role is properly communicated. Add a new Comment [3] stating: "Also with regard to paragraph (d), a lawyer may not denominate a firm name as, for example, "Smith & Associates" or "Smith, Jones & Associates," if Smith or Smith and Jones do not in fact practice with associates." The OCBA believes that this is a sufficiently common practice among some sole practitioners or small firms such that it should be specifically addressed. The OCBA also believes that the practice is misleading.	The Commission disagrees that the suggested sentence should be added. The proposed sentence would be merely permissive and potentially misleading, and thus should not be included in a comment to the rule. Whether an "of counsel" relationship with a firm is "proper" would depend upon the particular facts and circumstances, see last sentence of Comment [2] to Rule 7.5, and a blanket statement that it is appropriate to use the name of a person who is "of counsel" in the firm's name would itself be misleading. The Commission has determined that if, as the commenter asserts, it is a "common practice" for sole practitioners to use the term "associates" in their firm names, then those lawyers are already in violation of Rule 7.5. Rule 7.5 prohibits the use of firm names "in violation of Rule 7.1," which in turn prohibits lawyers from making a "false or misleading communication." No further elaboration is required.

Rule 7.5. Firm Names and Letterheads. [Sorted by Commenter]
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
5	San Diego County Bar Association	A	Yes		Approves proposed Rule in its entirety.	No response required.

Rule 7.5: Firm Names and Letterheads

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Alaska adds the following paragraph (e): “The term ‘of counsel’ shall be used only to refer to a lawyer who has a close continuing relationship with the firm.”

Arizona deletes the qualification in the second sentence of subparagraph (a) beginning, “if it does not imply a connection with a government agency. . . .”

California: Compare Standards 6 through 9 following Rule 1-400. In addition, §16952 of the California Corporations Law, entitled “Requirements for Name,” provides that the name of a registered limited liability partnership must contain the words “Registered Limited Liability Partnership” or “Limited Liability Partnership” or one of the abbreviations “L.L.P.,” “LLP,” “R.L.L.P.,” or “RLLP” as the last words or letters of its name.

Florida: Rule 4-7.9(b) permits a lawyer to practice under a trade name if the name is “not deceptive” and “does not imply that the firm is something other than a private law firm.” The same rule permits a lawyer to use the term “legal clinic” or “legal services” in conjunction with the lawyer’s own name “if the lawyer’s practice is devoted to providing routine legal services for fees that are lower than the prevailing rate in the community for those services.”

Under Rule 4-7.9(c) a lawyer may not advertise under a trade or fictitious name “unless the same name is the law firm name that appears on the lawyer’s letterhead, business cards, office sign, and fee contracts, and appears with the lawyer’s signature on pleadings and other legal documents.” The Comment to Rule 4-7.9 notes that a lawyer may not advertise under “a nonsense name designed to obtain an advantageous position for the lawyer in alphabetical directory listings unless the lawyer actually practices under that nonsense name.”

Georgia adds Rule 7.5(e)(1), which permits a lawyer in private practice to use a trade name if it “includes the name of at least one of the lawyers practicing under said name. A law firm name consisting solely of the name or names of deceased or retired members of the firm does not have to include the name of an active member of the firm.”

Iowa: Rule 7.5 provides in paragraph (f) that a “lawyer who is engaged both in the practice of law and in another profession or business shall not so indicate on the lawyer’s letterhead, office sign, or professional card, and shall not be identified as a lawyer in any publication in connection with the lawyer's other profession or business."

Massachusetts adds to ABA Comment 2 that the term "associates" implies practice in either a partnership or sole proprietorship form and "may not be used by a group in which the individual members disclaim the joint or vicarious responsibility inherent in such forms of business in the absence of an effective disclaimer of such responsibility."

Nevada: Rule 7.5(b) provides that a law firm with offices in more than one jurisdiction "that has registered with the State Bar of Nevada under Rule 7.5A" may use the same name in each jurisdiction. Rule 7.5A(a) provides: "All law firms having an office in Nevada and in one or more other jurisdictions shall register with the State Bar of Nevada and shall pay an annual fee of $500 for such registration." The remainder of the rule sets out lengthy, detailed disclosure requirements such as: "(1) The names and addresses of all lawyers employed by the firm, the jurisdictions in which each lawyer is licensed, and verification that each lawyer is in good standing in the jurisdictions in which each lawyer is licensed; (2) Any pending disciplinary action or investigation against a lawyer employed by the firm;" and (5) a certification that:

(i) The firm will maintain a permanent office in Nevada with a resident member of the firm who is also an active member in good standing of the State Bar of Nevada at all times the firm is practicing in Nevada . . . [and]

(ii) The firm agrees to disclose in writing to its Nevada clients whether all of its lawyers are licensed to practice in Nevada and, if any of its lawyers are not so licensed, to disclose what legal work will be performed by lawyers not admitted to practice in this state. Upon request of the State Bar of Nevada, the firm shall provide documentation evidencing its compliance with these disclosure requirements. . . .

New Jersey: Rule 7.5(b) permits a law firm with offices in more than one jurisdiction to use the same name in each jurisdiction, but all advertisements, letterheads or "anywhere else that the firm name is used," must indicate the jurisdictional limitations on those not licensed to practice in New Jersey. If a firm name includes the name of any lawyer not licensed in New Jersey, then any advertisement, letterhead or other communication containing the firm name "must include the name of at least one licensed New Jersey attorney who is responsible for the firm's New Jersey practice or the local office thereof. . . ." Rule 7.5(d) permits lawyers to state or imply that they practice in a partnership "only if the persons designated in the firm name and the principal members of the firm share in the responsibility and liability for the firm's performance of legal services." Rule 7.5(e) provides as follows:

(e) A law firm name may include additional identifying language such as "& Associates" only when such language is accurate and descriptive of the firm. Any firm name including additional identifying language such as "Legal Services" or other similar phrases shall inform all prospective clients in the retainer agreement or other writing that the law firm is not affiliated or associated with a public, quasi-public or charitable organization. However, no firm shall use the phrase “legal aid” in its name or in any additional identifying language.

However, in In the Matter of the Decision on CAA 47-2007, 2009 WL 468292 (N.J. 2009), which addressed whether a law firm could use the name “Alpha Center for Divorce Mediation,” the New Jersey Supreme Court ordered its Committee on Attorney Advertising to consider and make recommendations on “any additional information, or change in format, that this Court should allow in respect of law firm names, including specifically any additional or changed language that the Committee recommends for insertion into the present RPC 7.5,” and “to consider (among other things) “whether special rules should be established for attorney practices that include the performance of activities that may be performed by non-attorneys.” When we went to press in September of 2009, the review was still under way.

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, New York sets forth detailed regulations in Rule 7.5(a) regarding “internet websites, professional cards, professional announcements, office signs, letterheads or similar professional notices or devices.” Rule 7.5(b), which is based on DR 2-102(B) of the old ABA Model Code, provides as follows:

A lawyer in private practice shall not practice under a trade name, a name that is misleading as to the identity of the lawyer or lawyers practicing under such name, or a firm name containing names other than those of one or more of the lawyers in the firm, except that . . . a firm may use as, or continue to include in its name, the name or names of one or more deceased or retired members of the firm or of a predecessor firm in a continuing line of succession. . . . A lawyer or law firm may not include the name of a nonlawyer in its firm name. . . .

New York adds Rule 7.5(e)-(f), which addresses domain names and firm names as follows:

(e) A lawyer or law firm may utilize a domain name for an internet web site that does not include the name of the lawyer or law firm provided:

(1) all pages of the web site clearly and conspicuously include the actual name of the lawyer or law firm;

(2) the lawyer or law firm in no way attempts to engage in the practice of law using the domain name;

(3) the domain name does not imply an ability to obtain results in a matter; and

(4) the domain name does not otherwise violate these Rules.

(f) A lawyer or law firm may utilize a telephone number which contains a domain name, nickname, moniker or motto that does not otherwise violate a disciplinary rule.

North Carolina: Rule 7.5(a) adds the following: “Every trade name used by a law firm shall be registered with the North Carolina State Bar for a determination of whether the name is misleading.” Rule 7.5(d) ends with the words “whether or not the lawyer is precluded from practicing law.”

Ohio: Rule 7.5(a) expressly provides that a lawyer in private practice “shall not practice under a trade name,” and generally permits a law firm to “use as, or continue to include in, its name the name or names of one or more deceased or retired members of the firm or of a predecessor firm in a continuing line of succession.” Rule 7.5(b) provides that a law firm with offices in more than one jurisdiction that lists attorneys associated with the firm “shall indicate the jurisdictional limitations on those not licensed to practice in Ohio.”

Oregon: Rule 7.5(d) forbids a lawyer to “permit his or her name to remain in the name of a law firm or to be used by the firm during the time the lawyer is not actively and regularly practicing law as a member of the firm” and forbids members of the firm to use the lawyer’s name. The rule does not apply for absences of one year or less during which the lawyer is not actively practicing law if the lawyer plans to return to the firm. The rule also does not apply to the names of “retiring, deceased, or retired members of the firm or a predecessor law firm in a continuing line of succession.”

Virginia: The first sentence of Rule 7.5(a) permits a lawyer or law firm to use “a professional card, professional announcement, card, office sign, letterheads, telephone directory listing, law list, legal directory listing, website, or a similar professional notice or device unless it includes a statement or claim that is false, fraudulent, misleading, or deceptive.” Rule 7.5(b) prohibits lawyers licensed in different jurisdictions from forming or continuing a law firm “unless all enumerations of the members and associates of the firm on its letterhead and in other permissible listings make clear the jurisdictional limitations of those members and associates of the firm not licensed to practice in all listed jurisdictions; however, the same firm name may be used in each jurisdiction.”

Proposed Rule 8.1 [RPC 1-200]

“False Statement Regarding Application for Admission to Practice of Law”

(XDraft # 4.1, 10/16/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 8.1, which prohibits certain conduct in applying to be admitted to practice law in California, substantially follows Model Rule 8.1, with three principal departures. See Introduction.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart
Rule	Comment
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rule

RPC 1-200; Cal. Rules of Court, Rules 9.40 to 9.46.

Statute

Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6062, 6068(c),(d),(e); Code Civ. Pro. § 1282.4

Case law

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 10
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 1
Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Dissenting Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☐ Yes ☒ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 8.1* False Statement Regarding Application for Admission to Practice Law

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION: Proposed Rule 8.1 substantially follows ABA Model Rule 8.1 with three principal departures: (1) proposed Rule 8.1 addresses statements made in connection with applications for “admission to practice law”, whereas Model Rule 8.1 more narrowly addresses statements made in connection with applications for “admission to the bar” (a difference that is explained in paragraph (d) of the proposed Rule); (2) unlike Model Rule 8.1, proposed Rule 8.1 does not address statements made in connection with disciplinary proceedings; and (3) proposed Rule 8.1 imposes a more stringent standard on applicants with respect to their own applications for admission (prohibiting both false statements of material fact and failure to disclose a material fact) than on members with respect to other persons’ applications for admission (prohibiting false statements of material fact). However, similar to the Model Rule paragraph (c) of the proposed Rule states that both applicants and lawyers in connection with an application for admission must not fail to correct a material misapprehension in matter. Paragraph (d) and Comment [4] to Proposed Rule also provide illustrations of the various proceedings that constitute “applications for admission to practice law” in California and pertinent related authority.

Conduct in relation to a disciplinary proceeding is not addressed in this rule because the Commission considers the State Bar Court to be a “tribunal” within the meaning of proposed Rule 3.3. A lawyer’s conduct before a tribunal, including statements made to a tribunal, is covered in Rule 3.3 rather than in this rule.

* Proposed Rule 8.1, XDraft 4.1 (10/16/07).

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.1 Bar Admission And Disciplinary Matters	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.1 False Statement Regarding Application for Admission to Practice of Law	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
An applicant for admission to the bar, or a lawyer in connection with a bar admission application or in connection with a disciplinary matter, shall not:	~~An applicant for admission to the bar, or a lawyer in connection with a bar admission application or in connection with a disciplinary matter, shall not:~~	The title of proposed Rule 8.1 has been revised from Model Rule 8.1 to emphasize that the rule prohibits (1) the making of a false statements (2) in connection with applications for "admission to practice law" and not solely (as in Model Rule 8.1) to applications for "admission to the bar," and provides examples of the broader concept of "admission to practice law" in paragraph (c) and Comment [2]. The expanded scope of the proposed Rule is intended to provide greater public protection. The proposed Rule does not address statements made by a member in connection with disciplinary matters.
	(a) An applicant for admission to practice law shall not knowingly make a false statement of material fact or knowingly fail to disclose a material fact in connection with that person's own application for admission.	Unlike the Model Rule, the proposed Rule creates a two-tier standard, (1) prohibiting an applicant for admission from knowingly making a false statement or knowingly failing to disclose a material fact in connection with the applicant's own application for admission (paragraph (a)) and (2) prohibiting a lawyer from knowingly making a false statement in connection with another's application for admission (paragraph (b)).
(a) knowingly make a false statement of material fact; or	~~(a)~~ (b) A lawyer shall not knowingly make a false statement of material fact; ~~or~~ in connection with another person's application for admission to practice law.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a), above.

* Proposed Rule 8.1, XDraft 4.1 (10/16/07). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.1 Bar Admission And Disciplinary Matters	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.1 False Statement Regarding Application for Admission to Practice of Law	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(b) fail to disclose a fact necessary to correct a misapprehension known by the person to have arisen in the matter, or knowingly fail to respond to a lawful demand for information from an admissions or disciplinary authority, except that this rule does not require disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.	~~(b) fail to disclose a fact necessary to correct a misapprehension known by the person to have arisen in the matter, or knowingly fail to respond to a lawful demand for information from an admissions or disciplinary authority, except that this rule does not require disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.~~	The proposed Rule does not impose an affirmative obligation to respond to a lawful demand for information, because the Commission did not believe that the omissions described should be the basis for discipline. See below for that part of Model Rule paragraph (b) that addresses disclosures to correct misapprehensions.
	(c) An applicant for admission to practice law, or a lawyer in connection with an application for admission, shall not fail to disclose a fact necessary to correct a statement known by the applicant or the lawyer to have created a material misapprehension in the matter, except that this Rule does not authorize disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.	The part of paragraph (b) of the Model Rule requiring an applicant and a lawyer (in connection with application for admission) to disclose a fact necessary to correct a known misapprehension in the matter is adapted in proposed paragraph (c). The Commission believes that this affirmative obligation is an appropriate basis for discipline.
	(d) As used in this Rule, "admission to practice law" includes admission or readmission to membership in the State Bar; reinstatement to active membership in the State Bar; an application for permission to appear pro hac vice; and any similar provision relating to admission or certification to practice law in California or elsewhere.	Proposed Rule 8.1 provides illustrations of some of the diverse proceedings encompassed by the term, "admission to practice law," in new paragraph (d) for guidance, and Comment [4] to the proposed Rule lists additional examples.

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.1 Bar Admission And Disciplinary Matters Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 8.1 False Statement Regarding Application for Admission to Practice of Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] The duty imposed by this Rule extends to persons seeking admission to the bar as well as to lawyers. Hence, if a person makes a material false statement in connection with an application for admission, it may be the basis for subsequent disciplinary action if the person is admitted, and in any event may be relevant in a subsequent admission application. The duty imposed by this Rule applies to a lawyer's own admission or discipline as well as that of others. Thus, it is a separate professional offense for a lawyer to knowingly make a misrepresentation or omission in connection with a disciplinary investigation of the lawyer's own conduct. Paragraph (b) of this Rule also requires correction of any prior misstatement in the matter that the applicant or lawyer may have made and affirmative clarification of any misunderstanding on the part of the admissions or disciplinary authority of which the person involved becomes aware.	[1] A person who makes a false statement in connection with that person's own application for admission to practice law may be subject to discipline under this Rule after that person has been admitted. ~~The duty imposed by this Rule extends to persons seeking admission to the bar as well as to lawyers. Hence, if a person makes a material false statement in connection with an application for admission, it may be the basis for subsequent disciplinary action if the person is admitted, and in any event may be relevant in a subsequent admission application. The duty imposed by this Rule applies to a lawyer's own admission or discipline as well as that of others. Thus, it is a separate professional offense for a lawyer to knowingly make a misrepresentation or omission in connection with a disciplinary investigation of the lawyer's own conduct. Paragraph (b) of this Rule also requires correction of any prior misstatement in the matter that the applicant or lawyer may have made and affirmative clarification of any misunderstanding on the part of the admissions or disciplinary authority of which the person involved becomes aware.~~	The proposed Comment states the first part of Model Rule Comment [1] in a more concise manner, stating that an applicant for admission who makes a material false statement in connection with that application may be subject to subsequent discipline if admitted. The proposed Rule omits the second part of Model Rule Comment [1] noting that the duty imposed by the rule applies both to a member's statements both with respect to his or her own application for admission and with respect to another person's application for admission because it merely repeats the rule as revised. However, like Proposed Rule 8.1, Comment [1] to the Proposed Rule omits any reference to statements made in connection with disciplinary proceedings.

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.1 Bar Admission And Disciplinary Matters Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 8.1 False Statement Regarding Application for Admission to Practice of Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[2] This Rule is subject to the provisions of the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution and corresponding provisions of state constitutions. A person relying on such a provision in response to a question, however, should do so openly and not use the right of nondisclosure as a justification for failure to comply with this Rule.	[2] This Rule is subject to the provisions of the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution and corresponding provisions of state constitutions.~~A person relying on such a provision in response to a question, however, should do so openly and not use the right of nondisclosure as a justification for failure to comply with this Rule.~~	This is the first sentence of Model Rule Comment [2]. It is included because the Commission agrees with substantive point and omitting it may engender unnecessary questions.
[3] A lawyer representing an applicant for admission to the bar, or representing a lawyer who is the subject of a disciplinary inquiry or proceeding, is governed by the rules applicable to the client-lawyer relationship, including Rule 1.6 and, in some cases, Rule 3.3.	[3] A lawyer representing an applicant for admission ~~to the bar, or representing a lawyer who is the subject of a disciplinary inquiry or proceeding, is governed by the rules applicable to the client-lawyer relationship, including Rule 1.6 and, in some cases, Rule 3.3~~ to practice law is governed by the rules applicable to the lawyer client relationship, including Rule 1.6. A lawyer representing a lawyer who is the subject of a disciplinary proceeding is not governed by this Rule but is subject to the requirements of Rule 3.3.	Comment [3] to Proposed Rule 8.1 substantially tracks Comment [3] to the Model Rule, except that it uses terminology that is more appropriate for California (i.e., substitutes “admission to practice law” for “admission to the bar” and substitutes “disciplinary proceeding” for “disciplinary inquiry”). That part of the Model Rule comment addressing a lawyer who represents an applicant is covered by proposed Comment [5].

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.1 Bar Admission And Disciplinary Matters Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 8.1 False Statement Regarding Application for Admission to Practice of Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[4] The examples in paragraph (c) are illustrative. As used in paragraph (c), "similar provision relating to admission or certification" includes, but is not limited to, an application by an out-of-state attorney for admission to practice law under Business and Professions Code section 6062; an application to appear as counsel pro hac vice under Rule of Court 9.40; an application by military counsel to represent a member of the military in a particular cause under Rule of Court 9.41; an application to register as a certified law student under Rule of Court 9.42; proceedings for certification as a Registered Legal Services attorney under Rule of Court 9.45 and related State Bar Rules; certification as a Registered In-house Counsel under Rule of Court 9.46 and related State Bar Rules; certification as an Out-of-State Attorney Arbitration Counsel under Rule of Court 9.43, Code of Civil Procedure section 1282.4, and related State Bar Rules; and certification as a Registered Foreign Legal Consultant under Rule of Court 9.44 and related State Bar Rules.	See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (d), above.
	[5] This Rule shall not prevent a lawyer from representing an applicant for admission to practice in proceedings related to such admission. Other laws or rules govern the responsibilities of a lawyer representing an applicant for admission. See, e.g., Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(c), (d) & (e)); Rule 3.3.	The comment adapts that part of Model Rule Comment [3] that addresses a lawyer who represents an applicant. See above explanation of changes to Comment [3].

Rule ~~1-200~~8.1 False Statement Regarding Application for Admission to the State BarPractice Law

(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

(a) ~~(A) A member~~An applicant for admission to practice law shall not knowingly make a false statement ~~regarding aof~~ material fact or knowingly fail to disclose a material fact in connection with ~~anthat~~person's own application for admission ~~to the State Bar~~.

~~(B) A member shall not further an application for admission to the State Bar of a person whom the member knows to be unqualified in respect to character, education, or other relevant attributes.~~

(b) ~~(C) This rule~~A lawyer shall not ~~prevent~~knowingly make a ~~member from serving as counsel~~false statement of record for an applicant material fact in connection with another person's application for admission to practice ~~in proceedings related to such admission~~law.

(c) An applicant for admission to practice law, or a lawyer in connection with an application for admission, shall not fail to disclose a fact necessary to correct a statement known by the applicant or the lawyer to have created a material misapprehension in the matter, except that this Rule does not authorize disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.

(d) As used in this Rule, "admission to practice law" includes admission or readmission to membership in the State Bar; reinstatement to active membership in the State Bar; an application for permission to appear pro hac vice; and any similar provision relating to admission or certification to practice law in California or elsewhere.

Discussion:

~~For purposes of rule 1-200 "admission" includes readmission.~~

Comment

[1] A person who makes a false statement in connection with that person's own application for admission to practice law may be subject to discipline under this Rule after that person has been admitted.

[2] This Rule is subject to the provisions of the fifth amendment of the United States Constitution and corresponding provisions of applicable state constitutions.

[3] A lawyer representing an applicant for admission to practice law is governed by the rules applicable to the client lawyer relationship, including Rule 1.6. A lawyer representing a lawyer who is the subject of a disciplinary proceeding is not governed by this Rule but is subject to the requirements of Rule 3.3.

[4] The examples in paragraph (d) are illustrative. As used in paragraph (d), "similar provision relating to admission or certification" includes, but is not limited to, an application by an out-of-state attorney for admission to practice law under Business and Professions Code section 6062; an application to appear as counsel pro hac vice under Rule of Court 9.40; an application by military counsel to represent a member of the military in a particular cause under Rule of Court 9.41; an application to register as a certified law student under Rule of Court 9.42; proceedings for certification as a Registered Legal Services attorney under Rule of Court 9.45 and related State Bar Rules; certification as a Registered In-house Counsel under Rule of Court 9.46 and related State Bar Rules; certification as an Out-of-State Attorney Arbitration Counsel under Rule of Court 9.43, Code of Civil Procedure section 1282.4, and related State Bar Rules; and certification as a Registered Foreign Legal Consultant under Rule of Court 9.44 and related State Bar Rules.

- [5] This Rule shall not prevent a lawyer from representing an applicant for admission to practice in proceedings related to such admission. Other laws or rules govern the responsibilities of a lawyer representing an applicant for admission. See, e.g., Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(c), (d) & (e); Rule 3.3.

Rule 8.1 False Statement Regarding Application for Admission to Practice Law
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) An applicant for admission to practice law shall not knowingly make a false statement of material fact or knowingly fail to disclose a material fact in connection with that person's own application for admission.
 - (b) A lawyer shall not knowingly make a false statement of material fact in connection with another person's application for admission to practice law.
 - (c) An applicant for admission to practice law, or a lawyer in connection with an application for admission, shall not fail to disclose a fact necessary to correct a statement known by the applicant or the lawyer to have created a material misapprehension in the matter, except that this Rule does not authorize disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.
 - (d) As used in this Rule, "admission to practice law" includes admission or readmission to membership in the State Bar; reinstatement to active membership in the State Bar; an application for permission to appear pro hac vice; and any similar provision relating to admission or certification to practice law in California or elsewhere.
- [3] A lawyer representing an applicant for admission to practice law is governed by the rules applicable to the client lawyer relationship, including Rule 1.6. A lawyer representing a lawyer who is the subject of a disciplinary proceeding is not governed by this Rule but is subject to the requirements of Rule 3.3.
 - [4] The examples in paragraph (d) are illustrative. As used in paragraph (d), "similar provision relating to admission or certification" includes, but is not limited to, an application by an out-of-state attorney for admission to practice law under Business and Professions Code section 6062; an application to appear as counsel pro hac vice under Rule of Court 9.40; an application by military counsel to represent a member of the military in a particular cause under Rule of Court 9.41; an application to register as a certified law student under Rule of Court 9.42; proceedings for certification as a Registered Legal Services attorney under Rule of Court 9.45 and related State Bar Rules; certification as a Registered In-house Counsel under Rule of Court 9.46 and related State Bar Rules; certification as an Out-of-State Attorney Arbitration Counsel under Rule of Court 9.43, Code of Civil Procedure section 1282.4, and related State Bar Rules; and certification as a Registered Foreign Legal Consultant under Rule of Court 9.44 and related State Bar Rules.

Comment

- [1] A person who makes a false statement in connection with that person's own application for admission to practice law may be subject to discipline under this Rule after that person has been admitted.
- [2] This Rule is subject to the provisions of the fifth amendment of the United States Constitution and corresponding provisions of applicable state constitutions.
- [5] This Rule shall not prevent a lawyer from representing an applicant for admission to practice in proceedings related to such admission. Other laws or rules govern the responsibilities of a lawyer representing an applicant for admission. See, e.g., Business and Professions Code sections 6068(c), (d) & (e)); Rule 3.3.

Rule 8.1 False Statement Regarding Application for Admission to Practice Law.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	M	Yes		OCTC has the same objection to the use of the term knowingly in proposed rule 8.1 as to proposed rule 3.3. False statements made with reckless disregard are disciplinable. There are too many comments and some are more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions. Comment [1] Further, Comment [1] should advise that attorneys may be either disciplined (In the Matter of Pasyanos (Review Dept. 2005) 4	The Commission has determined that in the context of statements regarding the application for admission to practice law, discipline should require a knowing false statement or failure to disclose, not merely "reckless disregard." See RRC Response to Comment 3 to Proposed Rule 3.3. In addition, the Commission's position is that in such a context, whether a particular false statement made with reckless disregard could be disciplined as "gross negligence" or moral turpitude will depend upon the facts of the individual case and should not be a matter of black letter rule. As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations. The Commission has attempted to balance the desire for conciseness with the need to provide guidance in the interpretation and application of the

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 8.1 False Statement Regarding Application for Admission to Practice Law.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 1
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 746) or their license cancelled. (Goldstein v. State Bar (1989) 47 Cal.3d 937.)	black letter rule and has determined that the number of length of comments to this rule strikes an appropriate balance. The reference to an attorney's being "subject to discipline" in Comment [1], as throughout the Proposed Rules and Comments, is intended to include potential cancellation of the license to practice.
3	San Diego County Bar Association	A	Yes		Supports as drafted.	No response required.

Rule 8.1: Bar Admission and Disciplinary Matters

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California: Rule 1-200 provides as follows:

(A) A member shall not knowingly make a false statement regarding a material fact or knowingly fail to disclose a material fact in connection with an application for admission to the State Bar.

(B) A member shall not further an application for admission to the State Bar of a person whom the member knows to be unqualified in respect to character, education, or other relevant attributes.

(C) This rule shall not prevent a member from serving as counsel of record for an applicant for admission to practice in proceedings related to such admission.

Colorado: Rule 8.1(a) also applies to “readmission” and “reinstatement.”

Georgia has adopted a Rule 9.3, entitled “Cooperation with Disciplinary Authority,” which provides as follows: “During the investigation of a grievance filed under these Rules, the lawyer complained against shall respond to disciplinary authorities in accordance with State Bar Rules.”

Comment 2 to this provision states: “Nothing in this Rule prohibits a lawyer from responding by making a Fifth Amendment objection, if appropriate. However, disciplinary proceedings are civil in nature and the use of a Fifth Amendment objection will give rise to a presumption against the lawyer.”

Michigan adds the following new language to its version of ABA Model Rule 8.1:

(b) An applicant for admission to the bar

(1) shall not engage in the unauthorized practice of law (this does not apply to activities permitted under MCR 8.120), and

(2) has a continuing obligation, until the date of admission, to inform the standing committee on character and fitness, in writing, if any answers in the applicant’s affidavit of personal history change or cease to be true.

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 8.1(a) provides as follows:

(a) A lawyer shall be subject to discipline if, in connection with the lawyer's own application for admission to the bar previously filed in this state or in any other jurisdiction, or in connection with the application of another person for admission to the bar, the lawyer knowingly:

(1) has made or failed to correct a false statement of material fact; or

(2) has failed to disclose a material fact requested in connection with a lawful demand for information from an admissions authority.

Ohio: Rule 8.1(a) deletes the opening phrase “[a]n applicant for admission to the bar.” According to the Ohio Supreme Court’s note, Rule 8.1(b) clarifies the “unwieldy” language of the ABA Model Rule but does not lower the standard of candor expected of a lawyer in bar admission or disciplinary matters.

Virginia: Rule 8.1 adds language to cover certifications required to be filed as a condition of maintaining or renewing a law license. Virginia also moves the second clause of Rule 8.1(b) to a separate subparagraph (c), and adds Rule 8.1(d), which makes it a separate violation to “obstruct a lawful investigation by an admissions or disciplinary authority.”

Proposed Rule 8.1.1[RPC 1-110]

“Compliance with Conditions of Discipline and Agreements in Lieu of Discipline.”

(XDraft #2, 7/3/07)

Summary: Proposed Rule 8.1.1 amends current rule 1-110 and continues the requirement that a lawyer comply with the terms and conditions attached to agreement made in lieu of discipline, probation or reproof. No substantive changes are recommended to the current rule. The Commission's recommended revisions are intended for brevity and clarity.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart
Rule	Comment
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☒ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☒ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC Rule 1-110

Statute

Case law

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 8

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 1

Abstain 2

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☐ Yes ☒ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 8.1.1* Compliance with Conditions of Discipline and Agreements in Lieu of Discipline

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 8.1.1 amends current rule 1-110 and continues the requirement that a lawyer comply with the terms and conditions attached to agreement made in lieu of discipline, probation or reproof. No substantive changes are recommended to the current rule. The Commission's recommended revisions are intended for brevity and clarity.

There is no corresponding ABA Model Rule. However, there is a comparable rule in the ABA Model Rules of Disciplinary Enforcement. Rule 10(B) of the Model Rules of Disciplinary Enforcement states, "Conditions. Written conditions may be attached to an admonition or a reprimand. Failure to comply with such conditions shall be grounds for reconsideration of the matter and prosecution of formal charges against the respondent." Proposed Rule 8.1.1 is more specific to the California disciplinary process.

* Proposed Rule 8.1.1, XDraft 2 (7/3/07).

California Rule of Professional Conduct Rule 1-110 Disciplinary Authority of the State Bar	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.1.1 Disciplinary Authority of the State Bar Compliance with Conditions of Discipline and Agreements in Lieu of Discipline	Explanation of Changes to the California Rule of Professional Conduct
A member shall comply with conditions attached to public or private reprovls or other discipline administered by the State Bar pursuant to Business and Professions Code sections 6077 and 6078 and rule 9.19, California Rules of Court.	A member shall comply with the terms and conditions attached to any agreement made in lieu of discipline, disciplinary probation, and public or private reprovls. ~~or other discipline administered by the State Bar pursuant to Business and Professions Code sections 6077 and 6078 and rule 9.19, California Rules of Court~~ (Comparison continued in Comment below.)	The rule has been renamed to better describe the conduct the rule addresses. The phrase “the terms and” has been added to “conditions” to more accurately describe the scope of the member’s duty to comply under the rule. The clause “any agreement made in lieu of discipline, disciplinary probation, and” has been added to “public or private reprovls” to identify with more particularity the kinds of arrangements in which terms and conditions may be imposed on the member. Reference to the sections of the Business & Professions Code and Court Rules under which sanctions may be imposed on members has been deleted. The Commission regarded the references as surplusage and potentially confusing because the references focus on the source of the authority for the imposition of conditions rather than identifying the circumstances where conditions are imposed.

* No comparable ABA Model Rule. Redline/strikeout showing changes to California Rule 1-110

California Rule of Professional Conduct Rule 1-110 Disciplinary Authority of the State Bar Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.1.1 Compliance with Conditions of Discipline Comment	Explanation of Changes to the California Rule of Professional Conduct
	[1] Other provisions also require a lawyer to comply with conditions of discipline. (See, e.g., Business and Professions Code sections ~~6077 and 6078~~ 6068, subdivisions (k) & (l) and ~~rule 956~~, California Rules of Court, Rule 9.19.)	The Comment was added to alert lawyers to other law (e.g., Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6068(k), (l), and Cal. Rule of Court 956), under which terms and conditions of compliance may be imposed.

* No comparable ABA Model Rule. Redline/strikeout showing changes to California Rule 1-110

Rule ~~1-200~~8.1 False Statement Regarding Application for Admission to the State BarPractice Law

(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to Current California Rule)

(a) ~~(A) A member~~An applicant for admission to practice law shall not knowingly make a false statement ~~regarding aof~~ material fact or knowingly fail to disclose a material fact in connection with ~~anthat~~person's own application for admission ~~to the State Bar~~.

~~(B) A member shall not further an application for admission to the State Bar of a person whom the member knows to be unqualified in respect to character, education, or other relevant attributes.~~

(b) ~~(C) This rule~~A lawyer shall not ~~prevent~~knowingly make a ~~member from serving as counsel~~false statement of record for an applicant material fact in connection with another person's application for admission to practice ~~in proceedings related to such admission~~law.

(c) An applicant for admission to practice law, or a lawyer in connection with an application for admission, shall not fail to disclose a fact necessary to correct a statement known by the applicant or the lawyer to have created a material misapprehension in the matter, except that this Rule does not authorize disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.

(d) As used in this Rule, "admission to practice law" includes admission or readmission to membership in the State Bar; reinstatement to active membership in the State Bar; an application for permission to appear pro hac vice; and any similar provision relating to admission or certification to practice law in California or elsewhere.

Discussion:

~~For purposes of rule 1-200 "admission" includes readmission.~~

Comment

[1] A person who makes a false statement in connection with that person's own application for admission to practice law may be subject to discipline under this Rule after that person has been admitted.

[2] This Rule is subject to the provisions of the fifth amendment of the United States Constitution and corresponding provisions of applicable state constitutions.

[3] A lawyer representing an applicant for admission to practice law is governed by the rules applicable to the client lawyer relationship, including Rule 1.6. A lawyer representing a lawyer who is the subject of a disciplinary proceeding is not governed by this Rule but is subject to the requirements of Rule 3.3.

[4] The examples in paragraph (d) are illustrative. As used in paragraph (d), "similar provision relating to admission or certification" includes, but is not limited to, an application by an out-of-state attorney for admission to practice law under Business and Professions Code section 6062; an application to appear as counsel pro hac vice under Rule of Court 9.40; an application by military counsel to represent a member of the military in a particular cause under Rule of Court 9.41; an application to register as a certified law student under Rule of Court 9.42; proceedings for certification as a Registered Legal Services attorney under Rule of Court 9.45 and related State Bar Rules; certification as a Registered In-house Counsel under Rule of Court 9.46 and related State Bar Rules; certification as an Out-of-State Attorney Arbitration Counsel under Rule of Court 9.43, Code of Civil Procedure section 1282.4, and related State Bar Rules; and certification as a Registered Foreign Legal Consultant under Rule of Court 9.44 and related State Bar Rules.

- [5] This Rule shall not prevent a lawyer from representing an applicant for admission to practice in proceedings related to such admission. Other laws or rules govern the responsibilities of a lawyer representing an applicant for admission. See, e.g., Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(c), (d) & (e); Rule 3.3.

Rule 8.1.1 Compliance with Conditions of Discipline and Agreements in Lieu of Discipline
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

A member shall comply with the terms and conditions attached to any agreement made in lieu of discipline, disciplinary probation, and public or private reproofs.

Comment

[1] Other provisions also require a lawyer to comply with conditions of discipline. See, e.g., Business and Professions Code section 6068, subdivisions (k) & (l) and California Rules of Court, Rule 9.19.

Rule 8.1.1 Compliance with Conditions of Discipline and Agreements in Lieu of Discipline.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 2 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	A	Yes		OCTC supports this rule.	No response required.
2	San Diego County Bar Association	A	Yes		Supports as drafted.	No response required.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Proposed Rule 8.2 [1-700]

“Judicial and Legal Officials”

(XDraft #4.1, 04/03/10)

Summary: Proposed Rule which imposes duties on lawyers with respect to judicial and legal officials, and when a lawyer is a candidate for judicial office, closely tracks Model Rule 8.2, but also carries forward provisions in current California Rule 1-700 (“Member as Candidate for Judicial Office”). See Introduction.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☒ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

☒ Existing California Law

Rule

RPC 1-700.

Statute

Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(b).

Case law

☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 9

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 1

Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Commission Minority Position, Known Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

Minority Position Included. (See Introduction): ☐ Yes ☒ No

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 8.2* Judicial and Legal Officials

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 8.2, which imposes duties on lawyers with respect to judicial and legal officials, and when a lawyer is a candidate for judicial office, closely tracks Model Rule 8.2, but also carries forward provisions in current California Rule 1-700 (“Member as Candidate for Judicial Office”). Paragraph (a) incorporates the concept of respect for the judiciary more generally stated in Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(b), but also adds an obligation not to make false statements of fact concerning candidates for judicial office. Paragraphs (b) through (d) provide a means by which the State Bar can discipline lawyers who violate ethical duties imposed by Canons 5 and 5B of the California Code of Judicial Ethics when seeking appointment or election to judicial office.

The Comment to the Rule largely tracks the comment to Model Rule 8.2, although one Model Rule comment has been deleted because it neither explains nor clarifies the application of the Rule.

Previously, the Board of Governors approved circulation of proposed Rule 2.4.2, which is based on current rule 1-700, for public comment. Paragraph (b) and (d) are carried forward from that Rule, which in turn carried forward the provisions of current rule 1-700. The concept of paragraph (c), which concerns lawyers seeking appointment to judicial office, is also carried forward from proposed Rule 2.4.2, but has been separated out as a separate paragraph for clarity.

* Proposed Rule 8.2, XDraft 4.1 (4/3/2010).

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.2 Judicial and Legal Officials	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.2 Judicial and Legal Officials	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) A lawyer shall not make a statement that the lawyer knows to be false or with reckless disregard as to its truth or falsity concerning the qualifications or integrity of a judge, adjudicatory officer or public legal officer, or of a candidate for election or appointment to judicial or legal office.	(a) A lawyer shall not make a statement of fact that the lawyer knows to be false or with reckless disregard as to its truth or falsity concerning the qualifications or integrity of a judge, adjudicatory officer or public legal officer, or of a candidate for election or appointment to judicial or legal office.	Paragraph (a) is identical to Model Rule 8.2(a), except that the phrase “of fact” has been added to address Constitutional concerns about the ability of a lawyer to express an opinion.
(b) A lawyer who is a candidate for judicial office shall comply with the applicable provisions of the Code of Judicial Conduct.	(b) A lawyer who is a candidate for judicial office in California shall comply with ~~the applicable provisions~~ Canon 5 of the California Code of Judicial ~~Conduct~~ Ethics.	Paragraph (b) substantially follows Model Rule 8.2(b). It has been modified only to reference the applicable California Code of Judicial Ethics when a lawyer seeks office in California.
	(c) A lawyer who seeks appointment to judicial office shall not make statements to the appointing authority that commit the lawyer with respect to cases, controversies, or issues that could come before the courts, or knowingly, or with reckless disregard for the truth, misrepresent the identity, qualifications, present position, or any other fact concerning the lawyer. A lawyer commences to become an applicant seeking judicial office by appointment at the time of first submission of an application or personal data questionnaire to the appointing authority. A lawyer's duty to	There is no counterpart in the Model Rules to paragraph (c). It is included to provide a disciplinary path for lawyers who violate their duty as applicants for appointment to judicial office by requiring that those lawyers comply with the substantive provisions of Canon 5B, as currently provided in the California Code of Judicial Ethics. This paragraph also sets forth when a lawyer is deemed to have commenced or terminated his or her status as an applicant for appointment.

* Proposed Rule 8.2, XDraft 4.1 (4/3/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.2 Judicial and Legal Officials	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.2 Judicial and Legal Officials	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	comply with this Rule shall end when the lawyer advises the appointing authority of the withdrawal of the lawyer's application.
	(d) For purposes of this Rule, "candidate for judicial office" means a lawyer seeking judicial office by election. The determination of when a lawyer is a candidate for judicial office by election is defined in the terminology section of the California Code of Judicial Ethics. A lawyer's duty to comply with this Rule shall end when the lawyer announces withdrawal of the lawyer's candidacy or when the results of the election are final, whichever occurs first.	There is no counterpart in the Model Rules to paragraph (d). It references the terminology used in the Code of Judicial Ethics, and expands on the Code section's explanation as to when a candidacy for election or retention to judicial office ends.

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.2 Judicial and Legal Officials Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 8.2 Judicial and Legal Officials Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] Assessments by lawyers are relied on in evaluating the professional or personal fitness of persons being considered for election or appointment to judicial office and to public legal offices, such as attorney general, prosecuting attorney and public defender. Expressing honest and candid opinions on such matters contributes to improving the administration of justice. Conversely, false statements by a lawyer can unfairly undermine public confidence in the administration of justice.	[1] Assessments by lawyers are relied on in evaluating the professional or personal fitness of persons being considered for election or appointment to judicial office and to public legal offices, such as attorney general, prosecuting attorney and public defender. Expressing honest and candid opinions on such matters contributes to improving the administration of justice. Conversely, false statements by a lawyer can unfairly undermine public confidence in the administration of justice.	Comment [1] is identical to Model Rule 8.2, cmt. [1].
[2] When a lawyer seeks judicial office, the lawyer should be bound by applicable limitations on political activity.	[2] ~~When a lawyer seeks judicial office, the lawyer should be bound by applicable limitations on political activity.~~ Nothing in this Rule shall be deemed to limit the applicability of any other rule or law.	Model Rule 8.2, cmt. [2] has been deleted because it neither explains nor clarifies the application of the Rule. In its place, the Commission recommends substituting a new Comment [2], which simply carries forward Discussion paragraph 1 of current rule 1-700.
[3] To maintain the fair and independent administration of justice, lawyers are encouraged to continue traditional efforts to defend judges and courts unjustly criticized.	[3] To maintain the fair and independent administration of justice, lawyers are encouraged to continue traditional efforts to defend judges and courts unjustly criticized. Lawyers also are obligated to maintain the respect due to the courts of justice and judicial officers. See Business and Professions Code section 6068(b).	The first sentence of Comment [3] is identical to Model Rule 8.2, cmt. [3]. The second sentence is a verbatim statement of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(b). The Commission recommends its inclusion to provide notice to lawyers of this statutory obligation.

Rule 8.2: Judicial and Legal Officials

(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) A lawyer shall not make a statement of fact that the lawyer knows to be false or with reckless disregard as to its truth or falsity concerning the qualifications or integrity of a judge, adjudicatory officer or public legal officer, or of a candidate for election or appointment to judicial or legal office.
- (b) A lawyer who is a candidate for judicial office in California shall comply with Canon 5 of the California Code of Judicial Ethics.
- (c) A lawyer who seeks appointment to judicial office shall not make statements to the appointing authority that commit the lawyer with respect to cases, controversies, or issues that could come before the courts, or knowingly, or with reckless disregard for the truth, misrepresent the identity, qualifications, present position, or any other fact concerning the lawyer. A lawyer commences to become an applicant seeking judicial office by appointment at the time of first submission of an application or personal data questionnaire to the appointing authority. A lawyer's duty to comply with this Rule shall end when the lawyer advises the appointing authority of the withdrawal of the lawyer's application.
- (d) For purposes of this Rule, "candidate for judicial office" means a lawyer seeking judicial office by election. The determination of when a lawyer is a candidate for judicial office by election is defined in the terminology section of the California Code of Judicial Ethics. A lawyer's duty to comply with this Rule shall end when the lawyer announces withdrawal of the lawyer's candidacy or when the results of the election are final, whichever occurs first.

COMMENT

- [1] Assessments by lawyers are relied on in evaluating the professional or personal fitness of persons being considered for election or appointment to judicial office and to public legal offices, such as attorney general, prosecuting attorney and public defender. Expressing honest and candid opinions on such matters contributes to improving the administration of justice. Conversely, false statements by a lawyer can unfairly undermine public confidence in the administration of justice.
- [2] Nothing in this Rule shall be deemed to limit the applicability of any other rule or law.
- [3] To maintain the fair and independent administration of justice, lawyers are encouraged to continue traditional efforts to defend judges and courts unjustly criticized. Lawyers also are obligated to maintain the respect due to the courts of justice and judicial officers. See Business and Professions Code section 6068(b).

Rule 8.2: Judicial and Legal Officials

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California: The California Rules of Professional Conduct have no comparable provision, but California Business & Professions Code §6068(b) provides that it is the duty of an attorney to “maintain the respect due to the courts of justice and judicial officers.”

District of Columbia omits ABA Model Rule 8.2.

Florida: Rule 8.2(a) also applies to statements about a mediator, arbitrator, juror or member of the venire.

Georgia omits ABA Model Rule 8.2(a) but adopts Rule 8.2(b) verbatim.

Maryland: Rule 8.2(b)(2) provides that a lawyer who is a candidate for judicial office “with respect to a case, controversy or issue that is likely to come before the court, shall not make a commitment, pledge, or promise that is inconsistent with the impartial performance of the adjudicative duties of the office.”

New Jersey: Rule 8.2(b) provides that a lawyer who “has been confirmed for judicial office” shall comply with the applicable provisions of the Code of Judicial Conduct. The rule does not apply to lawyers who are only candidates for judicial office.

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 8.2 provides as follows: “(a) A lawyer shall not knowingly make a false statement of fact concerning the qualifications, conduct or integrity of a judge or other adjudicatory officer or of a candidate for election or appointment to judicial office. (b) A lawyer who is a candidate for judicial office shall comply with the applicable provisions of Part 100 of the Rules of the Chief Administrator of the Courts.”

Ohio: Rule 8.2(a) omits the ABA reference to an “adjudicatory officer or public legal officer.”

Pennsylvania: Rule 8.2 replaces all of ABA Model Rule 8.2(a) with language taken verbatim from DR 8-102(A) and (B) and 8-103(A) of the ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility.

Virginia: Rule 8.2 provides, in its entirety as follows: “A lawyer shall not make a statement that the lawyer knows to be false or with reckless disregard as to its truth or falsity concerning the qualifications or integrity of a judge or other judicial officer.”

Proposed Rule 8.3 [1-120 & 1-500(B)] “Reporting Professional Misconduct”

(XDraft #6, 12/14/09)

Summary: Proposed rule 8.3 adds new permissive and mandatory reporting standards, including a requirement that a lawyer report to the State Bar when another lawyer has committed a felonious criminal act that raises a substantial question as to that lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer. Permissive reporting standards are imposed for general lawyer misconduct and for judicial misconduct by judges and other adjudicative officers. In the place of current California Rule 1-500(B), a proposed rule comment provides a cross reference to the broader prohibition in existing Business and Professions Code §6090.5.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule

Comment

- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☒ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☒ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 1-120, 1-500(B)

Statute

Bus. & Prof. Code 6090.5.

Case law

- ☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

- ☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption of the Rule ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 6

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 5

Abstain 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☒ Yes ☐ No

(See Introduction.)

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☒ Very Controversial – Explanation:

See Introduction. The proposed rule includes limited mandatory reporting of certain lawyer misconduct.

☐ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 8.3* Reporting Professional Misconduct

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 8.3 adds new disciplinary standards concerning a lawyer reporting the misconduct of another member of the legal profession that are not currently found in the California rules or the State Bar Act. The new disciplinary standards include one limited mandatory reporting standard and two permissive reporting standards. (i) Paragraph (a) of proposed Rule 8.3 states that a lawyer who knows that another lawyer has committed a felonious criminal act that raises a substantial question as to that lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer must inform the appropriate disciplinary authority. (ii) Paragraph (b) states that, except as required by paragraph (a), a lawyer may, but is not required to, report misconduct of another lawyer. Paragraph (c) states that a lawyer who knows that a judge or other adjudicative officer has committed a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct that raises a substantial question as to that person's fitness for office may, but is not required to, report the violation to the appropriate authority. The proposed Rule thus differs from the broad mandatory reporting requirements as to both lawyer and judicial misconduct that are found in ABA Model Rule 8.3 and most states. The Commission believes that a balancing of the policies involved favors permissive reporting for most misconduct, but a limited mandatory reporting standard for certain egregious criminal acts that, if not remedied, are most likely to cause substantial harm to the public and might remain under the radar for a significant period of time or perhaps forever, during which time additional substantial public injury may occur.

The Commission agrees with the concepts that the self-regulation of the legal profession requires each lawyer to be vigilant for ethical violations, and that lawyers should be encouraged to report the misconduct of other lawyers, but it has concluded that a balanced approach to reporting misconduct is more appropriate than establishing a single standard that subjects all misconduct to possible mandatory reporting. There are several reasons for this approach. These include the following:

* Proposed Rule 8.3, XDraft 6 (12/14/09).

- a. First, a limited mandatory reporting standard for certain, egregious criminal acts is consistent with the concept of self-regulation. Such acts are more likely to result in substantial harm to the public and mandating their reporting will offer additional public protection not present in the existing California rules. A broad mandatory reporting rule, however, would be inconsistent with the lawyer's duty of undivided loyalty to his or her client. This important client-protection principle is enforced more robustly in California than under the Model Rules, and the Commission supports maintaining the obligation of lawyers to focus their professional efforts primarily on client welfare and interests. See Flatt v. Superior Court (1994) 9 Cal.4th 281, 289 ["A lawyer's fiduciary duty of loyalty is to protect the client in every possible way and not to assume a position adverse or antagonistic to his or her client without the client's free and intelligent consent given after full knowledge of all the facts and circumstances. Absent such informed consent, a lawyer is precluded from assuming any relation which would prevent him from devoting the lawyer's entire energies to the client's interests."] Cf. In re Himmel, 533 N.E.2d 790 (Ill. 1988) [lawyer suspended who abided by client's directive not to report her former counsel's misconduct]. As exemplified by Himmel, mandatory lawyer reporting compels the client to be a participant in the disciplinary process without the client's consent and even over the client's objections. The Commission considers the client loyalty issue paramount. Broadly mandating reporting of another lawyer's misconduct could prejudice the reporting lawyer's client, e.g., by: (i) disclosing the client's confidential information; (ii) interfering with the pursuit of the client's legitimate objectives; (iii) implicating the client in wrongdoing; and (iv) as mentioned below (see ¶. 9 of this Introduction), embroiling the client as a witness in the disciplinary proceedings.
- b. Second, the Commission is not aware of any evidence of an underreporting of lawyer misconduct in California. To the contrary, statistics in the 2007 Report on the State Bar of California Discipline System suggest that the volume of lawyer complaints already strains the disciplinary system.
- c. Third, a rule that broadly mandates reporting, similar to the Model Rule, would create a potential conflict with statutory duties of confidentiality a lawyer might have in another role, such as might happen with information a lawyer were to learn while serving as a mediator. For all of these reasons, the Commission believes that any broad reporting obligation should be permissive and left to the exercise of a lawyer's professional judgment; a lawyer's fitness to practice law is not called into question by a decision not to report another person's ethical violation. This view is implemented in the proposed rule that includes permissive reporting for most misconduct and a limited mandatory reporting standard for certain egregious criminal acts.

Georgia has adopted a version of the reporting rule which expressly states that a lawyer cannot be disciplined under it. Kentucky has addressed some of the weaknesses in Model Rule 8.3 in its new Rule (effective 7/15/09) that: (i) adds an immunity provision for the lawyer who makes the Rule 8.3 report [but overlooks the civil risk to a lawyer who exercises judgment to not report]; and (ii) adds an extremely limited self-reporting obligation [limited to a lawyer who is disciplined in another jurisdiction. Cf. Comment [3], below]. A number of jurisdictions have reacted to the mandatory nature of the Model Rule by excepting information learned in certain circumstances, such as by participating in a lawyer assistance program. Ohio's rule limits the duty to providing only unprivileged information. New York's Rule 8.3 (effective 4/1/09) eliminates the duty to report on judicial misconduct. For reasons explained in the comparison chart, the Commission's proposed rule permits but does not require the reporting of judicial misconduct.

In addition to the Model Rule concept that lawyer-self-regulation implies an obligation on all lawyers to report misconduct by other lawyers, which is mentioned above, proponents of broad mandatory reporting argue that lawyers often are in the best position to identify the misconduct of other lawyers. While this might be true sometimes, with most disciplinary charges it is only the client who can be a material, competent witness against the lawyer, and this means that in most circumstances, the offending lawyer's client should determine whether or not to report the misconduct; that person otherwise might be drawn into disciplinary proceedings in a way that he or she does not wish, for example, because of a desire to protect his or her confidential information.

The prohibition found in current California Rule 1-500(B) against agreements not to report violations has been incorporated into this Rule by clarifying in Comment [5] that lawyers may not be a party to or participate in offering or making an agreement that would violate Business and Professions Code section 6090.5, which provides broader prohibitions on such agreements. Following public comment, some revisions were made for clarity and a comment added to emphasize that this new Rule is not intended to abrogate a lawyer's obligations under California Rule 5-100 ("Threatening Criminal, Administrative, or Disciplinary Charges").

Minority. A minority of the Commission dissents from the mandatory reporting requirement in the proposed Rule. The minority contends that mandatory reporting issues often arise in the midst of representing a client. The experience in jurisdictions with mandatory reporting is that when reporting occurs in this context, the innocent client often suffers. Reporting can lead to disputes among the lawyers representing clients in a matter. It can lead to a change in counsel and corresponding continuances or inability to complete a pending settlement as well as other situations in which the innocent client bears the cost. Mandatory reporting does not protect clients in these situations and elevates the protection of non-clients over the legitimate interests of clients.

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.3 Reporting Professional Misconduct	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.3 Reporting Professional Misconduct	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) A lawyer who knows that another lawyer has committed a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct that raises a substantial question as to that lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer in other respects, shall inform the appropriate professional authority.	(a) A lawyer who knows that another lawyer has committed a ~~violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct~~felonious criminal act that raises a substantial question as to that lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer ~~in other respects,~~ shall inform the appropriate ~~professional~~disciplinary authority.	As discussed in detail in the Introduction, the Commission is recommending a balanced approach of both permissive and limited mandatory reporting, rather than setting a single standard that subjects all misconduct to possible mandatory reporting. Proposed paragraph (a) states the limited mandatory reporting obligation imposed for egregious criminal acts. This mandatory standard requires that a report be made to a disciplinary authority that would have jurisdiction to take action on the reported misconduct. The Introduction notes the minority view that opposes the mandatory reporting obligation.
	(b) Except as required by paragraph (a), a lawyer may, but is not required to, report to the State Bar a violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act.	See above Explanation of Changes for paragraph (a). Proposed paragraph (b) states the general permissive reporting standard for violations of the Rules or the State Bar Act that are not felonious criminal acts subject to mandatory reporting under paragraph (a).

* Proposed Rule 8.3, XDraft 6 (12/14/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule,
RRC - 1-120 & 1-500B [8-3] - Compare - Rule Explanation - XDFT6 (12-14-09)

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.3 Reporting Professional Misconduct	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.3 Reporting Professional Misconduct	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(b) A lawyer who knows that a judge has committed a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct that raises a substantial question as to the judge's fitness for office shall inform the appropriate authority.	(~~b~~c) A lawyer who knows that a judge or other adjudicative officer has committed a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct that raises a substantial question as to ~~the judge's~~ that person's fitness for office ~~shall inform~~ may, but is not required to, report the violation to the appropriate authority.	The Model Rule expands the scope of the concept of lawyer self-regulation to include a duty to report judicial misconduct. The Commission agrees that there may be situations where a lawyer's report of judicial misconduct would be beneficial for the client and provide public protection; however, the Commission also believes it would be unduly harsh to subject a lawyer to the threat of discipline for deciding not to report judicial misconduct because of concerns about how doing so might affect the lawyer's other current clients or the lawyer's self interest. Accordingly, proposed paragraph (c) states a permissive standard for reporting judicial misconduct.
(c) This Rule does not require disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6 or information gained by a lawyer or judge while participating in an approved lawyers assistance program.	(~~e~~d) This Rule does not ~~require disclosure of~~ authorize a lawyer to report misconduct if the lawyer is prohibited from doing so by the lawyer's duties to a client a former client or by law. Such prohibitions include, but are not limited to, the lawyer's duty not to disclose (i) information otherwise protected by Business and Professions Code section 6068(e)(1), Rule 1.6, or Rule 1.9; (ii) information gained by a lawyer or judge while participating in an approved lawyers assistance program; (iii) information gained during a mediation; (iv) information subject to a confidential protective order; or (v) information otherwise protected under laws governing fiduciaries.	Similar to Model Rule 8.3(c), the Commission agrees that a lawyer should not make a permissive report under paragraphs (b) and (c) of the proposed Rule if doing so would compromise client information, but it disagrees with the Model Rule because it is too narrow in referring only to confidentiality as there are other client interests that a lawyer should consider before deciding whether to make a permissive report.

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.3 Reporting Professional Misconduct Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.3 Reporting Professional Misconduct Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] Self-regulation of the legal profession requires that members of the profession initiate disciplinary investigation when they know of a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct. Lawyers have a similar obligation with respect to judicial misconduct. An apparently isolated violation may indicate a pattern of misconduct that only a disciplinary investigation can uncover. Reporting a violation is especially important where the victim is unlikely to discover the offense.	~~[1] Self-regulation of the legal profession requires that members of the profession initiate disciplinary investigation when they know of a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct. Lawyers have a similar obligation with respect to judicial misconduct. An apparently isolated violation may indicate a pattern of misconduct that only a disciplinary investigation can uncover. Reporting a violation is especially important where the victim is unlikely to discover the offense.~~	The Commission recommends the rejection of Model Rule 8.3, Comment [1], because it is inconsistent with its recommended balanced approach of including a limited mandatory reporting standard egregious criminal acts and a general permissive reporting standard for other misconduct.
	[1] In deciding whether to report another lawyer's violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act that is not required by paragraph (a), a lawyer should consider among other things whether the violation raises a substantial question as to that lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer.	The Commission agrees with the premise of MR 8.3 that the seriousness of the other lawyer's misconduct is a proper concern in deciding whether to report that misconduct. The Commission therefore recommends the adoption of this Comment [1], which borrows that concept from MR 8.3(a).
[2] A report about misconduct is not required where it would involve violation of Rule 1.6. However, a lawyer should encourage a client to consent to disclosure where prosecution would not substantially prejudice the client's interests.	~~[2] A report about misconduct is not required where it would involve violation of Rule 1.6. However, a lawyer should encourage a client to consent to disclosure where prosecution would not substantially prejudice the client's interests.~~	As explained above with respect to paragraph (d), the Commission recommends replacing the reference to confidentiality with a broader discussion of pertinent concerns. Given the importance of these concerns, they are addressed in the rule rather than in a comment to the rule.

* Proposed Rule 8.3, XDraft 6 (12/14/09).

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.3 Reporting Professional Misconduct Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.3 Reporting Professional Misconduct Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[2] This Rule does not abrogate a lawyer's obligations to report the lawyer's own conduct as required under the State Bar Act. (See, e.g., Business & Professions Code, section 6068(o).) In addition, a lawyer is not obligated to report a felonious criminal act under paragraph (a) committed by another lawyer if doing so would infringe on the reporting lawyer's privilege against self-incrimination.	California is unique in the self-reporting requirement cited in this proposed Comment. Because of the relationship between proposed Rule 8.3 and the separate issue of self-reporting, the Commission believes it would be helpful to include this cross-reference. Also included in this Comment is an express statement that a lawyer is not required to report another lawyer's misconduct under paragraph (a) if that report would constitute a relinquishment of the reporting lawyer's privilege against self-incrimination.
[3] If a lawyer were obliged to report every violation of the Rules, the failure to report any violation would itself be a professional offense. Such a requirement existed in many jurisdictions but proved to be unenforceable. This Rule limits the reporting obligation to those offenses that a self-regulating profession must vigorously endeavor to prevent. A measure of judgment is, therefore, required in complying with the provisions of this Rule. The term "substantial" refers to the seriousness of the possible offense and not the quantum of evidence of which the lawyer is aware. A report should be made to the bar disciplinary agency unless some other agency, such as a peer review agency, is more appropriate in the circumstances. Similar considerations apply to the reporting of judicial misconduct.	~~[3] If a lawyer were obliged to report every violation of the Rules, the failure to report any violation would itself be a professional offense. Such a requirement existed in many jurisdictions but proved to be unenforceable. This Rule limits the reporting obligation to those offenses that a self-regulating profession must vigorously endeavor to prevent. A measure of judgment is, therefore, required in complying with the provisions of this Rule. The term "substantial" refers to the seriousness of the possible offense and not the quantum of evidence of which the lawyer is aware. A report should be made to the bar disciplinary agency unless some other agency, such as a peer review agency, is more appropriate in the circumstances. Similar considerations apply to the reporting of judicial misconduct.~~	For the most part, Model Rule 8.3, Comment [3], is unrelated to the Rule that the Commission recommends, and it therefore recommends the comment's removal. The limited mandatory reporting standard relates to felonious criminal acts not mere rule violations. The Commission's proposed Comment [3] is on a different topic and is given and explained immediately below.

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.3 Reporting Professional Misconduct Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.3 Reporting Professional Misconduct Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[3] Even if a lawyer is permitted or required to report under this Rule, the lawyer must not threaten to file criminal, administrative or disciplinary charges to obtain an advantage in a civil dispute in violation of Rule 3.10.	As with proposed Comment [2], the Commission believes it could be helpful to lawyers to provide this cross-reference to the Rule that prohibits lawyers from threatening criminal, administrative or disciplinary charges.
[4] The duty to report professional misconduct does not apply to a lawyer retained to represent a lawyer whose professional conduct is in question. Such a situation is governed by the Rules applicable to the client-lawyer relationship.	[4] The duty to report professional misconduct does not apply to a lawyer retained to represent a lawyer whose professional conduct is in question. Such a situation is governed by the Rules applicable to the client-lawyer relationship.	Proposed Comment [4] adopts language of the Model Rule counterpart.
	[5] A lawyer may not be a party to or participate in offering or making an agreement that would violate Business and Professions Code section 6090.5.	Current California Rule 1-500(B) provides that a member shall not be a party to or participate in offering or making an agreement which precludes the reporting of a violation of these rules. The Commission recommends replacing the substance of this current rule with the cross reference in proposed Comment [5] to California's statutory prohibition located at Business and Professions Code section 6090.5. The statutory prohibition subsumes the prohibition in current California Rule 1-500(B) and also prohibits related misconduct not found in the current rule (e.g., a prohibition against improperly agreeing to withdraw a State Bar complaint). Rather than perpetuating the overlap of topics, the Commission is recommending a cross reference to the broader statutory prohibition.

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.3 Reporting Professional Misconduct Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.3 Reporting Professional Misconduct Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[5] Information about a lawyer's or judge's misconduct or fitness may be received by a lawyer in the course of that lawyer's participation in an approved lawyers or judges assistance program. In that circumstance, providing for an exception to the reporting requirements of paragraphs (a) and (b) of this Rule encourages lawyers and judges to seek treatment through such a program. Conversely, without such an exception, lawyers and judges may hesitate to seek assistance from these programs, which may then result in additional harm to their professional careers and additional injury to the welfare of clients and the public. These Rules do not otherwise address the confidentiality of information received by a lawyer or judge participating in an approved lawyers assistance program; such an obligation, however, may be imposed by the rules of the program or other law.	~~[5] Information about a lawyer's or judge's misconduct or fitness may be received by a lawyer in the course of that lawyer's participation in an approved lawyers or judges assistance program. In that circumstance, providing for an exception to the reporting requirements of paragraphs (a) and (b) of this Rule encourages lawyers and judges to seek treatment through such a program. Conversely, without such an exception, lawyers and judges may hesitate to seek assistance from these programs, which may then result in additional harm to their professional careers and additional injury to the welfare of clients and the public. These Rules do not otherwise address the confidentiality of information received by a lawyer or judge participating in an approved lawyers assistance program; such an obligation, however, may be imposed by the rules of the program or other law.~~	See above explanation of paragraph (d) of the rule. Model Rule 8.3's general mandatory reporting requirement creates a conflict whenever a lawyer learns, in a confidential setting, information that must be reported under the ABA's version of the rule. Model Rule 8.3, Comment [5] addresses one example of that kind of conflict, which is when a lawyer obtains information while participating in an assistance program for lawyers or judges. To the extent this conflict might manifest under either the proposed permissive or limited mandatory reporting standard in the Commission's proposed rule, the Commission has included, in the rule itself, paragraph (d) that resolves the conflict by favoring confidentiality.

Rule 8.3 Reporting Professional Misconduct (Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) A lawyer who knows that another lawyer has committed a felonious criminal act that raises a substantial question as to that lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer shall inform the appropriate disciplinary authority.
 - (b) Except as required by paragraph (a), a lawyer may, but is not required to, report to the State Bar a violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act.
 - (c) A lawyer who knows that a judge or other adjudicative officer has committed a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct that raises a substantial question as to that person's fitness for office may, but is not required to, report the violation to the appropriate authority.
 - (d) This Rule does not authorize a lawyer to report misconduct if the lawyer is prohibited from doing so by the lawyer's duties to a client, a former client or by law. Such prohibitions include, but are not limited to, the lawyer's duty not to disclose (i) information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6, Rule 1.9, or Business and Professions Code section 6068(e); (ii) information gained by a lawyer or judge while participating in an approved lawyers assistance program; (iii) information gained during a mediation; (iv) information subject to a confidential protective order; or (v) information otherwise protected under laws governing fiduciaries.
- substantial question as to that lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer.
- [2] This Rule does not abrogate a lawyer's obligations to report the lawyer's own conduct as required under the State Bar Act. See, e.g., Business and Professions Code section 6068(o). In addition, a lawyer is not obligated to report a felonious criminal act under paragraph (a) committed by another lawyer if doing so would infringe on the reporting lawyer's privilege against self-incrimination.
 - [3] Even if a lawyer is permitted or required to report under this Rule, the lawyer must not threaten to file criminal, administrative or disciplinary charges to obtain an advantage in a civil dispute in violation of Rule 3.10.
 - [4] The duty to report professional misconduct does not apply to a lawyer retained to represent a lawyer whose professional conduct is in question. Such a situation is governed by the Rules applicable to the lawyer-client relationship.
 - [5] A lawyer may not be a party to or participate in offering or making an agreement that would violate Business and Professions Code section 6090.5.

COMMENT

- [1] In deciding whether to report another lawyer's violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act that is not required by paragraph (a), a lawyer should consider among other things whether the violation raises a

Rule 8.3 Reporting Professional Misconduct.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 1
Disagree = 1
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	A	Yes		OCTC believes that Comments [1], [3] and [4] are more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	The Commission disagrees and has not made the requested changes. It believes that Comment [1] provides useful guidance, that Comment [3] provides a rule cross-reference that is particularly important given the increased complexity of the proposed rules as compared with the current California rules, and that Comment [4] addresses what might be an obvious point but one that is important enough not to be assumed.
2	Orange County Bar Association	M	Yes		OCBA agrees with paragraph (c), which states that a lawyer who knows that a judge or other adjudicative officer has committed a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct that raises a substantial question as to that person's fitness for office may, but is not required to, report the violation to the appropriate authority. The OCBA recommends, however, that the words "or to hear a matter" be added after the phrase "fitness for office," as "fitness for office" appears to be too restrictive a term and would not include situations where the judge or judicial officer has acted or threatens to act improperly on only one occasion and only on a specified matter, but may still be otherwise fit for office.	The OCBA comments says, in substance, that the MR language in proposed paragraph (c) – that a lawyer knows "that a judge has committed a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct that raises a substantial question as to the judge's fitness for office" – might be read narrowly by some lawyers as requiring any over-all conclusion about the judge's qualities in general that might limit reporting for a single known act of misconduct. Because the purpose of paragraph (c) is to encourage reporting of judicial misconduct, the Commission agrees with OCBA and has made the change it suggested.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 8.3 Reporting Professional Misconduct.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4
Agree = 1
Disagree = 1
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
3	San Diego County Bar Association	M	Yes		Comment [2] would be clearer if it was changed to use a list format. The rule also should address the reporting of judicial misconduct.	Commission agreed and revised Comment [2]. The draft does so in paragraph (c). As explained in the Rule comparison chart, the Commission recommends that judicial reporting be permissive rather than mandatory to assure that client interests remain paramount.
4	State Bar Law Practice Management and Technology Section (LPMT)	D	Yes	(a)	LPMT recommends that the mandatory reporting requirement be removed for the following reasons and offer alternative language to ¶(a) and to ¶(b) to conform it to the proposed changes to ¶(a). The State Bar should not predicate a rule on the assumption that a lawyer should be able to “know” when a “felonious criminal act” has been committed. We assume that Proposed Rule 8.3(a) is not directed to those circumstances in which the accused lawyer has been convicted of a felony, yet no one has notified the State Bar of that conviction. The typical lawyer may be expected to know other types of rules or principles, but knowledge of criminal law should not be imputed to all lawyers. The mandatory nature of the reporting requirement could prejudice the client and damage the attorney-client relationship by	The Commission disagrees and did not make the requested change, which the Commission believes evidences confusion between committing an act and being convicted of a crime. If for example, a lawyer knows that another lawyer has solicited a bribe, the lawyer should say so without regard to whether the other lawyer ever is prosecuted for the act or convicted, events that might not occur for any number of reasons that could be immaterial to professional discipline. The Commission also doesn’t believe that differences between the laws of different jurisdictions or an individual lawyer’s lack of sophistication in the nuances of criminal law present any risk of discipline to lawyers under the proposed mandatory reporting requirement of paragraph (a). Because of the client-protection standard of proposed paragraph (d), the Commission does not believe that the otherwise mandatory reporting

Rule 8.3 Reporting Professional Misconduct.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4
Agree = 1
Disagree = 1
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					compelling the client to be a participant in the disciplinary process without the client's consent and even over the client's objections. For the foregoing reasons, we recommend that Proposed Rule 8.3(a)&(b) and Comments [1]-[3] be amended as follows: (a) A lawyer ~~who knows that another lawyer has committed a felonious criminal act that raises a substantial question as to that lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer shall~~ may, but is not required to, inform the appropriate disciplinary authority that another lawyer has committed a felonious criminal act. (b) ~~Except as required by paragraph (a), a~~ A lawyer may, but is not required to, report to the State Bar a violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act. COMMENT [1] In deciding whether to report another lawyer's violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act ~~that is not required by paragraph (a),~~ a lawyer should consider, [insert comma] among other things, [insert	requirement of paragraph (a) presents any risk to clients.

Rule 8.3 Reporting Professional Misconduct.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4
Agree = 1
Disagree = 1
Modify = 2
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					~~comma~~] whether the violation raises a substantial question as to ~~another~~ lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness, ~~[insert comma]~~ or fitness as a lawyer. [2] This Rule does not abrogate a lawyer's obligations to report the lawyer's own conduct as required under the State Bar Act. See, e.g., Business and Professions Code section 6068(o). ~~In addition, a lawyer is not obligated to report a felonious criminal act under paragraph (a) committed by another lawyer if doing so would infringe on the reporting lawyer's privilege against self-incrimination.~~ In addition, under paragraph (a), a lawyer should not report a felonious criminal act committed by another lawyer if doing so would infringe on the reporting lawyer's privilege against self-incrimination. [3] Even if a lawyer is permitted ~~or required~~ to report under this Rule, the lawyer must not threaten to file criminal, administrative, ~~[insert comma]~~ or disciplinary charges to obtain an advantage in a civil dispute in violation of Rule 3.10.

Rule 8.3: Reporting Professional Misconduct

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Alaska: In the rules effective April 15, 2009, Alaska exempts a lawyer from making a report under Rule 8.3(a) or (b) if “the lawyer reasonably believes that the misconduct has been or will otherwise be reported.”

Arizona: Rule 8.3(c) retains language similar to the pre-2002 version of the ABA Model Rule, protecting information gained while serving in a lawyer assistance program that “would be confidential if it related to the representation of a client” and if confidentiality has not otherwise been waived.

Arkansas: Rule 8.3(d) generally exempts lawyers working with the Arkansas Lawyer Assistance Program from mandatory reporting obligations “unless it appears . . . that the attorney in question, after entry into the ALAP, is failing to desist from said violation, or is failing to cooperate with a program of assistance to which said attorney has agreed, or is engaged in the sale of a controlled substance or theft of property constituting a felony under Arkansas law, or the equivalent thereof if the offense is not within the State’s jurisdiction.”

California: The California Rules of Professional Conduct have no comparable provision.

Connecticut adds the following sentence to Rule 8.3(a): “A lawyer may not condition settlement of a civil dispute involving allegations of improprieties on the part of a lawyer on an agreement that the subject misconduct not be reported to the appropriate disciplinary authority.” Rule 8.3(c) tracks the pre-2002 version of ABA Model Rule 8.3(c), but Connecticut’s version also refers to Connecticut General Statutes §51-81d(f), which governs crisis intervention assistance to attorneys.

District of Columbia: Rule 8.3(c) omits the phrase “or information gained by a lawyer or judge while participating in an approved lawyers assistance program.” The phrase is unnecessary because D.C. Rule 1.6(i) provides as follows:

[A] lawyer who serves as a member of the D.C. Bar Lawyer Counseling Committee, or as a trained intervenor for that committee, shall be deemed to have a lawyer-client relationship with respect to any lawyer-counselee being counseled under programs conducted by or on behalf of the committee. Information obtained from another lawyer being counseled under the auspices of the committee . . . shall be treated as a confidence or secret within the terms of paragraph (b) [of Rule 1.6]. Such information may be disclosed only to the extent permitted by this rule.

D.C. Rule 1.6(j) contains parallel language regarding information that a lawyer receives in connection with service on the D.C. Bar Practice Management Service Committee (formerly known as the Lawyer Practice Assistance Committee).

Florida: Rule 8.3 ends by providing that “if a lawyer’s participation in an approved lawyers assistance program is part of a disciplinary sanction this limitation shall not be applicable and a report about the lawyer who is participating as part of a disciplinary sanction shall be made to the appropriate disciplinary agency.” Florida also adds Rule 8.3(d), which provides as follows:

Limited Exception for LOMAS Counsel. A lawyer employed by or acting on behalf of the Law Office Management Assistance Service (LOMAS) shall not have an obligation to disclose knowledge of the conduct of another member . . . if the lawyer employed by or acting on behalf of LOMAS acquired the knowledge while engaged in a LOMAS review of the other lawyer’s practice. Provided further, however, that if the LOMAS review is conducted as a part of a disciplinary sanction this limitation shall not be applicable and a report shall be made to the appropriate disciplinary agency.

Georgia changes “shall” to “should” in Rule 8.3(a) and (b), and replaces ABA Model Rule 8.3(c) by stating: “There is no disciplinary penalty for a violation of this Rule.” Georgia also adds a special self-reporting provision, Rule 9.1, which requires members of the Georgia Bar to notify the State Bar of Georgia of (a) all other jurisdictions in which they are admitted to practice law and the dates of admission; and (b) “the conviction of any felony or of a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude where the underlying conduct relates to the lawyer’s fitness to practice law, within sixty days of conviction.” Finally, Georgia adds a special Rule 9.2, regarding agreements not to report, which provides as follows:

In connection with the settlement of a controversy or suit involving misuse of funds held in a fiduciary capacity, a lawyer shall not enter into an agreement that the person bringing the claim will be prohibited or restricted from filing a disciplinary complaint, or will be required to request the dismissal of a pending disciplinary complaint concerning that conduct.

Georgia’s Comment to Rule 9.2 provides as follows:

[1] The disciplinary system provides protection to the general public from those lawyers who are not morally fit to practice law. One problem in the past has been the lawyer who settles the civil claim/disciplinary complaint with the injured party on the basis that the injured party not bring a disciplinary complaint or request the dismissal of a pending disciplinary complaint. The lawyer is then free to injure other members of the general public.

[2] To prevent such abuses in settlements, this rule prohibits a lawyer from settling any controversy or suit involving misuse of funds on any basis which prevents the person bringing the claim from pursuing a disciplinary complaint.

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2010, Rule 8.3(a) deletes the reference to “honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer” and simply imposes a duty to report when “another lawyer has committed a violation of Rule 8.4(b) or 8.4(c). . . .” Moreover, Rule 8.3(c) excludes from the reporting obligation any information that is “protected by the attorney-client privilege.” This provision is narrower than the Model Rule’s exception, which applies to all information protected by Rule 1.6. Illinois also adds Rule 8.3(d), which requires lawyers to report to the Illinois Disciplinary Commission any discipline that has been imposed on them by a body other than the Illinois Commission.

Kansas: Rule 8.3(c) adds that lawyers are “not required to disclose information” learned through participation in a variety of self-help organizations, such as Alcoholics Anonymous.

Also, Rule 223 of the Kansas Rules Relating to Discipline of Attorneys, entitled “Immunity,” provides as follows: “Complaints, reports, or testimony in the course of disciplinary proceedings under these Rules shall be deemed to be made in the course of judicial proceedings. All participants shall be entitled to judicial immunity and all rights, privileges and immunities afforded public officials and other participants in actions filed in the courts of this state.”

Massachusetts: The Comment to Rule 8.3 provides as follows:

[3] While a measure of judgment is required in complying with the provisions of the Rule, a lawyer must report misconduct that, if proven and without regard to mitigation, would likely result in an order of suspension or disbarment, including misconduct that would constitute a “serious crime.” . . . Section 12(3) of Rule 4:01 provides that a serious crime is “any felony, and . . . any lesser crime a necessary element of which . . . includes interference with the administration of justice, false swearing, misrepresentation, fraud, willful failure to file income tax returns, deceit, bribery, extortion, misappropriation, theft, or an attempt or a conspiracy, or solicitation of another, to commit [such a crime].” In addition to conviction of a felony, misappropriation of client funds or perjury before a tribunal are common examples of reportable conduct. . . .

[3A] In most situations, a lawyer may defer making a report under this Rule until the matter has been concluded, but the report should be made as soon as practicable thereafter. An immediate report is ethically compelled, however, when a client or third person will likely be injured by a delay in reporting, such as where the lawyer has knowledge that another lawyer has embezzled client or fiduciary funds and delay may impair the ability to recover the funds.

Michigan adds the word “significant” before “violation” in Rules 8.3(a) and (b). The duty to report is suspended if the lawyer gained the information “while serving as an employee or volunteer of the substance abuse counseling program of the State Bar of Michigan, to the extent that the information would be protected under Rule 1.6 from disclosure if it were a communication between lawyer and client.” Rule 8.3(c)(2).

New Jersey cuts off Rule 8.3(c) after “Rule 1.6” and adds Rule 8.3(d), which provides as follows:

Paragraph (a) of this Rule shall not apply to knowledge obtained as a result of participation in a Lawyers Assistance Program established by the Supreme Court and administered by the New Jersey State Bar Association, except as follows:

(i) if the effect of discovered ethics infractions on the practice of an impaired attorney is irremediable or poses a substantial and imminent threat to the interests of clients, then attorney volunteers, peer counselors, or program staff have a duty to disclose the infractions to the disciplinary authorities, and attorney volunteers have the obligation to apply immediately for the appointment of a conservator, who also has the obligation to report ethics infractions to disciplinary authorities; and

(ii) attorney volunteers or peer counselors assisting the impaired attorney in conjunction with his or her practice have the same responsibility as any other lawyer to deal candidly with clients, but that responsibility does not include the duty to disclose voluntarily, without inquiry by the client, information of past violations or present violations that did not or do not pose a serious danger to clients.

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 8.3(b) provides as follows: “A lawyer who possesses knowledge or evidence concerning another lawyer or a judge shall not fail to respond to a lawful demand for information from a tribunal or other authority empowered to investigate or act upon such conduct.”

North Carolina: Rule 8.3(c) provides only that Rule 8.3 “does not require disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6,” omitting the ABA reference to a lawyers’ assistance program, but North Carolina accomplishes the same result by providing in Rule 1.6(c) that the duty of confidentiality under Rule 1.6 “encompasses information received by a lawyer then acting as an agent of a lawyers’ or judges’ assistance program . . . regarding another lawyer or judge seeking assistance or to whom assistance is being offered.” (Rule 1.6 also defines the term “client” to include lawyers seeking assistance from approved lawyers’ or judges’ assistance programs.)

North Carolina also adds a Rule 8.3(d), which provides that a lawyer who has been disciplined in any state or federal court for violating that court’s Rules of Professional Conduct must “inform the . . . State Bar of such action in writing no later than 30 days after entry of the order of discipline.” Finally, North Carolina Rule 1.15-2(o), entitled “Duty to Report Misappropriation,” provides that a lawyer who “discovers or reasonably believes that entrusted property has been misappropriated or misapplied shall promptly inform the North Carolina State Bar.”

Ohio: Rule 8.3 provides as follows:

(a) A lawyer who possesses unprivileged knowledge of a violation of the Ohio Rules of Professional Conduct that raises a question as to any lawyer’s honesty, trustworthiness, or fitness as a lawyer in other respects, shall inform a disciplinary authority empowered to investigate or act upon such a violation.

(b) A lawyer who possesses unprivileged knowledge that a judge has committed a violation of the Ohio Rules of Professional Conduct or applicable rules of judicial conduct shall inform the appropriate authority.

(c) Any information obtained by a member of a committee . . . of a bar association . . . designed to assist lawyers with substance abuse or mental health problems . . . shall be privileged for all purposes under this rule.

Texas alters Rule 8.3(c) as follows:

(c) A lawyer having knowledge or suspecting that another lawyer or judge whose conduct the lawyer is required to report pursuant to paragraphs (a) or (b) of this Rule is impaired by chemical dependency on alcohol or drugs or by mental illness may report that person to an approved peer assistance program rather than to an appropriate disciplinary authority. If a lawyer elects that option, the lawyer's report to the approved peer assistance program shall disclose any disciplinary violations that the reporting lawyer would otherwise have to disclose to the authorities referred to in paragraphs (a) and (b).

Texas also adds a Rule 8.3(d), which makes clear that Rule 8.3 does not require disclosure of knowledge or information otherwise protected as confidential information by Texas Rule 1.05 (the Texas equivalent to ABA Model Rule 1.6) or by "any statutory or regulatory provisions applicable to the counseling activities of the approved peer assistance program."

Virginia: Rule 8.3(b) replaces the phrase "who knows" with the phrase "having reliable information." Virginia Rule 8.3(c) provides that if a lawyer serving as a third-party neutral receives "reliable information" in that capacity about another lawyer's misconduct that would otherwise have to be reported, the lawyer/neutral "shall attempt to obtain the parties' written agreement to waive confidentiality and permit disclosure of such information to the appropriate professional authority." Rule 8.3(d) — equivalent to ABA Model Rule 8.3(c) — also exempts disclosure by a lawyer who is a "trained intervenor or volunteer" for an approved lawyers' assistance committee, or who is "cooperating in a particular assistance effort," when the information is obtained "for the purposes of fulfilling the recognized objectives of the program."

Virginia also adds Rule 8.3(e), which requires a lawyer to inform the Virginia State Bar if (1) the lawyer has been disciplined by a state or federal disciplinary authority, agency or court in any jurisdiction for violating that jurisdiction's rules of professional conduct, or (2) the lawyer has been convicted of a felony in any United States jurisdiction, or (3) the lawyer has been convicted of either "a crime involving theft, fraud, extortion, bribery or perjury," or "an attempt, solicitation or conspiracy to commit any of the foregoing offenses" in any United States jurisdiction.

Proposed Rule 8.4 [RPC 1-120]

“Misconduct”

(XDraft #10.2, 4/6/10)

Summary: The text of proposed new Rule 8.4 retains current California Rule 1-120 (Assisting, Soliciting, or Inducing Violations) as paragraph (a) and includes most of the provisions found in ABA Model Rule 8.4. Some of the included Model Rule provisions have counterparts in current California rules or in sections of the Business and Professions Code. The text of proposed Rule 8.4 differs from ABA Model Rule 8.4 by: (i) not proscribing attempts to violate the rules in paragraph (a); (ii) including the concept of moral turpitude in paragraph (b); (iii) restricting discipline to misrepresentations that are intentional in paragraph (c); and (iv) limiting violations for conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice to conduct in connection with the practice of law (paragraph (d)).

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule

Comment

- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☒ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 1-120

Statute

Business and Professions Code §§6100 et seq.

Case law

See Comment chart, Comments [2A], [2B] and [2C].

- ☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

- ☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 7
Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 4
Abstain 1

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☒ Yes ☐ No (See Explanations for Paragraphs (b) and (d)).

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

The continued references to moral turpitude when the ABA has essentially abandoned that concept in the Model Rules has been objected to by some, but the Commission believes it has continued viability and continues to be utilized by The State Bar Court for discipline.

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 8.4* Misconduct

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

The text of proposed Rule 8.4 retains current California Rule 1-120 (Assisting, Soliciting, or Inducing Violations) as paragraph (a) and includes most of the provisions found in ABA Model Rule 8.4, thus collecting in one rule various misconduct provisions. Some of the included ABA provisions have counterparts in current California rules or in sections of the Business and Professions Code. The text of proposed Rule 8.4 differs from ABA Model Rule 8.4 by: (i) not proscribing attempts to violate the rules in paragraph (a); (ii) including the concept of moral turpitude in paragraph (b); (iii) restricting discipline under paragraph (c) to misrepresentations that are intentional; and (iv) limiting violations for conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice to conduct in connection with the practice of law (paragraph (d)).

Many of the Comments are based on corresponding comments in ABA Model Rule 8.4, but have been revised for brevity and clarity, and to conform to the differences in the Rule text. In addition, several comments have been added to apprise California lawyers of statutory and decisional law that might provide bases for discipline beyond those in Rule 8.4. After the subsequent public comment distribution, a new comment, Comment [2C], was added in response to comment letter from the Department of Justice. The new comment explains that certain covert activities are not prohibited by paragraph (c) of the rule.

* Proposed Rule, XDraft 10.2 (4/6/10).

INTRODUCTION (Continued):

Minority. A minority of the Commission objects to Comment [3], which states that manifestations by words or conduct of certain types of bias or prejudice can be a violation of paragraph (d). This is a category of speech that inherently has implications under the First Amendment and the California Constitution. The minority believes a legal professional should respect the right of all citizens, including lawyers, to express their opinions, even if they are disgusting or repugnant. The legal profession should not condone chilling speech by a rule that would call out a category of speech as a potential ground for discipline. The minority contends the focus of paragraph (d) should be on conduct in connection with the practice of law that is prejudicial to the administration of justice and not on categories of speech.

Variations in Other Jurisdictions. Every jurisdiction has adopted some version of Model Rule 8.4. District of Columbia Rule 8.4(d) prohibits conduct that “seriously interferes with the administration of justice.” Several jurisdictions, including Georgia, Virginia and Wisconsin, omit Model Rule 8.4(d). Other jurisdictions, e.g., Florida, expand Model Rule 8.4 (d), to prohibit conduct intended to “disparage, humiliate, or discriminate against litigants, jurors, witnesses, court personnel, or other lawyers on any basis,” including on account of race, ethnicity, etc. Some jurisdictions have added provisions to address such conduct specifically, e.g., Colorado, Illinois, Maryland (words or conduct), Texas (same), Ohio. See State Variations, below.

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.4 Misconduct	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.4 Misconduct	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to: (a) violate or attempt to violate the Rules of Professional Conduct, knowingly assist or induce another to do so, or do so through the acts of another;	It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to: ~~(a) violate or attempt to violate the Rules of Professional Conduct, knowingly assist or induce another to do so, or do so through the acts of another;~~ (a) knowingly assist in, solicit, or induce any violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act;	There are two principal changes in paragraph (a). First, paragraph (a) removes "... violate ... the Rules of Professional Conduct" The reason for this change is that any conduct that violates any Rule already is subject to discipline, so the quoted Model Rule language has no consequence except to create the risk that lawyers will be charged twice for every alleged Rule violation. Second, paragraph (a) eliminates an "attempt" to violate a Rule as a general disciplinary offense. It was the consensus of the Commission during the drafting process that it should address on a rule-by-rule basis whether an attempted violation should be a basis for professional discipline. As a result, the Commission decided not to include attempts to violate as a general rule of discipline.
(b) commit a criminal act that reflects adversely on the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer in other respects;	(b) commit a criminal act that involves moral turpitude or that reflects adversely on the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness, or fitness as a lawyer ~~in other respects;~~	The Commission added moral turpitude to the Model rule to maintain conformity with the broader public protection afforded by the Business and Professions Code, specifically, section 6106. The Model Rules deleted moral turpitude as a basis for discipline that had been in the ABA Model Code. See Explanation of Changes for Model Rule 8.4, Cmt. [2], below. Some states have retained that standard, or have interpreted the rest of section (b) as being the equivalent of moral turpitude. However, the long and evolving history of case law in California interpreting moral turpitude has expanded the scope of public protection beyond the factors set forth in Model Rule 8.4(b). For these reasons, the Commission recommends adding "moral turpitude" to the proposed rule.

* Proposed Rule 8.4, XDraft 10.2 (4/6/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule.

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.4 Misconduct	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.4 Misconduct	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
		In addition, there is a long history in California of discipline referrals of attorneys who have been convicted in criminal matters to the State Bar for discipline pursuant to Business and Professions Code sections 6101 and 6102. Moral turpitude is a critical component of those referrals for interim suspension or summary disbarment upon proof of conviction. A minority of the Commission believes that California should not continue using moral turpitude as a standard when the ABA has essentially abandoned that concept in the Model Rules. The Commission also recommends deletion of the phrase “in other respects” as surplusage.
(c) engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation;	(c) engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or intentional misrepresentation;	The addition of “intentional” is intended to clarify that negligent misrepresentation is not regarded as dishonesty that triggers this Rule. The Commission believes this clarification is consistent with the intended scope of the ABA's rule and with the interpretation in disciplinary proceedings in states that have adopted the Model Rule. (See, e.g., State ex rel. Oklahoma Bar Ass'n v. Besly (Okla., 2006) 136 P.3d 590 [2006 OK 18] and In re Clark (Ariz., 2004) 207 Ariz. 414 [87 P.3d 827].

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.4 Misconduct	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.4 Misconduct	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(d) engage in conduct that is prejudicial to the administration of justice;	(d) engage in conduct in connection with the practice of law, including when acting in propria persona, that is prejudicial to the administration of justice;	The addition of “in connection with the practice of law” was added because of concern that the vagueness of the language might not overcome facial Constitutional challenges under the First Amendment. The Commission sought to delimit the scope of conduct proscribed under paragraph (d) by clarifying in advance that the specific conduct that might be at issue in connection with a charge of prejudice to the administration of justice must be connected to the practice of law. A minority of the Commission disagrees with the language limiting the paragraph’s scope to conduct “in connection with the practice of law” because a lawyer’s fitness to practice law is called into question by conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice in whatever capacity the lawyer acts. Finally, the Commission has added the phrase “including when acting in propria persona,” to clarify that a lawyer appearing in propria persona is engaging in the practice of law and therefore not immune from this provision.
(e) state or imply an ability to influence improperly a government agency or official or to achieve results by means that violate the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law; or	(e) state or imply an ability to influence improperly a government agency or official or to achieve results by means that violate ~~the~~these Rules ~~of Professional Conduct~~ or other law; or	Paragraph (e) is substantively identical to Model Rule 8.4(e). The Commission has adopted the convention of referring to the Rules of Professional Conduct as “these Rules.” Curiously, the ABA mostly refers to the Model Rules collectively as “these Rules” in its blackletter and comment, only occasionally (as here) referring to them as “the Rules of Professional Conduct.” An inquiry to the Model Rules drafters (reporters) confirmed that no substantive meaning should be attached to the varied usages.

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.4 Misconduct	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.4 Misconduct	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(f) knowingly assist a judge or judicial officer in conduct that is a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct or other law.	(f) knowingly assist a judge or judicial officer in conduct that is a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct or other law.	Paragraph (f) is identical to Model Rule 8.4(f).

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.4 Misconduct Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 8.4 Misconduct Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[1] Lawyers are subject to discipline when they violate or attempt to violate the Rules of Professional Conduct, knowingly assist or induce another to do so or do so through the acts of another, as when they request or instruct an agent to do so on the lawyer's behalf. Paragraph (a), however, does not prohibit a lawyer from advising a client concerning action the client is legally entitled to take.	Paragraph (a) [1] ~~Lawyers are~~A lawyer is subject to discipline ~~when they violate or attempt to violate the Rules of Professional Conduct, for~~ knowingly ~~assist~~assisting or ~~induce~~inducing another to ~~do so~~violate these Rules or ~~the State Bar Act, or to~~ do so through the acts of another, as when ~~they request~~a lawyer requests or ~~instruct~~instructs an agent to do so on the lawyer's behalf. ~~Paragraph (a), however, does not prohibit a lawyer from advising a client concerning action the client is legally entitled to take.~~	Headings have been added to the Comment for clarity. The Model Rule language has been modified and attempted violations eliminated, to conform to the language of the black letter rule. See Explanation for paragraph (a), above. The substance of the deleted last sentence of the Model Rule comment is the subject of proposed Rule 1.2(d), the counterpart to current rule 3-210. See Comment [4], below.
[2] Many kinds of illegal conduct reflect adversely on fitness to practice law, such as offenses involving fraud and the offense of willful failure to file an income tax return. However, some kinds of offenses carry no such implication. Traditionally, the distinction was drawn in terms of offenses involving "moral turpitude." That concept can be construed to include offenses concerning some matters of personal morality, such as adultery and comparable offenses, that have no specific connection to fitness for the practice of law. Although a lawyer is personally answerable to the entire criminal law, a	Paragraph (b) [2] ~~Many kinds of illegal conduct reflect~~A lawyer may be disciplined under paragraph (b) for a criminal act ~~that reflects~~ adversely on fitness to practice law, such as offenses involving fraud and the offense of willful failure to file an income tax return. However, some ~~kinds of~~ offenses carry no such implication. ~~Traditionally, the distinction was drawn in terms of offenses involving "moral turpitude." That concept can be construed to include offenses concerning some matters of personal morality, such as adultery and comparable offenses, that have no specific connection to fitness for the practice of law.~~	Comment [2] is based on Model Rule 8.4, cmt. [2]. The first sentence of the Model Rule comment was revised to track the actual language of paragraph (b). The second sentence was deleted as unnecessary because the Commission has retained "moral turpitude" in the Rule, for the reasons set out in the Explanation for paragraph (b), above. At one point during the drafting process for this Rule, the Commission crafted a statement, based on the stricken sentence, that was intended to clarify that "offenses concerning some matters of personal morality" were not within the scope of the Rule. However, as it was unclear that such conduct, e.g., adultery, remains a criminal offense in California, the sentence was deleted as potentially lawyer should be professionally answerable only for offenses that indicate lack of those characteristics relevant to law practice. Offenses involving violence, dishonesty, breach of trust, or serious interference with the administration of justice are in that category. A pattern of repeated offenses, even ones of minor significance when considered separately, can indicate indifference to legal obligation.	Although a lawyer is personally answerable to the entire criminal law, a lawyer should be professionally answerable only for offenses that indicate lack of those characteristics relevant to law practice. Offenses involving violence, dishonesty, breach of trust, or serious interference with the administration of justice are in that category. ~~A pattern of repeated offenses, even ones of minor significance when considered separately, can indicate indifference to legal obligation.~~	confusing. The Commission deleted the last sentence of the Model Rule comment because the proposition stated is unclear in the absence of a definition of what is considered a "minor" offense. This ambiguity could give rise to interpretations that grant less public protection than the existing protection afforded by California's standards of moral turpitude, discipline under Business and Professions Code section 6068(a), and conviction referrals under Business and Professions Code section 6101. A lawyer's conviction for a single misdemeanor charge could be construed as a "minor" offense under the Model Rule language; however, a pattern of that misconduct might not be a prerequisite for discipline under California's standards.

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.4 Misconduct Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 8.4 Misconduct Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[2A] A lawyer may be disciplined for criminal acts as set forth in Article 6 of the State Bar Act, (Business & Professions Code, sections 6101 et seq.), or if the criminal act constitutes "other misconduct warranting discipline" as defined by California Supreme Court case law. (See e.g., In re Kelley (1990) 52 Cal.3d 487 [276 Cal.Rptr. 375]; In re Rohan (1978) 21 Cal.3d 195, 203 [145 Cal.Rptr. 855] [wilful failure to file a federal income tax return]; In re Morales (1983) 35 Cal.3d 1 [196 Cal.Rptr. 353] [twenty-seven counts of failure to pay payroll taxes and unemployment insurance contributions as employer].)	This Comment was added because there is a substantial body of case law that has confirmed discipline for "other conduct warranting discipline," as set out in the Supreme Court cases cited.

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.4 Misconduct Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 8.4 Misconduct Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	[2B] In addition to being subject to discipline under paragraph (b), a lawyer may be disciplined under Business and Professions Code section 6106 for acts of moral turpitude that constitute gross negligence. (Gassman v. State Bar (1976) 18 Cal.3d 125 [132 Cal.Rptr. 675]; Jackson v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal.3d 509 [153 Cal.Rptr. 24]; In the Matter of Myrdall (Review Dept. 1995) 3 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 363 [habitual disregard of clients' interests]; Grove v. State Bar (1967) 66 Cal.2d 680 [58 Cal.Rptr. 564]. See also Martin v. State Bar (1978) 20 Cal.3d 717 [144 Cal.Rptr. 214]; Selznick v. State Bar (1976) 16 Cal.3d 704 [129 Cal.Rptr. 108]; In the Matter of Varakin (Review Dept. 1994) 3 Cal State Bar Rptr 179 [pattern of misconduct]; In re Calloway (1977) 20 Cal.3d 165 [141 Cal.Rptr. 805 [act of baseness, vileness or depravity in the private and social duties which a man or woman owes to fellow human beings or to society in general, contrary to the accepted and customary rule of right and duty between human beings]; In re Craig (1938) 12 Cal.2d 93 [82 P.2d 442].)	This Comment is intended to alert lawyers to the expansive case law on moral turpitude.
	Paragraph (c) [2C] Paragraph (c) does not apply where a lawyer advises clients or others about, or supervises, lawful covert activity in the investigation of violations of civil or criminal law or constitutional rights, provided the lawyer's conduct is otherwise in compliance with	In response to a public comment from the Department of Justice and, in light of the Commission's decision to not recommend a version of Model Rule 4.1, the language addressing covert activity previously considered for inclusion as Rule 4.1 (b), has been added as new Comment [2C] to Rule 8.4. In part, the new comment clarifies that Rule 8.4(c) does not apply where a lawyer advises clients or others about, or supervises, lawful covert

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.4 Misconduct Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 8.4 Misconduct Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
	these Rules. "Covert activity," as used in this Rule, means an effort to obtain information on unlawful activity through the use of misrepresentations or other subterfuge. Covert activity may be commenced by a lawyer or involve a lawyer as an advisor or supervisor only when the lawyer in good faith believes there is a reasonable possibility that unlawful activity has taken place, is taking place, or will take place in the foreseeable future.	activity in the investigation of violations of civil or criminal law or constitutional rights, provided the lawyer's conduct is otherwise in compliance with these Rules.
	Paragraph (d) [2D] Paragraph (d) is not intended to prohibit activities of a lawyer that are protected by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution or by Article I, § 2 of the California Constitution. See, e.g., Ramirez v. State Bar (1980) 28 Cal 3d 402, 411 [169 Cal. Rptr 206] (a statement impugning the honesty or integrity of a judge will not result in discipline unless it is shown that the statement is false and was made knowingly or with reckless disregard for truth); Matter of Anderson (Rev. Dept 1997) 3 State Bar Court Rptr 775 (disciplinary rules governing the legal profession cannot punish activity protected by the First Amendment); Standing Committee on Discipline of the United States District Court for the Central District of California v. Yagman (9th Cir. 1995) 55 F.3d 1430, 1443 (a lawyer's statement unrelated to a matter pending before the court may be sanctioned only if the statement poses a clear and present danger to the administration of justice).	The Commission concluded that it is important to stress the protection of constitutional rights in connection with discipline so that activities protected by the First Amendment do not become the subject of disciplinary proceedings. See also Explanation of Changes at paragraph (d), above.

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.4 Misconduct Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 8.4 Misconduct Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[3] A lawyer who, in the course of representing a client, knowingly manifests by words or conduct, bias or prejudice based upon race, sex, religion, national origin, disability, age, sexual orientation or socioeconomic status, violates paragraph (d) when such actions are prejudicial to the administration of justice. Legitimate advocacy respecting the foregoing factors does not violate paragraph (d). A trial judge's finding that peremptory challenges were exercised on a discriminatory basis does not alone establish a violation of this rule.	[3] A lawyer who, in the course of representing a client, knowingly manifests by words or conduct, bias or prejudice based upon race, sex, religion, national origin, disability, age, ~~or sexual orientation~~ ~~or socioeconomic status~~, violates paragraph (d) when such actions are prejudicial to the administration of justice. Legitimate advocacy respecting the foregoing factors does not violate paragraph (d). A trial judge's finding that peremptory challenges were exercised on a discriminatory basis does not alone establish a violation of ~~this rule~~ paragraph (b).	Comment [3] is based on Model Rule 8.4, cmt. [3]. The comment clarifies the scope of paragraphs (a) and (d). The Ninth Circuit invalidated Business and Professions Code section 6068(f) relating to "offensive personality" on constitutional grounds, resulting in the subsequent legislative striking of that section. United States v. Wunsch, 84 F.3d 110 (9th Cir. 1996). However, the Ninth Circuit expressly approved of Model Rule 8.4(b).
[4] A lawyer may refuse to comply with an obligation imposed by law upon a good faith belief that no valid obligation exists. The provisions of Rule 1.2(d) concerning a good faith challenge to the validity, scope, meaning or application of the law apply to challenges of legal regulation of the practice of law.	[4] ~~A lawyer may refuse to comply with an obligation imposed by law upon a good faith belief that no valid obligation exists. The provisions of Rule 1.2(d) concerning a good faith challenge to the validity, scope, meaning or application of the any law, rule, or ruling of a tribunal is governed by Rule 1.2(d). Rule 1.2(d) is also intended to apply to challenges of legal~~ regarding the regulation of the practice of law.	Model Rule 8.4, cmt. [4], has been revised for brevity and clarity. This Comment is intended as a cross-reference to another rule that is applicable to related conduct. It is the second sentence to Model Rule 8.4, Comment [4], revised and split into two sentences for clarity. No change in meaning was intended. The first sentence ("A lawyer may refuse to comply with an obligation imposed by law upon a good faith belief that no valid obligation exists.") was deleted because it was not for the protection of the public, inconsistent with Bus. & Prof. Code section 6068(a), and overly broad with respect to what a lawyer may do to challenge a law that he or she believes is invalid.

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.4 Misconduct Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 8.4 Misconduct Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[5] Lawyers holding public office assume legal responsibilities going beyond those of other citizens. A lawyer's abuse of public office can suggest an inability to fulfill the professional role of lawyers. The same is true of abuse of positions of private trust such as trustee, executor, administrator, guardian, agent and officer, director or manager of a corporation or other organization.	[5] ~~Lawyers holding public office assume legal responsibilities going beyond those of other citizens.~~ A lawyer's abuse of public office ~~can suggest an inability to fulfill~~ held by the ~~professional role of lawyers. The same is true of~~ lawyer or abuse of positions of private trust such as trustee, executor, administrator, guardian, agent and officer, director or manager of a corporation or other organization, can involve conduct prohibited by this Rule.	Comment [5] is based on Model Rule 8.4, cmt. [5], but has been revised to make it more concise and also to clarify that the conduct described can violate the Rule. The Commission believes that the recommended clause – “can involve conduct prohibited by this Rule” – does not suffer the same vagueness of the Model Rule clause (“can suggest an inability to fulfill the professional role of lawyers.”)
	[6] Alternative bases for professional discipline may be found in Article 6 of the State Bar Act, (Bus. & Prof. Code, sections 6100 et seq.), and published California decisions interpreting the relevant sections of the State Bar Act. This Rule is not intended to provide a basis for duplicative charging of misconduct for a single illegal act.	This Comment, which has no counterpart in the Model Rule, is intended as a clarification and to advise lawyers that there are bases for discipline for professional misconduct other than the Rules.

Rule 8.4 Misconduct

(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to the Public Comment Draft)

It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to:

- (a) knowingly assist in, solicit, or induce any violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act;
- (b) commit a criminal act that involves moral turpitude or that reflects adversely on the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness, or fitness as a lawyer;
- (c) engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or intentional misrepresentation;
- (d) engage in conduct in connection with the practice of law, including when acting in propria persona, that is prejudicial to the administration of justice;
- (e) state or imply an ability to influence improperly a government agency or official or to achieve results by means that violate these Rules or other law; or
- (f) knowingly assist a judge or judicial officer in conduct that is a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct or other law.

COMMENT

Paragraph (a)

[1] A lawyer is subject to discipline for knowingly assisting or inducing another to violate these Rules or the State Bar Act, or to do so through the acts of another, as when a lawyer requests or instructs an agent to do so on the lawyer's behalf.

Paragraph (b)

[2] A lawyer may be disciplined under paragraph (b) for a criminal act that reflects adversely on fitness to practice law, such as offenses involving fraud and the offense of willful failure to file an income tax return. However, some offenses carry no such implication. Although a lawyer is personally answerable to the entire criminal law, a lawyer should be professionally answerable only for offenses that indicate lack of those characteristics relevant to law practice. Offenses involving violence, dishonesty, breach of trust, or serious interference with the administration of justice are in that category.

[2A] A lawyer may be disciplined for criminal acts as set forth in Article 6 of the State Bar Act, (Business and Professions Code sections 6101 et seq.), or if the criminal act constitutes "other misconduct warranting discipline" as defined by California Supreme Court case law. (See e.g., In re Kelley (1990) 52 Cal.3d 487 [276 Cal.Rptr. 375]; In re Rohan (1978) 21 Cal.3d 195, 203 [145 Cal.Rptr. 855] [willful failure to file a federal income tax return]; In re Morales (1983) 35 Cal.3d 1 [196 Cal.Rptr. 353] [twenty-seven counts of failure to pay payroll taxes and unemployment insurance contributions as employer].)

[2B] In addition to being subject to discipline under paragraph (b), a lawyer may be disciplined under Business and Professions Code section 6106 for acts of moral turpitude that constitute gross negligence. (Gassman v. State Bar (1976) 18 Cal.3d 125 [132 Cal.Rptr. 675]; Jackson v. State Bar (1979) 23

Cal.3d 509 [153 Cal.Rptr. 24]; In the Matter of Myrdall (Rev. Dept. 1995) 3 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 363 [habitual disregard of clients' interests]; Grove v. State Bar (1967) 66 Cal.2d 680 [58 Cal.Rptr. 564]. See also Martin v. State Bar (1978) 20 Cal.3d 717 [144 Cal.Rptr. 214]; Selznick v. State Bar (1976) 16 Cal.3d 704 [129 Cal.Rptr. 108]; In the Matter of Varakin (Rev. Dept. 1994) 3 Cal State Bar Rptr 179 [pattern of misconduct]; In re Calloway (1977) 20 Cal.3d 165 [141 Cal.Rptr. 805 [act of baseness, vileness or depravity in the private and social duties which a man or woman owes to fellow human beings or to society in general, contrary to the accepted and customary rule of right and duty between human beings]; In re Craig (1938) 12 Cal.2d 93 [82 P.2d 442].)

Paragraph (c)

[2C] Paragraph (c) does not apply where a lawyer advises clients or others about, or supervises, lawful covert activity in the investigation of violations of civil or criminal law or constitutional rights, provided the lawyer's conduct is otherwise in compliance with these Rules. "Covert activity," as used in this Rule, means an effort to obtain information on unlawful activity through the use of misrepresentations or other subterfuge. Covert activity may be commenced by a lawyer or involve a lawyer as an advisor or supervisor only when the lawyer in good faith believes there is a reasonable possibility that unlawful activity has taken place, is taking place, or will take place in the foreseeable future.

Paragraph (d)

[2C] Paragraph (d) is not intended to prohibit activities of a lawyer that are protected by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution or by Article I, section 2 of the California Constitution. See, e.g., Ramirez v. State Bar (1980) 28 Cal 3d 402, 411 [169 Cal. Rptr 206] (a statement impugning the honesty or integrity of a judge will not result in discipline unless it is shown that the statement is false and was made knowingly or with reckless disregard for truth); In the Matter of Anderson (Rev. Dept 1997) 3 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 775 (disciplinary rules governing the legal profession cannot punish activity protected by the First Amendment); Standing Committee on Discipline of the United States District Court for the Central District of California v. Yagman (9th Cir. 1995) 55 F.3d 1430, 1443 (a lawyer's statement unrelated to a matter pending before the court may be sanctioned only if the statement poses a clear and present danger to the administration of justice).

[3] A lawyer who, in the course of representing a client, knowingly manifests by words or conduct, bias or prejudice based upon race, sex, religion, national origin, disability, age or sexual orientation, violates paragraph (d) when such actions are prejudicial to the administration of justice. Legitimate advocacy respecting the foregoing factors does not violate paragraph (d). A trial judge's finding that peremptory challenges were exercised on a discriminatory basis does not alone establish a violation of paragraph (b).

[4] Testing the validity of any law, rule, or ruling of a tribunal is governed by Rule 1.2(d). Rule 1.2(d) is also intended to apply to challenges regarding the regulation of the practice of law.

[5] A lawyer's abuse of public office held by the lawyer or abuse of positions of private trust such as trustee, executor, administrator, guardian, agent and officer, director or manager of a corporation or other organization, can involve conduct prohibited by this Rule.

[6] Alternative bases for professional discipline may be found in Article 6 of the State Bar Act, (Business and Professions Code sections 6100 et seq.), and published California decisions interpreting the relevant sections of the State Bar Act. This Rule is not intended to provide a basis for duplicative charging of misconduct for a single illegal act.

Rule ~~1-120~~ ~~Assisting, Soliciting, or Inducing Violations~~ 8.4 Misconduct

(Redline Comparison of the Proposed Rule to the Current California Rule)

It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to:

- (a) ~~A member shall not~~ knowingly assist in, solicit, or induce any violation of these ~~rules~~ Rules or the State Bar Act;
- (b) commit a criminal act that involves moral turpitude or that reflects adversely on the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness, or fitness as a lawyer;
- (c) engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or intentional misrepresentation;
- (d) engage in conduct in connection with the practice of law, including when acting in propria persona, that is prejudicial to the administration of justice;
- (e) state or imply an ability to influence improperly a government agency or official or to achieve results by means that violate these Rules or other law; or
- (f) knowingly assist a judge or judicial officer in conduct that is a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct or other law.

COMMENT

Paragraph (a)

[1] A lawyer is subject to discipline for knowingly assisting or inducing another to violate these Rules or the State Bar Act, or to do so through the acts of another, as when a lawyer requests or instructs an agent to do so on the lawyer's behalf.

Paragraph (b)

[2] A lawyer may be disciplined under paragraph (b) for a criminal act that reflects adversely on fitness to practice law, such as offenses involving fraud and the offense of willful failure to file an income tax return. However, some offenses carry no such implication. Although a lawyer is personally answerable to the entire criminal law, a lawyer should be professionally answerable only for offenses that indicate lack of those characteristics relevant to law practice. Offenses involving violence, dishonesty, breach of trust, or serious interference with the administration of justice are in that category.

[2A] A lawyer may be disciplined for criminal acts as set forth in Article 6 of the State Bar Act, (Business and Professions Code sections 6101 et seq.), or if the criminal act constitutes "other misconduct warranting discipline" as defined by California Supreme Court case law. (See e.g., In re Kelley (1990) 52 Cal.3d 487 [276 Cal.Rptr. 375]; In re Rohan (1978) 21 Cal.3d 195, 203 [145 Cal.Rptr. 855] [willful failure to file a federal income tax return]; In re Morales (1983) 35 Cal.3d 1 [196 Cal.Rptr. 353] [twenty-seven counts of failure to pay payroll taxes and unemployment insurance contributions as employer].)

[2B] In addition to being subject to discipline under paragraph (b), a lawyer may be disciplined under Business and Professions Code section 6106 for acts of moral turpitude that constitute gross negligence. (Gassman v. State Bar (1976) 18 Cal.3d 125 [132 Cal.Rptr. 675]; Jackson v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal.3d 509 [153 Cal.Rptr. 24]; In the Matter of Myrdall (Rev. Dept. 1995) 3 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 363 [habitual disregard of clients' interests]; Grove v. State Bar (1967) 66 Cal.2d 680 [58 Cal.Rptr. 564]. See also Martin v. State Bar (1978) 20 Cal.3d 717 [144 Cal.Rptr. 214]; Selznick v. State Bar (1976) 16 Cal.3d 704 [129 Cal.Rptr. 108]; In the Matter of Varakin (Rev. Dept. 1994) 3 Cal State Bar Rptr 179 [pattern of misconduct]; In re Calloway (1977) 20 Cal.3d 165 [141 Cal.Rptr. 805 [act of baseness, vileness or depravity in the private and social duties which a man or woman owes to fellow human beings or to society in general, contrary to the accepted and customary rule of right and duty between human beings]; In re Craig (1938) 12 Cal.2d 93 [82 P.2d 442].)

Paragraph (c)

[2C] Paragraph (c) does not apply where a lawyer advises clients or others about, or supervises, lawful covert activity in the investigation of violations of civil or criminal law or constitutional rights, provided the lawyer's conduct is otherwise in compliance with these Rules. "Covert activity," as used in this Rule, means an effort to obtain information on unlawful activity through the use of misrepresentations or other subterfuge. Covert activity may be commenced by a lawyer or involve a lawyer as an advisor or supervisor only when the lawyer in good faith believes there is a reasonable possibility that unlawful activity has taken place, is taking place, or will take place in the foreseeable future.

Paragraph (d)

[2D] Paragraph (d) is not intended to prohibit activities of a lawyer that are protected by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution or by Article I, section 2 of the California Constitution. See, e.g., Ramirez v. State Bar (1980) 28 Cal 3d 402, 411 [169 Cal. Rptr 206] (a statement impugning the honesty or integrity of a judge will not result in discipline unless it is shown that the statement is false and was made knowingly or with reckless disregard for truth); In the Matter of Anderson (Rev. Dept 1997) 3 Cal. State Bar Ct.

Rptr. 775 (disciplinary rules governing the legal profession cannot punish activity protected by the First Amendment); Standing Committee on Discipline of the United States District Court for the Central District of California v. Yagman (9th Cir. 1995) 55 F.3d 1430, 1443 (a lawyer's statement unrelated to a matter pending before the court may be sanctioned only if the statement poses a clear and present danger to the administration of justice).

[3] A lawyer who, in the course of representing a client, knowingly manifests by words or conduct, bias or prejudice based upon race, sex, religion, national origin, disability, age or sexual orientation, violates paragraph (d) when such actions are prejudicial to the administration of justice. Legitimate advocacy respecting the foregoing factors does not violate paragraph (d). A trial judge's finding that peremptory challenges were exercised on a discriminatory basis does not alone establish a violation of paragraph (b).

[4] Testing the validity of any law, rule, or ruling of a tribunal is governed by Rule 1.2(d). Rule 1.2(d) is also intended to apply to challenges regarding the regulation of the practice of law.

[5] A lawyer's abuse of public office held by the lawyer or abuse of positions of private trust such as trustee, executor, administrator, guardian, agent and officer, director or manager of a corporation or other organization, can involve conduct prohibited by this Rule.

[6] Alternative bases for professional discipline may be found in Article 6 of the State Bar Act, (Business and Professions Code sections 6100 et seq.), and published California decisions interpreting the relevant sections of the State Bar Act. This Rule is not intended to provide a basis for duplicative charging of misconduct for a single illegal act.

Rule 8.4 Misconduct

(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to:

- (a) knowingly assist in, solicit, or induce any violation of these Rules or the State Bar Act;
- (b) commit a criminal act that involves moral turpitude or that reflects adversely on the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness, or fitness as a lawyer;
- (c) engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or intentional misrepresentation;
- (d) engage in conduct in connection with the practice of law, including when acting in propria persona, that is prejudicial to the administration of justice;
- (e) state or imply an ability to influence improperly a government agency or official or to achieve results by means that violate these Rules or other law; or
- (f) knowingly assist a judge or judicial officer in conduct that is a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct or other law.

COMMENT

Paragraph (a)

[1] A lawyer is subject to discipline for knowingly assisting or inducing another to violate these Rules or the State Bar Act, or to do so through the acts of another, as when a lawyer requests or instructs an agent to do so on the lawyer's behalf.

Paragraph (b)

[2] A lawyer may be disciplined under paragraph (b) for a criminal act that reflects adversely on fitness to practice law, such as offenses involving fraud and the offense of willful failure to file an income tax return. However, some offenses carry no such implication. Although a lawyer is personally answerable to the entire criminal law, a lawyer should be professionally answerable only for offenses that indicate lack of those characteristics relevant to law practice. Offenses involving violence, dishonesty, breach of trust, or serious interference with the administration of justice are in that category.

[2A] A lawyer may be disciplined for criminal acts as set forth in Article 6 of the State Bar Act, (Business and Professions Code sections 6101 et seq.), or if the criminal act constitutes "other misconduct warranting discipline" as defined by California Supreme Court case law. (See e.g., In re Kelley (1990) 52 Cal.3d 487 [276 Cal.Rptr. 375]; In re Rohan (1978) 21 Cal.3d 195, 203 [145 Cal.Rptr. 855] [willful failure to file a federal income tax return]; In re Morales (1983) 35 Cal.3d 1 [196 Cal.Rptr. 353] [twenty-seven counts of failure to pay payroll taxes and unemployment insurance contributions as employer].)

[2B] In addition to being subject to discipline under paragraph (b), a lawyer may be disciplined under Business and Professions Code section 6106 for acts of moral turpitude that constitute gross negligence. (Gassman v. State Bar (1976) 18 Cal.3d 125 [132 Cal.Rptr. 675]; Jackson v. State Bar (1979) 23

Cal.3d 509 [153 Cal.Rptr. 24]; In the Matter of Myrdall (Rev. Dept. 1995) 3 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 363 [habitual disregard of clients' interests]; Grove v. State Bar (1967) 66 Cal.2d 680 [58 Cal.Rptr. 564]. See also Martin v. State Bar (1978) 20 Cal.3d 717 [144 Cal.Rptr. 214]; Selznick v. State Bar (1976) 16 Cal.3d 704 [129 Cal.Rptr. 108]; In the Matter of Varakin (Rev. Dept. 1994) 3 Cal State Bar Rptr 179 [pattern of misconduct]; In re Calloway (1977) 20 Cal.3d 165 [141 Cal.Rptr. 805 [act of baseness, vileness or depravity in the private and social duties which a man or woman owes to fellow human beings or to society in general, contrary to the accepted and customary rule of right and duty between human beings]; In re Craig (1938) 12 Cal.2d 93 [82 P.2d 442].)

Paragraph (c)

[2C] Paragraph (c) does not apply where a lawyer advises clients or others about, or supervises, lawful covert activity in the investigation of violations of civil or criminal law or constitutional rights, provided the lawyer's conduct is otherwise in compliance with these Rules. "Covert activity," as used in this Rule, means an effort to obtain information on unlawful activity through the use of misrepresentations or other subterfuge. Covert activity may be commenced by a lawyer or involve a lawyer as an advisor or supervisor only when the lawyer in good faith believes there is a reasonable possibility that unlawful activity has taken place, is taking place, or will take place in the foreseeable future.

Paragraph (d)

[2D] Paragraph (d) is not intended to prohibit activities of a lawyer that are protected by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution or by Article I, section 2 of the California Constitution. See, e.g., Ramirez v. State Bar (1980) 28 Cal 3d 402, 411 [169 Cal. Rptr 206] (a statement impugning the honesty or integrity of a judge will not result in discipline unless it is shown that the statement is false and was made knowingly or with reckless disregard for truth); In the Matter of Anderson (Rev. Dept 1997) 3 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 775 (disciplinary rules governing the legal profession cannot punish activity protected by the First Amendment); Standing Committee on Discipline of the United States District Court for the Central District of California v. Yagman (9th Cir. 1995) 55 F.3d 1430, 1443 (a lawyer's statement unrelated to a matter pending before the court may be sanctioned only if the statement poses a clear and present danger to the administration of justice).

[3] A lawyer who, in the course of representing a client, knowingly manifests by words or conduct, bias or prejudice based upon race, sex, religion, national origin, disability, age or sexual orientation, violates paragraph (d) when such actions are prejudicial to the administration of justice. Legitimate advocacy respecting the foregoing factors does not violate paragraph (d). A trial judge's finding that peremptory challenges were exercised on a discriminatory basis does not alone establish a violation of paragraph (b).

[4] Testing the validity of any law, rule, or ruling of a tribunal is governed by Rule 1.2(d). Rule 1.2(d) is also intended to apply to challenges regarding the regulation of the practice of law.

[5] A lawyer's abuse of public office held by the lawyer or abuse of positions of private trust such as trustee, executor, administrator, guardian, agent and officer, director or manager of a corporation or other organization, can involve conduct prohibited by this Rule.

[6] Alternative bases for professional discipline may be found in Article 6 of the State Bar Act, (Business and Professions Code sections 6100 et seq.), and published California decisions interpreting the relevant sections of the State Bar Act. This Rule is not intended to provide a basis for duplicative charging of misconduct for a single illegal act.

Rule 8.4 Misconduct.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	M	Yes		We generally support the adoption of Proposed Rule 8.4 and the Comments to the Rule. Further, COPRAC disagrees with the minority position expressed in the Explanation to paragraph (d) of the Rule, and agrees that the addition of the phrase “in connection with the practice of law” is appropriate. However, with respect to Comment [3], COPRAC agrees with the minority position expressed in the Introduction to the Rule: this comment may have the effect of chilling protected speech under both the First Amendment and the California Constitution. Further, the language of the Comment goes beyond the black letter rule of paragraph (d) and, by implication, suggests that such protected speech (and related conduct) could be the basis for attorney discipline. COPRAC submits that discipline for such conduct is more appropriately addressed in Proposed Rule 8.4.1, where discipline may be imposed only after a separate tribunal has found that the attorney has engaged in discriminatory conduct that is unlawful. As a result, we respectfully suggest that Comment [3] be deleted from the Rule.	No response required. The majority of the Commission disagrees with both its minority and COPRAC that the proposed rule will have the effect of chilling protected speech.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 8.4 Misconduct. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 4 Agree = 1 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	M	Yes	8.4(a)	OCTC supports this rule. However, OCTC believes that the Model Rules version of subparagraph (a) is clearer and better. The Model Rules also prohibit an attorney from violating or attempting to violate the Rules of Professional Conduct. There is no sound reason to exclude this language.	The Commission disagrees. The language in (a) is taken verbatim from current Rule 1-120, which has apparently served well its purpose. The Commission discuss making an attempt to violate the rules an offense and rejected that expansion of the coverage of the rules.
				8.4(f)	OCTC believes that subparagraph (f) should include solicit or induce a judge or judicial officer in conduct that is a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct or other law. This would be the same as in subparagraph (a) for violations of these rules or the State Bar Act. While this is not in the Model Rules, there is no reason for the differences between (a) and (f).	The Commission did not feel that it was necessary to go beyond the language of the Model rule. "Assist" is broad enough to cover inducing or soliciting on the part of a lawyer, should that ever occur.
					Some of the Comments are more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions.	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.
				Comments [2A], [2B] & [6]	OCTC supports Comments [2A], [2B] and [6].	No response required.

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

Rule 8.4 Misconduct.
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
				Comment [3]	OCTC has concerns about Comment 3. It seems overly broad and the last sentence is confusing. It appears to venture into an area of evidence and may incorrectly state the law. If the finding is made by clear and convincing evidence or beyond a reasonable doubt, collateral estoppel would appear to apply. If the finding is not by those standards, then the decision is given great weight but is rebuttable. (See Rosenthal v. State Bar (1987) 43 Cal.3d 612, 634; In the Matter of Lais (Review Dept. 2000) 4 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 112.) OCTC recommends that this Comment be stricken or clarified.	The Commission does not understand this comment as it appears to refer to matters that are not contained in proposed Comment 3.
				Comment [6]	OCTC is very concerned about the last sentence of Comment 6. This is beyond the scope of the Rules and Comments. This Comment invades the prosecutory discretion of OCTC and the independence of the Chief Trial Counsel. There are often very valid reasons for duplicative charging, if for no other reason than the elements of the various charges may be different and the State Bar Court is very reluctant to find a lesser included offense. In fact, the Supreme Court rejected the notion that it objected to duplicative charging. (See Furey v. Commission on Judicial Performance (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1297, 1307 fn. 2 ["We do not wish	The last sentence of Comment 6 is intended as a guide to the interpretation of the Rule. Thus, it does not invade the prosecutorial discretion of the Chief Trial Counsel. The Commission is aware of criticism of OCTC by respondent's counsel of duplicative charging and overcharging by some deputy trial counsel and therefore added this provision as guidance to both OCTC and State Bar Court judges.

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

Rule 8.4 Misconduct.
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response to intimate that we object to the bringing of potentially overlapping charges; obviously, the Commission may make any charges justified by the evidence.”) Further, in disciplinary cases, the State Bar Court sometimes dismisses duplicative charges, but other times it does not, although it gives them no additional weight. (See In the Matter of Wolf (Review Dept. 2006) 5 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 1, 10-11; In the Matter of Lais (Review Dept. 1998) 3 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 907, 919, fn. 11; In the Matter of Chesnut (Review Dept. 2000) 4 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 166, 175.) OCTC asks that this sentence be stricken.
3	San Diego County Bar Association	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No action needed.
4	US Attorney’s Office of Central, Southern, Northern, and Eastern District of California	M	Yes	8.4(c)	We propose the addition of a Comment to Proposed Rule 8.4(c) to make clear that it is not misconduct for government lawyers to advise about or assist or supervise lawful covert activity that may involve misrepresentations or other subterfuge. We recommend adding a Comment to the Proposed Rule that incorporates the concept contained in the Oregon Rules of Professional Conduct 8.4(b). We propose the following new Comment be added in connection with Proposed Rule 8.4(c):	The Commission agreed with the commenter and, in light of the Commission’s decision to not recommend a version of Model Rule 4.1, the language addressing covert activity previously considered for inclusion as Rule 4.1 (b), has been added as new Comment [2C] to Rule 8.4. In part, the new comment clarifies that Rule 8.4(c) does not apply where a lawyer advises clients or others about, or supervises, lawful covert activity in the investigation of violations of civil or criminal law or constitutional rights, provided the lawyer’s conduct is otherwise in compliance with these Rules.

TOTAL = 4 Agree = 1
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

Rule 8.4 Misconduct.
[Sorted by Commenter]

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					“Paragraph (c) of this Rule does not apply, and it shall not be professional misconduct, where a lawyer advises clients or others about or assists or supervises lawful covert activity in the investigation of violations of civil or criminal law or constitutional rights, provided the lawyer’s conduct is otherwise in compliance with these Rules of Professional Conduct. ‘Covert activity,’ as used in this rule, means an effort to obtain information on unlawful activity through the use of misrepresentations or other subterfuge. ‘Covert activity’ may be commenced by a lawyer or involve a lawyer as an advisor or supervisor only when the lawyer in good faith believes there is a reasonable possibility that unlawful activity has taken place, is taking place or will take place in the foreseeable future. This comment is not intended to broaden the areas in which covert activity by non-government lawyers is recognized as lawful.”

Rule 8.4: Misconduct

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

Alabama adds Rule 3.10, which provides that a lawyer “shall not present, participate in presenting, or threaten to present criminal charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.”

Arizona adds Rule 8.4(g), which makes it professional misconduct for a lawyer to “file a notice of change of judge under Rule 10.2, Arizona Rules of Criminal Procedure, for an improper purpose, such as obtaining a trial delay. . . .”

California: Rule 2-400 provides, in part, as follows:

(B) In the management or operation of a law practice, a member shall not unlawfully discriminate or knowingly permit unlawful discrimination on the basis of race, national origin, sex, sexual orientation, religion, age or disability in:

(1) hiring, promoting, discharging or otherwise determining the conditions of employment of any person; or

(2) accepting or terminating representation of any client.

(C) No disciplinary investigation or proceeding may be initiated by the State Bar against a member under this rule unless and until a tribunal of competent jurisdiction, other than a disciplinary tribunal, shall have first adjudicated a complaint of alleged discrimination and found that unlawful conduct occurred. Upon such adjudication, the tribunal finding or verdict shall then be admissible evidence of the occurrence or non-occurrence of the alleged discrimination in any disciplinary proceeding initiated under this rule. In order for discipline to be imposed under this rule, however, the finding of unlawfulness must be upheld and final after appeal, the time for filing an appeal must have expired, or the appeal must have been dismissed.

In addition, California Business & Professions Code §125.6 (Discrimination in the Performance of Licensed Activity) subjects a lawyer to professional discipline if, because of a prospective client’s “race, color, sex, religion, ancestry, disability, marital status, or national origin,” the lawyer “refuses to perform the licensed activity” (i.e., the practice of law) or “makes any discrimination or restriction in the performance of the licensed activity.”

Also, Business & Professions Code §490.5 permits the State to suspend a lawyer's license if the lawyer "is not in compliance with a child support order or judgment." Finally, Rule 290(a) of the Rules of Procedure of the California State Bar provides that (unless otherwise ordered by the Supreme Court) a member of the bar "shall be required to satisfactorily complete the State Bar Ethics School in all dispositions or decisions involving the imposition of discipline, unless the member previously completed the course within the prior two years."

Colorado: In addition to Rule 8.4(g), which forbids bias in various forms, Colorado adds Rule 4.5, which addresses threats of "criminal, administrative or disciplinary charges" to gain a civil case advantage. See Selected State Variations under Rule 4.4.

District of Columbia: Rule 8.4(d) prohibits conduct that "seriously interferes with" the administration of justice. Rule 8.4(e) omits the ABA phrase "or to achieve results by means that violate the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law." D.C. adds Rule 8.4(g), which makes it misconduct to "[s]eek or threaten to seek criminal charges or disciplinary charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter."

In addition, D.C. adds Rule 9.1, which provides that a lawyer "shall not discriminate against any individual in conditions of employment because of the individual's race, color, religion, national origin, sex, age, marital status, sexual orientation, family responsibility, or physical handicap."

Florida expands Rule 8.4(d) to provide that a lawyer shall not:

(d) engage in conduct in connection with the practice of law that is prejudicial to the administration of justice, including to knowingly, or through callous indifference, disparage, humiliate, or discriminate against litigants, jurors, witnesses, court personnel, or other lawyers on any basis, including, but not limited to, on account of race, ethnicity, gender, religion, national origin, disability, marital status, sexual orientation, age, socioeconomic status, employment, or physical characteristic.

Florida also adds Rule 8.4(g), which provides that a lawyer shall not "fail to respond, in writing, to any official inquiry by bar counsel or a disciplinary agency . . . when bar counsel or the agency is conducting an investigation into the lawyer's conduct."

In addition, Florida adds Rule 8.4(h) that makes it professional misconduct for a lawyer to "willfully refuse, as determined by a court of competent jurisdiction, to timely pay a child support obligation." The Comment explains that subparagraph (h) was added to make the treatment of lawyers who fail to pay child support consistent with the treatment of other professionals in Florida who fail to pay child support. Those other professionals are governed by §61.13015 of the Florida Statutes, which provides for the suspension or denial of a professional license due to delinquent child support payments after all other available remedies for the collection of child support have been exhausted.

Florida also adds Rule 4-8.4(j), which relates to sexual conduct with a client and provides that a lawyer shall not engage in sexual conduct with a client “or a representative of a client.” See the Selected Variations following Rule 1.8 for more detail.

Finally, the Florida Supreme Court has promulgated Rule 3-4.7, which provides:

Violation of the oath taken by an attorney to support the constitutions of the United States and the State of Florida is ground for disciplinary action. Membership in, alliance with, or support of any organization, group, or party advocating or dedicated to the overthrow of the government by violence or by any means in violation of the Constitution of the United States or constitution of this state shall be a violation of the oath.

Georgia deletes ABA Model Rule 8.4(b) in favor of two subparagraphs making it a violation to be “convicted of a felony” or to be “convicted of a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude where the underlying conduct relates to the lawyer’s fitness to practice law.” Rule 8.4(a)(4) — Georgia’s equivalent to ABA Model Rule 8.4(c) — makes it improper to engage in “professional” conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation. Georgia adds a Rule 8.4(a)(5) that makes it improper for a lawyer to “fail to pay any final judgment or rule absolute rendered against such lawyer for money collected by him or her as a lawyer within ten (10) days after the time appointed in the order or judgment.” A Rule 8.4(d) provides that Rule 8.4(a)(1) “does not apply to Part Six of the Georgia Rules of Professional Conduct” (which covers pro bono work, court appointments, legal service organizations, and law reform organizations). Georgia deletes ABA Model Rules 8.4(d), (e), and (f).

For Georgia attorneys seeking guidance on their ethical conduct, Georgia Supreme Court Rule 4-401 authorizes the Georgia State Bar’s Office of General Counsel to “render Informal Advisory Opinions concerning the Office of the General Counsel’s interpretation of the Rules of Professional Conduct or any of the grounds for disciplinary action as applied to a given state of facts.” However, the rule cautions that an Informal Advisory Opinion is merely “the personal opinion of the issuing attorney of the Office of the General Counsel and is neither a defense to any complaint nor binding on the State Disciplinary Board, the Supreme Court of Georgia, or the State Bar of Georgia.” Rule 4-403 describes the procedures by which the Supreme Court of Georgia issues Formal Advisory Opinions and describes the weight to be given to Formal Advisory Opinions in various circumstances.

Illinois: In the rules effective January 1, 2010, Illinois expands Rule 8.4(f) and adds paragraphs (g)-(k), some of which are taken directly from the old ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility. They provide that it is professional misconduct for a lawyer to:

(f) . . . give or lend anything of value to a judge, official, or employee of a tribunal, except those gifts or loans that a judge or a member of the judge’s family may receive under Rule 65(C)(4) of the Illinois Code of Judicial Conduct. Permissible campaign contributions to a judge or candidate for judicial office may be made only by check, draft, or other instrument payable to or to the order of an entity that the lawyer reasonably believes to be a political committee supporting such judge or candidate. Provision of volunteer services by a lawyer to a political committee shall not be deemed to violate this paragraph.

(g) present, participate in presenting, or threaten to present criminal or professional disciplinary charges to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.

(h) enter into an agreement with a client or former client limiting or purporting to limit the right of the client or former client to file or pursue any complaint before the Illinois Attorney Registration and Disciplinary Commission.

(i) avoid in bad faith the repayment of an education loan guaranteed by the Illinois Student Assistance Commission or other governmental entity. The lawful discharge of an education loan in a bankruptcy proceeding shall not constitute bad faith under this paragraph, but the discharge shall not preclude a review of the lawyer's conduct to determine if it constitutes bad faith.

(j) violate a federal, state or local statute or ordinance that prohibits discrimination based on race, sex, religion, national origin, disability, age, sexual orientation or socioeconomic status by conduct that reflects adversely on the lawyer's fitness as a lawyer. Whether a discriminatory act reflects adversely on a lawyer's fitness as a lawyer shall be determined after consideration of all the circumstances, including: the seriousness of the act; whether the lawyer knew that the act was prohibited by statute or ordinance; whether the act was part of a pattern of prohibited conduct; and whether the act was committed in connection with the lawyer's professional activities. No charge of professional misconduct may be brought pursuant to this paragraph until a court or administrative agency of competent jurisdiction has found that the lawyer has engaged in an unlawful discriminatory act, and the finding of the court or administrative agency has become final and enforceable and any right of judicial review has been exhausted.

(k) if the lawyer holds public office:

(1) use that office to obtain, or attempt to obtain, a special advantage in a legislative matter for a client under circumstances where the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that such action is not in the public interest;

(2) use that office to influence, or attempt to influence, a tribunal to act in favor of a client; or

(3) represent any client, including a municipal corporation or other public body, in the promotion or defeat of legislative or other proposals pending before the public body of which such lawyer is a member or by which such lawyer is employed.

Iowa: Rule 8.4(g) forbids lawyers to “engage in sexual harassment or other unlawful discrimination in the practice of law or knowingly permit staff or agents subject to the lawyer’s direction and control to do so.”

Louisiana: Among other variations, Louisiana adds a Rule 8.4(g), which makes it professional misconduct for a lawyer to “[t]hreaten to present criminal or disciplinary charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.”

Maryland: Rule 8.4(e) provides that a lawyer may not “manifest by words or conduct” various kinds of bias or prejudice when such action is prejudicial to the administration of justice.

Massachusetts: Rule 8.4(h) forbids a lawyer to “engage in any other conduct that adversely reflects on his or her fitness to practice law.” Comment 5 states that such conduct is subject to discipline even if it “does not constitute a criminal, dishonest, or fraudulent or other act specifically described in the other paragraphs of this rule.”

Michigan: Rule 6.5, entitled “Professional Conduct,” provides as follows:

(a) A lawyer shall treat with courtesy and respect all persons involved in the legal process. A lawyer shall take particular care to avoid treating such a person discourteously or disrespectfully because of the person’s race, gender, or other protected personal characteristic. To the extent possible, a lawyer shall require subordinate lawyers and nonlawyer assistants to provide such courteous and respectful treatment.

(b) A lawyer serving as an adjudicative officer shall, without regard to a person’s race, gender, or other protected personal characteristic, treat every person fairly, with courtesy and respect. To the extent possible, the lawyer shall require staff and others who are subject to the adjudicative officer’s direction and control to provide such fair, courteous, and respectful treatment to persons who have contact with the adjudicative tribunal.

In addition, the Michigan Court Rules include the following Rule 9.104:

(A) The following acts or omissions by an attorney, individually or in concert with another person, are misconduct and grounds for discipline, whether or not occurring in the course of an attorney-client relationship:

(1) conduct prejudicial to the proper administration of justice;

(2) conduct that exposes the legal profession or the courts to obloquy, contempt, censure, or reproach;

(3) conduct that is contrary to justice, ethics, honesty, or good morals;

(4) conduct that violates the standards or rules of professional responsibility adopted by the Supreme Court;

(5) conduct that violates a criminal law of a state or of the United States;

(6) knowing misrepresentation of any facts or circumstances surrounding a request for investigation or complaint;

(7) failure to answer a request for investigation or complaint in conformity with MCR 9.113 and 9.115(D);

(8) contempt of the board or a hearing panel; or

(9) violation of an order of discipline.

(B) Proof of an adjudication of misconduct in a disciplinary proceeding by another state or a United States court is conclusive proof of misconduct in a disciplinary proceeding in Michigan. The only issues to be addressed in the Michigan proceeding are whether the respondent was afforded due process of law in the course of the original proceedings and whether imposition of identical discipline in Michigan would be clearly inappropriate.

Minnesota adds Rule 8.4(g)-(h), which prohibits various kinds of harassment and discrimination.

Missouri: Rule 8.4(g) forbids a lawyer to “manifest by words or conduct, in representing a client, bias or prejudice based upon race, sex, religion, national origin, disability, age, or sexual orientation.” However, the rule “does not preclude legitimate advocacy when race, sex, religion, national origin, disability, age, sexual orientation, or other similar factors, are issues.”

New Jersey: Rule 8.4(g) makes it professional misconduct for a lawyer to “engage, in a professional capacity, in conduct involving discrimination (except employment discrimination unless resulting in a final agency or judicial determination) because of race, color, religion, age, sex, sexual orientation, national origin, language, marital status, socio-economic status, or handicap, where the conduct is intended or likely to cause harm.” The Supreme Court’s comment states that the rule would, for example, cover activities in the court house, such as a lawyer’s treatment of court support staff, as well as conduct more directly related to litigation; activities related to practice outside of the court house, whether or not related to litigation, such as treatment of other attorneys and their staff; bar association and similar activities; and activities in the lawyer’s office and firm. Except to the extent that they are closely related to the foregoing, purely private activities are not intended to be covered by this rule amendment, although they may possibly constitute a violation of some other ethical rule. Nor is employment discrimination in hiring, firing, promotion, or partnership status intended to be covered unless it has resulted in either an agency or judicial determination of discriminatory conduct.

New Mexico creates a Rule 3.0 (Rule 16-300), which specifies as follows:

In the course of any judicial or quasi-judicial proceeding before a tribunal, a lawyer shall refrain from intentionally manifesting, by words or conduct, bias or prejudice based on race, gender, religion, national origin, disability, age or sexual orientation against the judge, court personnel, parties, witnesses, counsel or others. This rule does not preclude legitimate advocacy when race, gender, religion, national origin, disability, age or sexual orientation is material to the issues in the proceeding.

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, New York adds Rule 8.4(g) and (h), which provides that a lawyer or law firm shall not:

(g) unlawfully discriminate in the practice of law, including in hiring, promoting or otherwise determining conditions of employment on the basis of age, race, creed, color, national origin, sex, disability, marital status or sexual orientation. Where there is a tribunal with jurisdiction to hear a complaint, if timely brought, other than a Departmental Disciplinary Committee, a complaint based on unlawful discrimination shall be brought before such tribunal in the first instance. A certified copy of a determination by such a tribunal, which has become final and enforceable and as to which the right to judicial or appellate review has been exhausted, finding that the lawyer has engaged in an unlawful discriminatory practice shall constitute prima facie evidence of professional misconduct in a disciplinary proceeding; or

(h) engage in any other conduct that adversely reflects on the lawyer's fitness as a lawyer.

North Carolina: Rule 8.4(e) omits the clause "or to achieve results by means that violate the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law," and a Rule 8.4(g) makes it professional misconduct for a lawyer to "intentionally prejudice or damage his or her client during the course of the professional relationship, except as may be required by Rule

3.3." North Carolina also adds a Rule 6.6, which prohibits lawyers who hold "public office" from abusing their public positions.

Ohio adds Rule 8.4(g)-(h), which makes it professional misconduct for a lawyer to:

(g) engage, in a professional capacity, in conduct involving discrimination prohibited by law because of race, color, religion, age, gender, sexual orientation, national origin, marital status, or disability;

(h) engage in any other conduct that adversely reflects on the lawyer's fitness to practice law.

Ohio also adds an unusual Comment 2A, which provides that Rule 8.4(c) "does not prohibit a lawyer from supervising or advising about lawful covert activity in the investigation of criminal activity or violations of constitutional or civil rights when authorized by law."

Oregon: Rule 8.4(b) is the result of a decision of the Oregon Supreme Court, In re Gatti, 8 P.3d 966 (Or. 2000). It provides that, notwithstanding Rules 8.4(a)(1), (3), and (4) and Rule 3.3(a)(1), "it shall not be professional misconduct for a lawyer to advise clients or others about or to supervise lawful covert activity in the investigation of violations of civil or criminal law or constitutional rights," provided the lawyer's conduct otherwise complies with the Rules of Professional Conduct. "Covert activity" is defined in Rule 8.4(b) to mean "an effort to obtain information on unlawful activity through the use of misrepresentations or other subterfuge." The rule permits covert activity to "be commenced by a lawyer or involve the lawyer as an advisor or supervisor only when the lawyer in good faith believes there is a reasonable possibility that unlawful activity has taken place, is taking place, or will take place in the foreseeable future.”

Rhode Island adds Rule 9.1, which establishes an ethics advisory panel to be appointed by the Supreme Court and provides that “[a]ny lawyer who acts in accordance with an opinion given by the panel shall be conclusively presumed to have abided by the Rules of Professional Conduct.”

Texas: Rule 5.08, entitled “Prohibited Discriminatory Activities,” provides as follows:

(a) A lawyer shall not willfully, in connection with an adjudicatory proceeding, except as provided in paragraph (b), manifest, by words or conduct, bias or prejudice based on race, color, national origin, religion, disability, age, sex, or sexual orientation towards any person involved in that proceeding in any capacity.

(b) Paragraph (a) does not apply to a lawyer’s decision whether to represent a particular person in connection with an adjudicatory proceeding, nor to the process of jury selection, nor to communications protected as “confidential information” under these Rules. See Rule 1.05(a), (b). It also does not preclude advocacy in connection with an adjudicatory proceeding involving any of the factors set out in paragraph (a) if that advocacy:

(i) is necessary in order to address any substantive or procedural issues raised by the proceeding; and

(ii) is conducted in conformity with applicable rulings and orders of a tribunal and applicable rules of practice and procedure.

Texas Rule 8.04(a)(9) forbids a lawyer to “engage in conduct that constitutes barratry as defined by the laws of this state.” Rule 8.04(a)(2) forbids a lawyer to “commit a serious crime or commit any other criminal act that reflects adversely on the lawyer’s honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer in other respects.” Rule 8.04(b) defines “serious crime” to include “barratry; any felony involving moral turpitude; any misdemeanor involving theft, embezzlement, or fraudulent or reckless misappropriation of money or other property; or any attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation of another to commit any of the foregoing crimes.”

Virginia: Rule 8.4(b) applies to a criminal “or deliberately wrongful act,” and Rule 8.4(c) applies to conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation “which reflects adversely on the lawyer’s fitness to practice law.” Virginia omits Rule 8.4(d) (which forbids “conduct that is prejudicial to the administration of justice”), and retains the pre-2002 version of ABA Model Rule 8.4(e), which made it professional misconduct for a lawyer to “state or imply an ability to influence improperly or upon irrelevant grounds any tribunal, legislative body or public official,” without any reference to “means that violate the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law.”

Wisconsin: Among other variations, Wisconsin omits paragraph (d) and adds several additional paragraphs, including one relating to harassment.

Proposed Rule 8.4.1 [2-400]

“Prohibited Discrimination in Law Practice Management and Operation”

(XDraft #8, 10/1/09)

Summary: Proposed Rule 8.4.1 is based on current rule 2-400 which prohibits unlawful discrimination in the management or operation of a law firm. There is no Model Rule counterpart (Model Rule 8.4 and proposed Rule 8.4(e) deal with discrimination by individual lawyers while representing a client).

Proposed Rule 8.4.1 expands the scope of present rule 2-400, which is limited to unlawful discrimination in employment and offering goods and services, while the proposed Rule includes any unlawful discrimination in the management and operation of a law practice. See Introduction.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule

Comment

- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☒ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
- ☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
- ☐ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
- ☐ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
- ☒ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☒ Existing California Law

Rules

RPC 2-400

Statute

Case law

- ☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

- ☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 6

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 4

Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☒ Yes ☐ No

Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

The scope of enforcement of laws against discrimination is always somewhat controversial and this rule is no different. The commenters' views on policy ranged from having no rule at all (Santa Clara County Bar Association) to removing the prior adjudication requirement and to extending the scope of the rule to lawyer ancillary business services (Simmons Firm ALC).

☐ Not Controversial

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 8.4.1* Prohibited Discrimination in Law Practice Management and Operation

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed Rule 8.4.1 prohibits unlawful discrimination, based upon race, national origin, sex, gender, sexual orientation, religion, age or disability, in the management and operation of a law firm.

Proposed Rule 8.4.1 is based on current rule 2-400, which prohibits unlawful discrimination in the management or operation of a law firm. There is no Model Rule counterpart (although ABA Model Rule 8.4 and proposed rule 8.4(e) deal with discrimination by individual lawyers while representing a client).

Proposed Rule 8.4.1 expands and narrows the scope of rule 2-400:

- a. Expanded scope: The current rule is limited to unlawful discrimination in employment and offering goods and services; the proposed rule includes any unlawful discrimination in the management and operation of a law practice based upon race, national origin, sex, gender, sexual orientation, religion, age or disability.
- b. Narrowed scope: Based upon commenter suggestions, the proposed rule was narrowed to apply only to managerial and supervisory lawyers within the law firm. With regard to discriminatory conduct of lawyers while representing clients, see Rule 8.4(e).

* Proposed Rule 8.4.1, XDraft #8 (10/1/09).

Minority. A minority of the Commission argues that the Rule provides no meaningful relief for victims of discrimination by lawyers and creates no rational risk of discipline for even blatant discriminatory conduct. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (c). Another minority of the Commission believes that the rule, although well intended, is ambiguous as drafted and that certain provisions are inconsistent with the proposed Rule 5.1 on the responsibilities of partners, managers and supervisory lawyers. This minority also believes that the concerns raised by COPRAC have not been adequately addressed.

ABA Model Rule No Comparable ABA Model Rule	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.4.1 Prohibited Discrimination in Law Practice Management and Operation	Explanation of Changes to the California Rule 2-400
(A) For purposes of this rule: (1) "law practice" includes sole practices, law partnerships, law corporations, corporate and governmental legal departments, and other entities which employ members to practice law;	(Aa) For purposes of this ~~rule~~Rule: (1) ~~"law practice" includes sole practices, law partnerships, law corporations, corporate and governmental legal departments, and other entities which employ members to practice law;~~	This Rule carries forward current rule 2-400's prohibitions against unlawful discrimination in the operation or management of a law firm. While comment [3] to Model Rule 8.4 prohibits a lawyer from knowingly manifesting bias or prejudice by words or conduct, when such actions are prejudicial to the administration of justice and when representing a client, no Model Rule prohibits discrimination in the operation and management of a law firm. Amendments show the variations from current rule 2-400. Proposed paragraph (a) contains definitions which are applicable to this Rule only. Comment [2] clarifies that the definition of "law practice" means the same as "law firm," which is defined in proposed Rule 1.0.1. Therefore, no additional definition of "law practice" is necessary and the definition from current rule 2-400 has been deleted.
(2) "knowingly permit" means a failure to advocate corrective action where the member knows of a discriminatory policy or practice which results in the unlawful discrimination prohibited in paragraph (B); and	(21) "knowingly permit" means a failure to advocate corrective action where the ~~member~~managerial or supervisory lawyer knows of a discriminatory policy or practice ~~which~~that results in the unlawful discrimination prohibited in paragraph (Bb); and	Subparagraph (a)(1) has been narrowed and clarified, at the suggestion of commenters (COPRAC, Simmons Firm ALC and Orange County Bar Association), so that culpability is limited to those lawyers who have the authority to change the discriminatory practice. (See also Public Commenter's Chart.)

* Proposed Rule 8.4.1, XDraft 8 (10/1/09). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the current California rule as there is no ABA Model Rule counterpart.

ABA Model Rule No Comparable ABA Model Rule	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.4.1 Prohibited Discrimination in Law Practice Management and Operation	Explanation of Changes to the California Rule 2-400
(3) "unlawfully" and "unlawful" shall be determined by reference to applicable state or federal statutes or decisions making unlawful discrimination in employment and in offering goods and services to the public.	(32) "unlawfully" and "unlawful" shall be determined by reference to applicable state or federal statutes ~~or decisions making unlawful~~ prohibiting discrimination ~~in employment and in offering goods and services to~~ on the public basis of race, national origin, sex, gender, sexual orientation, religion, age or disability, and as interpreted by case law or administrative regulations.	Subparagraph (a)(2) definitions have been streamlined and clarified. The words "decisions making unlawful" were stricken for imprecision since court decisions do not inherently make conduct unlawful, but rather interpret the meaning of the words of a statute concerning the affected conduct. Accordingly, the words "as interpreted by case law" were substituted to clarify the definition. Also, because administrative bodies are often empowered to develop administrative regulations to enforce and regulate discriminatory conduct, the words "or administrative regulations" was added to clarify the definition. The scope of the Rule has been expanded beyond employment and offering goods and services. (See paragraph (b).) Therefore the words "in employment and in offering goods and services to" were stricken and the words "basis of race, national origin, sex, gender, sexual orientation, religion, age or disability" were added consistent with the expansion of the subject matter of prohibited conduct. See Explanation of Changes for paragraph (b).

ABA Model Rule No Comparable ABA Model Rule	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.4.1 Prohibited Discrimination in Law Practice Management and Operation	Explanation of Changes to the California Rule 2-400
(B) In the management or operation of a law practice, a member shall not unlawfully discriminate or knowingly permit unlawful discrimination on the basis of race, national origin, sex, sexual orientation, religion, age or disability in: (1) hiring, promoting, discharging, or otherwise determining the conditions of employment of any person; or (2) accepting or terminating representation of any client.	~~(B)~~ In the management or operation of a law practice, a ~~member~~lawyer shall not unlawfully discriminate or knowingly permit unlawful discrimination on the basis of race, national origin, sex, gender, sexual orientation, religion, age or disability ~~in~~. ~~(1) hiring, promoting, discharging, or otherwise determining the conditions of employment of any person; or~~ ~~(2) accepting or terminating representation of any client.~~	Paragraph (b)'s scope has been expanded from unlawful discrimination in employment and in selling goods and services to any unlawful discrimination in the operation and management of a law practice on the basis of race, national origin, sex, gender, sexual orientation, religion, age or disability. The expanded scope includes for example, unlawful conduct in leasing, violations of the Americans with Disabilities Act, or sexual harassment. The word "gender" was added at the suggestion of the Bar Association of San Francisco to conform to the wording of discrimination statutes. Consistent with the expanded scope of the Rule, and as requested by the Santa Clara County Bar Association, the limitations of subparagraphs (b)(1) and (b)(2) have been deleted.

ABA Model Rule No Comparable ABA Model Rule	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.4.1 Prohibited Discrimination in Law Practice Management and Operation	Explanation of Changes to the California Rule 2-400
(C) No disciplinary investigation or proceeding may be initiated by the State Bar against a member under this rule unless and until a tribunal of competent jurisdiction, other than a disciplinary tribunal, shall have first adjudicated a complaint of alleged discrimination and found that unlawful conduct occurred. Upon such adjudication, the tribunal finding or verdict shall then be admissible evidence of the occurrence or non-occurrence of the alleged discrimination in any disciplinary proceeding initiated under this rule. In order for discipline to be imposed under this rule, however, the finding of unlawfulness must be upheld and final after appeal, the time for filing an appeal must have expired, or the appeal must have been dismissed.	(C) No disciplinary investigation or proceeding may be initiated by the State Bar against a member under this ~~rule~~Rule unless and until a tribunal of competent jurisdiction, other than a disciplinary tribunal, shall have first adjudicated a complaint of alleged discrimination and found that unlawful conduct occurred. Upon such adjudication, the tribunal finding or verdict shall then be admissible evidence of the occurrence or non-occurrence of the alleged discrimination in any disciplinary proceeding initiated under this ~~rule~~Rule. In order for discipline to be imposed under this ~~rule~~Rule, however, the finding of unlawfulness must be upheld and final after appeal, the time for filing an appeal must have expired, or the appeal must have been dismissed.	Paragraph (c) has not been changed except ~~to~~for minor style changes. Paragraph (c) continues to prohibit any disciplinary investigation unless and until there is an appropriate adjudication that unlawful discriminatory misconduct has occurred. This policy recognizes that the State Bar disciplinary process has limited resources to investigate and prosecute all alleged unprofessional conduct and that a State Bar disciplinary process should not be the initial or primary remedy for complaints about law practice discrimination when the law provides other specialized administrative agencies to enforce and regulate all alleged discriminatory conduct and provides for specialized remedies. Minority Position. A minority of the Commission has dissented from this provision on the ground that its inclusion renders the Rule unenforceable because it provides no meaningful relief for victims of discrimination by lawyers and creates no rational risk of discipline for even blatant discriminatory conduct.

ABA Model Rule No Comparable ABA Model Rule Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 8.4.1 Prohibited Discrimination in Law Practice Management and Operation Comment	Explanation of Changes to the California Rule 2-400
	[1] Consistent with lawyers' duties to support the federal and state constitution and laws, lawyers should support efforts to eradicate illegal discrimination in the operation or management of any law practice in which they participate. Violations of federal or state anti-discrimination laws in connection with the operation of a law practice warrant professional discipline in addition to statutory penalties.	The comparison is to current rule 2-400, Discussion. Comment [1] is new and explains the policy supporting this Rule.
	[2] This Rule applies to all managerial or supervisory lawyers, whether or not they have any formal role in the management of the law firm in which they practice. (See Rule 5.1. But see also Rule 8.4(g).) "Law practice" in this Rule means "law firm," as defined in Rule 1.0.1, a term that includes sole practices. It does not apply to lawyers while engaged in providing non-legal services that are not connected with or related to law practice, although lawyers always have a duty to uphold state and federal law, a breach of which may be cause for discipline. (See Business and Professions Code section 6068(a).)	Comment [2] is new and explains the changed scope of the Rule: 1. The scope of the rule is limited to managerial or supervisory lawyers. (See explanation under paragraph (a)(2) above.) 2 "Law practice" means the same as law firm and includes sole practices. (See Explanation for subparagraph (a)(1), above.) 3. The scope of the Rule does not include non-legal services not connected to or related to the law practice. The Commission did not adopt this because the State Bar has no authority to regulate ancillary businesses, which may be managed or operated by non-lawyer personnel, where the non-legal businesses are not engaged in the practice of law. While a lawyer engaged in ancillary business activities may be disciplined for some conduct, as defined by case law, not all ancillary business conduct, unconnected with the provision of legal services, is the subject of discipline if- it is authorized- by other law.

ABA Model Rule No Comparable ABA Model Rule Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 8.4.1 Prohibited Discrimination in Law Practice Management and Operation Comment	Explanation of Changes to the California Rule 2-400
In order for discriminatory conduct to be actionable under this rule, it must first be found to be unlawful by an appropriate civil administrative or judicial tribunal under applicable state or federal law. Until there is a finding of civil unlawfulness, there is no basis for disciplinary action under this rule.	[3] In order for discriminatory conduct to be ~~actionable~~ sanctionable under this ~~rule~~Rule, it ~~must~~ first must be found to be unlawful by an appropriate civil administrative or judicial tribunal under applicable state or federal law. Until there is a finding of civil unlawfulness, there is no basis for disciplinary action under this ~~rule~~Rule.	Comment [3] is the same as rule 2-400 Discussion, paragraph 1, with stylistic editorial changes only.
A complaint of misconduct based on this rule may be filed with the State Bar following a finding of unlawfulness in the first instance even though that finding is thereafter appealed.	[4] A complaint of misconduct based on this ~~rule~~Rule may be filed with the State Bar following a finding of unlawfulness in the first instance even though that finding ~~is~~ thereafter is appealed.	Comment [4] is the same as rule 2-400 Discussion, paragraph 2, with stylistic editorial changes only.
A disciplinary investigation or proceeding for conduct coming within this rule may be initiated and maintained, however, if such conduct warrants discipline under California Business and Professions Code sections 6106 and 6068, the California Supreme Court's inherent authority to impose discipline, or other disciplinary standard.	~~A disciplinary investigation or proceeding for conduct coming within this rule may be initiated and maintained, however, if such conduct warrants discipline under California Business and Professions Code sections 6106 and 6068, the California Supreme Court's inherent authority to impose discipline, or other disciplinary standard. (Added by order of Supreme Court, effective March 1, 1994.)~~	Rule 2-400 Discussion, paragraph 3, was deleted as unnecessary. The proposed Rule does not otherwise limit the State Bar's prosecutorial authority to investigate and prosecute alleged attorney misconduct coming within the ambit of California Business and Professions Code sections 6106 or 6068 where the conduct may arguably be a violation of this rule. Nor does the promulgation of this Rule pursuant to Business and Professions Code section 6007 limit in any way the California Supreme Court's inherent authority to impose discipline or another disciplinary standard. (Bus. & Prof. C., §6087.)
	[5] This Rule addresses the internal management and operation of a law firm. With regard to discriminatory conduct of lawyers while representing clients, see Rule 8.4(g).	Comment [5] is new and provides a cross reference to rule 8.4(g) concerning lawyer's discriminatory conduct while representing clients.

Rule 8.4.1 Prohibited Discrimination in Law Practice Management and Operation
(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

(a) For purposes of this Rule:

- (1) “knowingly permit” means a failure to advocate corrective action where the managerial or supervisory lawyer knows of a discriminatory policy or practice that results in the unlawful discrimination prohibited in paragraph (b); and
- (2) “unlawfully” and “unlawful” shall be determined by reference to applicable state or federal statutes prohibiting discrimination on the basis of race, national origin, sex, gender, sexual orientation, religion, age or disability, and as interpreted by case law or administrative regulations.

(b) In the management or operation of a law practice , a lawyer shall not unlawfully discriminate or knowingly permit unlawful discrimination on the basis of race, national origin, sex, gender, sexual orientation, religion, age or disability.

(c) No disciplinary investigation or proceeding may be initiated by the State Bar against a member under this Rule unless and until a tribunal of competent jurisdiction, other than a disciplinary tribunal, shall have first adjudicated a complaint of alleged discrimination and found that unlawful conduct occurred. Upon such adjudication, the tribunal finding or verdict shall then be admissible evidence of the occurrence or non-occurrence of the alleged discrimination in any disciplinary proceeding initiated under this Rule. In order for discipline to be imposed under this Rule, however, the finding of unlawfulness must be upheld and final after appeal, the time for filing an appeal must have expired, or the appeal must have been dismissed.

COMMENT

- [1] Consistent with lawyers' duties to support the federal and state constitution and laws, lawyers should support efforts to eradicate illegal discrimination in the operation or management of any law practice in which they participate. Violations of federal or state anti-discrimination laws in connection with the operation of a law practice warrant professional discipline in addition to statutory penalties.
- [2] This Rule applies to all managerial or supervisory lawyers, whether or not they have any formal role in the management of the law firm in which they practice. See Rule 5.1. But see also Rule 8.4(g). “Law practice” in this Rule means “law firm,” as defined in Rule 1.0.1, a term that includes sole practices. It does not apply to lawyers while engaged in providing non-legal services that are not connected with or related to law practice, although lawyers always have a duty to uphold state and federal law, a breach of which may be cause for discipline. See Business and Professions Code section 6068(a).
- [3] In order for discriminatory conduct to be sanctionable under this Rule, it first must be found to be unlawful by an appropriate civil administrative or judicial tribunal under applicable state or federal law. Until there is a finding of civil unlawfulness, there is no basis for disciplinary action under this Rule.
- [4] A complaint of misconduct based on this Rule may be filed with the State Bar following a finding of unlawfulness in the first instance even though that finding thereafter is appealed.
- [5] This Rule addresses the internal management and operation of a law firm. With regard to discriminatory conduct of lawyers while representing clients, see Rule 8.4(g).

Rule 8.4.1 Prohibited Discrimination in Law Practice Management and Operation.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 2
Disagree = 1
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	A	Yes		Some of the Comments are more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions. We support Comment [2].	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations. No response required.
2	San Diego County Bar Association	A	Yes		Support as drafted.	No response required.
3	State Bar Law Practice Management & Technology Section (LPMT)	D	Yes		The Law Practice Management & Technology (LPMT) Section applauds the State Bar's noble intentions in reiterating the principles present in the current Rule of Professional Conduct Rule 2-400 Prohibited Discriminatory Conduct in a Law Practice. Discrimination has no place in our society, least of all among those charged with realizing the promise of the Declaration of Independence: that all are equal. We fear, however, that, given the lightness of the remedies available to the State Bar,	After a full exploration and debate on this and other policy approaches, the Commission recommends the current proposed rule as the best means to both protect the public from lawyer discrimination and conserving prosecutorial resources.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 8.4.1 Prohibited Discrimination in Law Practice Management and Operation.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 2
Disagree = 1
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					this Proposed Rule would not be useful. The State Bar may act only after a final judgment in an arena where settlement is the rule, and final judgments are rare. In terms of what the State Bar will do pursuant to the Rules of Professional Conduct, we have come no further than what has been in place under current Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 2-400. We agree with the Minority Position: “A minority of the Commission has dissented from this provision on the ground that its inclusion renders the Rule unenforceable because it provides no meaningful relief for victims of discrimination by lawyers and creates no rational risk of discipline for even blatant discriminatory conduct.” We therefore request the State Bar and, where appropriate, the Commission to explore more innovative approaches. Instead of putting the issue adrift on ice while being	This recommendation will be forwarded to the Board of Governors for further appropriate action.

Rule 8.4.1 Prohibited Discrimination in Law Practice Management and Operation.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 3 Agree = 2
Disagree = 1
Modify = 0
NI = 0

No.	Commenter	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response studied, however, please engage members of the bar and bench to grapple with perhaps the defining legal and moral issue in American history. Indeed, this honorable principle is one that runs from before the founding of the Republic to this very day.

Proposed Rule 8.5 [RPC 1-100(D)]

“Disciplinary Authority; Choice of Law”

(XDraft #4, 2/26/10)

Summary: This amended rule states the territorial and extra-territorial reach of the California Rules of Professional Conduct. It also addresses conflicts of law with regard to professional conduct rules by setting a choice of law standard.

Comparison with ABA Counterpart

Rule	Comment
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially adopted
☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected	☐ ABA Model Rule substantially rejected
☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material additions to ABA Model Rule
☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule	☒ Some material deletions from ABA Model Rule
☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart	☐ No ABA Model Rule counterpart

Primary Factors Considered

- ☒ Existing California Law

Rule

RPC 1-100(D); Rules 9.40 - 9.48 of the California Rules of Court

Statute

Case law

- ☐ State Rule(s) Variations (In addition, see provided excerpt of selected state variations.)

- ☐ Other Primary Factor(s)

Rule Revision Commission Action/Vote to Recommend Rule Adoption

(13 Members Total – votes recorded may be less than 13 due to member absences)

Approved on 10-day Ballot, Less than Six Members Opposing Adoption ☐

Vote (see tally below) ☒

Favor Rule as Recommended for Adoption 7

Opposed Rule as Recommended for Adoption 3

Abstain 0

Approved on Consent Calendar ☐

Approved by Consensus ☐

Minority/Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☐ Yes ☒ No

Commission Minority Position, Known Stakeholders and Level of Controversy

Minority Position Included on Model Rule Comparison Chart: ☐ Yes ☒ No

☒ No Known Stakeholders

☐ The Following Stakeholders Are Known:

☐ Very Controversial – Explanation:

☒ Moderately Controversial – Explanation:

See the introduction and the explanation of paragraph (b) of the proposed rule in the Model Rule comparison chart.

☐ Not Controversial – Explanation:

COMMISSION FOR THE REVISION OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Proposed Rule 8.5* Disciplinary Authority; Choice of Law

June 2010

(Proposed rule following June 15, 2010 public comment deadline.)

INTRODUCTION:

Proposed rule 8.5 is based upon Model Rule 8.5, except that proposed 8.5(b)(2) adopts the California rules as a choice of law unless an admitted lawyer, lawfully practicing in another jurisdiction, is required by the rules of another jurisdiction to engage in different conduct. The Model Rule concepts of the “predominant effect of the conduct is in a different jurisdiction” and the “safe harbor” provision (providing no discipline to a lawyer believing that the predominant effect of the rules of another jurisdiction applied) have been deleted in the interests of protecting the residents of California and in creating a brighter line for application by practicing lawyers, disciplinary prosecutors and disciplinary adjudicators.

Most of the Model Rule 8.5 comments have been retained and used as a basis for the comments to the proposed rule, except where the comments have been inconsistent with the proposed black letter rules or California law.

* Proposed Rule 8.5, XDraft 4 (2-26-10).

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.5 Disciplinary Authority; Choice Of Law	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.5 Disciplinary Authority; Choice Of Law	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(a) Disciplinary Authority. A lawyer admitted to practice in this jurisdiction is subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction, regardless of where the lawyer's conduct occurs. A lawyer not admitted in this jurisdiction is also subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction if the lawyer provides or offers to provide any legal services in this jurisdiction. A lawyer may be subject to the disciplinary authority of both this jurisdiction and another jurisdiction for the same conduct.	(a) Disciplinary Authority. A lawyer admitted to practice in ~~this jurisdiction~~California is subject to the disciplinary authority of ~~this jurisdiction~~California, regardless of where the lawyer's conduct occurs. A lawyer not admitted in ~~this jurisdiction~~California is also subject to the disciplinary authority of ~~this jurisdiction~~California if the lawyer provides or offers to provide any legal services in ~~this jurisdiction~~California. A lawyer may be subject to the disciplinary authority of both ~~this jurisdiction~~California and another jurisdiction for the same conduct..	Paragraph (a) is identical to Model Rule 8.5(a), except that the word "California" has been substituted for "this jurisdiction." The intent of the Model Rules drafters and the practice of many states, when this rule is adopted by a particular jurisdiction, is to substitute the name of the jurisdiction for "this jurisdiction."
(b) Choice of Law. In any exercise of the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction, the rules of professional conduct to be applied shall be as follows:	(b) Choice of Law. In any exercise of the disciplinary authority of ~~this jurisdiction~~California, the rules of professional conduct to be applied shall be as follows:	Paragraph (b) is identical to Model Rule 8.5(b) except that the word "California" has been substituted for "this jurisdiction." The intent of the Model Rules drafters and the practice of many states, when this rule is adopted by a particular jurisdiction, is to substitute the name of the jurisdiction for "this jurisdiction".
(1) for conduct in connection with a matter pending before a tribunal, the rules of the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits, unless the rules of the tribunal provide otherwise; and	(1) for conduct in connection with a matter pending before a tribunal, the rules of the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits apply, unless the rules of the tribunal provide otherwise; and	A minor addition has been made to Paragraph (b)(1) to improve clarity. There is no substantive change.

* Proposed Rule 8.5, XDraft 4 (02/26/10). Redline/strikeout showing changes to the ABA Model Rule

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.5 Disciplinary Authority; Choice Of Law	Commission's Proposed Rule* Rule 8.5 Disciplinary Authority; Choice Of Law	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
(2) for any other conduct, the rules of the jurisdiction in which the lawyer's conduct occurred, or, if the predominant effect of the conduct is in a different jurisdiction, the rules of that jurisdiction shall be applied to the conduct. A lawyer shall not be subject to discipline if the lawyer's conduct conforms to the rules of a jurisdiction in which the lawyer reasonably believes the predominant effect of the lawyer's conduct will occur.	(2) ~~for any other conduct, the rules of the jurisdiction in which the lawyer's conduct occurred, or, if the predominant effect of the conduct is in a different jurisdiction, the rules of that jurisdiction shall be applied to the conduct. A lawyer shall not be subject to discipline if the lawyer's conduct conforms to the rules of a jurisdiction in which the lawyer reasonably believes the predominant effect of the lawyer's conduct will occur.~~ these rules apply to any other conduct, in and outside this state, except where a lawyer admitted to practice in California, who is lawfully practicing in another jurisdiction, is required specifically by the jurisdiction in which he or she is practicing to follow rules of professional conduct different from these rules.	Proposed 8.5(b)(2) deletes most of Model Rule 8.5(b)(2) and substitutes language derived from current rule 1-100(D)(1) as a model to create a brighter line and to provide that these rules remain the standards of professional conduct for all conduct over which California has disciplinary jurisdiction except where an admitted lawyer is lawfully practicing in another jurisdiction which specifically requires a different standard of conduct. This rule deletes the MR concept of "predominant effect" because the concept is ambiguous, over broad and undefineable for the lawyers seeking to comply with the rules and for application by disciplinary prosecutors and adjudicators. The rule also deletes the "safe harbor" provision (providing that a lawyer is not subject to any discipline if the lawyer reasonably believes that he or she was bound by a different set of disciplinary rules) on public protection grounds, since a violation of these rules is generally a "wilful" standard, without any intent requirement. The reasonable belief of the lawyer may properly be considered as a mitigating factor rather than a complete defense.

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.5 Disciplinary Authority; Choice Of Law Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 8.5 Disciplinary Authority; Choice Of Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Disciplinary Authority [1] It is longstanding law that the conduct of a lawyer admitted to practice in this jurisdiction is subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction. Extension of the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction to other lawyers who provide or offer to provide legal services in this jurisdiction is for the protection of the citizens of this jurisdiction. Reciprocal enforcement of a jurisdiction's disciplinary findings and sanctions will further advance the purposes of this Rule. See, Rules 6 and 22, ABA Model Rules for Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement. A lawyer who is subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction under Rule 8.5(a) appoints an official to be designated by this Court to receive service of process in this jurisdiction. The fact that the lawyer is subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction may be a factor in determining whether personal jurisdiction may be asserted over the lawyer for civil matters.	Disciplinary Authority [1] It is longstanding law that the conduct of a lawyer admitted to practice in ~~this jurisdiction~~California is subject to the disciplinary authority of ~~this jurisdiction~~California. Extension of the disciplinary authority of ~~this jurisdiction~~California to other lawyers who provide or offer to provide legal services in ~~this jurisdiction~~California is for the protection of the citizens of ~~this jurisdiction~~. ~~Reciprocal enforcement of a jurisdiction's disciplinary findings and sanctions will further advance the purposes of this Rule. See, Rules 6 and 22, ABA Model Rules for Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement~~California. A lawyer ~~who is subject to the~~disciplined by a disciplinary authority ~~of this jurisdiction under Rule 8.5(a) appoints an official to be designated by this Court to receive service of process in this jurisdiction. The fact that the lawyer is subject to the disciplinary authority of this~~another jurisdiction may be a factorsubject to discipline in ~~determining whether personal jurisdiction may be asserted over the lawyer~~California for civil mattersthe same conduct. See e.g., Business and Professions Code section 6049.1.	Comment [1] is based on Model Rule 8.5, cmt. [1] but makes three changes to conform the comment to California law. First, its substitutes "California" for "this jurisdiction." See explanation to proposed (a) above and the court rules for multijurisdictional practice¹, which also contain the inherent authority of the California Supreme Court over the practice of law in California. Second, it deletes the language regarding reciprocal discipline since California has not adopted these provisions. Third, it adds references to California's statutory provisions for discipline of lawyers who are disciplined in another jurisdiction.

¹ Sapiro Cmt #15: I think something got garbled in the second sentence. Was that supposed to be a placeholder for insertion of citations of Rules of Court regarding multijurisdictional practice? I do not see any citations to those Rules of Court in my copy of proposed Comment [1].
RRC - 1-100 [8-5] - Compare - Rule & Comment Explanation - XDFT5 (02-26-10)RD-ML

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.5 Disciplinary Authority; Choice Of Law Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 8.5 Disciplinary Authority; Choice Of Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
Choice of Law [2] A lawyer may be potentially subject to more than one set of rules of professional conduct which impose different obligations. The lawyer may be licensed to practice in more than one jurisdiction with differing rules, or may be admitted to practice before a particular court with rules that differ from those of the jurisdiction or jurisdictions in which the lawyer is licensed to practice. Additionally, the lawyer's conduct may involve significant contacts with more than one jurisdiction.	Choice of Law [2] A lawyer may ~~be~~ potentially be subject to more than one set of rules of professional conduct which impose different obligations. The lawyer may be licensed to practice in more than one jurisdiction with differing rules, or may be admitted to practice before a particular court with rules that differ from those of the jurisdiction or jurisdictions in which the lawyer is licensed to practice. Additionally, the lawyer's conduct may involve significant contacts with more than one jurisdiction.	Comment [2] is identical to Model Rule 8.5 comment [2].
[3] Paragraph (b) seeks to resolve such potential conflicts. Its premise is that minimizing conflicts between rules, as well as uncertainty about which rules are applicable, is in the best interest of both clients and the profession (as well as the bodies having authority to regulate the profession). Accordingly, it takes the approach of (i) providing that any particular conduct of a lawyer shall be subject to only one set of rules of professional conduct, (ii) making the determination of which set of rules applies to particular conduct as straightforward as possible, consistent with recognition of appropriate regulatory interests of relevant jurisdictions, and (iii) providing protection from discipline for lawyers who act reasonably in the face of uncertainty.	[3] Paragraph (b) seeks to resolve such potential conflicts. Its premise is that minimizing conflicts between rules, as well as uncertainty about which rules are applicable, is in the best interest of both clients and the profession (as well as the bodies having authority to regulate the profession). Accordingly, it takes the approach of (i) providing that any particular conduct of a lawyer shall be subject to only one set of rules of professional conduct; and (ii) making the determination of which set of rules applies to particular conduct as straightforward as possible, consistent with recognition of appropriate regulatory interests of relevant jurisdictions; ~~and (iii) providing protection from discipline for lawyers who act reasonably in the face of uncertainty.~~	Comment [3] is based on Model Rule 8.5, cmt. [3] except that it deletes the third provision referring to the black letter “safe harbor” to conform to proposed 8.5(b)(2). See explanation above.

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.5 Disciplinary Authority; Choice Of Law Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 8.5 Disciplinary Authority; Choice Of Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[4] Paragraph (b)(1) provides that as to a lawyer's conduct relating to a proceeding pending before a tribunal, the lawyer shall be subject only to the rules of the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits unless the rules of the tribunal, including its choice of law rule, provide otherwise. As to all other conduct, including conduct in anticipation of a proceeding not yet pending before a tribunal, paragraph (b)(2) provides that a lawyer shall be subject to the rules of the jurisdiction in which the lawyer's conduct occurred, or, if the predominant effect of the conduct is in another jurisdiction, the rules of that jurisdiction shall be applied to the conduct. In the case of conduct in anticipation of a proceeding that is likely to be before a tribunal, the predominant effect of such conduct could be where the conduct occurred, where the tribunal sits or in another jurisdiction.	[4] Paragraph (b)(1) provides that as to a lawyer's conduct relating to a proceeding pending before a tribunal, the lawyer shall be subject only to the rules of the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits unless the rules of the tribunal, including its choice of law rule, provide otherwise. As to all other conduct, including conduct in anticipation of a proceeding not yet pending before a tribunal, paragraph (b)(2) provides that a lawyer shall be subject to ~~the~~these ~~rules of the jurisdiction, unless a lawyer admitted in which the lawyer's conduct occurred, or, if the predominant effect of the conduct~~California is lawfully practicing in another jurisdiction, and may be required specifically by a jurisdiction in which he or she is practicing to follow rules of ~~that jurisdiction shall be applied to the~~professional conduct different from these rules. In the case of conduct in anticipation of a proceeding that is likely to be before a tribunal, ~~the predominant effect of such conduct could be where the conduct occurred~~these rules apply, where unless the tribunal ~~sits or is in another~~is in another jurisdiction in which the lawyer is lawfully practicing and that jurisdiction requires different conduct.	Comment [4] is based on Model Rule 8.5, cmt. [4] but deletes language to conform the comment to proposed rule 8.5(b)(2). Sentence two clarifies that these rules apply to a lawyer's conduct, including prior to the initiation of a proceeding before a tribunal [after which the rules of the tribunal would generally apply under 8.5(b)(1)], unless the lawyer is lawfully practicing in another jurisdiction that expressly requires a different standard of conduct. In sentence three, the same conformance to proposed rule 8.5(b)(2) has been made. The deleted language does not provide a bright line for lawyers engaged in multijurisdictional practice; whereas the proposed rule provides greater clarity.

ABA Model Rule Rule 8.5 Disciplinary Authority; Choice Of Law Comment	Commission's Proposed Rule Rule 8.5 Disciplinary Authority; Choice Of Law Comment	Explanation of Changes to the ABA Model Rule
[5] When a lawyer's conduct involves significant contacts with more than one jurisdiction, it may not be clear whether the predominant effect of the lawyer's conduct will occur in a jurisdiction other than the one in which the conduct occurred. So long as the lawyer's conduct conforms to the rules of a jurisdiction in which the lawyer reasonably believes the predominant effect will occur, the lawyer shall not be subject to discipline under this Rule.	~~[5] When a lawyer's conduct involves significant contacts with more than one jurisdiction, it may not be clear whether the predominant effect of the lawyer's conduct will occur in a jurisdiction other than the one in which the conduct occurred. So long as the lawyer's conduct conforms to the rules of a jurisdiction in which the lawyer reasonably believes the predominant effect will occur, the lawyer shall not be subject to discipline under this Rule.~~	Model Rule 8.5 comment [5] has been deleted because it refers exclusively to the safe harbor language which was deleted from proposed rule 8.5(b)(2). See explanation above.
[6] If two admitting jurisdictions were to proceed against a lawyer for the same conduct, they should, applying this rule, identify the same governing ethics rules. They should take all appropriate steps to see that they do apply the same rule to the same conduct, and in all events should avoid proceeding against a lawyer on the basis of two inconsistent rules.	~~[6] If two admitting jurisdictions were to proceed against a lawyer for the same conduct, they should, applying this rule, identify the same governing ethics rules. They should take all appropriate steps to see that they do apply the same rule to the same conduct, and in all events should avoid proceeding against a lawyer on the basis of two inconsistent rules.~~	This entire comment has been deleted because it is improper to discuss what another disciplinary jurisdiction should or should not do or to recommend that the California Supreme Court should limit its inherent power with this comment. Moreover, the statement is inconsistent with the operation of Bus. & Prof. C., §6049.1 [discipline of a California lawyer who has been disciplined by another jurisdiction].
[7] The choice of law provision applies to lawyers engaged in transactional practice, unless international law, treaties or other agreements between competent regulatory authorities in the affected jurisdictions provide otherwise.	~~[7]~~^[5] The choice of law provision applies to lawyers engaged in ~~transnational~~^{transactional} practice, unless international law, treaties or other agreements between competent regulatory authorities in the affected jurisdictions ~~provide otherwise~~^{preempt these rules}.	Comment [5] is identical to Model Rule 8.5 Comment [7] except that the words "provide otherwise" have been deleted and the words "preempt these rules" have been added. This conforms the comment to the black letter rule 8.5(b)(2) that the California rules will be the default standards, unless the rules of a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is lawfully practicing require different conduct. Accordingly, only preemption by treaty, etc. would "require other conduct."

Rule ~~1-100~~ ~~Rules of Professional Conduct, in General~~ 8.5 Disciplinary Authority; Choice Of Law

(Comparison of the Current Proposed Rule to the initial Public Comment Draft)

~~(A) Purpose and Function.~~

~~(a) Disciplinary Authority. A lawyer admitted to practice in California is subject to the disciplinary authority of California, regardless of where the lawyer's conduct occurs. A lawyer not admitted in California is also subject to the disciplinary authority of California if the lawyer provides or offers to provide any legal services in California. A lawyer may be subject to the disciplinary authority of both California and another jurisdiction for the same conduct.~~

~~The following rules are intended to regulate professional conduct of members of the State Bar through discipline. They have been adopted by the Board of Governors of the State Bar of California and approved by the Supreme Court of California pursuant to Business and Professions Code sections 6076 and 6077 to protect the public and to promote respect and confidence in the legal profession. These rules together with any standards adopted by the Board of Governors pursuant to these rules shall be binding upon all members of the State Bar.~~

~~(b) For a willful breach~~ Choice of Law. In any exercise of these rules the disciplinary authority of California, the Board rules of Governors has the power professional conduct to discipline members be applied shall be as provided by law follows:

~~The prohibition of certain conduct in these rules is not exclusive. Members are also bound by applicable law including the State Bar Act (Bus. & Prof. Code, §6000 et seq.) and opinions of California courts. Although not binding, opinions of ethics committees in California should be consulted by members for guidance on proper professional conduct.~~

~~Ethics opinions and rules and standards promulgated by other jurisdictions and bar associations may also be considered.~~

~~(1) for conduct in connection with a matter pending before a tribunal, the rules of the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits apply, unless the rules of the tribunal provide otherwise; and~~

~~These rules are not intended to create new civil causes of action. Nothing in these rules shall be deemed to create, augment, diminish, or eliminate any substantive legal duty of lawyers or the non-disciplinary consequences of violating such a duty.~~

~~(B) Definitions.~~

~~(1) "Law Firm" means:~~

~~(a) two or more lawyers whose activities constitute the practice of law, and who share its profits, expenses, and liabilities; or~~

~~(b) a law corporation which employs more than one lawyer; or~~

~~(c) a division, department, office, or group within a business entity, which includes more than one lawyer who performs legal services for the business entity; or~~

~~(d) a publicly funded entity which employs more than one lawyer to perform legal services.~~

~~(2) "Member" means a member of the State Bar of California.~~

~~(3) "Lawyer" means a member of the State Bar of California or a person who is admitted in good standing of and eligible to practice before the bar of any United States court or the highest court of the District of Columbia or any state, territory, or insular possession of the United States, or is licensed to practice law in, or is admitted in good standing and eligible to practice before the bar of the highest court of, a foreign country or any political subdivision thereof.~~

~~(4) "Associate" means an employee or fellow employee who is employed as a lawyer.~~

~~(5) "Shareholder" means a shareholder in a professional corporation pursuant to Business and Professions Code section 6160 et seq.~~

~~(C) Purpose of Discussions.~~

~~Because it is a practical impossibility to convey in black letter form all of the nuances of these disciplinary rules, the comments contained in the Discussions of the rules, while they do not add independent basis for imposing discipline, are intended to provide guidance for interpreting the rules and practicing in compliance with them.~~

~~(D) Geographic Scope of Rules.~~

~~(1) As to members:~~

~~(2) These these rules shall govern the activities of members apply to any other conduct, in and outside this state, except as members where a lawyer admitted to practice in California, who~~ is lawfully practicing ~~outside this state may be specifically~~ in another jurisdiction, is required specifically by ~~a~~ the jurisdiction in which ~~they are~~ he or she is practicing to follow rules of professional conduct different from these rules.

~~(2) As to lawyers from other jurisdictions who are not members:~~

~~These rules shall also govern the activities of lawyers while engaged in the performance of lawyer functions in this state; but nothing contained in these rules shall be deemed to authorize the performance of such functions by such persons in this state except as otherwise permitted by law.~~

~~(E) These rules may be cited and referred to as "Rules of Professional Conduct of the State Bar of California."~~

~~Comment Discussion:~~

Disciplinary Authority

[1] It is longstanding law that the conduct of a lawyer admitted to practice in California is subject to the disciplinary authority of California. Extension of the disciplinary authority of California to other lawyers who provide or offer to provide legal services in California is for the protection of the citizens of California. A lawyer disciplined by a disciplinary authority in another jurisdiction may be subject to discipline in California for the same conduct. See e.g., Business and Professions Code section 6049.1.

Choice of Law

~~The Rules of Professional Conduct are intended to establish the standards for members for purposes of discipline. (See Ames v. State Bar (1973) 8 Cal.3d~~

~~910 [106 Cal.Rptr. 489].) The fact that a member has engaged in conduct that may be contrary to these rules does not automatically give rise to a civil cause of action. (See Noble v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1973) 33 Cal.App.3d 654 [109 Cal.Rptr. 269]; Wilhelm v. Pray, Price, Williams & Russell (1986) 186 Cal.App.3d 1324 [231 Cal.Rptr. 355].) These rules are not intended to supercede existing law relating to members in non-disciplinary contexts. (See, e.g., Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal.App.3d 893 [142 Cal.Rptr. 509] (motion for disqualification of counsel due to a conflict of interest); Academy of California Optometrists, Inc. v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal.App.3d 999 [124 Cal.Rptr. 668] (duty to return client files); Chronometrics, Inc. v. Sysgen, Inc. (1980) 110 Cal.App.3d 597 [168 Cal.Rptr. 196] (disqualification of member appropriate remedy for improper communication with adverse party).)~~

[2] A lawyer may potentially be subject to more than one set of rules of professional conduct which impose different obligations. The lawyer may be licensed to practice in more than one jurisdiction with differing rules, or may be admitted to practice before a particular court with rules that differ from those of the jurisdiction or jurisdictions in which the lawyer is licensed to practice. Additionally, the lawyer's conduct may involve significant contacts with more than one jurisdiction.

~~Law firm, as defined by subparagraph (B)(1), is not intended to include an association of lawyers who do not share profits, expenses, and liabilities. The subparagraph is not intended to imply that a law firm may include a person who is not a member in violation of the law governing the unauthorized practice of law. (Amended by order of the Supreme Court, operative September 14, 1992.)~~

[3] Paragraph (b) seeks to resolve such potential conflicts. Its premise is that minimizing conflicts between rules, as well as uncertainty about which rules are applicable, is in the best interest of both clients and the profession (as well as the bodies having authority to regulate the profession). Accordingly, it takes the approach of (i) providing that any particular conduct of a lawyer shall be subject to only one set of rules of professional conduct and (ii) making the determination of which set of rules applies to particular conduct as straightforward as possible, consistent with recognition of appropriate regulatory interests of relevant jurisdictions.

[4] Paragraph (b)(1) provides that as to a lawyer's conduct relating to a proceeding pending before a tribunal, the lawyer shall be subject only to the rules of the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits unless the rules of the tribunal, including its choice of law rule, provide otherwise. As to all other conduct, including conduct in anticipation of a proceeding not yet pending before a tribunal, paragraph (b)(2) provides that a lawyer shall be subject to these rules, unless a lawyer admitted in California is lawfully practicing in another jurisdiction, and may be required specifically by a jurisdiction in which he or she is practicing to follow rules of professional conduct different from these rules. In the case of conduct in anticipation of a proceeding that is likely to be before a tribunal, these rules apply, unless the tribunal is in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is lawfully practicing and that jurisdiction requires different conduct.

[5] The choice of law provision applies to lawyers engaged in transactional practice, unless international law, treaties or other agreements between competent regulatory authorities in the affected jurisdictions preempt these rules.

Rule 8.5 Disciplinary Authority; Choice Of Law

(Commission's Proposed Rule – Clean Version)

- (a) Disciplinary Authority. A lawyer admitted to practice in California is subject to the disciplinary authority of California, regardless of where the lawyer's conduct occurs. A lawyer not admitted in California is also subject to the disciplinary authority of California if the lawyer provides or offers to provide any legal services in California. A lawyer may be subject to the disciplinary authority of both California and another jurisdiction for the same conduct.
- (b) Choice of Law. In any exercise of the disciplinary authority of California, the rules of professional conduct to be applied shall be as follows:
- (1) for conduct in connection with a matter pending before a tribunal, the rules of the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits apply, unless the rules of the tribunal provide otherwise; and
 - (2) these rules apply to any other conduct, in and outside this state, except where a lawyer admitted to practice in California, who is lawfully practicing in another jurisdiction, is required specifically by the jurisdiction in which he or she is practicing to follow rules of professional conduct different from these rules.

Comment

Disciplinary Authority

- [1] It is longstanding law that the conduct of a lawyer admitted to practice in California is subject to the disciplinary authority of California. Extension of the disciplinary authority of California to other lawyers who provide or offer to provide legal services in California is for the protection of the citizens of California. A lawyer disciplined by a disciplinary authority in another jurisdiction may be subject to discipline in California for the same conduct. See e.g., Business and Professions Code section 6049.1.

Choice of Law

- [2] A lawyer may potentially be subject to more than one set of rules of professional conduct which impose different obligations. The lawyer may be licensed to practice in more than one jurisdiction with differing rules, or may be admitted to practice before a particular court with rules that differ from those of the jurisdiction or jurisdictions in which the lawyer is licensed to practice. Additionally, the lawyer's conduct may involve significant contacts with more than one jurisdiction.
- [3] Paragraph (b) seeks to resolve such potential conflicts. Its premise is that minimizing conflicts between rules, as well as uncertainty about which rules are applicable, is in the best interest of both clients and the profession (as well as the bodies having authority to regulate the profession). Accordingly, it takes the approach of (i) providing that any particular conduct of a lawyer shall be subject to only one set of rules of professional conduct and (ii) making the determination of which set of rules applies to particular conduct as straightforward as possible, consistent with recognition of appropriate regulatory interests of relevant jurisdictions.
- [4] Paragraph (b)(1) provides that as to a lawyer's conduct relating to a proceeding pending before a tribunal, the lawyer shall be subject only to the rules of the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits unless the rules of the tribunal, including its choice of law rule, provide otherwise. As to all other conduct, including conduct in anticipation of a proceeding not yet pending before a tribunal, paragraph (b)(2) provides that a lawyer shall be subject to these rules, unless a lawyer admitted in California is lawfully practicing in another jurisdiction, and may be required specifically by a jurisdiction in which he or she is practicing to follow rules of professional conduct different from these rules. In the case of conduct in anticipation of a proceeding that is likely to be before a tribunal, these rules apply, unless the tribunal is in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is lawfully practicing and that jurisdiction requires different conduct.

- [5] The choice of law provision applies to lawyers engaged in transactional practice, unless international law, treaties or other agreements between competent regulatory authorities in the affected jurisdictions preempt these rules.

Rule 8.5 Choice of Law. [Sorted by Commenter]						TOTAL = 5 Agree = 2 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
1	COPRAC	A	Yes		COPRAC supports the adoption of Proposed Rule 8.5 and the Comments to the Rule.	No response required.
2	Office of Chief Trial Counsel	M	Yes		OCTC agrees with the policy behind this rule, but still has concerns that the rule as written is in conflict with B&P Code section 6049.1. B&P Code section 6049.1(b)(2) provides that discipline in another jurisdiction will constitute a basis for discipline in California unless as a matter of law the member's culpability in the other jurisdiction would not warrant discipline in California under the laws or rules binding upon members of the State Bar of California at the time the misconduct was committed. Thus, how can we now enforce a rule that permits discipline based on another jurisdiction's rules if those rules are in conflict with California's rules? Is rule 8.5 changing B&P Code section 6049.1 and its intent? While this concern would not be true in all cases where the choice of law was the other jurisdiction's law, it would occur in those cases where the other jurisdiction's rules are in conflict with California's rules. This needs to	The Commission believes that OCTC has misunderstood the relation (or nonrelation) between this rule and B&P Code 6049.1. The Rule makes conduct outside California subject to discipline if the conduct violates the California rules and unless otherwise authorized. The statute authorizes California discipline based on an adjudication of professional misconduct in another jurisdiction. The Commission views the statute and the proposed rule as complimentary and sees no reason to make a change.

¹ A = AGREE with proposed Rule

D = DISAGREE with proposed Rule

M = AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED

NI = NOT INDICATED

Rule 8.5 Choice of Law.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 5 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					be discussed and addressed in this rule and its Comments. OCTC finds most of the Comments more appropriate for treatises, law review articles, and ethics opinions. We would recommend striking all the Comments except for the last two sentences of Comment [1].	As the Commission has noted with respect to other Rules, the comments are an important part of the Rules modeled on the ABA Model Rules, providing clarification of the black letter and guidance to lawyers on how to be in compliance with their professional obligations.
3	San Diego County Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee	A	Yes		We approve the new rule in its entirety.	No response needed.
4	State Bar Law Practice Management & Technology Section (LPMT)	M	Yes	(b)	LPMT should like to highlight a potential difficulty present in Proposed Rule 8.5, much like CRPC 1-100(D) before it --yet a difficulty much less obvious than its analogue that existed in years past. That difficulty arises from the extraterritorial reach of the California Code of Professional Conduct. With the rise of multijurisdictional practice, such reach may easily put lawyers of good faith in a bind. Re: Diverse types of proscribed conduct: It may be that the difficulty increases the more	The Commission has considered this Comment and has concluded that the rule should not be changed as the LPMT section proposes. It believes that if the conduct is forbidden to California lawyers, there is no reason to permit that conduct unless the attorney is required by another jurisdiction to do what California forbids.

Rule 8.5 Choice of Law.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 5 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					the Rules of Professional Conduct diverge from what may be called acts that are malum in se to those that are merely malum prohibitum. Of course, some of the latter are critical to protect clients from the former. For example, one method of accounting for client funds may not be inherently more ethical than certain others. Nonetheless, there is an inherent need for a uniform method to protect clients from acts that are clearly malum prohibitum. Lawyers must keep their books in a specified way to shield clients from acts of fraud and theft. Re: Tricky conflicts between sister states' respective rules: The difficulty arises most prominently where one jurisdiction's rule is permissive but CA's is mandatory. (See full text of comment for examples). It is critical to emphasize that we do not speak of acts of moral turpitude or other egregious or dishonest conduct. Rather, our concern is with conduct perfectly acceptable and morally correct in one or more of our sister states. Re: Express Prohibition vs. Silence: An even harder case is that in which the foreign jurisdiction is silent. Should CA impose its rule on that jurisdiction, a rule to which other

Rule 8.5 Choice of Law.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 5 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response lawyers in that jurisdiction working on the same matter are not beholden? (See full text of comment for examples). We agree with the Commission's premise as stated in Comment [3] but disagree with the RRC in regard to those situations in which a lawyer may be permitted different conduct by another jurisdiction in which the lawyer is lawfully practicing. To be unable to practice as other lawyers do in that other jurisdiction would cripple the lawyer's fulfillment of his or her obligations to the client. Perhaps, even at this late date, may we respectfully suggest the Commission consider an additional round of review of its excellent product? In so doing, the Commission could determine if it has included any proscriptions based more on California case law interpretations of what is mostly procedural law and less on the basic tenets and intent of a set of universal rules to govern a lawyer's professional conduct? For the foregoing reasons, we recommend that Proposed Rule 8.5(b)(2) be amended as follows: (b) Choice of Law. In any exercise of the

Rule 8.5 Choice of Law.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 5 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response disciplinary authority of California, the rules of professional conduct to be applied shall be as follows: (1) for conduct in connection with a matter pending before a tribunal, the rules of the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits apply, unless the rules of the tribunal provide otherwise; and (2) these rules apply to any other conduct, in and outside this state, except where a lawyer admitted to practice in California, who is lawfully practicing in another jurisdiction, is required or permitted specifically by the jurisdiction in which he or she is practicing to follow rules of professional conduct different from these rules. Additionally, we recommend that Comment [4] be similarly amended, as shown below. Moreover, the last sentence of Comment [4] (italicized below) appears redundant and should thus be deleted. If the sentence expresses a nuance that has escaped our reading, we respectfully suggest that the nuance be made more explicit. Finally, if the last sentence of Comment [4] is retained, we recommend the additional insertion of "or permits" as shown.

Rule 8.5 Choice of Law.
[Sorted by Commenter]

TOTAL = 5 Agree = 2
Disagree = 0
Modify = 3
NI = 0

No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					Comment [4]: [4] Paragraph (b)(1) provides that as to a lawyer's conduct relating to a proceeding pending before a tribunal, the lawyer shall be subject only to the rules of the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits unless the rules of the tribunal, including its choice of law rule, provide otherwise. As to all other conduct, including conduct in anticipation of a proceeding not yet pending before a tribunal, paragraph (b)(2) provides that a lawyer shall be subject to these rules, unless a lawyer admitted in California is lawfully practicing in another jurisdiction, and may be required or permitted specifically by a jurisdiction in which he or she is practicing to follow rules of professional conduct different from these rules. In the case of conduct in anticipation of a proceeding that is likely to be before a tribunal, these rules apply, unless the tribunal is in a jurisdiction in which the lawyer is lawfully practicing and that jurisdiction requires or permits different conduct.
5	US Attorney's Office of Central, Northern, Southern, and Eastern District of California	M	Yes	8.5(b)(2) & Comment [4]	We oppose the adoption of Proposed Rule 8.5(b)(2) and Proposed Comment [4], and request that the Board of Governors either adopt ABA Model Rule 8.5(b)(2) and its	The Commission has carefully considered the United States Attorneys' position and has heard directly from them on this issue at length. It sees no reason to change its recommendation on account of

Rule 8.5 Choice of Law. [Sorted by Commenter]							TOTAL = 5 Agree = 2 Disagree = 0 Modify = 3 NI = 0
No.	Commentator	Position ¹	Comment on Behalf of Group?	Rule Paragraph	Comment	RRC Response
					accompanying Comment or modify Proposed Rule 8.5(b)(2) to include an exemption to application of the California rules for cases investigated in anticipation of litigation in which the likely site of the tribunal for the litigation will be outside California.	this submission, which is substantially the same as what the authors presented to the Commission and that the Commission long debated.

Rule 8.5: Disciplinary Authority; Choice of Law

STATE VARIATIONS

(The following is an excerpt from Regulation of Lawyers: Statutes and Standards (2010 Ed.)
by Steven Gillers, Roy D. Simon and Andrew M. Perlman.)

California: Rule 1-100(D), headed “Geographic Scope of Rules,” provides as follows:

(1) As to members: These rules shall govern the activities of members in and outside this state, except as members lawfully practicing outside this state may be specifically required by a jurisdiction in which they are practicing to follow rules of professional conduct different from these rules.

(2) As to lawyers from other jurisdictions who are not members: These rules shall also govern the activities of lawyers while engaged in the performance of lawyer functions in this state; but nothing contained in these rules shall be deemed to authorize the performance of such functions by such persons in this state except as otherwise permitted by law.

In addition, in 2004 California Supreme Court adopted Rules 964 and 965, which permit “Registered Legal Services Attorneys” and “Registered In-House Counsel” to practice law in California without being members of the California Bar. Each requires that qualifying attorneys “[a]bide by all of the laws and rules that govern members of the State Bar of California, including the Minimum Continuing Legal Education (MCLE) requirements.” Rules 966 and 967, respectively entitled “Attorneys Practicing Law Temporarily in California as Part of Litigation” and “Non-Litigating Attorneys Temporarily in California to Provide Legal Services,” each contain the following language:

[Conditions] By practicing law in California pursuant to this rule, an attorney agrees that he or she is providing legal services in California subject to:

(1) The jurisdiction of the State Bar of California;

(2) The jurisdiction of the courts of this state to the same extent as is a member of the State Bar of California; and

(3) The laws of the State of California relating to the practice of law, the State Bar of Professional Conduct, the rules and regulations of the State Bar of California, and these rules.

Substantial excerpts from Rules 964 through 967 are reprinted below in our chapter on California Materials following Rule 1-300 of the California Rules of Professional Conduct.

District of Columbia: Rule 8.5(a) omits the second sentence of ABA Model Rule 8.5(a) (“A lawyer not admitted in this jurisdiction is also subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction if the lawyer provides or offers to provide any legal services in this jurisdiction.”) Rule 8.5(b)(2) provides as follows:

(2) For any other conduct,

(i) If the lawyer is licensed to practice only in this jurisdiction, the rules to be applied shall be the rules of this jurisdiction, and

(ii) If the lawyer is licensed to practice in this and another jurisdiction, the rules to be applied shall be the rules of the admitting jurisdiction in which the lawyer principally practices; provided, however, that if particular conduct clearly has its predominant effect in another jurisdiction in which the lawyer is licensed to practice, the rules of that jurisdiction shall be applied to that conduct.

Florida: In Supreme Court Rule 3-4.6, Florida has adopted the language of Rule 8.5(b) except for the second sentence of paragraph (b)(2). In addition, Florida Rule 3-4.1 provides as follows:

Every member of The Florida Bar and every attorney of another state or foreign country who provides or offers to provide any legal services in this state is within the jurisdiction and subject to the disciplinary authority of this court and its agencies under this rule and is charged with notice and held to know the provisions of this rule and the standards of ethical and professional conduct prescribed by this court. Jurisdiction over an attorney of another state who is not a member of The Florida Bar shall be limited to conduct as an attorney in relation to the business for which the attorney was permitted to practice in this state and the privilege in the future to practice law in the state of Florida.

When the Florida Supreme Court rejected a proposal to amend this rule in 1999, it said: “Out-of-state lawyers are not lawyers who are subject to the Rules Regulating the Florida Bar; rather, they are ‘nonlawyers’ subject to chapter 10 unlicensed practice of law charges if they . . . engage in improper solicitation or advertising in Florida.” See Amendments to Rules Regulating the Florida Bar — Advertising Rules, 762 So. 2d 392, 393-395 (Fla. 1999).

Georgia: Rules 8.5(a) and (b) both use the phrase “Domestic and Foreign Lawyer” in place of the phrase “lawyer.” Georgia defines those terms as follows:

“Domestic Lawyer” denotes a person authorized to practice law by the duly constituted and authorized government body of any State or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia but not authorized by the Supreme Court of Georgia or its rules to practice law in the State of Georgia.

“Foreign Lawyer” denotes a person authorized to practice law by the duly constituted and authorized government body of any foreign nation but not authorized by the Supreme Court of Georgia or its Rules to practice law in the State of Georgia.

In addition, Georgia Rule 9.4 generally tracks Rules 6 and 22 of the ABA Model Rules of Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement (reprinted below in the Related Materials for ABA Model Rule 8.5), which govern jurisdiction and reciprocal discipline.

Illinois: Illinois Supreme Court Rules 716 and 717 (summarized above in the Related Materials following ABA Model Rule 5.5) permit in-house and legal services lawyers to engage in limited law practice in Illinois. Rules 716 and 717 both provide that all lawyers licensed under the rules “shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the Court for disciplinary purposes to the same extent as all other lawyers licensed to practice law in this state.”

Maryland: Rule 8.5(a) explicitly extends disciplinary jurisdiction to any lawyer who “holds himself or herself out as practicing law in this State,” or who “has an obligation to supervise or control another lawyer practicing law in this State whose conduct constitutes a violation of these Rules.”

Massachusetts: Rule 8.5(b)(2) refers to the “jurisdiction in which the lawyer’s principal office is located” instead of where “the predominant effect of the conduct” occurred. The rule also adds several comments that clarify how the choice of law provisions are supposed to operate.

Michigan: The second sentence of Rule 8.5 provides as follows: “A lawyer who is licensed to practice in another jurisdiction and who is admitted to practice in this jurisdiction is subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction.” Michigan has not adopted Rule 8.5(b).

Nevada: Rule 8.5 consists of only one sentence: “A lawyer admitted to practice in this jurisdiction is subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction although engaged in practice elsewhere.” Also relevant is Nevada Rule 7.2(a), which states as follows: “These Rules shall not apply to any advertisement broadcast or disseminated in another jurisdiction in which the advertising lawyer is admitted if such advertisement complies with the rules governing lawyer advertising in that jurisdiction and the advertisement is not intended primarily for broadcast or dissemination within the State of Nevada.”

New Jersey deletes the last sentence of Rule 8.5(b) (“A lawyer shall not be subject to discipline. . . .”).

New York: In the rules effective April 1, 2009, Rule 8.5 provides as follows:

(a) A lawyer admitted to practice in this state is subject to the disciplinary authority of this state, regardless of where the lawyer’s conduct occurs. A lawyer may be subject to the disciplinary authority of both this state and another jurisdiction where the lawyer is admitted for the same conduct.

(b) In any exercise of the disciplinary authority of this state, the Rules of Professional Conduct to be applied shall be as follows:

(1) For conduct in connection with a proceeding in a court before which a lawyer has been admitted to practice (either generally or for purposes of that proceeding), the rules to be applied shall be the rules of the jurisdiction in which the court sits, unless the rules of the court provide otherwise; and

(2) For any other conduct:

(i) If the lawyer is licensed to practice only in this state, the rules to be applied shall be the rules of this state, and

(ii) If the lawyer is licensed to practice in this state and another jurisdiction, the rules to be applied shall be the rules of the admitting jurisdiction in which the lawyer principally practices; provided, however, that if particular conduct clearly has its predominant effect in another jurisdiction in which the lawyer is licensed to practice, the rules of that jurisdiction shall be applied to that conduct.

Oregon: Rule 8.6 designates certain entities authorized to issue advisory ethics opinions and provides that in any disciplinary matter, the tribunal “may consider any lawyer’s good faith effort to comply with an opinion” in evaluating the lawyer’s conduct or in mitigation of sanction.

South Carolina: S.C. Appellate Court Rule 418 requires any “unlicensed lawyer” (defined as “any person who is admitted to practice law in another jurisdiction but who is not admitted to practice law in South Carolina”) to comply with South Carolina’s lawyer advertising rules (Rules 7.1 through 7.5) if the unlicensed lawyer engages in any of six specified forms of advertising or solicitation.

Texas: Rule 8.05(b) provides as follows:

(b) A lawyer admitted to practice in this state is also subject to the disciplinary authority of this state for:

(1) an advertisement in the public media that does not comply with these rules and that is broadcast or disseminated in another jurisdiction, even if the advertisement complies with the rules governing lawyer advertisements in that jurisdiction, if the broadcast or dissemination of the advertisement is intended to be received by prospective clients in this state and is intended to secure employment to be performed in this state; and

(2) a written solicitation communication that does not comply with these rules and that is mailed in another jurisdiction, even if the communication complies with the rules governing written solicitation communications by lawyers in that jurisdiction, if the communication is mailed to an addressee in this state or is intended to secure employment to be performed in this state.

Virginia rejects the “predominant effect” test used in Rule 8.5(b)(2), favoring instead the rules from the jurisdiction where the lawyer’s conduct occurred. The Virginia rule also contains specific provisions regarding lawyers who hold themselves out as Virginia attorneys. Virginia also explicitly rejects Comments 2 through 7 of the Model Rule and adopts its own explanations for how to resolve conflicts between different choice of law rules.